	Wali Muhammad Sayyal Hiraaj, Sardar.

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan): I beg to move—

That in line 8 of 13-A (1) for the word "an" the words "the same" be substituted.

I need not detain the House very long in making a speech and commending this amendment to the House. The object of the amendment is only to put the provision on a proper basis.

Mr. Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in line 8 of 13-A (1) for the word "an" the words "the same" be substituted.

Pir Akbar Ali: I do not see the advisability of the amendment. I submit that this amendment if accepted will create some difficulties. It is therefore, better to retain the word 'an' as in the Bill.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan: If the word 'an' is allowed to remain there, then I submit that the words 'or of a tribe in the same group' will become absolutely meaningless, because the clause would read "to a member of an agricultural tribe." Then where is the question of group? It is only by substituting these words that the clause will read properly.

Mr. Speaker: Question is—

That in line 8 of 13-A (1) for the word "an" the words "the same" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General Rural): I beg to move—

That in line 12 of 13-A (1) between the words "transaction" and "shall" the word "if more than 20 years old" be inserted.

My ground, for moving this amendment are these. As under the ordinary law it is permissible to a non-agriculturist to take an agriculturist's land for 20 years on mortgage or lease or farm, it does not militate against the spirit of the Land Alienation Act if a transaction which is objected to on the ground of its being benami is allowed to stand for 20 years. I need not go again into the arguments which I have already submitted to this House. But it is obvious that if by the ordinary law or by the law under which this Bill is being brought before this House it is permissible to do a thing it does not become invalid, immoral or dishonest if the same object is achieved by another method. Now, supposing those people were mistaken in thinking that benami transactions were valid and they entered into those transactions, they did not commit any sin and if this law requires that any evasion of law should be rectified even at this late stage after 87 years, not the letter of the law but the spirit of the law should be taken, because the letter killeth and the spirit giveth life. The Honourable Premier said, "well what was there to prevent an honest mortgagee or an honest moneylender to take a mortgage for 20 years from an agriculturists?" That would have been a straight forward course. But he overlooked the fact—he will again perhaps say that my reasoning was halting and so on—if he does not pay attention it is not my fault—but he overlooked the fact that the mortgagee or the benami vendee thought that his debt would not be satisfied even to a fraction unless the mortgage was for a longer period or was without any fixed time or it would not be satisfied unless a sale of the land was executed and if the person who is prepared to sell, if the person who is the debtor is prepared to convey any sale or any long term mortgage or a mortgage without a specified time, can it be said that the man who takes the mortgage or stands to gain by the mortgage or by the sale has acted dishonestly? These gentlemen have got only one thing to say, 'dishonest, dishonest, dishonest' and they repeat the same every day as if every non-agriculturist is dishonest and every agriculturist is a model of virtue and piety and righteousness. (An honourable member: No.) If you sincerely say 'no,' then why are you going to punish the honest with the dishonest? I pointed out at the time at the risk of interrupting my honourable friend, the Premier, that he was under the impression that there was a provision in the Bill making a distinction between an honest transaction and a dishonest transaction. If that were so, I certainly would keep quiet and would not take one minute of the time of this House. I would perhaps then support the Bill because I am not here to support dishonest moneylenders or dishonest dealers. I am here to defend those who are honest, who entered these transactions in a bona fide spirit with the full and enlightened concurrence of the man whose land was taken either in sale or in mortgage.

What is the reason for punishing these people? There is another presumption which the Honourable Premier and some of his redoubtable colleagues are making and that presumption is that every benami transaction is dishonest, every evasion of any statutory law is dishonest. If they really think so, I pity their ignorance, because an evasion of law in itself is not dishonest necessarily. It may be dishonest, it may not be dishonest. It depends upon the circumstances. The dishonesty lies in this that a man whose land is being taken was incapable of looking after himself and guarding his own interests and advantage was taken of his ignorance of law and the ordinary rules of business and his property was taken away from him. But is there any provision in this Bill which says that operation of this Bill should be confined only to those cases where an undue advantage was taken of the ignorance or helplessness of the person whose land is involved in this.

transaction. If there was any such provision no one would object. People would be satisfied, but the fact is that you want to hang every one, as they say in Punjabi, with the same rope. Whether a person is honest or dishonest, you want to hang him with the same rope and you would permit me if I now drift from English into Punjabi.

(Punjabi) : Sir, I wish to say a few words in Punjabi for the benefit of my honourable friends who are not acquainted with English and consequently the English speeches delivered on the floor of the House must have left them no wiser than they came here. I would not have proposed to speak in Punjabi but for the painful fact that the present Bill has got far reaching effects and is going to prove a death warrant for a large number of inhabitants of this province. It would be a thousand pities, therefore, if some of my friends should remain ignorant of the pros and cons of the Bill simply because they do not understand English. I want these honourable members who are occupying the benches on my left hand side to realise what they are going to vote for. Coming to the facts, I may observe that the object of my amendment is simply this that only those benami transactions should be declared void which are more than 20 years old.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member may not be out of order, but it does not look well that after having almost finished his speech in English he should re-start it in Punjabi.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : During the time of Mr. Casson and I believe even in your time under the old constitution, I remember, there were instances where a member during the same opportunity that he had of speaking, spoke in two languages. Of course it would be different if I repeat what I have already said in English. Certainly I do not claim the right of translating my speech.

Mr. Speaker : There is nothing in the rules or standing orders which stands in the way of the honourable member making half of his speech in English and the remaining half in Urdu or Punjabi; but I do not consider it desirable that after the completion of his speech in English he should start repeating it in Punjabi or Urdu.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : I want particularly to speak in Punjabi for the benefit of the people on this side.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member could address the House in English or in one of the recognised vernaculars of the province. He preferred to speak in English and has almost completed his speech. Now in the interest of those who do not understand English, he has started to speak in Punjabi. This means a second speech. Therefore, I request him to finish his speech in English.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Are there any rules for interpreting speeches at all from English into vernacular? In the old Council we used to have interpreters at one time.

Mr. Speaker : There is a rule but it is not acted upon.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Has it been suspended?

Mr. Speaker : The rule is there, but has not been acted upon for a number of years.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Makand Lal Puri : What is the present policy? Would you permit such translation?

Mr. Speaker : I have expressed my view and will express it again if and when necessary.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, if you desire that nothing should be said in the Punjabi language for the benefit of the honourable members sitting on the back benches I am prepared to resume my seat.

Sir, in a nut shell my position is this. The Bill under consideration makes no distinction between a fraudulent transaction and a bona fide one. All I seek is that the Unionist Government should be prevailed upon to recognise some distinction between honest and dishonest transactions. If that is done, I for one will have no objection to the Bill.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is that in—

In line 12 of 13-A (1) between the words "transaction" and "shall," the words "if more than 20 years old" be inserted.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) (Urdu) : Sir I am greatly surprised to note that my learned friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang should have sought to patch up his speech with such flimsy arguments as he has done to-day. In fact he has propounded a grotesque theory that if the culprits, say in the benami transactions, have not been able to go on evading the law of the land for a long term of 20 years, they should be permitted by the State to carry on their nefarious business unmolested and may be brought to book only when they have completed 20 years in committing this fraud on the public. With due deference to the honourable and learned Doctor I wish to ask one question from him. Will not this theory, if put to practice, reduce the law which can be violated for full 20 years, to mere mockery? And what will the people say about the competence of that State which allows its laws to be infringed continuously for a term of 20 years? No person with an iota of sense in his head can be a party to such arguments as my honourable friend opposite has advanced to-day. Instead of saying that we should try to nip the evil in the bud, the learned Doctor over there, wants us to allow it to flourish and bear fruit to please the moral sense of this novel moralist and a strange jurist. What aggravates his position is the second objection which my honourable friend has raised against the Bill. He argued that when these benami transactions were tolerated by the previous Government, why should the present Government pronounce them to be evil and void? Let me inform the learned Doctor that the legal conscience and the sense of morality grow and develop in this world and do not remain static and stagnant like his own. The whole history of ethics is replete with such examples, but let us not go far in search of one. Only a few years back it made the people shudder at the very idea of bringing under control the exorbitant rates of interest which were in vogue in this very province, and if I mistake not, no less a person than my honourable and learned friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang himself got up to oppose such a proposal that was discussed in our old Council and declared that none should dare touch and pollute with his impure hands the usurious rates charged by the money-lenders in this province.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : It is absolutely wrong.

Parliamentary Secretary : Again, till very recently the theory of damdupat was not acceptable in our own province but now public opinion has outgrown its infancy and it regards this to be an inhuman and heinous crime to charge a debtor more than double the amount of the principal that was originally lent to him. I need not tell my honourable friend and the learned Doctor that the various evils that remained hidden in the chimerian darkness till recently, are now coming to light in their most detestable and horrible form.

I am constrained to remark that this Bill neither goes against the law of the land nor does it offend public opinion which is developing very fast in this country. I think that if a thing was permitted or tolerated two or three years ago it should be done away with now. If I am not wrongly interpreting public opinion, this Bill is a praiseworthy effort on the part of Government. Any way you cannot lay the whole blame on the shoulders of the Government for introducing this measure. As I have already said public opinion is responsible for its introduction.

The matter now before the House is that if such transactions are being carried on which are mentioned in this Bill, they should be stopped at once. I would also submit that if an evil deed is continuously committed for 20 years it cannot by any stretch of imagination be called a praiseworthy act. An evil is an evil for all times. My learned friend has remarked that a transaction which is bad in principle, but is not 20 years old, should not be declared void and that transactor should not be brought to book. I would request my honourable friend to give his serious attention to this matter once again and that he should not press this amendment.

Besides, it is admitted by my friend opposite that the Land Alienation Act was framed for safeguarding the interests of those who were not capable of protecting their own interests.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I ask which amendment my friend is discussing now ?

Parliamentary Secretary : I regret to find that the simple point raised by me have pinched my honourable friend so much. Mr. Speaker, I beg to submit that the amendment moved by my learned friend Dr. Gokul Chand Narang should be considered dispassionately. The object of this amendment is that a person who in open violation of the Land Alienation Act gets hold of some poor zamindar's land, through a benami transaction may be permitted to hold it for 20 years. But my submission is that he could get a mortgage on that land and if he has not done so he has acted against the law and perpetuated a fraud.

I admit that in enacting such laws some sort of harshness is inevitably exercised. But it is for the House to see whether these are the same persons who have flouted the provisions of the Land Alienation Act by transacting benamis, that have been harshly dealt with. Is it not just that some of these oppressors of the poor agriculturists be treated with some severity rather than prolong the misery of thousands of their victims ?

My submission is that if this amendment is accepted we will be abetting this crime. During the discussion on this amendment my learned friend has remarked that a benami transaction is lawful and that the benamidar should not be deprived of the benefits of that land for 20 years. My submission is that under section 66 of the Civil Procedure Code, a civil court is entitled to interfere if it is proved to its satisfaction that the transaction was a fraudulent one. The benamidars could have obtained a mortgage for 20 years if they had so desired but since they have failed to do so and got the land transferred to them by means of a benami transaction they are guilty of deception and fraud. When my honourable friend Dr. Gokul Chand wants to extend the period during which the benamidar may remain in possession of the land to 20 years, he is lending his support to the injustice that is being perpetrated on the poor zamindars, for whom the opposition is never tired of showing great concern.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang got up to oppose such a proposal that was discussed in the old Council and declared that none should dare touch and pollute with his impure hands the usurious rates charged by the money-lenders in this province.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : It is absolutely wrong.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : On a point of order. Is the speech, that has been made so far, relevant to the amendment which is before the House ? I have raised the objection after listening for nearly ten minutes.

Mr. Speaker : ' Relevancy in debate ' is rather an elastic expression. (Laughter). An able lawyer can make any irrelevant thing relevant. The honourable member, who is now questioning the relevancy of the Honourable Mir Maqbool Mahmood's speech, has often been considered irrelevant ; but on his convincing me on certain occasions that he was relevant, I had to change my view and give him full latitude to make his speech. I think Honourable Mir Maqbool Mahmood is quite relevant.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I with due respect say that whatever your decision may be with regard to the relevancy or otherwise of the speech, your observation about my conduct was out of question.

Mr. Speaker : The observation I have made is favourable rather than adverse. After I have given my ruling the honourable member has no right to make comments on it. May I ask which amendment is under discussion ?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The amendment is confined to a very small matter. It is—

That in line 12 of 13-A (1), between the words " transaction " and " shall " the words " if more than 20 years old " be inserted.

I must of course bow to the ruling of the Chair. I, however, want to give my personal explanation.

Mr. Speaker : No personal explanation is needed. The honourable member has not done or said anything which requires personal explanation.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I have been held out by you to the whole province that I was irrelevant.

Mr. Speaker : Order, order. I did not mean disparagement in the least. On the other hand I have admired the honourable member as an able lawyer and speaker.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I have got the greatest respect for you but I want an opportunity to—

Mr. Speaker : Order, order. If the honourable member rises again I shall have to expel him.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : In order to avoid—

Mr. Speaker : I direct the honourable member to leave the House.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I rise to a point of order. When you gave your ruling the honourable member stood up just to explain.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Have you asked Mr. Puri to go out ?

Mr. Speaker : I told him not to rise again. He rose and I have asked him to leave the Chamber.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I was submitting that you had given a ruling but he did not rise to raise any objection against your ruling. He only stood up to explain what he understood.

Mr. Speaker : I told him expressly and repeatedly that he had not broken any rule nor done anything which required personal explanation. On the other hand I told him that he had been very ably making irrelevant things relevant, as an orator and an able lawyer and that I admired his speeches. Once or twice I thought that he was irrelevant. I called him to order. He explained his point of view and I was satisfied. Where was the necessity of rising against the express order of the Chair ? I told him last time to stop rising and that if he rose again I shall have to expel him, but he disobeyed me and rose again. What could I have done under these circumstances ? (Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava rose from his seat). I cannot allow any further discussion. I have given my ruling and taken the action that I could take. So the matter ends. Let us now proceed with the amendment. (Sardar Sampuran Singh rose from his seat and wanted to address the Chair). I am not going to listen any more on my ruling or action.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : You have put a question.

Mr. Speaker : I have not.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : You have.

Mr. Speaker : If the honourable member again speaks in that tone, I shall be compelled to ask him to leave the Chamber.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : You can turn the whole House out in this way.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Will you kindly ask Rai Bahadur Mukand Lal Puri to come back ?

Mr. Speaker : If he will apologise when he comes back, I shall allow him to return. (Hear, hear).

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I shall be the last person to question your ruling. You have found during the last fifteen months that I have never questioned your ruling. Therefore, I did not rise to question your ruling at all. I only stood up to invite your attention to one very important point and that is that the honourable member whom you have named only stood up to explain what he understood. You were pleased to say that you did not make any disparaging remarks. He again stood up to explain and you asked him to go out.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is omitting a very important link of the chain. I concede that the Honourable Mukand Lal Puri got up each time to give a personal explanation. But I assured him more than once that no explanation was needed, as he had committed no irregularity or done anything which required a personal explanation. However, he again got up. Upon this I told him for the last time that if he rose again, after my express orders, I shall be compelled to expel him from the House. Despite this, he got up again and thus compelled me to do what I did against my will.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : It is quite possible that he might have risen to raise another point of order. (Voices : Same point again and again).

Premier : There seems to be some misunderstanding. As a matter of fact I do not think that my friend Mr. Mukand Lal Puri wanted to disobey your orders. As a matter of fact what he said was that he wanted to make his position clear that he would not in any way challenge the ruling. That is what he wanted to say. But you probably misunderstood his action and thought he was going to flout the ruling of the Chair. That was not his intention at all. He merely wanted to say that he did not mean any discourtesy to the Chair and he did not want to flout your ruling. He merely wanted to express regret about what had happened.

Mr. Speaker : May I ask one thing? Can any honourable member of the House deny that I repeatedly told him to resume his seat?

Premier : That is true.

Mr. Speaker : Did I not last time say that if he again rose against my order, I shall expel him from the House?

Premier : Exactly.

Mr. Speaker : Did he not get up again? That is the point.

Lala Duni Chand : He never realised that you were on the point of expelling him. (Voices : Order, order).

Mr. Speaker : If he apologises for disobeying the Chair, he may come back.

Premier : You are perfectly correct.

Mr. Speaker : If I am perfectly correct then I would request the honourable members to proceed with the business of the House.

Premier : He did not get up in any way to flout your ruling. He wanted to explain that he did not wish to flout you.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I respectfully submit that although the Chair has got very wide powers I do not think the Chair meant that the member who had been asked not to rise, was not to rise on any other point. It was after all in a certain context that you asked him not to rise.

Mr. Speaker : Is the honourable member sure that he had another point in his mind ?

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : You have yourself admitted that you were not sure what was passing in his mind when he rose. That is exactly my argument. The gentleman had risen not to disobey or challenge your orders. There is a genuine misunderstanding and I would request you to revise your decision.

Mr. Speaker : Is he prepared to come and make a statement in the House that he got up for such and such purpose and not to discuss the same point ?

Premier : I think we had better proceed with the business. If he comes and gives an explanation I think you will allow him to come.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in line 12, of 13-A (1) between the words "transaction" and "shall" the words "if more than 20 years old" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (East Punjab Landholders) :
Sir, I move—

That in lines 12—16 of 13-A (1) the words "void . . . . Act" be omitted and in their place the following be substituted :—

"Valid only for 20 years from the date of transfer, and the alienor shall be entitled to possession of the land so alienated after the lapse of 20 years."

My argument is the same as was that of Dr. Gokul Chand Narang. The only difference is that I do not want that at the very outset the period of possession of the alienor should exceed the limit of 20 years. All I want is that the period of his possession may be allowed to be within 20 years and I am quite prepared to accept any amendment that may be proposed by the sponsor of the Bill with a period fixed to be less than 20 years after such enquiry as the deputy commissioner or the collector may make.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That in lines 12—16 of 13-A (1) the words "void . . . . Act" be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, I beg to move that—

In lines 12-13 of clause 13-A (1) the words "for all purposes" be omitted.

I want to make my friends understand the purport of my amendment. If my amendment is not carried, it means that all sales or mortgages effected by agriculturists in favour of non-agriculturists would in the long run be declared null and void and agriculturists would be the losers in all transactions. I submit that if my agriculturist friends look at my amendment minutely and thoroughly they would surely find it more useful for themselves. But I know they are impatient and they would not listen to me. (Cheers). We, who are sitting on these benches have always kept in view what is just and equitable and always tried to save poor people from unjust persons. If the words "for all purposes" are not omitted, it means that these words will affect even the 10th sale. If a benami sale passes through the hands of even 10 persons it would remain a benami transaction and the provisions of the proposed clause would apply to it. It was enacted in 1901 that a non-agriculturist cannot obtain land by sale from an agriculturist and whatever transfers of land have since taken place they have all been made in favour of agriculturists. I would challenge you to look-up the sale deeds and mutation registers of such sales and you would find that the statement made by me is absolutely correct.

If my amendment is accepted and these words are omitted then the agriculturists would gain a lot because the existing sales in the name of agriculturists could be cancelled and declared void and thus this clause would not effect the non-agriculturists. My friends on the left are becoming impatient but I would like them to keep this fact in mind that so far as sales under the Land Alienation Act are concerned the agriculturists alone could gain by them and as much as every sale would be effected in their favour as it has been done previously. I leave this matter in their hands and do not propose to labour that point more. I wanted to place the defect of this clause before the House and that I have done.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in lines 12 and 13 of 13-A (1), the words "for all purposes" be omitted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Before you proceed further, I should like to explain myself. I did not intend to question your ruling. I was misunderstood by you.

I only wanted you to make clear certain observations made by you which I thought were a reflection on me. I did not at all wish to question your ruling.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member wanted to give a personal explanation which was not needed and I repeatedly requested him not to do so, otherwise the honourable member had not done or said anything objectionable. I also had not passed any adverse remarks. On the other hand I had praised his ability as a sound lawyer and good speaker.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I may assure you that I had no intention of disobeying your orders.

Mr. Speaker : I accept the honourable member's explanation. I have a great respect for him as one of the ablest members of this House and I am very glad that he has explained himself so candidly and clearly.

Chaudhri Ram Sarup (Rohtak Central, General, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I do not wish to make a long speech and would have made none at all but for the very provocative remarks that my honourable friend Sir Gokul Chand Narang has made during the course of his speech. The object of his amendment is that the Unionist Government should adopt a double policy and deal with the agriculturist offenders leniently and treat the non-agriculturists harshly. This lesson has been given to us by him in the garb of a moral preacher while it is clearly an attempt on his part to make us dishonest. That is what I have been able to understand from his speech. He means to teach us unfairness and dishonesty.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang :

پوزن پتھر سوجہ پر ایسی نم سوجہ تو کیا سوجہ

Chaudhri Ram Sarup : What exactly the learned Doctor wants is that the Government should give commendations to those agriculturists who entered into benami transactions and will have now to give up the land in question. He argues that these agriculturists are our own brothers in profession and exhorts us, therefore, to show them a favour which we are not offering to the non-agriculturists. Let me assure my honourable friend that the Unionists will treat the agriculturists and non-agriculturists alike. The learned Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang has preached dishonesty in the garb of honesty. I am sorry he has thought it fit to stoop so low. I request him even now to follow the right path and support us instead of supporting an unfair and unjust amendment.

With these few words, Sir, I oppose the amendment which my honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang has moved just now.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Sir, my only submission in this connection is that the words "for all purposes" serve no useful purpose here. I admit no harm will result if we retain them. But it is no use retaining them. That is all I have to say. (Pir Akbar Ali : What is the harm if we let these words remain as they are?).

An Honourable Member : The question be now put.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in lines 12 and 13 of 13-A (1), the words "for all purposes" be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Lahore City, General, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir I beg to move—

That in lines 13—16 of 13-A for the words "and the alienor.....Act" the following be substituted:—

" Provided that in cases, which appear to him just and equitable for compensation, the Deputy Commissioner shall have the power to determine the amount of compensation and order restoration of land to the alienor subject to the payment on easy yearly instalments of such compensation as determined considering all the circumstances and in the event of alienor refusing to make payment of compensation within the time fixed by Deputy Commissioner or failing to pay two successive instalments, the beneficiary may retain or obtain the possession of land for such term not exceeding seven years as the Collector may decide and after the expiry of the term so fixed the land will revert to the alienor free of all liabilities."

My submission is that since yesterday discussion is going on on this very clause and many other clauses have been disposed off. Whenever any honourable member rises to speak in support of the Bill from the Treasury Benches, he usually turns his attention towards us and questions us as to what is the position of the Congress as regards this Bill. The manner in which they express their ideas and the meaning they convey thereby goes to show that it is the object of the Government to know the exact position of the Congress regarding the Bills that have been introduced in this session. But as I stated the other day in connection with another Bill, in the same manner I would like to express my view point regarding the Bill now before the House.

I may submit that I have moved my amendment with a view to clear the position of the Congress. The All India Congress stated it very clearly in its election manifesto that its representatives would go to the provincial Legislative Assemblies for safeguarding the interests of the poor people, whether they be agriculturists or non-agriculturists. Keeping this election manifesto of the Congress in view I submit my amendment before the House.

It has been stated on the floor of this House that benami transactions are fraudulent and false and they are merely done in order to violate the provisions of the Land Alienation Act. I admit that as far as the infringement of the Land Alienation Act is concerned, these benami transactions are not transacted in accordance with the provisions of the said Act. That is why they are called dishonest transactions. But the question is whether the person who has entered into this transaction has paid any money or not. I would like to invite attention of the House to this point.

My submission is that if anybody has made a benami transaction, he should pay the penalty for it, and the penalty is being imposed by my honourable friends opposite. They have provided that anybody who has made a benami transaction before or after the commencement of this Act shall be void and illegal for all purposes. I may submit that the punishment should not be of a vindictive nature and should not be out of proportion to the offence of the benami holder. Apparently the object of this Bill is to nullify the covenant that is entered into by this transaction. I, therefore, wish to say a few words regarding money which an alienee has paid to alienor in a benami transaction. As my friend Mr. Maqbool Mahmood has pointed out, whenever any new law is framed the changing notions of society are kept in view. So it is necessary that we should keep this principle in view when we take this Bill into consideration. I may submit that when any amendment is to be made in any Act, then the mutual relations of the different sections of society should be kept in view. Just for the sake of benefitting the rich people the poor people should not be deprived of their money and power should not be used in order to rob the money of the poor alienee without giving him any compensation. In this respect I would like to make the position of the Congress clear and it is this, that we do not wish to take the property of a person without giving him any kind of compensation to which he is entitled and we are of opinion that the property can only be restored to the original owner on payment of compensation which the alienee demands. I have submitted my suggestion that whenever any benami transaction case comes before a deputy commissioner and any body admits that that benami transaction was made in his name, the deputy commissioner would be empowered to reject his contention on the ground that he had received sufficient compensation or he could decide otherwise as the case may be. And if he has received no money then he should be entitled to have some benefit for the money he has lent to the alienor. But if the alienee has received any sum, which as in other provinces falls under the dandapat, then he should receive nothing and the benami transaction should be declared null and void. If the alienee has received no money, then the deputy commissioner should have the power to determine compensation to the alienee, provided the case appears just and equitable to him for compensation. But if the case is otherwise, then the alienee should be punished and in my opinion his punishment should not exceed the intensity of his offence. The utmost punishment should be such which should bring the offender round and which should deter him from indulging in that kind of transaction again. In my opinion the punishment which I think to be sufficient is that the sum which the alienee has received should be deducted from the sum which he is to receive. If my honourable friends think that this compensation is excessive I would request you to fix any kind of limit. My amendment empowers the deputy commissioner to decide what amount of compensation would be given to the alienee. The utmost limit can also be fixed beyond which no deputy commissioner would be empowered to decide.

Again if the alienor decides to pay up his debt at once, he is entitled to do that. If he decides to pay it back in instalments he should pay up the debt in that way. If the alienor does not pay up his debt, then just as lands in mustajari are held, in the same way the alienee should be entitled to benefit by the land for not more than seven years. This is what is meant by this amendment. Just as in the Usurious Loans Act the lender is not entitled to get more interest than is fixed in the Act, in the same way I have empowered the deputy commissioner to determine the amount of compensation to be given to the alienee. For this purpose I have fixed that such limit should not exceed 7 years, in order that the alienee may get something back for his own money. My submission is that the proposal of my friends opposite means that anybody who has power, can do according to his own will and can take the law into his own hands. My honourable friends opposite have been citing the examples of other civilized countries of the world and they declare from housetops that they are doing in that very way. But my submission is that my friends cite examples only but do not follow them. It is always said that they have great regard for the poor. May I enquire whether this is the way of serving the poor? It is quite apparent that the wish of my honourable friends is only to benefit the rich landholders at the expense of the poor cultivators. The present Government is composed of the rich zaminders only and I wish that they had some regard for the poor people as well.

It is said that the benamis are fraudulent. True. But may I ask how it is dishonest to claim a compensation for the actual money paid by alienee? I suggest that when any benami holder admits the transaction to be a benami one and also admits the account and thus when evidence is just and equitable, then the alienor shall have to give him compensation. If he refuses to admit before a deputy commissioner that a benami transaction has not been made in his favour, I am not prepared to give him any relief or protection.

I beg to submit that the amendment moved is a very proper one and in my opinion it does not go against the basic principles of any of the laws that have been enacted since the formation of civilized society. But it will not be fair to let it fall only on the score that it has been moved by the Congress and that if the Government were to accept it they will be discredited for doing so and their prestige will suffer. If you refrain from doing justice because of this line of argument and say that the Government are not prepared to accept it you will be guilty of rank injustice.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

" Provided that in cases, which appear to him just and equitable for compensation, the Deputy Commissioner shall have the power to determine the amount of compensation and order restoration of land to the alienor subject to the payment of easy yearly instalments of such compensation as determined considering all the circumstances and in the event of alienor refusing to make payment of compensation within the time fixed by the Deputy Commissioner or failing to pay two successive instalments, the beneficiary may retain or obtain the possession of land for such term not exceeding seven years as the Collector may decide and after the expiry of the term so fixed the land will revert to the alienor free of all liabilities."

Chaudhri Ali Akbar (Gurdaspur East, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, it is a well-known fact that the benamidars violate the law of the land and if as is proposed in the amendment they are given any compensation they will be encouraged to intensify their unlawful activities. There is the danger of even the zamindars following in their footsteps. By letting a law-breaker go scot free you are setting a bad example. The practice of benamis is already ruining a number of zamindar families.

My honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang remarked just now that even if the land was transferred ten times, it ultimately remained in the possession of zamindars. Indeed it does remain in the possession of zamindars but during that time ten zamindar families are ruined whose blood is drained by the sahukars.

A benamidar ruins, as I have already said, at least ten families of zamindars. For instance, A is a sahukar and B is his debtor. Now C is a good zamindar and the sahukar A gets B's land transferred in C's favour. In the first instance, the sahukar does not ask for any bond but later on he says to C: "Supposing you die or I die to-morrow, it is just possible that your sons refuse to recognise our arrangements about this land, why not reduce the agreement to black and white saying that you are tilling my land." That done, C who had written that document gives all the produce of that land to the sahukar. But if next year crops fail, the sahukar charges C with malpractices and gets back the land from him. The inevitable result of the whole affair is that the written bond ruins the zamindar. Now the sahukar goes to another zamindar and entraps him likewise. Thus this tragedy is repeated many times... To whomsoever the land goes, he is ruined and the sahukar chooses another victim to squeeze out his blood. I hope that my honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang will now see the truth of my statement that the benami land ruins ten zamindar families. The land remains in the possession of zamindars but what is the use of that land to the zamindar whom it ruins in the end? It is clear, therefore, that the mal-practice of benami goes on and the law continues to be broken. The zamindars are crushed in this way. It is high time that Government did something to put a stop to benamis at once. Should the Government postpone it for six months several zamindar families will come to grief.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani (Muzaffargarh North, Muhammadan, Rural), (Urdu) : Mr. Speaker, my friend Mir Maqbool Mahmood expressed his surprise on the attitude of the Congress party in support of the capitalists and money-lenders who had evaded the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. As for myself I am neither surprised nor perturbed over the attitude of my friends sitting opposite. As a matter of fact, I had anticipated that our Congress friends will not be able to resist the temptation of supporting the cause of their first love, the bania, however unreasonable that cause may be. The amendment moved by the Leader of the Congress party has fulfilled my expectations. Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava's amendment provides that when the collector finds that a particular alienation of land was a benami transaction and such transaction was made to evade the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, he may order the restoration of land to the alienor subject to the payment of a compensation which may be determined by the deputy commissioner, and if the alienor fails to pay the compensation, the beneficiary or the ostensible alienee may retain or obtain the possession of land for such term not exceeding seven years as the collector may decide and after the expiry of the term so fixed the land may revert to the alienor free of all liabilities. Sir, a careful examination of this amendment will disclose that the members of the Congress party have tried to evolve a compromise between the Congress creed and their innate feelings of sympathy with the capitalist and money-lending classes. It reminds me of a famous verse of Akbar Allahabadi which aptly describes the policy of our Congress friends in the Punjab. He says—

شیخ بھی خوش رہے شیطان بھی بیزار نہ ہو

(A voice : What about the policy of the Unionist Government) ? Sir, we do not care for the resentment of the Satan (شیطان). Now coming to the amendment, Sir, I submit that a benami transaction is made to evade the provisions of the Alienation of Land Act, and anybody who violates the law of the land, must face the consequences of his illegal action. The amendment under consideration, in substance, amounts to this, that the beneficiary or the ostensible alienee in a benami transaction should be given compensation for cleverly evading and violating the provisions of the law of the land. This seems to me a strange principle of justice. Now, Sir, I would like to know from my friend the Leader of the Opposition as to what he would do, if a man, who had committed burglary in his house and dispossessed him of his belongings, is captured by the police along with the stolen property. Would he like the offender to be punished for his offence or would he return a portion of the stolen property to the burglar in lieu of the hardships and risks which the burglar took in committing the crime ; and let him off after taking the remaining portion of the stolen property ? (Laughter).

(A voice: In a benami transaction the alienor is as much guilty of evading the law as the beneficiary or the ostensible alienee). Sir, I do not defend the alienor who I admit is a party to the evasion of law, but let us not forget that his acquiescence is brought about under pressure, as no one will be willing to part with his property especially when the law of the land protects him from doing so. What happens in actual practice is that an indebted person is made to agree to the alienation of his land under the threat of his being sent to the civil prison or after being harassed in the civil courts and by frequent attachments, he is compelled by the creditor to agree to his proposal. Let us not forget that before the passing of the indebtedness legislations in the Punjab, the debtor was liable to be sent to civil prison, his house, standing crops, cattle and the whole of his agricultural produce were liable to attachment, and it was not difficult to harass the poor debtor and to make him agree to any terms which the creditor desired. Most of the benami transactions relate to this period. We should also bear in mind that under the customary law of the province an agriculturist proprietor has restricted rights in landed property. He holds the ancestral landed property as a trust for his successors and has only a life interest in the property. He has no right to alienate his landed ancestral property to the detriment of his successors. Why should the successors of a particular landholder suffer for his folly or misdeeds? It is, therefore, just and equitable that the property of a family should not be allowed to pass into the hands of outsiders against the provisions of the Alienation of Land Act. If benami transactions are not checked, the Punjab Alienation of Land Act will soon become a dead letter and a situation might arise which may endanger the peace and tranquility of the province. Sir, we must first decide the issue as to whether a benami transaction is legal or illegal and as to whether it amounts to the violation of the provisions of an existing law or not? If the House agrees with me that such transactions are illegal, then the question of compensation does not arise. It would be illogical to grant compensation to a person for violating the provisions of a law. We on this side of the House have no sympathy for one who violates the law of the country, but I know that our friends of the Opposition have a soft corner for law breakers and according to their standard of morality it is no crime to resort to civil disobedience or in other words the violation of the law of the country. Realising that "benami" amounts to "be imani," we cannot accept the proposition put forward by the Leader of the Opposition to grant compensation to a person who has dishonestly evaded the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. When he did so, he knew it full well that he was acting against the law and therefore he must suffer the consequences.

With these words, Sir, I oppose the amendment under consideration.

Mr. Speaker: Question is—

That in lines 13—16 of 13-A for the words "and the alienor.....Act" the following be substituted:—

"Provided that in cases, which appear to him just and equitable for compensation, the Deputy Commissioner shall have the power to determine the amount of compensation and order restoration of land to the alienor subject to the payment on easy yearly instalments of such compensation as determined considering all the circumstances and in the event of alienor refusing to make payment of compensation within the time fixed by the Deputy Commissioner or failing to pay two successive instalments, the beneficiary may retain or obtain the possession of land for such term not exceeding seven years as the Collector may decide and after the expiry of the term so fixed the land will revert to the alienor free of all liabilities."

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—
“That 13-A (1) stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I move—

That to clause 13-A (1), before Explanation, the following proviso be added :—

“Provided that the alienor shall not be entitled to possession unless he pays to the person in occupation under such transaction an amount which shall be equal to the amount of the original consideration together with compound interest at nine per cent. per annum with yearly rests from the date of the transaction up to the date of his ejection after deduction of the benefit received by him under such transaction.”

Mr. Speaker : This is practically the same amendment as has been disposed of by the House. Here the amount of compensation proposed by the honourable member is different from that proposed in that amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Has the House decided that no compensation is to be paid at all? (Voices : Yes). No. This has not been decided by the House.

Mr. Speaker : Compensation proposed by Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava has not been agreed to by the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : That does not mean that the House does not agree or would not agree or should be presumed not to agree to any compensation whatsoever. No such presumption can be made. Therefore, it does not mean that my amendment suffers from any technical defect.

Mr. Speaker : It does suffer in one respect. It should not be discussed any longer. The discussion on the amendment already moved is enough. The principle is discussed : only the amount is to be put to the vote of the House, and this I am going to do.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Am I not allowed to explain it ? I shall not make a long speech. I hope I shall be permitted to explain my amendment. (Voices : Urdu, Urdu). Why should I waste my words in addressing these gentlemen in Urdu or Punjabi !

In the first instance, the greatest defect in the Bill which has excited so much criticism in the province is that whereas you are depriving the beneficiaries of benami transactions, you are not giving them any compensation whatsoever. It may be that some of these beneficiaries have enjoyed the fruit of these benami transactions for some time, some 10, 20, may be even some 35 years. But there may be those who have not derived any benefit from these benami transactions whatsoever. Has any provision been made in the Bill for people who had these benami transactions made, say, in January, 1938, or even in May or June, 1938, for large sums of money, it may be ? Has any provision been made to compensate them even to the extent of one penny ? Has any provision been made in the Bill to protect those transactions where it is found that the transaction did not involve any sharp practice, that there was no dishonesty practised by the beneficiaries and no advantage was taken of the ignorance, the proverbial ignorance, of the agriculturist and no advantage was taken of his helplessness, that the transaction, barring the fact that it was an evasion of a provision of the Land Alienation Act, was perfectly sound and honest and entered into by both parties in a bona fide manner? I submit that no such provision has been made and, therefore, I submit with all respect and with all the earnestness that I can command that this absence from the Bill makes it an Act of usurpation, spoliation and confiscation and, therefore, of the highest tyranny and oppression. It is for this reason that I have moved this amendment so that the face of the Punjab Government may be saved to a certain extent that it was not utterly oblivious of the interests of the other parties concerned. Now Sir, with respect to the quantum of the compensation I have proposed. Now if the transactions had not been an evasion of the Land Alienation Act the mortgagee (or if the sale was to be set aside by a court of law, the vendee) might have been entitled to receive the balance of the principal money along with the interest agreed upon or at least, if the Usurious Act was to apply as passed by the Punjab Council, to an interest upto 9 per cent. compound with yearly rests which is the rate of interest prescribed in the Relief of Indebtedness Act passed by the Punjab legislature about three years ago. So long as that Act is in force, my submission is that it is not to be considered as unconscionable or usurious if the rate of interest is allowed at 9 per cent. compound interest with yearly rests on the principal mortgage money. I have taken this rate from the Relief of Indebtedness Act. Therefore, it cannot be said that I have put too high a rate of interest in my amendment. Then I have also provided, Sir, that from the amount which may be made up by the addition of the principal money to the interest, the amount of the benefit received may be deducted and even on that amount of the benefit, say it was one hundred rupees or grain worth one hundred rupees, every year compound interest at 9 per cent. per annum with yearly rests may be awarded to the alinor, to the agriculturist in whose interest this Bill is going to be passed, viz., compound interest at the same rate on both sides and then the balance that may be left may be awarded to the beneficiaries. I ask my friends, considering that there was no taint in the transactions so far as any hoodwinking, defraud and befooling of the agriculturist was concerned, why this compensation should not be given to the beneficiary. To deprive him of his property is, as I have submitted, against the spirit of all jurisprudence and no civilised country throws out people in such a merciless manner, simply because they have transgressed one provision of an artificial law. Here they have not even transgressed any express provision of the Act; they have only tried to evade it. I can understand some one getting up from those benches and say, "Well, take the statute of limitation". If a claim is barred by one day, no suit will lie and every court will dismiss it as time barred even if the amount be 10 lakhs. I quite agree, because that means that the statute has been violated and the claim is not in accordance with the statute. My submission is that in these benami transactions not a single provision of the Land Alienation Act as such is violated. A simple transaction is entered into in order, at the worst, to evade the artificial provisions of the law and no provision as such has been broken and even if any provision had been broken it is not of substance like the statute of limitation. My submission is that to deprive the beneficiary of any compensation whatsoever is not in consonance with justice and fairness.

It is with this object that I have moved this amendment. I know that the fate of this amendment is going to be like the fate of other amendments.

[Dr Sir Gokul Chand Narang ]

Now, the amendment moved by Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava was a very flimsy amendment. It was only better than no compensation as '0001 may be better than zero, and even that homeopathic dose has not been swallowed by my honourable friends. But I have nevertheless considered it my duty to put it before the House.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration ; amendment moved is that—

“ To 13-A (1), before Explanation, the following proviso be added :—

Provided that the alienor shall not be entitled to possession unless he pays to the person in occupation under such transaction an amount which shall be equal to the amount of the original consideration together with compound interest at nine per cent. per annum with yearly rests from the date of the transaction up to the date of his ejection after deduction of the benefit received by him under such transaction.”

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I congratulate my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang on his perseverance and I admire his repeated attempts to try to confuse the issue. He has again come forward with his very innocent air and said, ‘ Here you are, you have brought forward an iniquitous law to exploit somebody or to despoil somebody of his property.’ I have repeatedly on the floor of the House, during the last two days, tried to convince him. I dare say that it is not merely for the sake of his conviction that he is standing in his seat over and over again, but probably to satisfy his constituents that he is doing his duty. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : No). There is no harm in that. All honour to my friend for trying to do his duty to his constituents. Now, Sir, what was his argument ? His argument was that because that honest beneficiary has evaded or transgressed just one law, therefore, his penalty should not be so severe. What is the penalty ? The penalty is this. We are merely asked that the stolen property which a person has got should be returned to its proper owner and that if that stolen property is with him for 37 years, he proposes that the compensation should be small and if the stolen property is with him only for 2 years, a bigger amount of compensation should be paid. That is the gist of his argument and I am sure that the House must, by now, have understood that this has been the main theme throughout his argument on this Bill, not only to-day, but during the past two days. His point is that if that fellow is dishonest and he has defrauded other persons and he has transgressed a provision of law, even then he must be given due compensation because he has transgressed just one provision. That seems to be the gist of his argument and in a nutshell that is what he said. If we were to accept that argument, I suppose, he would next argue that the person, who has been convicted under section 379, because he has only transgressed just one provision of the law, should also be compensated and should not be punished.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of order, Sir. The Honourable Premier seems to be utterly ignorant of the definition which he applies to such transactions.

Mr. Speaker : It is not a point of order.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : He should not have assumed this.

Premier : Sir, what I have assumed is perfectly correct. My honourable friend knows it. If it had been an honest transaction, it would have been in the name of the beneficiary himself. You may be sure that he is not such a simpleton as my honourable friend tries to depict him. What he says is this. He asks A to transfer his land to B and he takes a promote from B for perhaps the double or quadruple the amount for which that land is transferred. If that land goes back to A, he would not suffer. He would go to a court and probably get that amount. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Include it in the Bill). As a matter of fact my honourable friends have given notices of such amendments. If you want to give protection to all honest people, accept the amendment as proposed by Mr. Singha. I will not oppose it. But I did not wish to accept that amendment for the simple reason that B, who in collusion with the beneficiary defrauded the other person, should also be penalised and that is why I opposed that amendment. (A voice : That is not moved). If my honourable friend thinks that he wants to protect that honest intermediary and if he likes that that honest beneficiary should also be protected, then he can get up and say that he accepts that amendment.

That to 13-A (1), before Explanation, the following proviso be added :—

“ Provided that the alienor shall not be entitled to possession unless he pays to the person in occupation under such transaction an amount which shall be equal to the amount of the original consideration together with compound interest at nine per cent. per annum with yearly rests from the date of the transaction up to the date of his ejection after deduction of the benefit received by him under such transaction.

The motion was lost.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Bawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : I beg to move—

5 r. u.

That the following proviso to 13-A (1) be added :—

“ Provided that any transaction proved to be benami, effected before the Act shall be turned into 20 years mortgage from the date of the mutations, in one of the forms permissible under the Land Alienation Act, if the beneficiary applies to the Revenue Officer and relinquishes his claim against the benamidar.

I do not wish to explain further the limitations with which my amendment is circumscribed. They are stated in extenso, in the amendment itself. The object of this amendment is this. Benami transactions are being condemned because they are evasions of the Land Alienation Act. What I suggest to the House is that instead of cancelling them altogether and denying to one party the rights which they have got under the benami transactions in their entirety you should secure to them what was permissible to them before and is even now permissible under the Land Alienation Act, that is, the usufructuary mortgage for 20 years. I do not say that that usufructuary mortgage should begin from the date of the cancellation of the benami transactions, but it should proceed from the date of the original transaction so that if the land has been in possession of the beneficiary for the last fifteen years, he would only get usufruct for another five years. My reason for moving this amendment is to be found in the Alienation of Land Act itself. The Alienation of Land Act provides that if any person takes an alienation which is patently opposed to the provisions of the Land Alienation Act, then it shall be the duty of the Collector to set aside that alienation and transform it into one of the mortgages permissible under the Alienation of Land Act. I refer to section 9 of the Land Alienation Act which runs as follows :—

If a member of an agricultural tribe makes a mortgage of his land in any manner or form not permitted by or under this Act, the Deputy Commissioner shall have authority to revise and alter the terms of the mortgage so as to bring it into accordance with such form of mortgage permitted by or under this Act as the mortgagee appears to him to be equitably entitled to claim.

Now, after the Land Alienation Act came into force it was absolutely illegal for a non-agriculturist creditor to take simple mortgage or take a mortgage beyond a term of 20 years from his debtor. Supposing a person wishing to flout the law did so openly and took that simple mortgage for Rs. 500 which was due to him in a form which was not permitted by the Land Alienation Act. The provisions of the Land Alienation Act lays the duty upon the Collector to cancel that alienation and transform it into a usufructuary mortgage which is permissible under the Act. Thus the Act already contains a provision for dealing with persons who thus openly flout the provisions of the Act. Why should you not repeat the same provision with respect to these benami transactions which were entered into by persons at the time when they were considered to be perfectly legal? Instead of taking a simple mortgage himself he has taken a simple mortgage in favour of a member of an agricultural tribe. At the time he entered into this transaction he thought that this was the less objectionable way of dealing with the land of an agriculturist. Instead of taking a simple mortgage himself he had it in favour of a member of a notified agricultural tribe, a thing which was permitted by the rulings of the High Court in accordance with the then existing practice. Certainly in morality or in law his case is not worse than if he had taken a simple mortgage himself. Therefore I put it to you, what justification is there for dealing with this alienee in a manner which is more harsh and stringent than if he had taken the simple mortgage himself? As I have already submitted, you are upsetting transactions worth thousands of rupees without affording any compensation and here is before you a definite provision under the Act itself. Why should you not take advantage of that provision and give to these benami transactions the same protection which the Act offers to those gentlemen who openly violate the provisions of the law? I have, I think, sufficiently explained my point and I now commend my amendment to the consideration of the House.

Mr. Speaker : I am going to put this amendment to vote without allowing any further discussion. The question of compensation, to which the amendment relates, has been fully discussed. So, I do not propose to allow any discussion on any amendment which relates to compensation in one form or another. If any honourable member has got an amendment which relates to compensation and he desires to have it put to vote he may move it in its turn without making any speech and I shall put it to the vote of the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : So far as I am aware the previous motions referred to compensation in cash. The present amendment does not refer to any compensation in cash. It only refers to conversion of a particular transaction into a form of mortgage which is recognised by the Act. I would therefore submit that this amendment is not on all fours with the motion previously considered.

Mr. Speaker : If one honourable member proposes Rs. 500 as compensation, another proposes Rs. 1,000 and a third Rs. 5,000, there is no reason why three discussions should be allowed on these three figures.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : There the question of cash is involved. Here there is no question of compensation in any form. It is only conversion of one kind of transaction into another kind.

Mr. Speaker : I cannot allow any further discussion. If any particular motion deserves to be treated separately as an independent motion it will be considered on its merits. But the present motion relates to compensation; so, I will put it to the vote without further debate.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Suppose I want to exchange my horse for another man's camel. There is no question of compensation involved.

Mr. Speaker : That is a hypothetical case.

The question is—

That the following proviso to 13-A (1), be added :—

“Provided that any transaction proved to be benami, effected before this Act shall be deemed to be a mortgage from the date of the mutation, in one of the forms permissible under the Land Alienation Act, if the beneficiary applies to the Revenue Officer and relinquishes his claim against the benamidar.”

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) :
I beg to move—

That in the Explanation to 13-A (1) for the words “also be deemed void for all purposes” the words “not be affected by anything stated in this sub-section if made before the 15th June, 1938” be substituted.

I shall ask you first to refer to the explanation itself and you will find it runs like this :—

Any transaction made in consequence of a transaction rendered void by this sub-section shall also be deemed void for all purposes.

You remember, Sir, when we were discussing the omission of sale, exchange, lease and farm from the first two lines of the sub-clause, you were pleased to suggest that I might, if I so chose move an amendment to the effect that bona fide subsequent purchasers or transferees shall not be affected by the fact that the original transaction was a benami one and you will also remember that at that time I drew your attention to this explanation and requested you to let me know if my amendment No. 13 would not meet the object that you had in view. In case you think that this amendment of mine does not meet that object, I am prepared to substitute, as you were kind enough to promise to receive any amendment of this kind—the following amendment :—

That the following proviso be added at the end of clause 13-A (1), namely :—

Nothing in this section shall impair the rights of transferees in good faith for consideration without notice that the transaction in consequence of which the original transferor held was benami.

(Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang).

Now when I moved the deletion of the words 'for all purposes' I distinctly indicated that zamindars stood to gain by that amendment. But as ill-luck would have it I was told that I was trying to make the zamindars also be-iman and I had no option but to give expression to a verse that involuntarily came to my lips:—

پڑیں پتھر سمجھ کر ایسی تم سمجھ تو کیا سمجھ

I think that I was not doing any injustice to the gentleman who said that he had understood it although he had not understood it. I do not mean any disrespect to him, but that was an involuntary expression. What I meant to point out and what I mean to point out now is this: that after the transaction which is being attacked as fraudulent there might be a succession of non-fraudulent honest transfers. (Premier: You are on sound ground now). I was on sound ground then also and I am not to blame if people would not understand me. I distinctly pointed this out then. But anything coming from this side is looked upon with great suspicion even when it is for the benefit of that side. That is unfortunately the case. Credit is not given to us for doing the right things and the necessary things. Now, Sir, if the land changes hands say a dozen time, even the 12th transferee will be affected in spite of the fact that not only he but even his ten predecessors in interest were honest and only the 11th predecessor in interest was aware of the true nature of the transaction. (An honourable member: These arguments were already advanced). I just made a reference then and you were kind enough to suggest that I might move an amendment. If these gentlemen are ghairdars and they know what is going on without being told, you may take votes on it. I am not anxious to exhaust myself and I entirely repudiate the remarks of the honourable Premier, childish remarks, that I was getting up simply to show off to my constituency. I wish he knew better. I am not trying to satisfy any person either here or outside.

Mr. Speaker: When did he use such words? I did not hear.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: He said these words when he rose to reply to one of the amendments.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member should have drawn my attention then and there.

Premier: What I said was, all honour to my honourable friend for standing up and doing his duty.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: What he meant to say was that I was not sincere and I was simply getting and talking to please the people outside this hall. My honourable friend does not know how keenly and deeply we feel over this Bill. He judges others by his own conduct.

Mr. Speaker: Will the honourable member please speak to the motion?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: The argument that I was submitting was this, that there might be any number of transfers after the original transaction which is dubbed as fraudulent and dishonest because it is benami and 11 persons who come after the first transferee may be absolutely innocent and honest and yet this explanation damns them and places them on the same level as the original transferee who ex-hypothesi was a party to the original transaction but might or might not have been dishonest in spite of anything that the Honourable Premier might say. Is it not proper, is it not just, that those innocent persons might be saved? I make an addition to it which I did not say at the time when my honourable friend, Mr. Gurmani was speaking, that all these subsequent transferees are going to be zamindars and not non-agriculturists like us and if they could only follow my argument they would be grateful to me for moving this amendment, because it protects the zamindars themselves and will avoid complications which may be very serious. I can give one or two instances. Supposing the land has changed hands from the original transferee, let us say to X. That X happens to be a Sikh zamindar, while the original alienor was, let us say, a Muslim. The Sikh buying bona fide, without notice of the actual nature of the transaction, builds a gurdawara on it or a school or some religious institution. If this explanation stands as it is, the transaction is declared benami and automatically the whole of the land should pass from a bona fide innocent, honest, Sikh purchaser into the hands of the original, let us say, Muslim alienor. What will happen to the gurdawara? Now take the reverse case. A Sikh is the original alienor. The second transferee, a bona fide and honest transferee is a Muslim and as a pious Muslim he erects a mosque on a part of the land. This Bill comes into force and it is established in the office of the deputy commissioner that it is a benami transaction. The land must pass from the hands of the Muslim innocent purchaser to the redoubtable Akali. He wants the whole land and you have a series of Shahidganj again as a result of this explanation. These gentlemen have not realized the implication. My submission therefore is that if for nothing else, to avoid all these complications, to avoid penalizing innocent and honest purchasers after the first purchase, they should delete this explanation or amend it as I have suggested namely that all the transactions before 15th June 1938 shall not be affected if they have been made after the original transaction. It will avoid all complications to one or two of which I have referred and it will also save innocent and honest purchasers. I leave it to the Honourable Premier to see if it is just. If my amendment No. 13 is not acceptable I am quite willing to substitute the amendment a copy of which I have submitted to you. With respect to this new amendment you may see that it is on the lines of section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act. The words are these—

Where a person fraudulently or erroneously represented that he is authorized to transfer certain immovable property and professes to transfer such property for consideration, such transfer shall at the option of the transferee operate on any interest which the transferor may acquire in such property at any time during which the contract of transfer subsists.

Nothing in this section shall impair the rights of transferees in good faith for consideration without notice of the existence of the said option.

I have adopted this provision mutatis mutandis from section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Mr. Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in the Explanation to 13-A (1) for the words, "also be deemed void for all purposes" the words "not be affected by anything stated in this sub-section if made before the 15th June, 1938" be substituted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikandar Hyat-Khan): I am afraid I have to say a few words because my honourable friend opposite again said several things with a view to confuse the issues, may be because he has not himself studied the thing. The difficulty is, he should have also explained that even in urban areas where property is transferred from one party to another, if it is found that the total debt is not what it should be the property goes back to the original owner in whose favour the court decides that he is the original owner. He does not get the compensation from the original owner, he can sue the person who sold it to him under a false pretence. I found he brought in the instances of gurdwaras and buildings and other things. He seems not to have studied the definition of land in the Alienation of Land Act. It is defined that land meant land for agricultural purposes or sites for buildings subsidiary to agricultural purposes. He forgot all these things and harangued us as if everybody was a school child and knew nothing of the law which was being amended. He said that my expressions are childish; it is he who is in his dotage. He should have had the decency of telling the House that the property goes back to the original owner and the middleman does not get any compensation from the original owner. He can sue the middleman who has cheated him and similarly in this case he can get his money as I understand is happening in the courts now. All these things my honourable friend ignored and he gave us a long harangue and tried to pose as an innocent person oppressed by these benches. (Hear, hear).

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That in the Explanation to 13-A (1) for the words "also be deemed void for all purposes", the words "not be affected by anything stated in this sub-section if made before the 15th June 1938" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) :
I move—

That the following proviso be added at the end of clause 13-A :—

"Nothing in this section shall impair the rights of transferees in good faith for consideration without notice that the transaction in consequence of which the original transferor held was benami."

In moving this I would only say a few words. What I have proposed is from the Transfer of Property Act and that provision itself is a reply to the heated argument of my learned friend on this point. Whether I am in dotage or he is in his swaddling clothes will be obvious to those who understand anything.

That the following proviso be added at the end of clause 13-A (1) :—

"Nothing in this section shall impair the rights of transferees in good faith for consideration without notice that the transaction in consequence of which the original transferor held was benami."

The motion was lost.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Feeling the temper of the House I think it is waste of time of the House on my part to move any amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I am not going to give it up. Raja Sahib may be frightened by the temper of the House, I am not. I do not care what happens. I want these things to be put on record (hear, hear), as I said about 12 years ago when I was speaking on a similar measure. I know that this House is not in a mood to listen, but I am speaking for higher authorities who ultimately have to decide the fate of this Bill and I am providing them with some material to form their opinion. I succeeded on that occasion and let us hope that we succeed on this occasion also.

The motion that I want to move is—

That in the Explanation to 13-A (1) the following proviso be added :—

Provided that the alienor shall pay full compensation for any buildings, machinery and other improvements or additions as erected on or made to the land subsequent to the alienation.

This is on a par with a part of the amendment previously moved by me. I may say for the information of my honourable friend the Premier that transfers are not always set aside without compensation. Even in the case of declaratory suits or suits for possession brought by reversionary heirs governed by the customary law when a transfer is set aside compensation is given to the extent of the necessity proved in the transaction and if necessity can be proved in the present case for the original alienation by an agriculturist alienor there is nothing in law or equity which should debar the beneficiary from receipt of compensation and if the Government were more considerate than it is at present, it would certainly not have opposed the amendments regarding compensation. This compensation is for improvements. Thirty-seven years, as has been said again and again, have elapsed since the Land Alienation Act was passed and some benami transactions might have occurred in 1901 so that those transactions would now be about 37 years old and if those transactions were transactions of sale, they might have passed through several hands, gardens might have been planted on those lands, houses might have been built on those lands or wells might have been sunk on those lands—whether ordinary wells or tube-wells—and some other improvements might have been made costing thousands of rupees. There is no provision in the Bill for awarding any compensation and I leave it to the Government whether they would think it proper not to allow any compensation even for improvements in such cases.

That in the Explanation to 13-A (1) the following proviso be added :—

Provided that the alienor shall pay full compensation for any buildings, machinery and other improvements or additions erected on or made to the land subsequent to the alienation.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Pari : I have a similar amendment in my name which runs as follows :—

That at the end of 13-A (2), the following be added :—

In cases where any additions, improvements or structures or planting of trees, etc., which have enhanced the value of land, have been effected by any such transferee, the Collector shall assess the market value of the same and shall cause the same to be paid to the transferee or beneficiary as the case may be before ejection from the land.

This is one of the most serious omissions from the Act and I endorse the argument of Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang which he has advanced on this point. The improvements are very likely to have been effected in these cases as these transactions are old. As time passes, improvements are necessary and further as the property belonged to the alienees, they had no restriction in making improvements. The Act also applies to sales and a person who has taken a sale considers it as his own property. If, as a result of those improvements the value of the land has increased, as it would increase for example by the sinking of a well, why should not the value of that well be given to the alienee? Even under usufructuary mortgages under the Land Alienation Act the principal and the interest is wiped out but if there are any improvements which really enhance the value of the land they are always open to the mortgagee and the mortgagor is made to pay them. In every mortgage, improvements which are permissible under the law—of course not improvements which improve the property out of wisdom—should be taken into account and paid off.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): I merely wanted to say a word about these two amendments. I am at one with my honourable friends that it would be equitable to give some thing to the bona fide alienee. If they were to restrict their amendment to only those subsequent bona fide alienees or transferees then I am at one with them and they must have noticed that a notice of a motion has been given to meet that particular purpose. But my honourable friends' amendments go further. They want to give benefit to one of the persons who may have offended against the Act. We do not want to give relief whatever to the people who have been a party to that fraudulent transaction but beyond that if there are bona fide transferees, I think it is equitable that we should give them some benefit and in view of that fact we have given notice of an amendment which will come before the House in due course, I hope that my honourable friends will support that amendment.

That in the Explanation to 13-A (1) the following proviso be added:—

Provided that the alienor shall pay full compensation for any buildings, machinery and other improvements or additions erected on or made to the land subsequent to the alienation.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker: The question is—

That the Explanation to 13-A (1) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I move—

That at the end of 13-A (2), the following be added:—

In cases where any additions, improvements or structures or planting of trees, etc., which have enhanced the value of land, have been affected by any such transferee, the Collector shall assess the market value of the same and shall cause the same to be paid to the transferor or beneficiary as the case may be before ejection from the land.

The motion was lost.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Sir, I beg to move—

That for 13-A (2) the following be substituted:—

The question whether a transaction is bewassi or not within the meaning of Section 13-A (1) will be determined by the deputy commissioner acting as a revenue court.

Khan Bahadur Chaudhri Riazat Ali: Yesterday there was an amendment that in sub-clause (8), for the words 'revenue officer' the words 'revenue court' be substituted. That amendment fell through and was not carried out. We retained the words 'revenue officer.' Can the honourable member now move this amendment after that amendment was lost?

Mr. Speaker: That amendment related to a specific matter. This is a different matter altogether. The amendment is that the deputy commissioner should act as a revenue court.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: In this connection I wish to draw the attention of the House to the minute of dissent appended by three members of the House, Sardar Kapoor Singh, Sardar Partab Singh and Lala Duni Chand, which is to be found at page 4 of the report of the select committee. They observe:—

Under the existing law the civil courts have jurisdiction to decide whether a particular transaction is bewarzi or not. The proposed legislation takes away this right and confers upon the deputy commissioner exclusively the power and jurisdiction to decide such cases as a revenue officer. We are of opinion that the procedure of revenue court as prescribed in the Punjab Tenancy Act should be followed by the deputy commissioner in determining petitions under sub-clause 13 (a), (b) of clause (4) of this Bill, but such petitions should bear a court fee stamp of Rs. 1 only.

Sir, I press this amendment for the consideration of the House, not only on the ground that I am averse to any functions, which are now being performed by judicial tribunals being handed over to the sweet will of executive officers, but also on the ground that the particular matters which are now being proposed to be handed over to the collectors are of very complicated nature and for which an executive officer like deputy commissioner is not a proper deciding authority. If he is a court, whether civil or revenue, it is immaterial. If he acts as a court, he will be deciding that matter on judicial considerations. He will feel that he is sitting as an arbitrator between the two parties. He is not to allow the policy which under the instructions of the Government he may be asked to follow, but he has to discharge his duties in an impartial manner, regardless of any instructions, written, verbal or on the phone communicated by any of the Ministers or his parliamentary secretaries. Such matters, as has been pointed out, have been so far decided by civil courts. Is it proper again that matters of such magnitude should be left to these officers? It has been brought to your notice that transactions of this nature in the province will be worth crores of rupees and alienations may relate to lakhs of bighas of land. Is it proper that the rights of property of citizens in this province should be left to the sweet will of executive officers? It is said that after all we are amending the Land Alienation Act and we do not want to get out of the scheme of the Land Alienation Act. But if you definitely introduce into the Land Alienation Act, matters which were not so far included in it, you cannot take shelter behind that argument. Previously the deputy commissioners used to perform two executive functions. The first was that they had to sanction alienations in suitable cases by non-agriculturists in favour of agriculturists. The other function which the deputy commissioners had to perform was to prevent the evasion of the Land

[R. B. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Alienation Act. They were matters which did not require any judicial determinator or decision between two contending parties as to rights of property. Therefore, I strongly oppose the proposal that these questions should be decided by the discretion of deputy commissioners and not decided by judicial tribunals.

That for 13-A (2) the following be substituted :—

The question whether a transaction is benami or not within the meaning of section 13-A (1) will be determined by the deputy commissioner acting as a revenue court.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Marang : (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): Sir, I must support the amendment moved by my honourable friend Mr. Mukand Lal Puri. You know, Sir, that right from naib-tahsildar up to the Financial Commissioner, sometimes cases of mutation are considered by them where right of property is involved and even in all the revenue authorities from naib-tahsildar up to the Financial Commissioner give one unanimous decision, the aggrieved party has a right to go to a civil court and it is not in rare instances that unanimous decisions of all the revenue authorities right from naib-tahsildar up to the Financial Commissioner are set aside by a fourth class civil judge, or even by a revenue court acting as a civil court under special provisions of the Land Revenue Act. What does this show? The scheme of British legislation in this country is that where rights of property are involved, the proceedings should be as judicial as possible and the disposal of the rights in property should not be left entirely in the hands of executive officers. I do not mean to say that executive officers are not able. If we make them sit as a civil court, they may give different decisions because then they are guided by different rules of procedure and different rules of evidence and are not in a hurry to dispose of those cases. While sitting as executive officers they will dispose them of in a summary manner without taking full evidence and without giving full opportunities to the parties interested. Therefore, it is very necessary that when cases of such high value are concerned, the decision of the civil court should be taken on them and not the decision of revenue assistant who might under this section be given the powers of the collector. When even the Premier of the province can make a mistake about the definition of the land in the Land Alienation Act, forgetting that sites for buildings and structures are also involved in the definition of land and gurdwaras and mosques can be involved in that definition, what to say of deputy commissioners and revenue assistants? He is not here, otherwise he would have realised that his exposition of the law was entirely wrong. He was probably thinking of the condition of land at the time it was alienated and not at the time when it is to be restored.

Munshi Hari Lal : It will be observed that this measure when it comes into force will give enormous powers to deputy commissioners to determine the nature of the transaction, whether it is benami or genuine, it may be a transaction extending over a period of 88 years.

Mr. Speaker : Repetition should be avoided.

Munshi Hari Lal : I am not going to repeat any argument. Whatever I say now is only introductory to my speech. I submit that the deputy commissioners are given powers to determine matters of a vast magnitude and involving large sums of money and areas. It is, therefore, essential that when they determine whether a transaction is benami or not, they should call upon the beneficiaries and the alienees to put in their written statements, their pleas, strike issues and take evidence—both oral and documentary—in the manner prescribed in the Civil Procedure Code. They should not act in a summary way nor like small cause courts. My amendment is a very simple one and I, therefore, commend it to the House for its acceptance.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : The object of my amendment is exactly the same as that of Munshi Hari Lal. We have accepted the principle that benami transactions being in contravention of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act may be set aside. We know that relief will be given to a number of deserving people. But at the same time a good many innocent people including widows, orphans and minors will be sacrificed. All that we want is that innocent persons may be heard before they are condemned. We know that a very large number of innocent persons are going to be condemned; still let them have at least this small mercy of being heard. If this mercy is shown the poor persons against whom the collector will decide will have at least the consolation that he placed his case before the collector and did everything to convince the collector that his case was just. It is a well known principle that no person should be condemned unheard; and there is no reason why this procedure suggested in the amendment should not be followed. After all it is a very simple procedure.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalja : Sir, I want to support the amendment moved by Munshi Hari Lal.

Mr. Speaker : Munshi Hari Lal has not moved his amendment nor has it been proposed from the Chair.

The question is—

That for 13-A (2) the following be substituted:—

The question whether a transaction is benami or not within the meaning of section 13-A (1) will be determined by the deputy commissioner acting as a revenue court.

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal : I formally move my amendment—

That in line 5 of 13-A (2), between the words "evidence" and "that," the words "following the procedure of a revenue court" be inserted.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalja : May I now speak on the amendment?

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member has no right to speak on any amendment now, as all of them are to be put to vote without any further discussion.

The question is—

That in line 5 of 13-A (2), between the words "evidence" and "that" the words "following the procedure of a revenue court" be inserted.

Munshi Hari Lal (South Western Towns, General) (Urban): I beg to move—

That in lines 1-2 of 13-A (2) the words "either of his own motion or" be deleted.

I submit that if the deputy commissioner moves on his own motion, he will be then a party. Supposing the alienor or his descendants or successors in interest do not at all care to contest the transaction and the deputy commissioner is empowered to act, then he will be placed in the position of a plaintiff and a judge at the same time. It will be creating anomalies. To give such a power to the deputy commissioner as to move the motion and to sit in judgment over his own motion would be to land him in an anomalous position. These words should not therefore remain. It should be alienor alone who should have the right to come and prefer his claims before the deputy commissioner. The matter would be then rightly adjudicated between the alienor and the beneficiary by the deputy commissioner and not between the deputy commissioner himself, and others concerned.

is—

That in lines 1-2 of 13-A (2) the words, "either of his own motion or" be deleted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : The motion moved though simple is a very important one because it seeks to avoid a wrong principle that the plaintiff should be the judge himself. We have heard of such things in other connections, as a silent court of justice in himself—himself the judge and jury and himself the prisoner at the bar, and so on. That should not be the case when titles to properties worth thousands and may be worth lakhs have to be adjudicated upon. I think it is only right that the deputy commissioner who has been entrusted with the powers of a judge of some sort in these cases should not be given the position of a plaintiff. I am prepared to accept an amendment which the Government may move to this that where the deputy commissioner himself moves in the matter, the case may be made over to the district judge or to a sub-judge of the first class. But he should not take the initiative in the matter and himself sit in judgment and adjudicate upon his own claim as it were. It is a very sound and useful amendment.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : One sentence. The power which it is sought to be taken away from the deputy commissioner now is enjoyed by him at the present moment. The deputy commissioner can take action now under the present law to look into these benami transactions and order mutations and we are not going to alter that position. (Voices: There is nothing like that). My friend should see section 9 of the Land Revenue Act.

Munshi Hari Lal : Section 9 of the Land Revenue Act does not apply. It has been said that under section 9 of the Land Revenue Act, the deputy commissioner can act. I submit section 9 does not at all apply to the deputy commissioner because only that chapter of the Land Revenue Act applies that deals with appeals, references, and revisions and reviews.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : And what is the value of the deputy commissioners' orders? A sub-judge can set it aside.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That in lines 1-2 of 13-A (2) the words "either of his own motion or" be deleted.

The motion was lost.

HOURS OF SITTING AND EXTENSION OF SESSION.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Mr. Speaker, Sir, when you decided about the programme I had agreed to work as long as you ordered or Leader of the House wanted us to work. Yesterday you fixed the hours of business from 11 A.M. to 6-30 P.M. If we were to sit like this I do not think we will be able to finish the business of the House even if we work on the 9th. Therefore, the session shall have to be extended if the Government insists on finishing the business which they want to finish. I, therefore, submit that it would be much better if we now adjourn the meeting to 2 P.M. to-morrow and go on working till the work is finished. If the Government wants to finish the work, let us go on working, but let us work in a way that we do not break down and our judgment becomes marred. I propose that we adjourn to-day and I would request the Leader of the House to agree to the proposal.

Premier : So far as the suggestion of my honourable friend opposite regarding the time of the sitting is concerned, I entirely agree with him that it would be more convenient if we meet from 2 P.M. to 7 P.M. instead of sitting from 11 to 6-30 with a break of 1½ hours. That involves sheer waste of time and we do not get any time to do our own work. I am quite prepared to accept the proposal which my honourable friend has made. We should meet from 2 to 7 P.M.

With regard to his other suggestion regarding the extension of the session, I have already informed my honourable friends that perhaps I might be in a position to make a definite statement to the House some time to-morrow after seeing the progress made in this respect. But I think that it would be necessary for us to sit on Monday also but that is only tentative. Perhaps we may be in a position to state more definitely whether we extend it only up to Monday or whether we have to proceed beyond Monday. To-day everybody seems tired and I hope that you will allow the proceedings to terminate for the day as soon as possible.

Mr. Speaker : I accept the agreement arrived at between the Leader of the House and the Leader of the Opposition as to our sittings to be from 2 P.M. to 7 P.M. on the normal working days. We shall sit the day after to-morrow but not on 9th. Again, we shall sit on 11th and 12th, but not on 13th, again on 14th and 15th as usual. As regards the number of days required to finish the whole pending business, I may say that if we work for five hours a day as proposed, we may be able to finish it by the end of the current month.

Premier : In view of what you have now said I think that it would be premature to decide now that we should not sit on Saturday. We ought to see till to-morrow afternoon as to what progress we make and then decide about the sitting on Saturday. Normally we sit from 2 P.M. to 7 P.M.

The Assembly then adjourned till 2 p.m. on Thursday, 7th July, 1938.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

DISTRICT BOARD ELECTIONS IN HISSAR DISTRICT.

*3081. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Public Works be pleased to state the grounds on which District Board elections in Hissar District have been postponed for two months ?

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana : The elections have been postponed owing to the prevalence of cholera in the district.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I ask the Honourable Minister the extent of the area in which cholera was prevailing at the time the Government issued orders for postponing elections ?

Minister : It was supposed to be in the whole district. Eighteen deaths took place in the village Shahnpur and 8 in Adampur. There were 74 cases and 47 deaths prior to the postponement order.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I ask the Honourable Minister to inform me of the number of villages in which cholera was prevailing ?

Minister : Important villages I have named. It was said to be spreading and it was necessary to take steps to check it.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : May I know if cholera was prevailing when the nomination papers were filed ?

Minister : When the matter was brought to my notice I issued the necessary orders.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I want to know whether it is a fact that cholera was prevailing at the time the nomination papers were filed.

Minister : I am not sure of the dates for the filing of the nomination papers, but it was certainly prevailing at the time the elections were postponed and that necessitated the Government order.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I ask the Honourable Minister whether he issued these orders at the suggestion and recommendation of the district authorities or of his own motion ?

Minister : The initiative was taken by the District Medical Officer of Health and then the local officers supported the recommendation for postponement. Am I to understand that the honourable member wanted cholera to spread ?

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Is it not a fact that elections were postponed because the nomination papers of a large majority of Congress nominees were accepted ?

Minister: I strongly repudiate the insinuation. The honourable member is a doctor and he must have consideration for checking the spread of epidemics.

TOUR BY DIRECTOR OF AGRICULTURE, PUNJAB.

*3082. Tikka Jagjit Singh Bedi: Will the Honourable Minister of Development be pleased to state the number of days for which the Director of Agriculture, Punjab, toured during the anti-Pohli operations during the last three years, and the districts in which he toured?

The Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram: The campaign for destruction of Pohli weed is carried on by Deputy Directors of Agriculture in collaboration with revenue authorities. In some places the canal authorities have rendered very great assistance. The Director of Agriculture supervises these campaigns generally but does not do any special touring for the purpose. He visited Campbellpur district for one day in 1935, and Gurdaspur district for five days in 1936, during the campaign. No touring was done by him for the purpose in 1937.

- (a) whether it is a fact that the District Jail, Hissar, has come within the 'abadi' of the Hissar town;
- (b) whether it is also a fact that the Hissar town, which is encircled on all sides by the Government Cattle Farm, Hissar, has no scope for extension except on the side of District Jail, Hissar;
- (c) whether there is any scheme under the contemplation of the Government for removing the District Jail, Hissar, from its present site to a place near the police lines where about 100 acres of crown land are lying vacant; if so, the stage at which the scheme has reached;
- (d) whether the Municipal Committee, Hissar, has recently passed any resolution urging the authorities to remove the District Jail, Hissar, from its present site to leave some scope for the extension of the Hissar town and if so, the action taken thereon?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal: (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) A scheme of this nature was considered by Government but was dropped for financial reasons.

(d) Yes. The proposal when received through the local officers will be examined.

DRINKING WATER SUPPLY SCHEME FOR BARANI TRACTS OF HISSAR DISTRICT.

*3084. Chaudhri Suraj Mal: Will the Honourable Minister of Education be pleased to state—

SUPPLY OF DRINKING WATER TO VILLAGES WITHIN 4 MILES RADIUS OF CANALS.

*3085. Chaudhri Suraj Mal: Will the Honourable Minister of Education be pleased to state whether, as contemplated, Government has issued instructions to the officers concerned that water for drinking purposes be supplied to all those villages which are within the reach of four miles from the canal irrigated areas; if so, when these instructions were issued and the number of villages in the Hansi tahsil of the Hissar district covered in these instructions?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haya: An investigation is in hand for supplying water from the Sirhind and Western Jumna Canals to a large number of villages in the Rohtak and Hissar districts as given in the margin. Out of these there are three villages in the

Rohtak district	24	Hansi tahsil.
Hissar district	84

2. The list of villages has been examined by the Superintending Engineer, Public Health Circle, and the Superintending Engineer, Western Jumna Canal, and it has been found that some of the villages lie above the command of the canal and nearly all of the remainder lie outside the irrigation boundary and many of them are many miles distant from the canal (up to thirty miles distance).

3. The available canal supplies are already utilized and there is no water available for extensions, while the construction of long watercourses for small supplies is impracticable as the absorption losses will be too great.

4. The Irrigation Department is investigating the question of putting down tube-wells in the upper reaches of the Western Jumna Canal and is now making trial tube-wells and if the supply of the canal can be increased in this way, a certain number of the villages within command of the canal could be fed by watercourses, but so far as the bulk of the villages are concerned many miles distant from the canal, large and very expensive independent water supply schemes based either on the canal or possibly on tube-wells sunk in the vicinity of the Hissar Branch, Western Jumna Canal, will be required. A successful tube-well has been put down near Hissar.

5. The report of the Superintending Engineer, Public Health Circle, is under preparation.

APPOINTMENT OF SPECIAL OFFICERS TO INVESTIGATE SCHEME TO IRRIGATE HISSAR, ROHTAK AND GURGAON DISTRICTS.

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia: An officer has been placed on special duty for tube-well investigation in the Punjab, and in the course of his investigation he is carrying out a special enquiry as to the possibility of applying tube-wells for the relief of the south-east Punjab.

He has also examined the possibilities of obtaining water from lining the Western Jumna Canal and from a dam site and has submitted a preliminary departmental report. The investigation is proceeding.

Sardar Kapoor Singh: May I know whether Ludhiana is also included in the south-east Punjab?

Minister: That does not arise out of this question.

Sardar Kapoor Singh: Why not? When an officer is appointed for south-east Punjab, as has been pointed out in the Minister's reply, I would like to know whether Ludhiana is included in this area?

Minister: It is not necessary because all schemes are under investigation.

Sardar Kapoor Singh: Then say so.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH BILASPUR RN: BHAKRA DAM PROJECT.

*3087. Chaudhri Suraj Mal: Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether and when the Bhakra Dam Scheme is expected to mature;
- (b) whether the Punjab Government is having any correspondence with the Maharaja of Bilaspur in connection with the Bhakra Dam Scheme these days; if so, whether the Government is prepared to lay that correspondence on the table of the House?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) The extent of possible damage to Bilaspur is under examination at present and will be considered by Government in the very near future. An attempt is being made to find a solution that will be satisfactory to Bilaspur and the Punjab, but negotiations with Bilaspur have not actually started as yet.

It should be possible to start work within two years of these negotiations reaching a happy issue. These two years will be spent in making the project and studying the technique of high dam construction. Such a dam has not been constructed in the Punjab in the past.

(b) There is no recent correspondence to lay on the table.

*3082. Chandhri Suraj Mal : Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that there are no culverts or bridges for going across the Hissar Major in the Hansi Sub-Division of the Rohtak Division from the town of Hansi up to village Kharar, a distance of ten miles ;

(b) whether it is a fact that several villages lie on the way with their lands on both sides of the said Major ;

(c) whether it is a fact that the people of Dhani Kutabpur whose lands are stretched on both sides of the said Major and who experience great difficulties in carting their crops from fields lying on the other side of the canal applied several times to the canal authorities for the construction of a bridge over the canal at a suitable place ;

(d) whether it is a fact that there is a small village Lallpur near Dhani Kutabpur which lies on the other side of the canal and that small children from this village come to read daily in Dhani Kutabpur school and have to pass through the canal ;

(e) if the answer to the above be in the affirmative, whether and when it is intended to construct the required bridge ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) Yes : There are bridges opposite villages Hansi and Kharar on Hissar Distributary the distance between Hansi and Kharar is 5.4 miles.

(b) No. Only one village has land on both sides of the distributary.

(a) whether it is a fact that there is great traffic between the important commercial towns of Hansi, Jind and Bhiwani and that there are no metalled roads to connect these towns;

(b) whether it is a fact that attention of the Government has been invited several times by resolutions passed by the District Board, Hissar, and by addresses presented to Governor and Government members to the need for metalling the Hansi-Jind and Hansi-Bhiwani roads;

(c) whether and when these roads may be expected to be metalled?

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana: (a) The traffic on the roads between Hansi, Jind and Bhiwani is not so heavy at present as to demand any special consideration. The existing roads though katcha are in a motorable condition.

(b) Yes.

(c) The road between Hansi and Bhiwani is competitive with North-Western Railway. Therefore, its metalling cannot be undertaken. The road between Jind and Hansi is not considered to be of sufficient provincial importance as compared with many other roads in the province.

SCHEME OF TUBE-WELL IRRIGATION BY BAWA NATHA SINGH.

*3891. Lieutenant Sardar Nannihal Singh Mann: Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Bawa Natha Singh, retired Superintending Engineer, sometime ago prepared a scheme of irrigation by tube-wells for serving the area which is now served by Jumna Canal; if so, whether he will be pleased to lay it on the table of the House?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia: Bawa Natha Singh, Chief Engineer (retired) wrote a note about tube-well irrigation. It is regretted that official notes of this description which are more or less of a confidential nature are not placed on the table of the House.

(b) whether there are any rules that require such prisoners to do this work; if so, the reasons for the same and if not the action Government propose to take in the matter?

The Honourable Mr. Manshar Lal: (a) Only those who are classified as sweepers by the convicting courts.

(b) The honourable member's attention is invited to paragraph 701 of the Punjab Jail Manual. The remaining portion of the question does not arise.

(a) whether it is a fact that the District Board, Hoshiarpur, decided to accord a reception to His Excellency the Governor of the Punjab on the eve of his official visit to that place in the month of March last;

(b) if so, what amount was spent for the occasion?

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana: (a) His Excellency the Governor of the Punjab did not pay a visit to Hoshiarpur in March, 1938.

(b) Does not arise.

Sardar Hari Singh: May I ask the Honourable Minister whether the District Board of Hoshiarpur budgetted any amount for expenditure in connection with the visit of His Excellency the Governor?

Minister: It does not arise out of this question. I have replied the question tabled.

Dr. Sant Ram Seth: How many water taps are there for providing water to the prisoners?

Minister: I cannot give the exact number, but the arrangements for water supply are by means of municipal taps and hand pumps.

- (b) whether it is a fact that in front of the ventilators of the hind wall of the barrack wooden planks have been fixed which check the free passage of the fresh air and cause suffocation to the prisoners in this hot weather ; if so, the action proposed to be taken in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : (a) 30.

(b) The wooden planks which have been fixed to the outer side of the verandah do not check the free passage of fresh air.

Dr. Sant Ram Seth : May I know whether it is a fact that many prisoners have fallen ill owing to congestion ?

Minister : What does the honourable member mean by 'congestion' ?

Dr. Sant Ram Seth : Over population.

Minister : Not to my knowledge.

Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister please enquire ?

Minister : I will enquire into anything an honourable member may wish.

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye : Fifteen. (Twelve in General wards and 3 in Private wards).

The construction work of the building was started two months ago and it will not be finished for some time. It will, to start with, have 25 beds.

- (b) the number of acquittals and convictions in such cases ;
- (c) the total amount of fine imposed on convictions and the amount of the fine realized in this respect ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) The question is an ambiguous one as it does not state from what date the information is needed but it is presumed that information needed is from 1st January, 1938.

The total number of cases tried under the Motor Vehicles Act at Amritsar from the 1st January, 1938, to the 15th June, 1938, is—872.

Lala Bhagat Ram Cheda : May I know whether motor drivers are allowed to give evidence ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

SLAUGHTER HOUSE SITUATED IN KRISHAN NAGAR.

*3100. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Public Works be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the Lahore Municipality had passed a resolution for the removal of the slaughter house situated in the locality of Krishan Nagar, Ram Nagar and Sant Nagar ;

[S. Hari Singh.]

- (b) whether further it is a fact that the Punjab Government had already issued order for the removal of the said slaughter house from its present site;
- (c) whether he is further aware of the agitation among the residents of the locality against the continuance of the slaughter house on its present site;
- (d) action proposed to be taken by the Government in the matter?

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana : The honourable member is referred to the reply given to question No. *8001<sup>1</sup>.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I, Sir, draw your attention to the fact that the answer, to which the Honourable Minister has referred, is not an answer to parts (a) and (b) of this question. In answer to a supplementary question on that occasion he said, "Give notice of the question and I shall answer that." Now, this is the very supplementary question of which he wanted notice. But now he says that he has already answered that question.

Minister : The reply is contained therein. I may add for the information of the honourable member that I am in a position to give a reply to that question also to which he has referred and which is totally different. It is not contained in this question, but the reply is there.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I know whether the reply to this question is that the Punjab Government had issued orders?

Minister : Has the honourable member read that reply?

Mr. Speaker : Is that reply now with the honourable member?

Sardar Hari Singh : No, but I remember it.

Minister : I will read the reply to part (b) of that question for the information of the honourable member. This is what I said—

"(b) Yes, on 2nd December, 1936. This decision had no result, because 32 members of the Municipal Committee sent to the President a requisition on 12th June, 1936, asking for a reconsideration of the previous decision of the Committee."

Sardar Hari Singh : I want the Honourable Minister to read out that portion of the answer which refers to the answer to the supplementary question to the effect whether the previous Government or the present Government had issued orders which were not availed of by the Committee.

Minister : The reply is clear. The present Government has not come to any such decision on the subject. As far as the last Government was concerned, it considered the matter on 2nd December, 1936, but that had no result because 32 members applied to the contrary for a reconsideration of the matter by the Government.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I ask the Honourable Minister whether he is aware of the fact that since the answer to the question on the same subject last time, there has been a keener resentment and agitation against keeping the slaughter house on the present land?

Minister : I am not aware of that. There are usual representations from interested quarters.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I know the result of those representations ?

Minister : My reply was clear. When we find some other suitable site suggested, I will consider the matter.

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi : May I ask the Honourable Minister to appoint an inquiry committee ?

Minister : It would serve no useful purpose.

COMPLAINT FROM PATWARI OF MANSIAN.

*3101. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state whether the Deputy Commissioner, Jullundur, has recently received a written complaint from the patwari of Mansian, district Jullundur, of his having been beaten by the Revenue Officer of Jullundur on tour in the ilaga ; if so, action taken by the authorities in the matter ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : No such complaint has been received by the Deputy Commissioner—the question of action having been taken therefore does not arise.

SUSPENSION OF RESOLUTIONS OF THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, AMRITSAR.

*3102. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Public Works be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Deputy Commissioner, Amritsar, has recently suspended two resolutions of the Municipal Committee, Amritsar, one regarding payment of temporary allowances to some of the Municipal employees, who had established their right in a civil suit, and the other passed in 1934 regarding sanction accorded to a lay-out plan on the Lawrence road, major portion of which had been built upon ; if so, the grounds for suspension ?

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana : The Deputy Commissioner, Amritsar, has suspended two resolutions passed by the Municipal Committee, Amritsar, one relating to the grant of temporary allowances to the Municipal employees and the other relating to the so-called lay-out plan of the land owned by Sardar Gurdial Singh on Lawrence road. In regard to the former the civil court judgment had made it clear that the Municipal Committee was quite competent to discontinue the allowances for the future and as the action of the Committee in continuing the grant of allowances for the future involved scandalous waste of money the resolution was suspended. The latter was suspended as the lay-out plan in question was in fact a building scheme and as such the resolution was in excess of the Committee's powers.

Sardar Hari Singh : Is it a fact that the second resolution suspended by the Deputy Commissioner was passed in 1934 ?

Minister : Might have been passed in 1934, but inasmuch as the Committee exceeded its powers the Deputy Commissioner was within his legal powers to suspend that resolution.

Sardar Hari Singh : What I want to know is whether the resolution was passed in 1984. If it was passed in 1984, why was there such a long delay on the part of the Deputy Commissioner in suspending it ?

Minister : Any delay does not affect the legality of the order of the Deputy Commissioner.

Sardar Hari Singh : Is it at all desirable that the Deputy Commissioner should interfere with the resolution of the Committee after such a long time ?

Minister : Certainly, if the resolution was illegal and beyond the power of the body concerned.

Sardar Hari Singh : What was the cause of delay on the part of the Deputy Commissioner in suspending the resolution ?

Minister : He passed orders when the matter came to his notice.

Sardar Hari Singh : Does the Honourable Minister intend to call for an explanation for the delay from the Deputy Commissioner.

Minister : No. There was no delay of the type which may warrant an explanation.

Sardar Hari Singh : Does the Honourable Minister think that a delay of four years is no delay ? Does he know that the resolution was passed in 1984 ?

Minister : Why is the honourable member emphasising the year ? What is the information he wants ?

Sardar Hari Singh : Has not the Honourable Minister read this part of the question which relates to the date of passing of the resolution ? I have been repeatedly asking whether it was not a fact that the resolution was passed in 1984.

Minister : I am not sure of the date. If the honourable member will give notice I shall look into the matter.

Sardar Hari Singh : I have already given notice.

Minister : I assume that his date is correct.

Sardar Hari Singh : It is not a question of assumption. I want to know definitely whether the date is correct or not ?

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Does not the reply of the Honourable Minister to the question imply that the resolution was passed in 1984 ?

Minister : I am not sure about the date, but when the matter came to the notice of the Deputy Commissioner he suspended it, because it was illegal. As to the exact date of the resolution if the honourable member will give notice I shall supply the information.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : About the year of passing the resolution ?

Minister : No, about the date.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : The year is mentioned in the question itself.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I know from the Honourable Premier whether an answer like this by his colleague is at all satisfactory and parliamentary ?

Minister : I strongly take objection to that language. I already said that I am not sure of the date and I asked for notice.

Sardar Hari Singh : The notice is already there.

Mr. Speaker : If the Honourable Minister does not answer that part of the question, it may be taken that he declines to answer it. The next question.

POLICE SERGEANTS IN THE PUNJAB.

*3103. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Premier be pleased to state—

- (a) the number of posts of Police Sergeants in the Punjab ;
- (b) duties assigned to the sergeants ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that all the posts of sergeants are held by Europeans and Anglo-Indians ;
- (d) special privileges, if any, attaching to these posts ?

Parliamentary Secretary (Sardar Bahadur Sardar Ujjal Singh) :

(a) 42.

(b) The duties of sergeants include amongst other things—

- (1) The regulation and control of traffic in cantonments and important civil stations.
- (2) General duty in cantonments under the supervision of Cantonment Inspectors.
- (3) The serving of processes on Europeans.
- (4) The escorting of European prisoners.
- (5) The inspection of motor vehicles and testing applicants for motor driving licences.
- (6) The regulation and control of passenger traffic at important railway stations.

(c) Yes.

(d) There are none.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I ask the Parliamentary Secretary to state how the pay of sergeants compare with that of the sub-inspectors ?

Parliamentary Secretary : That does not arise out of the question.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I know whether there is any difference as a matter of privilege ? Has the sub-inspector to salute the sergeant ?

Parliamentary Secretary : There is no privilege attached to the post. The second part does not arise out of the question.

Munshi Hari Lal : May I know why the posts of sergeants are reserved for Europeans and Anglo-Indians ?

Parliamentary Secretary : For the reason I have already stated in the answer.

Lala Duni Chand : Does Government intend to give some of these posts to Indians ?

Sardar Hari Singh : I want to know the Parliamentary practice in regard to this point, whether a Parliamentary Secretary can have promptings for answering questions.

Parliamentary Secretary : There has been no prompting.

Munshi Hari Lal : Have Indians been tried in these posts which are reserved for Europeans and Anglo-Indians ?

Premier : It is only a difference in designation. Really there is no other difference.

Lala Doshbandhu Gupta : Does the Honourable Premier think that the Government cannot go on without these European and Anglo-Indian Sergeants ?

Mr. Speaker : That asks for an expression of opinion and is, therefore, disallowed.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Is the Honourable Premier quite sure that grade for grade the salaries of these Europeans are not greater than those of the Indian employees ?

Premier : I do not understand what the honourable member means by "grade for grade" ? There is only one grade of Indian sub-inspectors and European sergeants.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Do the posts of sergeants and sub-inspectors carry the same pay ?

Premier : There is no difference in grade. There is only one grade.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : If the sergeant corresponds to sub-inspector, then are the salaries of both the same ?

Parliamentary Secretary : That question does not arise. The honourable member should give notice if he wants information on that point.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Is the Government satisfied that the duties entrusted to these sergeants cannot be properly handed over to Indian sub-inspectors ?

Parliamentary Secretary : That is so. The duties entrusted to sergeants cannot be properly performed by Indians.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Have the Government looked into this question and satisfied themselves ?

Parliamentary Secretary : It is true that some of the duties can more appropriately be performed by European sergeants than by Indian sub-inspectors.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : If some of the duties can be equally efficiently discharged by Indians why is it that Government does not make over those duties to them ?

Premier : It would be uneconomical. The sergeants must have their full day's work. It would not be economical if they have got to do only half-day's work.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Does the Premier find himself absolutely helpless in retrenching these officers?

Premier : That is an insinuation which I am not prepared to accept.

Munshi Hari Lal : What are the duties which are more appropriately performed by the sergeants which cannot be performed by Indians?

Premier : The honourable member has not followed the answer; otherwise he would not have put the supplementary question.

Munshi Hari Lal : In answer to a supplementary question the answer given was that certain duties were more properly performed by sergeants than by sub-inspectors. I want to know what those duties are.

Premier : My honourable friend evidently did not intelligently follow the answer. The answer gives the details of the various duties which the sergeant has got to do.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Has the Honourable Premier considered the possibility of replacing these British sergeants with Indians?

Premier : That does not arise out of this question. But there are some duties which are more properly carried out by European sergeants, for instance, if my honourable friend was a sub-inspector, he would hesitate to go and arrest some one in a British regiment.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Why?

Premier : In the same way as an European sergeant finds it difficult to arrest some one in an Indian regiment.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Does the Honourable Premier think that this element of Europeans in the police is unavoidable for all time to come?

Mr. Speaker : That is a matter of opinion.

Lala Duni Chand : Does not the responsible Government of the Punjab admit that it is a sad state of affairs that Indians should not be found fit to fill in posts like this?

Mr. Speaker : Disallowed.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : How long will the Honourable Premier take to replace these Europeans if at all by Indians?

Premier : This question does not arise. But as a matter of fact the question is so wide and of such universal application then I should like to wait and see what other provinces do in the matter.

DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE HEADQUARTERS.

*3104. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Premier be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the posts of Deputy Superintendent of Police Headquarters with allowance are reserved for Europeans;

[B. Hari Singh.]

(b) if answer to (a) above be in the affirmative, reasons for this reservation ?

The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

SELECTION GRADE POSTS OF SENIOR SUPERINTENDENTS OF POLICE.

*3105. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Premier be pleased to state—

(a) the number of selection grade posts of Senior Superintendents of Police ;

(b) whether officiating appointments are not usually made to posts of Superintendents of Police rendered vacant by leave ?

The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) There are 5 selection grade posts in the rank of Superintendent of Police for the Joint Indian Police cadre of the Punjab, North West Frontier Provinces, Baluchistan and Delhi.

(b) Officiating appointments are made in the rank of Superintendent of Police when vacancies occur through officers proceeding on leave.

MODIFICATIONS IN THE FEDERAL SCHEME.

*3106. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Premier be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Punjab Government has been asked by the Central Government to suggest modifications in the Federal Scheme in response to the Resolution passed by the Punjab Assembly on the subject last session, if so, modifications suggested by the Punjab Government ;

(b) whether the Punjab Government has on its own initiative, suggested changes in the said scheme in the light of the resolution passed by the Assembly, if so, the changes suggested.

Parliamentary Secretary (Khan Bahadur Mian Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana) : (a) No.

(b) No.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I know whether the Punjab Government has forwarded the resolution passed by this Assembly in the last session on the question of federation, to the Secretary of State for India ?

Parliamentary Secretary : I want notice of that question.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I ask whether they have sent the resolution to the Government of India ?

Premier : We want notice of that question.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I enquire whether the Honourable Premier is aware of the fact that a resolution asking the Punjab Government to convey the feeling of this House on the question of Federation to the Central Government and to the British Government was passed ?

Premier : It will take your time and also the time of the House if I were to attempt to answer the question, because his next question will be when it was sent, whether we received any reply, if so what it was and so on and so forth. He might, therefore, give a regular notice of his questions.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I know whether the orders of this House have been obeyed by the Punjab Government in the matter of conveying the recommendation of this Assembly ?

Mr. Speaker : That is covered by the previous question.

Premier : No, Sir. The question is quite clear, whether the Government has done anything. It is quite a separate question and I should like to have notice of this question.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I wish to know from the Honourable Premier whether he knows that the resolution which was passed by the Assembly has been forwarded or not with or without any recommendations of the Punjab Government. If nothing is done what has been the result ? What has been the fate of that resolution ?

Mr. Speaker : This question has been answered already.

Premier : What is the difference ?

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : The difference is apparent.

Mr. Speaker : I cannot allow arguments.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Are we not entitled to know whether the resolution has been forwarded ?

Mr. Speaker : It is not for me to answer the question.

Sardar Hari Singh : Will he answer it at short notice ?

Mr. Speaker : That is a different matter altogether.

MODIFICATION IN THE EXCHANGE RATIO.

*3107. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Finance be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the Punjab Government has made any representation to the Central Government suggesting modification in the Exchange Ratio with a view to improve the marketing prospects of agricultural commodities ;
- (b) whether he is or he is not aware that certain other Provincial Governments have made representations of this nature to the Central Government.

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : (a) No.

(b) Yes.

PATIENTS ADMITTED INTO PRIVATE WARDS OF MAYO HOSPITAL.

*3108. Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the patients admitted in Private Wards of the Mayo Hospital are debarred from getting themselves treated by Medical Practitioners other than the Physicians or Surgeons attached to the Mayo Hospital; if so, the action Government proposes to take in the matter?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye: Yes. The matter was considered in all its bearings on several previous occasions but the proposal was not accepted by Government. No useful purpose is likely to be served in re-opening the question again.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: May I know the reasons why the Government do not think it desirable to allow private practitioners to see the patients in these wards?

Minister: It must be assumed that when patients come to the Mayo Hospital they need the assistance of the physicians and surgeons attached to that hospital and if they want the assistance of any other medical practitioner they need not come to the Mayo Hospital.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: May I know if the Government has provided these private wards for the private practice of medical men who are in Government service?

Minister: It is for the convenience of the public and service is provided by the staff of the Mayo Hospital, not by every Tom, Dick and Harry.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: I am very grateful to the Honourable Minister for Education for the language and for the ideas he possesses of private practitioners. But may I ask him how the convenience of the public is served by allowing treatment by those Government servants who get a salary and who are not necessarily very qualified people?

Minister: It is not a private nursing home and it must be assumed that the arrangements made by the Government are satisfactory.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: My question is how does the Honourable Minister for Education think that it serves the public and it is for the service of the patients who come to the Hospital and not for providing private practice for those whom they pay and who should not be paid anything for this service?

Minister: It is not providing for the benefit of the surgeons. They are called upon to serve the people that come there.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: Then why are not other doctors allowed to come there?

Minister: Because they do not belong to the Hospital.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: When it is a nursing home....

Minister: It is not a nursing home.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: Then why provide practice for Government servants?

Minister: There is an additional ground for not allowing people not connected with the Hospital, because Government can have no administrative control over them.

Maulvi Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din: Is it not a fact that these private wards form a part of the Mayo Hospital?

Minister : Yes.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : If they form part of the Hospital, how can the Government servants charge extra fees for giving their service ?

Minister : This question is now being examined.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : May I ask whether the Honourable Minister means by 'Tom, Dick and Harry' all doctors who are not in Government service ?

Mr. Speaker : Disallowed.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : May I know if the Honourable Minister knows that even in England private practitioners are invited by Government to serve in hospitals and Government feel obliged to them for their service ?

Minister : Then it is for me to invite and not for others.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Will the Government consider the advisability of appointing honorary surgeons and physicians in this connection ?

Minister : All these questions are now under the consideration of the Government.

Lala Duni Chand : What objection has the Government if in such cases patients desire to bring any outside help ?

Minister : They can get it but at their own homes.

FEES CHARGED FROM ANGLO-INDIAN AND INDIAN PATIENTS ADMITTED INTO PRIVATE WARDS OF LADY WILLINGDON HOSPITAL.

*3109. Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that Anglo-Indian patients can be admitted in the Lady Willingdon Hospital Private Wards on payment of Rs. 2 per diem only, and they have not to pay any fees to Medical Officers ;

(b) whether it is a fact that the Indians have to pay Rs. 5 a day and fees for Medical Officers in Private rooms, if so, the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Hays : (a) In accordance with the rules contained in Appendix LIII of the Punjab Medical Manual, patients whether European, Anglo-Indian or Indian, admitted in the Private Wards of the Lady Willingdon Hospital, Lahore, whose income is not over Rs. 150 per mensem, are charged Rs. 2 per day. They are exempt from paying fees to the Medical Officer.

(b) There is no rate of Rs. 5 per day prescribed in the rules referred to above.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : What is the amount charged from patients who get themselves treated in the private rooms of the Lady Willingdon Hospital ?

Minister : No fees are charged by the Medical Officers.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : No fees are charged from the patients under part (a) but I am asking about part (b).

Minister : I think there are uniform rules for every body.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Am I to understand that Indian patients are admitted even now to the wards which I have mentioned in part (a) ?

Minister : Yes, they are eligible.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Are they admitted ?

Minister : I must assume that unless the honourable member brings any complaint to my notice. If he does so, I shall enquire.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : They are not admitted.

Minister : Then bring such cases to my notice.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : If I think you can get a redress I shall bring them to your notice.

RETIREMENT OF PRINCIPAL, ORIENTAL COLLEGE.

*3110. Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state when the Principal of the Oriental College is due to retire and whether it is proposed to give him extension ; if so, the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haya : The present Principal of the Oriental College, Lahore, who is also the University Professor of Arabic was due to retire on the 30th September, 1938. The Senate, on the unanimous recommendation of the Syndicate, has unanimously decided that he be re-appointed for one more year on his present emoluments. The reasons which led to the grant of extension were that the Principal's services to Arabic scholarships are of outstanding value and it was not considered easy to find the best possible successor to him as Professor of Arabic by next October.

CERTIFICATES GRANTED BY REGISTERED MEDICAL PRACTITIONERS.

*3111. Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state whether it is a fact that certificates granted by medical practitioners registered under the Medical Registration Act have to be countersigned by civil surgeons ; if so, why ?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haya : No. All heads of offices are authorised to accept without countersignature medical certificates granted by medical practitioners whose names appear in the Annual Medical List. In fact heads of offices are required as a matter of practice to accept uncounter-signed certificates of registered medical practitioners unless there are special grounds for not doing so.

Mian Abdul Rab : In what way does the Government propose to spend the amount ?

Minister : I have said that the scheme is under consideration and this particular question also relates to the same thing.

NAZRANA PAYING SUFEDPOSH GHORIPAL GRANTEES.

*3122. Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the nazrana paying sufedposh ghoripal grantees were given occupancy rights on the very first day that they were given possession of land without their having subscribed to any conditions laid down in sections 6 and 7 of the Tenancy of Act of 1890, if so, the number of such people before 1904 ?

(c) Punishment was inflicted in 291 cases and in 679 cases horse-breeders were let off with a warning or with no action.

(d) Owing to the files having been destroyed under the rules in most of the cases this part cannot be answered in detail ; but there is no reason to suppose that in any case the Collector did not comply with the provisions of section 24 of the Colonization of Government Lands (Punjab) Act which require the tenant complained against to be given an opportunity to appear and state his objections.

(e) For the reasons given above exact numbers cannot now be ascertained ; but, as already stated in the answer to part (c) of this question, in 679 cases no punishment was inflicted upon the horse-breeders.

of the Sub-Divisional Officer as President). After the meeting these two elected members sent a written communication to the President disapproving of the protest.

(b) No. The Honourable Premier did not make any such promise. He only promised that he would ask the Minister-in-Charge to consider the request.

(c) Yes.

(d) The correspondence is confidential and it is not in the Public interest to disclose it.

(e) The delay is due to the fact that Government had to consider several points which involved correspondence with the local officers.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : May I know from the Minister of Public Works in regard to his reply to part (a) if the Government has taken any recent decision to discourage the election of Government officers or nominated members as Chairmen of local bodies ?

Minister : Too vague and too general a question to reply.

Mr. Speaker : The question relates to the Dalhousie Municipality only. Therefore, no other municipalities should be brought in.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I will make myself clear. Has the Government issued any circular recently asking the local bodies not to allow official members and nominated members to be present in the meetings in which election of the Chairman takes place ?

Minister : The question asked is a question of policy and does not relate to Dalhousie Municipality in any way.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I do not want to know the policy. I want to know whether a circular has been issued.

Minister : I would like to know whether this is relevant.

THE PUNJAB AGRICULTURAL PRODUCE MARKETS BILL.

Minister for Development (The Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram): I beg to introduce the Punjab Agricultural Produce Markets Bill.

3 P.M.

I beg to move—

That the Punjab Agricultural Produce Markets Bill be referred to a select committee consisting of the following members:—

Khan Sahib Chaudhri Pir Muhammed, Sheikh Karamat Ali,
 Maulvi Ghulam Mohy-ud Din Khan,
 Khan Sahib Chaudhri Muhammad Shaf Ali Khan,
 Rana Nasrullah Khan,
 Chaudhri Muhammad Hussain,
 Khan Bahadur Captain Malik Musaffar Khan,
 Rai Bahadur Lala Gopal Das,
 Sardar Joginder Singh Man,
 Captain Dina Nath,
 Rai Bahadur Binda Saran, Sardar Kartar Singh,
 Lala Dev Raj Sethi,
 Pandit Muni Lal Kalis,
 Advocate-General,
 Speaker's nominee (Mr. S. P. Singha),
 The mover, and Chaudhri Ram Sarup.

Sir, this Bill has been looked forward to by the agricultural classes with very keen interest and the advent of this Bill has been apprehended by the trading classes with equally keen interest but with unnecessary concern. The objects of this Bill have been set forth at length in the Statement of Objects and Reasons attached to this Bill; but I may be allowed to make a few brief observations with regard to the need and the general scope of this Bill. All members of this honourable House are fully convinced that the prosperity of the agricultural classes is of the utmost importance to the province because it is on the prosperity of these classes that the general prosperity of the province itself depends. Therefore, it is of great importance that we should try our best to improve the economic condition of the agricultural classes. We are all aware that the present economic condition of the agricultural classes is far from satisfactory. Some of the main causes which have contributed to this poor economic condition of the agricultural classes are:—

- (i) their indebtedness;
- (ii) the fact that they have to bear more than their fair share of the burden of provincial taxation, and
- (iii) that these classes are unable to secure a fair price for their produce.

Now, so far as the question of indebtedness is concerned the Punjab Council has already placed some very useful measures on the Statute Book, and another measure is at present engaging the attention of the Assembly. When this last measure is placed on the Statute Book I feel confident that indebtedness will be relieved to a very large extent, and the malpractices to which the agricultural classes were in the habit of being subjected will disappear. With regard to the second factor which accounts for the poor economic condition of the agricultural classes, I may be allowed to say that the present Government, immediately on assuming office, announced that in order to explore means of fresh revenue and in order to suggest retrenchment and to ascertain the lines along which relief could be given, two committees would be appointed. The first committee was to find out means of affecting economy and find out fresh sources of revenue. The second committee was to make enquiries and suggest the methods by which relief could be given to agricultural classes in taxation which they at present have to bear. One of these committees has concluded its labours and the other committee is still engaged upon its labours. The extent to which and the manner in which the relief in the matter of taxation can be given to agricultural classes, will depend upon the results of the labours of these two committees.

Now, the third factor, which accounts, in some measure, for the poor economic condition of agricultural classes, is their inability to secure a fair price for their produce. The Bill which I have introduced to day and now moved to be referred to a select committee, is intended to secure a fair price for agricultural classes for their produce.

I may now draw the attention of the House to some of the important matters which are covered by the present Bill. This Bill empowers the provincial Government to declare, by notification, the areas in which and the agricultural produce in respect of which they propose to exercise control in the matter of sale and purchase of agricultural commodities. After the issue of such notification, the purchase and sale of the particular agricultural produce, specified in the notification, can only be carried on by business men under licences in areas to which that notification applies.

Then, under this Bill, provision has been made for the establishment of market committees with certain powers and duties. One of the powers of these market committees will be to regulate business and to levy certain fees in respect of transactions of sale and purchase that take place in the notified area. The proceeds of these fees will be put into a fund which will be known as the Market Committee Fund. The Bill further provides for what particular purpose the money in the fund can be expended. Apart from salaries paid to officers, who may be appointed by the market committees, the following are the objects on which this fund can be expended :—

- (1) the maintenance and improvement of the market ;
- (2) the construction and repair of buildings which are necessary for the purposes of such market and for the health, convenience and safety of the persons using it ;
- (3) the provision and maintenance of standard weights and measures ;
- (4) the collection and dissemination of information regarding all matters relating to crop statistics and marketing in respect of the agricultural produce concerned ;

- (5) providing comforts and facilities, such as shelter, shade, parking accommodation and water for the persons, draught cattle and pack animals coming to the market, and similar other purposes.

There is a further provision in the Bill which seeks to regulate the levying of charges or receipt of allowances. Only those allowances will be received or made and only those fees will be charged which are prescribed or sanctioned under the rules framed under this measure. The maximum scale of those fees will be fixed and the money would be put into the market fund which will be administered by the market committee concerned.

Lastly, clauses 18 and 19 of the Bill provide certain penalties for those who contravene the provisions of this Bill or are found to be guilty of breach of rules made under this Act.

I may also inform the House that almost all the provisions contained in this Bill have been modelled on Marketing Acts which have been in force for some time in Bombay, Madras, Central Provinces and Hyderabad (Deccan). With these few remarks I resume my seat. I feel confident that either no dilatory motion will be moved or if it is moved, it will receive little or no support.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt (North-Eastern Towns, General, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, I beg to move—

“That the Punjab Agricultural Produce Markets Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by the 31st October, 1938.”

Sir, I have listened with rapt attention to the speech of the Honourable Minister for Development while introducing this Bill. I thought he would introduce his Bill with only a formal speech and would not go to the length of indulging in tall talk at this stage. But when he did so I hoped that he would advance weighty arguments in support of his measure. What has led him to draft this Bill? Why has he thought it fit to introduce it? What are those circumstances which have compelled him to sponsor the cause of this measure? These were some of the questions to which I expected a reply, but, I am disappointed to note that he has done nothing of the kind. However, let us bury the past and think of the future and hope that after he has listened to me, he will reply to the objections which I propose to raise now.

In addition to the fact that his speech has proved hopelessly disappointing, it also suffers from another very serious defect. I cannot help remarking that there appear to be some sinister motives behind this move. But unless I hear more from him in this connection I would not be justified in labouring this point beyond saying that judging from what the Honourable Minister for Development has stated in support of his Bill, it appears that the motives which have goaded him on to introduce it are not above suspicion. (Ironical cheers from the Unionists). Kindly hold your patience. I am presently going to explain my remark and then you will realise the true significance of what I am saying. I have moved this motion on behalf of the Congress party. I wish to make it clear, through you, Sir, to the honourable members sitting on the opposite benches that the Congress is out to expose their real sinister motives in bringing forward this Bill. The whole of the province, nay, the whole of India will come to see the Unionists in their true colours. Before exposing the flimsy arguments on the basis of which this Bill has been introduced in this House, I may remark in passing that I have been a student of economics and the Marketing Bill is not a new subject for me. I can claim to have studied this problem with a certain amount of care and for a number of years. I am not unaware of the fact that the Royal Commission of Agriculture suggested the idea of Regulated Agricultural Produce Markets and made a definite recommendation to that effect. Then there is the Central Banking Enquiry Committee which also made a similar recommendation. I fully realize the heart-rending and abject poverty of the poor peasant and also the fact that the poor grower does not get a fair price for his produce. I am definitely in favour of regulating the agricultural produce markets in a particular manner. My party is prepared to go further than the Unionists are ready to go. But the difference is that whereas the Unionists are proceeding with this measure without first having thoroughly studied the various factors which govern the affairs in the markets, the Congress would like to prepare the ground for such legislation. The Unionists are ignoring the systematic method of dealing with such questions. I am greatly disappointed to miss the very thing which this Bill should have in it. In fact it is not calculated to benefit the poor peasantry of this province. I find that some honourable members do not seem to subscribe to this view. I will convince them presently about my remarks by asking one simple question. Have the framers of this Bill studied the various factors which govern the rise and fall of prices? One important point that must be borne in mind is that when a producer brings a commodity into the market, it is not only the producer who can decide the price, but a number of other factors go to determine it, that is the buyer, the middlemen, the demand and supply and various other things count in this connection. I feel little hesitation in admitting that the producer in the Punjab does not get proper price for his produce but the proper way to improve the prices of the agricultural commodities is not the one that the Unionists are following. They are rushing up with a Bill without having ascertained the necessary data. The Government has so many departments under it in which high officers drawing fat salaries are supposed to be serving the teeming millions of this country day and night. Could they not collect the necessary facts and figures, and supply these to the Government? If that is not done, I wonder what is the use of keeping these fat salaried officers and the bright looking Parliamentary Secretaries and Private Secretaries?

It is stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons of this Bill that only a small fraction of the final price of agricultural produce goes to the producer and the lion's share of these prices is taken away by the middlemen. But in support of this contention, examples are not quoted from the Punjab but have been taken from the mandis of other provinces. The Honourable Minister for Development should have given statistics relating to the Punjab, instead of looking to Guntur in search of them. It was hoped that conditions prevalent in the markets of this province would be described and some weighty arguments would be given. But the Government has freely drawn upon the material obtainable in other provinces as if the conditions prevailing in this province were no whit different from those prevalent in other provinces. Let me inform the learned Honourable Minister that social and economic conditions of this province are in some respects totally different from other provinces, and it would be a mistake of the greatest magnitude to hold that the same factors govern the rise and fall of prices in the Punjab that count in other provinces. If the Unionist Government really wants to help the agriculturists of the Punjab, they should institute a searching inquiry into the marketing conditions of this province, otherwise let them remember that mere lip sympathy will no longer prove of any avail. Unless we know the percentage of disparity in prices paid by the consumer and those obtained by the producer, it is impossible to decide upon the manner in which and the extent to which markets should be regulated. Solid work alone can count and not the artificial distinctions between the Urban and the Rural. It is my misfortune that I was born in a town. (An honourable member: Why do you call it a misfortune?) I call it a misfortune because the Ministerialists that any person who is born in a city is incapable of having any sympathy for the poor masses although in reality he may be more sympathetic towards the poverty-stricken agriculturists than some of those who are born in a village.

I think this artificial distinction between an agriculturist and non-agriculturist is the cause of much mischief in the Province. I say that it was by chance that I have been born in the house of an urban gentleman but I can say with all the emphasis at my command that I do not possess in the least any fanatic urban prejudices and propensities. If my friends will give me a patient hearing, I will tell them the structure of society which I have framed in my mind. The goal which I have set before me does not in any way differentiate between a rural and an urban person. I may also submit that it was also by chance that the Honourable Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan was born in the house of a rural gentleman. May I question from my honourable friends opposite why this difference between me and the Honourable Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan? (Interruption). Sir, through you, I draw the attention of my honourable friend Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri that I am saying these things in support of his views.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I am hearing your remarks.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt: May I inquire from my friends opposite why this difference between me and the Honourable Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan, when only chance has placed us in different houses? It is a strange thing that the Honourable Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan should be called a zamindar and myself as otherwise. I refuse to acknowledge this difference that any one who is born in the house of a Brahmin should be called a Brahmin and anybody who is born in the house of zamindar should be called a zamindar. (Cheers). I would like to further elucidate the point. There is no denying the fact that my honourable friend Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan, and my honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, both live in towns and live a luxurious life. But, may I inquire why one of them is called a zamindar and the other as a non-agriculturist? (Cheers).

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I am one of the rural people and I have been born in the house of a villager. (Loud laughter).

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt: I was making it clear to the honourable members opposite that the so-called rural members who are called agriculturists are in no way different from the non-agriculturists. According to my own ideas an agriculturist is one who ploughs with his own hands and not that person who employs others to till his lands. My friends over there pass their lives in cities and live in hotels, but in spite of all this they remain agriculturist people, and we, on this side of the House, become urban simply because we happen to have been born in the houses of urban people. It is a strange thing and it is beyond my comprehension. I may submit that the manner of living of my friends opposite is urban, and they live in cities and lead a luxurious life, still they remain rural people to the backbone and we become urbanites because we happen to have been born in the houses of urban people. I fail to understand all this.

Besides, I may submit that I suspect the intentions of the Government. But may I ask what is the reason of moving this Bill in its present form? I can plainly tell you that I am fully conversant with all the arguments that are usually advanced in support of Regulation of Agricultural Produce Markets. Long long ago I studied this interesting subject. I have studied all those Bills that have been placed on the statute book in Bombay, Madras and Hyderabad and that has just now been introduced in the United Provinces. With your permission I repeat this thing that whether in the Punjab or any other province, the urban people should realise that all their progress whether in the field of industry or in trade depends on the prosperity of the kisans. The kisan is the pivot round which all the trades and economic condition revolve. If the purchasing power of the kisan is not improved, no real progress can be made in the economic life of the Province. This can only be achieved when my honourable friends opposite have real feelings in them for the welfare of the poor peasant. May I ask the Government why they are silent about that all important matter, which if carried through can give great lift to all other trades and industries of the province and also increase the purchasing power of the kisan. I mean the rupee ratio? Leaving aside a few big people of the Punjab, the rest of the people are at one on this point that some modifications should be made in the exchange ratio in order to increase the purchasing power of the kisan. But my friends opposite do not realise it and if they study this point at length they will find out that it is that important matter on which the prosperity of trade and the welfare of the kisan depend. The progress of industry depends on the produce of the kisan and the produce of the kisan depends on prices and prices depend on the ratio of exchange. The Government have done nothing in this respect and they have assumed complete silence as regards this matter. As Ghalib has said,—

 ان ایک خاصہ شی ترمی سب کے جواب مہن

The Honourable Premier remarked the other day that the reduction in land revenue would not go a long way to improve their lot and that it was their purchasing power that must be increased before we could reasonably hope to ameliorate the conditions of the debt-ridden peasants of this province. May I ask, in this connection, if the Unionists' Government have ever tried to move the Government of India to get necessary changes effected in the exchange ratio? It is a thousand pities that our fiscal policy is controlled by England and our provincial Government does not protest against it. Let the Unionists take a leaf out of the currency and exchange policy followed by Australia, New Zealand and other agriculturist countries who saved their peasants from economic ruin by devaluing their currencies to the extent of 25 per cent. But here you sit tongue-tied and do not move even your little finger against this foreign domination. It is highly detrimental to the interests of the people to neglect this matter of great public importance. If you really want to improve the prices of agricultural commodities, you would do well to exert your pressure upon the Government of India to lower the present rupee ratio. Unless and until that is done, the people of the Punjab can never prosper.

Sir, my Unionist friends seem to think that by introducing this Bill they are going to create a new heaven and a new earth for the agriculturists in this province. But I may remind them that the Congress is doing much more in other provinces than the Unionists can even dream of.

Besides, we are deeply concerned to mark the break-neck speed at which our Government is rushing through these measures. This hot haste may bring about a revolution in the province and lead to a catastrophe. The Government had better study the economic and social conditions of the province, take the public into their confidence and then consider this Bill. If they fail to do that, they will be heading for disaster. If you have taken a fancy to the Russian methods, please announce to the public that you have done so. But I remember that Honourable the Premier stated the other day that his face was towards England and not towards Russia. If that is so, need I remind him that in England no Government can dare embark on a controversial legislation without eliciting public opinion thereon and without taking the public into their confidence? Why does our Government hesitate to circulate this Bill to elicit public opinion on it? If you are not prepared to take our word, listen to the people outside. I daily receive a number of telegrams from the various markets protesting against the proposed measure. Had you listened to us, you would not have roused a storm of public opinion against your attitude. May be, you too receive such telegrams but it does not suit your purpose to disclose their contents. Please remember that those who really wish to reform their countries, do not hurry like this. It may be due to this indecent haste that some people regard this Bill to be a communal move. Why not dispel all such doubts? I want to recall a statement made sometime ago by the Honourable the Premier to the effect that he could not and would not govern without the consent and goodwill of the minorities. Can he lay his hand to his heart and say that today he enjoys the confidence of the minorities in the province? (Voices: Yes, yes.)

All that I can say is that you are deceiving yourself. Let me remove a misunderstanding that might creep into the minds of some Unionists. I am not against the principle underlying this Bill. There is a great need for regulating markets in a particular manner. It is the duty of the Government to ensure better prices to the agriculturists. Moreover, I admit that wrong weights and measures are sometimes used in the markets and the poor agriculturists are in this way defrauded of their hard-earned money. Let the Government regulate weights and measures. I have no objection to that. My objection is to the Government refusing to take the public into their confidence. In this connection I would like to place before the Minister for Development a copy of the Bill that was introduced in the United Provinces legislature in April last. I hope the Honourable Minister has already seen it. What I wish him to note is this, that the Congress Government of the United Provinces did not hesitate to consult those people whose interests were going to be affected by it. We want our Government to follow that example. It is not any dilatory tactics that prompt us to make a motion for the circulation of this Bill. We really want them to clear their position before the public who regard it as a move to strengthen the hold of the Unionists on the masses. The Bill in its present form, is most objectionable. The greatest objection will be taken against the constitution of the Market Committees which is undemocratic and reactionary. The entire personnel is proposed to be nominated by the Government thus debarring the growers and consumers and traders to have any effective say in the Market Committees. The Government seems to fight shy of including an elective element in the Committees. The Government seems to desire that the entire Agricultural Produce Marketing should be at the mercy of the Government. The Bill savours of a political measure. The Government wants to strengthen its roots.

The Government will only nominate some of its favourites and that is all. If the Government by over-riding the wishes of the public constitute such a committee that may work under its thumb, this mode of operation may find favour with the present government but not with any just Government. The Government proposes to give 3rd representation to the growers, in the Market Committees. In my opinion that is excessive. But why not ask the growers to elect their own representatives rather than leave it to the Government to nominate its own henchmen. If the Government desires to obtain the co-operation of the Congress or wishes to come into contact with the Congress, I would request the Government to abandon its crooked ways which they want to try at the expense of the zamindars. The Congress Party would be the last party to agree to arming the Government with such powers. I may submit that when the Government takes steps in the right direction we do not hesitate to support them. As every honourable member knows we supported the Government in establishing the debt conciliation boards. It is a pity that the Government is appointing such persons to these boards who are uneducated, unfit for their job and sycophants of the Government. I would ask the Government to state honestly whether a straightforward policy is being followed in the debt conciliation boards. After having had bitter experience as regards the working of the debt conciliation boards, we cannot entrust the Government with powers of nomination for the Market Committees. I assure the members sitting on the Government benches that whatever we say is based upon hard facts and there is not a shadow of untruth in it. Let me assure the Minister in charge and the Honourable Premier that the Congress cannot agree to the principle that there should be a preponderance of nominated members on the Market Committee. (Interruption).

I do not want to take much time of the House. Now I want to listen to the answers to my objections with the sincerity with which I have moved this motion. Let me tell the Honourable Premier who has decided not to agree to any motion or proposal or amendment made by us that the hot haste with which he is rushing through these measures may create a situation akin to that which in Afghanistan faced Amir Aman Ullah Khan. (Cheers). Through this Bill, the Government concedes the principle that the markets should be regulated so that the grower may be able to obtain a fair price for his produce. Why should this principle not apply to the workers and labourers who are the largest factors in production? Quite a number of big landlords and agriculturists have invested money in industrial concerns and thereby draw fat dividends without putting in any work, while the labourer in the concern who produces the article which fetches profit, gets merely wages which do not make his both ends meet. It is very regrettable that every Bill or motion or amendment moved by us is being contemptuously treated by the Government why does the Government fight shy of consulting public opinion? I would like to quote a verse of Iqbal which runs as follows:—

یہاں تو بات کرے کو توستی ہے زبان میری

With these words I move my amendment (Cheers).

Mr. Speaker : Motion under consideration. Amendment moved—

That the Punjab Agricultural Produce Markets Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by the 31st August, 1933.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Muhammad Hassan Khan Gurchani (Dera Ghazi Khan, South, Muhammadan, Rural), (Urdu): Sir, it is a great pleasure that today you have given me—a simple Baloch, an opportunity to speak on the floor of this House. Now with your permission I would like to speak a few words with regard to the Bill under consideration. After having read the Bill carefully I can say that it aims at giving favours and facilities to the zamindar who carries his commodity—the result of his one year or six months' hard labour—to the market for sale. This Bill further seeks to prevent him from the irregularities to which the poor fellow falls an easy prey and is constrained to accept a meagre price offered by cunning and mischievous market people.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalis: On a point of order. The honourable member is reading his speech. (Interruptions).

Mr. Speaker: If he again reads his notes, I will ask him not to do so.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Muhammad Hassan Khan Gurchani: I hoped that the proposed Bill would not have been opposed. But I am very sorry to find that even those members have opposed the Bill whom we could not expect to do so, because they profess to be the friends of the zamindars and, therefore, they should have received the Bill with open-heartedness. But it is very regrettable that some honourable members have kept silent in this matter and the rest have opposed it.

I am surprised to note that the speech of my honourable friend Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt was neither here nor there. Sometimes he appeared to be supporting the Congress and sometimes he seemed to be advocating the cause of the poverty-stricken peasantry of the province.

Coming to the subject matter of the debate I may submit that it is an open secret that when a poor kisan carries his agricultural produce to a mandi in the hope that after a full year's labour he might be able to obtain enough money to make his both ends meet, the malpractices in the mandis do not allow him to receive his grain's worth. If he brings a commodity which is worth a hundred rupees the innocent agriculturist gets Rs. 60 only. To start with, he is not told the correct rates in the markets. Then he is required to pay a number of customary dues some of which are highly objectionable. For example, he is charged dues on account of dharamshala and patshala with which a Muslim has nothing to do. As this line of argument is sure to lead one to communal considerations, I will leave it here without saying that no facilities are provided to the poor agriculturists out of these funds. On the other hand these funds are sometimes used against their interests.

I may be allowed to describe the condition of my district Dera Ghazi Khan. It is well known to all and sundry that this district is situated in a remote corner of the province. Its inhabitants are very backward in education and in all other modern equipments. There are absolutely no good roads for the agriculturists to carry their produce to the markets. If, however, an agriculturist manages to reach a market, he is not given full price of his grain by the middlemen in the markets. In view of these hard facts, Sir, I strongly support the Government motion on this Bill.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General Rural) : Sir, I rise to give my wholehearted support to the motion which has been moved by the honourable member from North-East towns. The importance of this measure cannot be denied and its magnitude is apparent. It applies to markets situated in the extreme South of the Punjab, in Gurgaon district, as it applies to markets in Campbellpore or again to markets in Kangra on the one side and to Multan and Jhang on the other. Customs of trade differ from locality to locality. Similarly this Bill is not confined to marketing of one local produce. It is well known that the various incidences of marketing differ from trade to trade. Therefore, it is necessary that before Government embarks on a legislation of such a universal character, apart from the merits of the legislation, every trade and every locality should have an opportunity of putting forward their views before the Government. No doubt a certain amount of information can be gleaned from the joint committee of experts but they can only give information as to the standardised usages. I respectfully submit that the usages of central Punjab differ in some respects from the usages which may prevail in the mandis in the remote corners of Kangra or in Muzaffargarh. Therefore, it is necessary that Government should not lose the opportunity of obtaining information which would necessarily help them in this legislation.

With respect to the merits of the legislation I do not wish to enter into a controversy, but there is just one point which I wish to emphasise and which unnecessarily creates a sting in the legislation which otherwise perhaps might be welcome. There is a provision for licensing shopkeepers. Now if you want to regulate weights and measures, by all means do it. If you want certain regulation with respect to markets, have them enforced. If you insist on licensing all persons who wish to engage in a particular trade you introduce a kind of rule which would be unacceptable to any democratically minded person. It should not be left to the will of the executive or even to the will of any committee to determine who will follow and who shall not follow a particular profession. If you omit this provision the object of the Bill, unless it is vexatious of a class whom you do not like, will not be frustrated and at the same time, you will take away the sting out of the legislation. I am told that the two existing legislations on which the Honourable Minister relied are those of the Central Provinces and Madras but if you go through them, you will notice that they do not contain any provision with respect to licensing which the honourable Minister has unfortunately included in this Bill. I submit that when you want to introduce a legislation in this province on the ground that the other provinces have also similar legislation you should at least introduce a similar legislation. Do not merely borrow the name and put in different and irksome provisions. Unfortunately I have seen it done in a number of enactments of the Punjab Legislature which have been introduced under the influence of Sir Chhotu Ram.

Just one more point and I have finished, and that is with respect to the constitution of marketing committees. My view is that the constitution should be democratic and not autocratic. As to how that result is to be arrived at is a matter for the Government and the House to decide.

[R. B. Mr. Mukand Lal Pur]

One final warning on the subject I should like to give. It is so easy to destroy an old system: it is very difficult to find a proper and satisfactory substitute. The marketing of agricultural produce is as necessary for the benefit of the agriculturists as growing of it. The produce would be valueless without proper arrangements for marketing. By tradition and long usage of centuries, and system of marketing has been developed suitable to local conditions, a system which may have its defects but which in the words of Mr. Darling is about as cheap as can be devised under the present circumstances. It may be necessary to regulate the system and remove certain defects: remove them by all means. If there are any difficulties, get over them, but do not for God's sake take any action which would destroy this system. In unsympathetic hands, I am afraid, irreparable damage may be done to the very cause which you wish to protect. Therefore, proceed with caution. Sir, I whole-heartedly support the motion for circulation (Voices: Question be now put.)

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Jullundur North, Muhammadan, Rural). (Urdu): Sir, I submit that if this Bill has really been framed for the welfare of the zamindars, then it is well and good. But I am inclined to think that it is not so. The committee that is proposed to be set up under the provisions of this Bill will consist of official members only and that the Government officials will determine its composition as well. Every committee that is set up by the Government contains and will contain official members in its personnel. It is the old custom that whenever the Government appoint any committee they appoint only official members on its personnel.

Then Sir, the members who are included in the committees adopt a very stiff attitude towards the propositions brought before them, so much so that if they come to know of the fact that Government have adopted an unfavourable attitude towards the matter under discussion, they in their turn adopt a hostile attitude and try their level best to go a step further than the Government desires. I am inclined to think that if official members are nominated on the personnel of these committees, no greater harm can be done to the Punjab than this. If there is anything which can harm the interests of the zamindars that will be these nominated committees. In fact they will be a great source of danger.

Besides, my honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, who preceded me, said that the honourable members opposite that they should go out and see, what is going on in the province. The Honourable Premier, however, retorted, "what should they see?" Nothing is going on in the Punjab except that all is well and good. I regret to say that the Honourable Premier has not been able to feel the pulse of the country. He does not know what the people want and what they do not want. Two or three years back when my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, used to sit on the Treasury Benches he was also in the habit of giving the same answer as has been given by the Honourable Premier. I am inclined to think that it is the characteristic of the members who sit on these benches that they do not hear the voice of public and that is why we hear such answers from them.

I may further submit that sometime ago the zamindara banks were formed, the object of which was to rid the people from the iron grip of the sahukars.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Mushtaq Mahmood) : I rise to a point of order Sir. The honourable member is not speaking to the motion under consideration.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : I was submitting that the zamindara banks were set up with a view to rid the zamindars from the clutches of the sahukars, and thus save them from their precarious position. But experience shows that exactly the reverse of it had taken place. One of the objects of these banks was to lend money to the zamindars at the time of their need, so as to enable them to pay up their land revenue in time. I will cite an example in order to illustrate my point. In a certain tahsil only Rs. 27,000 were lent to the zamindars, while on the other hand their land revenue amounted to near about 2 lakhs of rupees. This clearly shows that these banks have not been able to fulfil the object for which they were set up.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is irrelevant. So, I request him to speak to the motion.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Again Sir, when the tahsildars tour in their circles, they put the zamindars to unnecessary troubles, and force them to pay land revenue.

Mr. Speaker : If the honourable member is again irrelevant I shall have to ask him to resume his seat.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Sir, I am not irrelevant. The truth is always bitter. (Laughter). I suggest that if the provision of nomination of the members of the committee is deleted I will be only too glad to support this Bill. Instead of nomination I suggest that they should be elected by the people. If this is done I think the traders as well as the zamindars would whole-heartedly support it, and they would congratulate my friends opposite. If, however, this suggestion is not adopted, I would submit that it would be better if we say good bye to business for all time instead of giving the Government the right of nominating members on the personnel of these committees. In fact this provision of nomination will not serve any useful purpose at all, and everywhere corruption will prevail. Therefore, as far as the question of nomination of the members of the committee is concerned I oppose it and if this provision is deleted I will not only whole-heartedly support the Bill but I would also congratulate my honourable friends for bringing forward such a humane Bill.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh (Amritsar North, Sikh, Bural) (Punjabi) : Sir, before I begin my speech I would like to recite a verse :

ہے شور سنتے تھے یہاں، وہن دل کا
جو چہرا تو اک قطرہ خون نکلا

Since many months back it was published in the newspapers that a Marketing Bill would be introduced in the Punjab Legislative Assembly. The newspapers knew nothing of the subject matter of the Bill and so they made many conjectures about the subject matter of the Bill. The people in the markets were also anxious to know about the contents of that Bill. Now when it has been presented to this House, we have come to know that practically it contains nothing very useful. I admit that in the beginning this Bill did create an interest in the markets and the people residing in the rural areas began to think that this Bill would benefit the zamindars a lot, and that the various fees charged from the zamindars would be put an end to. But we find that this Bill has not tried to lighten the burden of the Kisans. In fact these burdens are there.

Then, there are many more deductions made, namely, arhat, dhulai tulai, lai, iharai, udai, and munimi, etc. In short, there is no limit to these deductions. Everything is so topsy-turvy that no regular account is kept. Furthermore, there are various funds to which the poor zamindar is made to subscribe, namely dharamsala fund, gan shala fund and pat shala fund. The zamindar is therefore in a great fix on account of these exactions made from him. But unfortunately the present Bill will not be able to help him out of his difficulty. We were hearing a lot about the usefulness of this measure but on seeing it we have come to this conclusion that a mole-hill was being represented to be a mountain. Its importance was being over-emphasised. One can never understand from a perusal of this Bill if the intention of the Government is to tax the sellers or buyers. This point will remain unexplained till the rules are made. Till then one can never say whether this is going to be a useful measure or a harmful one. In fact this Bill seems to have been drafted with a view to benefit the richer sections of the people. We have grave fears that this Bill will not prove to be a Marketing Bill but Mar Kutting Bill, that is, those people will come to grief on its account whom it is intended to benefit. We do not know how the money is going to be spent which will be collected in the markets. Will it be spent for the good of the zamindar or only to his detriment?

Mr. Speaker : Repetition should be avoided.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : When the rules come before us, we will be able to tell whether this Bill is going to benefit the people or is going only to add to their burdens. Moreover, we fear that the marketing committees will become the strong-holds of the Unionists. There, voters will be trained to vote for the party at the next general election. This is why a provision has been made in the Bill that the members of these committees will not be elected like those of district boards and municipal committees but will be nominated. Thus a way seems to have been found to oblige some people. Uptil now only the villages were the stage for the favouritism of the Unionist party to flourish, but now even the towns are going to be included. All this is being done to prepare the ground for the next general election.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member should not repeat his arguments.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : A great defect in this Bill is this that the zamindar will not save anything on account of the enforcement of its provisions. So long as the prices are not brought under control with reference to the international situation, no way can be found to benefit the zamindars. We have been passing through a period of depression since 1929 and the zamindar has been suffering since then. I would submit, so long as the minimum prices of commodities are not fixed in all markets the condition of the zamindars cannot be improved. I regret to have to remark that these important things were not kept in mind at the time of drafting this Bill.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member should not repeat other members' arguments.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Sir, I am not repeating. I do not wish to take up much of the time of the House. I strongly support the circulation motion not because I want this measure to be shelved but because I am desirous of consulting those people for whose benefit this Bill has been conceived. I want to know if they will like to have some changes made in the Bill or will like to get it passed in its present form. It is idle to oppose a move to control markets in the twentieth century as certainly these markets are the scenes of untold irregularities which must be brought to an end. In view of these considerations I support the motion for circulating this Bill for eliciting public opinion.

Sheikh Muhammad Sadiq (Amritsar City, Muhammadan, Urban (Urdu) : Sir, it is an open secret that the conditions prevailing in the markets of this province are simply appalling. The agriculturists who go there are defrauded of their hard-earned money in the markets right and left. The malpractices of the middlemen are too numerous to mention here. The buyers of agricultural produce in the markets are more often than not dishonest. I do not mean to say that there are no honest dealers at all. Far from it. But the fact remains that most of them indulge in dishonest practices and thus bring shame to the fair name of this province. I remarked just now that the people in the markets loot the agriculturists right and left. There is no exaggeration in that. They keep such balances as are not proper. The weight used by them, again, are incorrect. Some shopkeepers keep two sets of weights. When they buy things they use one set of weights and when they sell certain commodities they weigh out with the other set. What aggravates the position is the fact that they do not tell the correct rates at which commodities are sold or bought. They always offer lower prices to the agriculturists when the latter comes to sell something. If on the other hand the agriculturists go to them for buying something they quote higher rates than the real ones. All these evils call for a strict remedy. Some one must rise to rectify the whole position. I am, therefore, very much pleased to note that the Government have realised the dire necessity of the agriculturists in this connection and brought forward this measure.

Some of my honourable friends sitting on the opposition benches have stated that it is not fair on the part of the Unionists to lay down in the Bill that the members of the marketing committees will be nominated by the Government. They object to the Unionist Government nominating members to these committees, but they have absolutely no objection to the Congress nominating members to various committees. Even Dr. Satyapal resorts to the method of nomination within his jurisdiction. But if the Unionists nominate some members for certain committees, the Congressites come down upon them and raise a hue and cry over it. That attitude of the Congress is beyond my comprehension.

I do not know why my honourable friends become so impatient and restive on ordinary things. They want that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by 31st October 1938. When this Bill would be considered in the next session, i.e., in October or November, I do not think there is any need for its being circulated. The public could easily decide about it by that time and we would get public opinion without circulating the Bill for the purpose. I would submit that the motion moved by my honourable friend opposite is nothing more than a dilatory motion. It is quite obvious that everybody seems to have liked the Bill under consideration. Now my submission is that the Bill should be referred to a select committee and every sort of criticism and comments which the Opposition wants to make be sent to the select committee in due course. It would be quite useless to pick holes in the bill again in October or November when the next session is likely to be held.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : How do you assume it ?

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : I can smell it.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member need not answer the question.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : I will ignore him in future. (Laughter). As my honourable friend Mr. Mukand Lal Puri has stated, there are usages in the Bill, but the methods adopted for those usages are incorrect. The Bill aims that dishonesty prevailing in the markets be totally removed and wiped away. We want to over-haul the balances in order to make them the balances of justice and balances of Dharam (Cheers). How strange it is that the Opposition does not believe in any Government except the Congress Government. If our Government fixes weights, the Congress would not help objecting to it for mere objections sake. But the question is wherefrom the weights should be brought ? If the Opposition does not take the present Government in its confidence then would it like to send for weights from England or some other country ? I think the weights should be fixed by the Government. I remember that silk was very dear some 20 years ago and it was sold at the rate of Rs. 25 a seer and there were some shopkeepers dealing with silk who kept  $5\frac{1}{2}$  seers weight instead of 5 seers for purchasing and vice versa. It has come to light by holding inquiries by the Government that almost all shop-keepers keep false weights. It is our duty to reform all these defective practices that are being adopted in the produce markets. My honourable friend Sardar Sohan Singh Josh has stated that the Bill is not complete in some respects. I submit, if the Government has not drafted the Bill perfectly and there is some flaw left in it, it is to be excused, as, to err is human. The question is this that nobody from the Opposition benches has found fault with the principle of the Bill. It means that so far as the principle of the Bill is concerned they have got nothing to say against it. But what has been emphasised by the Opposition is that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion. I submit that by the public opinion the Opposition might mean the opinion of the shop-keepers.

who would come in the jurisdiction and purview of the Bill or would be affected by the said Bill when it would be enacted. I have already stated that opinions could be obtained by the end of October next even without circulating the Bill. An honourable member has advanced a novel argument, he has stated that it does not look justifiable to abolish an old system whose roots have gone deep into the soil. I admit. But the honourable member seems to have ignored the fact that after thousands of years the system gets itself covered with hundred and one evils. As far as granting of licences is concerned, the Opposition has also opposed this measure inspite of the fact that all of us, I mean the lawyers, cannot practice unless they get licence for that purpose. This is not the case with lawyers only, see tonga-walas, kerosine oil sellers, coolies etc. These people get licenses before they begin their business. So it is very ridiculous to say that irregularities would spring up at the time of granting the licences to the people concerned. Not even this, but my learned friend Sardar Sohan Singh Josh has stated that rules have not yet been made, I may submit for his information that the rules cannot be made unless the Bill is passed. This is just like putting the cart before the horse. Let the Bill be passed first then the rules would be framed in accordance with the sections of the Bill. We have got to pass through all the stages one by one. This is not "Sikha Shahi" that we may do what we wish.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : The honourable member has used the word "Sikha Shahi".

Mr. Speaker : I don't think the expression is unparliamentary.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : I say Nadir Shahi, Tamur Shahi and any other Shahi. My friend sitting here by my side suggests me to add "Gora Shahi" to other Shahis. I did not mean ill to anybody. I may say Sikandar Shahi or Tamur Shahi. I would like to submit that the honourable members of the House should have at least some sense of humour. I am accustomed to deliver speeches on the floor of this House because I have been a member of this Assembly for the last seven years and you know that I have never taken such a liberty as to attack any honourable member. The phrase "Sikha Shahi" is a well known in phrase in Punjabi. By using this phrase I did not mean to insult any of my honourable friends sitting on the opposite benches. I was submitting that my honourable friends sitting on the opposite benches have raised these flimsy objections because they have received many a telegram from their electorates asking them to oppose the Bill as far as possible. This is the main reason of objecting to the Bill. I would request them that they should not be afraid of their electorates who have sent them dozens of telegrams but they should express their opinions honestly in the interests of the general public. I can read from their faces that they have got no solemn ground to oppose the Bill and they at heart are one with us in supporting the Bill. So far as I know they differ only on one clause and I would request the Government to accept their objection. (Interruptions.) If the honourable members opposite want that the market Committees should consist of some members of district boards or the select committee may have some elected members on its personnel, it could have been done, but my honourable friends should not ignore the fact that by holding elections, everything would be spoiled altogether, and not only make elections expensive, but people may be returned who know nothing about trade and commerce.

I would like to submit in the end of my speech that the Opposition should not merely oppose reference of the Bill to a select committee, but they should bring forward some weighty objections to the principles of the Bill on which it has been based.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) (Punjab): Sir, ever since this rumour was set afloat that Government have had under consideration the Marketing Bill or Mar Kuti Bill, viz., the Murdering Bill as the people call it, the public has been carrying on a vigorous propaganda against it both in the Press as well as on the platform. A number of Anti-Marketing Bill Committees have been set up in almost all quarters of the province, and, at Lyallpur, in particular where a regular office has been established for this purpose. Moreover, various conferences have been held to protest against this most undesirable measure. In fact the public of this province has been very anxious to nip it in the bud. A year or so ago this Bill was perhaps drafted by the Joint Development Board and since then several conferences including one over which I have had the honour to preside, have been held but the Government has had little hesitation in bringing it forward in spite of the opposition of the public. The sole reason why the Government is turning a deaf ear to the voice of the public is that, the Council of Ministers in the province is not fully representative of all sections of people. It is a Jat Ministry that is ruling in the Punjab and I include the Awans and Rajputs in the word Jat. I make no distinction between them. There is among these Jats only one representative of the people whom this Bill is going to hit hard. But one man however strong he may be, can wield no authority against the majority of 5 Jat Ministers. The public is justified, therefore, in apprehending high-handedness on the part of this Ministry. A very large section of population in the province is afraid that there is no one to advocate and sponsor its cause before the Government which can easily afford to ignore this section. What aggravates the whole position, is the fact that there is, in the Cabinet, a man who far all intents and purposes over-shadows the Cabinet and does not allow the Government to consider these measures dispassionately. There are others in this Cabinet who have no knowledge of the conditions which are prevailing in the province and their experience is confined only to a few years' service in some military regiment or honorary ranks or there may be some who only know how to receive fat salaries. One cannot be sure whether the things which these Ministers say they know, are based on hearsay, or first hand knowledge. I do not know how far their motives are genuine or whether they are trying to wreak their own vengeance. How can they claim to be in sympathy with the poor masses of the province and how can they claim to be agriculturists when they have never touched the plough all their lives? It is stated in the statement of objects and reasons that in the mandis of the province there is no arrangement for the agriculturists who carry their produce for sale. Let me inform them that in almost all the markets save perhaps, a few in the remote corners of the province, all comforts are provided for their clients. They are for instance, given charpoys, beddings, residence, room for their bullocks and carts and various other facilities are provided for them. The general belief is that Government wants to put the markets in the hands of zamindars and thus interfere with their liberty. If they really want to help the agriculturists they should ascertain whether the agriculturists want this help. It is necessary to circulate this Bill for eliciting public opinion thereon, so that we may know exactly what the country wants.

Coming to the speech which has been delivered by my honourable friend Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq, I may point out that he has in a way supported the contentions of my honourable friend Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt. Besides, I am very much surprised to learn that he has changed his creed in as much as he has supported to-day the principle of nomination against open elections while in the past so many years he has been criticising me simply because I favoured nomination in certain cases. It is very strange indeed that he should have taken this somersault. During my regime he would ask me to rob the deputy commissioners and the commissioners of of all the powers of nomination they enjoyed but now he does not hesitate to support the Unionist Government who have proposed nomination in the markets.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : I do not support the principle of nomination even now.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I am glad he has turned round to his old position after a moment's setback but my honourable friend did remark that if Dr. Satya Pal has formed his own committee, Mahatma Gandhi has formed his own committee, why should not the Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram be allowed to form his own committee? Where is the harm if he does so? Further my honourable friend opposite has cited the example of Madras. May I suggest that the condition of Madras is quite different from that of the Punjab. There is no Alienation of Land Act in force in Madras as it is in force here in the Punjab. The net result of this Act is this that the whole of the Punjab is divided into two camps. On the one hand there are big land-holders, who call themselves zamindars. These people as a matter of fact never even touched the handle of a plough and never worked the well and yet they call themselves the tillers of the soil. On the other hand there are people who have been following the profession of agriculture for ages, but are termed as non-agriculturists.

The legislation now before the House has exacerbated the feelings to such an extent that serious suspicions have arisen in the minds of the people. They feel that the Government is out to ruin them by stopping all kinds of money lending, by invalidating all benamis and by robbing them of their mortgages. Further, the Government by registering the money-lenders and by introducing the Marketing Bill is going to ruin all kinds of business.

The Bill which is now before the House has been copied from the Madras Act in toto. But my friends have left out the thing that was best in it.

An honourable member : What is that?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : The provision of elections. In the Madras Act there is a provision for electing the members of the committees and the same has been done in the Central Provinces. But in the Punjab what could have been expected from my honourable friend Chaudhri Sir

[Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narain.]

Chhotu Ram, whose very name makes the people tremble. They may say that these fears are not well founded. But the fact is that they are there and it is the duty of my friends opposite to remove them. One word more and I have done. What harm would accrue if my friends over there agree to the circulation of this Bill up to the 31st October, 1938 for eliciting public opinion thereon? It is a fact that the Bill cannot be discussed in the House before November, 1938. It will do my friends no harm if they allow the general public to study the Bill. I think the Government can have no genuine objection to this proposal and I hope that they would not commit an unnecessary sin by opposing the amendment.

(Voices : Question be now put.)

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Minister for Development (The Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram) (Urdu) : Sir, when I first saw the notice of the amendment by which the consideration of this Bill was sought to be postponed, I was both pleased and grieved by it. I was pleased because I thought that the Congress party having opposed this motion I would get an opportunity of exposing the Party before this Honourable House as well as before the outside public. On the other hand, I was grieved to find that these adherents of the Congress, which is the greatest political organization of the country should go to such a length as to adopt dilatory tactics in connection with a Bill the object of which is to secure the welfare of the poor cultivators.

(Interruptions). Sir, it seems to me that my thrusts have gone home and my honourable friends on the opposite benches have become painfully conscious of the truth of my remarks. But let me inform them that the time is not far off when they would feel them with greater intensity. It is gratifying to note that by the introduction of the Bill in question the Government has made the Congress party expose its inner feelings. The Congress party which was wont to sing praises of its being the only and chief supporter and defender of the down-trodden rural community has exhibited itself in its true colours by opposing this highly useful Bill which aims at the amelioration of the conditions of the major portion of the population of our provinces. It really gives me pain to see that the Congress party tries to obstruct the business of the House by resorting to dilatory tactics even in cases where such beneficial measures as the one under consideration are brought forward by the Government.

(Interruptions).

اب جگر تھام کے بیٹھو کہ میری باری آئی

Sir, when I came to know that the Leader of the Opposition party and the "Senapati" of the Congress rank and file was not present in his seat I thought he must have felt 'lajjia' in moving his amendment.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : Is it parliamentary, is it fair, is it gentlemanly?

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : The Honourable Minister is insinuating against the Leader of the Opposition. (Uproar).

Mr. Speaker : If I understand him aright, what he said was that for certain reasons he did not wish to move the motion.

Dr. Satya Pal : The word 'lajjia' is disgraceful. It is a Hindi word and perhaps you do not follow it. I object to the word 'lajjia' being used while referring to the Leader of the Opposition. (Uproar).

Mr. Speaker : I am not going to allow any further discussion. In my opinion the words were not in any way offensive.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I rise for a personal explanation. I am told that motives have been imputed to me. (Voices from Treasury benches : No, no.) (Voices from Opposition benches : Yes.) I think I am entitled to have my say and if it is not approved by the members on the other side I am afraid I cannot help it. My submission is that the words which have been used by my honourable friend over there against me saying that I was out because I was ashamed of moving this thing are unparliamentary. That is an insinuation.

Mr. Speaker : What word has the Honourable Minister used and in what sense ?

Minister for Development : Sir, I have only used the words 'lajjia bhao.' I know Sanskrit and Hindi better than many honourable members sitting on the opposite benches. I have used this word with the greatest possible care. I meant no disrespect to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. Before commenting on the absence of the Leader of the Opposition I had decided to resort to Sanskrit, because I felt that the only Urdu word which had occurred to me might cause him greater embarrassment than what I intended.

Mr. Speaker : What is its translation ?

Dr. Satya Pal : The word 'remorso' is the translation.

Mr. Speaker : What is the meaning of 'Lajjia-bhao'.

Minister for Development : 'Lajjia-bhao' means a sense of shame. My learned friends neither know Sanskrit, nor Hindi, nor even Urdu.

Mr. Speaker : As the words used by the Honourable Minister have been taken exception to by many honourable members, although he has expressly stated that he did not mean any disrespect to anyone, I request him to withdraw them.

Minister for Development : Sir, I did not make any insinuation against any person. I meant no disrespect to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. But if any person has understood these words as implying disrespect I gladly withdraw them.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Sir, I rise to give a personal explanation. I am very grateful to the Honourable Minister of Development that he has had the moral courage to withdraw the words used against me. I may assure my Honourable friend Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram that I have not changed my views. Since Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt had given notice of a similar amendment I did not want to waste the precious time of the House by moving the amendment standing against my name. My ideas and views do not differ from those of my party.

Minister for Development : In the absence of the Leader his lieutenant seems to have got necessary instructions. He rose and remarked that he wanted to clarify the position of his party by saying that they did not oppose the principle of the Bill, and that they had every desire that the conditions of the poor destitute and poverty-stricken zamindars should be ameliorated. He also complained that I, in the course of my opening speech, did not express the underlying idea as to why it was found necessary to introduce this Bill in the House.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : I did not say that.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is still interrupting. In exceptional cases he can be allowed to correct facts and figures, but he cannot be allowed to make comments and criticism on every word of sentence.

(Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt again stood up.)

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member cannot be allowed to make comments. This is the last time that I request him not to interrupt the Honourable Minister.

Minister for Development : Sir, my submission is that had he carefully gone through the statement of objects and reasons attached to the proposed Bill he would have refrained from making this complaint. I do not want to waste the time of the House. We have to do a lot of important work. Our intention is to expedite the business of the House, whereas the Opposition wants to obstruct it. If I did not mention in my opening speech the reasons for introducing such a measure, it was simply because I wanted to save the time of the House. If he is prepared to hear my argument in favour of the introduction of this Bill I am quite willing to repeat them for his benefit. Sir, I have a woeful tale to tell about the miserable plight of the poor zamindars. It will not take hours but weeks and months to explain fully a complete catalogue of the woes of the poor peasants. I have not sufficient time at my disposal to lay further stress on the point, so I would content myself with only passing remarks about the reasons for introducing this Bill. My friends are aware of the fact when a zamindar tills his land he is the owner of what he sows. When he reaps his crop he is the owner of his produce, but when he brings his produce into the neighbouring market he ceases to be the owner of his produce. The brokers, weighmen, measurers, and several other persons all combine to exploit this village simpleton.

My honourable friend had complained that while in the statement of objects and reasons mention had been made of Madras and Bombay nothing had been said about the conditions prevailing in the Punjab. It is a pity that my friend has not carefully gone through the statement. It has been definitely and clearly stated therein that careful enquiries have brought to light the startling fact that out of a rupee which the consumer pays for his wheat or rice the producer gets only  $9\frac{1}{2}$  annas. This is true of the Punjab along with all other provinces of India.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Is the honourable member relevant? Is he not going beyond the scope of the motion?

Mr. Speaker : He is replying to the arguments advanced by the honourable mover of the motion.

Minister for Development : I can very well understand the reason why my friends are nervous; and why they are feeling uneasy at heart. (Cheers). But I would ask the honourable members sitting on the opposite benches whether they have ever cared to inquire about weights and balances used by dealers. If they have not done so I would suggest to them to consult the Report of the Banking Committee. They would find in that Report how ruthlessly these dealers exploit simple-hearted zamindars by using false weights and tricky balances. I may submit for their information that an inquiry was made into this matter from one corner of the province to the other. The result of the enquiry is stated in the Punjab Banking Enquiry Report, and what is this result? On an average, as many as 41 weights out of 100 were found to be false. I am not talking here of C. P. or Bengal or Madras; I am talking of my own province. It is further apparent from the summary contained in this report that 59 per cent. of the scales tested were found to be incorrect. Further, some of the shop-keepers were found to be keeping two sets of weights, one for buying and the other for selling. Our honourable friends who have objected to the Bill do not know or do not care to admit that out of a rupee which the consumers pays for his wheat the producer gets 9½ annas. But he suffers another loss in an invisible way. When his produce is weighed it loses a considerable weight in the process. It is difficult to calculate the loss caused to the zamindars in this way. In villages things are even worse. There things are generally weighed by katcha weights and with the hand scales. There is a well-known phrase in Punjabi "Ponche-ki-Maror." I may submit, Sir, that by "Ponche-ki-Maror", i.e. by a simple twist of the wrist for a moment or so when weighing the commodity brought by the zamindars, the dealers manage to defraud the zamindars and do him an amount of harm that is incalculable. Under these circumstances the Government could not help introducing this Bill in the House.

The mover of the dilatory motion also complains as to why this step was not taken earlier. In the same breath my learned friend Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt has the audacity to suggest that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon. I would submit that barely 16 months have elapsed since we came into power. If the last government did not bring forward such a useful measure neither I nor the present government can be held to blame for the omission, and it is no part of my business to assess the merits or demerits of the past government. When the present government came into power and noticed the miserable plight of the zamindars of the province, they felt that something must be done to save the poor peasants from the clutches of the clever market people. We took stock of the situation and came to a definite conclusion that this Bill is indispensable for the well-being of the people of this province. In pursuance of this conclusion we have introduced it during the present session. My learned friend has raised a number of objections against the introduction of this Bill. One sample of his objections is "why did Government not take up such a Bill earlier"; "why is government proceeding with this Bill in such hot haste?" Such conflicting objections are ridiculous in the extreme. The real truth is that while professing lip sympathy these gentlemen are opposing us for the sake of opposition. The same honourable member further enquired "do the government know that there is serious resentment prevailing amongst the outside public against this Bill and that it is causing his party no end of worry that they did not know whether they would be able to weather this storm of agitation for they do not know how to cope with it?"

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : That is wrong.

Minister for Development : The honourable member did utter these words and moreover he stated that the storm of agitation raging outside the Assembly would sound the death-knell of the present government. Let me assure the honourable member who uttered this threat that the fate predicted for us will not overtake us but surely awaits those who dare to oppose this Bill. (Cheers and interruptions). I want to tell my interruptors that I noted the exact words used by the mover while he was making his speech. They are—

“ اس طوفان میں حکومت کی موت ہے ”

I remember that he mentioned a number of other irrelevant points which should not have been mentioned.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : What about the ratio?

Minister for Development : Some honourable members spoke about international situation while the mover grounded: “ This Government professes to be the friend of the zamindars but it has not taken any steps so far to control the exchange ratio.” I would quote a well-known saying which would suit this multitude of irrelevancies :—

“ ماروں گھٹنا پھوٹے آنکھ ”

(Laughter). I do not understand why the honourable members sitting opposite have lost sight of the fact of which we have reminded them so often, that this Bill seeks to regulate the methods and practices obtaining in the markets and is intended to overhaul the marketing system. It has got nothing to do with exchange ratio. That is a matter beyond our control. So far as that matter is concerned, I would like to submit that if my friends sitting on the opposite benches want me to regulate exchange ratio I would request them to invest me with the powers of dictatorship like those of Hitler. It is only then that I would be in a position to meet their demands. (Cheers). If we indulge in talk of regulating exchange ratio it would simply be an attempt to delude the public because we all know that the subject does not fall within the purview of a Provincial Government. It is a subject which can be dealt with only by the Central Government. So I would refrain from wasting the time of the House over a matter which is beyond our reach.

It appears from most of the speeches that have been made against my motion that some of my honourable friends have either not been able to understand the full implications of the motion or they have conveniently omitted to refer to them. The motion is one which seeks a bare reference to a select committee. I may add here that whenever a measure is referred to a select committee without specifying any date for the submission of the report, it invariably means that the report cannot be submitted earlier than two months from the date of the publication of a Bill in the official Gazette, and unless the report is available, the Bill cannot be considered by the House.

That is well known rule and I hope that almost all the honourable members know it. However, if any one had any doubt with regard to this matter he may now note, that the Bill will not be considered by this House earlier than the next of October session. This fact will also explain why it is no longer necessary to circulate the Bill for eliciting public opinion thereon. It is evident that public opinion will have full three months to express itself. Besides, the select committee will be in a position to consider all suggestions for amendment that may be sent to it by the public. I assure the House, once again, that no further motion will be made during this session with regard to this Bill.

Adverting to some of the individual objections raised against this Bill, I would first try to meet what my learned and honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, observed in this connection. He desires to know what harm there will be if this Bill is circulated to elicit public opinion thereon by the 31st October, 1938? That sounds very well. But the question is whether the acceptance of the suggestion would not cause avoidable delay. I need not inform the learned Doctor that if the Bill is circulated as desired by him, I shall have to come up again before this House with a proposal to refer the Bill to a select committee and the House will again spend as much time in discussing that motion as it has done to-day. We know that time is money, and it is doubly so in the case of the Assembly. I for one will not be a party to a proposal which involves a waste of the valuable time of the House and public money, particularly when I know that during the coming three months public will have the fullest possible opportunity of expressing their opinion. But I desire to make it perfectly clear that while I am not going to make any further motion concerning this Bill during the present session, I will not allow the consideration stage to be postponed beyond the next October session. I hope that the House will pass the Bill in that session and win the gratitude of the poverty-stricken agriculturists whom it is intended to help and benefit.

Allow me, Sir, to state a few concrete facts to explain why it is no longer necessary to circulate the Bill. There is, as I am sure you know, a joint Development Board in the Punjab and a Marketing Sub-Committee under it. A draft of a Marketing Bill was placed before this Sub-Committee at a meeting held on the 25th November, 1937. At this meeting a resolution was passed unanimously that a Marketing Bill should be passed for the province and that time should be given to members for a detailed examination of the draft and for expression of opinion thereon. The Bill was again to be considered at a meeting of that sub-committee which was proposed to be held in January, 1938. At this meeting it was to be decided, in the light of the individual opinions of members, whether any changes were to be made in the draft. But, fortunately or unfortunately some one or more of the members to whom copies of the Bill were supplied, rushed to the press for publishing it instead of keeping it confidential. The result was that an intensive propaganda was carried on against it throughout the province, and the Bill was hotly discussed in all its details. In fact I did not know in the beginning what exactly had happened. I enquired from the secretariat from the Financial Commissioners and even from the Honourable the Premier whether they knew anything of the Bill. I was told that they were not aware of the existence of such a Bill. In order, therefore, to allay the initial vague rumours, I issued to the Press a statement to the effect that there was no Marketing Bill under consideration with Government. But hardly had the ink of my statement dried up when the Press published all the provisions of the Bill in extenso. Now it puzzled me very much and my astonishment knew no bounds. In fact, I felt considerably humiliated at the thought that the public would consider me either an ignorant or one who was prepared to conceal an obvious truth. So I made further inquiries and found that the Marketing Sub-Committee had prepared a draft of the Bill and had supplied its members with copies. It was thus that I had to issue another statement to the Press in which I explained in detail the history of this incident. The meeting which was to have been held in January, 1938, was cancelled as there seemed to be no longer any need of holding it now when a much wider public was engaged in expressing its views. It was, however, decided that the present Marketing Bill should be brought up before this House for consideration.

Coming to the objection that those affected do not know the contents of the Bill or that the Government is not sufficiently acquainted with the trend of public feeling in the matter, I may submit that this charge is wholly unfounded. The Bill has been before the public since December, 1937, its provisions have been freely and continuously discussed since then, and now it is before this House too. Everybody is welcome to suggest whatever changes he may think fit to make in it. Let those who claim to have more intimate knowledge of the marketing affairs of the province than the Government, come forward and point out defects and deficiencies in the Bill. It has already been profusely commented upon and much has been said for and against it. Public opinion had begun to express itself on it by the Christmas of 1937. Several conferences have been held to protest against its introduction. One of these conferences was presided over by Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang himself. Another conference was held at Sargodha and Diwan Chaman Lal gave his consent to preside at it. But on account of some unforeseen circumstances, he could not actually attend it. His presidential address was, however, read at that conference. Then another conference was held at Sonapat some time in March. The Leader of the Opposition was present at that conference. As far as my memory helps me another large meeting was held towards the end of April at Samalkha. The Leader of the Opposition was not only present at that meeting but also delivered a speech against this Bill. He did this without waiting for or caring to know the decision of the Congress Party as to the attitude they should take up with regard to this Bill. After these conferences agitation has been continuously carried on in the Press, the business community and many other people closely associated with business have expressed their opinions regarding this Bill. Some of them have sent in their opinions in writing to the Secretary of the Marketing Sub-committee. I will read to the House very brief extracts from some of them. I would like to mention a few of the names of the individual gentlemen who were either on the Marketing Sub-committee, or who formally expressed their opinion with regard to this Bill, so that my honourable friends may have no excuse to say that responsible people or trading associations know nothing about the subject-matter of this Bill.

The first opinion was sent by Chuharmal & Co., which reached us on the 11th December, 1937. The Secretary says that he had consulted his association and that he was submitting their unanimous opinion which was opposed to the Bill. Well, Sir, that opinion is a lengthy one, I will pick up just one pregnant sentence which says that the Punjab Agricultural Produce Markets Bill bears a strong family resemblance to the Rowlett Act. The second opinion was submitted by Colonel Bruce who says that generally speaking he agrees with the provisions of this Bill. One Sardar Balwant Singh Sham says that his association has fully considered the Bill and they are of the opinion that there is no justification for it. Sardar Santokh Singh, Member, Legislative Assembly, also another well known representative of business interest, also sent in his opinion. It was received on 3rd January, 1938. He says that he is entirely against the Bill. Owen Roberts & Co. have stated that the Government should wait for public opinion, and that they were not yet prepared to express their opinion on the Bill one way or the other.

An Honourable Member : Did Sardar Santokh Singh, Member, Legislative Assembly, express his opinion independently without caring to know the opinion of his party?

Minister for Development : Let me satisfy the curiosity of the honourable member. All of us have our own individual types of mentality. Traders have a trader's mentality and zamindars have a zamindar's mentality. Sardar Santokh Singh is not to blame. He is a trader and was unable to resist his class instincts and traders' mentality. I remember quite well the day when there was confusion and chaos in the ranks of my Congress friends on the opposite benches. The zamindar members of the Congress Party voted with us, while non-agriculturists, considering discretion to be the better part of valour, quietly left the House. I may submit that Sardar Santokh Singh did no more than obey his class instincts like my friends of the Congress Party, and we need not take an unnecessarily severe view of his attitude.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : On a point of order, Sir. Is the Honourable Minister referring to the Bill now before the House?

Minister for Development : Again, the Premier Cotton Factory has sent in its opinion....

Lala Duni Chand : Is the expression دہا کر بھاگ گئے parliamentary?

Mr. Speaker : About whom has the expression been used?

Lala Duni Chand : About us.

Mr. Speaker : Has he so used the words?

Minister for Development : I will not deny that I have used these words. But I maintain that these words are not unparliamentary. If, however, you ask me to withdraw them, I will certainly comply with your orders. (A voice : This is the standard of your decency).

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Do you rule that the expression used by the Honourable Minister for Development is parliamentary? He is under the impression that the expression used by him is not unparliamentary and he proceeds on that basis. I want your ruling.

Mr. Speaker : I wish to know all that was said by the Honourable Minister.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : He said that at the time of a particular voting members of the Congress Party voted in a certain way and the urbanite members left the hall "with their tails lower down."

Mr. Speaker : What does the honourable member understand by that expression?

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : He said that it was a cowardly act on the part of some members.

Minister for Development : The plain rendering of these words is "discretion is the better part of valour."

The exact words that I used are as follows :— "The zamindar members of the Congress Party voted with us while the non-agriculturist members of the Party considering discretion to be the better part of valour quietly left the House."

Mr. Speaker : What has the Leader of the House to say on the point?

Premier : I think that it means that discretion is the better part of valour.

Mr. Speaker : According to my lights, the expression means to leave the field without resisting or doing something which a person should have done or was expected to do but he did not do. (Ministerial cheers.)

Sardar Sampuran Singh : My point of order was that all the documents do not relate to this Bill.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of order, Sir. You have been ruling during the last 15 years or so that when an honourable member of this House reads out a portion of a document that document must be placed on the record and I would request you to have these documents put on the record for the benefit of the members.

Mr. Speaker : According to the parliamentary practice when a member of Government reads any extract from an official document, he is expected to place it on the table of the House, unless he considers it in public interest not to do so. If the House desires to have these documents placed on its table, I don't think the Honourable Minister shall have any objection to do so.

Minister for Development : Sir, I have no mind to conceal anything. I am not one of those who would like to strike below the belt. Just wait and see. Every relevant paper will be laid before the select committee and nothing will be kept secret from any member of the said committee.

Mr. Speaker : Is the honourable member satisfied now?

Dr. Sir Gukul Chand Narang : Yes, Sir. I raised this objection not from a purely technical point of view, but because I think it would be to the advantage of the members as they will be able to look at these opinions and it will be some though poor substitute for circulation.

Mr. Speaker : They will not be kept secret or confidential.

Minister for Development : I notice that an honourable member goes on raising points of order one after the other. May be, he is feeling very uneasy to-day. But I may assure him that there is nothing desperate in this Bill. I may further add with all the emphasis at my command that the measure in hand is calculated to ameliorate the condition of the impoverished and the down-trodden agriculturists. Sir, let me put at ease my honourable friends on the benches opposite. I have well nigh finished my speech, and they will soon be able to heave a sigh of relief. The only question that I have yet to deal with is the one relating to their repeated points of order and this need not detain me long. The fact of the matter is that this Bill has given them a very uncomfortable day. But let them recognise that neither noisy conduct in this House nor the storm of agitation outside will deflect me from my purpose or arrest the progress of this Bill. The mighty march of the Ganges, after it has left the hills, cannot be blocked by dams of sand.

Sir, the Almighty God, Father of us all, was moved to pity and brought about the enfranchisement of the long-oppressed agriculturists in order to deliver them of their incessant sufferings. As a result of popular franchise there have come to this House their representatives who understand their sufferings and misfortunes, and are out to put a stop to them. Not only this they have come in an overwhelming majority to the great discomfiture and chagrin of vested interests, and a heartening dawn after the deep darkness of a long-drawn night of misery and distress is in sight.

Sir, one sentence more and I have done. I hope this will also end the uneasiness of my friends of the Opposition. One of them went to the length of sounding a note of warning to us saying: "What is it that is weighing upon the minds of the Unionists? They should not exhibit such hot haste. Have they forgotten the fate of Amanullah Khan, who, as a result of his haste to reform his country, lost his throne?" Let me, Sir, inform my friends that the Amanullah Khan of the Punjab will prove much stronger than the Amanullah Khan of Afghanistan. At all events, I should advise my friends to pray that the Amanullah Khan of the Punjab will not disappear and make room for a Bachcha Sqa.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Urdu) : I did not oppose the Bill. If the Honourable Minister has stated so in his speech it is incorrect.

Lala Duni Chand : On a point of information. I want to know from you or through you whether the concluding part of his speech was worthy of a responsible Minister who represents all classes of the Punjab? (Voices : Shame). (Voices : Worthy of a king).

Mr. Speaker : Does the honourable member wish to raise a point of order or object to the language used by the Honourable Minister? (Interjection).

Minister for Development : Why should he be allowed to offer comments on the conduct of a Minister. Let him bring a vote of censure if he likes.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Is it not questioning the authority of the Speaker? The Honourable Minister of Development has no right to question the authority like that.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : One word about myself. He made reference to my having presided over a meeting. Then this Bill was not in existence and therefore no opinions were expressed on this Bill.

Mr. Speaker : A personal explanation on that ground is unnecessary.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Lahore City, General, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, the Honourable Minister of Development has remarked during his speech that I opposed this Bill in a meeting held at Sonapat. I may submit that I had the honour and the privilege of presiding over a meeting at Samalke, and when the Parliamentary Secretary of the Minister of Development came to see Diwan Chaman Lal and myself, we inquired from him if he had the copy of the Marketing Bill with him but he replied that the Bill was not ready. They were thinking to prepare one. What I said in the meeting was only this, that the prices of agricultural commodities should be improved and brought under control because the innocent agriculturists are not generally offered the right prices in the markets. It is not, therefore, correct to say that I protested against the principle of establishing regulated markets in the province. On the other hand I welcome such an idea, provided it is based on sound principles.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That the Punjab Agricultural Produce Markets Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by the 31st October, 1938.

THE PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND (SECOND AMENDMENT) BILL.

CLAUSE 5.

Mr. Speaker : The House will now proceed to consider the remaining amendments to the clauses of the Punjab Alienation of Land (Second Amendment) Bill.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): Sir, I beg to move—

That at the end of 13-A (2), the following proviso be added:—

“Provided that the Deputy Commissioner may, in ordering the ejection of a person who is a bona fide transferee before the 20th June, 1938, and is in occupation of such land, allow to any such person, other than the original transferee, compensation for improvements (as defined in section 4 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887), effected by him while in occupation, up to a sum not exceeding in value the consideration for the original transaction. Such compensation shall be assessed by the Deputy Commissioner on such principles as may be prescribed, and shall be deposited by the alienor, and paid to the persons so ejected, in such manner as may be prescribed.”

(Urdu): The amendment that I have moved is a clear proof of the good faith of the party in power. The various amendments moved by my friends on the opposition were opposed by us mainly on two grounds. In the first place their object was to protect the interests of the dishonest people and not of bona fide transferees. Secondly, most of the amendments were such, that if accepted they would have killed the very object of the Bill now before the House. The amendment now moved is free from both these objections. I, therefore, make bold to move this amendment on behalf of my party. The object of this amendment is that if a person had purchased lands from a benami owner without the knowledge that the latter possessed it under a benami transaction and had improved the land, he would be entitled to certain compensation under certain conditions.

Sir, there appear to be some misunderstandings about this amendment. I may make it clear that under this amendment an original benamidar if he has made improvements costing lakhs shall not be entitled to have any compensation because under the provisions of this Bill benamis have been declared null and void and his hands are soiled. The same applies to the beneficiary sahidars. The protection under the amendment will only extend to bona fide transferees. Then, though it is admitted that the honest third parties who have made improvements on the land should be given some compensation, it is suggested that the result would probably be that all fraudulent benamidars will now transfer their interests to third parties who will build expensive improvements and the poor and down-trodden alienor would, thereafter, not be in a position to get back his lands. I may submit that in this amendment four safeguards have been provided against such trickeries. In the first place the transferee must be bona fide and he must prove that at the time of taking over the lands he did not know and with ordinary prudence could not know that the seller possessed it under a benami. Secondly, he must be a bona fide transferee before the 20th June, 1938. Thirdly, he must be in occupation of that land. Fourthly, it has been contended that it is just possible that a certain transferee may say that his forefathers made many improvements on the land, and, therefore, he should be given compensation. He cannot have any compensation on that score under the amendment. He shall be entitled to compensation only for the improvements which he himself had effected on the land in his possession.

It has further been contended that the amendment may be abused and compensation claimed for every improvement that has been made on the lands. The bona fide transferee may claim compensation even for ordinary acts necessary in husbandry such as manures, drainage, etc. That also has been sufficiently safeguarded in the amendment. I would like to make it clear that only such improvements which fall under section 4 of the Punjab Tenancy Act can be compensated for. A perusal of section 4 (19) of the Tenancy Act will show that the improvements must be sustable, and in accordance with the conditions on which the land is held, and must permanently increase the value of the land. If all these conditions are satisfied then the holder of such lands shall be entitled to compensation.

Further it has been contended that a person may have been holding benami lands say, for a period of 20, 40, or 50 years, and if he made any improvements he got benefit thereof. As such if he goes to a deputy commissioner for compensation, the deputy commissioner accepting his contention may fix a very high compensation which the alienor is not able to pay and which does not take into account the benefits enjoyed by the transferee. I may submit that the amendment specifically provides that the amount of compensation shall in no case exceed the amount of consideration for the original transaction. Moreover, under this amendment Government is going to frame rules regarding principles under which such compensation shall be assessed by a deputy commissioner. And we may rest assured that the Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram while framing such principles will take all past benefits into consideration and will see that no one gets more from the poor zamindar than what he absolutely deserves.

This is the object of my amendment. I once more say that if the bona fide transferee can fulfil all these conditions then he deserves to get compensation due and it is, in the long view of the case, necessary in the interests of the zamindars themselves that this amendment be adopted.

That at the end of 13-A (2), the following proviso be added :—

“ Provided that the Deputy Commissioner may, in ordering the ejection of a person who is a bona fide transferee before the 30th June, 1938, and is in occupation of such land, allow to any such person, other than the original transferee, compensation for improvements (as defined in section 4 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887), effected by him while in occupation, up to a sum not exceeding in value the consideration for the original transaction. Such compensation shall be assessed by the Deputy Commissioner on such principles, as may be prescribed; and shall be deposited by the alienor, and paid to the persons so ejected, in such manner as may be prescribed.”

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): Sir, I fully appreciate the spirit behind the amendment moved by my honourable friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood. It appears to me that the amendment is calculated to throw the whole matter into great confusion and really to defeat the very purpose for which section 18-A of the present Bill is being enacted. As I understand section 18-A, the legislature has clearly laid down that a benami transaction shall be void for all purposes and that the real owner, the alienor, shall be entitled to get back his property without any obligation to pay any moneys in respect of that benami transaction. If that is so, all benami transactions stand completely prohibited and in future a person purchasing benami is to be penalised by being deprived of the moneys he has passed and also of the land that he has tried to secure. This being so, I fail to understand how any transferee can be called or considered a bona fide transferee under a transaction of this kind. Let me examine the position further. It is, I believe, either the beneficial owner or the nominal owner who would be transferring the property.

If it is the secret or beneficial owner who is transferring the property, then obviously a transfer from him cannot be a bona fide transfer. A bona fide transferee in the eyes of the law is a transferee, who has observed due care and caution in a transaction between a member of an agricultural tribe and a person who is not a member of an agricultural tribe. People are presumed to know the law. Therefore, whoever the so-called bona fide transferee may be, he must be presumed to know the law that a benami transaction is void for all purposes and that as a secret owner has neither the deed in his name nor any kind of interest under the law in the property, the transaction can never be bona fide. I fail to see how any person can take up or assume to himself the role of a bona fide transferee. I should like to have from my learned friend an instance in which any case of a bona fide transfer can really arise.

Now, it may be said that although the secret owner is not the legal owner of the land transferred by a member of an agricultural tribe ostensibly in favour of another nominal member of an agricultural tribe and a transfer by him can never be bona fide, yet the transfer may be from the member of the agricultural tribe who is ostensibly the alienee. In the case of such a transfer by the nominal alienee even the plea of bona fide cannot arise, because ex-necessitate the possession is of the secret owner and possession is notice to the whole world. I submit that no court of law will hold that the transaction is of the nature of a bona fide transaction. To sum up therefore if the transfer is by the secret owner himself, there cannot be any question of the transfer being a bona fide one, because the secret owner is not supported by a title deed; further the transferee from the secret owner must know that section 13 says that a benami transaction is void for all purposes. If the transfer is from the nominal transferee and if the Deputy Commissioner holds the transaction to be a benami transaction, it follows that the nominal holder or the nominal alienee has no sort of beneficiary interest in the property and therefore cannot pass on any beneficiary interest in that property. Therefore, my respectful submission is that I cannot conceive of a bona fide transferee in the circumstances. So, if this amendment is allowed to remain as a substantive provision in this measure, the result will be that any number of complications will be introduced and the alienor who is really entitled to the property and who under section 13-A is entitled to get back that property without paying a single pie to the secret owner will be compelled to pay a certain amount which may be beyond his capacity to pay and he may never get back his land. Therefore, my respectful submission is that this amendment is misconceived, and I, for my part, am not in a position to see how a bona fide transferee can ever exist in a situation of the kind we are contemplating.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker left the Chair and it was occupied by the Deputy Speaker.)

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): The amendment moved by my friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, is an instance of a very tardy justice, very flimsy justice and a very inconsequential and insignificant justice. But it seems to me that the Malik Sahib has not really fully comprehended the scope of this amendment. I do not blame him for this, because if I am not mistaken, he was absent during the discussion on the various clauses of the Bill. His difficulty is that there cannot be any bona fide transfer in such a case; and therefore no transferee is entitled to any compensation whatsoever for the improvements which he might have made to the land after it had passed into his possession. He says, if the transfer is from the beneficiary whom he calls the benamidar, there really cannot be any transfer, because he is not in possession of the land and he cannot therefore transfer it. (Interruption). The title deed is not in his name and the possession is not with him. If he is a nominal alienee who transfers, it is a fraud on the beneficiary and also on the alienee and therefore no question of bona fide transfer arises. But the honourable member assumes that every one who purchases from the nominal alienee knows that it is a benami transaction. But how can a person be presumed to know that it is a benami transaction? We of course are aware of the proposition, a commonplace and well-known proposition, of law, that every one is presumed to know the law. We also know the maxim  caveat emptor which means that a purchaser should act with due care and caution. In the present case, if a title deed is shown to a prospective purchaser, he should go to the registry office and see that there has been no subsequent transfer after the land passed into the hands of the transferor. He should also have the title deed examined by a lawyer and see that it does not suffer from any defect, that there is no trace of fraud on the face of it. But supposing the nominal alienee has entered into a conspiracy with the beneficiary and also with the alienor and he has already satisfied by a sale of a part of the land all the claims that the beneficiary originally had against the alienor, then it means that the beneficiary has no interest in the land and the alienor has no interest because he has already parted with it, so that the nominal alienee is to all intents and purposes the sole proprietor of that land. When a person who is not aware of this benami transaction which may have taken place 90 years ago comes to buy the land the nominal alienor shows him the title deed. He will say, this is my title deed, you can ask any one in the village if he has any claim to that land. The purchaser goes to the village and asks every one and nobody says that he has any claim. Then he goes and searches the registry office and finds that there is no subsequent transfer. Naturally then he buys the land. He becomes a bona fide purchaser.

Again in order to further satisfy my honourable friend I would refer him to section 48 of the Transfer of Property Act where such cases are dealt with in the proviso at the end of that section. I happen to have the draft of an amendment which I moved yesterday. I can read those words for the benefit of my honourable friend, because my amendment barring a few words was exactly the same as is contained in the proviso to section 48 and, it is this—

Nothing in this section shall impair the rights of transferees in good faith for consideration without notice that the transaction in consequence of which the original transferee held was benami.

These are mutatis mutandis the words of the statute and that section deals with fraudulent transfers, that is cases where the original transfers were fraudulent as is being assumed in this case. The whole Bill is now practically finished. Therefore, no question of my previous position with respect to this or that arises at this stage. I am only discussing this amendment. I have said that this amendment is a very poor one, a very flimsy and insignificant one, but still without this provision the innocent man who is in possession will be robbed of his property—I used the word ‘robbed’ deliberately—by people who will take advantage of this law when it is passed. He will at least get something:—

jande chor di langoti hi sahi.

“I had spent some money on improvements, I have not got back the original consideration which I paid, but at least I have got back a few rupees which I spent on the improvement of the land.” Therefore there is absolutely nothing wrong in accepting this amendment, though it is a very poor one and a very insignificant one. Since it is a step in the right direction, however paltry and small it may be, I would support it.

Sardar Partab Singh (Amritsar South, Sikh, Rural), (Urdu): Sir, I am pleased to find Honourable the Premier and Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram on their seats but I am equally displeased as my learned friend Pir Akbar Ali has gone out just now.

My submission is that a hundred and one arguments were advanced yesterday for proving that benami transactions were always fraudulent and poor. But now when some members of the party are involved in it or strictly speaking when now their interests are involved in it every argument is now being razed to the ground. (Cheers). How ridiculous it seems! There is a well-known saying in Punjabi and I think it is applicable to our Unionist Government:—

” نالے بھوکدے نین تے فالے دھڑکدے نین “

(Laughter).

Somebody asked “Why are you restive?” Reply came “Because I am a young bullock”. “Then it was asked “Why do you fear?” Reply came “Because after all I am a calf.” (Laughter). I would suggest to the Government to maintain the same policy which was indicated at the time of passing a legislation. The policy of the Government once indicated should never alter. May I ask the Government, which was restive like a young bullock yesterday, how is it that it now fears from some individual members whose interest is likely to be adversely affected by the measure if adopted? Now the Government is puzzled altogether and is trying to get out of the net set by itself. When it has been declared by the Government itself that all benami transactions are fraudulent, then what is the use of contradicting its own words by specifying and particularising some benamis from other benamis. Let the roller of justice be at work and let all the benami transactions be wiped away like anything. I would like to ask the Honourable Minister, Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram, in his own words, why is he now indulging himself in the so-called “Panche-ke-Maar”? (Cheers). Does not our Government know that it is most essential for a legislature to maintain its policy? It does not behove our Government that when it has set other people's houses on fire, it should slip away with its big babes hugged to its bosom. Let all burn indiscriminately. There should not be any distinction at all. There is no use running away now with the tail between the legs as our Honourable Minister Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram has said this morning. I would like to remind Chaudhri Sir

[S. Partab Singh.]

Chhotu Ram that as some honourable members opposed the benami transactions, now some honourable members were in favour of them. Similarly Aman Ullah Khan was driven out and Bacha Saqa took his place. (Cheers). How strange it is. When statements given by Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan and the principles of the Government prescribe that the benami transactions cannot be honest in any way and this sale within sale is always fraudulent and baseless, why is the Government now contradicting its statement in so crooked a way? Let all of us be rugged in this rugga. We do not mind.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): (Urdu) Sir, it is a pity that my learned friend Sardar Partab Singh who has the privilege of representing one of the constituencies of my district, viz., Amritsar, has wrongly interpreted my amendment. Had my learned friend given serious thought to this amendment and tried to understand its import he would have realised that a party working under the leadership of Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan could never move an amendment in the name of Maqbool Mahmood against the interests of the zamindars in a Bill moved by my honourable friend Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram.

May I draw the attention of my learned friend to the fact that under section 4 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, no "Kothi" can be treated as an improvement and therefore it is outside the scope of my amendment. Secondly, my learned friend has asked in very high flown language as to where the definition of dishonest benamidar has gone now? If my friend had taken the trouble of reading my amendment more carefully, he would have appreciated that under this amendment no compensation can be given to anybody who had conspired against the provisions of the Land Alienation Act. As such the benamidar and the fraudulent beneficiary can get nothing under my amendment. A person who has spent lacs on the improvement of the land would not be able to get a penny as compensation if he is guilty of infringing the provisions of the Land Alienation Act and is not a bona fide transferee. I hope that my honourable friend Sardar Partab Singh is now satisfied and that he would regret having objected to my amendment. I may also submit, Sir, that we want to give expression to our practical sympathy for honest bona fide people and my amendment aims at giving a practical proof of it. I would again ask my honourable friend Sardar Partab Singh whether a benamidar would get even a penny under my amendment. If so, I would be ready to withdraw it. May I suggest it to him to read my amendment again? There are the words "bona fide transferee" in my amendment, which my honourable friend appears to have missed.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: May I suggest to the mover of this amendment if he would like to add the words 'for consideration' after the words 'bona fide transferee?' It is another safeguard.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): I am prepared to accept the addition.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Question is—

That after the words 'bona fide transferee' the words 'for consideration' be added.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Question is—

That the following proviso be added at the end of 13-A (2)—

Provided that the Deputy Commissioner may, in ordering the ejection of a person who is a bona fide transferee for consideration before the 20th June, 1938, and is in occupation of such land, allow to any such person, other than the original transferee, compensation for improvements (as defined in section 4 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887), effected by him while in occupation, up to a sum not exceeding in value the consideration for the original transaction. Such compensation shall be assessed by the Deputy Commissioner on such principles as may be prescribed; and shall be deposited by the alienor, and paid to the persons so ejected, in such manner as may be prescribed.

The motion was carried.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : I beg to move—

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Your amendment is out of order.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : The amendment which has just now been adopted by the House is perfectly similar to this amendment with the only difference that I have added the word "beneficiary". Otherwise the spirit of this amendment is the same as that which has just been adopted. The object of this amendment is that so far as provisions of section 13-A are concerned they should be in relation to the interests of the scheduled classes such that compensation should be given to those who are bona fide beneficiaries or transferees. As a matter of fact the idea underlying the proviso is to extend the scope of the enactment to a certain section. In this case by introducing this amendment I want to extend the scope of section 13-A to the extent that so far as bona fide transferees or beneficiaries belonging to the Harijan classes are concerned they should be given compensation to the extent of the total amount which they have paid for the property they have purchased or the original amount plus five per cent. interest whichever is less. I fail to understand how this amendment is being ruled out of order when a similar amendment has just been adopted by this House. With these words I request that you will kindly reconsider the ruling you have given without hearing me.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : This is clearly out of order. In this amendment the original transferee and the beneficiary also are included and therefore it is for this reason that this amendment is out of order, because previously the House has passed a certain provision which makes the original transaction absolutely void.

The question is—

That 13-A (2) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Khan Bahadur Chaudhri Riasat Ali : I move—

That in last line of 13-A (3), for the word and figure "Rule 98" the words and figures "Rules 97 and 98" be substituted.

This is a provision for getting the possession of property by a decree-holder or a purchaser. In Rule 98 of the Civil Procedure Code the punishment for resistance or obstruction to possession is provided. My amendment is that Rule 97 be added because in Rule 97 the procedure is laid down for which the punishment is prescribed in Rule 98 of the Civil Procedure Code. Unless we make a provision for the procedure, it will be impossible to inflict that punishment. Hence this amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Question is—

That in last line of 13-A (3), for the word and figure "Rule 98" the words and figures "Rules 97 and 98" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.

(Voices : It is now 7 o'clock.)

Mr. Speaker : Should we not finish consideration of the Bill ?

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : If we are able to dispose of the amendments, there is the right to speak on the Bill. Some of the honourable members might take a good deal of time in discussing the Bill. I would, therefore, request you to adjourn at 7 o'clock.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of order. The point of order is that it was announced by you yesterday that the House would sit from 2 P.M. to 7 P.M. to-day. It is now 7 o'clock and according to your yesterday's decision, which was approved by the House, i.e., by the Leader of the House and the Leader of the Opposition, the House must adjourn at 7 o'clock. According to parliamentary practice, if I am not mistaken, if the time of sitting is to be extended, a formal motion is to be moved immediately after questions and it is very unfair to [people who have gone away to extend the time in their absence because they might have left thinking that the proceedings of the House would come to an end at 7 o'clock. I have put this before you and you can give your decision.

7 P.M.

The question of fixation of hours of the Assembly for the remaining days was discussed and it was agreed by the House that it should sit from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m., on all days of the week except Saturday which should be a free day.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division (General Rural)) : Sir, I beg to move—

That at the end of 13-A (1) the following proviso be added :—

"Provided that no such transaction shall be treated as void, if no application is made for declaring it as such to the Collector, or if no action is taken by the Collector himself within six months of the transfer or within six months of the enforcement of the Act, whichever period is later."

Mr. Speaker : May I know whether this amendment is to clause 13-A (1) or 13-A (2) ?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It may be treated as an amendment to either. It will read equally well. As a matter of fact, it is a proviso to the whole clause.

Mr. Speaker : So, the honourable member wants to move an amendment at this stage to clause 13-A (1), while the House has disposed of even clause 13-A (2).

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, when the Deputy Speaker was in the Chair, I got up and wanted to move my amendment but he called other gentlemen. I got up again in time and said that my amendments were there, but he did not allow me to move them. There are three amendments standing in my name. So, I want to move this amendment now.

Mr. Speaker : I am afraid I cannot go against rules.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Clause 13-A (3) as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General Rural) : I beg to move—

That in clause 13-B, lines 2-4, the words "whether in original or on revision by a Deputy Commissioner" be deleted.

The reason is obvious because a Deputy Commissioner has no power of revision and this clause contains an obvious error.

Mr. Speaker : I think the honourable member is right. The word "revision" is not used throughout the whole Bill.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Such is the result of a legislation which is made in haste. If I had not moved this amendment, this would have been a patent example of bad drafting and, therefore, I respectfully submit that the words "whether in original or on revision by a Deputy Commissioner" be deleted.

Mr. Speaker : In sub-clause (3) of section 4, the word "review" is used and nowhere else.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The word "revision" is a well-known technical term under the law and everybody knows that a poor Deputy Commissioner has no power of revision in these cases. Therefore, I move that the words "whether in original or on revision by a Deputy Commissioner" be deleted. That is my amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in 13-B, lines 2-4, the words "whether in original or on revision by a Deputy Commissioner" be deleted.

Premier : Sir, I would suggest that the word "revision" be deleted, and it should be replaced by the word "review".

Mr. Speaker : The amendment proposed by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, is—

That in 13-B, lines 2 to 4, the words "whether in original or on revision by a Deputy Commissioner" be deleted.

To this a further amendment has been proposed to substitute the word 'review' for the word 'revision'. The question is that that amendment be made—

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in 13-B, lines 2 to 4, the words "whether in original or on revision by a Deputy Commissioner" be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : I beg to move—

That sub-clause (a) of 13-B be omitted.

[Munshi Hari Lal.]

My point is that the Deputy Commissioner should not have power to hear appeals. Under the parent Act, the Alienation of Land Act, it is the Deputy Commissioner who exercises the powers of original jurisdiction and an appeal against his order lies only to the Commissioner. The Standing Order of the Financial Commissioner also clearly says that no officer below the rank of a Deputy Commissioner is to be invested with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner. It is true that under section 23 powers are conferred upon local Government to invest certain subordinate officers with powers of Deputy Commissioner. But as a matter of fact from the date this Act was passed up till now, during all these 38 years, the Government has not granted powers to any officer other than a Deputy Commissioner but has clearly laid down that no officer below the rank of a Deputy Commissioner shall ever be vested with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner under this Act. Therefore no appeal lies to the Deputy Commissioner. An appeal lies from the Deputy Commissioner to the Commissioner. But the present clause gives the power to the Deputy Commissioner to hear appeals.

Premier : I think I can save the time of the honourable member and also of the House by saying that I am prepared to accept the amendment.

Munshi Hari Lal : Thank you.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (a) of 13-B be omitted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The next amendment which is a consequential amendment reads :—

That at the end of sub-clause (b) of 13-B, the words ' or Assistant Collector of the first grade specially appointed ' be added.

Premier : I do not think that this consequential amendment is necessary, because Deputy Commissioner has been defined to include the officer referred to in this amendment.

Malik Barkat Ali : Then the proviso also will have to go.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the proviso to 13-B be omitted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That 13-B as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I beg to move—

That the following new clause be added :—

" 13. (c) The provisions of section 20 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall not apply to the proceedings taken under the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land (II) Act."

Mr. Speaker : This amendment as worded is meaningless and therefore out of order.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : No, Sir. I shall presently show how it is not meaningless and not out of order. Section 20 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act lays down that in any proceedings before a Collector under the Act no legal practitioner shall appear. Now, what I wish to point out is that in view of the fact that questions relating to valuable and large properties and status are to be decided by the Deputy Commissioner, it is necessary that any person who wishes to be represented before the Deputy Commissioner by a better person than himself should have the right of engaging a legal practitioner. (Interruption.) Since a certain amount of dissent is being expressed, let me relate to the House my experience of these proceedings under the Land Alienation Act.

Mr. Speaker : The House understands what the honourable member means.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I will explain my position.

Mr. Speaker : Everybody understands the honourable member's point.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Then, am I to understand that my amendment is accepted ?

Mr. Speaker : That does not follow.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Then I shall explain in a few sentences what I have to say. Unfortunately matters of such great importance as this are being taken up at the fag end of the day, and are attempted to be rushed through, when everyone is reluctant to apply his mind to the subject under discussion. It is most unfortunate that this should have been so, but I must perform my duty.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member's point can be expressed in one sentence. He wants that in all proceedings under this Act lawyers may be allowed to appear.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Yes, and I wish to point out that those members who do not belong to the legal fraternity and who are not conversant with the conditions in courts will be put to great inconvenience if lawyers are not permitted to be engaged by them. They have to run first to the Collector, then to the Commissioner and again to the Financial Commissioner. I say it from my personal experience, that if lawyers are not permitted to be engaged, it tends to encourage corruption. I know personally that persons as well placed in life as any member of this House, invariably go to the reader of the Collector, the reader of the Commissioner and the reader of the Financial Commissioners. You all know this and yet you, as members of this legislature, are going to allow this nefarious practice to be multiplied hundredfold ? Should we open a straight door for a person to make his representation to the Collector or should we allow him to reach the Collector through these subterranean channels ? Do not the members of the Government know that this is being done every day ? Therefore is it not very necessary that in such matters some assistance should be afforded ? Again cases of this type which relate to such property usually arise on the application by an enemy who is an influential person and the alienee in most of these cases will be a poor unimportant person who has been used as a cat's paw by the real beneficiary. A man like that will not be able to explain his case.

Præsid : On a point of order. May I draw your attention to the wording of the amendment itself ? It says : "The provisions of section 20 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall not apply to the proceedings taken under the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land (II) Act". The House has already decided that provisions of sections 19, 20 and 21 shall apply—vide clause 8 (8) of the Bill.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I do not think that affects this provision. I have pointed out the difficulty under which the litigant suffers. He needs the help of a lawyer. How is the character of this legislation going to be altered or modified by giving permission to lawyers to appear before these officers? Is it intended that everything should be done in andhera (darkness) and that there should be no publicity. Further the all knowing Collectors may perhaps decide these matters without the assistance of a lawyer, but how is the Commissioner to decide this matter in appeal without such assistance. Is it the intention that the presence of lawyers would lead to disclosure of some ugly facts? Otherwise I cannot possibly understand why the Government should at all oppose a simple matter like this which does not harm anybody.

That the following new clause be added :—

- " 13. (c) The provisions of section 20 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall not apply to the proceedings taken under the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land (II) Act.

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) : May I appeal to the honourable Premier to realise the very important character of the amendment that has been moved by my honourable friend, Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri. I can very well understand that in the days of the original Land Alienation Act of 1900, the bureaucracy feared the lawyer and I believe it was this ingrained fear of the lawyer in their minds that was really responsible for the exclusion of lawyers from appearing in cases under the original Alienation of Land Act. But in this Amending Land Alienation Act, some very important questions are going to be decided by the Deputy Commissioners and my own experience is this: It is the lawyer who really helps the poor zamindar in a situation of this kind. If the lawyer does not appear, it is really the reader of the court who turns tables and twists things. It is only when the lawyer is on the stage that the reader becomes helpless, the intrigue of the money-lender becomes ineffectual and the point of view of the poor zamindar is explained in full to the busy Deputy Commissioner, to the busy Commissioner and to the busy Financial Commissioners. I personally feel that the questions that are now going to be decided by these officers are of a very important character and that justice will be more defeated than vindicated if lawyers are excluded. I therefore appeal to the Honourable Premier to come to the rescue of the poor man for whom this Bill is meant, because if the pleader does not advocate and does not represent the case of the poor zamindar in all its fulness, nobody else is going to do so.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : In deference to your wishes I will not say more than three sentences. The first is that if we accept this amendment it would be contrary to the spirit of the Land Alienation Act. The second is, the argument that now we will have very important transactions which will have to be dealt with by Deputy Commissioners, Commissioners and Financial Commissioners does not hold good, because the Deputy Commissioner even now decides under the Land Alienation Act cases in which land worth lakhs of rupees is involved and when an application is made for transfer and sanctioned under section 9, property worth lakhs and lakhs is involved and yet the Deputy Commissioner does so without the help of the lawyers. The third point is that so far as the poor zamindar is concerned, perhaps my honourable friend is more solicitous of his interest and that might be so; but I think it will be very unjust here to give that advantage to the poor zamindar as we want to keep them both on the same level, a zamindar, and a non-zamindar, and both treated alike.

That the following new clause be added :—

“13. (c) The provisions of section 20 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall not apply to the proceedings taken under the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land (II) Act.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 13 (c) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South Western Towns, General, Urban) : I move—

That part (a) of 13-D be deleted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikandar-Hyat Khan) : I accept the amendment.

The motion was carried.

Khan Bahadur Chandhri Riasat Ali (Hafizabad, Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir I beg to move—

“That in line 12 of 13-D for the word and figure ‘Section 12’ the words and figures ‘Sections 5 and 12’ be inserted.”

The only reason for this is that section 12 gives time for copies and section 5 gives extension of time for unforeseen reasons.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

“That in line 12 of 13-D for the word and figure ‘Section 12’, the words and figures ‘Sections 5 and 12’ be inserted.”

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

“That 13-D as amended stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

“That clause 5 as amended stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was carried.

Preamble.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That the preamble be the preamble of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 1.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : May I just ask one thing? What is meant by saying Second Amendment. If I am not mistaken the Alienation of Land Act has been amended several times before. This is probably the fourth amendment. What then is the meaning of saying Second Amendment.

Premier : Second Amendment of this year.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : I direct, under Standing Order 52 (2), that the Bill as amended by the Assembly be examined by a drafting committee consisting of the following members with orders to report to the House by to-morrow what amendments of a formal or consequential character should be made in the Bill as a matter of drafting :—

- (1) Deputy Speaker ;
- (2) Member in charge, and
- (3) Advocate-General.

The Assembly then adjourned till 2-30 p.m. on Friday, 8th July, 1938.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Parliamentary Secretary (Sardar Bahadur Sardar Ujjal Singh) : Government have seen the communication referred to and are making enquiries.

GRIEVANCES OF SIMLA LABOURERS.

*3159. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Development be pleased to state whether the Deputy Commissioner, Simla, has received a representation signed by Rajkumari Amrit Kaur and forty other ladies on the subject of the grievances of Simla labourers including rickshaw coolies, load-carriers and others; if so, the substance of the representation and action taken or proposed to be taken by the Government in the matter?

The Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram : Deputy Commissioner, Simla, received a deputation of about twenty ladies led by Rajkumari Amrit Kaur. Copy of letter, dated June, 1938, from Rajkumari Amrit Kaur, All-India Women's Conference, Simla, to the Deputy Commissioner, Simla, and of a note recorded by the Deputy Commissioner as President of the Municipal Committee, showing the action taken on various points raised in the letter, are laid on the table of the House.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Has the Government taken decision on the recommendation of the Deputy Commissioner or is that sufficient?

Minister : So far as I am concerned, I have not received those papers. Whether the Honourable Minister in charge of Education has received copies of the letters addressed by Rajkumari Amrit Kaur and the Deputy Commissioner's letter, I do not know.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : May I know from the Honourable Minister of Public Works or from the Honourable Minister of Development whether they are aware of the fact that as much as 50 per cent. of the charges paid to the rickshaw coolies are taken away by the chaudhris and this causes a great hardship to the rickshaw coolies? Has it ever occurred to the Honourable Ministers or has their attention been drawn to the fact that it calls for their early interference?

Minister: I have heard certain complaints but no precise information has been received by me.

Lala Deshbandha Gupta: Will the Honourable Minister of Development please enquire into the matter and ask for the rules made by the Municipal Committee on the subject and see that justice is done to these poor people?

Minister: If my honourable friend addresses another communication to the Honourable Minister in charge of Local Self-Government, I am sure it will be looked into.

Sardar Kapoor Singh: Is the Government prepared to grant some aid for the betterment of the rickshaw coolies?

Mr. Speaker: What is the question?

Sardar Kapoor Singh: Is the Government prepared to grant aid for ameliorating the condition of rickshaw coolies?

Mr. Speaker: Disallowed.

Copy of letter, dated June, 1938, from Rajkumari Amrit Kaur, All-India Women's Conference, Simla, to the Deputy Commissioner, Simla.

There are certain matters connected with improved standards of life for the poor in general, for Harijans, Rickshaw pullers, load carriers and labourers as well as certain amenities for women and girls in Simla in which we as members of an association for Women are deeply interested. We are aware that the Municipality has, of late, been roused as never before to a sense of its responsibility for the health, comfort and general welfare of the poor committed to its charge and has done something tangible towards the achievement of the desired goal. We are grateful for what has been done but inasmuch as it cannot be denied that much still remains to be done we venture to bring to your notice the urgency of looking into the following schemes:—

- (1) The improvement or rebuilding, where necessary, of the Harijan quarters and the desirability of supplying all Harijans in municipal employ with waterproofs in the rains and warm clothing for the winter. We are happy to understand that the questions of giving them certain hours off duty every week and of sick leave as also of promoting them (Harijans themselves) to positions of trust whenever they are worthy thereof are already receiving the favourable consideration of your Committee.
- (2) (a) The immediate necessity of providing adequate housing accommodation for rickshaw pullers. The overcrowding of these men in small rooms with poor or no ventilation is a matter which can no longer be ignored. Even the existing Rickshaw sheds have no electric lights yet. We would far rather see all these provided with bulbs than the illumination which the general public enjoy daily on the Mall.
- (b) The necessity for strict rules that more than one person shall not ride at the same time in a rickshaw.
- (c) The feasibility of providing a rule that the rickshaw pullers shall not cover more than a fixed mileage daily.
- (d) The necessity of providing a dispensary and doctor for the care and protection of these persons who are very liable to severe chills as well as heart strain.
- (3) (a) The necessity—again immediate—of proper housing accommodation for the load carriers and labourers. The attention of your predecessor was drawn last year to some wholly uninhabitable quarters in which a number of these poor fellow-men and women had to live. While those particular quarters were, we believe, raised to the ground, there are many others that need to be similarly dealt with and new ones substituted.

[Minister for Development.]

- (5) The desirability of limiting the amount in weight of loads carried by the load carriers and of fixing a living minimum wage for them for this work so that they may not be sorely tempted—for the sake of earning more—to carry more than is physically possible for them without detriment to their bodily health. In this connection could not some rules be laid down for the punishment not only of those labourers who offend but also of those who encourage them to do so ?
- (c) We have noticed that load carriers are often forced to take longer and steeper routes because they are banned from coming on to the main roads. Could this rule be mitigated at least during certain periods of the day when they might not interfere with general traffic, e.g., the mule track from the Sanjauli Road which necessitates a big climb seemingly unnecessary, for these over-burdened men ?
- (4) (a) The urgent necessity also of declaring unfit for human habitation all such dwellings in various parts of the town of Simla where neither light nor air nor sunshine penetrates and where human beings are condemned to live because nothing better is available to them. In this matter we feel that it will be impossible for the municipality either to frame rules or enforce them until they have set their own house in order by making all municipal quarters habitable in the first instance. The urgency of realising their responsibility in this regard is of grave importance.
- (5) The encroachments on drains in the bazar makes it impossible for the Harijans employed for this purpose to clean the same in a proper manner. Steps should be taken to secure the removal of the existing encroachments where necessary and to ensure that no new ones are permitted. We realise the difficulty that will probably be encountered in the matter of securing the co-operation of the shopkeepers and others responsible for the encroachments. We have been given to understand that sometimes the Harijans are even bribed not to clean the drains. Educative propaganda on the part of the Municipal Commissioner would be of value to the Health Officer and his staff who are often very unpopular people simply because they try to perform their duty properly.
- (6) (a) The necessity of lavatories for women and children along the main roads. There are some for men but none exist anywhere so far as we are aware, for women.
- (b) The need of a waiting room with lavatory attached for women at the motor stand where women have often to wait for long periods.
- (c) The desirability of a separate room for women at the T. B. Dispensary. This disease exists more among women and children than among men and in particular among pardah women. These will not report themselves at the dispensary unless there are proper arrangements for them. We welcome the appointment of a Lady Health Visitor for T. B. patients.
- (7) (a) There are certain schools where the children need small desks in which they could put their slates and exercise books when writing. At the moment they stoop badly over their work and wrong postures are, as you know, detrimental to their health.
- (b) We would also like to draw your attention again to those schools, whether for boys or girls, where the school rooms have not enough light and ventilation.

We are very grateful to the municipality for the park for women and children. It continues to be a source of pleasure and benefit to hundreds of our poor sisters.

We are glad to learn that you, Sir, are taking a personal interest in carrying out schemes for improvements in Simla. While welcoming all such anywhere we are definitely of opinion that the first charge on any municipality should be the health and welfare of the poor in its area.

We trust the matters that we have brought to your notice to-day will receive not only your and your committee's sympathetic consideration but also your speedy and active co-operation.

I received a deputation of about 20 ladies led by Rajkumari Anant Kaur. The various points mentioned in the memorandum of the deputationists were discussed. I will set forth briefly how each point in the memorandum was dealt with—

- (1) It was pointed out to the deputationists that the questions of providing suitable dwellings for the municipal menial staff, rickshaw coolies and job porters were already being seriously considered by the Municipal Committee. A scheme was under preparation and it was the intention of the Municipal Committee to execute the scheme in the next few years. It was also pointed out that the question of supplying warm clothing to the sweepers was receiving the consideration of the Medical Officer of Health. It was not considered practicable to supply water proofs free of any charge, but if there was a serious demand the municipality would take up the question of buying water proofs at wholesale rates and supply them at cost price.

- (2) (a) It was explained to the members that new rickshaw sheds were being provided with electric lights. As there was a possibility of a certain number of existing rickshaw sheds being shifted from their present sites, there was no point in incurring further expenditure on electrifying them.
- (b) This rule was already being enforced quite strictly.
- (c) The impracticability of carrying out this suggestion was admitted by the deputationists.
- (d) It was pointed out to the members that the Municipal Committee was already spending a very high percentage of its income on medical relief and that it was not possible to incur any further expenditure for this purpose unless Government agreed to take over the management of the Ripon Hospital.
- (3) (a) This has been dealt with in (1) above.
- (b) I promised to the deputationists that the Municipality would look into this question. I believe the Committee has already gone into this question and there are some papers about it. I should like the Secretary to have a précis of the case made and put up to me.
- (c) The deputationists were satisfied with the new traffic rules which have removed practically all the grievances of the load carriers.
- (4) (a) It was pointed out that until the Committee built their own decent quarters for their menial staff it was not possible to condemn the present unsatisfactory dwellings in the town which are certainly better than no dwellings at all.
- (5) The deputationists were told that a sub-committee for this purpose has already been appointed by the Municipal Committee and that proper action was being taken.
- (6) (a) The Municipal Committee had already decided to open two more lavatories for women.
- (b) This had already been done.
- (c) There being no T. B. Dispensary the question of providing separate accommodation for women did not arise. T. B. centre has been shifted to the Ripon Hospital where there are separate arrangements for the examination of women.
- (7) (a) I promised that this will be considered by the Municipal Committee. I shall like an estimate prepared of —
- (1) combined benches and desks of the usual style,
  - (2) tables only to be put in front of children sitting on the floor
- for all our primary schools.
- The E. B. B. should report on this.
- (b) I told the members to point out any specific buildings which need attention in this respect.

PETITION FROM THE ZAMINDARS OF VILLAGE AMIN SHAB.

*3169. Dr. Sant Ram Seth : Will the Honourable Revenue Minister be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the investigation promised in answer to starred question No. 900,<sup>1</sup> (a) put by me on 13th January, 1938, has since been completed?
- (b) If so, the result thereof?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : Yes. Investigation has been completed and conversion of the footbridge into a cart bridge has also been approved.

S. PAL SINGH, GAUGE READER.

*3161. Dr. Sant Ram Seth : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state what settlement, if any, has been arrived at with the Accountant-General, Punjab, regarding the case of S. Pal Singh, gauge reader, referred to at item (4) of the statement appended to the answer to my unstarred question No. 241<sup>1</sup>, asked on 17th January, 1938?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : A gratuity of Rs. 75, equivalent to six months' pay has since been sanctioned to Pal Singh, gauge reader.

REPRESENTATION BY S. DATAR SINGH AND OTHERS OF VILLAGES
BHIKHIWIND AND OTHERS IN LAHORE DISTRICT.

*3162. Dr. Sant Ram Seth : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether S. Datar Singh and other cultivators of villages Bhikhiwind Hathar, Kalanjar, Sheikhpura, Tehsil Kasur, District Lahore, sent a representation to the Honourable Financial Commissioner, Punjab, Lahore, under a registered cover on the 12th April, 1938, which was received by him on the 14th or 15th April, 1938, putting their grievances regarding the destruction of their kharif harvest crops every year on account of the flood caused by the Hussainiwala Head Works and the bund constructed by the canal authorities ;
- (b) whether S. Datar Singh and others of village Bhikhiwind Hathar, tahsil Kasur, also presented an application before the Sub-Divisional Officer, Kasur on 14th June, 1938, therein claiming compensation on account of the damages done to the standing crops.
- (c) If the answer to (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, will he be pleased to lay on the table of the House the original application and state whether any enquiry was made by the Government, if so with what result ;
- (d) what steps the Government proposes to take to redress the grievances of the cultivators ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) and (b) Many representations have been received addressed to various Government officials.

(c) A claim for compensation for damage done to Bhikhiwind and other villages by flooding alleged to be due to the construction of Ferozapore Headworks was made in 1927.

Investigation proved flooding to be due to a temporary regulator which prevented the escape of sufficient flood water down the Katora Canal, but was not due to the Canal Headworks at Ferozepore. Compensation of Rs. 1,968 was paid for houses and kharif crops destroyed in 4 villages and the temporary regulator was dismantled and areas likely to be affected by the Canal Headworks at Ferozepore were acquired by Government.

In 1930 a suit was threatened by S. Datar Singh and others on the ground that they had been insufficiently compensated for losses sustained in 1927 and that nothing had been paid to them for damage done by flooding in 1928-29.

Suits were also threatened in 1933 and 1934 and a suit instituted in December, 1935, for compensation of Rs. 800 for damages and Rs. 127-8-0 for destruction of crops and for perpetual injunction for demolition of the Bund at Hussiniwala.

The suit was dismissed by the Sub-Judge, Lahore, on the grounds—

- (i) that no damage to immoveable property had been proved and that damage to Kharif crops amounted to Rs. 50, only.
- (ii) that the bund in connection with the Ferozepore Headworks was constructed by the Irrigation Department in the discharge of its public duty with which the Court cannot interfere.
- (iii) the claims were time-barred.

Datar Singh and others have appealed and the case is sub-judice.

(d) Does not arise.

CONSTITUENCIES OF THE LAHORE DISTRICT BOARD.

*3163. Dr. Sant Ram Seth: Will the Honourable Minister for Public Works be pleased to state—

- (a) what decision, if any, has so far been arrived at by him regarding the matter referred to in my unstarred question No. 249<sup>a</sup> regarding the constituencies of the Lahore District Board, put by me on 18th January, 1938;
- (b) whether he will be pleased to lay on the table of the House a statement showing the population of each of the constituencies of Lahore District Board according to the last census and the voting strength of each of these constituencies at the time of last District Board election.

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana: (a) It has been decided to hold the next general elections of the Lahore District Board due in 1939 on the basis of the existing electoral circles. The reason for this decision is that it is not known what changes will be made as a result of the settlement operations in the boundaries of Zails, on which the District Board constituencies are largely based. Steps are, however, being taken to ensure that the revision of electoral circles is completed in time for the general elections to be held in 1942.

(b) A statement giving the required information is laid on the table.

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : The report of the Committee is in the Press and is not expected to be ready before the end of the present session of the Assembly. After the report is considered by Government an endeavour would be made for the Assembly to consider the report ; but no definite date could be given at this stage.

DEATHS AMONG THE PRISONERS IN THE PUNJAB.

*3199. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Finance be pleased to state—

(a) the number of deaths among the prisoners in the Punjab Jails in 1937-38 ;

(b) the causes of this mortality, and the number of deaths for which each cause was responsible ?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : (a) 164.

(b) A statement is laid on the table.

Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister please say whether he has gone into the reasons for such a big number of deaths as 50 due to phthisis ?

Minister : I may assure the honourable member of one fact that the death rate in our jails compares very favourably with that of jails in other provinces excepting one or two, where the death rate is slightly lower. However, as I have already said in reply to another question, our death rate during the calendar year 1937 is the lowest in the history of jail administration of the province. (Hear, hear.)

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : How does the death rate of this province compare with that in other provinces ?

Minister : I have had only recently an occasion to compare the death rate in jails in this province with the death rate in jails of other provinces. As I have already said, ours compares very favourably with that of most other provinces. It is only in the case of one or two provinces that the death rate is slightly lower than in the Punjab jails.

Sardar Hari Singh : In view of the fact that 50 out of 164 deaths were due to phthisis, what has the Government done or proposes to do to minimise the number of deaths due to this cause ?

Minister : The honourable member has not observed that the phthisis figures are on the decline. Government is considering the whole question of special provision for phthisis patients. As I said the other day, Government is considering the question of having segregated accommodation for phthisis patients in jail hospitals. Further, Government is also considering whether it would be possible, financial considerations permitting, to have a special hospital for tubercular patients.

Sardar Hari Singh : Has the Honourable Minister gone into the reasons for 36 deaths on account of pneumonia ? Is that due to deficient clothing ?

Minister : I do not think it is due to deficient clothing, but if my honourable friend thinks that it will give him any satisfaction, I may say, that there are over 25 causes given for deaths in these jails, and I have not gone into their reasons. It is not physically possible for me to examine into each particular reason why so many have died of pneumonia, so many of heart trouble and so on. That is not an enquiry which it is possible at all.

Sardar Hari Singh : Did not the fact that so many as 86 died of pneumonia strike his imagination ?

Minister : If the honourable member would apply his mind to it, he will see that 86 deaths out of a total jail population of 20,000 is not a very large number.

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia: Three statements showing the acreage of land (in acres) damaged by kallar and thur for the years 1934, 1935, 1936 and 1937, in the Lyallpur, Sheikhupura and Gujranwala districts, respectively, are laid on the table*. The increase is, to some extent, due to the more accurate recording of the damaged area.

As regards measures taken to check the evil, a number of seepage drains have been or are being constructed with the object of reclaiming as much of the land as possible. Government is also considering other measures such as lining of canals and a special officer has been appointed to investigate the problem.

(c) if the answer to (a) and (b) above be in the affirmative, what action do the Government propose to take to give due representation to the Muslims in the above branches ?

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : I must decline with regret to answer questions which savour of communalism on the floor of the House. If the honourable member would put an unstarred question I will endeavour to collect the information for him.

CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT IN THE IRRIGATION BRANCH.

*3211. Sufi Abdul Hamid Khan : Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the clerical establishment in the Irrigation Branch previously on provincial scale has now been transferred on to the Circle scale, resulting in a serious loss to this establishment ; and if so, the reasons for this change ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : As a step towards decentralizing the administration of the Clerical establishment of the Public Works Department, Irrigation Branch, Punjab, it was for administrative convenience divided into Provincial and Circle cadres, the latter consisting of accounts clerks and assistant clerks. As far as Government is aware the scheme has not resulted in a loss to the establishment.

REDUCTION OF THE SIZE OF THE OUTLETS ON LOWER GOGERA CANAL.

*3213. Mian Abdul Aziz : Will the Honourable Revenue Minister be pleased to state—

- whether it is a fact that the size of the outlets on Khikha rajbaha on the Lower Gogera Canal Division, district Lyallpur of Chak No. 333 and the surrounding chaks is being reduced ;
- whether it is a fact that a deputation of the Zamindars League of the locality represented their grievances before the Chief Engineer on the 11th April, 1938, and on the following day waited upon the Honourable the Revenue Minister at Lahore who assured them that the outlets will not be reduced, and orders will accordingly be issued.
- whether it is a fact that there was a huge meeting of the Sikh zamindars of the locality at Lyallpur on the 10th June, 1938, in which other zamindars joined and the zamindars of about 20 villages, decided not to take canal water and have actually stopped on account of the existing scarcity of water and this action of Government ;
- the action taken in the matter to remove the grievances of the zamindars concerned ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) Some outlets higher up the Khikhi Distributary taking supplies beyond their haq were reduced to make up shortage at the tail.

(b) A deputation waited on the Chief Engineer on 11th April and on the Minister who promised to look into the complaint but no such assurance was given.

(c) and (d) There was a meeting of zamindars in Lyallpur on 10th June but Government has no information that the zamindars from the locality were present. The zamindars of 9 villages have stopped taking water. The position of Government is explained in the communiqué which has already been placed on the table of the House in reply to question No. *2767.

[Minister for Revenue.]

It is for zamindars to take water and if there is any shortage in any individual case in the authorised supply the matter will be immediately looked into with a view to give the authorised supply. Government cannot give more than the haq of each individual at the expense of those on the tail.

Mian Abdul Aziz : With regard to (b), did the deputation wait on the Honourable Minister for Revenue and did he tell them that no reduction would be made?

Minister : I never said that.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : May I know how much water is given to the zamindars per bigha?

Minister : Please ask the patwaris.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : If I have to enquire from the patwaris, how does the Honourable Minister say that it is their haq?

Minister : The haq is given from the outlets and that is why I have said so.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : May I know whether the haq is fixed by the patwaris?

Minister : As regards the details about which information was required the honourable member is referred to the patwaris.

DEPARTMENTAL ACTION AGAINST POLICEMEN OF THE HOSHIARPUR POLICE FORCE.

*3214. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Premier be pleased to state—

(b) whether it is also a fact that the case went up in appeal and that the learned Sessions Judge while dismissing the appeal remarked that the marginal note Ex. D/N/3 was an obvious fabrication after the occurrence and opined that these exhibits starting from D/N/2 were "a crude forgery"; if so, whether the Government has taken any departmental action against Khan Muhammad Alam, the writer of the forged notes, and also against the other three accused who were found to be present when the extortion was committed and the beating given?

Parliamentary Secretary (Sardar Bahadur Sardar Ujjal Singh) : I regret that the answer to this question is not yet ready.

TENDERS FOR THE PURCHASE OF TIMBER FOR DIFFERENT JAILS.

*3244. Lala Sita Ram : Will the Honourable Minister of Finance be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the Inspector-General of Prisons invited tenders for the purchase of timber for different jails of the Punjab and the contractors submitted their tenders with heavy securities, but all the tenders were cancelled, if so why the tenders were cancelled ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the same requirements were purchased personally by jail officers on very higher rates than the tender rates and the tenderers' stock was not seen ;
- (c) whether there is any other department where this practice is followed?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : (a) The Inspector-General of Prisons invited tenders for the purchase of wooden sleepers required by certain jails during the year 1938-39. Only five tenders were received and when after taking into consideration various factors, including the rates prevailing in the market at the time, the tenders were opened, it was found that all the tenders were not only incomplete in respect of important specific details but the rates quoted were definitely unfavourable. For these reasons the Inspector-General decided not to accept any tender.

(b) The annual requirements of jails for wooden sleepers for which tenders were invited have not yet been purchased but the matter is still under consideration. The immediate requirements of timber of the two Lahore jails, however, were purchased at favourable rates by a committee of certain jail officials after actually inspecting the stocks of timber at firms situated in and around Lahore and eventually making the purchase from a firm whose representative had also submitted a tender.

(c) Does not arise.

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sunder Singh Majithia : A remission of two annas per rupee was granted in the Ambala and Seoti circles of the Ambala and Naraingarh tahsils in kharif 1937 on account of fall in prices. Usual tests were also applied to other circles of the district including Jagadhri tahsil, but no remission was found necessary.

The Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram : The Lahore Zoo has been closed on Wednesdays for over fifteen years. It is possible that visitors from outside, who are not aware of this fact, are sometimes inconvenienced ; but it is essential to close the Zoo for one day to give rest to the animals and to enable the cages to be properly cleaned. The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) and (b). Sayed Sultan Shah has in the past been taking out both the tazia and duldul processions on the occasion of the Muharram and only a tazia procession on the occasion of the Chehlum. Sardar Hari Singh : May I know since when this special pay has been sanctioned for this particular officer? For how long has he been enjoying this special pay?

Minister : This particular officer will have it from the date he is to be appointed Settlement Officer of Gurgaon district.

Sardar Hari Singh : Was he not enjoying special pay previous to that?

Minister of Revenue : How could he?

Sardar Hari Singh : I am putting the question to the Honourable Finance Minister.

Minister : How could he get special pay for the period when he was not yet occupying the post of Settlement Officer, Gurgaon?

Sardar Hari Singh : I shall answer that question if he will give me notice of that. (Laughter).

SUPPLY OF DRINKING WATER TO ILAQA BEIT.

Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state the extent to which the scheme for the supply of drinking water to Ilaga Beit in the Hoshiarpur district, for which a provision of Rs. 1,05,538 has been made in the budget for the current financial year has so far been proceeded with?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye : (1) The detailed project has had to be very carefully reconsidered in order to cut down the cost of steel and iron which has occurred since early in 1937. As a result the area has had to be re-surveyed. The detailed project is now on an advanced stage and the detailed estimate is expected to be finished this present month for receiving technical sanction when actual orders will be placed for pipes and materials up to the allotted fund.

(2) Boring work is in hand at the proposed headworks site in connection with the construction of headworks wells.

(3) The financing of the scheme is to take place over a period of 5 years and the construction work should easily be completed by the time the last instalment of funds will allow.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : Will the Honourable Minister be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the survey that was being carried on for supplying water to Beit ilaga has been suspended?

Minister : I have no such information.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : Will he hold an enquiry into the matter so that the fears of the people of that ilaga may be allayed? The pipes have been removed from the ilaga where it was intended to supply water.

Minister : The survey would have been completed by now because the information that is available to me is the latest information and my honourable friend is depending upon hearsay.

Chandhri Kartar Singh : A scheme was sanctioned for supplying water to the Beit ilaga, but I have personally visited that ilaga and have seen that after surveying the pipes have been removed.

PROHIBITION.

Sardar Ajit Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state the names of the five districts in which prohibition has been introduced according to as was resolved by the Assembly in its session held at Lahore in February and March, 1938, and if prohibition has not been introduced in any district so far, the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : No decision has yet been reached, as the introduction of prohibition involves numerous administrative, legal and financial problems which are still under the active consideration of Government. An announcement on the subject will be made in due course.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Have people of certain districts expressed their willingness to have prohibition in their own area ?

Minister : I have received some applications from the districts.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Has he received an application from Dhapali, Ludhiana district ?

Minister : I cannot remember off-hand but I have received certain applications.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Are there certain villages where they have introduced prohibition ?

Minister : I am not prepared to answer that question.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Are they forcibly selling liquor there in spite of the fact that the people are pressing against it ?

Minister : May I draw the attention of the Chair to the question put by the honourable member ?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Is the Government aware that there are certain villages in Ludhiana district where they have themselves introduced prohibition and the Government is pressing for selling liquor ?

Minister : Does the honourable member mean that Government has forcibly introduced it ?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : I say that Government is forcibly introducing liquor there.

Minister : No.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : May I draw your attention to the attitude of the Honourable Minister of Revenue ?

Minister : I repudiate that charge. That is totally false.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : I take full responsibility for it. (Uproar).

Sardar Ajit Singh : Are the pockets of the Government affected if prohibition is introduced in the province ?

Mr. Speaker : Disallowed.

TUITION FEES FROM BOYS BELONGING TO AGRICULTURAL TRIBES.

452. Mian Abdul Rab : Will the Honourable Minister of Education be pleased to state—

- (c) the fall in the number of boys since this circular has been enforced in the Jullundur district ?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Hays : (a) No such circular has been issued by the Government. The fact is that in some places correction slip No. 137 to Article 131, Punjab Education Code, has been misinterpreted to mean that the agriculturists' fee concession in the primary classes is also confined to the areas which are notified as poor and backward. Action is being taken to remove this misunderstanding.

- (c) Does not arise.

- (b) whether the Government intend to appoint an officer to investigate the matter for the restitution of the land to the original owner.

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) No, but a petition on this subject appears to have been placed in the Extra Assistant Settlement Officer's petition box.

461. The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye : No, it is not a fact that since January, 1938, Government has changed its policy in regard to fee concessions to students. The Punjab Government notification referred to by the honourable member merely clarified departmental policy.

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye : The District Board, Gurgaon, has put up a scheme for sinking a new drinking water well in village Rohrai, tahsil Rewari, at an estimated cost of Rs. 950. This scheme is still under the consideration of the Sanitary Board, Punjab.

Previous borings done in the district have shown that brackish water was only struck. If District Board, Gurgaon, formulates a proper scheme for removing the scarcity of drinking water in the village of Rewari tahsil, the Sanitary Board, Punjab, will be prepared to consider the scheme on its merits.

REWARI-SHAHJAHANPUR ROAD.

466. Rao Bahadur Captain Rao Balbir Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Public Works be pleased to state whether the Rewari-Shahjahanpur Road is included in the Road Programme under consideration of the Government ?

THE PUNJAB RESTITUTION OF MORTGAGED LANDS BILL.

Mr. Speaker : The Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill will now be taken up.

Minister of Revenue : I beg to move—

That the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill, as requested by the select committee, be taken into consideration.

Mr. Speaker : Motion moved—

That the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill, as reported by the select committee, be taken into consideration.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : On a point of Order. The Bill, as worded, cannot be introduced in this House in the present form for the reason that it aims at depriving certain classes of people, on account of their descent, of the property which they held and this is against the fundamental rights that are given to the subjects of His Majesty the King Emperor by a definite section of the Government of India Act. According to section 298, sub-section (1) of the Government of India Act, it is enacted that no subject of His Majesty, domiciled in India, shall on grounds only of religion, place of birth, descent, colour or any of them be ineligible for office under the Crown of India or be prohibited on any such grounds from acquiring, holding or disposing of property or carrying on any other occupation, trade, business or profession in British India. I am confining my attention to only six words in this section. They are 'descent' and 'grounds from acquiring and holding.' My submission is that this Bill aims at depriving certain people, who are not statutory agriculturists, of the property which they are lawfully holding. If a person is born, say, in an urban area or is born of a parent who is not a statutory agriculturist, then according to this section, he is not deprived of or he is not prohibited from holding or acquiring any property, but what this Bill proposes is that such persons will be deprived of the property which they lawfully hold because it affects certain mortgages which were effected before 8th of June, 1901.

My submission is that without going into the merits of the Land Alienation Act with regard to the nature of the mortgages, one thing is quite clear, and it can be asserted without fear of contradiction, that those people are lawfully holding those mortgages and hold certain property. What is the chief aim of this Bill? According to this Bill those alienations which were in contravention of the Land Alienation Act will be invalidated because they do not fall within the provisions of the Land Alienation Act, without going into the question whether a measure can bring an amendment of the nature which authorises as a matter of fact the repeal of this provision. What I submit is that such mortgages cannot under any circumstances be invalidated because there is a clear provision given in section 298.

Mr. Speaker : Are not some Brahmins in the Punjab members of an agricultural tribe?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Yes, there are.

Mr. Speaker : Are Sheikhs, Syeds, Khojas and Kashmiris members of agricultural tribes?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : No.

Mr. Speaker : Are they descendants of the same progenitor as other non-agriculturists?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : All Brahmins, Khattris, Kakezais and other people are not statutory agriculturists. I give another instance—

Mr. Speaker : Of course, they are not.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : In certain cases they are.

Mr. Speaker : I think not.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Some of them are.

Mr. Speaker : In the same way there are Brahmins who are agriculturists, but some Khattris and Mahajans are not. How on the ground of descent can all these classes be said to be deprived of their lands under section 298?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : I am taking the case of those Sheikhs, Khojas, Brahmins and Khattris who do not happen to be the sons of statutory Sheikhs, Khojas, Brahmins and others.

Mr. Speaker : Speaking, subject to correction, the honourable member's case does not fall under clause (2) of section 296. I, therefore, rule that the honourable member's objection is untenable and, therefore, I overrule it.

(Pandit Muni Lal Kalra stood up and there were interruptions.)

Mr. Speaker : I am afraid I shall have to exercise, though reluctantly, my extraordinary powers. I have given my ruling.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : I can't help if it is my privilege to suffer for it.

Malik Barkat Ali : On a point of order. Can an objection be raised at this stage when the Bill has been committed to and reported on by the select committee?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : A point of order can be raised at any time and at any stage.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta (South-Eastern Towns, General, Urban), (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill as reported by the select committee be re-committed to the same select committee for reconsideration.

Sir, before I give the reasons on the basis of which I have felt it necessary to move this motion for recommitting the Bill to the select committee, I wish to say a few words by way of introduction, with your kind permission, about the attitude of the Unionist Government. In particular, I mean to address my honourable friends who are occupying the opposite benches and who hold in their hands the reins of power in this province. It is a thousand pities that these honourable gentlemen are not in a position to place facts and figures before the House which have necessitated the bringing forward of such a measure. One thing that I wish particularly to point out is this, that while such important measures are under consideration every possible care should be taken to avoid use of provocative language as that makes a dispassionate consideration of the Bill impossible. I wish to appeal to the Honourable Premier who is controlling the destiny of the province not to ignore considerations of equity and justice and the submissions made by the members of the Opposition for the simple reason that he is backed by a convenient majority.

Mr. Speaker : I rule these remarks out of order. The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I may submit that my honourable friends should not ignore this fact that it is but fair for the honourable members who are present in the House, that where they think that they belong to different parties and represent special interest, they should not forget it even for a second that they are sitting here in this august House as the legislators of the province. It is our duty that at the time of passing such laws we should not allow our party labels and party considerations to overpower the better part of our judgment. The main consideration which should guide us should be that all the laws that are passed are fair, proper and just. I regret to say that the manner in which all these important laws are being hurried through does not show that the party in power is acting in the spirit that I have stated above. In this connection I may again submit that at the time of passing such laws, it is highly necessary that we should be very careful in our speeches. I am fully aware of the fact that the Honourable Ministers have a right to say anything they like and usually they speak at the end of every debate after which the members of the Opposition have no right to reply to the criticism levelled at them. Still I would request them that taking into consideration the small number of the Opposition it is all the more necessary that they should listen to the speeches of the Opposition with patience. (Interruptions). I am submitting that my friends on the opposite benches do not like to hear our speeches patiently and calmly, although they have a big majority with the help of which, they can turn down all our proposals as they have been doing so far. Through you, Sir, I request my friends over there that they should consider these matters calmly, patiently and dispassionately.

Now, Sir, because the cup of patience of my honourable friends is full to the brim, although I am laying these things very politely, yet they do not seem to relish them. I therefore, come to the subject proper.

At the very outset I wish to make it clear that some of my friends may be expecting that my speech should be of the same kind as was delivered last evening by the Minister of Development. However, I do not propose to follow the lead given by Sir Chhotu Ram. But I would try my level best not to use any expression which should in any way lower the dignity of the House. (Cheers from the Opposition Benches).

The first thing that I would like to submit in connection with my motion is that the report of the select committee, as it has been presented to the House, shows that three members of the select committee walked out of it at an early stage of the proceedings of the committee on account of some fundamental differences. The two members belonging to the Opposition party have appended their notes of dissent to the report of the select committee. These dissenting notes show that the grounds on which they were written were basic. Sir, you must have seen these dissenting notes in which they have expressed the following opinion:—

"We believe the Bill to be calculated to benefit only the big landlords. It makes invidious and unnecessary distinction between agriculturists and non-agriculturists. Moreover, it is not designed to give relief to the poor mortgagors who were obliged to part with their lands after 8th June, 1901. We cannot follow the logic of limiting the relief only to mortgages of a particular class and era."

I may submit that my honourable friends on the opposite benches can say that as the members of the Opposition are prejudiced against them, therefore they have written a note of dissent to the report of the select committee. Although this does not aptly apply to us, still I would read another dissenting note in order to convince my friends on the opposite benches that really the report of the select committee does require recommendation to the same select committee. Mr. S. P. Singha, who is not a member of the Congress Party and perhaps who is a member of the Unionist Party, has written a strongly worded dissenting note. He says:—

"A law which has retrospective effect is obnoxious to one's legal sense. But it is conceivable that in equity this may become expedient and justifiable if the existing law is defective and is perpetrating a moral injustice. The proposed Bill can find justification only on such a ground, but it loses all ethical force when it is made applicable to agriculturists only. The circumstances of hardship which this Bill has in view, if valid, apply equally to all mortgagors of agricultural land alike, be they statutory agriculturists or non-agriculturists. As the select committee by a majority of votes has rejected the proposal to widen the scope of the Bill, I have not considered it worth while to move any amendments. My signature to the select committee's report is subject to this minute of dissent."

This is the opinion of that honourable member about whom it cannot be said that he expressed his opinion owing to prejudice or party considerations. He is one of the members of the Unionist Party. Moreover, my honourable friend Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram cannot say that Mr. S. P. Singha has expressed his opinion owing to his enmity with the zamindars.

Sir, the note of dissent appended to the report of the select committee by Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath refers to a matter which is really serious and I should like to draw the attention of the House, through you to this matter. He has said that Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri demanded certain facts and figures which have not been supplied to him. His words are :—

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri called for statistics showing mortgages of land in various districts communitywise and also details of areas mortgaged to agricultural tribes and to others. These statistics were not forthcoming. The Bill presented before us is of a very drastic nature.

With these notes in view I should like to ask my friends, who are in such hot haste to pass this Bill, how dare they introduce this Bill in the face of the notes of dissent of members of the select committee and in the absence of the important material which is not at their disposal? When members of the select committee do not even know the kinds of lands to which this Bill will apply or the kinds of people whom this Bill will affect and whether this Bill will benefit or adversely affect the interests of certain people, how can they think of introducing this Bill? A legislator or the framer of a Bill should know all these highly important things. I request the Government to tell me honestly whether in the absence of these things they are justified in passing this Bill. The members of the Assembly are not in possession of full facts. They do not even know the preliminaries of this Bill and the Government too has not taken the trouble of supplying them the necessary material. Under these circumstances, how can you ask the members to consider this Bill?

I am prepared to admit that under extraordinary circumstances it becomes essential to introduce emergent measures in a legislature, but from what I have gathered from the speeches of the honourable mover and his supporters, it is hard to believe that this Bill can by any stretch of imagination be included in the category of emergency measures. No one has so far advanced arguments to prove nor has any one claimed that the circumstances of the province are such as to necessitate the immediate passing of this Bill. If it is not an ordinance but an ordinary Bill, then, why is it being rushed through the legislature so hurriedly?

Sir, I should like to draw your attention to the practice of the House of Commons in this respect. Before drafting Bills of this kind an enquiry is made from the general public and expert opinion is also obtained. When the draft of the Bill is ready, it is circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon, and after the receipt of such opinions the Bill is introduced in the House.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : Not in all cases.

Mr. Speaker : So far as I am aware, in the House of Commons a Bill is not circulated for eliciting public opinion on it.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : That does not affect my arguments. I want to quote only one example. Before the Money-lenders Bill was introduced in the House of Commons an enquiry was instituted, and I want to draw your attention to the report of that enquiry. In 1900 when this law was constituted in this connection, great care was taken to understand its every aspect. For this purpose a select committee held its sessions in 1897 and 1898 when it consulted experts and heard many witnesses. One particular witness was heard for six days. Among the other forty witnesses were included two Judges of High Court, Judges of county courts, money-lenders and debtors.

If we turn our attention to the Central Assembly, leaving aside the House of Commons, we shall find that no controversial Bill is introduced in that legislature unless it has received the fullest consideration of the public. I would go one step further and say that no controversial measure is introduced in the Central Assembly at all. Leaving the Central Assembly aside, I would request you to cast a glance over the legislative history of our own old Legislative Council. You will find that the Legislative Council did not pass in this manner a single measure which could be called an ex-parte decree law.

Sir, the main reason for recommitting this Bill to the same select committee is that necessary material was neither placed before the select committee, nor before the members of this House. I do not say that necessary material was not deliberately placed before the select committee. All that I want to say is that necessary material was not supplied either to members of the select committee or to members of the Assembly. It is possible that the Government itself was not aware of the real facts of the situation. It is essential to consider these facts very carefully. It is, therefore, essential to recommit this Bill to the select committee.

This Bill is intended to widen the scope of the Land Alienation Act and it will also be given retrospective effect. In other words you want to go not one step but a hundred steps farther than the Alienation of Land Act. I would like to invite your attention to the proceedings of the Imperial Council in this connection. You will find therein that the Imperial Council, took great care over the Land Alienation Bill and spent a lot of time over it before passing it into an Act. But what do we find to-day? Sir Sikander Hyat wants to extend the scope of the Land Alienation Act by one stroke of the pen.

The next thing to which I wish to draw the attention of the ministry is that this Bill cannot be given retrospective effect. For, if it is done, you will have to cancel 60 years old contracts and you will also get an opportunity of passing judgments over lands mortgaged many years ago. Is it just to restore such lands, which were mortgaged with the consent of the parties, and some of which were about the nineties of the last century, to their original owners? Will it be fair to cancel such time-honoured mortgages?

As far as the professions of my friends are concerned that they have the deepest sympathy with the zamindars and that the painful plight of the samindars always keeps their hearts afire, I would submit that this is mere tall talk. They cannot have greater love and sympathy for the zamindars than the Congress. If the honourable members of this House were honestly to consult the voice of their conscience, they will realize that the Congressites are the real sympathisers of the poor peasants and not they. (Cheers.)

May I tell you who are the real well-wishers of the peasants? You will know them if you consult the proceedings of the legislatures of the seven Congress governed provinces. But the honourable members sitting on the Treasury Benches do not wish to acquaint themselves with the accomplishments of those legislatures. Where ignorance is bliss, it is folly to be wise.

As far as the question of principle is concerned, Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath, who is the back bone of the Unionist Party, has differed from the policy underlying this Bill and has expressed his disapproval in a note of dissent. He has admitted that it is the duty of the government to help the poor and to relieve them of their burden. But may I ask the Government, if the select committee which has differed from them, had been appointed by the Congress? If the select committee appointed by the Government is not at one with it, why on earth is this Bill not recommitted to the same select committee for further consideration?

I may once again make it clear that so far as the principle of the Bill is concerned, we do not disagree with it.

If you carefully go through the various clauses of the Bill you would find that they are defective. My honourable friends need not be so restive, I do not want to offend any of them. But if my simple and straightforward words are being taken as offensive by them and if their intentions are exposed on the floor of the House I cannot help. Sir, this is one of our contentions that the main object of passing this legislation is to benefit the big landlords. If the Government wants to prove our contentions as wrong, I beg to ask what substantial material was made available for the select committee for proving this contention as baseless and incorrect? I may again submit that the Bill seeks to save and protect the interests of the big landlords and it is a fact that there are many a big landlord amongst the members of the Unionist Party. I want to know if through this Bill only the poor and not the big landlords will be benefited, why should the statistics be not placed before the house? My honourable friends should also be well aware of the fact that even in municipal committees, it is an enactment in black and white that when the interest of a member is involved in any matter which is before the committee, the member concerned should not take part in the discussion of that matter. I agree that there is no such restriction for the members of the Assembly. The honourable members sitting on the Government benches may see this in the light of morality whether it cannot be said about the Ministers and the Parliamentary Secretaries that it is they whose interest is involved in rushing through this legislation. I mean no insinuation.

Mrs. J. A. Shah Nawaz (Urdu): We listen to you patiently. We do not fight as your party does.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I assure the respected lady member that we do not know how to fight with the Government and if ever we fight we do so for the sake of our poverty-stricken brethren. (Cheers). I assure her that if ever she happens to convince us at any stage that we are not going in the right direction, we would give up this so-called fighting which the honourable lady member has wrongly interpreted. It was only last week that I sent one short notice question enquiring whether it was a fact that a large number of the members of the Assembly would be benefited by the proposed Bill and asking for the names of such members who would stand to benefit from the Bill. This question has not been answered yet. Only rumour is on foot that so and so stands to benefit to the extent of Rs. 7 lakhs and so and so would get Rs. 5 lakhs back if the proposed Bill is passed. (Voices and Interruptions). I treat these interruptions with the contempt that they deserve. It was most essential that the Government in fairness to all those members, who are likely to reap the benefit, should have prepared statistics as to how far they would actually be benefited by the Bill. After all, these gentlemen who are sitting easily on the ministerial benches and have been occupying these benches from the day that provincial autonomy came into force could easily gather this material by issuing circulars to the various deputy commissioners. (Cheers).

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is not speaking to the motion.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : A certain speech in this connection was made by the Premier and this is the only occasion when a reference can be made to that speech.

Mr. Speaker : It can be referred to on other occasions as well. At this stage, I think, only the purpose and extent of the recommitment of a Bill should be stated and discussed. That, the honourable member has not done till now.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : My point is that due consideration has not been given and due consideration could not be given to this matter. Generally speaking, I want the select committee to go into the matter once again keeping in view the application of these provisions to all mortgages, exclusion of big landlords, leaving the unearned income alone and so on. The exclusion of the destitute mortgages, whose main subsistence is derived from the mortgaged land, from the operation of the Act should also be considered. They can now form conclusions in the light of material which was not then available to the select committee. I may submit that the Bill in a nutshell proposes to benefit the big landlords and the rural magnates only. I see the protectors of the rights of the zamindars are sitting conveniently on the treasury benches and they are all big landlords without even one exception. Only Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram is such whose position is somewhat different from others. I cannot definitely say much about him. He meets us very rarely and as far as his bank balance is concerned we have no information. He might be failing in having a good bank balance. But so far as our Premier and particularly the mover of the Bill, Sir Sundar Singh Majithia, are concerned, both are big landlords and the latter, I would submit, is not content with the landed property within the province, but his property has gone to such a limit that he possesses land in the United Provinces, that is, outside the Punjab also. If the Government assures us that the Bill is not being enacted for the benefit of the big landlords they may take my word that we would not want any amendment to be made in the Bill. (Cheers). If the Government really convinces us by giving us facts and figures that the Bill is not a subtle method of benefiting the big landlords but is mainly for the benefit of the poor peasantry of the province, we would not utter a single word against it. My friends sitting on the opposite benches seem to be glad that the Punjab Press is writing awfully against the urban members of our party. I would like to remind them that we on the very first day declared that we would not oppose any Bill which is introduced to benefit the poor. The principles on which the Congress is working do not alter every day as the principles of the Unionist party do. We are not in the habit of declaring that all castes and parties of the country are present in our party as the so-called Unionists claim. When the fear of that party being disbanded arises we do not go all the way from Lahore to Calcutta to kiss the threshold of Mr. Jinnah.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani: Calcutta where Mahatma Gandhi went. Why did he go?

Mr. Speaker: Congress and Muslim League need not be discussed.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: If my honourable friend wishes to ask a question on this point, I shall be perfectly willing to answer him.

Mr. Speaker: I have not allowed the question.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: I do not propose to transgress your wishes and I would not do anything which you do not like me to do. Sir, as far as Congress is concerned, its manifesto is open to everybody. I remember a learned friend sitting on the opposite benches stating the other day, when he was speaking with much force and eloquence, that it was obvious from the faces of the urban members sitting on this side that they were embarrassed. I would like to submit for his information that we do not care a twopence for the Bill and he may not be under the wrong impression that the Unionist Government has thrown such burning hot coal on us which we cannot stand to bear.

If my honourable friend holds such an opinion I would submit that he is under a very big misconception. I assure the honourable members of the House that Congress would not go an inch astray from what has been declared once and put in black and white. The manifesto of the Congress Party is wide open before the country. The Congress has always been consistent in its principles. The Congress Governments in other provinces are fulfilling the promises they made to every class of people whether they be urban or rural. The manifesto which they published at the time of elections cannot show any single undertaking which the Congress Government are not trying to accomplish. But I wonder if the poor peasants, whom the Unionists always claim to be helping, will at all derive any benefit from this Bill. I challenge the honourable members opposite if any one of them can stand up and solemnly declare that this Bill will benefit the poor people more than the rich. These honourable gentlemen have only lip-sympathy for the poverty stricken people but in reality they are out to help the big-bellied people. In vain they feign to be pining for the distress of the miserable agriculturists. They have no love for them. In fact they are exploiting them and are making them the tools for the accomplishment of their own greedy programme. Mr. Speaker, kindly allow me to declare on the floor of this House that the Unionist Government is committing a big fraud on the public. This Bill is not calculated to benefit the poor. It is a matter of conviction with me. A proof is not far to seek. All the honourable members who have spoken so far in favour of this Bill have conspicuously omitted to give any argument in favour of the proposed measure. Had they any reasonable ground, they would have certainly mentioned it. The minutes of dissent have thrown a flood of light on the undesirable way in which the Government has sought to hurry it through. In fact, indecent haste has been shown by the Government in rushing through this Bill. It appears from the note of dissent which the honourable Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath has written that the total area held up to the end of 1936 by agriculturists in mortgages is 3,427,600 acres and by the non-agriculturists 1,681,675 acres. I would like to be corrected if the Ministerial benches challenge these figures.

I want to ask a very simple question. If this Bill is designed to benefit the indebted agriculturists and the poverty-stricken peasantry of this province, how is it that they are anxious only to restitute 1,681,675 acres which are with the non-agriculturists and not the much larger area of 3,427,600 acres which are under mortgage with the bigger landholders? Here is the touchstone to test the sympathy of the Unionists for the poor agriculturists. If their feelings of sympathy for the poor agriculturists are genuine, let them also try to restitute the mortgaged land which has passed from the poorer agriculturist into the hands of richer zamindars. But I am afraid the Unionists will never do that. They are out to enrich the bigger landholders, and they dare not go against their wishes. This clearly proves that the present Bill is not calculated to benefit the poor zamindars. It is designed by the Unionists to grind their own axe. Sir, you will be pleased to note that when the Punjab Land Alienation Act was passed, it was not intended to produce this result that whereas non-agriculturists should not take land from the agriculturists the landlords or the bigger agriculturists should get whole of the land from the poorer agriculturists. Surely, the big landlords should not be allowed to swallow up the weaker ones. Surely, it was never the intantion of the framers of the Land Alienation Act that the bigger fish should eat up the smaller fish. The real intention was to save the smaller fish from the bigger one. If the Government is prepared to provide for the restitution of whole of the mortgaged lands irrespective of the fact whether it is with the agriculturists or the non-agriculturists, then we are prepared to support the Government. I think that the Honourable Premier will not challenge this statement that the object of the Land Alienation Act was that the lands of the poor agriculturists of the Punjab should be stopped from going into the hands of the non-agriculturists, so that they should not be deprived of them in toto. May I ask the honourable friends opposite, if that is a fact, then how the 3,427,000 acres of land belonging to the poor zamindars passed into the hands of non-agriculturists since the year 1901 in the form of mortgages? It is apparent that before the year 1900 no lands were mortgaged with my friends and the above-mentioned area of land was mortgaged after the year 1901 with such persons as are nominal zamindars. So, it is a fact that the major portion of the above-mentioned area passed into the hands of big landholders and a small area went to the money-lenders. I may state that the difference between the two is very insignificant only. That difference is that the money-lender realises his money by requests and prayers, while the big land-owners realise their sums at the point of the bayonet. If you study the debates of those times of the Imperial Council when the Land Alienation Act was passed, you will find that while introducing the Land Alienation Act, Mr. Charles Evans said—

I do not for a moment believe that the aggregate amount of alienation, permanent and temporary, will exceed the present amount. On the contrary I confidently anticipate a material progress not only in sales but also in mortgages.

Minister for Development : What has this speech to do with the motion now before the House ?

Dr. Satya Pal : It has the same relevancy as "Bacha Sakka" had yesterday.

Mr. Speaker : There are six motions on the agenda. But the only substantive motion, moved by the Honourable Minister, is under discussion.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : That enlarges the scope of my speech.

I may submit that my honourable friends know how to say things, but they should be prepared to hear also. Now let them be ready to hear. It is my turn.

I was making it clear to the honourable members over there that the object of the Land Alienation Act was that the lands of the poor zamindars should not go to the money-lenders. But from the speech of the sponsor of that Act it is not clearly known. But on the other hand, it is quite clear that 3,427,000 acres of land have passed into the hands of the big landholders. In the face of such facts it does not behove my friends over there to introduce such measures. May I question my friends opposite that when an Act which was passed on account of the joint efforts of so many brains of the country, has not been able to fulfil the expectations of its sponsors and its object has not been attained, how can this Bill, which is introduced in haste, fulfil the expectations of its authors? In short my argument is this: when the Land Alienation Act has not protected the interests of the poor zamindars, inasmuch as 3,427,000 acres of land have been mortgaged with the big landholders, how would this Bill be able to give relief to the poor zamindar ?

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is repeating himself.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I am coming to the next point. It is contended by some of the members, that though the present Bill is a stringent and unjust Bill, after all, it gives some relief to poor zamindars, and, therefore, we on this side of the House should not oppose it. May I know whether it is justice? We will have to see what was the object of its authors when the Land Alienation Act was passed. In this connection I beg to draw your attention to page 240 of the Imperial Council Debates. There is the speech of Mr. Riwaz wherein it is stated—

Existing mortgages will not be interfered with in any way, except when any mortgage which has been made by a member of an agricultural tribe, contains a condition which is intended to operate by way of conditional sale.

Here he has clarified about the conditional sale and he has not stated that they should be ended at once. He further says—

In this case class of cases the mortgage will be renewed or altered in the manner I have described.

I was making it clear that it is a fact that in other provinces laws providing relief to the poor have been passed in which mortgages have been excluded. My honourable friends over there are also following them. The other day the Honourable Premier of our province read out an extract from the speech of the Premier of Madras. The example of Madras Agricultural Relief Act is before us. I cannot help remarking here that those who accepted office after my friends, are leading them in the field of legislation. The Madras Government passed the Agricultural Relief Act and I may state for your information that they have excluded mortgages. My honourable friends here, although they have copied those things from them, still leave out those things which are the best in them. Sir, I make bold to say that it is wrong in principle to cancel mortgages. If in spite of this, our ministers want to consider it, they are welcome to do so. The only thing I want from you is that you should not do injustice to anybody. The principal basis of the Bill is that it is calculated to benefit the poor peasantry of the province. But the question is, do you call those people peasants, who own thousands of bighas of land, who ride Rolls Royce cars, whose drawing rooms are full of English made bric-a-brac and whose mode of living is anything but Indian and whose one pleasure in life is to ape the Europeans? We, the members of the Congress Party, are also anxious for providing benefits to poor peasants but we disagree with the Unionist creed of "might is right." They have got 120 votes at their beck and call, and on the strength of their votes they can have this Bill passed. Yesterday I had the honour of requesting the Premier that it would be as well to give effect to these Bills in the form of ordinances so that the time of the House may not be wasted for nothing. But he did not agree to my proposal. The plain fact is that this Bill is not intended to benefit the poor peasants.

The Madras legislature provides an example for us in this matter, but the Bill introduced in the Madras Assembly contains the following definition of an agriculturist which is worthy of note :—

Agriculturist means a person who :—

- (a) has a saleable interest in any agricultural or horticultural land in the province of Madras, not being land situated within a municipality or cantonment, which is assessed by the Provincial Government to land revenue (which shall be deemed to include peshkash and quit-rent, or which is held free of tax under a grant made, confirmed or recognised by Government; or
- (b) holds an interest in such land under a land holder under the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, as tenant, ryot or under tenure holder.

Now I wish to lay stress on another thing and I would request the House to listen carefully to what I say. In the Madras Agriculturist Relief Bill mention is made of who is and who is not an agriculturist—

- (a) has in either of the two financial years ending 31st March, 1938, been assessed to income tax under the Income-Tax Act, 1922, or under the income-tax laws of any Indian State or foreign Government; or
- (b) has within the two years immediately preceding the 1st October, 1937, been assessed to profession tax on a half-yearly income of more than three hundred rupees derived from a profession other than agricultural under the Madras District Municipalities Act, 1930, the Madras City Municipal Act, 1919, the Cantonments Act, 1924, or any law governing municipal or local bodies in any other province in British India, any Indian State or any foreign State in India or under the Madras Local Boards Act, 1920, in a panchayat which was a union before the 26th August, 1930; or

[Lala Deshbandhu Gupta.]

- (c) has within the two years immediately preceding the 1st October, 1937, been assessed to property or house tax in respect of buildings or lands other than agricultural lands under the Madras District Municipalities Act, 1920, the Madras City Municipal Act, 1919, the Cantonments Act, 1934, or any law governing municipal or local bodies in any other province in British India or any Indian State or under the Madras Local Bodies Act, 1920, in a panchayat which was a union before the 26th August, 1930, provided the aggregate annual rental value of such buildings and lands, whether let out or in the occupation of the owner, is not less than Rs. 600.

Sir, if the Unionist Government want to copy the Madras Act, they should do so in toto. A half-hearted copy of it will never do. It is no use copying the provisions which suit the present government and to disregard those which do not suit them.

Now, I wish to relate some more facts about the Congress-governed provinces. Within a few weeks of taking over the administration of the United Provinces, the Congress Ministry introduced a Bill entitled the "Temporary Postponement of Execution of Decrees Act, 1937." I admit that it is a drastic measure but the Congress Ministry did not lose sight of justice and equity while introducing this Bill.

According to this Act an "Agriculturist" means a person who—

- (a) pays land revenue not exceeding Rs. 1,000 per annum; or
- (b) in districts subject to the Benares Permanent Settlement Regulation 1 of 1793, pays a local rate under section 109 of the District Boards Act, 1922, not exceeding Rs. 120 per annum; or
- (c) holds land free of revenue and pays a local rate under section 109 of the District Boards Act, 1922, not exceeding Rs. 120 per annum; or
- (d) in Oudh pays rent as under proprietor in respect of land the revenue of which does not exceed Rs. 1,000; or
- (e) pays rent of agricultural land (other than that paid as under proprietor) not exceeding Rs. 1,000; or
- (f) holds land free of rent, the area of which does not exceed 80 acres; or
- (g) ordinarily lives outside the limits of any municipality and belongs to any of the classes of persons mentioned in the Schedule.

The Congress Ministry in Madras does not declare the pleasure-loving, hard-drinking, besotted, nincompoops as agriculturists.

No person shall be deemed to be an agriculturist:

- (i) if he is assessed to income tax, or
- (ii) if the total annual revenue assessed on the land held by him either as a proprietor or as an under proprietor, the annual rent payable by him otherwise than as an under proprietor and ten times the amount of the local rates annually payable by him for land for which he pays no revenue or the total of any two of them exceeds Rs. 1,000.

Sir, I do not wish to waste the precious time of the House. I want to finish my speech within the shortest time. If, however, my friends desire, I will quote examples from each Congress-governed province to show that unlike the Unionists, the Congress creed is that a person is rich or poor according to his deeds (karams) and not according to his birth (janam).

One of the parliamentary secretaries who is a protege of Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram has in an article which is not written by Sir Chhotu Ram himself, but is written with his knowledge, has remarked that the newspapers of the province have raised a hue and cry against this Bill at the instance of Mahajans. He further remarked that newspapers have been referring to the principle of dandapat and quoting the Shastras in this connection. May I enquire if Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram who was an Arya Samajist recently and was bound by the Shastras believes in the Shastras today also? Does he believe that according to the Shastras the caste system by birth is fair and right?

Minister for Development : What right has the honourable member got to refer to my religious faith?

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I am very sorry my friend has taken offence where no offence was meant. I am glad that he sticks to the same religion to which I have the honour to belong. Because the subject concerned contained the cry of religion, therefore I had to say something about it. It is plainly written in Manu Smriti that there is no Khshatri, etc., by birth, but by deed. According to it, if a Harijan begins to cultivate land, he would be certainly called an agriculturist. It is a glaring injustice that the people, practising in the courts and capturing the ministerial gaddis should say, "We are halis (peasants). Is it justice that our Honourable Premier Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan and his colleagues, who have enjoyed the pleasure trips to Europe, more than ten times and eaten with fork and knife, should be called agriculturists, but my poor friends who earn livelihood by dint of their hard labour and have gone even to jails for the cause of the poor should be considered as non-agriculturists? I leave it to the sense of justice of the House to decide. I say, "Please do justice."

I admit that we are passing through a Kaljuga. But one should not swallow a fly for the simple reason that its body is covered with a little fat. (Cheers). The Government may pass a Bill like this. We welcome it but my submission in this connection is that if the Government wants to have meals, please let the meals be cool first lest it should scorch the palate. (Cheers). I would like to draw the attention of the Honourable Premier and the Minister for Revenue to the fact that our main objection to the Bill is that the fundamental principle on which it is based is absolutely wrong. I would tell the Honourable Minister why the principle is objectionable. First, in the Bill of which the Government is so proud the real agriculturists have not been recognised as agriculturists. Secondly, the agriculturists, according to this Act, would be in a position to get not more than 16 lakhs acres of land. They would not be able to get 34 lakhs of acres of land which is mortgaged to big zamindars. Sir, may I ask you as to whether you have seen the note of dissent made by the Congress Party in which it has been openly stated that the Bill is full of glaring injustices? Moreover, those people who are not poorer than the non-agriculturists but who are rolling in wealth have been declared as agriculturists. I have got a secret information in this matter and the Government may rest assured that I do not want to divulge any official secret. I have got an information from "parstkesam parchanam" to the effect that the Honourable Premier offered a compromise to the honourable Raja Narendra Nath. Our Honourable Premier might remember that when it was demanded in the House that this Bill should apply to all non-agriculturist and agriculturist mortgages he replied in the affirmative.

[Lala Deshbandhu Gupta.]

But in spite of that there is no such recommendation in the select committee report. Whatever the present Premier said at that time, was it not based upon good intentions? I am sure if today we do not press upon the present government to yield, the Honourable Premier would do the same which he was going to do many, years ago. That is another thing if the members of the Unionist party, who have no ideals and business except to adore the ministerial benches, may prevent them from doing so. But as far as some solid and substantial work is concerned, I doubt whether it would ever be able to do any. I was submitting, Sir, that I came to know that when the Honourable Premier asked Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram, "You please accept it. After all there were not so many agriculturist mortgages before 1901" and further said, "If you would be pleased to agree to these proposals, Raja Sahib would not separate from our party."

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is irrelevant.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : It is stated in Raja Narendra Nath's statement. (Voice : No ) I beg your pardon, I would like you to refer to the press report. The Minister for Development, as usual, agreed to the proposal made by Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan.

(Voice : No. Wrong, wrong). I would be very glad if it is proved to be a speculation.

Mr. Speaker : That is no argument.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I am developing the argument that the glaring injustice involved in the definition of agriculturists is felt even by the Premier, but there are others who think that it is so, but are not prepared to admit it. But Chaudhri Sahib only spoke these words under lip, "What are you going to do? If you would agree to this proposal of Raja Sahib and the distinction between an agriculturist and non-agriculturist mortgagor is abolished, take it from me that you would see no longer these long terras" (Laughter).

Mr. Speaker : Please do not be personal.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Alright, Sir, with due respect I would submit in regard to this statement made by me, I still hold that it has not been denied and the sience should be deemed as affirmative. I have placed three objections with regard to the Bill proposed. First, that the distinction between agriculturists and non-agriculturists should be eliminated.

Mr. Speaker : Repetition should be avoided.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Very well, Sir, I will go to the third point. As our Honourable Minister for Development always yields to the Premier...

Mr. Speaker : The Honourable member is irrelevant.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I will try to be as relevant as possible.

In fact, the principle of class distinction is being worked in this Bill. Although it is said that this is a question of rich and poor, I want to clarify, in this matter, the principle on which the Congress differentiates between a poor man and a rich man. To the Congress the distinction between rich and poor does not depend upon the community or race. Congress has clearly declared in its election manifesto that a poor is poor, no matter whether he is black or white and a rich is rich whether he belongs to this dynasty or that. But in the dictionary of the Unionists that is not the meaning of this classification. They regard that the people who are declared non-agriculturists according to the Land Alienation Act are poor and the rest are rich. Otherwise if they had viewed the question justly, they would, certainly, have included such clauses in the Bill, so that it should not have applied to the poor, helpless and penniless mortgagees, as they say that they want to benefit the poor.

Because we have no facts and figures before us, therefore it is difficult to say how many poor and helpless mortgagees will have to say good-bye to their mortgages according to this Bill. But I can imagine that the number of such cases will be a sufficient one. Let us take the case of a widow who has come by a piece of mortgaged land which her fore-runners left her in the good old days. Now unfortunately it is the only means of her maintenance and if you dispossess her of that, and deprive her of her only means of living, then is it justice? Such cases occur very often in the world. May be the destitute widow whom you wish to dispossess of her land comes of a family which sometime ago was rolling in gold and holding jagirs and now the vicissitudes of time have rendered her penniless. You, Mr. Speaker, have, perhaps, seen more winters and summers than anyone of us here. Your knowledge of ups and downs of life extends over generations. You have not only witnessed the making of the present history of Punjab but have also made it and took a prominent part in it. Don't you know that to every rise there is a fall in this world? Is it right to think that a mortgagor remains always poor and a mortgagee remains always rich? Who knows that the rich of today, both on this side as well as on that side of the House, were destitutes some 50 years ago? It would be in the fitness of things, therefore, to exempt deserving cases from the operation of this Bill and not to ruin our already poor destitutes. Please do not throw the penniless and helpless mortgagees mentioned above at the mercy of the Deputy Commissioners.

Again, it would not be fair to give retrospective effect to the principle of an Act which in itself is open to severe criticism and must have been passed under some very peculiar circumstances and exigencies of the times. But our Government is going to apply the principle of that Land Alienation Act to cases which may be 60 years old. The Government is introducing this Bill simply to increase the strength of its party.

Now, let me make an offer to the Unionists on behalf of my party to test their sympathy for the poor and if my gilded friends over there accept that, the whole issue will be settled once for all. The offer is that the Congress benches are prepared to pool all their property and distribute it to the poor. Are the Government benches prepared to follow that example? And if they are prepared they should come forward. We should accumulate all the property and then distribute it among the poor. If you agree then we will not oppose the Bill and have it passed without division. Besides the Government claim that they are out to help the landless people. But how is it that they cannot see their way to declare 15 lakhs of people belonging to the depressed classes to be agriculturists because they possess no land and depend on agriculture for their livelihood? These poor creatures have a special claim on your sympathy because they till the lands of big zemindars and have been tilling them for so many years in the past. Here is an opportunity to prove your sympathy for the poor and recognise them as agriculturists. But the Unionist Government is not going to do this. It wants to please the depressed classes merely by words. As a poet says, Appreciation is something and self-seeking is something else. Sir, I want to sound a note of warning to the Unionist Government in this connection. If they will go on allowing the bigger zamindars to eat up the smaller ones they will have to bring forward a new measure analogous in nature to the United Provinces Tenancy Act in order to save the poor peasants from the clutches of the landlords.

In this connection it will be well to remember how vehemently the Nawab of Chhatari who is a fellow brother of our Honourable Premier, protested against the introduction of this Tenancy Act saying that the Congress wishes to crush the landlords. Similarly, the big zamindars of this province will also raise a cry at that time. Therefore, it is in the fitness of things that such a situation should not be allowed in the Punjab. I am convinced that the Unionists are introducing these hasty measures really to strengthen their hold on their voters, because the recent results of the bye-elections have made them realise their weakness and increasing unpopularity.

Premier : What happened at Amritsar? How brave is the thief that he is carrying the lamp on his palm!

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Why have you forgotten the election results of Hissar and Sialkot, where the Unionist candidates have been defeated? At Bhalwal the Unionists have suffered a heavy defeat. (An honourable member : A zamindar has been elected from that place. What about the results of divisions in the House?) But I do not deny that the Unionists have a majority in the House. These are their activities that expose them.

If my honourable friend, Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan, in whose sincerity and honesty I have no doubt, although at present he seems to be a bit changed, wishes to remain at the helm of affairs, he should not allow unprincipled persons to come near him and govern in their company. If he desires to be popular among the zamindars he should not trust these people.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member should withdraw the remark that "any member of this House is unprincipled."

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I do so quite willingly. Only I have been misunderstood. I was speaking of the people outside. I was saying that if the Honourable Premier wishes to keep the sympathies of the poor people with him, he should not bring forward such Bills which would prove that his Government was doing glaring injustices between different classes of the province. We have no enmity with him nor do we like to injure his personal interests. To cut the story short we believe that this Bill is not helping the poor and it cannot in any way alleviate their troubles. Therefore, it is our duty to oppose it.

Besides, I may submit, that in democratised Councils, it becomes the duty of the ministry to hear sympathetically the just demands of the Opposition. But this is not the case here. Can our ministers say that they agreed to any just demand of the Opposition? We on this side of the House, moved many useful Bills for alleviating the social and agrarian troubles of the poor public. But every one of them was turned down by our Hitler-like friends. May I ask my friends why they are so very afraid of us? I assure them that if they agree to my proposal, the heavens will not fall and the earth will not explode. What is the harm if three or four months are spent over the consideration of the report of the select committee? I assure them that it will not take more than six months. I appeal to the Government once more that they should hear the voice of the public and without having the public opinion it is not fair to pass such a Bill in a hurry.

By such tactics your Government cannot last long. Her days can be counted on the fingers. As a poet says:—

“O! Burning candle your life is only of one night. You may pass it laughing or weeping.”

Before concluding my speech I may say that if such legislations are enacted in such hurry and rush, the days are not far when their own sins shall prove the cause of their downfall. As a poet says:—

“Let the cup be filled. It shall brim itself.”

With these words I move my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Motion under consideration, amendment moved is—

That the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill as reported by the select committee be recommitted to the same select committee for reconsideration.

I may inform the honourable members that there are six motions on the agenda; three relating to re-circulation and three relating to recommitment. All these will be discussed together, though they will be put to the House separately.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (East Punjab Landholders): Sir, I will not tire your patience. It would have been more convenient for me if the motion of my honourable friend to my right came first. What the speaker who has just resumed his seat has said, I can use for explaining my own point of view. On the merits of the Bill my opinion is the same as his. I adhere to the view which I have expressed in my minute of dissent and that view has not changed. I am sorry to say that some wrong reports were circulated in the press that my temporary absence from the House was due to the fact that I was carrying on some negotiations with the Premier to make some changes in the Bill. My temporary absence was due to other causes. I was dealing with other matters equally important if not more important. I was not carrying on any negotiations with regard to the changes in the Bill.

The reason why I want reference to the select committee again is that I want statistics to be made available showing how different castes and communities will be affected, which castes and which communities will be more adversely affected than others. I represent on the one hand a minority within a minority and on the other hand I have been advocating the principle of non-discrimination for the last 40 years, both during my public life and during my official life. This Bill is most discriminative and further extends the scope of discrimination against which I have already been complaining. If the Bill had been of a non-discriminative character, I would not have called for statistics. But as it is of a discriminative character, and as I think it favours certain castes and communities—I presume that it favours certain castes and communities at the expense of others—I must have statistics before me. I have carefully examined the land revenue administration report for the year 1936. It does not give any information as to how much area was mortgaged to members of agricultural tribes and how much to members of non-agricultural tribes before 1901. I presume that by applying discrimination or non-discrimination before 1901 certain communities and certain castes suffer to the benefit of others and that is the reason why I want reference to the select committee again. I shall have an opportunity of getting those figures which are not available at present in any of the records. All other provinces which are now enjoying provincial autonomy have declared that they are the guardians of the legitimate interests of minorities. Our friend, Sir Sikander, also has declared more than once that he will give due consideration to the legitimate interests of the minorities. I wish to point out to him, if the figures were available, that the legitimate interests of the minorities are not properly safeguarded and this sort of discrimination is a most invidious discrimination. That is the reason why I want a reference back to the select committee. I have told you that it will be more convenient for me to speak on the motion which was tabled by my friend to my right, that is to say, for circulation of the report of the select committee to elicit public opinion thereon. But as I am able to bring in my point of view on this motion, I support this motion also.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General Bural): I have great pleasure in supporting the motion moved by my honourable friend, Lala Deshbandhu Gupta. In supporting it I would only say one sentence and not make a speech. It is this: that the Bill must be very bad indeed even as it has emerged from the select committee when a man like Raja Narendra Nath, who has been sticking to Sir Sikander, is not pleased with it and is in fact very much dissatisfied with it and has supported Lala Deshbandhu Gupta. No better argument is necessary to support the motion before the House. (Applause).

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): As a member of the select committee I rise to reply to the points that have been made out by my friend, Mr. Deshbandhu Gupta. My honourable friend wants the Bill as it has emerged from the deliberations of the select committee, to be recommitted to the same select committee for reconsideration. What are his grounds? He wants the Bill to be recommitted because three members of the select committee walked out of the committee on an amendment which did not commend itself to the majority of that committee. He wants the Bill to be recommitted because two members of the Congress party who were on the select committee have appended notes of dissent. He wants the Bill to be recommitted because another honourable member, though not connected with the Congress, has also attached a note of dissent. My respectful submission is that so far as those three honourable members are concerned who walked out of the select committee, the select committee had the benefit of hearing their amendments to the fullest extent and after having heard their point of view, the select committee came to the conclusion that it could not possibly agree to the amendments since those amendments went extensively beyond the scope of the Bill. Reference has been made to the fact that certain statistics were called for. Certain statistics were called for in order to prove that this Bill was unnecessary. It was pointed out and rightly pointed out that the question of the necessity or the non-necessity of the Bill could not arise in the select committee. The House having committed the Bill to the select committee, the principle of the Bill stands unchallenged, and any amendments within the scope of the principle of the Bill can certainly be discussed, but the select committee cannot be asked to reverse the finding of the House. So far as the objection of the two honourable members of the Congress party is concerned, their amendments were fully considered in the select committee and the select committee's point of view differed from theirs. I cannot understand what is there new in the grounds urged by my learned friend to support his motion. We have had the fullest benefit of understanding and appreciating the point of view put forward by the members of the Congress party. Well, if our friends think that that point of view will commend itself to the majority of the House, it is open to them to bring that very point of view before the House. But so far as the question of recommitting the Bill to the select committee is concerned, I respectfully submit that there is absolutely no ground whatever in these considerations. If members dissent, it does not follow that the Bill must be recommitted; if members would walk out of the select committee, because their point of view does not commend itself to the majority of the select committee, it does not mean that the Bill should be committed, because those very points of view and those very grounds have been fully considered by this committee. It has been stated that one of the considerations for recommitting this Bill to the select committee is that this Bill aims at the aggrandisement of the big zamindars. This point of view was fully considered and placed before us, but it appears to me that these friends who are stressing this point of view are really proceeding upon purely imaginary grounds, because it must be obvious to anybody as the noon day sun that in the case of these big zamindars it is impossible to accept the position that these big zamindars during the last 38 years that have elapsed since the passage of the Land Alienation Act have been unable to amass enough money to redeem these mortgages that came into existence before June 1901. Either they are big zamindars or they are not big zamindars. If they have not been able to amass that much money, surely it is straining things to say that the Bill is calculated to advance the interests of the big zamindars (Hear, hear). The Bill is calculated to defend the interests of all those whose interests are required to be protected. The policy of the Land Alienation Act is, I think, this, that in the case of persons to whom mortgages of lands have been made by members of agricultural tribes, their debts shall be wiped off—this is the principle embodied in the Land Alienation Act—after the lapse of twenty years. This Bill has extended that period to the very minimum of 38 years since the 8th June 1901. People to whom these mortgages were made before the 8th June 1901 have been in possession of these lands and the enjoyment of their usufruct for more than forty or fifty years. How does this provision compare with the provision of the Land Alienation Act which is a part of the Statute Book of this province? What is the principle of this Bill? The principle is this, that in the case of these lands which were mortgaged before the commencement of the Land Alienation Act, 38 years' enjoyment would be the very minimum and should wipe off the security. What objection can there be to this course? If members of the non-agricultural tribes can have their debts wiped off by 20 years' enjoyment, surely 33 years' enjoyment should be more than enough to wipe them off. Can there really be, in these circumstances, any question of injustice or oppression on any part or section of the community? (Hear, hear). It has been stated by the honourable Raja Sahib that the Bill is calculated to favour certain communities at the expense of others.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: And castes.

Malik Barkat Ali: I am really surprised at this argument. So far as the question of castes is concerned, the Land Alienation Act is there and if you want to defeat or destroy the Land Alienation Act, do what you please, but what has that question to do with the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill? The policy of the Land Alienation Act may not be acceptable to Raja Sahib, it may not be acceptable to my friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, or to my friend Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, but it is acceptable to the overwhelming majority of the province (Hear, hear). There are amongst the Muslims, numerous communities (I belong to one of them) who stand deprived of the benefits of the Land Alienation Act, but in the wider interests of the State, we have accepted this policy (Hear, hear). I submit there are Sikhs, any number of Sikhs, who stand out of the policy of the Land Alienation Act. They accept that principle; they accept the principle that in the wider interests of the State, the tiller of the soil—and the majority of those persons themselves in these agricultural tribes are really tillers of the soil—must be protected, and what does it really matter if there is among them a Sir Sunder Singh or a Sir Sikander Hyat? It is really the tiller of the soil who stands to gain by the policy of the Alienation of Land Act and if that policy commends itself to the majority, the overwhelming majority of the tillers of the soil, the overwhelming majority of the Sikh tillers of the soil, the overwhelming majority of the Muslim tillers of the soil, and I venture to say, the overwhelming majority of the Hindu tillers of the soil who belong to the agricultural tribes—should we ignore their interests only because of the agitation raised by a few representatives of a few urban areas? They can get up any amount of agitation. It does not follow from that that this Bill is a bad Bill or that this Bill should be recommitted to the select committee. There is no advantage in that course. Out of the 16 members of the select committee, only 9 walked out, two have appended their minutes of dissent and ten are in favour.

Is there any member of the select committee out of these ten, who, after fully considering the points of view that have been advanced today and after bestowing on those points of view their fullest reflection, is prepared at this moment to accept the amendments and the changes which are intended to be introduced. Those changes travelled outside the scope of the Bill and were in contravention of the principle and of the reason for which this Bill had been introduced? Though I have already dealt with a part of this argument, I should like to deal here with one of the points made out, namely that the Land Alienation Act is brought into existence for a class of zamindar capitalists. Is that the reason why this Bill should really be recommitted to the select committee? The question, that the policy of the Land Alienation Act has led to the aggregation of lands in the hands of a few zamindar capitalists, is not before this House. What this House has to consider, on the basis of this Bill, is that in the case of persons who have been in enjoyment for more than thirty years, more than forty years, more than fifty years, and have had thus the debts wiped off, it is time that the lands in their possession came back to the real owners and if this principle is correct, then I fail to see any reason why the so-called big zamindar should be penalised because he happens to be a big zamindar. You have got to apply the principle. The principle is that as between a member of an agricultural tribe on one side and a member of a non-agricultural tribe on the other, twenty years' enjoyment by the members of non-agricultural tribes should wipe off their debt. That is the principle of the Land Alienation Act. The present Bill extends that period of twenty years to thirty years, to forty years and even then, in spite of that, there is the provision in the Bill that if the collector comes to the conclusion that the benefits that have been enjoyed do not really equal the investment, the collector has been given certain powers of giving compensation at certain fixed rates. Therefore, I respectfully submit that the objection, namely, that the Bill is designed to help the big zamindar is imaginary and if the principle is accepted, then there is no reason why any distinction should be drawn between the poor mortgagor and the big mortgagor. As a matter of fact the big mortgagor does not exist today. He must have got his lands back. The fear is more imaginary but I fail to see why, when a principle is accepted, that principle should not apply to all and the big man should be penalised because he happens to be a big man. My learned friend indulged in a good deal of irrelevant matter. I will not reply to that. I will not discuss what the programme of the Congress is, what the policy of the Congress is, and what the real agriculturist should be defined to be, whether he should only be a tiller of the soil and none else and so forth. Those considerations do not come within the scope of this amendment and I do not propose to waste the time of the House by replying to those matters. I, therefore, submit that none of these grounds really make out a case for the recommittal of this Bill to the select committee for reconsideration because there is nothing that requires reconsideration. Nothing new has been adduced in the course of the arguments and for the same reason, I also oppose the motion for the recirculation of this Bill, because the grounds that have been advanced are very much the same grounds that my learned friend Mr. Mukand Lal Puri placed before this House at the earliest stage of this Bill when this Bill was introduced for consideration by this House. (Loud applause) (Voices: Question be now put).

Sardar Hari Singh (Kangra and Northern Hoshiarpur, Sikh, Rural): After a very lucid exposition of the Congress position in this matter by my learned friend Lala Deshbendhu Gupta, I had no mind to intervene in this debate although there stands an amendment in my name that the Bill be re-committed to the select committee with certain instructions that I have mentioned in the amendment. But for the vigorous and heated eloquence of my friend, and my colleague on the select committee, Malik Barkat Ali, who in his speech has been guilty of certain grave mis-statements, I would not have taken part in the debate. My learned friend Malik Barkat Ali in his vigorous speech came out with the argument that there was no need of recommitting this Bill to the select committee because all the amendments which have been given notice of or moved by us in the select committee were carefully considered and dispassionately considered and that certain amendments travelled beyond the scope of the Bill and, therefore, the majority of the select committee did not at all like to consider them. May I tell him through you that that is the very argument for recommitting the Bill to the select committee? Our argument is that grave injustice has been done to the minority by turning down certain amendments on the ground that they were not within the scope of the Bill.

Premier: Is the honourable member in order in discussing the proceedings of the select committee?

Sardar Hari Singh: Yes, because my friend has made a reference to the proceedings of the select committee and I am quite within my right.

Premier: Two wrongs do not make one right. You should have objected then.

Sardar Hari Singh: We have come with this motion before the House to lodge an appeal before the House, that grave injustice has been done to the minority in the select committee and that injustice should be done away with by recommitting the Bill to the select committee with certain instructions from this House that those amendments should be reconsidered and the Bill improved in right directions. As regards our amendments, I may inform this House that they were not at all considered by the majority on the select committee. We moved certain amendments but they were summarily rejected by the majority. They were pook-pooked by the majority. We requested that those amendments may at least be considered. We prayed to the majority that they should either convince us or allow us time to convince them, but we were not given the time to give our arguments and here my friend Malik Barkat Ali gets up on his legs on the floor of the House and says that all the amendments moved by the Congress party were taken into consideration. The fact of the matter is, and I repeat it, that our arguments, that our amendments which ought to have been taken into consideration, were not taken into consideration at all. They were summarily rejected as I have already told the House.

Minister for Revenue: Voted upon.

Sardar Hari Singh: The Honourable Minister of Revenue says they were voted upon, but not considered.

Minister for Revenue: I never said 'they were not considered.'

Sardar Hari Singh: That is why I say that they were summarily rejected by the majority of the members of the select committee. I want to bring to the notice of the House the speech of the Honourable Leader of the House made on the occasion when the motion for reference of the Bill to the select committee was considered by this House. There were certain portions in his speech which appealed to me and to my friends on these benches and those portions of his speech persuaded us to serve on the select committee in the hope that we might be able to improve the Bill with certain amendments moved in the light of those remarks. He said—

"The reason of that Bill is that it seeks to restore land to those people who are landless, who are dying of hunger, who have got no other means of livelihood."

These are the words of my honourable friend the Premier. I would ask you to mark the words "those people who are landless, who are dying of hunger, who have got no other means of livelihood." If that is the object of the Bill, why not accept the amendment that the lands will not be restored to those people who have enough and to spare?

He further went on to say, "what this Bill proposes to do is to restore to the mortgagors their own lands so that they may earn an honest living on their own lands and be not a menace to the province." Why not make a provision in the Bill that lands will be returned only to those people who will be working with their own hands and not to the parasites living on others' income. He made an important observation which I quote on the floor of the House. He said, that is the raison de'être and I hope every member of the House will support me not only to get the Bill through quickly but also to meet my friend Raja Sahib! What did Raja Sahib want? He wants changes in the Bill so that anybody could see that there is no differential treatment in favour of one class and we are not making any distinction between communities. May I put it to my honourable friend whether he is satisfied that the select committee has removed those defects which he wanted to remove? The select committee has not removed a certain sting in the Bill which is of a discriminatory character. It was in this hope that I and my friend Chandhri Muhammad Hassan were persuaded to serve on the select committee and our party allowed us to go and move certain amendments to the Bill in the select committee. As I have already told the House our amendments were not taken into consideration, though they were voted upon and rejected without any rhyme or reason. Now the Bill, as it has emerged from the select committee, is no improvement on the Bill which was committed to the select committee and that is why we want that the Bill should be recommitted to the select committee so that it may be shorn of all objectionable and obnoxious features and it may be improved, so that more relief may be given to the peasants of the province, the poor people of the province. We have attached a minute of dissent which is before the House and which is before the public and we have made certain recommendations which if incorporated in the body of the Bill will go a long way to make it less objectionable and to make it more beneficial to the masses of the province. The Bill as it has emerged from the select committee is not at all any improvement on the Bill as it was sent to the select committee. It is still objectionable from the point of view of the urban Hindus who are agitating against it on the ground that this Bill is of a discriminatory character, and that it is designed to hit them and not to benefit the agriculturist classes at all. Then there is going on an agitation which has unfortunately taken a communal turn. We deprecate agitation on communal grounds both from the point of view of the Congress and from the point of view of the masses. I do not subscribe to the view that this Bill is designed to hit the Hindus only, that this Bill is a communal move but may I put it to the Honourable the Premier whether he has considered that the agitation that has taken a communal turn is not a natural reaction to his recent backsliding and somersault in joining the Muslim League?

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member is requested not to refer to the Congress or the Muslim League, if possible.

Sardar Hari Singh : While I strongly deprecate the communal turn that this agitation has taken I would like to put it to him whether he has considered, whether it is not the natural reaction to his recent policy in giving up his old non-communal creed and joining a communal body.

Premier : Question. I stoutly deny that.

Sardar Hari Singh : What does my honourable friend deny ?

Premier : That I have changed my policy or creed. I have not joined the Muslim League now : I have been a member of the League since 1914.

Mr. Speaker : I request the honourable members not to bring irrelevant facts in their speeches.

Malik Barkat Ali : Why are the Congress members afraid of the League ?

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member may proceed with his speech without referring to individuals.

Sardar Hari Singh : I will not refer to it, but at least there is an impression that the Muslim members of the Unionist party recently joined the Muslim League. There is only one more point which I want to stress.

Premier : Including a Muslim Minister of Madras who was turned out in spite of his protest.

Sardar Hari Singh : I think this Bill is ostensibly at least designed to solve the problem of old debts. I take it that mortgage is a secured debt. It is one kind of debt and the Government is attempting to find a solution for the reduction of the old debts. I think that is the correct position and a correct interpretation of the intentions of the Government. If that is so, if the Government by means of this Bill wants to find a solution for old debts, one kind of which is the secured debt, then I put it to my honourable friend opposite why do they limit relief in cases of old debts only ? If they want to give relief to the peasants of the Punjab, why not go the whole hog and make an attempt to redeem all the mortgages up to date ? May I know whether they are afraid of the moneylenders who are statutory agriculturists so much that they dare not give relief to the down trodden indebted peasantry of the Punjab according to the needs of the situation ? The situation is very deplorable and is very distressing. As my honourable friend opposite knows and said the other day, the peasantry is sunk up to ears in debt. Is that the way in which the Government want to relieve the peasantry of debts ? I want to tell my honourable friend opposite that the Bombay Government, the Congress Ministry there, is bringing forward a legislation to liquidate the debts of the peasantry and in that legislation, they have made a provision that before 1911 all debts will be wiped off. He has also referred to a certain legislation passed by the Madras Legislature and said that he was copying that. In that measure all the debts before 1932 have been scaled down. But here, my honourable friend comes before the House and states with pride that he is doing a great thing for the peasants of the Punjab because he is trying to find a solution for the old debts previous to the year 1901. Is that the way to help the peasantry of the Punjab ? Why not go the whole hog ? Redeem all the secured debts of the peasantry of the Punjab. Where is the difficulty, where is the handicap? I want to know. What is preventing the Honourable Minister from giving relief to the peasantry all-round? Help them, save them from the clutches of agriculturist money-lenders as well as non-agriculturist money-lenders. I want a reply from my honourable friend opposite, who claims to be so sympathetic to the interests of the poor zamindars of the province. My amendment, which also stands on the order paper today, makes the suggestion in what respect the Bill should be improved in the select committee, if it is recommitted. It says that an additional provision should be made in the Bill so as not to make it applicable to those mortgages which are the only sources of livelihood of poor mortgagees and, in the next place, it wants that those smaller landholders, who are living on the income of the land, should be excluded from the scope of the Bill. If it is done, much of the agitation against this measure will die a natural death. This provision, if made in the Bill, will take the wind out of the agitation and no one in the province will cry. Every one will say, 'Here is a Bill framed by the Unionist Government for their own province; I again ask my honourable friend opposite to see my amendment. It wants that destitute mortgagees should be excluded from the operation of this Bill. If this is done, then the agitation, on the ground that there may be widows, there may be minors, whose sole subsistence and livelihood is derived from the mortgaged lands, that argument of the agitators will also be no more and this Bill will be welcomed by all sections of the population.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) (Urdu): Sir, I have been asked by my colleague, the Honourable Minister for Revenue to take part in today's debate and say something about the speeches that have been delivered on the floor of the House. I was both pleased and grieved to find that the chief spokesman of the Congress Party on the Bill under consideration belongs to the class which will be adversely affected by the provisions of this Bill. I was pleased because in my opinion there is no one on the opposite benches who is better fitted for the task of opposing the introduction of this Bill. I was grieved because I find that except for the fact that he mentioned the name of the poor zamindars now and then, his speech from beginning to end was full of those venomous ideas for the removal of which this Bill has been introduced. The motion that he has moved is that the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill as reported by the select committee be recommitted to the same select committee for reconsideration, so that whatever shortcomings might have remained in it should be removed. But in the whole of his speech the honourable member has not referred to a single weak point in the Bill now before the House. If he had drawn the attention of the Honourable Revenue Minister, who is the member in charge of this Bill, to any weak points of the Bill, I am sure, he would have certainly accommodated the honourable member. He has not adopted this obvious method, but is out to oppose the principle of the Bill in toto. In spite of this fact he has put forward the claim, and would have us believe that had this Bill been introduced for the welfare of the poor, he would never have opposed it. The real reason for this opposition to the Bill is just the reverse of what he has tried to make us believe.

As I have already explained, the ideas which he has expressed in the course of his speech are enough to poison the whole body politic. It has been stated by my friends opposite that this Bill will prove a deadly poison for the zamindars of the Punjab. But I venture to say that the House after hearing my speech would be convinced that this Bill would not be regarded as a deadly poison by 90 per cent. of the people of the Punjab. On the other hand it will serve as an elixir for the poor agriculturists. (Cheers).

Besides, Sir, he has stated that the only subject of this Bill is to extend the scope of the Land Alienation Act. If the scope of the Land Alienation Act is extended, I cannot imagine what turn the events will take. When this Act was passed, not to speak of the zamindars, even political organisations could not be expected to express their views in unmistakable terms, for the simple reason that there was little political consciousness in the country and people had not learnt to express their ideas fearlessly. But in spite of that the class of people which was going to be affected by the said Act, raised such a hue and cry that some of the Englishmen who supported the Bill, were frightened out of their wits and some of them were heard to remark that they had been unwise enough to thrust their heads into a hornet's nest.

In any case there are cogent reasons for enforcing such a measure at this stage. I should like to quote the opinions of some English officers who are, as we all now, neither zamindars nor tarras-walas and who cannot in any way be considered as prejudiced in favour of zamindars and against other people. I am going to read from the opinions of such officers.

6 P.M.

(At this stage Munshi Hari Lal stood up to say something.)

I can very well appreciate the uneasiness felt by my friend Munshi Hari Lal but if he will only listen to what I have to say even as we listened to the speech of Lala Deshbandhu it will be conducive to his spiritual well-being and he will have sufficient material to bombard us later on, into the bargain. Mr. Justice Clarke, Chief Judge of the Punjab Chief Court, advised that 'the conditional sales both prior and subsequent to the Act be made null and void.' This will provide food for all those who clamour against the framers of this Bill although these people have not ventured to incorporate such a provision in this Bill. Then Mr. Tupper who was Lieutenant Governor for some time says :

"It leaves open a wide field for the investment of capital in the customary way in mortgages of a suitable description—mortgages which do not need the sanction of any revenue authority but are necessarily subject to the essential condition that the mortgagor who is a member of an agriculturist tribe shall not be permanently dispossessed."

Furthermore, Lord Curzon opined like this :

"It is not a disloyal peasantry that we apprehend. It is a despondent, debt-ridden, expropriated and impoverished land owning class, particularly a class recruited from the stable and conservative elements so forcibly described by the Honourable Mr. Tupper, which would be both a source of weakness to the province and of alarm to the State."

This is exactly the section for whose benefit we have brought forward this measure. Then, Sir, comes the somewhat complicated problem.

of the difference between the mortgages on the one hand and the sales and transfers on the other. In this connection the opinion of Sir Charles Rivaz is equally significant. He says :—

“ It is an arguable question whether the right of free transfer of land was recognised under Native rule, or whether it is what has been called the ‘ fatal gift ’ of the British Government, but in any case the question for practical purposes is one of more academic interest, for it is an undisputed fact that in former times the exercise of the right of transfer, at all events in favour of money-lenders or other outsiders, even allowing that such right did exist in theory was for several reasons exceedingly rare, and we know that even in these days in most Native States alienations of land are either absolutely prohibited or largely restricted.”

This was the state of affairs when the Land Alienation Bill was brought forward. After this, I propose to quote another yet more important extract. This, too, is from the opinion of Sir Charles Rivaz :—

“ We are now proceeding with a bold venture in the Punjab. Should we be successful in this enterprise we shall be encouraged to proceed, and thus, stone by stone, and layer by layer, to build up the fabric of economic and social stability for our rural population.”

This is what he said at the time of bringing forward the Land Alienation Bill. We only laid the foundation but God willing we will proceed with it stone by stone and gradually build an edifice, a strong edifice for the benefit of the poor peasantry of the province.

Sir, the part of his speech in which Mr. Gupta opposed this Bill portrayed his real feelings but he seems to have cleverly incorporated the poor section of the people also into his speech. But their mention is only a stage show. He has not been fair in his criticism. He has been hitting the Government below the belt. For instance, he said that the Bill was meant to benefit Sir Sundar Singh Majithia and myself. He has been courteous enough here to exclude the Minister for Development.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I never insinuated that the Honourable Premier or the Honourable Minister for Revenue would stand to benefit by this Bill.

Premier : Sir, I confess that I do not know as much Urdu as my honourable friend. After all he is a Dehvi. But what I understood him to mean was that probably Sir Sundar Singh Majithia or myself or our parliamentary secretaries would benefit by this Bill. I am glad that he has withdrawn that insinuation. So far as the parliamentary secretaries are concerned, they have given me a written assurance that they have no lands mortgaged with other people. But if there is any whose land has been mortgaged, I shall bring forward an amendment to make it impossible for him to benefit from this Bill. (Hear, hear).

Then my honourable friend has said that the Bill has been framed only to benefit the rich people, it is only calculated to benefit the rich fraternity of the rich men inside this Chamber. I am fully at one with him in the matter of showing sympathy to the poor sections of the people. But if he means to say that although thousands of poor people will benefit by this measure, its advantages should be denied to the well-to-do classes, he ought to bring forward an amendment to that effect. I would certainly consider such an amendment tabled by him. He should not confine his attentions to making the Government the target of his venomous attacks. But at present he is simply rejecting this Bill on the ground that it will benefit all rich men and only a fraction of the poor.

[Premier.]

He has, no doubt, presented figures but has not drawn correct inferences from them. The Land Alienation Act was introduced in 1901. Up to that date most of the mortgages were made in favour of the non-agriculturists. No doubt some needy people mortgaged in favour of agriculturists too. But that does not show that all these mortgages were made in favour of the immensely rich people. I shall make an attempt to meet the objection raised by my friend. If it is admitted, for the sake of argument, that a mortgagor is bound to get rich after the lapse of some years, it stands to reason that the widow, with whom he mortgaged his lands, would also get rich in course of time. Land is always mortgaged with big zamindars. That is the lesson which experience teaches us. You are very much mistaken if you think that land is mortgaged with widows. The real facts of the situation are that after the enactment of the Land Alienation Act, people who wanted money, instead of disposing of their lands straight off mortgaged them to somebody. This has been going on since 1901. Have you ever given a moment's thought to the fact that if mortgages were stopped what would happen? If mortgages were stopped, the land would remain with the alienor. As you know, the alienor is entitled to dispose of the land and if he does so, the mortgagor would lose his land. (Cheers).

Lala Doshbandhu Gupta : May I know from the Honourable Premier whether there is any difficulty in bringing forward legislation saying that such and such an amount of property is inalienable and that will put a stop to all sorts of alienation, whether by sale or by mortgage? Where is the difficulty?

Premier : I think my honourable friend is anticipating what this Government may have to do. But I am afraid he will have to wait a little longer before we come forward with a measure of that kind. But I can assure him that the matter is not out of our sight and that the matter is under examination. (Hear, hear). Sir, I think that he has committed this mistake unknowingly. He has committed the same mistake which was committed by Raja Sahib, viz., that the big landlords are trying to dispossess the small holder of his meagre possessions, as Raja Sahib used to say big fish swallowing the small fish. (Raja Narendra Nath : I did not say anything about the size of the fish.) But this is not a fact. The Government held an enquiry into this matter in the three districts of Jhang, Shahpur and Multan and my friends on the opposite benches would be surprised to learn that big zamindars are fast losing their affluence, because they have begun to indulge in luxuries. A big zamindar cannot sell his land. He has to mortgage it and that too with a military pensioner, who has made his pile and who is receiving his pension also. The big landlords of the above mentioned districts are slowly but surely being turned into the smaller fry and the day is not far off when they will be completely swallowed by the agriculturist money-lenders. It is my firm conviction, and I have held this conviction for years, that the agriculturist moneylenders should go the way of the non-agriculturist money-lender. In my opinion they are more dangerous than the big fish which swallow the smaller fry. (cheers). Let me assure the House that the agriculturist and non-agriculturist money-lenders both would be given short shrift. A Bill would shortly be introduced in the Assembly doing away with the agriculturist money-lender ; and if the House passes the Registration of Money-lenders Bill I will see to it that both these Bills are given effect to simultaneously. (Cheers). I hope that this undertaking on my part would set at rest any misgivings that you may have with regard to the dispossession of small holders by big landlords.

My friend in speaking of the zamindars has suggested a moratorium and asked the Government to pay off the sacred debts of the zamindar. Let me assure him that even after passing these Bills, if the zamindars do not get a breathing time, and are unable to stand on their own legs, we shall be obliged to give effect to the suggestions made by him. Let me again assure my honourable friend that both he and we are standing on the brink of a volcano and the only way in which we can save ourselves is that we should do our duty by our constituents, and I am glad to remark that he has done his duty by his constituents.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Some time back you ruled that every member who comes here represents the whole of the province and not any particular constituency. May I request him through you not to repeat that argument.

Premier : I bow to your ruling, Sir, but I cannot help saying that if all the representatives of the province are of the same kidney, then God help our poor province (cheers). I hope that my honourable friend is satisfied with the reply I have given. You may rest assured that the widow, with whom land was mortgaged in 1875, will not today be found in the land of the living. Please do not lose sight of the fact that if the principle of this Bill is correct for an individual, it is correct for everybody else. If a property has been mortgaged for 40 years or more, the mortgagor would have by this time received an amount of interest equivalent to 12 per cent. per annum. If in 40 years' time, the mortgagor has received 12 per cent. interest, it is evident that he has gained and not lost anything.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : What will you say if the property was mortgaged for 30 years, say after 1901 ?

Premier : Had the mortgagor been receiving 12 per cent. for 30 years, the mortgagee would have preferred to sell his land. There was nothing to prevent him from so doing.

Then my friend had something to say about the Achhuts. An amendment to this effect was moved in the House yesterday, by which it was intended to throw dust into the eyes of everybody. The upshot of this amendment was that the land should be restored either to Achhuts or to benamidars. My friend's attempt to sympathise with the Achhuts may be described as an unsuccessful attempt to shed crocodile tears. He has done that and nothing more. The scope of this Bill is wide enough to benefit everybody inclusive of our Achhut brethren (Cheers). My honourable friend was pleased to remark, and perhaps it was not necessary to mention it, that the Congress may be acting on its professions in other provinces, but this is not being done here.

Mr. Speaker : I request the Honourable Premier not to refer to the League or the Congress, if possible.

Premier : If my honourable friends belonging to the Congress really intend to carry out their pledges, they will have sooner or later to come over to these benches, and I may add that the sooner they do so the better it will be for the country. The time is fast approaching when the so-called well-wishers of the poor agriculturists will have to give up the barren task of indulging in tall talk and apply themselves to the constructive programme which the Unionists have chalked out for ameliorating the conditions of the poverty-stricken masses of the country. That is the only practical way of rendering some useful service to the teeming millions of this province. Need I inform the Congress that the Unionists have stolen a march over them, not in the expression of lip-sympathy but in the field of action. Who does not know that the sympathy of the Congress with the indebted peasantry of the country has melted away at the touch of realities and that day is staring them in the face when they will have to disband their party in this province at least and accept the creed of the Unionists? (Cheers from the Treasury Benches.) (Dr. Satya Pal : Wait and see.)

Sir, my honourable friend who spoke for about two hours today made an offer, with the ostensible object of proving his sympathy for the poor, that if the Unionist zamindars should agree to distribute their lands among their tenants and the poorer agriculturists of the province the Congress will not oppose this measure. If his colleagues intend to make it the test of their sympathy, I accept their challenge provided they give me the choice to select 40 persons from among them and 40 persons from this side of the House who should agree to distribute their wealth and property among the poverty-stricken masses of the province. Have these honourable gentlemen the courage of their conviction and are they prepared to decide this issue once for all on this basis? If they accept this, I may assure them that all the sinews of war will be gone for ever.

Sir, I confess that these matters are not quite relevant to the motion before the House. But my honourable friends opposite could not help introducing them in the discussion because the constructive programme of the Unionists has surprised them out of their breath and haunts them day and night. They are feeling very uneasy about it. The imminent danger of being totally exposed has made them nervous. It is now an open secret that the Congress is losing its hold on the people if it had any. The results of the recent bye-elections are before the public. Particularly the result of the Amritsar bye-election has served as an eye-opener to them. (Opposition Benches : What about the bye-elections at Bhalwal and Sialkot?) In fact Amritsar is the only place where the Congress and the Unionists have had trial of their strength, and you are well aware of the fact that the Congress has suffered a very heavy defeat there. I would not have alluded to this but for the fact that I have very friendly relations with Dr. Kitchlew and I did put it to him that if he contested the elections as an independent, I would compel Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq to withdraw in his favour. But my learned friend Dr. Kitchlew offered the excuse that he had taken the Congress ticket and that it would be improper for him to shift his ground so soon. I then warned him that if he persisted in contesting the elections on the Congress ticket, he would suffer a heavy defeat and in fact he did suffer the worst defeat of his life.

In spite of these hard facts, the Congress people go on spreading rumours to the effect that disunity and disorder prevail among the Unionists. In reality there is no schism in the ranks of the Unionist Party. These rumours only furnish an example of wish being father to the thought. I cannot describe how earnestly the Congress wish to see a schism occur in our party. Only the other day they had set a rumour afloat saying that 12 persons had left the Unionist Party and that many more would follow suit. But the results of divisions in this House must have convinced them that there was no schism in the Unionists who on the other hand stand united and are in fact stronger than before. (Loud cheers.). If any honourable member still entertains any doubt about this, he may inquire from the honourable members of the Unionist Party individually or collectively. (Ministrial Benches. We all stand united.) These rumours must have pleased the Congress very much. But I am sorry that their pleasure and joy proved short-lived and even when they were painfully disillusioned they still tried to prolong their self-deception by getting published in their newspapers such headlines as the following :

 ” ایمان نہیں تو جھانگ لگا دوں ”

It is evident, therefore, that these provocative headlines were intended to excite and create a schism in the Unionist Party. But let them remember that we are made of sterner mettle than they can ever dream of. These ironical remarks that they are making will prove of no avail. We stand like a rock and daily gain in strength. (Loud Cheers.) (Voices from the Congress Benches: This rock will be smashed to smithereens.) Sir, my honourable friends opposite state that they would smash this rock. It is high time that they realise that so long as persons of their type continue occupying Opposition Benches, they will not be able to shake even a sanddune.

In the end I may reply to the objection that has been levelled against us to the effect that this Bill is not calculated to help the poor but is really intended to benefit the landlords of this province. Let me assure these honourable members that if this Bill were not calculated to help the poverty-stricken agriculturists of this province we would not have brought it up before the House. I assure them that this Bill has not been introduced for the benefit of the big land owners. Its only object is to give relief to the poor.

Again, my honourable friend has read out extracts from a Madras Act. But he has left out one thing and that is that he has not cared to state that no distinction has been made between different kinds of agriculturists. Then he cited the case of the United Provinces. But he has not stated that in the United Provinces only those people are included in the list of zamindars whose income does not exceed Rs. 5,000. The people, whose income is more than Rs. 5,000 are not counted as peasants but are termed as taluqdars.

I may submit that in the Punjab one-fourth of the net assets is realised as land revenue. For example, if a zamindar's income is Rs. 5,000 the Government can only take one-fourth as their share. It comes to Rs. 1,250. If we deduct Rs. 350 as general expenses, then the net profits of the zamindar will be Rs. 8,500. Take another example. If a zamindar's income is Rs. 2,000, one-fourth of it will be deducted as land revenue and the remainder would be Rs. 1,500. If we deduct Rs. 200 as general expenses, the net income would be Rs. 1,300. If anybody pays Rs. 750 as land revenue his assets would come to Rs. 3,000 only. I may here state that there are very few persons in the Punjab whose net income exceeds Rs. 2,000.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : What about the income tax ?

Premier : My honourable friend has asked, "What about the income-tax?" I think he does not know how much income-tax is realised in this province. The tax which is realised from urban areas is not even one-fifth part of that which is realised from the rural areas. I may submit that a zamindar who pays Rs. 750 as land revenue can be included in the list of income-tax payers. But how many are they? I may further submit that the income of a zamindar who pays Rs. 1,000 as land revenue would be Rs. 4,000 and after deducting Rs. 1,000 as land revenue and Rs. 400 as general expenses his net income would be Rs. 2,600. From the examples cited above we come to the conclusion that a person who pays Rs. 1,000 as land revenue is at par with the income-tax payer.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : How many of these zamindars whom you have described pay income-tax over and above the land revenue ?

Premier : I was submitting that the zamindars who pay Rs. 1,000 as land revenue come on a par with the income-tax payers, but the number of such people is very small. To be exact the number of such zamindars is 775 only. If we agree to levy income tax on such zamindars, then only 775 people in the Punjab can also be included in this list.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : That is from one source only.

Premier : Then Sir, the zamindars who pay Rs. 5,000 as land revenue in the Punjab are only 23 in number. This shows that the proportion of the zamindars in the Punjab unlike in the United Provinces is very small. I know that in the United Provinces there are many taluqdars who pay more than Rs. 5,000 as land revenue. I know that there are 8 persons in the Congress Party who pay Rs. 30,000 each. There are thousands of such people who are joining the ranks of the Congress and will join, but I assure my honourable friend Sardar Sohan Singh Josh that he will certainly join us here. (Laughter). I was submitting that there are only 23 persons in the Punjab who can be included in the category of taluqdars.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Have you got other figures between one thousand and five thousand ?

Premier : The number of those who pay above Rs. 1,000 as land revenue but not more than Rs. 5,000 is 775. The number of those who pay more than Rs. 5,000 but not more than Rs. 10,000 is 23. The number of those who pay more than Rs. 10,000 is only 13. The Punjab is fortunate in this respect that there are no big land holders here who can suck the blood of the petty zamindars. The Punjab is a land of peasant proprietors, who do not even get two square meals a day.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : How much land is in the possession of these 13 ?

Premier : I was saying that there are only 775 persons who can be called rich by stretching the meaning of the word 'rich'. But there are only three per cent. of the mortgaged lands in their possession. Are the critics of this Bill sure that this Bill has been framed to benefit only 21 persons who can be called rich and about whom there is no certainty that their lands are mortgaged? Can they reasonably complain that 35 lakhs of poor people do not stand to gain by the passage of such a measure? Any person with a grain of fairmindedness will admit that the Bill is meant to benefit the poor and not the rich. Our aim is to make those people stand on their legs who have had no justice so far and whose cries have gone unheard up to this time. Nay, we propose to see them attain the utmost of progress. (Ministerial Cheers). My friends say that persons occupying these benches are all tarrawalas. I wish all Punjabis were tarrawalas, all were rich and none were poor. I hope that my friends Sardars Sohan Singh, Kartar Singh, Kabul Singh, Hari Singh and Kishan Singh will come to our side some day. They are fast becoming industrialists and they will soon join our ranks. Then, the Persian line مستوفى ما بشيوة هر كس نواب است will not apply to them aptly as it does not even in the case of my friend Lala Deshbandhu Gupta.

(Voices: Question be now put).

Mr. Speaker: The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker: Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri can move his motion formally without making any speech.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I beg to move—

That the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill as reported by the select committee be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by the 1st of October 1932.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker: The question is—

That the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill as reported by the Select committee be re-committed to the same select committee for reconsideration.

The Assembly divided: Ayes 36; Nays 75.

Lala Duni Chand : On a point of order, Sir. My point of order is whether a member, who has got a perfectly valid motion standing in his name, can be asked to move that motion without being given an opportunity to make a speech in support of that motion ?

Mr. Speaker : When several amendments raise different aspects of the same question and one of them is moved and taken into consideration, I generally allow the debate to range over all such amendments on the understanding that when the amendments, other than the one under consideration are called, they shall be put to the vote of the House separately, if desired, but not discussed, as they are discussed or are taken to be discussed when the amendment under consideration is discussed. Following this practice, I gave the honourable member an opportunity to discuss. In fact he was the only member who stood up to take part in the debate when the closure motion was moved. So, no injustice has been done to the honourable member and no Standing Order or Rule has been violated.

Lala Duni Chand : I rise on another point of order for the guidance of the House, and it is whether a member, who has got one of the motions standing in his name, which are going to be discussed together, has got a right to speak or not ?

Mr. Speaker : Certainly, if he rises and is called.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill as reported on by the Select Committee be taken into consideration.

7 p.m.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The House will now proceed to consider the Bill clause by clause.

Clause 2. ●

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : I beg to move—

That in line 2 between the figure and word '1900' and 'this' the words 'or in any other law for the time being in force' be inserted.

(Urdu) : The object of my amendment is to remove all doubts about this clause 2. I commend it to the House for acceptance.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in line 2 between the figure and word '1900' and 'this' the words 'or in any other law for the time being in force' be inserted.

Minister for Revenue : I oppose the amendment.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in line 2 between the figure and word '1900' and 'this' the words 'or in any other law for the time being in force' be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, one of my amendments was left out yesterday because another amendment which was earlier in point of time had already been disposed of. I want to avoid such a thing happening today also. I may draw you attention to the fact that these amendments are not printed in any order and we have therefore to depend upon you to call us to move our amendments.

Mr. Speaker : I will call every honourable member who has given notice of an amendment to move it when its turn comes.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I do not know why you have changed the system of arranging the amendments. It is very difficult for us to understand the order of arrangement of the amendments. Why should you not follow the numerical order ?

Mr. Speaker : I have followed that order. If the honourable member has got a copy of the Bill, I shall be able to explain to him my difficulties.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : There is great confusion and I do not think many honourable members know even what is being done.

Mr. Speaker : I will just explain. If the honourable member goes through the list of amendments, he will find that amendments are proposed to be moved in every line of clause 2 and once an amendment is moved and disposed of, we cannot go back and move amendments in earlier parts of the same line or clause. What I have been doing in the past and intend to do today is that when several amendments are about to be moved to the same clause, I will propose each of them in such a form as not to exclude any later amendments; and to achieve this object I shall have to propose, at least in some cases, only the first words of an earlier amendment and to propose the succeeding words at a later stage, after the intermediate amendments are disposed of in the same manner.

The next thing will be the Punjab Alienation of Land (Further Amendment) Bill in respect of which the Drafting Committee's report has just been presented. Thereafter we will take up the Rules of Business and then the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill. We will have a continuous list of business in the order I have indicated.

*3274-B. Sardar Partab Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

[8. Partab Singh.]

Service of Engineers without first absorbing the upper subordinates in the cadre of Provincial Service of Engineers by promoting them to the Sub-Engineer grade ;

- (b) whether it is a fact that contrary to that promise Government recruited thirty temporary engineers in the Punjab Irrigation Branch in the recent past and thereon reverted several upper subordinates who were drawing maximum pay of their grade for the last many years and were holding sub-divisional charges to sectional charges ; if so, the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : The honourable member is referred to reply given to question No. *3201-C<sup>1</sup> of Sardar Hari Singh.

FOOD TROUBLE FOR AHRARI AND NILI POSH PRISONERS IN LAHORE CENTRAL JAIL.

*3274-C. Sardar Partab Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Finance be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the Ahrari and Nili Posh prisoners in the Lahore Central Jail refused to eat cooked vegetable (cag or spinach) on 12th April, 1938 ;

- (d) what steps, if any, Government proposes to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : (a) No.

(b) No.

(c) No. They were kept in separate blocks on the request of both parties as they were not on good terms with each other.

(d) Does not arise.

DEATH OF PRISONER TARA SINGH IN LAHORE CENTRAL JAIL.

*3274-D. Sardar Partab Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Finance be pleased to state—

- (a) whether Government is aware of the fact that a prisoner named Tara Singh, son of Ganda Singh, died in the Lahore Central Jail on the midnight of 13th and 14th April, 1938 ; if so, the cause of his death ;
- (b) what type of labour did he do during the day previous to his death ;

- (d) whether his relatives were informed in the jail of Tara Singh's serious illness ;
 (e) whether his body was cremated by the jail authorities ;
 (f) why his dead body was not given to his parents and guardians ?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : (a) Prisoner Tara Singh, son of Ganda Singh, died in the Central Jail, Lahore, during the night between the 14th and 15th of February, 1938. His death was sudden and an inquest was held by a magistrate. The post-mortem report shows that death was due to congestion of the lungs and various internal organs, the cause of which could not be determined.

(b) Envelope-making in the Press.

(c) He has been doing this work for about a month before his death.

(d) His death was sudden and prior to it there were no grounds for informing his relatives of any illness.

(e) and (f) The dead body was handed over to the police for post-mortem examination and the police disposed of it.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I know whether the deceased had any complaint before his death took place ?

Minister : I have no information on the subject. His death was obviously due to some sudden cause, but if my honourable friend would give me notice, I will find out whether he used to suffer from any illness before this sudden death. At present I have no information on the subject.

Lala Duni Chand : May I know what was his age ?

Minister : I do not know.

Lala Duni Chand : May I know if his condition had been noticed by any body prior to his death ?

Minister : He died of a sudden attack.

CHAPATIS FOR PRISONERS.

*3274-E. Sardar Partab Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Finance be pleased to state whether it is a fact that there is a general complaint in the jails of the province that the chapatis given to the prisoners baked on "lohs" are not well cooked (baked) ; if so, the action Government proposes to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : Government is not aware of any such complaint. On the contrary the reports of the quarterly boards of visitors constituted under paragraph 53-A of the Punjab Jail Manual and of non-official visitors throughout the province show that both they and the prisoners are well satisfied with the cooking of chapatis.

CONVICT CHANDER BHAN, SON OF KISHAN CHAND.

*3274-F. Sardar Partab Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Finance be pleased to state—

- (a) whether there was a convict by the name of Chander Bhan, son of Kishan Chand of Campbellpur district, confined in the Lahore Central Jail, in the second week of April, 1938 ;

[8. Partab Singh.]

- (b) since how long he had been confined to solitary confinement and the reasons for this kind of punishment?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : (a) There was a prisoner named Chander Sen (not Chandar Bhan), son of Kishen Chand of Campbellpore, confined in the Lahore Central Jail during the second week of April, 1938.

(b) This prisoner has never been kept in "solitary confinement". He has, however, been awarded two periods of "separate confinement" of one month each in 1935 and 1936. These punishments were for neglecting his allotted tasks and indiscipline. The distinction between solitary and separate confinement is given in paragraphs 510 and 612 (8) of the Punjab Jail Manual.

- (b) whether it is a fact that the Milap and the Partap which used to be subscribed by certain aided schools, have since been banned ; if so, reasons for the same ?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye : (a) and (b) It has been decided on educational grounds not to include vernacular dailies in the list of journals, etc., approved for use in schools in the Punjab. The head masters of schools have nevertheless been authorised to subscribe to such vernacular dailies as have been included in the list of papers approved by Government for purposes of advertisement, etc., provided they are calculated to serve some useful purpose in educational institutions.

WATER SUPPLY SYSTEM OF OKARA MANDI.

*3275-A. Chaudhri Kartar Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the water supply system of Okara Mandi, district Montgomery, has been completed since 1935 ;
- (b) the amount of money spent on its construction by the Municipality ;
- (c) whether by its resolution of 9th February, 1938, the abovenamed Municipality requested the Government for permission to supply water by meter and pipe system and whether the permission was accorded ; if so, the reasons for not supplying water to the population of the city up to this time ?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye : (a) Yes.

(b) Rs. 1,47,120.

(c) No resolution was passed by the Municipal Committee on the 9th February, 1938. By-laws, however, provide metered connections and the Committee requested Government by its resolution No. 2, dated the 6th January, 1938, for amending the said by-laws so as to provide for private connections at flat rates. After considering this proposal Government are of the opinion that it will be a very retrograde step to permit the Committee to give connections for private water supply on a ferrule basis without meters. The effect will be to make the supply intermittent, cause serious waste of water and render the water supply scheme quite inadequate for the requirements of the population, besides setting a bad example to other towns where the metering system is being carried out. It has, however, been suggested that the meter rents for  $\frac{3}{4}$ " and  $\frac{1}{2}$ " meters might be reduced to six annas per mensem which is the positive minimum which could be faced; and that the charge per 1,000 gallons for water supplied through meters might be reduced, say to six annas per 1,000 gallons, if the Committee wishes to make private connections more attractive.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh: Does the Honourable Minister know that in the capital of the Punjab and other municipal committees in the Punjab water supply is charged on flat rates?

Minister: And the Government does not approve of that.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh: Does the Government intend to stop the previous system and start meter system?

Minister: It is decidedly in the interest of the public as well as the local bodies.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh: Is the Minister aware that poor people will not be able to take water?

Minister: That is not correct.

FEE CONCESSIONS TO AGRICULTURISTS AND DEPRESSED CLASSES.

*3276. Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will the Honourable Minister of Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether Government notification No. 4870-G., dated the 18th February, 1938, applied only to Government and board anglo-vernacular schools in the province or also to all Government aided schools as well;
- (b) if the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, the reasons for excluding aided schools from the list of such schools which according to the said circular will charge concession fees from students of agriculturists and depressed classes?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye: (a) and (b). Punjab Government notification No. 4870-G., dated the 18th February, 1938, has not affected the fee concessions for agriculturists which are exactly the same as heretofore. The concession in the primary classes is admissible in all kinds of schools, while that in the secondary classes is admissible in Government and board anglo-vernacular schools only, because finances do not permit of the extension of the latter concession to privately managed schools.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister please state whether the Government has considered the desirability of extending this concession to the college classes as well in the Government colleges ?

Minister : I require notice.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Is the Honourable Minister aware that similar concessions have been given in other provinces and particularly in Bombay and other Congress provinces.

Minister : We are far ahead of other provinces in many respects and my honourable friend does not want me to criticise the administration of other provinces.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister please state in what respects he is far ahead of other provinces ?

Minister : That is acknowledged by other provinces.

Mr. Speaker : The question is disallowed.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I know why the Honourable Minister is so angry while answering these questions ? (Laughter).

AGE LIMIT FOR APPEARING FOR THE PUNJAB CIVIL SERVICE (JUDICIAL BRANCH) COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

*3277. Pandit Bhagat Ram Sharma : Will the Honourable Premier be pleased to state—

- (a) the age limit fixed for candidates appearing for the Punjab Civil Service (Judicial Branch) Competitive Examination ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that some concession in the matter of age is allowed to persons serving under the Government ;
- (c) whether it is also a fact that this concession is not extended to those persons belonging to Punjab, who are otherwise qualified in all respects, but are serving in the offices under the Government of India ;
- (d) if the answer to part (c) above be in the affirmative, what are the reasons for this differential treatment ?

Parliamentary Secretary (Khan Bahadur Mian Ahmad Yar Khan, Daulatana) : (a) The honourable member is referred to rule (2) of the rules in Chapter 20-A of the High Court Rules and Orders, Volume I, a copy of which is available in the Assembly Library.

(b) Yes, but only to ministerial Government servants serving under the Punjab Government.

(c) Yes.

(d) Ministerial Government servants serving under the Punjab Government have been given this concession to provide them with the opportunity of promotion to a provincial service. The concession has also the effect that it enables the Punjab Government to attract a better type of recruit for ministerial posts.

Pandit Bhagat Ram Sharma : I want to point out that in part (b) of question No. *3277 it should be 'Provincial Government' and not Government.

Pandit Bhagat Ram Sharma : Does the Government intend to extend this concession to people serving under the Central Government?

Parliamentary Secretary : No.

PARTICIPATION OF NOMINATED MEMBERS OF LOCAL BODIES IN PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS.

*3278. Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister of Public Works be pleased to state—

- (a) whether Government have issued recently any circular to all municipal boards directing official members not to participate in municipal proceedings when the question of selecting a non-official president is under consideration of the committee and further, not to take part in the election of a non-official president ;
- (b) if so, whether he will be pleased to lay a copy of the said circular on the table of the House ;
- (c) the date when the said circular was issued ;
- (d) whether Government has recently received any complaint from Rewari and Palwal Municipal Committees that the orders in the said circular were disregarded at the time of the last election of presidents by these committees; if so, what action Government has taken or proposes to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana : (a) No such circular has been issued.

(b) and (c) Do not arise.

(d) Complaints have been received from certain members of the Municipal Committee, Rewari, but no action was taken on them as no irregularity had been committed in the election of the President. Government have recently received no complaint from Palwal Municipal Committee.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister of Public Works be pleased to state whether any letter was addressed to the Panipat Municipality on this subject directing that the official members should not participate in the election of the non-official president ?

Minister : Perhaps you are referring to a different circular, the language and subject of which is different. If you want that circular, I have got it here with me and I can place it on the table.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Does it deal with this subject ?

Minister : No. It concerns an official president and not a non-official president.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I would like to see the circular. May I further know in reference to the reply to part (d) as to what was the nature of the complaints mentioned in the representation made by this municipality?

Minister : If you will give notice I will supply you particulars as to the nature of the complaints too.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister be pleased to state further whether the Government has considered or whether they intend considering the question of asking the official members not to take part in the election of the President ?

Minister : Can a question as to the future intention of the Government be asked ?

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Have they considered or not ?

Minister : No.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Do they intend to consider ?

Minister : That concerns the future intention of the Government. First get a ruling from the Chair and then I shall reply.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : The Honourable Speaker has not objected and that is enough ; the Honourable Minister should take notice of the question.

Minister : I would like a ruling whether the question is permissible or not.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : My question is simple. I want to know whether Government intend to consider the desirability of asking official members not to participate in the elections of presidents of the municipalities ?

Minister : The local bodies concerned have option in the matter. If they so desire, they can elect the president and there is no question of any consideration by the Government.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : My question is whether official members, who are guided by the deputy commissioners in the municipalities, are asked or whether the Government have considered the desirability of asking them not to participate in the election of presidents because they belong to a separate party ?

Minister : They are members and they are guided by no one.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Do the Government intend to ask them not to participate in presidential elections ?

Minister : As long as they are members, they have certain rights as other members. You can read the circular and the position will be clear.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : What objection can there be ? Why are official members in district boards not required to take part ?

Minister : I am afraid the honourable member has not followed the reply nor the question. The same rule applies to municipalities now as well as to district boards and that was the matter to which the circular relates.

Mr. Speaker : The next question.

REDUCTION IN THE SCALES OF PAY OF THE VETERINARY SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS.

*3279. 2nd Lieutenant Bhai Fatchjang Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Development be pleased to state whether it is a fact that some five or six years ago the scales of pay of the veterinary sub-assistant surgeons was reduced and if so, the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram : There are no posts of veterinary sub-assistant surgeons under the Punjab Government.

If the honourable member is referring to veterinary assistant surgeons, their old scale of pay was Rs. 100—10—150, efficiency bar—10—200; efficiency bar—Rs. 10—300. Rules prescribing revised rates of pay for subordinate services were published in March, 1937, and reduced the scale to Rs. 80—7—150; efficiency bar—Rs. 7/8—225. The lower scale is applicable to all veterinary assistant surgeons who were not confirmed before 1st January, 1931. Lower scales of pay have now been prescribed for all services in the interests of economy.

COMPLAINT AGAINST B. VIDYA PARKASH, MOTOR LICENCE CLERK
IN THE DEPUTY COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE, AMBALA.

*3280. Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that a complaint is pending with the Deputy Commissioner, Ambala, against B. Vidya Parkash, Motor Licence Clerk in the Deputy Commissioner's office, Ambala, which was filed by the Motor Union, Kharar and Ambala; if so, whether he will be pleased to lay a copy of the same on the table of the House;
- (b) the action that has been taken or that is intended to be taken on that complaint?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : Enquiry is being made from the Deputy Commissioner and on receipt of information a reply will be sent to the honourable member.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Since the nature of the complaint is very serious, will the Honourable Minister of Revenue kindly take steps to see that this man is transferred pending further enquiries in the matter?

Minister : I am afraid it is a request for action.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : May I ask the Honourable Minister to expedite the enquiry?

Minister : I have said that when the information is received, reply will be sent to the honourable member. Beyond that I cannot say anything.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : In view of the complaint and the seriousness involved in the matter, will the Government transfer the officer pending further enquiries?

Minister : I do not know what the complaint is. Unless the complaint is received I cannot reply.

Lala Duni Chand : May I know if it is the policy of the Government to transfer the person against whom serious charges have been brought?

Minister : I think the request is futile if my friend means that an officer should be transferred merely on a complaint without making an enquiry.

REPRESENTATION BY PUNJAB BHATIA RAJPUT ZAMINDARS.

*3281. Sardar Hari Singh: Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that a deputation on behalf of the Punjab Bhatia Rajput Zamindars League waited upon him on the 21st April, 1938 and submitted a representation to him regarding their tribes' rights and grievances;
- (b) if answer to (a) above be in the affirmative, the contents of their representation;
- (c) the action taken or proposed to be taken in the matter by the Government?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia: (a) Yes.

(b) The main prayer was that the Bhatias be declared as Rajputs for purposes of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act.

(c) The deputationists were asked to submit a consolidated statement showing the number of landowners, the area of land owned, the extent to which they have gained or lost land since the last settlement, and the extent to which they depend upon agriculture for livelihood. - (b) if so, the allegations made in the representation;
- (c) whether an enquiry has been held into the matter and if so, with what result?

Parliamentary Secretary (Sardar Bahadur Sardar Ujjal Singh):

(a) No such representation seems to have been received.

(b) and (c) Do not arise.

Sardar Hari Singh: May I ask whether a representation referred to in this question has been received by the Inspector-General of Police?

Parliamentary Secretary: No.

Sardar Hari Singh: I have got a receipt for the registered cover.

Parliamentary Secretary: The information that I have got is that no representation was received till the time the draft reply was prepared.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Will he refer the matter again to the person concerned for further enquiry?

Parliamentary Secretary : The honourable member might send another representation.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Oh !

(At this stage Mr. Speaker left the Chair and Mr. Deputy Speaker occupied it).

*3283. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the candidate patwaris of the Irrigation Department have recently submitted a memorial to the authorities concerned on the subject of their grievances of their rights ;
- (b) if answer to (a) above be in the affirmative, contents of the representation and action taken by the Government thereon ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) Yes.

(b) The representation is under consideration. The honourable member is probably not unaware of the contents of the printed representation.

Sardar Hari Singh : I am unaware of it. That is why I put that question.

Minister : But you know it.

Sardar Hari Singh : The Honourable Minister says that I am probably not unaware of it. I have never heard a responsible Minister answering like that. The Honourable Minister knows it but I do not know.

Minister : My reply is clear. The representation is under consideration.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The next question.

BOARDING HOUSE, GOVERNMENT GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL, MIANWALI.

*3284. Khan Bahadur Captain Malik Muzaffar Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that no boarding house for the students of the Government Girls' High School, Mianwali, has been built so far and the Government has again recently postponed its construction ; if so, the reasons for the same ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that a building for the boarding house was rented last year and its rent paid out of the Mianwali District Dehat Sudhar Fund and the Department has again asked the Deputy Commissioner, Mianwali, to arrange for a boarding house on rent to be paid by the District Board, Mianwali ;
- (c) whether he is aware of the fact that a boarding house is a necessity for the girls of rural areas studying in the Government Girls' High School, Mianwali, and that it is not possible for the District Board, Mianwali, to pay its rent ; if so, the action intended to be taken in the matter ?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haya : (a) Yes.

(b) (i) Chhidru.—A scheme costing Rs. 95,458 was prepared to improve the Chhidru water supply but it had to be dropped as the District Board, Mianwali, could not meet its annual maintenance charges amounting to Rs. 8,000.

(ii) and (iii) Bore Khel and Sanwan.—Grants-in-aid of Rs. 22,589 and Rs. 8,401 for improving water-supply of Bore Khel and Sanwan have been given by Government and the works are under construction.

(iv) Sultan Khel.—A water-supply scheme for this village was prepared in 1929 at an estimated cost of Rs. 25,400. A cent per cent grant-in-aid was sanctioned for it but the matter was subsequently dropped in October, 1930, on account of financial stringency. The matter is now again receiving attention.

Parliamentary Secretary (Sardar Bahadur Sardar Ujja! Singh) :

(a) Twelve accused including six women were arrested in a case under sections 342/366, Indian Penal Code, registered on the 23rd April, 1937, and were subsequently challaned.

Mian Sultan Mahmud Hotiana : Is this punishment in proportion to the offence ?

Parliamentary Secretary : Yes.

Mian Sultan Mahmud Hotiana : Will it deter other police officers from committing this offence ?

Mr. Deputy Speaker : It is a question of opinion .

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) and (b) No remissions of land revenue were given. As regards abiana, figures by villages are not available, but a general remission of annas 6 in the rupee of the occupier's rate charged on the area under sugarcane was granted, amounting to Rs. 1,47,082.

[K. B. Mian Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana.]
to six months rigorous' imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 100. Particulars regarding the number of cases in which departmental or judicial proceedings were instituted are not readily available, and perhaps in view of the information given the honourable member will not press for them.

COMPLAINT AGAINST B. VIDYA PARKASH, MOTOR LICENCE CLERK, AMBALA.

*3298. Pandit Shri Ram Sharma : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that a complaint is pending with the Deputy Commissioner, Ambala, against B. Vidya Parkash, Motor Licence Clerk in the Deputy Commissioner's Office, Ambala, which was filed by the Motor Union, Kharar and Ambala, if so, whether he will be pleased to lay a copy of it on the table of the House ;
- (b) what action has been taken or is intended to be taken in the matter ;
- (c) whether the clerk in question was transferred immediately to some other district during the pendency of the case and if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) and (b) The attention of the honourable member is invited to the answer given to Assembly question No. *9280<sup>1</sup>.

(c) No. Such transfer was not considered necessary.

REMOVAL OF THE NAMES OF CANDIDATE PATWARIS FROM THE LIST OF CANDIDATES.

*3299. Lala Duni Chand : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the names of all the candidate patwaris, who have exceeded the age of 25 years have recently been ordered to be removed from the list of candidates and if so the reasons therefor ;
- (b) whether there is any proposal before the Government to make the appointments of candidate patwaris on the provincial basis and not on the circle basis as is done at present ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) (i) Yes.

(ii) Because owing to indiscriminate enlistment of candidates, the number was grossly in excess of requirements.

(b) No.

Lala Duni Chand : May I know whether it is a fact that many of these patwari candidates had been on the list for many years ?

Minister : Possibly. I have no information in hand.

Lala Duni Chand : Has the Government considered that it is a case of great hardship ?

Minister : It is a matter of opinion.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it not a question of fact ?

Minister : A question of opinion.

Begum Rashida Latif Baji : May I know whether the Government will consider the case of those candidate patwaris favourably who are above the age of 25 and who in the hope of getting service as a patwari did not learn any other work ?

Mr. Deputy Speaker : It does not arise out of this question.

Sardar Ajit Singh : Is it a fact that an examination will be held for recruiting new patwaris at Sheikhpura ?

Mr. Deputy Speaker : This question also does not arise.

Sardar Ajit Singh : Why not, Sir ? I want to impress upon the Minister that because the patwari examination is going to be held at Sheikhpura, it means, the department is in need of Canal patwaris, and in that case, I am asking whether those candidates who have been turned out, will be kept on the waiting list or not.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : That is not a supplementary question.

Begum Rashida Latif Baji : May I know whether it is a fact that a few of the over-aged candidates have been employed ; if so, what is the reason for that ?

Minister : I have no knowledge of it.

Lala Duni Chand : Has the Government considered the question of compensating those people by giving them some other appointments ?

Minister : There is no question of compensation. It is a question of supply and demand. If they are suitable candidates they will be kept and if they are not suitable, there is no help for it.

COPYING CLERKS AND SECTION TYPISTS.

*3300. Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that copying clerks and section copyists have been amalgamated into one branch in the new reorganisation scheme ; if so, why the copying clerks are not getting the same pay as allowed to section copyists ;
- (b) whether any circular or order has been issued by the Government that copying clerks may be absorbed in the district establishment ; if so, how many of the copying clerks have been so absorbed since the issue of the said circular ;
- (c) whether any instance has come to the notice of the Government, in which the orders in the above circular have been ignored and if so, the action taken in this behalf ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) Yes; but there is no distinction between the pay of section copyists and copy clerks.

(b) Yes. It will serve no useful purpose to collect from deputy commissioners the information required by the latter part of the question.

(c) No.

COPYING CLERKS AND SECTION TYPISTS.

*3301. Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) the total number of copying clerks in the Punjab so far recruited from among the section copyists together with the length of their service as section copyists;

(b) whether it is a fact that copying clerks recruited from section copyists and have nine or ten years' service to their credit as section copyists are not being treated in the matter of pay and on the principle observed in the case of section copyists and if so, why;

(c) whether it is also a fact that copying clerks are not allowed pension on retirement as other clerks on the district establishment and the copying clerks in the Sessions Courts and the High Court are allowed pensions, if so, why?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) The information is not readily available, and the time and labour involved in collecting it would be out of proportion to the importance of the case.

(b) Yes. Copy clerks were recruited from retrenched section copyists, and their pay was finally fixed at Rs. 25 per mensem. It was in the case of those section copyists only who were retained in service under the re-organization scheme, and who were drawing more than Rs. 25 per mensem, that Government sanctioned a personal allowance of Rs. 1-8-0 per mensem for each year of approved service.

(c) No. Copy clerks appointed prior to March, 1934, are entitled to pension on retirement, as is the case with copy clerks in the Sessions courts and the High Court.

EVASION OF SERVICE OF AN ATTACHMENT WARRANT BY MRS. JARVIS.

*3302. Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : With reference to answers to supplementary questions to question No. *1563<sup>1</sup> asked on 27th January 1936, will the Honourable Minister for Finance be pleased to state whether his attention has been drawn to the specific case of evasion by Mrs. Jarvis, wife of Mr. Jarvis, a corporal in the Army, of the service of an attachment warrant issued by the Simla court and if so, whether he has examined the position as promised by him in that answer and if so, the result of the examination?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : Enquiries show that a complaint under sections 183 and 186 of the Indian Penal Code was filed against Mrs. Jarvis on the 25th March 1931 for evasion of service of an attachment warrant. This complaint was dismissed under section 206 of the Criminal Procedure Code on the 4th May, 1931. The records of the case were destroyed on 15th May 1934.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister be pleased to state whether it is not a fact that on a subsequent application, the court had issued a warrant of attachment against this lady, but that warrant could not be served, since the lady evaded its service by running away from place to place ?

Minister : I cannot add anything particular to what I have stated already. The records have been duly destroyed.

PURCHASING OF PROPRIETARY RIGHTS IN GANJI BAR AND NILI BAR.

*3302-A. Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that in the Nili Bar the Military grantees of land have to pay Rs. 100 per acre to acquire proprietary rights, whilst in the Ganji Bar they can do so on payment of Rs. 40 per acre only ;
- (b) the reasons for the aforesaid rate being kept so high in the Nili Bar ;
- (c) the relative proportion of the average yield per acre of the land in the Nili Bar to that in the Ganji Bar ;
- (d) the average sale price of land per acre in the Nili Bar at the time when the said rate of Rs. 100 per acre was fixed ;
- (e) the average sale price of land per acre in the Nili Bar at present ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) Originally the price in both colonies was fixed at Rs. 100 per acre but in 1927 the price in the Ganji Bar was reduced to Rs. 40 per acre if paid in a lump sum in order to try to induce grantees to acquire proprietary rights. This hope has not been realized.

(b) Had the rates been fixed lower, the debt incurred on the construction of the canals could not have been paid off. The experimental reduction in rates in the Ganji Bar has not resulted in any increased payments being made. There exists therefore no reason for altering the rates.

(c) There has as yet been no regular settlement in the Nili Bar Colony so that this part cannot be answered with certainty ; but it is considered that the land in the Nili Bar is generally of a slightly better quality.

(d) The rate of Rs. 100 per acre was fixed in 1927 when the average price at the auctions in December, 1926 was Rs. 484 and in March, 1927 Rs. 393 per acre.

(e) At the most recent auction in 1938 Rs. 327 per acre.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : What was the average price received at the auction in the Ganji Bar ?

Minister : My honourable friend may draw his own conclusions from the reply I have given and he can also draw the average if he likes.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : The Honourable Minister has given us the figures of the average price that was received in auction in the Nili Bar. What I want to know is as to what was the average price received in auction in the Ganji Bar. What was the reason of making this distinction between the Nili Bar and the Ganji Bar, the rates being Rs. 100 per acre in one case and Rs. 40 per acre only in the other case ?

Minister : If my honourable friend would care to read the reply I have given, he will find the reasons there.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Has there been any consideration of benefiting any particular class in the Ganji Bar ?

Minister : No, Sir.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Do the Government intend to consider the desirability or justice of reducing the price in Nili Bar as well ?

Minister : It is a request for action.

B. RAGHBIR DAS, EXECUTIVE OFFICER, AMBALA CITY.

*3303. Khawaja Ghulam Samad : Will the Honourable Minister for Public Works be pleased to state—

- (a) whether he is aware that the term of appointment of B. Raghbir Das, Executive Officer, Ambala city, expired on 15th June, 1938 ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the Municipal Committee, Ambala city, has been authorised to appoint an Executive Officer to fill the vacancy so caused within three months of the expiry of the term ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that the said B. Raghbir Das has requested the Government to be allowed to continue in office during these three months after the expiry of his term ;
- (d) if the reply to part (c) is in the affirmative, whether B. Raghbir Das further requested the Government to allow him to remain attached to the municipality in some other capacity ;
- (e) whether he is aware that the said B. Raghbir Das has been appointed by the Deputy Commissioner, Ambala, as Superintendent-in-charge of the water supply on a salary of Rs. 250 without consulting the Municipal Committee ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that emphatic protests against this appointment have been made to the Government by responsible persons and organizations of Ambala City ;
- (g) the action which the Government propose to take in this matter ?

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana : (a) and (b) Yes.

(c) and (d) B. Raghbir Das requested Government that he should be allowed to continue in the service of the Committee till it selects an Executive Officer and the appointment is approved by Government.

(e) Yes.

(f) Government have received a few representations protesting against the appointment of B. Raghbir Dass as Superintendent-in-charge of water supply.

(g) The matter is under consideration of Government.

Khawaja Ghulam Samad : Who is now working as the Executive Officer of the Municipal Committee, Anbala City ?

Minister : The President works in the absence of the Executive Officer.

Khawaja Ghulam Samad : In that case, cannot the President perform the duties of the Superintendent, Water Works, also, in the absence of the latter ?

Minister : The whole question is receiving the consideration of Government.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it true that prior to the appointment of Bakhshi Raghbir Das as Executive Officer, the affairs of the municipality were in a chaos and that he evolved order out of the chaos ?

Minister : That is a matter of opinion. The honourable member is a resident of the city and he knows better.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it not within the knowledge of Government that Bakhshi Raghbir Das during his period of six years considerably improved the affairs of the municipality ?

Minister : That question is irrelevant to the question before the House.

Lala Duni Chand : I am trying to show that Bakhshi Raghbir Das should have been continued in his appointment in view of his past good work. The question does arise out of the main question. Is it true that Bakhshi Raghbir Das earned the best opinion of the local authorities including the Commissioner ?

Minister : As I have already said the matter is under the consideration of Government and these factors will be kept in view when the matter is decided. But I still hold that the question is irrelevant because the main question is whether an emergency regarding water supply exists in Ambala to justify the appointment of a special officer.

Lala Duni Chand : The question is relevant, because it arises out of the question whether there was any justification for the appointment of Bakhshi Raghbir Das on a provisional pay of Rs. 250. I am trying to show that he was the best man and that the best man was selected. How then can the Honourable Minister say that this question does not arise ?

Minister : I note that the honourable member has got a very high opinion of the officer concerned.

Lala Duni Chand : May I know whether Bakhshi Raghbir Das earned the best opinion of some of the present Ministers and of an ex-Minister ?

Minister : That question does not arise either. I only think that the honourable member has a good opinion of the officer.

Lala Duni Chand : Does the Honourable Minister share that opinion ?

Minister : I will consider that opinion for what it is worth.

Khawaja Ghulam Samad : Is the Honourable Minister aware of the monetary condition of the municipality ? If so, did the monetary condition of the municipality warrant the appointment of an officer on Rs. 250 ?

Minister : All these questions will be considered. If the honourable member had carefully followed my answer to part (e) of the question, he would not have put this supplementary question.

GOVERNMENT DISPENSARIES IN SIMLA EAST.

*3304. Rai Sahib Lala Gopal Dass : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) the number of Government dispensaries in Simla East both for the general public and employees of Government ;
- (b) the area and the classes of people they are intended to serve ;
- (c) the staff employed at these dispensaries with their monthly salaries and the allowances that they get ;
- (d) the average number of patients from the general public and Government employees treated at each of these dispensaries per day during the year 1967 ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that the number of patients attending the Chota Simla Dispensary has of late increased and that the number of patients attending the dispensary in Barnes Court has of late decreased although both of these dispensaries are intended to cater for the needs of the staff employed in the offices of the Punjab Government at Simla ; if so, the reasons therefor ;
- (f) the number of years the present medical officer has been in his present post as incharge of the Barnes Court Dispensary and date or time when he is due to be transferred ?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye : (a) There is one Government dispensary in Simla East at Barnes Court for the employees of Government only.

(b) It serves the staff and servants residing in the Barnes Court and the Punjab Government clerical and menial establishment at Chota Simla, drawing pay up to Rs. 150 per mensem.

(c) A statement is laid on the table.

(d) The daily average attendance of Government employees for 1967 at this dispensary was approximately 24.

(e) Yes, because the Chota Simla Municipal dispensary serves all classes of people who attend from the areas of Chota Simla, Kasumpti, Sanjauli and their neighbourhood.

(f) Practically three years. No decision as to the date of this sub-assistant surgeon's transfer has yet been taken.

CONCESSIONS FOR LESSEES IN CHAKS NOS. 166/9-L AND 42, 43/2-L.

*3305. Sardar Ajit Singh: Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state whether he has recently received representations from the lessees of chaks Nos. 166/9-L and 42, 43/2-L in Montgomery district praying therein that they may be allowed the same concessions as have been granted to the lessees in Burewala and in the Lower Bari Doab Canal according to the announcement made on the 2nd March 1938 and that they be allowed to give up their leases according to the terms of that announcement and if so, the action taken or intended to be taken thereon?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia: A petition has been received from the lessees of Chak No. 166/9-L praying for certain concessions and alleging that water had been short and that their tenants had been on strike. On investigation it was found that the conditions were not such as could not have been anticipated at the time the lease was taken and that in fact no strike of tenants had occurred. No representations have been received from the lessees of Chaks 42, 43/2-L. In the circumstances Government sees no necessity for any action.

Sardar Ajit Singh: Will the Honourable Minister please state whether he is aware of the discontent among the lessees of these chaks on account of their not having been given the concessions granted to the lessees in the Burewala and in the Lower Bari Doab Canal Colony?

Minister: Government will not be prepared to submit to this sort of pressure when people have taken their leases with their eyes open.

Sardar Ajit Singh : Is it a fact that the chaks mentioned in the original question are situated in the neighbourhood of the chaks on the Nili Bar Colony which have been granted these concessions?

Minister : Government does not propose to pursue the matter further at present.

Sardar Ajit Singh : Is the Minister aware of the fact that the lessees of the chaks mentioned in my question have suffered heavy losses? If so, is there any intention on the part of the Government to compensate them for these losses?

Minister : Government has no information on the subject.

PRISONER SHIV NATH, SON OF JAWALA SINGH OF LUDHIANA.

*3386. Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the Honourable Minister of Finance be pleased to state—

- (a) whether Government are aware that after commutation of death sentence into life sentence, the prisoner Shiv Nath, son of Jawala Singh of Ludhiana, applied for a higher class in 1934; if so, what was the result of this application and grounds of the decision arrived at;
- (b) where the prisoner has been confined since the commutation of his sentence and what is his age now;
- (c) whether it is a fact that the prisoner has now again applied for a further concession, viz., premature release under certain conditions;
- (d) whether the Government has any intention to extend this concession to a prisoner who has been guilty of a brutal murder as remarked by the High Court?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : (a) Yes. It was rejected because the prisoner was not considered fit for 'B' class.

(b) Lahore Borstal Institution; 22 years.

(c) No.

(d) Does not arise.

REMISSION ON ACCOUNT OF FAILURE OF GRAM CROPS ON LOWER BARI DOAB CANAL.

*3387. Sardar Ajit Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the gram crop as also the mixed gram and wheat crop Makhloot on the Lower Bari Doab Canal Colony has completely failed this year;
- (b) whether it is a fact that a number of representations have been made to the authorities by the zamindars concerned regarding this and applying therein for grant of total remission of abiana and land revenue for these crops;

- (c) whether it is a fact that in the Lyallpur Colony full remission in abiana and land revenue has been granted to the zamindars for these crops this year ;
- (d) if the answers to (a) and (b) above be in the affirmative the action that the Government has taken or proposes to take on these representations ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : I regret that the reply to this question is not yet ready.

REMISSION ON ACCOUNT OF FAILURE OF CROPS IN MIAN CHANNU AND OTHER PLACES.

*3308. Sardar Ajit Singh : (i) Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state whether it is a fact that—

- (a) the zamindars of Mian Channu, Khanewal, Kossowal and Chichawatni, etc., of Lower Bari Doab Colony suffered last year due to the complete damage of their rabi crop due to hail-storms ;
- (b) the rates of wheat have fallen down abnormally ;
- (c) the two rabi crops of this ilaga have failed practically ;
- (ii) if the answers to (a), (b) and (c) be in the affirmative, will the Government be prepared to allow them general remission of land revenue or extend the realization period to the next kharif crop ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (i) (a) There was considerable damage to crops in rabi 1937.

(b) Yes.

(c) No, the gram crop only was partially damaged but the area is very little.

(ii) The question of relief owing to damage to the gram crop in Rabi 1938, is under consideration.

INSPECTION OF CROPS IN MULTAN DISTRICT.

*3309. Sardar Ajit Singh : Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the inspection of guzara crops, which is shown as a green manure, in Khanewal tahsil of the Multan district, used to be done by the officers of the Agricultural department previously and that this inspection work is now done by the Irrigation authorities ; if so, the reasons for this departure from the old practice ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The old procedure was cancelled in 1928 because the Agricultural department was not sufficiently staffed to carry out this work properly as it required a comprehensive and careful check over a large area to prevent loss of revenue.

Sardar Ajit Singh : May I know whether the Honourable Minister is aware of the fact that this year green manure has also been assessed to land revenue in and near Khanewal and that representations have been sent to the Government by the zamindars concerned against this imposition ?

Minister : If the honourable member will give me notice I will make enquiries.

Sardar Ajit Singh : Will the Honourable Minister be prepared to take suitable action in the matter if it is brought to his notice that green manure has really been assessed to land revenue in the said ilaga ?

Minister : I am not going to commit myself to anything at present.

Parliamentary Secretary (Khan Bahadur Mian Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana) : It is regretted that the information is not readily available. The time and labour involved in collecting the names and figures required will not be commensurate with the result.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Does it mean that the figures are not available in the Accounts Branch ?

Parliamentary Secretary : Perhaps the honourable member has not heard my answer. What I said was that the time and labour involved in collecting the information required is not commensurate with the result to be achieved.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Did the Parliamentary Secretary make sure how many members are involved, 5, 6, 8 or 10—how many ?

Parliamentary Secretary : I cannot give you any information off-hand.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Did he not even take the trouble of knowing the number of members ?

Parliamentary Secretary : I did.

Pandit Shri Ram Sharma : Is there any party consideration underlying the idea of not supplying the information required ?

Parliamentary Secretary : Absolutely not.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Will the honourable member please state the reason for not disclosing the names of these persons and the amounts received by them ?

Parliamentary Secretary : There is no question of not disclosing. We feel it will involve a lot of time and trouble with no result.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Whom does he mean by ' we ' ?

Parliamentary Secretary : The Government.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Do Government realise that it is necessary to supply this information to the honourable members of this House so that they may be in possession of full facts and they may utilise this at the time of the budget ?

Parliamentary Secretary : It is a matter of opinion. If I had thought so, I would have given a different reply.

*3311. Pandit Shri Ram Sharma : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

(b) Seven.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Have the Government considered the desirability of including all the members of the depressed classes in the list of statutory agriculturists as they are the real tillers of the soil ?

Minister : Government follow certain definite rules, for instance, whether the area is sufficient for their livelihood and so on.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : In view of the declarations of the Government that they are out to help the depressed classes, have they considered the desirability of including them in the list of statutory agriculturists ?

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The Honourable Member need not give a reply to this question.

Pandit Shri Ram Sharma : Does Government consider such questions on its own initiative ?

Minister : Yes, if necessary.

Pandit Shri Ram Sharma : May I, in the capacity of an agriculturist, ask the Honourable Minister as to whether the Government considers such questions without any request from the public to do so ?

Minister : If cases arise, Government does ; otherwise not.

Sardar Mula Singh : Will the Minister please state whether it is a fact that at Jullundur a resolution was passed in a conference even in his presence that the said community should be included among notified agriculturists ?

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana : A resolution on the subject has been passed but not unanimously by the Municipal Committee, Bhiwani. The resolution in question is under the consideration of Government.

*3313. Lala Duni Chand : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether he is aware that during the rainy season of 1937 floods from Tangari Nadi entered the abadi of village Mauhra about 4 miles from Ambala Cantonment and, besides doing much damage, made it impossible for men and cattle of the village to get out of the village ;
- (b) whether repeated representations have been made to the Government and the district authorities from time to time to make some provision for protecting the people of this village, from floods without any effect ;
- (c) whether he is aware that this year also the very first shower of rain in the beginning of June flooded the abadi of the said village ; if so, whether the Government is taking any action for giving relief or protection to the said village ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c) Yes, the matter is receiving the attention of Government.

Lala Duni Chand : May I enquire whether the residents of village Mauhra have been confronted with this calamity for the last two years and nothing has been done ?

Minister : Government has not got the power of the magician to do things overnight.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it a fact that each time there is rain this village becomes overflooded ?

Minister : Naturally when there is a heavy shower, places will be flooded.

Lala Duni Chand : Why is it then that no relief is being granted to these people ?

Minister : The damage is not special to this village.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it true that last year also a representation was made by the inhabitants of this village for protection and for relief ?

S.P.M.

Minister : I do not remember.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.)

- (c) whether it is a fact that the number of Christians among the pat-waris and kanungos is not according to their proportion in the population of the province; if so, what steps the Government intends to take in the matter?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : I must decline with regret to answer questions which savour of communalism on the floor of the House. I am sorry to have to adopt this attitude but Government consider it necessary in the public interest to establish a convention in connection with such questions. I shall, however, always be prepared to examine any particular instance of disproportionate representation which honourable members may bring to my notice in a more informal way.

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haya : First part.—Yes.

Second part.—In July, 1937, the District Board, Ambala, submitted plans and estimates amounting to Rs. 8,800 for the drainage scheme at Abdullapur Mandi and asked for a grant-in-aid of Rs. 5,200, the balance, viz., Rs. 3,600, being contributed by the people of the place. The scheme was forwarded to the Superintending Engineer, Public Health Circle, for scrutiny, who returned it in October, 1937, with certain technical directions to be complied with in its design.

In January, 1938, the District Board submitted the modified plans and estimates for Rs. 10,240 in accordance with the advice of the Superintending Engineer, Public Health Circle. As sullage was to be discharged into the Western Jumna Canal from the drains, a plan of the proposals was sent to the Superintending Engineer, Western Jumna Canal, and he has objected to the discharge of the sullage into the canal. The scheme was, therefore, returned for revision of the proposals.

CLOSING DOWN OF THE FOUR PRIVATE SCHOOLS IN TAHSIL NAWANSHAHK.

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haya : The Inspector of Schools, Jullundur division, administered a warning to the following unrecognised schools in the Nawanshahr tahsil :—

- (1) Khalsa A.-V. Middle School, Khan Khanna.
- (2) Public High School, Pharala.
- (3) Lahu Mal A.-V. Middle School, Kamam.

This action was taken in accordance with Departmental instructions which have been issued with a view to checking the growth of ill-equipped, ill-staffed, badly housed and unnecessary, unrecognised schools which are becoming a nuisance and which cause great worry and trouble to the established schools in the locality and to the Department.

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : Government has no information.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Do Government intend to collect information on this point ?

Minister : I do not feel the necessity of doing so.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Is the Honourable Minister aware that all sorts of rumours and reports are circulating against members and it is only fair that he should collect information ?

Minister : I will ask the honourable member not to believe in these rumours.

PUNJAB REGISTRATION OF MONEY-LENDERS BILL.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill as reported on by the select committee be taken into consideration.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Before the Honourable Premier proceeds with this Bill I wish to raise a point of order. I find that in the report of the select committee one of the signatories is Mr. Sleem, the Advocate-General. I want to know whether it is in order for him to sign the select committee's report because it is only open to members of the House to sign these reports.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member's objection is not in order. Section 64 reads as follows:—

"Every Minister and the Advocate-General shall have the right to speak in, and otherwise take part in the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly of the Province, or, in the case of a Province having a Legislative Council, both Chambers and any joint sitting of the Chambers and to speak in, and otherwise take part in the proceedings of any Committee of the Legislature of which he may be named a member, but shall not, by virtue of this section, be entitled to vote."

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : He can take part in the proceedings but I object to his signature being placed on the report.

Mr. Speaker : According to section 64 quoted by me the status of an Advocate-General in the Assembly is different from his status in a committee of which he is named a member. In my opinion if he is placed by the House on a committee he is its member while in the Assembly he is not a member. So in a select committee he is entitled to exercise all rights and privileges of a member but he cannot vote. I, therefore, hold that he could sign the select committee's report as a member of that committee. But even otherwise he could sign the report in as much as to sign a report is tantamount to taking part in the proceedings and not voting.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : This point has been raised in other provinces also.

Mr. Speaker : May be. The honourable member is requested to consider the matter further and discuss it with me privately and if I am convinced that I am wrong I shall be only too glad to change my view.

But I may add that if as laid down in section 66 (2) of the Government of India Act, "any proceeding in a Provincial Legislature shall be valid notwithstanding that it is discovered subsequently that some person, who was not entitled to do, sat or voted or otherwise took part in the proceedings", there is no reason why the proceedings of a select committee should be held to be invalid simply because they are signed by the Advocate-General assuming that he was not a member of the Committee".

Premier : I move—

That the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill as reported on by the select committee be taken into consideration.

You might have noticed that the select committee was adhering to the basic principles of the Bill, but far-reaching changes in detail have been made with a view to meet certain objections and to mitigate certain hardships which were pointed out to me by members of this House in the select committee. I should like, with your permission, to pay a tribute to my honourable friend Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the very able way in which he gave his assistance to us in the select committee, and particularly to my honourable friend Munshi Hari Lal who must have given a great deal of time to this Bill and came fully prepared with his brief. He was thus of great assistance to the select committee itself.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I hope his opinion will prevail.

Premier : As a matter of fact I think that the money-lenders who are going to be affected by this Bill could not have a better advocate than Munshi Hari Lal who, though he represents the Congress party, I think did full justice to his constituency by representing their point of view and safeguarding their interests in the select committee. (Hear, hear from Treasury benches.) (Interruption.)

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Is it damning him with faint praise ?

Premier : Even if he were not an advocate of money-lenders I think he has done justice to the cause of money-lenders even better than anybody on this side of the House could have done and my friend Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri will bear me out that he fought every inch of the ground in favour of the money-lenders throughout the proceedings of the select committee.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : They are admittedly good fighters.

Premier : I do not propose to make a speech at this stage because I should like to hear my honourable friends who have given notice of several amendments but I hope that they will concede me one thing and that is this, that during the proceedings of the select committee, I tried to accommodate, as far as possible, without in any way damaging the basic principles of the Bill itself, my friends on my right and my friends opposite and I hope that that will go a long way in expediting the consideration of this Bill during its second reading stage. About 75 per cent. of the proposals put forward on behalf of the money-lenders were accepted by me and the remaining 25 per cent. which were turned down are such that I could not possibly accept because they were against the basic principle of the Bill itself. In the circumstances I hope that the House, having regard to brevity and also having regard to the importance of the Bill itself, will try to be as brief as possible so that we might get this Bill and the pending business quickly through the House.

In conclusion, I should like my friends, who have given notice of numerous amendments, to bear in mind that the comments made in this House and outside that the Government is rushing through with this particular measure, are uncalled for and unjustified for the simple reason that this question of registration of money-lenders has been before the province and before the legislature since the year 1923, when attempts were made to get some kind of measure for registration passed with a view to registering the money-lenders. Further attempts were repeatedly made to have such a measure passed. So, to say that this Government is rushing through a measure which has been before the country and the province and the House off and on for a period of nearly 15 years is, I think, to say the least, a most unwarranted and uncalled for assertion. Moreover, I may, for the benefit of the House, point out that in addition to similar legislation being enforced in other countries, there is at least one province in India which took the lead in the matter—the Central Provinces—which enacted a Registration of Money-lenders' Act in 1934 and amended it in 1936, and I believe that two other provinces—the Provinces of Bombay and Bihar—have got a Bill on the anvil at the moment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Are you prepared to follow the Central Provinces Act?

Premier: No. That was passed by a bureaucratic Government (laughter).

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: And you are a democratic Government?

Premier: If my honourable friend wants me to follow the democratic Government of Bihar in regard to their Bill, there are several things which I will be glad to incorporate in my Bill. For instance, in the Bihar Bill—those who have studied it will have noticed—besides non-suiting the defaulting money-lender, they have also provided for penalty such as imprisonment, fine, etc. We have not taken such drastic steps in our measure.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Thank you for the small mercies.

Premier: If my honourable friend would only look at it from an unprejudiced point of view, he will find that the amendments which we have made in the select committee practically meet 95 per cent. demands of honest money-lenders. I do not speak for dishonest money-lenders who will not be satisfied with any legislation of the kind. With these few remarks I commend my motion for the consideration of the House (loud applause).

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved—

That the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill as reported on by the select committee be taken into consideration.

Lala Sita Ram (Trade Union, Labour) (Urdu): Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill as reported on by the select committee be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by the 1st October 1938.

Sir, before I mention the grounds on the basis of which I think it necessary that the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill be circulated to elicit public opinion thereon by the 1st of October, 1938, I seek your indulgence to state three very important points with regard to my own self. Firstly, I have been taken ill recently and on account of this illness I will not be able to do as much justice to the subject by discussing the merits and demerits of this Bill as I have a mind to do or as the Bill in the present form (owing to so many severe provisions), demands from me.

Secondly, let me make it clear at the very outset that though I myself carry on the business of money-lending, yet I am wholly free, by the grace of Almighty God, from all such evils which are generally levelled against the money-lenders as I believe that income derived from dishonest means is haram. I can say without any fear of contradiction that my conduct is above reproach. (A voice: Self-praise is no recommendation). I have, Sir, stated this thing against my wishes to clear two misunderstandings, (1) it may not be argued afterwards that I being interested in it wanted to defend this class and (2) whatever I would be saying would be based upon personal and practical experiences and not on matters of hearsay.

Thirdly, though technically it does not become of me to oppose this Bill so long as I occupy a seat on this side of the House, i.e., the Government side, yet taking in view the hard, one-sided and partial provisions of this Bill, I cannot help recording my protest and dissent against it in accordance with the voice of my conscience. Hence I think it my duty to mention some of the very serious objections which reason and justice have against this Bill.

Now, Sir, I will submit before you in a nut-shell the history of this Bill. The honourable members are aware of the fact that this Bill was published in the Punjab Gazette, dated 21st June, 1938. As members of the Ministerial Party we expressed in the strongest words our resentment in the party meeting regarding this Bill as well as the other Bills moved by the Government in this session of the Assembly, but it was only a cry in the wilderness and we had no other alternative but to request the general House to adopt the motion of Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri for circulation of the Bill for eliciting public opinion.

In answer to our request and reasonable demands we were told by the Honourable Premier and other honourable members that a similar Bill was also introduced in the previous House, that is, the old Council and that they had obtained many opinions about the Bill which could be made use of. The Honourable Premier urged, therefore, that this Bill might be referred to the select committee and discussed there, making it clear that the opinions already obtained would be laid before the select committee.

Thus under the circumstances, we had no other alternative but to wait and the Bill was referred to a select committee consisting of several members including Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and myself. We took part in the proceedings and proposed several amendments but all excepting a few were rejected by the majority and we had to write our minutes of dissent now appended to the Bill. I may also state that neither the previous Bill nor the public opinion, referred to above, was placed before the select committee and that was the reason why we could not take notice or make use of them in the select committee. I have just now seen a copy of that previous Bill which was moved by the Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram in 1935. A sheer glance at the Bill has convinced me that the previous Bill was much less severe and was quite different from the Bill which is now under consideration. Though it was mild as it did not affect the debts previous to the passing of that Bill, yet even that was rejected. I do not, therefore, see any reason why a Bill of even more severe nature should be placed before us in 1938 again. This is my first reason why this Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion.

Now, Sir, let me draw your attention to the aims and objects of the Bill as given by the Honourable Premier. It is stated—

This is necessary in order to control money-lending transactions and to check mal-practices on the part of certain dishonest money-lenders. It is also in the interests of honest money-lenders that the profession should be purged of dishonest members whose methods and exactions create a feeling of suspicion and hostility against the profession as a whole.

I have no hesitation in admitting that dishonest money-lenders and dishonest borrowers are to be found in this profession and this is not the case in money-lending alone. In every profession we meet honest and dishonest people. I am of the opinion that if the Government is really desirous of ousting the dishonest money-lenders, they should bring forward some direct measure, and I will whole-heartedly support them. I go further and say that if the object of the Bill is to check the dishonest money-lender, I would suggest that the Government, instead of bringing in this Bill, may propose certain amendments in the Indian Penal Code in order to deal severely with the dishonest money-lenders and dishonest borrowers, who are equally responsible for the alleged corruption. The Bill in the present form on the contrary compels the honest money-lender to go out of his profession and consequently a useful institution of society will be brought to utter ruin.

Obviously there are two objects of this Bill. The first is that the introduction of this Bill would encourage the honest money-lenders. Personally I have not been able to understand as to how this Bill will encourage the honest money-lenders. On the contrary, I am inclined to think that all these laws that are passed against the money-lenders would make the honest money-lender think twice before he could endanger his money under these adverse circumstances when the laws of land are against him. In fact, realising the difficulties and obstructions in his business, the honest money-lender is already going out of this profession and on the other hand the dishonest money-lender is busy devising ways and means in order to meet the new situation. I, therefore, submit that before this Bill is passed it would be better to give a chance to the honest money-lender for expressing his opinion. It would be but fair for us to see both sides of the picture. It is just possible the honest money-lender may submit proposals which would be acceptable to my friends over there. This is, Sir, my second reason why I am for circulation of this Bill.

Now, Sir, I would like to discuss two or three points which in my opinion are based on mere misunderstanding. Those objections are long standing ones. They are not new ones. The first is that money-lending, whether honest or dishonest, is regarded as a sin. The supporters of this contention say that whatever income is made from the interest is a sin. The second thing is that every money-lender is a dishonest fellow without any exception. I have already stated that all money-lenders are not dishonest. There are honest as well dishonest people among them as it is the case in all other professions. The times have changed and day after day we see changes being effected in the existing laws, which have made the old type of usury come to an end. I make bold to say that the Government have already made so many laws to safeguard the interest of borrowers and have given them so many facilities regarding the payment of the loans that now there is hardly any need of passing a general measure like this. Let me give you examples of a few of them.

The first is the Regulation of Accounts Act. Secondly, there is the Insolvency Act. Then there is the Relief of Indebtedness Act. Last but not least are the so many facilities afforded to them. The salaries of the debtors in certain cases cannot be attached and so are the properties excluded from attachment. Sad is the plight of the honest money-lender. He lends money and when he asks it back, the dishonest debtor manufactures any number of excuses. When he resorts to court, the dishonest debtor files a number of petitions and tries to evade payment.

Why should the honest money-lender also not be protected from the dishonest borrowers? Justice should be sharp at both ends. My contention is that if the demands of the money-lender are illegal he should be dealt with accordingly but if on the other hand the debtor wilfully evades payment, the Government should undertake to protect the honest money-lender as well. Sir, we should also not overlook the fact that a section of the public and the press are demanding to be heard. We must hear them before we rush through. This is, Sir, my third reason for circulating the Bill for eliciting public opinion thereon.

Now, Sir, I take the point that interest charged on loans advanced is a sin. I really cannot understand how this view can be justified. You can object to the rate of interest, if it is very high and the Government, too, would not be said to be interfering too much in the matter, if it were to come to the rescue of the debtors who are being charged very high and unreasonable rate of interest. But if the rate of interest charged is quite reasonable then I think it is quite unjust to say that the taking of interest is a sin, which must be rooted out. Sir, I have studied economics and I know that unless the four factors of production combine, there can be no progress worth the name. These four factors are labour, land, capital and enterprise. I need not repeat that these four factors must co-operate to evolve any scheme of progress. If the owners of the lands were to insist on a particular price for the use of their land and the persons who possess brains and evolve out any profitable scheme were to try to keep all the profits to themselves ignoring the labourers and the capitalists, it will end in chaos and confusion and there will be no peace and progress. But if on the other hand each class of people were to demand a reasonable price for its activities and co-operation, things are sure to move in an orderly manner.

[L. Sita Ram.]

Now if like all other factors the capitalist asks for a reasonable rate of interest, which is in other words only a value or price of his capital, I think no one should grudge it. Need I remind the House that no person in this world can claim to combine in himself all the four qualifications of a land-owner, capitalist, labourer and the enterpriser? There must be four different persons or say classes of persons, one possessing one qualification and others possessing the others, to give us a harmonious blend of all the four. The capitalist is one of them and he must continue to exist to make the set complete and if he must exist, he must be allowed to charge interest for his capital. India cannot do without capitalists at this stage of her slow industrial and economic march. Under the circumstances it does not lie in the mouth of any reasonable man to say that taking of interest is a sin.

I have read the discussions on various enactments passed in recent years to afford protection to the debtors in the province and I find that the main argument advanced by the sponsors and supporters of those enactments is that the money-lenders having earned more than double the principal advanced, of course in the form of interest, there is no justification to allow them to have more interest from their debtors. But I am afraid that in advancing this argument one important point has been lost sight of. I fail to understand why these gentlemen should have taken only the interest charged into account and not the question of time also for which the principal advanced remained with the debtors. Sir, it is a well known fact that if a person were to deposit his money even in a Government bank and if he were not to withdraw it for a number of years, say for thirty or forty years, that money becomes treble and even four times the amount originally deposited and if that money were to be invested in some trade or industry it brings three, four or in some cases ten times the value of the money invested in the form of dividends and profits. Similarly, if a money-lender charges a reasonable rate of interest for the money that he has saved, I see no reason why he should be looked down upon by the society. In this connection I like to remove one more misunderstanding that is perhaps greatly responsible for bringing this class of money-lenders into disfavour with some of the people. It is believed, I do not know on what grounds, that the money-lenders are very rich and it is the interest on money that they charge that has made them so rich. To remove that misunderstanding I may say that it is not this interest that has made them rich if some of them are really very rich. It is that golden principle that has made some of them rich and which can make anybody and everybody rich only if he were to follow that principle—“living within means.” It is unnecessary for me to say that nobody, whatever his profession may be, can ever lay by money if he lives beyond his means. He may be a money-lender, a trader or an industrialist, he will not be able to save anything and become rich, if he spends more than what his income allows him to spend. Therefore, take it from me that if some of the money-lenders are rich, it is because they have been acting upon that golden principle.

Then I have one more complaint to make and it is that only one side of the picture has been considered while drafting this measure. Granting that there are some dishonest money-lenders, it should have also been frankly admitted that there is a pretty large number of dishonest borrowers as well who borrow money without any intention to pay it back. If you propose to punish the dishonest money-lenders, there must have been some provisions made to penalise those who have made it their business to cheat the money-lenders. Justice and fair-play demand that all dishonest people whether they are money-lenders or they are borrowers should be equally treated. But I see that no such provision has been made in the Bill nor is it intended to make any whereby it will be possible to discourage dishonest borrowers. I know that at this stage I cannot go into the merits of the different provisions of the Bill and that I should wait for the proper opportunity to say something about those provisions, but one thing I cannot help saying and it is that it is repugnant to all canons of justice and equity to make this Bill take effect retrospectively. It is against good conscience to allow this Bill to cover even those transactions which were effected long before this Bill was even conceived of and which were quite legal and permissible under the existing law of the land at that time.

Now, Sir, I will give some more reasons why this Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon. The remarks made by the Honourable Premier in his opening speech encourage me in urging for the circulation of this Bill. You will remember, Sir, that while moving that the Bill as reported by the select committee be taken into consideration, the Honourable Premier was pleased to say that 75 per cent. of the amendments moved in the select committee have been agreed to. Although I do not quite agree with him in this statement, yet taking him at his word I am encouraged to say that if, in a little time of two days during which the select committee has considered this Bill, 75 per cent. of the differences have been removed, it can be very well hoped that if two months more are given to consider this Bill, the remaining twenty-five per cent. of the differences can also be amicably settled. This is, Sir, my fourth reason for circulation. Therefore I earnestly request that the Bill be circulated for some time so that we may be able to have more time and think over the matter calmly from the public angle of vision with a view to settling the remaining points of difference. You know, Sir, that even the worst offender is given an opportunity by the courts to put forward his defence and I see no reason why the money-lenders or traders who are to be affected by this Bill, should not be given an opportunity to have their say in the matter. I hope that the Government will not hesitate to accede to this very simple request of mine.

One thing more and I have done. I understand from the speech of the Honourable Premier that it is intended to enforce this Bill along with another amending Bill which is yet to come before the House and which, may not be passed in this session. (Voices: That Bill has already been circulated among the members and is here before us). I was not aware of this fact. In any case I am sure that this new Bill is not to be taken into consideration in this session and if so, that is my fifth reason why the Bill under consideration should be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon.

There is the sixth reason for my urging upon you that the Bill be circulated for public opinion and it is this. The Government also stands for minorities. Their rights should also be protected and the Government should not be a party to the majority who are openly out for sacrificing the rights of minorities.

[L. Sita Ram.]

The other objection which I would like to raise against the Bill is that the definition of "money-lenders" lacks precision. It does not differentiate a casual money-lender from professional one. Even the Honourable Premier had expressed this view in the course of his speech that no precise and comprehensive definition of the word money-lender could possibly be crystallised for the purposes of this Bill. My point is that this loose definition will hit hard some persons who are really not professional money-lenders. There is a section of people who are serving under the Government or in private firms of one kind or the other and other petty industrialists or businessmen, who have made savings in their life and who advance small loans out of their savings to needy persons. My apprehension is that if the proposed definition is adopted, these persons would find it practically impossible to advance small loans by way of investment out of their hard earned petty capital. Take for example, the case of railway employees who after 30 or 40 years' service are entitled to a bonus or gratuity amounting to two or four thousand rupees or more. Now, in their case if they deposit the money in some bank they could get interest at the rate of only one or two per cent. per annum. But if they lend that amount to others on higher and reasonable rate of interest, they can easily manage to subsist on that interest. It is a matter of regret that even a widow who manages to live on the interest accruing from the amount advanced by her deceased husband has been denied protection by the provisions of this Bill. Even the orphans and the invalid persons have not been exempted from its application. Let such persons be not classed as money-lenders within the meaning of this definition. My submission is that the definition of the term "money-lender" should be such which could easily distinguish a casual money-lender from a professional one.

I admit that usury is a vicious business but my submission is that honest money-lenders should not be penalised by the provisions of this tyrannical Bill. I am at a loss to understand why the licence of an honest money-lender should be cancelled for an inadvertent and in some cases intentional omission. The penalty proposed in the Bill is drastic and quite disproportionate to the acts of dereliction on the part of the money-lender. If the cancellation of the licence is inevitable the poor money-lender should be given time to wind up the transactions effected some time before the commencement of the proposed Act. There is undoubtedly a provision in the Bill that if the money-lender dies, his legal representatives and successors-in-interest have the right of realising and recovering his outstanding debts. But would it not be fair and just if such small mercies are extended also to those unlucky money-lenders who on account of such hard measures want to give up their business?

Sir, the penalty proposed in the Bill is drastic enough. For instance, if a money-lender is found guilty of any offence he will not only lose the interest and also the principal under the Acts already passed; but will also be liable to have his licence cancelled under this new Bill. His woeful tale does not end here. In addition to the above two heavy punishments he will not be entitled to even file suits against his debtors regarding his other debts which may become time-barred or necessitate the taking of immediate action against certain defaulters during the period of the cancellation of his licence. We did not lag behind in pointing out this difficulty of ours in the meeting of the select committee. The principle involved was admitted by our friends and the Commissioner was empowered to issue a certificate to such money-lenders during the cancellation of their licence, for the purpose of realising their outstanding debts. But the difficulty of the money-lender still remains unsolved. He is at the sweet will of the Commissioner who may or may not issue such a certificate. In my opinion the money-lender should have this permission as a matter of right. Everybody knows the fact that if a person murders another person he alone suffers the penalty imposed by the law of the land, but his children are not subjected to any punishment. The provisions of the present Bill, however, propose the confiscation of the whole or a part of the assets of the money-lender in spite of the fact that they happen to be the only means of subsistence for his children who in fact are not responsible for the misdoings of their father. Now I ask the Government whether all these penalties and punishments are not too high. Justice and fairness answer that these are too severe. If the dishonest money-lender is taken to task I will not object to it. But the punishment should be in fair proportion to the offence committed. One should not be hanged for making a slip of pen in his account books and again the honest money-lender should be differently and better treated. Sir, my submission is that the provisions of the Bill now before the House are too severe. They should be amply toned down in order to avoid the possibilities of seeing honest money-lenders closing down their business. This is why I have tabled an amendment to the effect that the Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon.

Now, I turn to the consequences that are likely to arise in the event of this Bill becoming the law of the land. The object in view of the Government may be to save the debtors from the clutches of the money-lenders but I assure the House that this Bill would prove harmful to the interests of the debtors even. In their anxiety to protect the debtors the Government are encouraging dishonest debtors who ruthlessly squander money advanced to them by the poor money-lenders. Matters will come to such a pass that money will cease exchanging hands and the trade and industry of the country would suffer a great set back. Another possible consequence of the Bill, which the Government have ignored is the withdrawal of all capital. The Government will see that all good-will which is the very backbone of business and economic progress will soon go away. Litigation, instead of decreasing, will increase. Society will be thrown out of gear. When business is closed down and industry is gone to dogs the poor labouring classes will be hard hit. They would add to the ranks of the unemployed and it will end in starvation and general discontent. It is sad to think that instead of proposing some scheme to help the poor labourers the Government are indirectly leading them to rack and ruin.

Sir, I have advanced so many arguments and furnished so many reasons why this Bill be circulated, before it is made a law and I have also pictured before you to the best of my ability the horrible consequences of this drastic measure. But in spite of all this if the movers of this Bill are not ready to listen to reason and fairness, the only conclusion that I can draw is that they are indirectly bent upon doing away with private money-lending altogether.

[L. Sita Ram.]

I am prepared for that alternative also. If the Government is thinking of stopping the very business of money-lending let them come forward with a real ambition of settling the whole question. I suggest that the Government should raise sufficient loans at a minimum rate of interest, i.e., three per cent. per annum for the sake of zamindars and debtors. This sum may be lent to those afflicted persons at a bit higher rate of interest say 5 or 6 per cent. by which they should pay their old Sahukars. In this way the Government will not only help the zamindars and debtors but will also be helping the money-lenders as well as earning profits for themselves. This Bill gives us a clear indication and the future money-lender will think twice before he makes another jump. I hope the Government will seriously consider this humble suggestion of mine.

One word more and I have done. I have tried my best to argue the question from every angle of vision. I hope the honourable members will support me in my motion for the circulation of this Bill. I have shown them both sides of the picture and now it is for them to take it in the light they choose for themselves. My role is that of the poet who says—

Mano na mano jan-i-jahan ikhtiyar hai

Ham nek-o-bad huzur ko samjhae jate hain.

Mr. Speaker : Motion under consideration, amendment moved is :—

That the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill as reported on by the select committee be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by the 1st October, 1938.

Khawaja Ghulam Samad : Sir, one honourable member has already spoken in favour of the motion and it seems desirable that some one who opposes the motion may now be called upon to speak.

Mr. Speaker : The only course open to me is to call upon members alternately from the different parties or different sides of the House. That much I can do and will certainly do. But I cannot anticipate whether a member will speak for or against a motion.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : Sir, I must compliment my honourable friend, Mr. Sita Ram, on his reasoned and convincing speech in support of the motion and I hope that he will listen to my arguments with the same open mindedness which we have a right to expect from a reasonable member of his position. I feel particularly happy that to-day after 15 years of my life I support a measure for the registration of money-lenders of which I was privileged to give the first intimation to the Punjab Legislative Council 15 years ago (hear, hear) and I hope I would convince all fairminded members of this House that my motion then and the Bill now introduced are not prompted by any ill-will towards the money-lenders or the money-lending profession. I submit that the economic and the political circumstances prevailing in the country to-day are of a nature that they demand that all far-sighted Punjabis, whatever their party or political programme may be, should apply themselves to problems of this nature with the earnestness that they demand.

Now what is it that the Bill seeks to achieve? The Bill, to put it briefly in a nutshell, says that those persons who carry on the business of money-lending, not casual money-lenders as my honourable friend has suggested, but persons who carry on the business of money-lending, shall, if they wish to continue in that profession, take a licence and get themselves registered and further that if these money-lenders suffer any of the disabilities cited in clause 7 of the Bill, they shall incur certain penalties. Now, before I go into the details of the arguments cited by my friend here, I beg to invite the attention of the House to the main purpose of clause 6 of the Bill. You will find that in clause 6 a money-lender who is registered and licensed runs the risk of losing his licence if he is found guilty under clauses 2, 3, 4 and 5 of clear cases of fraud or cheating. I feel confident that so far as these clauses are concerned, no fair-minded member of this House will get up and say that a money-lender who has been found by a court to be guilty of fraudulent practice or of cheating should be given an asylum. The only items which are not directly concerned with forgery or fraud are item 1 and item 6. My honourable friend in his speech laid particular emphasis on clause 1. He said that under clause 1 it may be that if an honest money-lender only casually or in a small particular omits to send a six-monthly statement or to keep a regular statement of account, it would be very hard if a man of that nature is non-suited with regard to various transactions. I hope my honourable friend will permit me to invite his attention to the explanation to section 3 of the Regulation of Accounts Act for which I was myself responsible. Section 3 calls upon the money-lender to keep regular accounts and to send six monthly statements and if he fails to do so, the courts impose certain penalties on him, but the explanation states—

A person who has kept his accounts and sent his six-monthly statement of accounts in the form and manner prescribed ..... shall be held to have complied with the provisions of this clause in spite of the errors and omissions if the court finds that the errors and omissions are accidental and not material and if the accounts have been kept in good faith with the intention of complying with the provisions of this clause.

In clause (c) of section 4 he will find that if a person omits to send his six-monthly statement once and does it later and there is sufficient reason for delay, the court shall allow him interest. Therefore I feel my honourable friends will realise that the penalty under clause (i) shall only operate in those cases where as my honourable friend Lala Bhim Sea said in his notice there is intentional evasion of that clause 2 and not once but more than once. With regard to clause 5 my honourable friend made a particular point of the statement that interest as such should not be penalized and said that it is only when the interest becomes unreasonable that he will be prepared to support us in any scheme to stop the money-lenders. Now, with due regard I challenge him to cite even a single instance from one clause of this Bill to the effect where interest as interest has been penalized.

Lala Sita Ram : Why this double penalty ?

Parliamentary Secretary : My honourable friend says 'why double penalty' ? If in one case a person has incurred certain penalties and has lost his interest, why should he be deprived of licence ? On this point with due deference to him I shall try to meet the main purpose of his argument. He will find that the whole of the legislation on indebtedness relief in this province and elsewhere works under one fallacy if I am allowed to say so with due deference and it is this that the relief can only be given when a person who has been hit goes to court and can prove that he has been hit. Now, Sir, I have worked out the figures from the annual reports of the

[Mir Maqbool Mahmood.]

High Court and the Civil Administration and I find that it is only in one case out of 480 cases that a money-lender goes to a court. There again it is very rarely that it is proved that he has transgressed the provisions of law. I submit that a money-lender—I am not talking of honest money-lenders who have not only my sympathy but my respect—goes to court only in one case out of 400 while he has been playing and juggling with accounts, while he has been depriving honest hardworking people of the only pittance with which they have to feed themselves, their families and children. In one out of 400 cases he goes to the court. Is it not in the interest of fairplay that in the other 399 cases the poor borrowers should also be given some relief when they are dealing with a man who has been proved to be guilty of fraud and cheating? I therefore submit that when they are dealing with questions of this nature they must in fairness see whether the Bill we are introducing is on merits a fair Bill and what advantages, if any, will be secured if the Bill is postponed. Now, Sir, the first point which I wish to emphasise is this and here let me again take a sentence out of a very fair speech made by my honourable friend on this side. He said that the money-lenders are a very important section of the Punjab and he said that there are good money-lenders and bad money-lenders and that there are good borrowers and bad borrowers. I do not hold brief for the bad borrowers and I would be entirely one with my honourable friend in any decent practical legislation which he brings forward to see that the dishonest borrower is not placed at a premium against the honest money-lender. Secondly, so far as the honest money-lender is concerned I am prepared to state now, as I have said more than once, that I regard an honest money-lender not only a necessity in the province, in the rural economy of the province, but an asset and I challenge my honourable friend or anybody else to cite one instance from one section of the Bill which in any way goes against the honest money-lender as such. Now what is the position of money-lending in this province? It was asked “why is it that we are bringing this legislation in this province?” Let me invite the attention of my honourable friends to certain figures with regard to this province. He will find that in the Punjab to-day—it has been calculated—we have 55,000 money-lenders and curiously enough while the Punjab population is one-eleventh of the whole of the population of India, one-fourth of the money-lenders in the whole of India are found in the Punjab. Therefore I think on this point there will be no difference of opinion that the Punjab is infested with money-lenders more than any other province. I am not in this figure including the casual money-lender. I do not plead that the increase of money-lenders as such is an evil, nothing of the kind, but when we think of the various accounts given not only by the courts, but by the Banking Committee and by our own experience that many of these money-lenders indulge in transactions which do honour neither to them nor to the province, it is but fair that we should try to purge this most important profession in the province of any chicanery or underhand dealings. That is my first point. Secondly, it is agreed, and I think there will be no difference of opinion on the point, that money-lending is the most important profession in the province. I say this on the authority of Mr. Daring that the profits of 55,000 money-lenders in the Punjab have been calculated to be almost equal to, if not exceeding, the whole of the gross profits of 1,88,00,000 of agriculturist cultivators in the Punjab.

Dr. Sir Gobal Chand Narang : On paper.

Parliamentary Secretary : My friend says "on paper". He is in the habit of seeing difficulties and trying to treat them on paper. This I agree is the mentality of a distinguished lawyer, but I appeal to him to look at this question with the fairness of a statesman. I refer him to another instance. Is it or is it not a fact that one out of every forty income-tax payers is a money-lender? Sir, I was submitting that so far as this one aspect of the money-lending transaction is concerned, it is almost conceded by all parties that 80 per cent. of the Punjab lives on agriculture and it has been found by competent authorities that 90 per cent. of these live almost in season and out of it in debt. Out of these only 11 per cent. deal with co-operative societies and casual money-lenders. The rest which means 70 per cent. of the population of this province have year in and year out to deal with 55,000 money-lenders. Therefore we have these 55,000 money-lenders with resources, with experience and the trickery which comes to them dealing with such things and we have seventy per cent. of the sweating starving population of the Punjab about whom it is stated that 80 per cent. of them have not more than 10 acres of land and the average income of whom is less than even the cost of feeding and clothing a prisoner in the Punjab prisons. Now against one money-lender you have 800 borrowers starving around him whose whole future career is almost in his hands and if he is honest, he is an asset—as they say in the villages he is Sahakar padshah—but if he is dishonest then all these 800 families with children, wives and mothers of the poor hardworking struggling agriculturists are at his mercy and after a year's hard work the agriculturist goes and at the dictate of one man surrenders the whole of his year's labour. I ask in fairness, I ask from those who till yesterday were speaking from house tops as the defenders of the poor men in the Punjab, I ask them, why oppose a measure of this nature which only seeks to save innocent borrowers from the trickery not of the honest money-lender but the dishonest money-lender? It has been said in the press that this measure is a communal measure. Here again, I do not want to waste the time of the House on such a flimsy argument but I submit that even if all the money-lenders of the Punjab—all the dishonest money-lenders of the Punjab—were Muslims or non-agriculturists and all the borrowers were non-Muslims or agriculturists, will that be an argument to satisfy the people who are starving? The position to-day is, and I have it on unimpeachable authority, that the borrowers of the Punjab who have to give their blood, with rare exceptions, to their money-lenders, include 33 per cent. Hindus, 15 per cent. Sikhs and 15 per cent. Muslims. I ask if for every Hindu money-lender—I exempt for the sake of argument all the Muslim money-lenders and there are good many of them and the Sikh money-lenders and there are good many of them—one hundred Hindu borrowers, fifty Sikh borrowers and fifty Muslim borrowers were assured, is that an offence which must be levelled at the face of the Premier? My honourable friend will find that we are not the first to be guilty of bringing such a preposterous proposition asking for the money-lenders to be registered in India and if they are not registered and do not satisfy certain conditions, they will be non-suited. I find that we are sinners in the happy company of no less a person than Dr. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru who not now but 21 years ago

[Mir Maqbool Mahmood.]
speaking in the Imperial Legislative Council on 5th September, 1917, on the Usurious Loans Bill said as follows :—

I should like all money-lenders to be registered as in England, and I should also like a provision in the Bill that if an unregistered money-lender brings in a suit, the suit shall be dismissed; this is a crying evil and in dealing with this matter I am glad to be able to bear out every single remark that has fallen from the Honourable the Home Member. I am an enthusiastic advocate of the Bill and I do not think that the doctrine of freedom of contract can be left to run its course uninterrupted in a matter like this; I think the stronger the measure is the better it will be for the protection of the masses and for the land owning classes. With these few words, my Lord, I strongly support the motion.

(Hear, hear) Not only that but coming nearer to our more modern times my honourable friends opposite will find tabled a similar motion. They will find that a distinguished Minister of the Congress Ministry of Bombay—the Honourable Mr. Munshi—while introducing a similar Bill in the Bombay Legislative Assembly said as follows :—

Sir, the object with which Government has placed this Bill before the House is two-fold; first, to place the money-lenders' profession on the footing of a well-regulated and honourable calling. When I say this, I do not mean to suggest that all the money-lenders do not answer the description, but there is, as in all professions, a certain element in this profession also which requires to be raised to the status of an "honourable calling" by proper regulation by the State. The second object of this Bill is to protect the ignorant and helpless borrower from the clutches of the dishonest money-lender.

I would like to quote a small extract further in reply to my friend who said that we are condemning the money-lenders. I would submit, as the Honourable Mr. Munshi stated, that the condemnation does not begin with us. He said :—

It is a well-known fact that money-lending is one of the most ancient, the most important and perhaps the most abused profession from the earliest times. It is curious to find that even the Vedic Rishi refers to the money-lender as "the usurer who counted days for calculating interest" but found him rather too much for him. You will also find in the Old Testament, similar reflections on this important section of our community. At the same time we find various prescriptions given by ancient and modern authorities for curing people of usury. It is not really a modern habit to try to regulate them; even in old days they regulated them in curious ways. Sir, in the seventh century one Archbishop of Canterbury laid down that a person who extracted interest by usury must make penitence for three years one of which should be only on bread and water. Well, this Bill luckily does not prescribe any such remedy.

I, therefore, submit that it is not for the first time that an attempt is being made to regulate the malpractices of the money-lending profession. I feel confident that almost all members sitting on this side will not feel that we are charging all money-lenders of such malpractices. I am not one of those; rather far from it. There are, as I have already submitted, honest money-lenders and dishonest money-lenders. I hope I am divulging no secret when I say that in the select committee the Honourable Leader of the House laid it as a policy that he would accept every reasonable amendment which attempts to remove the difficulties of an honest money-lender and that has been the policy with which the whole thing has been done. I would appeal to my friends opposite in all fairness—not as a rhetoric—that if they have a single instance in this Bill where an honest money-lender stands to suffer let them come forward and point out but not by dilatory tactics deny these borrowers the privilege and advantage which underlies this Bill.

There is one very important point that was made by my honourable friend here. He said, "You should try to increase the income of the zamindars, you should try to find other ways of improving their economic condition, why hit the poor money-lenders? How will the agriculturists benefit?" I submit, if you will permit me to say, that his argument is ineffective. It was in 1900 that the Land Alienation Act was introduced. Why was it introduced? Because the foresighted administrators of that time found that in ten years preceding 1900 as much as about 10 crores worth of mortgages had taken place among the agriculturists. They found that in ten years the value of the agriculturists' land, which had been mortgaged, went up by ten crores and that was the reason why that Act was introduced. They thought that unless they stopped in time this new departure from the old practice, the time would soon come when all people will not stick in the country. What was the result of the Land Alienation Act? For sometime that tendency was arrested but unfortunately what has been the result due to world conditions and as a result of conditions in India? In the last ten years the amount of the mortgaged lands of the zamindars has increased by 30 crores. I submit that that is a call addressed to all patriotic Punjabis to forget the threats of the agriculturists or non-agriculturists and to try to solve this problem. What is the problem? My honourable friend says that their income should be increased. Certainly that is the problem of the Punjab. Even my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition will agree with me that the basic structure of the whole of the Punjab must be built on sound foundations by increasing its purchasing power and that cannot be done unless the economic conditions are improved. What is the position? It has been calculated on reliable authority that according to the figures of 1928-29 the gross value of the agriculturists' produce of the province is 99 crores. It includes the value of stock but certain other items are not included. If they were all included, it would come to one hundred crores. Since then the index of prices has fallen. Moreover, as my honourable friend the Minister of Development told us the other day, very small portion of the actual price reaches the agriculturists. It has been calculated that on an average 55 to 60 crores per year in gross produce reaches the agriculturists. Therefore, I appeal to my friends in all sections of the House that if the poor Punjabi peasant were not to be given more than one-anna per head per day for his food, clothing, etc., he would still need 45 crores annually for his existence. In addition to that he has to pay four crores revenue and four crores expenses on litigation. That leaves him not a penny to pay towards the ever crushing burden of debt and it is calculated that on an average, I have calculated the average figure of 15 per cent. as suggested by Mr. M. L. Darling, he has to pay 25 crores as interest every year. I ask, is that not the problem of the Punjab? How can we solve it? (A voice: By increasing the expenditure of Government). My honourable friend says 'by increasing the expenditure of Government'. Out of the four crores which is the revenue of the Punjab, 25 per cent. comes from the pockets of those whom he is trying to protect; and I am surprised that this remark has been made by the honourable member. Among the poor zamindars I include both the Hindu zamindars and Muhammadan zamindars who do not get an average income of more than one anna a day, and with prices falling they are face to face with the great problem of indebtedness. (A voice: Raise the land revenue and taxes). Yes, certainly.

[Mir Maqbool Mahmood.]

The taxes come out of the pockets of those who pay to the money-lenders and the greater problem will stare them in the face. How to solve this problem? The only way to solve the problem is first to give them a new hope and a new vision of a new Punjab which we are trying to create in which, the depressed classes, the oppressed classes of the Punjab can raise their head. I am glad Sardar Sohan Singh Josh is smiling. I hope in the same spirit he will feel it his duty to stand by the people for whom he is pleading. I am very glad that not one of the amendments to the Bill stands in his name. I come to the problem how to solve it. It is not an economic problem: it is a human problem, and the only way to do it is by stopping leakage from the income of the zamindars, on the one side seeing that he gets full advantage for his year's labours and on the other seeing that his hard earned income is not taken away as much as is being done now. If I had my way I would not feel ashamed to wipe out all these debts (hear, hear). I will not be ashamed of it: I would be proud of it. But step by step I hope things will soon improve and there will not be any necessity to do it. When we are trying to do a little bit you say "no" and you say 'what is the result'. When we ask for the benami transactions to be removed you say 'no'. Not only that, dilatory amendments have been tabled and you say all companies should be exempted so that two money-lenders may join and may fleece the poor borrower. My honourable friend the honourable member for Ambala the great leader of the Congress party says "hear, hear". I say that it is not only in the Punjab that we are trying to do it: it has also been tried elsewhere: this problem is world-wide. This problem has been tackled in other countries also. Honourable members who believe in Rip Wan Winkle philosophy must plead that it is a contract. I have cited one instance. In a place like Bulgaria by one sweep all debts below 80 thousand were wiped out by 50 per cent. (4 voice: I will be happy if you do it here). My friend says 'I will be happy if you do it here'.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang: What happened to the rest of the debt.

Parliamentary Secretary: Three years later they were also wiped out. Then there was a deluge which my honourable friend wanted. In Denmark the Government offered a composition of 35 per cent. of the agricultural debts. In Russia by one stroke the Sikander of that place wiped out 50 per cent. of the debts. These are the measures which they adopted. When there is a national government here and similar suggestions are made, for the sake of petty ideals and individual considerations, I am sorry and I hope my honourable friend will forgive me if I use stronger language for expressing my feelings, these people who have money to dabble in dishonest practices are trying to stand in the way of the poor people.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang: Have you got any authority for Bulgaria?

Parliamentary Secretary: My honourable friend wants an authority. I would refer him to the Report of International Institute of Agriculture issued from Rome and supported by the authority of the League of Nations, for the year 1936. If he wants to know further, there are about 40 other countries which have adopted similar measures and if my honourable friend would care to go through their figures, I feel confident he would be voting on this side of the House. Then my honourable friend suggested that there is already the law and 'when the law exists why impose this penalty'. In this connection I would invite my honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand, who is very anxious to read authorities, to read the report on the Administration of Justice in the Punjab for the year 1935-36. He will find there that not only agriculturist but non-agriculturist village money-lenders are openly disregarding the provisions of section 3 of the Regulation of Accounts Act. We have in all fairness in the interest of the borrower and in the interest of fairplay and honest transaction, enacted a law but that law will not work till matters come to the court. I am glad that the public conscience of the Punjab and the conscience of the Assembly has reached a stage when it cannot tolerate such a plain law.

Again, Sir, a great deal of stress was laid by my friend on the question of penalty. I would invite his attention on the floor of the House again to the penalty provided under the English Act. He will find that under the English Act they have not only provided non-suiting of the person concerned but went further. For the first offence they have provided a fine of one hundred pounds and for the second offence imprisonment up to three months and that is in addition to non-suiting of the defaulting money-lender. Not only that. On the question of penalty let us weigh on both sides the merits of the case. As I said on the one side you have a money-lender, I am talking of the dishonest money-lender, who has been proved by a court to have been dishonest. On the other side you have 300 of the victims who have been deprived of their yearly income and their whole families have been starving for the whole year; and instances are not wanting where one single transaction like that leads the whole family to a condition of starvation, poverty and hunger. Coming back to the question of penalty, I would submit—excuse my language—if there were to be even a greater penalty I feel confident, we would be justified. (Interruption.) I am sure that if the proposition can be put in some form before my honourable friend opposite, who is fond of interrupting me at times, and if it were said that all the money-lenders on that side happened to be agriculturists and all the gentlemen on this side happened to be non-agriculturists, he would have said that they must all be hanged by the nearest tree. But, Sir, I submit, what is this penalty for? The penalty, let me repeat, is for proved cases of forgery and proved cases of cheating of that nature. In this connection let me inform my honourable friends opposite, who have tabled amendments to certain clauses as to why we ask the Collector to deal with those cases. In the first instance, it was stated by the Honourable Mr. Munshi on that very occasion in the Bombay Legislative Assembly that in Bombay they had to follow the practice of the English Act, because experience has shown that such powers are given to the executive and they are being exercised effectively. This is what has been done in the Bombay Legislative Assembly. (Hear, hear.) Secondly, those of my honourable friends, who suggest that all those cases should go to a court, forget that the very plea which they suggest would create a new disaster in the body politic of the Punjab. I have already said that 4 crores of the hard income of the zamindar go for land revenue and 4 crores for litigation, and if we open for them the door of litigation, it will be a help worse than cure. Therefore, any one, who in fairness and in seriousness advocates for the well-being and relief of the poor agriculturists and asks them to go to courts by means of such a dilatory procedure which involves expenditure, is no friend of the Punjabi. What is more? I may appeal to my honourable friends opposite to kindly peruse clause 6 carefully. They will find that no penalty can be incurred unless a person has been found guilty. What is the use of bringing in such a procedure which involves the borrower in such huge expenses before he can get some relief? If they carefully analyse their amendments they will find that they are all out of order.

My honourable friend further suggested that once a man has committed a blunder and he has been given some punishment, why give him a double dose of penalty? I think that was his argument. I submit that it is curious enough. I happen to be a registered and licensed legal practitioner and there may be many others in this House who are licensed legal practitioners. If a lawyer, who deals only with a limited section of public opinion or people and a doctor who deals with a limited number of patients and charges fees from them, is found guilty of fraud or cheating, there is punishment for him under the Indian Penal Code and it is considered sufficient to cancel his license. If that is so, why all this sanctity to the money-lending profession, that is, 55 thousand people earning their livelihood by means of this profession? Why should they not be registered? Why should they be allowed to behave in a manner as they are behaving to-day and why should they be allowed to carry on their trade and get their earning by killing all these innocent, honest and simple folk?

A great deal has been made of the fact that in the case of widows, orphans and other assignees, there is a great hardship in this Bill. Now, Sir, I want that question to be dispassionately examined. I am one of those who have a soft corner in their heart for them. I feel that widows, orphans and all classes are entitled to special treatment. What is the position? You will find that if a widow or orphan does not want to carry on the profession of money-lending, they may do so, they are given ample protection under this Bill. But if a widow or an orphan wants to carry on the business of money-lending, I submit, where is the hardship in taking a licence? But if they do not want to carry on that business it is open to them to close it down.

A great deal of capital has been made of the fact here and also outside in the press that it is nowhere the practice as it is here. Under the English Act every money-lender, who assigns his land to anybody, has to give him a notice that he is a money-lender. He is a registered money-lender there. But supposing that he is not, then what is the position? It is on rare occasions that a bona fide person does a transaction without giving any notice. He is saved under the English Act. But there who is to pay the piper? Not the borrower but the money-lender. Under this Act the borrower and the assignee are the only persons who are definitely charged. I submit that we in this Bill have given far more chances to the honest money-lender so far as his chances are concerned.

One word more and I have done. It was the late Mian Sir Fazl-i-Hussain, who during the course of a very important speech dealing with indebtedness legislation said that whatever was being done was to invest on behalf of capitalists and the richer class, so that they might swamp the social revolution that was coming. I hope that in fairness they may not shut their shops. We are bringing in this legislation and other legislation, and we would see that they may not shut their shops for ever. (Cheers).

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) (Urdu): Before I proceed with my speech I would like to submit that I find it unnecessary to move the circulation amendment standing in my name. My party including myself is of the opinion that the amendment of the re-committal of the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill to the same select committee if accepted would serve the purpose. It is a matter of satisfaction to me that the framers of the proposed Bill have not made any discrimination in so far as this Bill is concerned between agriculturists and non-agriculturists as it applies to both. I am further glad to see that this Bill applies alike to the Hindu, Muslim and Sikh Money-lenders. It is a great pity that my party is being misrepresented in regard to this Bill and I feel that it is my first and foremost duty to clear its position.

Before the last general elections the High Command of the Congress had issued a manifesto for our guidance known as the Congress manifesto. For us it is an instrument of instructions, call it gospel or even a Code of Manu if you so choose.

Mian Abdul Rab: On a point of order Sir. I think the honourable member is trying to clear his position and the position of his party. How is that relevant to the amendment before the House?

Lala Duni Chand: I was submitting that this manifesto is our Bible or our Code of Manu.

Mr. Speaker: Objection is taken that the honourable member is not speaking to the motion before the House. May I ask him how his speech is relevant?

Lala Duni Chand: Some interested supporters of the present government have set rumours afloat—

Mr. Speaker: I notice that some honourable members are reading newspapers in the chamber. That is unparliamentary and I request them not to read newspapers.

Lala Duni Chand: The Honourable Premier has been so often pleased to say that there is a division in the Congress party on this Bill and thereby has attempted to drive a wedge between the rural and urban members of the party.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the honourable member is not speaking to the motion.

Lala Duni Chand: As far as the proposed Bill is concerned I think it is very necessary to clear the position of the Congress party first and then state the view of the party. Our position as stated in the manifesto is that we want whole heartedly to ameliorate the financial and economic condition of the poor peasantry by adopting every possible means. The Congress would wish to raise the level of the economic life of the peasantry and the labourer even before the sun sets to-day so that every one of them could have sufficient food, clothing and housing.

Mian Abdul Rab: The honourable member is still speaking about his position and the position of the Congress.

Mr. Speaker : Has the honourable member moved his amendment ?

Lala Duni Chand : The motion stands in the name of Mr. Dev Raj Sethi.

Mr. Speaker : May I point out that no motion for recommitment of the Bill contains any details which should be reconsidered by the select committee. Honourable members who move amendments for recommitment should confine themselves to the objects of recommitment and to the extent of the proposed recommitment. They should not go beyond. We have nothing to do at this stage with the Congress or its policy. The honourable member will please confine himself to the motion before the House. I cannot allow him to go beyond the limits I have specified. (Hear, hear.)

Lala Duni Chand : I would try my utmost to bow to every ruling given by you. I want to assure the Government on behalf of my party that we are at one with the Government in extending every protection to the debtors against the abuses and wrong doings of the money-lenders. I even concede that some evil minded money-lenders exploit simple minded debtors and in some cases accounts are tampered with. If the intention of the Government is really to help the debtors we are prepared to help them in every difficulty the Government may have to face. I wish the Government had moved a Bill to protect the tenants at the hands of their landlords and thereby removed injustice done to them. I admit that in this Bill there are provisions calculated to protect the debtors. The tenants at the same time are even more heavily in debt and therefore they deserve greater protection.

The creditors also deserve some consideration. Let the Government pay them four annas in a rupee and take themselves the responsibility of paying four annas by instalments and after this is done I would not mind even if money-lending is made a crime. In some other provinces the governments have come forward to legislate for the benefit of the indebted tenant. They have even applied moratorium in the matter of the payment of arrears of the land revenue and rent payable by the tenants and in the matter of suspending the execution of the ejectment decrees. Sir, the Unionist Government appears to be very solicitous about the agricultural indebtedness of this province. Has it done anything to protect the poor landless tenants ? They are being ejected in hundreds and thousands from lands that have been in their possession as tillers of the soil for long periods. They are being ejected from lands which are the only means of their maintenance. Have the hearts of the Unionists ever moved for these pitiable people ? In this matter they can take a leaf out of the book of the recent legislation of the United Provinces Congress Government which has greatly improved the economic condition of the poor tenants by passing suitable legislation.

Minister for Development : Sir, is the honourable member speaking to the motion ?

Lala Duni Chand : It is a pity that the Honourable Minister for Development should have thought it fit to raise this point of order. He is very much engrossed in debt legislation and cannot spare any time to attend to the landless tenants who are being turned out of the lands they have improved by the sweat of their brow.

Then, Sir, there is the case of arrears of rent to be paid. Here again the Government shows no practical sympathy to them. They have to live upon agriculture but own no land. When crops fail and they cannot pay the heavy rents to the landlord they are ejected and then have to wander from place to place to get fresh lands on lease. But the cruel landlord gives them no rest. Sometime they are forced to hand over all their produce to their landlords and are not left with any grain to feed themselves and their children. Cannot the Government wipe off the arrears of rent and thus win the gratitude of the poor tenants? In the Congress Governed Provinces of Bihar, Bombay and the United Provinces the condition of the tenants has been very much ameliorated. But in this province discrimination is being made between class and class. This differentiation is not due to economic but political consideration. The most objectionable feature of the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill is that the executive has been given wide powers to frame rules to cancel the money-lender's licence. The deputy commissioner has been given powers to cancel licences for violation of certain provisions of the Bill. The penalty provided is too severe. I am no friend of the dishonest money-lender and do not want him to go unpunished. On the other hand I want that deterrent punishment should be given to a dishonest money-lender who commits fraud upon innocent debtor and robs him of his hard earned money, so that he may have a warning in future. But I cannot be a party to the cancellation of a money-lender's licence merely because he could not submit his accounts in time. He is being proposed in the Bill to be punished even for minor faults. If this is the conception of justice of the present Government only Sir Chhotu Ram could be credited with such sense of justice. Notwithstanding these drawbacks in the Bill the Honourable the Premier characterises our amendments as dilatory tactics on our part. May I ask why Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram who has been holding responsible position in the Government during the last 15 years or so never thought of introducing such Bills in the past?

Judging from the point of view of the Congress this Bill is wanting in fairness and in justice. The Unionists claim to have great sympathy for the poor, the widows and orphans and in particular Mir Maqbool Mahmood among them always tries to make out that he is sympathy personified and his heart always melts for the poverty stricken people of this province.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is requested to speak to the motion.

Lala Duni Chand : I now respectfully appeal to the Government to carefully consider the minutes of dissent submitted. Particularly the minutes of dissent of Rai Bahadur Lala Mukand Lal Pari and Lala Sita Ram deserve consideration. It is no consolation to this party to be complimented in flattering words which can neither satisfy Munshi Hari Lal nor Lala Sita Ram. May I know what treatment has been meted out to their amendments? What is wanted is not lip appreciation but the recognition of their service and work. The praise that has been showered upon Munshi Hari Lal is not going to be of any use to him when all his amendments have been rejected. Sir, my honourable friend Sardar Lal Singh is as good a Jat as the Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram.

Mr. Speaker: May I request the honourable member to speak to the motion?

Lala Duni Chand: I am meeting the points made by Mir Maqbool Mahmood.

Mr. Speaker: He was irrelevant.

Lala Duni Chand: The House gave a patient hearing to him.

Mr. Speaker: Two wrongs cannot make one right.

Lala Duni Chand: I am referring to the minute of dissent signed by Munshi Hari Lal and another member. I am perfectly entitled to reply to that.

Mr. Speaker: I am not objecting to that.

Lala Duni Chand: Sir, I was submitting that several members of this House have expressed their views from different stand points. They have expressed the view that this Bill has not received that wide publication and consideration which it deserves. In this connection I have referred to the minutes of dissent of Lala Sita Ram, Sardar Lal Singh and Munshi Hari Lal, attached to the report of the select committee. I want that the Government should pay attention to these dissenting notes and see that the suggestions made by them are adopted and it should give more time to the reconsideration of the Bill. If my honourable friends opposite agree to this nothing extraordinary will happen. Heavens will not fall and the earth will not give way, if they would agree to postpone the passing of this Bill for two or three months more and circulate it for eliciting public opinion thereon. I would request them to recommit this Bill to the select committee for reconsideration in the light of fresh facts. A Bill of such a far reaching character and affecting the entire fabric of finance, agricultural credit and rural economy of the whole province should not be rushed through. It should receive an extensive circulation and the serious consideration of all sections of the public in all its aspects and implications.

We on this side of the House admit that the money-lenders should be registered and even licensed subject to reasonable exceptions. This Bill should apply equally to the agriculturists and non-agriculturists and be equally helpful to them and all such persons should be given an opportunity to submit their suggestions and after the suggestions are received the Government should consider the Bill in their light. It will be up to the Government to decide if any of the suggestions received would be acceptable to them or not.

The press in the Punjab can also put forward suggestions and the Government can see whether they are worth being adopted or not. It is not my intention to suggest that after the Bill is recommitted to the select committee the money-lenders alone should have an opportunity to put their case before the committee, the debtors should be equally given an opportunity to place their troubles and difficulties before it. It is just possible that the honourable members opposite may not be knowing all the ills and troubles of the public affected. If the public is given an opportunity to place its views and further evidence is secured, their hands may be further strengthened in regard to this Bill. The good of the country requires that the Bill should be recommitted to the select committee and the people concerned given time to express their opinion about it. May I enquire what harm will come to the honourable members opposite if they agree to this proposal?

(At this stage Mr. Speaker left the chair and Mr. Deputy Speaker took the Chair.)

It is not fair that this House should deny all sections of the public to express their rights on this Bill. It is the duty of the Government to take into confidence all sections of the public by listening to their views and this will in my opinion strengthen their position.

Many a time it has been claimed by my honourable friends opposite that this Government is the government of the agriculturists. They are too enamoured of this phrase. The Government cannot be unaware of this fact that a great uproar is going on against the present Government. The Government should show by its conduct that it is not a Government of any particular class and the ministers should show that they are the ministers of the whole of the Punjab. If they give this proof I am sure that every member sitting on this side would be prepared to lend his whole-hearted support to them. It is the duty of the Government to see whether the different provisions of the Bill are capable of being improved or not. Six or seven conditions have been laid down in the Bill under which protection can be afforded to the debtors against money-lenders. In this connection I want to say a word which if attended to would help the honourable members opposite. If it is found that a money-lender systematically defrauds his debtors, then without a minute's delay his licence should be forfeited. If they give all sorts of latitude to the debtors then naturally apprehensions will arise in the minds of the people. If a money-lender files a suit for recovery of even 50 rupees the debtor would come forward and say that the suit is a false one. This kind of latitude given to debtors would mean that the creditors would be placed in a position in which it will not be possible for them to seek justice in law courts and they would be deprived of their dues. It appears the supporters of the Government are intoxicated with their power. We have done our best to free them from this intoxication. The object of this Bill is that the Unionist Government want to show that they are the real well wishers of bizans and debtors and thereby create misunderstanding in the minds of the people. The duty of the Government lies in observing the rule that both debtors and creditors are entitled to claim justice at their hands. I would request my honourable friends opposite to recommit this Bill to the select committee.

Further, there are several things, for example, the registration of money-lenders, which are being kept a close secret. This is not proper and it will be fair to the honourable members of this House to let them know what they are. The Bill is a narrow one. I am constrained to say, and a good deal of what is going to be incorporated in the rules is being withheld from it. Such is the Bill that has been moved. I am aware that similar legislation has been brought forward by the Bombay Government. In that Bill there is a provision for registration of money-lenders but that is not intended to be applied indiscriminately. According to that provision a money-lender will be required to apply on a prescribed form and fill in the specific particulars therein and after that his name will be registered. The importance of this provision lies in the fact that it is made clear therein in what cases a money-lender will be required to have his name registered and in what cases he would be exempted. It is not going to have an indiscriminate application. In this proposed Bill no exception has been provided for. It appears that the framers of the Bill have forgotten that there are certain persons who if compelled to have a license in order to do money-lending business will be hard hit. There are persons who live in hills at a distance of 60, 70 and in some cases even 80 miles from the headquarters of their districts. Those who are aware of the conditions prevailing in the country side must be knowing that there are villages where no newspaper goes, where no educated persons are to be found and where news of this kind take a year or two to reach. To apply this Bill to all such people all at once will be really very unjust. Then there are money-lenders whose total dealings do not exceed Rs. 100 or Rs. 200 and it will be well nigh impossible to obtain licences for such petty dealings. To include such persons among the money-lenders will be a great hardship. If passed into law it will seriously affect the lot of minors and widows who have inherited money-lending. It will prove an engine of oppression for such persons. This fact should also be borne in mind that it takes time for the people concerned to get used to the provisions of a legislation of this nature and in fact to those of every new legislation and therefore some provisions should be made in the Bill which should condone the usual shortcomings of ignorance, etc.

Before I close I must make an appeal to the Honourable the Premier. I know that he is a very clever man and is capable of even squaring a circle. He should take care to see that in this province an atmosphere is not created which should make people to fly at each other's throat. If he is anxious to help the agriculturists and the poor peasants, and this I consider a commendable thing, he should not lose sight of the good of the non-agriculturists. We have no objection if money-lenders are required to be licensed and registered and we shall demonstrate by our conduct that we would not stand in the way of the Honourable the Premier controlling the activities of such money-lenders but we want that this Bill should not work hard against those money-lenders that I have mentioned above. If this is done we shall not join issues with him. It has been said that there exists difference of opinion in our party and I can well understand this is said to discredit us in the eyes of the public. There are no differences among us and we shall show that during the next five years or so and till the life of this Assembly members like Sardar Sohan Singh and Chaudhri Kartar Singh will continue to sit with us and there will be no split in the Congress party. We are determined to demonstrate to our opponents and to the public at large that Sardar Sohan Singh Josh and Lala Duni Chand can continue to co-operate and that no differences would arise between Munshi Hari Lal and Master Kabul Singh.

Khan Bahadur Chaudhri Riazat Ali: In spite of so many speeches delivered on the other side, I must confess that I am unable to accept that there is any case whatsoever for circulating the Bill for eliciting public opinion thereon. There must be one of the two things—either I, with my humble lights, am unable to follow the logic put forth by the honourable members opposite or that there is no logic in it at all. I think it is the latter and not the former. My friends over there forget that the motion to commit a particular Bill to a select committee is in itself a dilatory motion and the motion for circulation of a Bill for eliciting public opinion thereon is also a dilatory motion. It is only a question of degree. In the former case it is intended to proceed with the Bill while in the latter case it is intended to shelve it. It has been said that the Bill stands in need of further circulation in order to elicit public opinion thereon. I should submit at the very outset that no Bill in the history of legislation of this Legislative Assembly has got the widest possible publicity in so short a time as this measure. I would like—not taking a good deal of time of the House—to refer you to the various conferences of non-agriculturists held all over the Punjab, the hartals carried on in all the towns, and the donations and funds collected for the purposes of fighting the provisions of this Bill all over the province. You must have read what Professor Gulshan Rai—a man who is always ready to offer his opinion on any matter which is worth anything—has said in respect of this measure. He says that there is nothing wrong in principle so far as this Bill is concerned; that it is extremely essential that the interest of the poor illiterate, ignorant debtor should be protected against the greedy, fraudulent, usurious and unscrupulous money-lender. He says as follows in an issue of the Tribune—

"If banks, companies, co-operative societies and other bodies dealing with the public in general have to be registered, I see no reason why the money-lender should not be registered."

Again,

"I do not see anything wrong in the registration of money-lenders. I only object to the drastic punishment proposed. This is done in many of the civilized countries of the world. That would be one way by means of which this occupation could be improved and put on a sounder footing. I am sure the Congress party in the Punjab Assembly will not oppose the main principles of this Bill. Do not think this measure can be dubbed as a class measure."

In a leading article of the Tribune it is given :

In spite of some minor improvements made by the select committee the Registration of Money-lenders' Bill, as it has emerged from that Select Committee is substantially as bad and indefensible a measure as the Bill that was originally introduced in the Assembly.

Then there is the opinion of Mr. Brij Narain which I do not want to quote. There are the proceedings of the non-agriculturist conference held at Lahore on the 4th July and a copy of the resolution condemning these so-called iniquitous and obnoxious measures is included in this article. It was remarked in the Tribune that this Bill should have been discussed at Lahore and not at Simla, because the former is the centre of public opinion and the latter is only an official town. In this connection I would only refer to the names of the various associations and conferences which conferred at Simla, the so-called official town. The resolution passed says :—

This meeting of the residents of Simla strongly condemns the attitude of the Muslim League Government of the Punjab in bringing forth the Land Alienation Amendment Bill, the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill and the Registration of the Money-lenders' Bill, that are designed to ruin the non-agriculturists of the Punjab.

The people who attended represented the following associations: the Arya Samaj, the Sanatan Dharm Sabha, the Brahman Sabha, Balmiki Sabha, Ahrti Association, Piecegoods Merchants' Association, General Merchants' Association, Jain Sabha, Sri Gurn Singh Sabha, House Owners' and Traders Association, Aggarwal Sabha, etc., etc. In the face of these opinions in the press, can it be said that the Bill should be re-circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon? Another aspect of the question, I would submit, is this that the Bill has been deprived of its fangs, the venomous teeth of the serpent as it is called. The Bill has been extremely toned down. I will not make detailed reference to the various clauses but a cursory survey will convince my honourable friends in this House that the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee has been extremely toned down and therefore there is no reason why the Bill should be published for eliciting further opinion thereon. In the definition there was originally only one exception made, i.e., a loan advanced in kind made by a landlord to his tenant for the purposes of husbandry. In the new definition there are no less than 7 exceptions, i.e., those 7 items are not covered by the definition of loan, and as the money-lender is the person, as we find in this Act who advances loans, therefore the provisions of this Act will not apply to these seven cases as distinct from the original definition of the word 'loan'. Another thing I would submit is that the definition of the word money-lender has been toned down. There was no exception whatsoever in the original Bill. Now there are two important exceptions. One is the person who is the legal representative and the successor-in-interest whether by inheritance, assignment or otherwise, of the person who advanced the loan, provided he does not advance further loans and simply winds up the accounts. The other exception is a bona-fide assignment by a money-lender of a single loan to a person other than a person (including his wife or husband as the case may be) who is descended from a common grandfather of the assignor. That is, if a man makes a transaction and gives one of the deeds to him in order to meet his own requirements he will not be covered by the definition of money-lender as it now stands. The third thing is that in clause 2 of the definition, the definition of the trader has been included. The fourth thing is, again in this respect the Bill has been toned down, that the money-lender has now been given an opportunity to get a certificate from the Commissioner in case of cancellation of his licence, to the effect that such and such transactions will not be covered by the cancellation, so far as it affects the barring of his suit for the realisation of his assets. The fifth thing is that in the licensing of money-lenders an explanation has been added and it is now in his discretion to apply for a licence as the word 'shall' has been changed to 'may'. A proviso has been added to the provision under which a licence may be cancelled and the Collector shall not cancel the licence unless he issues a notice in writing to the money-lender. In the original Bill he was condemned unheard: now he has been given an opportunity to put forth his case. Another important thing is that so far as the provisions of appeal are concerned, in the first place the appeal was only to be made before the commissioner after the cancellation of the licence. Now an appeal can be made for refusal to renew the licence. In this respect also the money-lender can within 30 days appeal against the cancellation of his licence and the time in getting the copies will not be reckoned and he will not be debarred from moving in the matter even after the expiry of 30 days. Another thing is about exemptions. The Provincial Government may, by notification, exempt any person or class of persons from the operation of this Act or from any of the provisions thereof. Now if after working this Act the Government realises that certain sections of the people should be exempted from the provisions of this Act they can issue a notification under section 12. The provisions of the Bill have been so toned down that there is no further necessity to publish it for eliciting public opinion thereon.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.)

Another thing I wish to submit is that it was stated by my honourable friend Lala Sita Ram, that this Bill will not apply to the people of his class. Sir, this Bill only aims at weeding out from society the dishonest and unscrupulous money-lender. If honest money-lenders exist in sufficient numbers they should not be afraid of the passing of this measure. As the Persian proverb says :

آن را که حساب پاک دست از حساب چه پاک

Those people should not be afraid of anything under these circumstances.

Only one word more and I have finished. It was asked why should people be deprived of getting interest. That argument has been sufficiently met by Mir Maqbool Mahmood. I have only to add that we are only trying to improve the paying capacity of the debtor and in this way helping the money-lender himself. We only want that sort of money-lender who used to exist in villages and called the "silent patriot". We want that money-lender who should be prompted by the same exalted sense of duty which prompts the crew of a life-boat to dash in the teeth of a savage gale to save the sinking ship. We want that money-lender who is prompted by those honourable motives which prompt the fireman who dashes into the flames to save a suffocating house-holder. We want that money-lender who is prompted with the same sense of duty which prompts a soldier to risk his life to bring any wounded comrade to refuge. With these words I oppose the motion.

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi (Lyallpur and Jhang, General, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill be re-committed to the select committee for reconsideration.

I would like to make it clear that these amendments are not dilatory at all. If the honourable members sitting on the opposite benches think so, they are mistaken. The Government should bear in mind that we people belong to that party whose creed is to sacrifice their lives for the sake of the poor labourers and kisans. (Cheers). I am at a loss to understand why the Government is rushing these measures through in such hot haste. I do not want to use the expression "indecent haste" but rather say "inscrutable haste". My learned friend sitting opposite has cited the English law relating to registration of money-lenders. He may know that the Bill was introduced in 1898 in England and the matter remained under consideration in the House of Commons for full two years. The Act was followed till 1925 and after 1925 it was reconsidered again and this reconsideration continued for 8 years. In this connection I would like to read out a few lines from the proceedings of the House of Commons—

Three Sessions ago, in 1925, Lord Carson, in another place and the honourable member for Bedford in this House introduced Money-lenders' Bills. The Bill in another place passed all its stages but in this House honourable member for Bedford was less successful. Here the Bill got a second reading and then Bills were referred to a very strong joint Select Committee under the chairmanship of Lord Darling. This Committee sat during 1928, and produced a Bill, which was a combination of the two Bills previously introduced. That Bill, last year, was introduced in this House by the honourable and gallant member Lord Carson. Once more it was successful in passing through all its stages in another place, but in this House, after second reading, it went to a committee and got no further. A number of very valuable amendments were suggested. These amendments have been incorporated in the present Bill, and it has been polished up in a variety of other ways and it is now presented to the House as the finished article and the result of three years' continuous work.

If our Premier says that these motions are dilatory, may I ask him what he has got to say in regard to the delay made by the Mother of Parliaments in passing similar legislation? May I know whether the Government have consulted Bar associations, Judges of the High Court, Traders' Associations, etc., in regard to the experience of the working of the last three enactments? Have any associations of zamindars or borrowers, or bankers or financiers been consulted in this matter? What is their opinion? I am surprised to find the Government in such hot haste and they do not care a bit for the public opinion. Even when a criminal is going to be hanged he is given an opportunity to plead his case before a tribunal, but I do not know what has happened to the Unionist Government in this respect.

I may clear my position at the very outset of my speech that I do not want to shield a dishonest money-lender. My honourable friends sitting on the Treasury benches may know that I appreciated what Dr. Narang stated during the introduction of Regulation of Accounts Bill that he would throw the flesh of dishonest and fraudulent money-lenders to hungry dogs. I may further submit that our conviction is that if the hard-earned money of a kisan goes into the pockets of a dishonest and fraudulent money-lender, the latter has no right to be recognised as a member of society because such a dishonest person is a menace to society. But I make no distinctions. No exploiter has any right to live amongst us whether in the shape of a Mahajan or a capitalist, a revenue collector or a high-salaried officer, a zamindar or a rentier. We deem it our duty to resist the encroachments of such persons. I am in favour of weeding out the dishonest money-lender, but I want to safeguard that the wheat is not destroyed along with the white ant. That the money-lender is an indispensable and useful institution is amply borne out even by Mr. Darling who is considered to be an authority on this subject. He says—

In an agricultural country like India, which is subject in a singular degree to pestilence and famine, the money-lender could always command a certain tolerance, and the guess may be hazarded that, had Islam arisen in the fertile plains of Hindustan instead of in the deserts of Arabia, its attitude towards the taking of interest would have been different. Financing the village, marketing its produce and supplying its necessities, the money-lender in India frequently stood between the cultivator and death; and, as Sir William Hunter remarks, he represents the one thrifty person among an improvident population, "without whose help the cultivator would have had nothing to depend upon, but the harvest of a single year." Whenever, therefore, we are tempted to revile him, we should remember that by his assistance to agriculture for 2,500 years he has made life possible for millions who must otherwise have perished or never been born.

Sir Harry Haig, ex-Member of the Government of India says :—

The whole result would be to interfere to a very great extent with the money-lending system of the country, and I would ask honourable members to remember, as no doubt they will remember, that, whatever hard things may be said against money-lenders as a class or individuals in particular, the fact remains that the money-lender is one of the most useful members of society in this country.

Agriculture cannot be carried on without borrowed capital. The honourable member says: "Co-operative Societies." How many Co-operative Societies are there as yet in this country? Does he not realize that co-operative money-lending in spite of the great strides that it has made, is still in its infancy, and that, if we are to strike a blow at the common system of lending money in this country, the result would be disastrous?

It may be necessary to regulate money-lending but it is not our object to throttle it. Co-operative societies were started some 34 years back. What is the result? They do not adequately meet the requirements of the zamindars. They can only provide 13 or 14 per cent. of agricultural credit and for the remaining 87 per cent. rural debt occasioned by some crop disease, famines, untimely rains or some damage the zamindars and the cultivators have to go to a money-lender for securing help. Under these circumstances, we shall have to maintain the institution of money-lending until and unless the Government find out some other useful and equally efficient substitute.

Coming to the subject matter of the debate, I may add that there is another side of the picture as well. The money-lenders are not always Shylocks. Let me now look at the other side of the question. The Honourable the Premier remarked the other day that when the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill is enacted and comes into force it will prove a cup of poison to the non-agriculturists. He seemed to hold that the non-agriculturists were eating into the vitals of the agriculturists. I wonder how it entered into his head to say that the non-agriculturists were pariahs for the province. I, for one, must refute such an irresponsible statement. In my view a member of this Assembly does not represent in this House his own constituency only. He, in fact, represents the whole of the province. That is your ruling also, Mr. Speaker. But here comes our Honourable Premier, who is the Leader of the House and who is the Head of the Government of the Punjab, who does not feel any hesitation in declaring on the floor of this House that the measure he has proposed in this House is calculated to prove a cup of poison for non-agriculturists. Is not that making an invidious distinction between one class of people and another?

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani: The Honourable the Premier is only making a distinction between the rich and the poor.

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi: Sir, we have been listening to such slogans for the last 15 or 20 years in this province. It is such things that ultimately lead to civil war in a country. Let the Unionists remember that those who sow the wind shall reap the whirlwind. I sound this note of warning out of sympathy for the Government and not out of any ill-will. What passes my comprehension, is the fact that the Government singles out the profession of money-lending for their target out of a large number of professions which are carried out in this province. An equal treatment should be meted out to all professions such as the medical profession, the legal profession, and others. Surely this Bill has been drafted in haste and rushed through the select committee. It should be now recommitted to the same select committee for necessary modification. My honourable friends would do well to take a leaf out of the constitutional history of England where Bills are sometimes recommitted to select committees.

The English Registration of Money Lenders' Act has repeatedly been cited as a model. This is what was said in Bombay :

The problem of dealing with money-lenders in England is totally different from that of dealing with them in this Presidency, and arguments from the success of Money Lenders' Act in England are in the view of the Governor in Council full of danger. In England a small and fairly well defined class of professional lenders catering for a comparatively small class of borrowers has been taken under control without difficulty and without interfering with or unsettling the whole of the credit system of the country. In India practically everyone with a little money in hand lends it out, and the agriculturist who has saved a few rupees is often quite as rapacious as any sahukar. Registration of money-lenders would represent enormous difficulties in India.

and in fact may be said at once to be impracticable; even to arrive at a satisfactory definition of "money-lender" would be a hopeless task.

Sir, my submission is only this. Let us see if the Bill is in keeping with the economic and social conditions of our province. In the light of the previous legislation in the province, it is to be considered whether this Bill is necessary. The Provincial Banking Enquiry Committee has raised serious objections against the licensing of money-lenders. It has given its verdict against the proposal of licensing the sahukars who supply one of the greatest needs of this province. It objects to provisions which are calculated to crush the money-lenders. It need not be emphasised too often that the Congress party is out to ameliorate the condition of the masses. We are ready to do our level best for the poor, genuine, indebted agriculturists and will do everything for them.

Minister for Education : To-morrow.

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi : Not to-morrow, but, to-day and at this moment. The point is that the Government seems to have been actuated, in introducing this Bill, not by economic considerations but by political views. In fact the Unionists are out to strengthen their hold on every section of the population. If we compare the legislation of the United Provinces with our own legislation we shall come to the conclusion that the Unionist Government is bringing the old feudal system back into this country. It is left to the discretion of a deputy commissioner to grant a licence to a money-lender or cancel it. Even the time for which a licence can be cancelled by a deputy commissioner is not specified by the Government. It is entirely left to the whim of the deputy commissioner to renew a licence or not. The grant of such wide powers to the executive means an injustice to the judiciary. It shows that Government has no confidence in the judiciary. It is a sad reflection that Sir Chhotu Ram has been for the last dozen years also showing want of confidence in the judiciary of the province. I fear the same mentality has been brought to bear on this Bill. Let us take the example of Bombay where a similar measure is in force.

There a separate Registrar is appointed to supervise the working of the Act. But we find that our Government is not following that example. It has thought it fit to enhance the powers of the executive.

When we come to consider how this Bill, if enacted, will work, we cannot help recalling to our minds the state of affairs that already exists in our province. There is always to be found a gang of loyalists who haunt the premises of the bungalows of the deputy commissioners. If licences for guns are to be given by the officers, the said loyalists get the lion's share and report to the authorities against some other applicants holding different political views. The result is that political workers' applications are rejected. All clauses in this Bill resulting in increase of powers of the executive should be reconsidered. Again, other provincial governments are doing away with nominations but our Government is extending the principle of nomination. The Bill should be purged of these evils. The Reserve Bank report suggested the creation of a privileged money-lender class. We can consider two types of money-lenders, viz., one only registered—not licensed—to deal with the villager and the other both registered and licensed to deal with the Reserve Bank. Again, the clauses which seek to give this Bill a retrospective effect, need reconsideration. For instance, if a money-lender is proved to have defrauded a debtor in one case, he will have his licence cancelled. This and various other facts mentioned by me necessitate the reconsideration of the Bill.

The Honourable Premier has assured us that so long as no law is framed for the control of agriculturist money-lenders, this Act will not be enforced. I may submit that there is no harm if 2 or 3 or even 6 months are taken up by recommitting the Bill to the select committee. At the most the consideration of the Bill can be postponed up to the November Session of the Punjab Legislative Assembly and then it is sure to come up before this House. I assure the Honourable Premier and my honourable friends over there that if any steps are taken for the welfare of the poor people, we would be only too glad to assist them and help them. But I request them that at this time the rushing through of this Bill is not fair, because no one has understood the real implications of the Bill now before the House. With these words I appeal to the House to recommit the report of the select committee to the same select committee for further consideration.

Subedar-Major Raja Farman Ali Khan (Gujarkhan, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, the Government realised long ago that the zamindar is in a bad economic condition which is growing worse day by day. The Government extended its lip sympathy to the zamindar but nothing practical was done to ameliorate his condition. The Congress too has been carrying on propaganda against the Government that they have done nothing for the zamindar and have on the other hand, brought him to the verge of ruin. This ruination of the zamindar has been ascribed by everybody, who is competent to speak on the subject, to the machinations of the bania. It is an axiomatic truth that the bania is a hawk and the poor peasant a sparrow struggling in his talons. The poor sparrow is squeaking in despair but the hawk is slowly but surely eating into its vitals.

Sir, the zamindars constitute about 80 per cent. of the population of this province. They are completely paralysed and as such they are an obstacle in the way of the progress and advancement of the country. Now the question arises as to who is responsible for this sad plight of the zamindars? The answer to this question is plain enough, viz., the sahukar is responsible for the present unenviable plight of the zamindars. The sahukar has swallowed not only the earnings of the zamindar but he has swallowed the greater portion of his land too and yet this crocodile of a shukar is hungry. The poor peasant still owes him 135 crores of rupees. I will now discuss the ways and means employed by the bania to loot the poor peasant. In the first instance, I will describe the methods adopted by the so-called honest money-lender. He charges interest at the rate of 4 pies per rupee per mensem, which comes to annas 4 per annum. Supposing a money-lender is approached to advance Rs. 100. Before advancing this sum he charges annas 2 per rupee as chhatt from special clients and annas 4 per rupee from ordinary clients and this chhatt is deducted in advance. At the above-mentioned rate of interest the amount of Rs. 100 is doubled in three years. In the next three years this sum of Rs. 200 is re-doubled and becomes Rs. 400 and so on. Ultimately the burden of the debt becomes too irksome to be borne and the debtor is obliged to dispose of the whole of his property. What is worse, the debtor does not get any receipt for the sums repaid during this period.

Now, I will relate a story about a clever and dishonest money-lender of village Narali and Hosing, district Rawalpindi. A bania deposited 22 pis (a weight) of corn with a peasant and made him affix his thumb-impression on the bahis in recognition of the receipt of the deposit. He then lent him the self same weight of corn and caused the peasant to execute a deed to the effect that 33 pis of corn had been lent to his brother. The third brother took exception to it and ultimately he was prevailed upon to execute a stamped deed to the effect that he had borrowed Rs. 165 from the bania. And what is worse, the bania did not cancel the former deeds regarding this transaction. Some time afterwards the bania asked the peasant to return him the corn promising to give him an equal quantity of corn at the time of the next harvest. The bania distributed this corn amongst several people and quadrupled the amount by making his debtors execute deeds to the effect that they had received 88 pis of corn. When the next harvesting season came the promised quantity of corn was not returned to the original borrower. This led to litigation and the poor peasant was completely ruined. These are the ways in which petty money-lenders have become big mahajans. Most of these money-lenders persuade the zamindars to affix their thumb-impressions on the bahis and then make any entries they like in the bahis. In this they are helped by stamp-vendors also, who abet the crime by countersigning the bahis as witnesses. Some money-lenders cause their debtors to execute stamped deeds in the names of their relations while they themselves keep the accounts in their own bahis.

Ultimately this results in a double decree; one for the entries in the bahis and the other for the stamped deeds. It is a matter of common knowledge that a bania takes up his abode in a village and starts life as a petty shop-keeper, but in a few years' time he manages to loot the whole village and become a mahajan. His sons get the best education and become B.A., LL.Bs. The money-lender obtains all the amenities of life at the expense of the poor peasant, who has become destitute, so much so that he is not getting enough to keep body and soul together.

The Government has introduced this Bill with a view to protect the poor peasants from the rapacity of dishonest money-lenders, who have been paid twenty times or even forty times over the money actually lent by them. The money-lender is behaving like the wolf, who when deprived of his prey becomes all fire and brimstone. All the newspapers of the province are full of the supposed grievances of the money-lenders. Meetings are being held throughout the length and breadth of the province voicing the disabilities of the money-lenders and protesting against the introduction of this Bill. On the other side is the silent peasant, the tiller of the soil, who facing the inclemencies of the weather produces grain so that the money-lenders might flourish and who in order to protect his country from foreign aggression is not loathe to face a hail of bullets. I am grieved to find that well-educated advocates, most of whom are the progeny of the baniyas, instead of working for the uplift and advancement of the country are supporting the baniyas in their nefarious practices and are trying to make black look white. They are trying to bring pressure upon the Government so as to allow the baniyas to continue their fraudulent and dishonest practices.

I will now say a word about the Congress. The commander-in-chief of the Congress, viz., Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru has declared in unequivocal terms that the sahukars have completely ruined the zamindars, and that the time has come for wiping out the debts of the zamindars, but his lieutenants are playing a double game. These people were the loudest in their condemnation of the Government for its failure to help the zamindars but now they have shown themselves in their true colours. It has now been proved to the hilt that the Congressites are not the friends of the zamindars. They are the worst enemies of the poor peasants. The sahukar has sucked the life-blood of the zamindars. He is now at the point of death. It is, therefore, the foremost duty of the Government to pass and give effect to this Bill at an early date, so as to save the zamindars from the jaws of death. Any delay in giving effect to this Bill would result in increasing the rapacity of the baniyas and the utter ruination of the zamindars. With these words I lend my whole-hearted support to this Bill.

Mr. Speaker : Had the speeches of the honourable members, who have already spoken on the motion been relevant, I am almost certain that half a dozen more members could have spoken. As the Bill is an important one, I shall be glad if a large number of honourable members speak on the motion, but this cannot be done unless repetition and irrelevance are avoided.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Pari : I want to say something new which has not been said on the floor of this House.

Mr. Speaker : If the House is prepared to sit for the rest of the month, I have no objection to allow any number of members to speak. But if we wish to finish our whole business as early as possible, only four or five members need speak on the motion before the House.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : We want only ten minutes.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Are you going to allow the discussion now for ten minutes altogether or this time limit is fixed for the speaker whom you were going to call? So far as I have been able to follow the debate, no one seems to have taken any notice of what has been said from the ministerial benches. I do not include the mover of the motion for the moment among the ministerial benches. I would, therefore, like to take some minutes in replying to what has been said on behalf of the Government. I do not think that my honourable friends here have taken notice of the points urged from the ministerial benches because they do not deserve any notice at all. Perhaps they have overlooked them for one reason or another. Personally I feel that it is necessary to say something in reply to what Mir Maqbool Mahmood said against the motion and I would, therefore, request you not to close the debate in ten minutes.

Mr. Speaker : Up to what hour is the House prepared to sit?
(Voices : Up to 8 o'clock.)

Premier : My honourable friend, I am afraid, should have got up earlier if he wanted to speak.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I got up three times.

Premier : I will have to make a few remarks with regard to the points raised by Messrs. Duni Chand, Dev Raj Sethi and Sita Ram, but I will not be long. I will not take more than ten minutes.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : We want ten minutes.

Malik Barkat Ali : I want ten minutes because I find that some very important points do require attention of the House and these have not yet been placed before the House. I assure you that I will not make any repetition of any argument that has been advanced. Every point that I shall place before the House will be entirely a new one. I beg of you that in view of the importance of this legislation and the outcry outside you may let me reply to some of the arguments of the other side.

Premier : There will be plenty of opportunities later on.

Sardar Partab Singh (Amritsar South, Sikh, Rural) (Punjabi) : Mr. Speaker, I rise to represent the real feelings of that political party which holds the view that economic relief should only be given to the petty zamindars and that the big landlords should have no right to ask for such relief. Before I proceed with my speech I would like to inform the House at the very outset that so far as the question of principle is concerned my party is at one with the Government benches. If we had tabled an amendment to the effect that the Punjab Registration of Money-Lenders' Bill as reported by the select committee should be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon, we did not mean at all to resort to any dilatory tactics. Our intention in doing so was to make the Bill still more useful and beneficial by further consideration. The provisions of this Bill should be such as to afford the greatest possible relief to the poor agriculturists. I assure the House that there is no question of delaying the passage of the present Bill. Owing to the present economic depression in the country the agriculturists have been hard hit. In many cases these agriculturists find it practically impossible for them to make both ends meet. Careful enquiries have brought to light this startling fact that in almost all cases the petty landlords are constrained to borrow money from the village money-lenders for the purpose of paying land revenue to the Government. My party would like this Bill to be passed, for we know that the passing of this Bill would mean the automatic extermination of the entire money-lending class. The result would be when the petty zamindars would not find any money-lender to lend them necessary sums they would refuse to pay their dues to the Government. They are sure to escape the clutches of the fraudulent and dishonest money-lender. The proposed Bill has a two-fold advantage. On the one hand, the poor agriculturist would find it difficult to borrow money from any person, and on the other hand, he would not be expected to pay land revenue to the Government. I have reasons to believe that these agriculturists cannot pay their dues without the pecuniary help of the money-lenders. I have at present in my possession the report of the Punjab Board of Economic Enquiry. It is stated therein that in Lyallpur there are only 502 persons who pay land revenue to the Government. It is further stated that the total amount of land revenue paid by them is Rs. 71,684. Out of this total amount of land revenue, Rs. 10,099 was borrowed from the village money-lenders, Rs. 12,200 was lent as loan by the Co-operative Department and a sum of Rs. 2,947 was advanced by the 'airties' to the poor agriculturists. In a nutshell the major portion of the amount paid to the Government as land revenue by those 502 agriculturists had been lent by these very money-lenders whom you propose to harness by means of the Bill now before the House. It would not be out of place if I were to inform the House that the total loan advanced by the different classes of money-lenders was not lent at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. You would be surprised to know that according to the statistics given in the report the average rate of interest charged on the sum was 30 per cent. per annum. Had there been in force any such measure as the one proposed by the present Government, these 502 men would neither have found any money-lender nor would have found it possible to pay their dues to the Government. That is why we appreciate the idea of introducing this extremely useful measure.

The argument advanced by the Treasury benches in favour of the present Bill is that a similar Act passed by the Congress Ministry is in operation in Bihar. Let me say in reply to my honourable friend Mir Maqbool Mahmood that in this province agriculture cannot be carried on without borrowed capital. So far as this is the case, money-lending cannot be stopped. My submission is that we want the proposed Bill still stronger. I would, therefore, request the Government to strengthen it further. If I had been in the place of the Government I would have gone into the villages of the Punjab and said to the zamindars, "Look here, there is only one way open to the zamindars to meet their emergencies and that is money-lending. You sleepy money-lenders and the needy zamindars should force the Government not to pass this Bill...."

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member may give reasons for recommending the Bill.

Sardar Partab Singh : The Punjab Government would receive so many bundles of telegrams and letters that at last they would be obliged to postpone the registration of money-lenders.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is again irrelevant.

Sardar Partab Singh : I pray, that in the next session so many telegrams and letters against the Bill may come to the Government for further strengthening the Bill that it would be very difficult for them to enforce it. One word more and I have done. How strange it is that even a camel can pass through the hole of a needle but these landlords and the rural magnates cannot pass through the same hole of the needle! Only these big landlords will reap the benefit of the proposed Bill and none else. I would challenge the Government that if they have not got the courage to circulate the Bill and they are afraid of public opinion they may entrust this duty to us. Our shoulders are strong enough to bear this heavy responsibility.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural.): Sir, only the day before yesterday I was talking to a foreigner, an American friend, who came to pay me a visit and who seemed to take great interest in the legislation which is now before the House. While we were discussing I said the method adopted by the Government seems to be a Russian one. He said Russian and rushing. He was absolutely an impartial judge and he had been noticing the haste with which the Government have been proceeding and rushing these Bills through this House. (A voice: Is he a zamindar?) I know he is a zamindar and not a money-lender. He is not a trader. (A voice: Is he a Jew?) Do not ask me what he is? He is certainly not a Jew. This indicates that even disinterested impartial people who have been watching the progress of these Bills are convinced that the Government is proceeding with them in great haste. My honourable friend over there, Mr. Dev Raj Sethi, in his beautiful maiden speech pointed out that a similar measure had taken three years for consideration in England. Now what we find here is this. Mir Maqbool Mahmood gets up and says that about ten years ago he moved a Bill in which the word 'registration' occurred and therefore it should be presumed that people know all about it and therefore circulation is not at all necessary. Then gets up another redoubtable member from the ministerial benches and he flaunts a few cuttings from the newspapers and says professor so and so has expressed such and such opinion. Whether that opinion is worth the paper on which it is printed, I shall not go into that question. What he means to say is that a certain professor had expressed an opinion and that another professor had expressed an opinion and that in Simla different associations had made a protest against this Bill and therefore the conclusion is clear that the people of the Punjab who are interested in the Bill are fully aware of its provisions. My submission is that that argument does not hold water. The Bill as it has emerged from the select committee does not show much improvement. In fact in one respect it is worse than the original Bill, because the original Bill gave freedom to the people to carry on their business in the form of companies and no restrictions were laid on the constitution of these companies. A company was simply a company incorporated under the Indian Companies Act or some other relevant law, and that has been changed. What is after all the aim and object of this Bill? It has been said by the Honourable Premier and with much greater force and eloquence by the Parliamentary Secretary, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, that this Bill is intended to help honest people and to destroy dishonest people. Now, it was pointed out by one of the speakers who went before me that many many years ago I expressed this opinion—a translation of which he quoted—that I would be the first to destroy a dishonest money-lender and expose him to any treatment that a dishonest man deserves. But the question is, does the Bill as it stands make sufficient provision for the destruction of dishonest money-lenders and for the encouragement of honest money-lenders? If this Bill was placed before the money-lenders, they would have gone through the various clauses and been in a position to say how honest money-lenders can be protected and how dishonest money-lenders can be weeded out. I feel, Sir, that under the provisions of registration and taking out licences it is more likely that dishonest money-lenders would flourish and honest money-lenders would suffer. You are probably aware that once the High Court of the Punjab took some action against certain touts and after enquiry certain persons were declared to be touts and their names were published in the Punjab Gazette. The High Court of course intended that people should not deal with them but my honourable friends who go to Lahore with their papers under their arms are at once detected and they are pounced upon by undesirable persons. Those touts, whose names have been gazetted, purchased copies of the Gazette and with those copies in their hands they used to hover round about railway stations, rest-houses and other places which are frequented by litigants and used to say, 'Look here, our names have been gazetted. Government has recognised us. Now come to us, we shall take you to lawyers'. This was the result of that action. The High Court, no doubt, intended well but in the hands of dishonest people that action was put to wrong use. Now, the dishonest money-lender will not desist from his dishonest ways, simply because his name has been registered. He has obtained a licence. He will consider himself fortified and he will then use his position to much greater damage of the parties with whom he deals and he will be able to victimise more easily people whom he may be afraid to victimise at present. So, it is not that by registration or granting licences you destroy dishonest money-lenders, but you will drive out of the market honest money-lenders.

Then, Sir, I must take note of what was said by the Honourable Premier when he moved the motion to which this amendment has been moved. He said, "We want to be impartial and we want to deal with agriculturists and non-agriculturists alike," and he said something to that effect the other day also that before this Bill came into force he would put another Bill before this House. We find this scrap of paper, distributed to-day, in our hands. I do not know, Sir, if you have had a look at it or not. Presumably you have not. Then, Sir, I would just beg leave of you to read only the operative clause of this Bill, which, I believe, the Honourable Premier intends to put before the House. I am referring to it simply to show what the Honourable Premier means by placing agriculturists and non-agriculturists in a position of equality. This is what the operative clause of this Bill says :—

No member of an agricultural tribe (hereinafter in this section called the debtor) shall make.....

Mr. Speaker : That Bill is not yet before the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : It has been distributed to us.

Mr. Speaker : It has been distributed no doubt; but it has not been introduced yet.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Then, I would not use the word 'Bill'. Sir, the proposal that the Honourable Premier made to-day is that no agriculturists will be allowed to sell or mortgage his land even to an agriculturist within 5 years after repayment in full of his debts to that agriculturist. I ask you, Sir, is this his idea of equality between the agriculturists and non-agriculturists? Is there any provision in the Bill which we are now discussing similar to this ? Does he place the agriculturist debtor in the same position qua a non-agriculturist ?

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member can discuss this when that Bill is placed before the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I was only making a passing reference to it. I thought it had been distributed to us because perhaps it had been published in the Gazette and that it was going to be moved soon. This is what I thought. I do not know of what value this paper at this moment is. It is a mere scrap of paper which has been supplied to us to give us an idea of what the Government intends to do. I would not discuss it. Let us see whether the Bill itself, even as it had emerged from the select committee, places all people in the same position. There are penalties in the Bill. For whom ? For the money-lender. Is there any penalty for the debtor ? The money-lender is penalised. He is sought to be deprived of his debts by forfeiture of his licence, if on one of the two occasions he failed to comply with some insignificant provisions of another Act. He is punished under the old Act for not having complied with a particular provision. He is, under this new Bill sought to be penalised in a far more serious manner, although he has suffered previously a penalty for non-compliance with some technical provision of the old Act. Is this equality ? Are you not aware that there are many debtors, both among agriculturists and non-agriculturists, who are not honest ? Though they receive money, when they go to a court and put in their written statements they make a total denial of the receipt of consideration. They say, 'This bond, or this pro-note or this nawan was got executed under undue influence. We do not know anything about this transaction and we do not understand it. The money-lender is a chatak admi and we are poor men, we are ignorant and so on and we were made to sign this bond'. Hundreds of such cases occur daily. If the debtor is once found to have submitted a false plea or a fraudulent jawabdara in a court of law, and it is held by a court of law to be fraudulent, a decree should, I beg to submit, be passed against him in any suit that may be subsequently brought against him. I know that it would be most absurd. The Honourable Sir Chhotu Ram cannot call it more absurd than I would, but equally absurd is the provision that they have inserted in this Bill that if a finding in a previous suit has been given against a man the suit in which this matter is brought to light should be dismissed and he should not only suffer this penalty, but his licence should be forfeited and he should be deprived of all his dues. There is no provision in the Bill even for safeguarding the limitation of other suits after the cancellation of the licence and no account has been taken of the fate of the loans which may be outstanding to the extent of thousands and lakhs and which may be endangered by the forfeiture of the licence.

Then, Sir, when a landlord makes a loan to his tenant for the purpose of husbandry, it is excluded. Is it not ? It is excluded from the definition of loan, if I am not mistaken. Is it not open to a landlord to carry on money-lending in the guise of helping his tenant in husbandry ? After all, what is the evidence ? How can it be discovered after 3 years or so that a sum of Ra. 100 lent by the landlord to his tenant was for extravagance or was for his daughter's marriage or was for the purchase of his bullocks.

and if a loan advanced by a landlord for this purpose is protected, why should not the same protection be extended to a loan advanced for a similar purpose by a person who is not a landlord? What justification is there for this discrimination? I am only giving an instance that even the Bill, as it has emerged from the select committee, is full of defects simply because people, who are likely to be affected by it and people who understand these matters properly and efficiently, have not been consulted and it has not been considered necessary to take them into confidence. No doubt there is an uproar, but that uproar will be much greater when these people come to know the actual provisions of the Bill. They have only heard incomplete accounts of the Bill and even now they are upset; but when they actually come to know the details of this Bill, it is certain their resentment will be much greater, because they will find that they have been placed in a position of great disadvantage.

My honourable friend, the Premier, said that there are similar laws in other countries and he gave the instance of the Central Provinces. I put him a question, but he evaded answering it in a clever way. I concede that in the Central Provinces law, there is a provision for scaling down the debts; but there is also a provision that when a debt has been scaled down Government would take up the responsibility for its payment to the sahukar and would recover the amount from the debtor in easy instalments as arrears of land revenue. Is the Honourable Premier prepared to include a provision like this in his Money-Lenders' Bill? If so, I am prepared to support him. (Premier: Hear, hear) We shall even then put up with this obnoxious measure if he would only introduce this clause in it that after the debts have been scaled down, it may be even to one-fourth, the Government would take the responsibility of paying that amount to the creditor and recover it from the debtors in easy instalments as arrears of land revenue. But he is not prepared to do that. He is not prepared to do what even a small feudatory State in India has done—I mean the State of Bawnagar—under the leadership of that great statesman who is unfortunately not amongst us now, and I pay him my whole-hearted homage on this occasion for the great act of statesmanship and benevolence that he did for his State. What did he do? He scaled down the debts and made the State take upon itself to pay those debts and recover the same from the debtors in easy instalments along with land revenue. Is the Honourable Premier prepared to do that for the Punjab? He has taken only one side. He wants to strangle one class of people and pamper another? Is this the justice he is doing, while he talks all the while of honesty and dishonesty? The other day he said that these money-lenders were thieves and that they were receivers of stolen property. (Premier: No, no.) He said so. When I moved an amendment in connection with a Bill and said that at least mortgages of less than 20 years standing should not be touched, he said, 'If a person has received stolen property only recently, should he not be touched'. Thereby he compared the people who took benami mortgages to thieves.

Mr. Speaker: Is the honourable member discussing the motion?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I am discussing the argument of the Honourable Premier. I say that these people are not thieves. If there are thieves among these people, then there are thieves among every class of people. (Hear, hear). Debtors are not always honest and money-lenders are not always dishonest. The manner in which, sitting on the top of this hill at Simla, the Government is rushing through this Bill may well remind a money-lender of the story in Saadi's Gulistan which we read many years ago beginning with—

i.e., a set of thieves sitting on the top of a hill, etc. That may very well apply to the present case where the Government in a clandestine manner is hurrying this Bill through so that people in the province may not know what is happening here and so may not create any agitation. It says, let us finish with this Bill now so that they may not raise any outcry. I think the House knows the story of the bullock that fell into the well and the treatment it was subjected to. (Laughter). I need not dilate upon that story; but the Government is acting on the principle of that story. (Laughter). It has got hold of the money-lenders and it wants to crush them and take the last blood out of them. This is the manner in which it is proceeding.

So far I have dealt with the argument of the Honourable Premier. Now I shall take up the case of the junior advocate of Government. I was just pointing out that the money-lending class is being treated in a most discriminatory manner though in a very indiscriminate way. What did Mir Maqbool Mahmood say? He said that it was the dishonest money-lenders that they wanted to deal with. But why single out a particular trade, the trade of money-lending out of a host of trades in the Punjab? Is the Government making laws only for the money-lenders and not for others? Discussing about penalties he asked, if a person failed to send a copy of the account to his debtor, why should he not be penalised? I have already discussed that point and so I do not want to repeat my arguments, but I may submit that the penalty proposed is unnecessarily severe. Besides, a double penalty is prescribed for the offence mentioned. Next, he said that one out of every four hundred persons goes to court and it is only very rarely that fraud is discovered. Does it mean that because 999 men escape, therefore the penalty of all the four hundred should be visited upon one man? Evidently he wants that one should be punished for the sins of 999 persons whom he fails to detect. Is this justice? Again, he said that the money-lenders make a very large sum of money, about 188 crores or some such amount. If this is the reason for bringing forward this Bill, then, certainly the Government should elicit public opinion on this point. My honourable friend has only taken into consideration what some one has recorded in some book about the estimated debt figures and the interest that accrues on this estimated amount of debt. My submission is that that interest is only on paper. If the Honourable Premier or any other Minister were to go to these money-lenders and ask whether they were prepared to sacrifice this huge amount and take only a fraction of it, they would be only too glad to do so. They will be very thankful to him if he can arrange to get them this fraction. They will bless him for this act of benevolence. What I am submitting is that all this amount is only on paper. When I remarked that all this was only on paper, Mir Maqbool said that one out of every four income-tax payers in the Punjab is a money-lender. What then? My honourable friend must be an income-tax payer and he must know that the Income-tax Department does not take into consideration only the income that comes into his pocket. It looks at the income that accrues on paper and whatever income might have accrued you are taxed on that income, unless you write off a bad debt and do not include the interest on that written-off debt. If he knew that, he would have understood that the mere fact that one out of every four income-tax payers is a money-lender does not make the slightest difference to the remark which I made. Even that income is paper income. Then he does not know that if one year the money-lender makes a profit on paper and next year in some venture he suffers a loss and makes no income, no credit is given to him for the loss that he incurs. The difference between a money-lender and a landlord lies in this, that the money-lender may suffer a loss, he may become a pauper and an insolvent, while the land is always there and a landholder is never in danger of losing his capital; a money-lender is very often in danger of losing his principal and often loses it. This is the difference between a landlord and a money-lender. Then we have the landlord who takes one-half of the produce of the poor cultivator who also pays abiana to the Government, while the landlord who takes half the produce pays only land revenue. He does not contribute anything either in seed or in labour and yet when the crop is ripe, he goes with his lathials or club men and divides the crop half and half. What is this? Is this not tyranny? The landlord who takes away half of the crop is a bigger tyrant, a bigger blood-sucker than the greatest blood-sucking money-lender. (Hear, hear and applause). Retaliation would come. You may destroy the money-lenders but another class would arise and some of these people who are sitting here would lead that class and I would join them if I am alive (applause) for this purpose. (Interruption). Certainly I would join them and help the poor cultivator who, as was said by Raja Farman Ali Khan, gets up in the morning whether it is cold or whether it is hot, whether it is rainy or whether it is dry, whether it is night or whether it is day, and goes on ploughing and plodding whole day and night and then when the time comes the landlord with the big paunch comes and takes away half the produce. Is there any justification for this? Why are you making a distinction? Have you no conscience? Does your conscience rebel only against money-lenders? What have you done to put down this tyranny and these depredations of the landlord?

My honourable friend Mir Maqbool Mahmood referred to Dr. Sapru's argument. Dr. Sapru might have said something 20 years ago in the old Imperial Legislative Council where he was a member for some time. His remarks then were quoted, but my honourable friend did not tell us that that very Council did not agree to a legislation of this kind and the Bill which was brought forward was thrown out bag and baggage. No action was taken on it. Several attempts have been made in this House of a similar nature and every attempt was foiled and the Bill for registration of money-lenders was always thrown out. Even two years ago an attempt was made to include a clause in the legislation which is now an Act for the registration of money-lenders and that was also thrown out by this House, the old Punjab Legislative Council. Now, these gentlemen think that they have a majority and can do anything.

My honourable friend has also referred to Bulgaria. He said that 80 per cent. of the debt was wiped out there a few years ago. I must take that statement with a very big grain of salt. (An honourable member: A lump). No, I cannot swallow a lump, but certainly with a grain of salt. I cannot believe that any Government in its senses can wipe out the total debt of a country. What he perhaps means is this: in the first place I find from this book in which Bulgaria is mentioned—this is for 1931 and I cannot get the latest book—that 80 per cent. of the debts which were owed by the agricultural classes were taken over by the Bank. What have you done during all these years and during the last 15 months? Has even an idea of an agricultural bank ever crossed your brain? There they established an agricultural bank. I do not want to take up the time of the House by reading a description given in this book—Report of the League of Nations Economic Committee on agricultural crisis, Volume I of 1931. He will find there what service the agricultural bank has rendered there and how it provided credit to the extent of 80 per cent. of the debt up to 1931; and it might be cent per cent. by 1936. If he had that in mind I am quite prepared to accept it. Why don't you set up a similar machinery here and provide credit? It will do good to the cultivator. Sir, I will close with a quotation from this book. After giving an account of the agricultural conditions and the conditions of credit in that country which is only about one-fourth of the Punjab, it says:—

From the above it may be concluded that Bulgarian economy and trade is based principally on agriculture. In order to improve the economic life of the country in future, agricultural production must therefore be developed with a view to obtaining a better yield both as regards quality and quantity and the Bulgarian farmer must be led to produce goods capable of quick and profitable sale. . . . . It is therefore evident that agricultural credit is closely bound up with any attempt to improve agriculture and that no useful result can be attained unless sufficient credit is available to cover all requirements.

I have read these lines because some members of the present Government of the Punjab think that credit is a curse and credit should be destroyed and my honourable friend who is still here should also remember that he would destroy his class if he destroys credit altogether. He says he is in a hurry to have the Bill passed so that even honest money-lenders should not be able to lend money and no credit should be extended to agriculturists so that they may not be able to pay any land revenue to the Government. What he wants is to strike a blow at the revenue policy of the Government. I do not think he was serious in saying that. With these remarks, I support Lala Sita Ram's motion. (Applause).

At this stage closure motion was put and carried.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir,

7 P. M. I had hoped that after my brief opening speech, it would not be necessary for me to make another speech, but it seems that I must meet the points, although wholly irrelevant to the motion before us, made by my honourable friends, as otherwise a false notion with regard to them may be retained by some of the members here. My honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang is unfortunately gone and I hope he will be back so that when I deal with his portion, he will be present here. I will run very briefly through the points raised by the various speakers.

I will start with my friend Lala Sita Ram whose main objection was that this Bill also applies to previous debts and he said that previous debts should be excluded. For what purpose, I could not gather from his speech, but if his idea is that all previous debts should be excluded, after the passing of this Act, then we might as well not proceed with this Bill, but I may assure him, if he is under a misapprehension, that so far as previous debts are concerned, they will not be affected unless the money-lender after the commencement of this Act commits any irregularity with regard to a transaction after the commencement of this Act. I think that he is either under a misapprehension or has not carefully studied the Bill. He went on to ask, 'how will this Bill encourage honesty?' I think that is a very obvious question and I do not think it is necessary for me to answer it. My answer, however, to it is simply this. I can put it in five or six words, 'by weeding out the dishonest money-lender'. That is how we propose to get at the honest money-lender. He said that the honest money-lender would disappear. I hold that only the dishonest money-lender would be taken out and not the honest money-lender. The honest money-lender will have a bigger and a larger business and a business which will flourish. Then my honourable friend Lala Duni Chand opposed the Bill and the burden of his speech was that this Bill is very harsh and it is going to hit everybody and that, very unfairly.

Lala Duni Chand : I never said that.

Premier : My honourable friend is anticipating me. I have not finished. I was about to say that his main argument was, supposing a man has got several transactions and in one transaction worth about Rs. 50 he commits fraud or dishonesty and then he goes into the court and the court holds that it was a fraudulent transaction. My friend asked, why should this fellow be pilloried or penalized, when only with regard to a small transaction he committed fraud and when with regard to other transaction worth about 10, 20 or 30 thousands he has been honest? Why should he be non-suited with regard to them? That was his main argument. Now, I am afraid, my friend has not carefully read the Bill or he would have found that what we actually want to do is that if anybody commits a fraudulent transaction his licence can be cancelled by the Collector for a specific period. Now, the Collector naturally will first see the magnitude of that offence and he will cancel the licence only for the period which will be proportionate to the offence. I met that objection in the select committee and we made a provision in the revised Bill which is before you now that in a case where he finds that it was just one transaction in which he committed the fraud after the commencement of the Act and that is his first offence, then he will not be punished severely. Even in criminal offences you give the benefit of section 562 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Similarly here he can go to the Commissioner and ask for a certificate and say that he has committed the offence or irregularity with regard to a small item of Rs. 50, Rs. 60, or Rs. 100, that he has got loans worth Rs. 20,000 and Rs. 30,000 outstanding and those would be time-barred if his licence is cancelled beyond a certain date. The Commissioner will naturally take into consideration the representation made by the money-lender and say, "Very well, I certify these loans and you can go to the court of law, after all the offence is not so extensive that I should deprive you of your money which you have lent to other people."

[Premier.]

That provision has already been made in the Bill. Apart from this, does my honourable friend think that because a man commits fraud with regard to a small amount, he can be called an honest money-lender? The main reason for bringing in this measure is that after the commencement of this Act money-lenders who are honest will be on their guard and see that their actions are properly guarded and they send regular accounts to their clients without any fraudulent or dishonest transaction by their agents or kardars or anybody else, and the dishonest money-lenders will set about trying to see how they can evade the provisions of this Bill. It is the dishonest money-lender that we want to check and not the honest one. My honourable friend also mentioned that no licence forms have been prescribed. There again, I must respectfully submit, through you, that he has not read the Bill. I am definite that he has not read the Bill, because the very last clause of this Bill says that the Government will prescribe certain rules, amongst others, with regard to forms in which an application is to be made or forms in which a licence is to be given. He also mentioned that it would be very hard for the money-lender if the licence is confiscated because of certain things which are mentioned in clause 6 of the Bill. Now let me read out to my honourable friends opposite the law in England. We have said in clause 6 that if a money-lender offends against certain provisions of the various Acts or is guilty of fraud or dishonesty then and then alone his licence is to be cancelled. But what is the practice in England? The Act to which my honourable friends opposite Mr. Sethi and several other friends also referred—they referred only to portions which suited them and very naturally ignored those sections which did not suit them—according to my friend Lala Deshbandhu Gupta—Mitha mitha karrup aur karwa karwa thu,—that Act lays down that a certificate can be refused if satisfactory evidence has not been produced of good character of the applicant. This is sufficient to refuse a licence or to grant it. Again, I find that satisfactory evidence can be produced that the applicant is not a fit and proper person to hold a certificate. That means that I can go to the court and say that such and such a fellow is a dishonest person and if I can prove it, his licence is cancelled. This is unlike what we have provided in our Act that he must be definitely found to have committed fraud. Thus our Act is much more lenient as compared with the English Act.

My friend, Mr. Dev Raj Sethi, again repeated parrot-like the argument put forward on the first day when I introduced this Bill, that the Government was trying to rush through this measure and that in England it took three years or nearly three years for the select committee to go through this Bill. I submitted when I made this motion to-day that this Bill had, off and on, been before the Government, and before the people of this province for the last 25 years or more. It has been before the people not once, not on one occasion, but on several occasions and on several occasions there was very exhaustive comment in the press itself. I might point out for the information of honourable members that last time when the Bill was moved and circulated for public opinion, we received no less than 224 opinions from the various sabhas, associations, merchants, individuals, and all kinds of people who were opposed to the Bill. We similarly received 201 opinions from various associations, individuals and highly placed officials who were in favour of such legislation. After that I think that it is most unfair that my honourable friend should go on repeating day in and day out that the Government is trying to rush through this Bill of which nobody in this province or in this House knows. I have been submitting time after time that the Government has put this Bill before this House—I mean the predecessor of this Government—and every time the Bill was commented upon both in the press and by the public and on this particular occasion we received as many as 400 opinions from the various associations and people who were concerned and directly affected by this legislation. I hope that that hobby of rushing through the Bill and nobody knowing about it and our rushing through in the dark will no longer be repeated in this House. My friend Mr. Sethi went on to say that the money-lender was a necessity. I am at one with him and I entirely agree with him. As a matter of fact I have stated several times publicly in this House and outside that the money-lender is an institution which India cannot afford to see die out. He said that that institution had existed for 2,500 years. I entirely agree with him in that respect because that is a question of fact. It did exist but he became dishonest only during the past century or so. Why? As I explained the other day, because of laws that sheltered him. Formerly there was the sanction of society. The village panchayat and headman saw that the money-lender was not dishonest and if he was dishonest he was either hunted out of the village or else you know what happened in those days, I need not repeat it. Therefore, the money-lender was honest and he was held in esteem and was respected by the village community because he was a necessary adjunct to the village. I entirely agree that he is a necessary institution but that institution must be free from all kinds of dishonest practices and malpractices. That is what we are trying to achieve through this legislation. My honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition said that this Bill might probably turn honest money-lenders into dishonest ones. If that is his idea of his fellow citizens, then I am sorry for him and I am sorry for my province. (Hear, hear). My friend Mr. Sethi made another point. He said that it was an admitted fact that there were dishonest money-lenders and he further said that until we could find honest money-lenders, we could not possibly afford to remove them. How are we going to get at those honest men?

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi : I never said that.

Premier : My honourable friend did say so. He said that dishonest money-lenders should not be removed until we can get purely a hundred per cent. honest fraternity of money-lenders. My honourable friend did not try to explain how he was going to achieve that object. From where was he going to produce honest money-lenders? My submission and contention is, and I say it with all the emphasis that I can command, that even now amongst the money-lenders' fraternity there is a large number of honest money-lenders and it is that fraternity and that section of the money-lenders which we want to encourage and which we want to see duplicated or reproduced throughout the province. (Hear, hear). That is why we have brought this Bill. It is only by this legislation that you will be able to weed out dishonest men and allow honest men to earn an honourable and respectable living by means of money-lending and we are agreed that it is an institution which must not be killed or in any way discouraged. Only the dishonest people in it should be weeded out and reformed. (Interruption). As a whole it is a question of opinion.

I come now to my friend Sardar Partab Singh who made what he thought to be a very clever speech but which I think was a speech which showed the extreme weakness of some of my friends opposite with regard to these measures. He tried to convince the House that he was favouring this measure so that the money-lender would not lend any money to the agriculturist who will thus not pay land revenue to Government and there will be an upheaval and so the honourable member would go about from village to village and preach non-payment of taxes. My honourable friend, if he were in touch with the practical side of the life of an agriculturist and if, instead of going about and trying to preach hatred in certain sections against the Government or against my party, he had really entered into their life, he would have found that since 1929 we have passed through the biggest and the most unprecedented depression in this country? The credit of the agriculturist had absolutely dried up and if you look at the statistics you will find that practically only one out of every hundred agriculturists got money on credit from the money-lender after that depression and yet.....

Sardar Partab Singh : What is that Enquiry Report—that publication on economic conditions?

Premier : My honourable friend is talking of the publication on economic conditions. I am not talking of that report but I am talking of facts as they were in the province during and after the depression and these are the facts. Let me tell him that during this depression we were very hard up. He knows perfectly well that the price of wheat went down at a time to Re. 1-4-0 a maund. (Voices: 1½ annas a maund.) In villages you get at four to six annas less but in mandis it went down to Re. 1-4-0. My honourable colleague said the other day, when he was speaking of the Marketing Bill, that the poor producer in this province gets only 9½ annas. Therefore, so far as he was concerned he was getting purely ten or eleven annas for his wheat in the market and yet, Sir, he found no difficulty in paying land revenue and if he did find difficulty he bore it like a man, as a Punjabi agriculturist ought to do (Hear, hear) (Loud cheers). My honourable friend wants to make the Punjabi agriculturist as dishonest as the money-lender. I can assure him that even if he goes on like this for a century, he will not be able to change that honest mentality of the agriculturist, who will do everything possible but not in any way break his contract if he can help it and if he cannot help it I am here to see that his burden is reduced to such a level that he can pay and that he would not be pressed (Hear, hear) (Loud applause). That is the policy which we are adopting and which we will continuously keep before us so that his liability is such that he can meet it without any undue hardship or trouble if the money-lender does not give him any credit. As a matter of fact, my contention is that even now 90 per cent. of the agriculturists have no credit left in this province. (Voices: Wrong). My honourable friends say it is wrong. I am not prepared to take it from them because they do not know the condition of the province. Ninety per cent. of the agriculturists have got no credit left. They cannot borrow any money and it is all to the good because they now only borrow for sheer necessity and not for extravagance or luxuries. I think it has done lot of good to the zamindar. It may be, as some people say, a blessing in disguise. This depression has taught the zamindar to be very thrifty and see that he does not spend money on useless ceremonies and on occasions when he could ill afford to spend money. My honourable friend went on to say that his object in making the speech was that he wanted the Bill to be further considered and that was the reason why he wanted it to go to the select committee. My honourable friend is a member of a well organised and professedly well disciplined body and either he has not seen the amendments sent in by his fellow members on those benches or if he has seen them he has very conveniently ignored them. What are the amendments sent in by my honourable friends opposite? Here is a specimen.

Munshi Hari Lal : On a point of order. These are amendments which may or may not come before the House. Can the Honourable Premier be allowed to cite them? They are not before the House at present.

Premier : My honourable friend who has just got up to interrupt me on a point of order which was fallacious as usual was not here when I paid him a tribute and which I think was a well deserved tribute when I said that money-lenders could not have a better advocate than Munshi Hari Lal who fought every inch of ground in the select committee and was of the greatest assistance to me in seeing the other side of the picture.

Munshi Hari Lal : I do not think that it is a compliment. I want to give my explanation.

Premier : I was referring particularly to my friend Sardar Partab Singh who said he wanted to strengthen the Bill. Is this the way to strengthen the Bill? Some amendments have been sent in by his own party, I hope with his knowledge and if not with his knowledge, I hope he will denounce the amendments when the time comes. One of them is to the effect that transactions other than promissory notes shall be exempted from the definition of loan. Another is that companies be exempted, so that every three or four persons can join, become a company and evade this Bill. Another is that the clause re cancellation of licenses be deleted, which means that the whole Bill will be thrown into the waste paper basket, and yet my honourable friend says that the object of his party is to strengthen the Bill. (Hear, hear). I do not think I need read all of them because I know my honourable friend Sardar Partab Singh and those who see eye to eye with him inside that party and also those who do not see eye to eye with him, and I hope that the final mandate will come in time for them to support every clause and they will not oppose the Bill or support the amendments.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Is the Honourable the Premier working for the mandate of the high command?

Premier : No, my honourable friend can flout the high command when it touches his own pocket (applause). I believe that a few of them will do their best to evade it.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : Has the honourable Premier got the ear of the Congress high command?

Premier : I am only hoping that, for the sake of that great institution and for that great organisation, the Congress itself.

Lala Duni Chand : Mr. Speaker, my identical arguments were declared by you as irrelevant.

Premier : I would not dwell on that point for long. I was pointing out that I hoped that before we got on to the amendments, they would find it convenient not to oppose the clauses, not to support the amendments, because it might lead to very unfortunate consequences—from their point of view and not from my point of view. I hope it would not be necessary for them to resort to the device of walking out on the pretext of the amendments being thrown out.

Lala Deshabandhu Gupta : I had no intention of interrupting the Honourable the Premier but I think the expression 'resort to the device of walking out on the pretext of the amendments being thrown out' used by the Premier does not become of the Leader of the House.

Premier : I am very sorry. I think I have been misunderstood. What I meant was that it would not be necessary for them to resort to the device and I believe that there seems to be some truth in what I say because members are feeling very uncomfortable on the other side.

I come now to Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang. Unfortunately he is not here. I think I can hit him hard when I find that my honourable friend is most unfair and unjust not only personally but to the provisions of the Bill itself. His first remark was with regard to an American friend. I wonder whether his friend told him that in America a similar law exists and there a money-lender has to deposit £200 before he gets a licence and that deposit can be increased to £400 under the orders of the Registrar. I suppose he forgot to ask his American friend with regard to that aspect of the question. Then I am afraid I must, though reluctantly, submit through you to the House that I believe that either Dr. Narang has probably not seen or studied the report of the select committee carefully or else he was in a mood merely to get a certain amount of more stuff in the papers with glaring headlines. I do not impute any motives but very likely he has not studied thoroughly the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee. There are one or two printing errors in the Bill which he could not take into account but apart from that he has not seen the various provisions. If he had studied them he would have found that the objections raised to certain clauses of the Bill are wholly irrelevant and are not applicable at all to the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee. He went on to say that so far as the landlord is concerned he can make the loan as he likes and be not pilloried. I cannot possibly conceive how my friend, Dr. Gokul Chand Narang, came to make such a mis-statement of facts in this House. The only reason which I can find is that he has not read the report. Now a landlord, if he lends money or lends anything in kind with interest, will become a money-lender and will get a licence. It is only the loan in kind for the purposes of husbandry to a tenant and without any interest, that is not included in the definition of loan and will not come within the purview of this Act. I do not see how my friend, Dr. Narang, came to make such an erratic and erroneous remark about this particular provision. He also said that the definition has also been changed. It has not been changed. Only those companies which came under the definition have been included. If they do money-lending business they will have to get a licence unless they get their accounts audited by a chartered accountant. That is what we have done. Again he tried to confuse everybody and he thought that it was very easy to hoodwink members of the House. He is doing great injustice to the House if he thinks that everybody has not carefully gone through the Bill. Then, Sir, he made a passing reference to the Bill so as to bring in agriculturists. I am afraid, there again, he tried to confuse the House. A money-lender, whether he is an agriculturist or non-agriculturist, if he comes within the definition of this Bill or this Act when it is passed, will be affected equally. This Act will be applicable to agriculturists just as much as to non-agriculturists, if they lend money on interest. It will affect me—although I am an agriculturist—if I lend money on interest just as much as it will affect my honourable friend, Dr. Gokul Chand Narang, if he also does that business. He further said that a money-lender, if he gave up his money-lending business, would be able to purchase from his victim after 5 years any land, because they are both agriculturists. Not only that but we are placing agriculturist money-lenders more or less on the same footing who are in certain circumstances in a worse position than ordinary money-lenders. I think, my honourable friend opposite is trying to more or less belittle our efforts in this respect.

Then, Sir, he tried again to earn the applause of my honourable friends opposite, who are also very fond of applause and to give applause where none is due, by trying to raise the question of tenants and landlords. As regards this question I would submit that no distinction exists between landlords and tenants in the Punjab, and if we do our duty to our province it will never exist in this province. Let me assure my honourable friends opposite that so far as the Government is concerned, with regard to the tenants in the Nili Bar, it has laid down certain restrictions. There are very strict restrictions and very generous conditions with regard to tenants and we propose to pursue that policy.

I have already taken a great deal of the time of the House and I think that everybody must be anxious to get on to the real business. I should like to say one word with regard to another remark made by my honourable friend Dr. Gokul Chand Narang. He said, "An uproar has been raised and even a greater uproar will be raised when they learn the actual provisions of this Bill." I entirely agree with him if this Bill is interpreted in the way my honourable friend has done. As I have submitted, he interpreted every clause of this Bill, to which he referred, in a most erroneous and misleading manner. I do not mean to say that he did it deliberately, but very likely it may be said that he did not see the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee, but which came into a different line-light of the picture through the press. I can assure, through you, the members of this House and my money-lender friends outside this House who are also citizens of this province, that it is only those dishonest money-lenders whom we want to weed out and whom we want to pillory under this Act. So far as honest money-lenders are concerned, we want, not only to encourage them, but I can assure you that after the passing of this Bill, if there is any real hardship which may be removed, I and my Government will sympathetically consider the proposal and we will remove any genuine hardship and obstacle which stands in the way of honest money-lenders. (Hear, hear). But I must also warn my honourable friends opposite that it is their duty just as much as it mine to see that dishonesty among this class, whether borrowers or creditors, is removed and that we should lead an honest and clean life with honest and clean citizens. (Loud Applause).

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

The Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill as reported by the select committee be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by the 1st October, 1938.

The motion was lost.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, I beg to move that—

The Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill be recommitted to the same select committee, with a view to consider the question of reduction of penalty in case of cancellation of licence and to take steps to eschew casual lenders and loans to traders and industrialists from the purview of the Bill.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders' Bill as reported by the select committee be taken into consideration.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The Assembly will now proceed to consider the Bill clause by clause.

Clause 2.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the first three lines and sub-clauses (1) to (7) of clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : Sir, I move:

That for sub-clause (8) (c), the following be substituted:—

An advance in kind or cash made by a landlord to his tenant for the purpose of husbandry or to agricultural labour, provided that the market value of the return as estimated at the time of return does not exceed the market value of the advance as estimated at the time of advance and provided that the money does not carry interest.

I submit that if you be pleased to see the clause as it stands in the report of the select committee, you will find that what I propose is the addition of the words 'cash' and 'agricultural labour' and also 'that the money does not carry interest.' The rest of the addition is simply a verbal alteration to the existing clause. I propose that the word 'cash' may also be added to 'kind.' It is true that the landlord may advance something in kind to the tenant but cases may arise where the tenant has to purchase implements, cattle and other articles which are necessary for husbandry and the landlord in that case may have to advance him some cash. I therefore want to save the peasant from the clutches of money-lender who is so much abused here. The landlord has got the power to advance in kind to the tenant without being registered or licensed as a money-lender. I submit that it is in the interests of the agricultural labourer—or tenant that when he wants to purchase cattle or implements or other things which are necessary for husbandry, he should have the money from the landlord and the landlord may advance the money without any necessity of his being registered or licensed as a money-lender. I therefore suggest in this clause that the landlord may advance money to a tenant or an agricultural labourer provided that the cash does not carry interest. It means that the landlord will be supplying funds to the tenant for the purpose of cultivation, for the purpose of acquiring what is required in tilling the soil without any difficulty. If the cash carries interest, then in that case the landlord will be advancing a loan; but if that cash does not carry interest, the landlord is only providing facilities to the tenant and saving him from not going to a money-lender.

Sometimes tenants are not employed but agricultural labourers are employed in order to carry on cultivation and if they require anything in kind or cash from the landlord and the landlord advances it, he must be exempted from the operation of the Act so far as that advance is concerned. In the definition of 'loan' as originally put in the Bill we find "but shall not include an advance in cash or kind made by a landlord to a tenant for the purposes of husbandry." But in the improved draft the words 'in cash' are omitted and the omission acts to the disadvantage of the tenant. I want that the tenant should be saved from the difficulty of getting money and facilities in this direction be provided for him.

The clause as it stands contains "provided the market value of the return does not exceed the market value of the advance as estimated at the time of the return." The words "as estimated at the time of the return" are not properly understood, whether they are adjuncts to 'return' or 'advance.' I want to make the meaning clear. I say that the words 'the market value of the return as estimated at the time of the return does not exceed the market value of the advance as estimated at the time of the advance' be added.

Premier : I think what the honourable member wants is that the word 'cash' should be exempted. I want to say that
 S. P. M. it is already done. This Act does not apply if cash is lent without interest. No transaction without interest comes under this Act. If a man lends money with interest, he is a money-lender but if he does not charge interest, he does not come within the purview of this Act. The only portion of his amendment which I think is relevant to this sub-clause is—Provided that the market value of the return as estimated at the time of return does not exceed the market value of the advance as estimated at the time of the advance.

'Cash' is unnecessary. As a matter of fact, I am prepared to accept that portion of his amendment if he is prepared to leave it at that.

Munshi Hari Lal : Are you prepared to accept the earlier portion of my amendment relating to an advance to an agricultural labourer also? I admit that the word 'cash' is superfluous.

Premier : I cannot accept that amendment simply for the reason that agricultural labourer is not defined and cannot be defined and you might be leaving a loophole for payments to people who are not employed on agricultural labour. I think it would be very unfair both to the landlord and to the tenant if you bring in agricultural labour ; but I am prepared to accept that particular portion where you speak of the market value of the return not exceeding the market value of the advance.

Munshi Hari Lal : But that is only a verbal alteration. It is not difficult to ascertain who is an agricultural labourer.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : If it is put down "advance in kind which does not carry interest," so that if an advance is made to an agricultural labourer in kind and that does not bear interest, will the Honourable Premier be ready to accept the amendment ?

Premier : My difficulty, as I pointed out, is that "agricultural labour" has not been defined and you may leave a big loophole.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Even though if it is made clear that it does not carry interest ?

Premier : If it does not carry any interest, you can lend money to anybody. If it does not carry interest, then it does not come within the Act.

Munshi Hari Lal : Is there any difficulty in defining who is an agricultural labourer ?

Mr. Speaker : As the agricultural labourer is not defined, the honourable member's amendment is not in order and, therefore, I am not going to put it to the House.

RULES OF PROCEDURE.

Deputy Speaker (Sardar Dasaundha Singh) : I beg to present the report of the Drafting Committee on Rules of Procedure.

The Assembly then adjourned till 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 12th July, 1938.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
3RD SESSION OF THE 1ST PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 12th July, 1938.

*The Assembly met at the Assembly Chamber, Simla, at 2 P. M. of the clock.
Mr. Speaker in the chair.*

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

RESOLUTION ON FEDERATION.

Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Premier be pleased to state whether the Punjab Government has forwarded the Resolution passed by the Assembly in the last session at Lahore on the question of Federation to the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India and if so, whether the Secretary of State for India has invited suggestions on the question from him or the Provincial Government ?

Premier : In reply to first part of the question, I have to say that a copy of the Resolution and the official record of the debates were duly forwarded to the Government of India. As to the second part, I have nothing to add to the reply I have already given to my honourable friend.

Pandit Shri Ram Sharma : What date ?

Premier : The last date when he asked.

Lala Duni Chand : Was there any covering letter or forwarding letter sent along with the Resolution ?

Premier : Yes, a covering letter was sent.

Lala Duni Chand : Did it express the opinion of the Punjab Government ?

Premier : No.

THE PUNJAB REGISTRATION OF MONEY-LENDERS BILL.

Clause 2.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : Sir, I was submitting my argument yesterday with regard to the addition of the words 'agricultural labourer.' I think there would be no difficulty in practice to find out who is an agricultural labourer. Honourable members, who are zamindars, know that they are recorded in the revenue papers as khudkash while the cultivation is being conducted and carried on by the labourer who works under them. My submission is that there should be facilities provided to those also who work in the field on agriculture and who cultivate the land. I submit that if the amendment is accepted as extending to the 'agricultural labourer,' there will be absolutely no deviation from the principle and there will also be no material change in the sub-clause.

That for sub-clause (8) (c), the following be substituted :—

An advance in kind or cash made by a landlord to his tenant for the purpose of husbandry or to agricultural labourer, provided that the market value of the return as estimated at the time of return does not exceed the market value of the advance as estimated at the time of advance and provided that the money does not carry interest.

Sardar Dasaundha Singh : I rise to a point of order. So far as this amendment is concerned it is out of order. It is not covered by the Bill because the definition of 'loan' is very clear on this point.

Mr. Speaker : Will the honourable Sardar Dasaundha Singh, please, explain why it is out of order ?

Sardar Dasaundha Singh : It is out of order because it does not carry interest and even if it is an advance in kind, even then the monetary value of that advance at the time is equal to the monetary value of the advance in kind at the time of return. There is no monetary benefit involved and it does not carry interest. Therefore, it does not come within the definition of 'loan.' When it is not a loan such an advance can be made and this does not fall within the purview of this Bill.

Premier : I think that if all the three things which my honourable friend desires had been put as separate amendments, it would have been possible for me to accept a portion of that amendment. So far as the first part of the amendment is concerned, as pointed out by my learned friend, the Deputy Speaker, it is out of order and in any case redundant, because my friend wants to include cash provided that the money does not carry interest. That is already covered.

Mr. Speaker : That is admitted by him.

Premier : The second thing is with regard to the agricultural labourer. I submitted yesterday that agricultural labourer is not defined in this Act and it would be impossible to distinguish an agricultural labourer from any other person to whom a loan is advanced. A man may very well say that he is an agricultural labourer because I have paid him money and I have asked him to work on my land for a day or so. That person would for ever become a debtor and that would be the difficulty which it may not be possible to overcome. My honourable friend is a lawyer and he knows perfectly well that in the case of khudkasht land in the ownership column it is the owner's name which is entered and the labourer's name is never entered in those columns. He might change from day to day.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Even the part as it stands in the Bill is out of order. Part (i) of sub-clause (8) seems to be out of order.

Premier : We are now discussing Munshi Hari Lal's amendment. He wants to make a verbal amendment with regard to that portion which relates to the market value of the produce given in kind or loan given in kind for husbandry. I am prepared to accept that.

Mr. Speaker : He may withdraw his amendment and move the other.

Premier : He may move just the words, " Provided that the market value of the return ....." "

Sardar Dasaundha Singh : That would be unnecessary because it is absolutely redundant. It is not covered by the Act. Definition of 'loan' makes it clear that without interest, without any gain, an advance can be made by anybody.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of order. The Honourable Premier does not seem to have followed me. If I am not mistaken the amendment is being moved to sub-clause (8) (i).

Premier : It is sub-clause (8) (i).

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Yes. Sub-clause (b) (5) seems to be redundant.

Premier : Why ?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : It simply says—

“An advance in kind or cash made by a landlord to his tenant for the purpose of husbandry or to agricultural labourer provided that the market value of the return as estimated at the time of return.....”

It means that if he takes one rupee he must return one rupee. That means no interest and, therefore, it is not covered by the definition of ‘loan.’

Premier : I think the honourable member has not quite understood this part of the clause. Supposing a man gives two maunds of wheat at the time of sowing when it costs Rs. 3 per maund ; when he wants it back at the time of harvest it may be Rs. 2 per maund ; he will then be entitled to get 3 maunds instead of two.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : He gets six for six and there is no necessity.....

Premier : Somebody may say that for two maunds he has taken three maunds. We wanted to clear that point.

Munshi Hari Lal : I ask for the leave of the House to withdraw my amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : If the sub-clause is allowed to remain then there is no room for any amendment.

Mr. Speaker : That point will be taken up after withdrawal.

Is it the pleasure of the House that the amendment be withdrawn ?
(Voices : Yes.)

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Munshi Hari Lal : I beg to move—

That for sub-clause (B) (5) the following be substituted :—

“An advance in kind or cash made by a landlord to his tenant.....”

Mr. Speaker : Please move the verbal amendment.

Munshi Hari Lal : I move the following amendment—

“An advance in kind made by a landlord to his tenant for the purpose of husbandry or to agricultural labourer, provided that the market value of the return as estimated at the time of return does not exceed the market value of the advance as estimated at the time of advance.”

I have withdrawn my amendment and am now putting forward a new amendment.

Mr. Speaker : I have not got the amendment.

Munshi Hari Lal : The conflict between me and the Treasury benches is with regard to the agricultural labourer.

Sardar Dasraundha Singh : On a point of order. The amendment would be out of order because the value of the grain at the time of advance will be equal to the value of the grain, etc., at the time of return. In that case there will be no monetary gain and it would not fall under the definition of ‘loan.’ Therefore this amendment is absolutely unnecessary.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : May I be permitted to supplement what has already been explained by the Honourable the Premier ?

Munshi Hari Lal : The idea is that if a return is made in kind that makes some difference. The question is if I get 10 maunds at the time of advance I should return 10 maunds at the time of return, but the difficulty would arise in the difference of prices on the two occasions. I 'therefore' submit that the grain returned in kind for the grain I have already taken should be equal in monetary value.

Mir Magbool Mahmood : Sir, the definition of 'loan' is a loan in cash or kind at interest, and if you will refer to the definition of 'interest' in sub-clause (7) you will find it includes the return to be made over and above what was actually lent not only in cash but it may be in cash or in kind. If I lend 9 maunds and take back 9 maunds it may be that while the quantity returned in kind may be the same, the market value may be different. It is, therefore, in order to provide for such differences that it has been thought necessary by the select committee to put in a proviso and make the position clear.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : A sub-clause does not carry a commentary ; it is left to the people to interpret it. You never include a commentary in a section of the statute.

Malik Barkat Ali : May I suggest a slight alteration ? It will meet all the points. If the words 'in cash' are added after the words "market value of the return" it will meet all the points that have been explained by the Honourable Premier. In sub-clause 8 (i) an advance in kind made by a landlord to his tenant for the purposes of husbandry, provided the market value of the return does not exceed the market value of the advance is excepted. You will see that a case of interest will arise if the market value of the return to be made is over and above what was actually lent. If 10 maunds are advanced and returned the difference in price at the date of the advance and return would lead to interest and will alter the position. Therefore, if the words 'in cash' are added after 'return' that will make the position clear.

Premier : It will make the position clear from the point of view of my honourable friend opposite.

Munshi Hari Lal : Provided the market value as estimated at the time of return does not exceed...

Mr. Speaker : Is the rest of his amendment accepted ?

Premier : The rest of the amendment is not necessary.

Sardar Dasaundha Singh : May I submit that the words 'in kind' are unnecessary because it is the value of the return : if it is in cash these words would be unnecessary.

Premier : The clause as it stands meets everybody.

Mr. Speaker : I am proposing Munshi Hari Lal's amendment as worded. The question is that—

For sub-clause 8 (i), the following be substituted:—

"An advance in kind made by a landlord to his tenant for the purpose of husbandry or to agricultural labourer; provided that the market value of the return as estimated at the time of return does not exceed the market value of the advance as estimated at the time of advance."

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal : Sir, I beg to move that—

In the last line of sub-clause (8) (i) for the word "return" the word "advance" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move that—

At the end of sub-clause 8 (ii), the words "or with a registered and licensed money-lender or with any employer as security from his employees" be added.

Section 8 contains the definition of a loan and defines it thus:—

"Loan means an advance whether secured or unsecured of money or in kind at interest and shall include any transaction which the court finds to be in substance a loan, but it shall not include....."

Further you will notice from the succeeding exceptions in the Bill that several kinds of transactions, which otherwise would be loans, are excluded from the definition of loan in this Act. For instance, in sub-clause (ii), you will find that if a person deposits money in a Government Post Office Bank or any other bank or in a company or with a co-operative society, that deposit of money is not treated as a loan. That is not a loan within the meaning of this Act. My amendment only seeks to add two other kinds of deposits to this sub-clause. One is a deposit as security by an employee with an employer which usually carries interest. I understand that the Government would not object to this portion of my amendment and, therefore, I do not wish to advance any arguments with respect to this portion of my amendment which deals with the deposit with any employer as security by an employee. There is another portion of my amendment which deals with the deposit with a registered and licensed money-lender. Those of us, who have occasionally some spare money, know very well that in places where banking facilities do not exist, we do send our spare money to arkhis or money-lenders to keep it with them, not only for safety of the money but also with a view to earn something. They usually allow a low rate of interest. If you are excluding deposits in banks or with co-operative societies, why should you not exclude a deposit with a registered and licensed money-lender. I make my submission, not only in the interest of depositors, but also in the interest of licensed money-lenders, on whom certain kind of prestige would be bestowed by this amendment. After all, when you are recognising an honest money-lender as a banking institution, you ought to treat him on the same level as you treat co-operative societies, banks and any other institution. That is my reason for moving this amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, the amendment moved is that—

At the end of sub-clause 8 (ii) the words "or with a registered and licensed money-lender or with any employer as security from his employees" is added.

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) : Sir, May I submit that this amendment is absolutely unnecessary? May I draw the attention of my learned friend to the definition of money-lender? This Bill professedly deals with loans by money-lenders. This Bill has absolutely nothing to do with loans which are not advanced by money-lenders. My learned friend wants to exempt the deposits with money-lenders. These deposits with money-lenders are not advances made by money-lenders and the mischief that this Act seeks to avoid and prevent is only in case of advances of loans by money-lenders. I would, therefore, respectfully submit that really there is nothing in this amendment. As a matter of fact, if the whole of clause (vi) were to go, it would not matter at all for the purposes of this Act, because this Act deals only, as I have submitted, with loans by money-lenders. A deposit of money or other property in a Government Post Office Bank or any other bank or in a company or with a co-operative society is not to be affected by this Act in view of the definition of money-lender because none of these loans are advanced by money-lenders. I, therefore, respectfully submit from the point of view of my learned friend, that this amendment really is no amendment and it has no purpose behind it.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I do not think that the criticism of my honourable friend Malik Barkat Ali is sound. The whole difficulty lies in the connotation of the word 'money-lender.' The only definition that we find here is—

'Money-lender' means a person, including a firm who carries on the business of advancing loans as defined in this Act.

Now 'loan' has been defined as an advance whether secured or unsecured, of money or in kind on interest and shall include certain things but shall not include certain other things. Now, if the human brain could have discovered a comprehensive definition of money-lender, perhaps there would have been some soundness in my friend's criticism. But the whole difficulty has been that during the last 15 years it has not been possible to define the word 'money-lender.' It is, therefore, necessary to make some exceptions in the definition of 'loan' as may be considered to be necessary in the interests of those whom this Bill when it becomes an Act is not contemplated to affect. Now, the amendment that has been moved by Mr. Puri is very necessary. I have received numerous letters and in one of them, I am told, that protection should be sought for such people as, for instance, widows and orphans. Now, suppose the husband dies leaving a widow and some minor children and also a sum of Rs. 2,000. She is not a money-lender herself nor was her husband during his life time. But she proposes to deposit the money with a registered money-lender who happens to be her neighbour and in whom she has got trust; or instead of depositing the whole amount with one money-lender she deposits with four such people at Rs. 500 each. What guarantee is there that if afterwards it becomes necessary for the poor widow to bring a suit to recover all her money that the sub-judge will not hold her a money-lender, because she has four monetary transactions, four deposits given out, unless those deposits are exempted from the operation of this measure? It is, therefore, very necessary that this protection should be given to people who deposit their money with a registered money-lender and to employees who deposit money with their employers.

Mr. Speaker : If deposits with registered and licensed money-lenders are excluded from the operation of this measure, as suggested by the honourable member, thousands of people, who possess money in large quantities, instead of dealing with the borrowers direct will deposit their money with these money-lenders and thus escape from this law and that would be against the spirit of the Bill. I am inclined, therefore, to hold that the amendment is out of order.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I submit that this amendment is not against the spirit of the Bill. The whole principle of the Bill is to protect the poor debtor, the poor agriculturist and so on, because for the past 15 years we have been listening to speeches in which the poor agriculturist, the poor zamindar has been looming very large and all the speeches which have been delivered in connection with this Bill also have related to the protection of the poor zamindar. I do not think that the object of the Bill will be frustrated by this amendment. Is it contended that the money-lender should not raise loans from anywhere for carrying on his business or that people should not deposit their money with the registered money-lenders? The principle of the Bill is not to make it illegal to make advances to money-lenders, in fact, not even to make it illegal for an agriculturist to make advances to money-lenders. All that this Bill aims at doing is to have an effective control on transactions defined as loans. The main object of the Bill is to protect the agriculturists. I never understood that the object was that even money-lenders were not to raise money from other persons or that persons who had some spare money should not invest it in some safe place. Is it the intention of the Bill that if a person has got, say Rs. 1,000, he or she should be compelled to deposit it in the Imperial Bank where not more than 1½ per cent. per annum will be allowed as interest? Why should people be prevented from going to merchants, registered money-lenders, who ex-hypothesi will become more reliable and honest according to the Honourable Premier if this Bill is passed? Why should they be prevented from going to them and depositing their money with them and receiving 4 or 5 per cent., or in any case more than what a respectable bank would allow on fixed deposits? The Honourable Premier suddenly got up and said 'You have hit the nail on the head.' Why? Because people who do not want to register themselves as money-lenders will give their money to registered money-lenders and would thus carry on their business. Well, but where is the nail and where is the hitting of that nail? If such a person goes and deposits money with the money-lenders, that person can never go to court, because there is no privity of contract between that person and the ultimate borrower. He deposits his money with the money-lender and it is the money-lender who alone will go to court and will get relief if he is a registered and licensed money-lender. Therefore, all the requirements of law will be fulfilled if the money-lender with whom the money of the widow or the orphan is deposited goes to court.

Mr. Speaker : If the money-lender does not return the deposit, what happens?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Then she is finished.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is talking of women.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Yes. That is the whole point of my speech. If she is treated as a money-lender she is then finished.

Now, let me, in the first place, say a word about this clause 12. In fact this clause 12 may prove a blessing or may prove an utter curse, because it will depend upon the sweetwill of some one who acts on behalf of the Government to grant exemption to an individual or a group of individuals. In fact, I think, it is full of mischief. A great deal of mischief can be done under the cloak of clause 12. The exemption may be granted only to favourites or to zaidies or to those who betray people or who do dirty work for the Government. There are plenty of people who are at one time or another engaged in such functions. Now let us assume that the Government will act more justly under clause 12 than it is doing with the whole of this Bill and it would be prepared to grant exemptions in right places. Do you mean to say that hundreds of widows and orphans will have to approach Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram and pray for exemption? You should realise what difficulties and hardships you are placing in the way of these people. They do not know where the Punjab Government sits, who represent it and how applications are to be made for exemption. If the object of this Bill is to prevent dishonest money-lenders from carrying on their business, it does not make any difference to the spirit of the Bill or those persons who are likely to be affected if this Bill was not enacted or those who will be affected if this Bill is passed into law, if deposits are allowed to be made with registered money-lenders; it is they who will go to courts.

Mr. Speaker : In that light the amendment is not out of order.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : I am afraid there is some misunderstanding with regard to this clause. The real purpose why we had included this clause in the select committee has not been understood. Let me give an instance. Suppose, I, a money-lender with unscrupulous methods, want to advance loans to certain people in my village without coming under the provisions of this Bill. I could easily do it. If this amendment were accepted I have only to ask my poor victim to pay Rs. 5 and get registered as a money-lender. They need not keep any regular account, they submit any six-monthly statement, because they have advanced no loans but by getting registered and paying a nominal fee they can exempt the whole of the business of this unscrupulous money-lending from the provisions of this Bill. That is the reason why we did not include this in the exemptions with regard to deposits. When we are dealing with a matter of this nature we have to avoid possibility of wholesale evasions of the Act. Moreover, my honourable friend will find that we have taken this clause verbatim from a similar clause in the Regulation of Accounts Act. Another point raised by my honourable friend Dr. Narang was that casual people such as widows and others who want to deposit their money with money-lenders will suffer and that casual money-lenders will be harassed. I submit that if any casual money-lender or casual depositor of any class wishes to deposit his money with the money-lenders once, twice or three times, he does not come within the definition of carrying on the business of advancing loans. There has been a great deal of case law on the words 'carrying on the business of money-lending' under the English Act. It has been made clear there that it is a continued and systematic business to which this definition will apply. All this will be thrashed out by the courts. But if a person under the garb of advancing money to money-lenders carries on the business of money-lending, he should not be given protection.

Malik Barkat Ali : It appears to me that the fears expressed by Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang are really based on a complete confusion and a misreading of the Bill. If he will just turn to the definition of "Money-lender" he will agree with me that the committee felt the necessity of defining the word 'loan', because the word 'loan' occurs in the definition of "money-lender." Money-lender means a person who carries on the business of advancing loans. Now the object of this clause 2, as I understand it, is this. Supposing a money-lender, who falls within this definition, deposits money with a Government post office or any other bank, you will agree with me that a deposit of that kind by a money-lender will not be a loan. The clause, as I see it, is in the interest of the money-lender. The object of the clause is to prevent a deposit of this kind made by a money-lender falling under the definition of loan. I invite my honourable friend's attention to the other clauses also. Clause (i) refers to the advance made by a landlord, the object being to prevent a landlord falling under the definition of money-lender. Similarly clause (ii) exempts the loan to or by or a deposit with any society or association registered under the Societies Registration Act, 1860 or under any other enactment, so that the Central Bank or any other bank may not be dubbed as money-lenders. Similarly other clauses also are there. A trader is not to be dubbed as a money-lender. Therefore, my respectful submission is that so far as clause (ii) is concerned, the object is really to protect money-lenders in regard to those deposits which they make with the banks.

Now, so far as it is a question of anybody depositing with a money-lender, I respectfully submit that there is nothing in the whole of this Bill which penalizes or prohibits unless the depositor is a money-lender himself. My honourable friend says that if a widow deposits some money with a money-lender, her deposit will be a deposit. Let it be so. I ask my learned friend and I challenge him to point out a single clause of this Bill which penalizes that, unless my learned friend says that the casual advances or these widows who deposit money, fall within the definition of a money-lender. Here I entirely differ from my learned friend and he must admit that the business of a money-lender is something different and cannot possibly include casual advances. I respectfully submit that the grounds of objection have absolutely no legs to stand upon and my learned friend should remember that the object is to protect these advances by money-lenders from falling within the definition of a loan.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban): My object in supporting this amendment is that the definition of loan is not exhaustive. Definition of loan includes any transaction which the court finds to be in substance a loan. This means that we are left to the mercy of the court and the court may find, even though I may be an honest depositor, that I have lent the money and not deposited it. This is one point. My second point is that if money is invested with a licensed money-lender, should the investor be called a money-lender or not? A man who deposits money with a bank is not a money-lender. I submit that the man who deposits with a licensed money-lender should not likewise be deemed a money-lender as defined in this Bill. The objection taken is that the money thus deposited will further be lent by the money-lender. What does it matter? If I deposit money with one bank or more than one bank, I know that my money is not to be looked up in the bank, but will be lent to debtors' borrowers, and traders by the bank. Similarly if I deposit money with the licensed money-lender and he lends it out to borrowers, it would not make any difference. I tell the money-lenders outside that in the Bill there is a silver lining also. A registered money-lender will in due course of time be brought within the banking structure. He will be linked with the Reserve Bank. He will enjoy advantages which under the Reserve Bank Act he may have. A person who is a licensed and registered money-lender would be certified as an honest man. Any body may deal with him. Supposing I am living in a village and I have got some money. I cannot go and deposit the money in a bank. I may deposit it with a village sachar who is a registered and licensed money-lender and who according to the statement of the Honourable Premier has been declared an honest man. I deal with him and thinking that he is an honest man, I deposit the money with him that I should not be called a money-lender. When I ever see him, I should not be deemed a money-lender plaintiff. I submit where there is a duty there is a corresponding right also. When a money-lender is under a duty to obtain a licence it should be his right to be treated as an honest banker and as such to receive deposits from those who like to deposit money with him. Those who deal with him as depositors should not be treated as money-lenders. Therefore I submit that deposits with a licensed money-lender, should not be considered as loans within the ambit of the 'loan' as defined in this Bill.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar (North-Western Towns, General, Urban) : We have not sufficient banking facilities in the province and when I say that I speak from personal experience. We have considerable difficulties in realising premiums. In places where there are banks, we can open our accounts with these banks and get our insurance premia deposited in those banks ; but there are places where there are no banks and if there is a registered money-lender who is considered to be a respectable person we can entrust that kind of work to him for receiving insurance premia. What would be the effect of this amendment ? The effect would be that it would give facilities to insuring public and at the same time not expose depositors to the risk of being money-lenders. From that point of view when we have a person recognised by the State to be a dependable, honest and reliable person, there is no harm if this person is also treated to be a part and parcel of the banking institution. From that point of view, my submission is that we might easily adopt this amendment given notice of by my friends.

Lala Sita Ram : Mr. Speaker, may I say a few words ?

Mr. Speaker : This is the second time that the honourable member has made a personal request to me to allow him to speak. This is against parliamentary etiquette ; so I have decided not to call upon him to speak.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat Khan) : Sir, I have very little to say because most of the points made by Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang and other members have already been met with by my friends: Malik Barkat Ali and Mir Maqbool Mahmood. But the point raised by Lala Bhim Sen Sachar has yet to be answered. I think he has probably not very carefully read the definition of the term, for if you want some insurance money to be collected, there should be no difficulty and there is no bar against such a thing being done by the money-lenders. The deposit of insurance premia with the licensed money-lender will not be covered and it is unnecessary hair-splitting. If you make a casual deposit it does not matter.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : It will not be a casual deposit. There will be an account with the money-lender and he has got to send us accounts every month.

Premier : But he will not have to pay any interest.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : He may have to.

Premier : The payer of the premium will not be paid any interest nor will the money-lender be paid interest. As a matter of fact I believe that he has not carefully read the definition, as several others have not, except, perhaps, myself or the Hon'ble Speaker who have to burn their midnight oil over it. But the definition of loan is quite clear and then there is the definition of 'interest.' There are several ingredients and they have all to be there before the definition of loan as given in this Bill comes into operation. He must be a money-lender, the loan must be in accordance with the terms of this Act and it must be bearing interest and so on. If all these ingredients are there, then and then alone the person becomes a money-lender. So far as premia are concerned there is no danger, nor is there any danger so far as a casual depositor or a widow is concerned. In any event each case will have to be considered on its own merits in a court of law. What we want to see is that there is no loop-hole left in the definition so that a money-lender, a big money-lender in Lahore may not deposit money with a small village money-lender and evade the law. That is the thing which you must avoid if you want to make this law a success and do not want to make it a dead letter. The Act is not meant, as stated by my honourable friend Mr. Puri, to be harsh on any body or, as pointed out by Dr. Gokul Chand Narang, meant merely to safeguard the poor zamindars. Nothing of the sort. It is meant to see that the moneylending business is purged of all irregularities, dishonesty and fraud. This is the main object and having that object in view, I am sure the honourable members will agree with me that these amendments, although on the face of them, they look to be quite innocuous and harmless are likely to damage the whole framework of this Bill and, therefore, I request that if they want that the principle to which the House has agreed should be left intact, it will be well to leave out these amendments and concentrate on the main thing which might from their point of view be a source of hardship to the genuine money-lender. Let us concentrate on those amendments. I may assure you that I have studied the Bill and, although I am not a lawyer, I will not allow any loop-holes which are likely to defeat the whole object of this Bill.

With regard to the second part of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri's amendment I do think that it is necessary but if he thinks that it would be safer to bring it in, I am prepared to accept it with regard to the deposit by employees with their employers. (Voices : Question be now put.)

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : If that registered money-lender were to pay some interest to that Insurance Company for the deposits of the premium, will the Company then become a money-lender or not ?

Premier : No. It is specifically excluded.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I want to reply.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member may speak. He has the right of reply.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am very pleased to note that the Premier has been pleased to accept a portion of my amendment and, therefore, I would request you to put it in two parts. With respect to the other portion of the amendment I am prepared to say that the point of view put forward by Malik Barkat Ali, and which seems to have been accepted by the Government, is the correct interpretation on the subject. You would observe that the definition of the word 'money-lender' contains the words 'carries on the business of advancing loans' and, therefore, ex-hypothesis the deposit would not bring the person, who deposits the money, within the definition of the word 'money-lender'. I would not have moved this amendment if certain deposits had not been specifically excluded from the definition of 'loan' which forms an integral part of the definition of 'money-lender'. If you specifically exclude three or four kinds of deposits then the deposits which are not specifically named may be said to be inferentially covered by this definition, and, therefore, it was for this reason that I wished to add the words 'deposit with the money-lender'. As a matter of fact for my purpose it would be better if this clause were altogether excluded inasmuch as, according to the interpretation of Malik Barkat Ali and which I consider to be the correct interpretation and which for the present seems to be conceded to by the Government, a depositor even if he has actually deposited money and is not carrying on the business of lending money would be excluded. My reason for pressing this amendment is that since you have excluded from the definition three or four kinds of deposits, you should add this exception also, because it stands more or less on the same footing with the other deposits. (Voices : Question be now put.)

Mr. Speaker : I propose to put this amendment in two parts as suggested. The question is—

That at the end of sub-clause (8) (ii), the words "or with a registered and licensed money-lender" be added.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That at the end of sub-clause (8) (ii), the words "or with any employer as security from his employees" be added.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Now I propose to put the clauses that have been considered and finished.

Question is—

That the first six introductory lines of sub-clause (8) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That sub-clause (8) (i) as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is :—

That sub-clause (8) (ii) as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That sub-clause (8) (iii) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Now sub-clause (8) (iv) will be taken up.

Lala Sita Ram : I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (8) (iv), line 1, between the words "by" and "the" the words "or to" be inserted.

Premier : I am prepared to accept my honourable friends' amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That in sub-clause (8) (iv), line 1, between the words "by" and "the" the words "or to" be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Lala Sita Ram : I beg to move—

That in lines 2-3 between the words "by" and "any" the words "or to" be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Sardar Lal Singh (Ludhiana Central, Sikh, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (8) (v), lines 3—5, the words "whose...Act" be deleted.

The idea of inserting these words is that the Bill ropes in private companies. Private companies registered under the Indian Companies Act have to keep regular accounts. It is compulsory for them to appoint auditors and in the case of private companies it is open to them to appoint auditors who are not certificated. In this Bill it is not the idea to audit the accounts of money-lenders. The idea is that the private companies who do money-lending business must get their names registered and must take out licences if they want to sue. Private companies are registered under the Indian Companies Act, an Act which been framed so very carefully and the provisions of which Act are bound all round by salutary restrictions. For such companies to make it obligatory to get a licence is not reasonable. Under this Bill money-lenders are not subject to audit. The summum bonum of the Money-Lenders Act is that they should register and should take out licences if they want to sue so that they should not easily commit a fraud on everybody. The provision against fraud by the private companies is also provided for. There are penalties for fraud, for irregular accounts and for wrong statements under the Indian Companies Act. I, therefore, submit that there is no reason to rope in private companies by saying that they are not companies which are not subject to audit by a certificated accountant. The words are 'subject to audit by a certificated auditor under the Companies Act'. A private company which appoints a certificated auditor need not be registered. How will that help the carrying on of the business of the company? I, therefore, submit that these words should be deleted.

That in sub-clause (B) (v), lines 3—5, the words " whose..... Act " be deleted.

Premier : Sir, I am afraid I must enter a caveat against this amendment. I may also through you point out to my honourable friend, the mover of the amendment that he has not understood the meaning of his own amendment and if he has understood it I am surprised that it should have come from Sardar Lal Singh : if it had come from Lala Deshbandhu Gupta I would not have been surprised. The fact is that by this amendment, if we accept it, you will be frustrating the whole object of the Bill. What we want to avoid is that two, three or four persons should join together and get themselves registered as a private company.

Munshi Hari Lal : Not less than 7.

Premier : The honourable member says seven persons. Four persons can sit together and get themselves registered and would be immune from all the provisions of the Act. Does my honourable friend want that consummation or not? Does he want that a private company or firm registered need not keep any account? Why should they not? If they come within the purview of this Act would they not be liable under the law to give account to their creditors or anybody else? My honourable friend has not seen the Indian Companies Act. Under the Companies Act they need not get their accounts audited and need not send a copy to the share-holders. A public company has not only to see that its accounts are audited by a certificated auditor but has to provide copies of the balance sheet to the Registrar where it is open to examination by every member of the public; but it is not so with a private company. Therefore, I think if my honourable friend would read the law along with the Act he will not move his amendment.

Sardar Lal Singh : Sir, I will read section 144 of the Indian Companies Act—

(3) Every company shall at each annual general meeting appoint an auditor or auditors to hold office until the next annual general meeting.

Premier : Private companies are specifically excluded.

Sardar Lal Singh : I will read section 180 which says—

- (1) Every company shall cause to be kept proper books of account with respect to—
- (a) all sums of money received and expended by the company and the matters in respect of which the receipt and expenditure takes place;
  - (b) all sales and purchases of goods by the company;
  - (c) the assets and liabilities of the company.

Premier : My lawyer friends will be able to point out that it is not a fact.

Sardar Lal Singh : Again, the appointment of an auditor is necessary.

Premier : What is the object of your amendment—that they should have their accounts audited?

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in sub-clause (B) (v), lines 3—5, the words " whose..... Act " be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Sub-clause 8 (c) as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Sub-clause 8 (e) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gopal Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move that—

For sub-clause 8 (c), the following be substituted :—

“ a loan advanced to a trader.”

In order to understand the import of my amendment, a glance at the original part (c) of sub-clause 8 would be necessary. It says :—

“ a loan advanced by a trader to a trader, in the regular course of business, in accordance with trade usage.”

Now my submission is that this exemption is very restricted. It does not go far enough, because it restricts the exemption only to those cases where, say, a wholesale cloth merchant sells some cloth to a retail cloth merchant on credit for, say, Rs. 500 or Rs. 1,000. That would be treated in the nature of a loan advanced by a trader to a trader in the regular course of business. Now the restrictions which I want to be removed are two in this part. One is that a loan must be advanced by a trader, as is provided in the clause as it stands and the other is that it must be advanced in the regular course of business. To me both these restrictions are not only unnecessary but mischievous. I do not mean mischievous in the sense that people who drafted the clause had any mischievous motives, but I mean that they are calculated to do injury to business. The object of the Bill is not to restrict the dealings between traders and traders. That is certainly not the object. The object, as I said only a few minutes ago, is to control the loans advanced by money-lenders to agriculturists, or in any case, to control the advances by professional money-lenders to other persons. Now a trader is not by profession a money-lender, whether he is a wholesale trader or a retail trader. Advancement of loans arises out of the necessity of their business and it was not a bad thing to exempt such a loan from the operation of the definition of loan, but as I have said, this is a much too restricted exemption. No reasons seem to have been given why a loan by a trader to a trader in the course of business should be exempted and not any loan given to a trader. Why should it be necessary that when a trader raises a loan he should raise it to avail himself of this exemption from another trader and that even in the ordinary course of business? If I am a shopkeeper why should I be prevented from going to a larger shopkeeper, to a more prosperous shopkeeper, and taking a straight loan of Rs. 50 or Rs. 100 to carry on my small business? Why should it be necessary that in order to have advantage of that exemption I should buy goods from that man? I may be hit very hard on account of this restriction, because that man, knowing fully well that I cannot pay in cash, may sell to me goods at much higher than the market price. If I had money in my pocket, I would buy anything in the open market much cheaper, cheaper by 5 per cent. or even 10 per cent. than I would buy on credit. The wholesale trader knows that I cannot pay and that I have to execute a pro-note in his favour; so he is likely to put up the prices, because, after all, though he expects to realise some interest on that advance, he will be running a certain amount of risk because he has already parted with his goods on credit. Therefore, the small trader suffers in consequence. So, my submission is that this restriction is not only unnecessary, but it is also fraught with mischief. It may cause a loss to the people later whom it may be intended to help. I would, therefore, submit that in place of this sub-clause the words "a loan advanced to a trader" should be substituted. It does not matter whether he receives this advance from a zamindar or from a ghair zamindar; whether he takes this advance from his brother or from a trader or from a clerk working in some office or from any other source. I would certainly like to hear from the Honourable Premier why it was necessary to impose those restrictions when obviously it is not intended to lay any restrictions on business, whether wholesale or retail. Is it the way of affording special protection to a trader? My honourable friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, when speaking on a previous amendment said, 'Why should not a poor trader also be protected? It is very good of him to be generous and to be merciful even to a trader. I am glad that my honourable friend has so much mercy for poor traders. It is for the first time that I have seen someone, on that side, showing some inclination to be merciful to the poor trader. But my submission is that that poor trader does not want any help from any member of this House, so far as the system of credit is concerned. Even those who borrow and those who lend do not want any restrictions to be placed upon the credit so far as business people are concerned, because they know that business flourishes only when credit is in plenty. You may do anything you like to protect your agriculturist brethren, but for Heaven's sake, do not lay your hands on the poor trader and do not spoil trade by imposing restrictions in such a way. I would, therefore, submit that this is the most innocent and most necessary amendment and I expect that the Government would not oppose it if they can fully realise what I mean.

Mr. Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

For sub-clause (8) (vi), the following be substituted:—

"a loan advanced to a trader."

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): It appears to me that the criticism of Dr. Gokul Chand Narang is essentially based on a complete misunderstanding. Dr. Narang has been pleased to characterise this clause as a kind of restriction. I should call it a concession. The point raised by the honourable member is that a trader advancing money to a trader in the course of business should not be treated as a money-lender and should not be required to register himself. If that is the intention, and I agree with it, if the object is really to facilitate trade, if the object is help in the matter of advances to traders by traders in the regular course of business, then I fail to understand the point of my learned friend's criticism that this clause which allows a trader to advance another in the course of trade is more in the nature of a restriction and a mischievous restriction at that. According to my learned friend's amendment, a money-lender should be allowed to advance loans to a trader without regard to the provisions of the Act, and in fact, should be allowed to flout this Act. Is it fair that a money-lender who advances loans to a trader should stand on a different footing from a money-lender who advances loans to others? I must congratulate the members of the select committee on this very useful clause. As I have already submitted, this clause is a concession to the traders. It is in the interest of trade. I am not able to understand the view point of the honourable mover of this amendment. It appears to me that he has a certain obsession in his mind and that is that this Act is really directed against money-lenders and in favour of agriculturists. My understanding of the Bill is that it applies to all, whatever his vocation may be. I think that this clause is in the interest of trade and is more an enlargement than a restriction of liberty. (Hear, hear.)

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): Malik Barkat Ali was pleased to say that the observations of Dr. Gokul Chand Narang on this point were based on certain misapprehensions. In order to understand the nature of the amendment it is necessary to know the history of this legislation. If you look at the section which was in the original Bill, you will find that the definition of 'loan' as given there did not contain any exceptions. In the select committee we considered that the definition as proposed was something which could not be worked in practice without great hardship and, therefore, we decided to look at the definition of 'loan' in the Regulation of Accounts Act; and we embodied the definition as given there practically in its entirety with two exceptions. One exception was that loans given on mortgage were excluded in the Regulation of Accounts Act, but they are included in this Bill. Again, there is a clause in the Regulation of Accounts Act, section 7, which defined 'loans' and this definition excluded loans given 'to a trader.' (An honourable member: By a trader). No, the exception was confined to a loan 'to a trader,' the object then was not to restrict his credit in any manner.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Is that so?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Yes. Dr. Narang's amendment only wishes to reproduce the definition of loan as given in the Regulation of Accounts Act and which I pressed forward in the select committee. I tried to convince to the best of my ability the other members of the committee that whatever they might do to protect the interests of agriculturists, where the interests of traders were concerned they should not inflict a harm which might be irreparable. There were certain very good reasons, which I shall state presently, why 'loans to traders' were excluded from the definition in the Regulation of Accounts Act. I submit that those very reasons equally if not a fortiori apply to the present Bill also. Mir Maqbool Mahmood was very eloquent yesterday in pointing out the miseries of the agriculturists especially at the hands of the unscrupulous money-lenders. He seemed to indicate that the agriculturists wished that the money-lenders with whom they had to deal should be registered, licensed and quartered and punished very severely for any delinquency that may be committed by them. I do not wish to enter into a controversy as to how far this demand is legitimate on behalf of the representatives of the agriculturists. But so far as 'advances to traders' are concerned, they stand on an entirely different footing as they have never demanded that persons who give them credit, should be registered or licensed. I ask, is there any section of traders who have ever asked for the registration of money-lenders who advance loans to them? After all, this legislation is either in the interests of creditors or debtors or both. Money-lenders who lend out money to traders, of course ex-hypothesi do not want registration nor do they want licensing nor the consequent punishment. The question is whether the traders who take loans, i.e., borrowers want their creditors to be registered or licensed. The answer is an emphatic 'No.' Is there a single trader in this province who wants that the facilities for credit which are available to him in the market, which are the mainstay of his business should be restricted in any way? If the number of money-lenders, the number of banks and the number of credit facilities which exist for him are restricted, then he will have to pay higher rate of interest for loans raised. If a provision is desired neither by the creditor nor by the debtor of a particular class, why extend it to them?

The real difficulty is this. The facilities for financing trade do not exist in this country and every trader has to depend for his petty credit on the credit which he enjoys at the hands of money-lenders. Therefore, at the time of consideration of the Regulation of Accounts Act this point was advanced and it was accepted. Why is the Government going back on its previous well considered decision? The Government may do anything it likes to protect the interests of agriculturists, but they should not create unnecessary difficulties for others, particularly the traders. If the object is to protect the legitimate interests of anybody, achieve it by all means, but kindly do not act as the pater familias for those who reject this offer, who understand their own interests just as well if not better than you and who assert that this clause is meant to annoy them and not really calculated to help them in any way. Dr. Narang's amendment is not that loans by traders may be excluded from the definition of loans but only that a loan to a trader should be excluded. The same reasons which applied to the exclusion of loans to traders from the definition of 'loan' in the Regulation of Accounts Act apply to the present Bill also with much greater force.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, I listened very carefully and attentively to the speeches made by my honourable friends, Sir Gokul Chand Narang and Mr. Puri. I must confess that I have not been able to find where the hardship comes in. My honourable friends want to protect a genuine trader. My honourable friend Mr. Puri wants to see that trade or business, genuine business, is not in any way restricted or hampered. I agree with them entirely. It is for that reason alone that we brought in that clause. My honourable friend Mr. Puri said that originally the definition in the Regulation of Accounts Act was as suggested by Dr. Narang. Very likely he took that definition from the Regulation of Accounts Act. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: This was tawarud): I am glad that the tawarud was from the Regulation of Accounts Act and not from some other Act. The real object why we have put in this clause in this Bill in a different form is this. You are aware and I believe every member in this House is aware that in the Punjab every petty shopkeeper — almost every petty shopkeeper to be more definite and exact — is also a money-lender. Now my friend says why should not another person lend money to that money-lender? I have not the slightest objection to somebody else lending money to that shop-keeper or money-lender. But I have an objection to a bigger money-lender lending money to that money-lender under the pretext that he is giving a loan to a trader. That is the reason why we have had this restricted definition in this Bill. My friend, Mr. Puri, is perfectly aware that we discussed this thing threadbare. As a matter of fact I was prepared to go to the extent of covering real genuine cases. As a matter of fact, originally I suggested a more restricted definition in accordance with trade requirements. You know perfectly well that credit in business circles and commercial circles is more or less governed by certain fixed rules. You have got drafts or notes of credit, bills of lading and things of that sort and a definite time is fixed with regard to the credit for each kind of those documents or negotiations. But my friend, Mr. Puri, pointed out that there may be other cases where for instance a commission agent is asked to buy goods on behalf of a trader in the Punjab at Karachi and he buys goods on his behalf. Later on he is asked by his client here or his principal buyer to sell a certain amount of goods and he sells a portion say  $\frac{2}{3}$  or  $\frac{1}{2}$  and he has still got another  $\frac{1}{3}$  of his goods on hand and he advances money to his client on the security of those goods. As a trader he must charge some interest and therefore he must include the interest in his books against his client and under this Bill he would be coming within the definition of the money-lender because he had lent money on interest. To meet that object I have put in this exception in the clause—a loan by a trader to a trader in accordance with trade usage. Similarly the next exception is also put in. I am afraid that my honourable friends have not given them their consideration from all these aspects. (Interruption). If a big money-lender is registered and lends to another money-lender, there is no trouble. But supposing A lends to B, C, D, and E throughout the province or in a district and he says 'these people are petty traders and I have lent the money to a trader' and this gentleman, Mr. A, who lends the money might be the biggest money-lender in the province and he might be spreading his money through them. Why should he not be registered? It is to stop this loophole and so that these petty shopkeepers may not try to evade the Act under the pretext that they are traders and not money-lenders and similarly so that that other gentleman who advanced money should not evade the Act through these petty people, that we have brought in that clause. My honourable friend will probably see that this amendment is not so innocent as he thinks. As a matter of fact this definition also is not so mischievous as he probably thought it was in the sense that it was likely to do any damage to trade and commerce. It is to prevent evasion of the Act that we have brought in this clause.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural): I only want to mention a point which I, think, has not been brought out up to this time. I understand one of the objects of the Bill is to extend protection to those traders or to that class of traders who are likely to be misled, deceived or exploited by the money-lenders. The object of the Bill is not to extend protection to those people who can take good care of themselves against the machinations of the money-lenders. That class is quite capable of protecting itself. That class is not going to be exploited by the money-lenders in any way. Therefore, this is an unnecessary restriction in the matter of advance of loans to traders by money-lenders. If there is the least apprehension of this class of people being exploited or being misled by the money-lenders then I can understand the Bill. But that fear does not exist. So I think the honourable Premier may be pleased to reconsider his position.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): I just wish to invite the attention of the honourable members to the fact that firstly even under the English Money-lenders Registration Act advances by money-lenders to traders are not exempt and secondly, under sub-clause (vi) of this clause, all loans advanced on the basis of negotiable instruments except on a promissory note, which include hundis, drafts, etc., by which trade negotiations are ordinarily carried on, are exempt.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I wish the Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal had replied to my motion. I would then have seen how he could oppose this motion of mine. I would not say that it is any kind of Lajja ka-bhau that is responsible for his absence from the House. He may have some business. All the same I am sorry.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. It has already been ruled that that expression is unparliamentary.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar: On a point of order. So far as my memory goes, you were pleased to hold that that expression was not unparliamentary.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I did not say that that was responsible for his absence. I said 'I would not say' that it is responsible.

Now coming to the speech of my honourable friend, Malik Barkat Ali, he thought that I was so incapable of understanding this clause that whereas it was a boon, I had taken it as a curse—a favour mistaken for a disfavour. He probably was not attentive to what I said. It is good so far as it goes, but it does not go far enough because it is hedged in by unnecessary and mischievous restrictions. If he had heard me, he would not have made the speech that he had made. Now, Sir, with respect to the Honourable Premier, I must say that with the best of effort, I was not able to follow what he really intended to say. His speech was so involved that I could not understand whether he meant that the smaller traders if they were free to receive advances from big money-lenders would themselves become money-lenders, because in one part of his speech he said 'in this province every small trader is also a money-lender.' If he sets up as a money-lender, catch him by the neck and ask him to get himself registered and do not allow him to carry on this business without obtaining a licence. But the question was not whether he should be allowed to set up as a money-lender or not, but whether he can receive credit from a money-lender to carry on his petty business. No ground whatsoever has been given why these restrictions should be laid upon him. Two restrictions, as I said, have been put and no justification for any of these has been given.

Malik Barkat Ali: Where is the prohibition?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Listen again if you did not listen before. The restriction lies in this that the loan that a trader should take should be from a trader to enjoy this exemption. Just see the provision, 'loan by a trader to a trader.' Then this loan should be in the ordinary course of business. Why should you make a poorer trader a victim of the larger trader? None of the three gentlemen who spoke on behalf of the Government has touched this point which really goes to the root of the matter. If you compel him to receive a loan from a larger trader, why allow him to be victimised by an unscrupulous larger trader who would not give credit unless he sells it at five or ten per cent. higher than the market rate? These gentlemen do not know the details of business and therefore they skip over the essential things in the question. Then the Honourable Premier said, 'there is nothing to prevent him from taking a loan from a registered money-lender.' When a registered money-lender gives a loan to a trader we do not want that these penalties should fall upon the money-lender because then the money-lender would be chary of even advancing to a trader. Let us say that there is a person who has money. He does not want to deal with agriculturists. He wants to deal only with traders. Why should he be compelled to register himself when his clients are traders and his debtors do not want any protection whatsoever? Mr. Mukand Lal Puri was perfectly right when he said that not a single trader has ever asked you for protection in this respect. All traders want facilities of credit and my honourable friend has been a director of some companies including the People's Bank, if not of some other banks also and he should know that petty traders cannot receive any facility of credit from banks. Banks do not advance small loans of fifty, sixty or two hundreds. They deal in thousands and petty traders cannot get anywhere near these incorporated banks or companies. Therefore, in order to receive credit they have to go to smaller people, private people and if you make it necessary for private people to take out licence and get themselves registered, even when they want to restrict their business only to traders, you do a great injustice to the persons who want to invest their money like this and to those traders who receive credit which they cannot get from anywhere else.

Now let us come to Mir Maqbool Mahmood's argument. My submission is that even if it were a fact that in England even those money-lenders who want to lend money to traders have got to register themselves, I would submit that the case in England is entirely different because in England there is no distinction between an agriculturist and a non-agriculturist and so on and who knows the petty traders might have asked for protection. Have the shop-keepers or petty traders or arkhis and others in the Punjab ever asked for such a protection? If they had asked, there would have been some justification in restricting their credit. Then again, Mir Maqbool Mahmood said, 'refer to clause 7, there loans advanced by means of negotiable instruments are exempted.' It seems that Mir Maqbool Mahmood had only in view towns like Amritsar or Lahore. We are visualising advances to a small trader in far lying districts where the purchase of a hundi is as difficult as the purchase of much more rare things. They have prohibited loans by means of promotes, because it is easier to execute promotes. They have exempted loans to be advanced by means of other negotiable instruments. Now, what are those other negotiable instruments? They are only bills of exchange and Aundis and I do not know if Mir Maqbool Mahmood knows it or not, though he ought to know it, he is a barrister and a resident of a big town, he ought to know that in order to execute a hundi a certain amount of stamp is to be got and there are hundi.

papers which are on sale; they have to be purchased. Now, where is the man to have these stamped kuzki papers from in a village like Ghugamitri in the tahsil of Wazirabad, district Gujranwala, even the name of which place you might not have heard and in villages like Dhekas, and Bulewala and such other small places lying in the outside districts like Mianwali, Shahpur, Dera Ghazi Khan and Gurgaon? Therefore the provision in clause (vi) does not remove the difficulty. I am really surprised that even such an amendment should not be accepted by the Government.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikandar Hyat-Khan): I am not surprised that my honourable friend did not understand me when I spoke last. I cannot claim to be an eloquent speaker; but I think I can claim this much that I can make myself clear. But the trouble is that if somebody does not wish to understand me, it is beyond my power to make him understand. I can only repeat Ghalib's verse—

یارب نہ وہ سمجھے ہیں نہ سمجھینگے مری بات

دے اور دل اُن کو جو نہ دے سمجھے کو زبان اور

(Hear, hear).

This is all I can say in answer to that harangue which he made. My friends Mr. Duni Chand and Dr. Gokul Chand Narang both tried to stress the point that we were going to exclude agriculturists. This Bill is not meant merely to protect agriculturists. We have said several times that this Bill is meant to protect only honest debtors and is meant to elbow out or weed out every dishonest creditor. This is what the object of this Bill is. It is not confined to agriculturists. It is confined to every class irrespective of caste, creed or profession and that must be quite clear and they must not try to confuse this issue any more. Now, my honourable friend asked, how is it that a money-lender would evade this law if he lent money through petty shop-keepers? I tried to explain before and I will try to do so again. I said that in the Punjab in every village there is one or more shop-keeper and it is also my information and if he knows his Punjab he should also know that these shop-keepers are also money-lenders. They start in a very small way. They set up a shop by putting in a rupee worth of goods and gradually, by dint of their labour, perseverance, and you might call it acumen and instinct, they expand and eventually become big money-lenders or sabukars. That is the genesis of the money-lenders' class in this province and I believe elsewhere also. What I want to avoid and stop is this, that a big money-lender—in Lahore, Amritsar, Rawalpindi or some other big town—should not lend money to these shop-keepers under the pretext that he is lending to trade. It is quite simple as two and two make four but my honourable friend would not admit that two and two make four. He would say that it is impossible to be understood. That is what we want to avoid. So far as genuine business is concerned, I have assured my honourable friends there and here as well that I would be the last person to restrict it. He referred to my connection with certain commercial concerns including the People's Bank. I have been a Director of the People's Bank and several other commercial concerns and I have burnt my fingers in several of those concerns, because, as my friend knows, even the best intentioned people sometimes have to suffer for the acts of commission or omission of others. For instance, in the Punjab Film Company I lost a little money, but I do not worry. I lost money in a sugar company but I do not worry about it at all. In the People's Bank case I have been dragged into several proceedings but I know perfectly well that it is for the acts and commissions of others that people have to suffer and if I have to suffer ; I am not worrying about it.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : I was not referring to that.

Premier : So far as I am concerned, whatever interest I have had with any business, my conscience is clear before man and God and as a businessman I have got.....

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : On a point of order. The Honourable Premier has sought to create an entirely different impression. What I said was that being a banker he ought to know that small traders are not given credit by banks and he went off at a tangent as if he were on his defence.

Premier : I am not on my defence and I never will be. My honourable friend knows it perfectly well. I have told my honourable friend that, as a businessman, I know something about business in spite of the fact that my honourable friend may not give me credit for that. I can assure him that I will be the last person to do any damage to legitimate business or commercial interests and it is for this reason that we have brought in several exceptions to avoid any harm being done to commercial interests or to real trade. But my honourable friend in spite of this has made a long and vitriolic speech. Naturally when a man is thwarted he gets bitter and I am afraid my friend is getting bitter.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : As you are now.

Premier : But that does not matter at all. Yesterday he made a speech and then went away. His speech was wholly irrelevant and not based on facts.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : I repudiate that.

Premier : If I cannot explain to him, I hope I will be able to make it clear to my other colleagues that what I want to avoid is this, evasion of the Act by these big money-lenders on the pretext that they are lending money to a trader.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : On a point of personal explanation. The Honourable Premier intended obviously to cast an aspersion on me that after having made what he considers to be an irrelevant speech, I went away as if I did not like to hear him. I told him before I left that I had an important function to attend so that he might not misunderstand me and knowing that I had told him so he has sought to cast this aspersion on me. I am never afraid of hearing him because I know that he can never meet an argument. He only delivers a harangue.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (3) (vi) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (3) (vii) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Sardar Lal Singh (Ludhiana Central, Sikh, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move that—

At the end of sub-clause (3), the following paragraph be added :—

A transaction which is in effect a mortgage of agricultural land provided the mortgagor has after the transaction three-fourth of his whole estate left free from all encumbrances.

My reasons for presenting this amendment are these. As soon as this Bill becomes an enactment, there is going to be a rush for money and money-lenders and creditors will be rushing to the courts for liquidating all their demands. I would submit that the burden of this demand will fall upon the petty landholder who will be at a loss to find wherewithal to pay his dues. That is one thing.

Then, Sir, this is quite in consonance with the Regulation of Accounts Act. In the definition of the word "loan" in the Regulation of Accounts Act, a transaction which is in effect a mortgage, is exempted from that definition, and transactions like those do not fall within the purview of money-lending, because money-lending lends itself to all sorts of malpractices, whereas lending of money on security of immoveable property which carries small interest is free from such malpractices. Then, again, Sir, it looks like capturing the trade, which is going out of one hand into some other hand. Then why not the agriculturist? The result of this registration would be that there would be no credit and no money in the market.

Mr. Speaker : Will the honourable member please explain what he means?

Sardar Lal Singh : I mean that a transaction which is in effect a mortgage, provided the mortgagor has three-fourths of his property, should be excluded from the definition of the word "loan."

Mr. Speaker : If I understand him aright, what the honourable member means is that a debt advanced by a money-lender on agricultural land, shall not be a loan if the mortgagor is left, after the transaction, with three-fourth of his whole estate, free from all encumbrances. But that is not expressed by the amendment as worded. The honourable member may use the word 'loan' instead of the word 'transaction.'

Sardar Lal Singh : I have taken these words from the Regulation of Accounts Act. I was going to say that there will be a great demand for money, besides, the small agriculturist is always in chronic need of money, and when this Act comes into force, capital will become shy and there will be dearth of credit in the market. The result will be that the very aim of the Government will be defeated. The Government wants to protect the agriculturists, specially the petty agriculturists. The result of all this will be that the petty agriculturist will be thrown back into the hands of the same money-lender who is not an agriculturist and he will have to pay a higher rate of interest. Therefore, I am asking the Government to accept, if not the whole, a portion of my amendment, that is, "A transaction which is in effect a mortgage of agricultural land" should be exempted from the definition of the word "loan," so that they can get loans when they want and they can tide over the difficult times.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is that—

At the end of sub-clause (8) the following be added :—

A transaction which is in effect a mortgage of agricultural land provided the mortgagor has after the transaction three-fourth of his whole estate left free from all encumbrances.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban): Sir As I have got a similar amendment standing in my name, I would, with your permission, like to discuss it now. The question is with regard to the definition of the word 'loan.' You will kindly see that 7 exceptions are already given to this definition. I submit that if with a small amount of money, a tiller of soil wants to enter into a mortgage transaction and thus to make use of his money, that transaction should not be covered by the definition of the word 'loan.'

The definition of the word 'loan' is any advance "whether secured." and I submit that an exception be added. The word 'loan' should not cover such mortgage transaction. I want that some convenience should be provided for the tiller of the soil for investing his small sums of money earned and saved from agriculture. He might save small sums of money from agriculture and he may like to invest them in mortgages. He should not be denied but encouraged to do so without his being a money-lender.

That at the end of sub-clause (8) the following be added :—

A transaction which is in effect a mortgage of agricultural land provided the mortgagor has after the transaction three-fourth of his whole estate left free from all encumbrances.

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal : I beg to move—

That at the end of sub-clause (8), the following new paragraph be added—

Money invested by a tiller of soil in a petty mortgage transaction concerning agricultural land.

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal : I beg to move—

That at the end of sub-clause (8), the following new paragraph be added—

A loan advanced before the commencement of the Act but not renewed.

My submission is that this Act has got retrospective effect. It will cover those loans that were advanced before the commencement of this Act. My contention is that loans advanced before the commencement of this measure should not be brought within its purview. I may point out that according to my amendment loans advanced before the commencement of this measure but which are renewed after its commencement may be brought within the ambit of this measure. But, if they are not so renewed, then this provision should not cover such transactions.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That at the end of sub-clause (8), the following new paragraph be added—

A loan advanced before the commencement of the Act but not renewed.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General Rural): This amendment wishes to prevent wholesale retrospective effect which the present measure proposes to give. If this amendment is accepted it would enable those persons who do not wish to carry on the business of money-lending any longer to retire, if I may say so, with honour. One effect of the present legislation, whatever else it might do, will certainly be to reduce the number of persons who would carry on this profession because the penalties and the disabilities which this measure imposes would certainly induce many money-lenders to give up this profession and to take to another. This amendment, if accepted, will not in any way interfere with the main purpose of the legislation. The money-lenders who wish to carry on their business in future will have to get themselves registered and will have to get a licence and will be liable for any breach of conditions of the licence. The persons to whom this amendment is specifically restricted are those who do not advance any loans to new or even old customers after the commencement of this Act. This amendment is really intended to exclude those persons from the necessity of registration who wish to close their business definitely.

It appears that appetite grows by what it feeds on. The Honourable Sir Chhotu Ram when he brought forward a Bill which subsequently became the Debtors Protection Act, did not provide for its retrospective effect. I place before you the actual section in the Act. It runs as follows:—

No claim for the recovery of debt advanced after the date on which the provisions of this Act in regard to the licensing of money lenders came into force shall be entertained by any court.

Thus that Act was definitely restricted to loans advanced after it came into force. Yet, in this Bill no provision is made to exempt transactions prior to its coming into force. This amendment, if accepted, will only reproduce the provision which has been made by the Honourable Sir Chhotu Ram in his Bill of 1935. I, therefore, commend it for the consideration of the House.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): This very suggestion was made by Lala Sita Ram in his opening speech on this Bill and it was my privilege at that time to point out that it was not acceptable, for, if that suggestion was to be accepted we might as well not proceed with the Bill at all. You are aware that the present debt is approximately 135 crores in the province. If this is excluded from the purview of this Bill, I do not see any reason why the valuable time of this House and public money should be wasted in discussing a measure which would be only of academic interest. If all the past transactions are to be excluded, we might as well put a lighted match to this Bill and go home. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: A very good thing.) My honourable friend Mr. Puri, tried to argue that because another Bill sponsored by my friend, Sir Chhotu Ram, did not contain a provision for retrospective effect, therefore, we should amend this Bill also in the same way. We have discussed the question of giving retrospective effect to certain of the provisions of this Bill both in the select committee and outside in the lobbies and I have already given an assurance to my friends that wherever it is possible to meet them I have already met them either in the select committee or by giving notice of amendments which should cover practically any irregularities or any offence against this Act or other Acts prior to the commencement of this Act. I am prepared to go thus far and no farther. If Sir Chhotu Ram's Act did not contain a sufficiently strong provision in this respect, I can only say that it was a matter of compromise with all the disadvantages and disabilities attached to all compromises in whatever sphere they may be, and I believe that Act also was a compromise in the old Legislative Council, because he had to carry with him the various sections of the House and naturally with a view to avoid resistance and even the risk of his Bill being shelved or thrown out, he had to accept certain compromise which he would not have accepted if he had been his own master at that time. So, I do not think that that argument holds water and therefore I hope that the House will not accept this amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Question is—

That the following paragraph be added at the end of sub-clause (8) :—

A loan advanced before the commencement of the Act, but not renewed.

The motion was lost.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): Sir, I move—

That at the end of sub-clause (8) the following be added :—

(omit) A loan by persons bona fide carrying on any business not having for its primary object the lending of money in the course of which and for the purposes whereof they lend money.

This exception you will be pleased to observe is taken from the English Money-lenders Act and for reference I may quote Volume XXI of Halsbury's Laws of England, page 45, paragraph 84. As I have submitted, this is not an amendment which in any way defeats the main purpose of the Bill, because it is not intended to affect any transaction between the agriculturists and the money-lenders, nor does it in any way affect the main principle of licensing and registering of money-lenders who live even in urban areas. This is really intended to protect, as you would find, the trader and if it is a necessary provision in the English Money-lenders Act, I think you would agree that the same amount of protection might be afforded in this country also. A milkman, for instance, or a halwai, who has to get milk from persons who own cows or buffaloes or goats, has, in the course of his business, to advance money to those people. A butcher who wants to see that the supply of meat is made to him at regular intervals has to make advances to certain persons who supply animals to him at regular periods. Numerous other trades could be enumerated where in the course of the business it is necessary that advances should be made by that person to his constituents. Of course if he lends money to other than his actual constituents, it would be money-lending and he will have to register. Therefore, what I am suggesting is an exemption in the interests of bona fide traders. Do you expect a butcher or a halwai who is ex-hypothesi to make such advances and who cannot carry on his business without such advances to take a licence for lending the money? Should he necessarily be compelled to register? As I have submitted, what I am anxious for is not to protect in any way dishonest money-lenders, or even any money-lender. What I am really anxious for is that unnecessary and irksome restrictions should not be created which would prevent the small and petty trader, who already ekes out only a miserable existence, from having a profitable occupation for himself on which he feeds himself and his family. If you do not create exceptions of this kind, no butcher would be able to advance money, no milk-man would be able to advance money, no hosier who is carrying on hosiery factory, say at Ludhiana, would be able to advance money or material for manufacture of socks to men working in villages without registration and licensing. No seller of sewing machines or other articles, on credit and on instalment system where interest is charged on unpaid instalments, would be able to carry on his business without registration. Therefore in the interest of the small and petty traders and in the interest of trade I request that this exception be incorporated along with other exceptions which Government has itself incorporated. Further, no reason has been given for departing from the English statute, which embodies the ripe experience and expert knowledge of the mother of Parliaments. If you do not even accept such amendments, your object does not seem to be the regulation of money-lending but, to create difficulties for the legitimate business of a class whom some members of the Government are fond of denouncing in season and out of season.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

At the end of sub-clause (6), the following be added :—

(viii) A loan by persons bona fide carrying on any business not having for its primary object the lending of money in the course of which and for the purpose whereof they lend money.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : We have already discussed this question of providing facilities to businessmen thread-bare while discussing several other amendments, but my honourable friend has again repeated that argument that agriculturists will not be affected

[Premier.]

I have told him and my honourable friends several times that this Bill has nothing to do with agriculturists and non-agriculturists. It is a measure which is applicable universally to every one concerned. He has referred to the English Money-lenders Act. You will see that the English Money-lenders Act contains that clause, but it does not contain the exceptions which we have already provided in this very clause of the Bill. We have excluded loans by a trader to a trader, negotiable instruments, loans advanced on the basis of negotiable instruments as defined in the Negotiable Instruments Act, loans according to trade usages, and so on and so forth. We have made all these exceptions. He has given the instance of a butcher. He says, what would happen if a butcher gives an advance to an Ode who provides goats to him? I personally am not sure whether they will come within the purview of this Act, but if they do, it is not clear to me why they should not take out a licence if they want to do their business. But I am almost certain that these cases will not be affected by this Bill. They would be at perfect liberty to lend money, because they are not carrying on the business of money-lending. My honourable friends will say, how would you decide whether they are carrying on the business of money-lending or not? There would be test cases in the courts and perhaps several of them and the courts will have to decide whether they are instances of loans as defined in this Act and if it is in substance a loan it will come within the purview of the Act. If the courts decide that this is in substance not a loan covered by this Act, then they will be able to do so. As a matter of fact I myself pointed out in the select committee that we do not want to bring within the purview of this Act men for instance like my tailor. I go to my tailor and I say that I want a suitable cloth to be made into a garment for me. The tailor makes the suit and sends it to me and sends a bill and I pay it after a month or two months or even six months, and if he advances money to me on credit, do you want to penalize or in any way pillory the tailor? No, certainly not. I have satisfied that it will not be covered by any of the provisions of this Act and the tailor will be immune from this Act.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : But if he charges interest?

Premier : Then it is possible that he might be affected provided he carries on the business of money-lending.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : He might have so many customers.

Premier : It must come under the definition of loan as defined here and he must be carrying on the business of money-lending and not of a shop-keeper. If therefore there are any such cases, our courts are there and my honourable friend knows that they will have to be adjudicated upon and I am almost certain that their decision would be, as I have told you, that these people will not be in any way embarrassed under this Bill. I beg to oppose the amendment.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : I submit that the amendment moved by Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri has a bearing on clause 9. I submit that in the absence of precise definition of 'carrying on business of advancing loans,' the case of persons who carry on their business on credit is very risky. It leaves everybody at the mercy of the court. A milk-man supplies milk to many persons. He does not take money in cash every day. At the end of the month, he takes money from his customers with interest. Is that milk-seller a money-lender? Is this the meaning of 'carrying on business of advancing loans'? Similar is the case of brick-sellers. There may be vegetable sellers and others also, even motor-car sellers 'carrying on the business of advancing loans.' Loans have been defined as advances of money which carry interest with a few exceptions. There are persons who are in the habit of selling their goods to their customers on credit, they may be vegetable-sellers or milk-men, and who do not realise their money every day. They realize the money at the end of the month; what will be their position? Will they be called money-lenders 'carrying on the business of advancing loans' or will they be exempted? 'Carrying on the business of advancing loans' is I submit a very ambiguous term. If they 'carry on the business of advancing loans as a profession,' then they may be called money-lenders, but when they only sell their goods on credit and are placed in such a position that they are creditors of purchasers they should not be considered as money-lenders or persons who "carry on the business of advancing loans." If you will kindly see the English Money-lenders Act you will find that the language there is 'bona fide carrying on any business not having for its primary object the lending of money.' These words 'not having for its primary object the lending of money' saves the person from the definition of money-lender as given in that Act. Though the definition of the word money-lender as given in the English Money-lenders Act is so exhaustive that it leaves no loop-hole, yet the commentators and rules say that the question who is a money-lender is a question of fact and is not a question of law. I submit that in the Punjab where many difficulties are bound to arise, only such persons should be considered as money-lenders who carry on the business of money-lending as a profession. I want that there should

S.P.M.                                    be an addition of the words "as a profession" so that it may be clear to everybody that a person whose profession is to lend money and to advance loans is a money-lender and not any other person. With these words I support the amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) (Punjab): Sir, as I have already stated on more than one occasion that the amendment moved is very important. I think many of the honourable members will agree with me that it is very difficult to define exactly the word sahukar and I will not be exaggerating if I say that to define this word is as difficult as it is difficult to hold wind or water in a net. Therefore every effort should be made to define this word in a manner that no room is left for doubt in its application. If it had been possible to define this word as we can define a right angle, a triangle, a square or a circle, then the case would have been different and there would have been no difficulty in coming to a settlement about this point. But, as it is, the question defies all attempts at its solution. I am aware that the Honourable Premier was pleased to say that the matter was very simple and that the speech that he made was as easy to follow as it is easy to understand that two and two make four. But I wonder why we, who have all our lives been dealing with very intricate problems of mathematics, should have taken that two and two make five or three. But this is only by the way. What I want to impress on the House is that it being very difficult to exactly define the word 'money-lender' it is very necessary that some qualifying words should be added in this clause in order to make the matter as clear as possible. It has been said that the definition of this word should be left to the courts which after two or three such cases coming up before them will be able to come to a definite conclusion about this matter. It is really a very funny argument. Does the Honourable Premier mean thereby that some of the traders and money-lenders should meet at a place and decide among themselves which of the two or three cases should be taken to a court to obtain a pronouncement as to the definition of money-lender? Does he think that any one of them will be prepared to take the risk and if any of them does agree to take that risk, who will compensate him for the loss that he must suffer? That person who becomes the target of the experiment will certainly be ruined and for no fault of his but because the legislators here in a very light mood left the thing vague to be decided by the courts. I am here reminded of a nurse who asked one of her neighbours how to judge, when giving bath to a child, whether the water was too cold or too hot. The reply given by that neighbour was as funny as this argument advanced by the sponsors of this Bill. She said to the nurse "if on lowering the child in the tub of water you find that the child has turned all blue, you should understand that the water is as cold as ice but if the body of the child becomes red take it that the water is hot." This is exactly the reply given by the Government benches to our objections to this matter. I really fail to understand why this decision should be left to the courts. Why is it that we, while sitting here, should not try to remove all defects in the Bill? Why should we behave like that foolish person who says, "let me have this building constructed and taken up to the second and third story even if the foundation is very weak; I shall make the foundation strong and fill it with lime and concrete only after I see that the building so constructed has fallen or is about to fall."?

This word money-lender and its definition, I need not remind the Government and the House, is the rock foundation of the whole structure of this Bill and it will certainly be very dangerous to leave it to the courts of sub-judges, particularly in the mufassil where men like Rai Bahadur Mukand Lal and Malik Barkat Ali will not be available to argue such cases and to put before such courts all the material to enable them to come to a correct decision on the point. Need I also say that judgment given by a sub-judge at Gurgaon is not binding on the sub-judge at Dera Ghazi Khan and in fact any other sub-judge unless of course the matter is brought to the High Court in appeal and the High Court confirms that judgment? It is, therefore, very likely that different sub-judges will interpret the word 'money-lender' differently to the detriment of the sahukars concerned. Under the circumstances it is only fair that we should all join to make this point clear here and leave no room for doubt in it. I wonder why my friend Mir Maqbool Mahmood does not now get up and say that this point certainly requires clarification when on another amendment moved by me he waxed so eloquent and pressed that the matter must be made clear now and at once although that matter was not so important as the one under discussion. I fail to see what harm will come to the Bill and which of its principles will be adversely affected if the amendment moved is accepted and if the words 'as a profession' are added to the definition of the word 'money-lender.' I would like the Government to explain where the defect lies in the amendment that has been moved and that is now under consideration.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) (Urdu): Sir, it appears that my honourable friends Dr. Narang and others who have moved and supported this amendment are labouring under some misunderstanding with regard to the definition of the word 'money-lender.' I think it will be admitted that it is for the first time in the Punjab that it is being urged that the words 'as a profession' be added in the definition of money-lender. I know as well as other honourable members of the House know that no such necessity arose when in 1930 the Regulation of Accounts Bill was passed and when on another occasion in 1935 the Debtors Relief Bill was enacted and we had to define the creditor or the money-lender. These Acts have worked quite well just as the English Registration of Money-Lenders Act has worked during the last 38 years without the addition of the proposed words in the definition of the word 'money-lender.' And as has already been said the operative portion of this definition has been taken word for word from that English Act which was passed in 1900 and which, as I have said already, has been working quite satisfactorily. Perhaps it would have been possible for the Government to agree to the addition of the words proposed in the definition if the conditions here in the Punjab had not been what they are. Luckily or unluckily there are very few persons in this province who exclusively do money-lending and the number of such money-lenders is very large. In fact most of the money-lenders do this business in addition to so many other things. Besides lending money they are shopkeepers, they deal in cloth and buy and sell goats and sheep and carry on various other subsidiary professions. In the circumstances it will amount to striking at the root of the Bill if the amendment proposed were accepted.

Sir, now I would draw the attention of my honourable friends, through you, to a sentence in Halsbury's Laws of England. Here we find in the commentary on the words "carrying on business" the same words which are to be found in the Bill which is now under our consideration. It states that the word 'money-lenders' shall apply only to those persons whose business of money-lending has a system or continuity. The factor of continuity alone guides the law courts in the matter of determining whether a particular lender is a money-lender for the purpose of the law. Munshi Hari Lal has said that the English Law on the subject makes an exemption in the case of all traders. It is not so. There the exemption has been made only in a restricted number of cases, and that too under special circumstances. We, in our legislation, have made a better, a more liberal provision for the trading classes. In the English law the continuity of transactions is the determining factor. The words "as a profession" do not occur there and if we have put in the word "profession", the courts will have to decide whether a person is lending money by way of profession or not. This is bound to lead to a lot of misunderstanding and confusion.

That at the end of sub-clause (8) the following be added :—

(iii) A loan by persons bona fide carrying on any business not having for its primary object the lending of money in the course of which and for the purposes whereof they lend money.

The motion was lost.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker left the Chair and it was occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker.)

Munshi Hari Lal : Sir, I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (9), line 3, between the words "business" and "of" the words "as a profession" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Raj Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (9), line 4, between the words "Act" and "and" the words "in the Punjab" be inserted.

If you turn to the clause it would read as follows :—

Money-lender means a person, including a firm who carries on the business of advancing loans as defined in this Act in the Punjab....

The idea of the Act is to insist on registration and licensing of money-lenders who carry on the business in this province and not elsewhere.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The question is—

That in sub-clause (9), line 4, between the words "Act" and "and" the words "in the Punjab" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal (South Western Towns General, Urban) : I beg to move.—

That in proviso (a) of sub-clause (9), line 4, the word "licensed" be omitted.

The proviso will then read as follows :—

Provided that nothing in this definition shall apply to—

(a) a person who is the legal representative or successor-in-interest by inheritance of the estate of a deceased money-lender together with all his right and liabilities.....

Now, sir, I want that the word 'licensed' be deleted here. Its retention should not be insisted upon. There appears to be a misapprehension. The principle appears to have been acknowledged and admitted. If a money-lender dies, and his legal representative and successor-in-interest does not want to carry on the business of money-lending, he should not be obliged to be registered and licensed. Supposing a money-lender dies, his son is in public service and does not want to carry on the business of money lending and wants to wind up, why should he get himself registered and licensed? The principle appears to have been admitted in the select committee but restrictions have been laid down and it is only the licensee's legal representative who is exempted. The licensed money-lender will come into existence after this Act. What will be the fate of the legal representative of the money-lender who dies unlicensed before the commencement of the Act or after? Supposing before the commencement of this Act, a money-lender, whose profession or business was lending money, has died and his son is in public service and he does not want to carry on this business,

Would he be exempted from registration and licence or not, though he may be fulfilling all the conditions—he only winds up the estate of his father or of his predecessor-in-interest, realises outstanding loans and does not renew any existing loan nor advances any fresh loan? Supposing, there is a money-lender who dies before the commencement of this Act and his successor-in-interest or his legal representative wants to close the business of money-lending for one reason or another, should that person apply to the Collector for being registered and licensed in order to recover the loans of his predecessor-in-interest, that is, of his father? When they are exempting the legal representative of a deceased licensed money-lender why should not they, on the same principle and on the same lines, exempt the legal representative of an unlicensed and unregistered money-lender, who dies before the commencement of this Act or after and whose successors-in-interest or the legal representatives are not at all carrying on any business of money-lending? They are only 'winding up the estate of their predecessors-in-interest and they are only realising outstanding loans'. The principle is clear from this proviso but it is only limited to the legal representative of a deceased licensed money-lender. I submit that if the word 'licensed' is deleted, then the legal representative of a money-lender, who does not want to carry on the business of his predecessor-in-interest in any respect will be exempted and will enjoy the benefits of the exemption.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is that—

In proviso (a) of sub-clause (9), line 4, the word "licensed" be omitted.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : Sir, I am afraid, here again, my honourable friend opposite has been working under some misunderstanding. He will find that the Act is intended to deal with the case of a person who was a money-lender and who having failed to get himself licensed dies; in other words, it deals with a money-lender, who should have been licensed when the Act has come into operation, but does not get himself licensed and dies. Can he, by the accident of his death, pass a better title to his successors than he would himself have enjoyed? It seems to me that if the word "licensed" be deleted a person who is an unlicensed money-lender and dies, will pass a better title to the persons succeeding him than he could have enjoyed if he had been alive.

As regards the second point, I think, my honourable friend might have been absent when the Honourable Leader of the House made a statement that he proposed to accept the amendment that only those omissions on the part of money-lenders will be penalised under this Bill, which take place after this Act comes into operation. That being the position, no legal representative of a money-lender who may have died, before the commencement of this Act, would in any way suffer. But if the Honourable Member opposite has something else in view let him make out a case. We have an open mind.

Munshi Hari Lal : Sir, I have not been able to follow the argument of my learned friend opposite when he said that we ought to depend upon the statement that has been made by the Honourable Premier. This is a settled rule of interpretation in courts that the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly are not at all looked into for construing the law. I would be, I think, within my rights if I say that our statements and proceedings are thrown into the waste-paper basket by the courts. They have to look to the wording of the Act and nothing else. Therefore, I would ask the Government to think twice before they hand over this Bill to the outside world. We should be consistent with our principle. What does it mean? A person, who is the legal representative or successor-in-interest by inheritance of the estate of a deceased licensed money-lender, is not to be licensed; then why should the legal representative of any unlicensed and unregistered money-lender, who has died before the commencement of this Act or after, get himself registered and licensed? I have given a concrete instance for the satisfaction of the House.

[Munshi Hari Lal]

Now, as to the statement made by the Honourable Premier, I would submit, that it may be respected and it may have some effect in the Assembly and I bow down to that statement in this House, but outside the walls of this Assembly Chamber, I think, the statement made by the Honourable Premier, has got absolutely no value. This is what the law unfortunately says. It is an irony of law. It has been so laid down by the Privy Council and it is followed by every court. It is not my construction. It is the construction of the law as laid down by the Privy Council.

I would again submit that when you recognise the legal representative of a licensed money-lender, who does 'not carry on the business of his father' and when he is exempted from being registered or licensed, why should not the legal representative of an unlicensed money-lender, who dies before the commencement of this Act, be exempted when the question of licensing does not even arise? The question of licensing arises after the commencement of the Act and a money-lender does not get himself licensed. My honourable friend may be in order to say that the money-lender evaded the provisions of the law and committed a sin and therefore, his legal representative also should sink in the same sin. If before the commencement of this Act any money lender dies should his legal representative, after the commencement of this Act, be considered as a 'money-lender' within the definition of this Act or not? Should he be required to produce a licence or not in suits lodged after the inauguration of the Act? The amendment which I have proposed is the most innocent amendment and it is quite consistent with the principle which they have laid down in this law.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, I have great sympathy with my honourable friend opposite. He has taken a case which may never happen. I am afraid that he did not follow or understand what my honourable friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, said. He did not mean that you should go on my words. It is not going to help you in a law court later on if there is any suit or case with regard to any transaction under this Bill. What Mir Maqbool Mahmood meant was that we are moving an amendment with a view to avoid any retrospective effect and disability to the money-lender. Therefore, my honourable friend's amendment would be out of order and I think that it would serve no useful purpose and that it would be only of academic interest. It is probably intended to affect the successor of a money-lender if he dies now or to-morrow, because irregularities, which would be responsible for such restriction will only come into operation, if he commits them, after the commencement of this Act. Since the money-lender would be dead before the Act comes into force, naturally he would not be liable to any disability. That was what he meant. However, I do not think that my honourable friend's misgivings are well-founded, because I quite agree with him that it would be a good thing if we could make an exception with regard to that particular money-lender, but it would not help him or his successors. It would certainly improve the language, but it would be difficult to dovetail it without leaving a loophole for licensed money-lenders. In view of the fact that we are moving amendments to clauses 6 and 9, I do not think it is necessary for me to elaborate the point any more.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Will the Honourable Premier please make one point clear? Suppose a man is carrying on money-lending business to-day, but he does not want to carry on that business after the commencement of this Act. Shall he be entitled to file suits for his past transactions without obtaining a licence?

Premier : He will certainly require a licence.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Therefore, under this section, if that person dies his successor cannot be exempted from this clause even though he does not want to carry on the business after the commencement of this Act.

Premier : But where is the hardship? He may get a licence for filing suits for recovery of past loans, but he need not renew the licence after he has closed his business.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I am sorry I have not been understood. I shall put my difficulty in this way. Suppose A who has been doing money-lending business dies before the commencement of this Act and his son wants to recover the loans advanced by his father. Also suppose that the son happens to be a Government servant and as such cannot take to any other trade. How can he recover the money advanced by his father, unless he is exempted from the operation of this clause?

Premier : May I suggest that this amendment may be left for vote at a later stage, because I want to further consider the point raised by my honourable friend.

(The further consideration of the amendment was accordingly postponed.)

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I beg to move—

That proviso (a) (ii) of sub-clause (9) be deleted.

Proviso (a) (ii) relates to realisation of outstanding loans. I think it is absolutely unnecessary and redundant and may create complications. The exemption is granted to a person who is the—

Legal representative or successor-in-interest by inheritance of the estate of a deceased licensed money-lender together with all his rights and liabilities provided that each person only—

(i) Winding up the estate of such money-lender and (ii) realises outstanding loans.

Supposing he does not realise outstanding loans. These words can at best mean 'attempts to realise loans'. What else can they mean? Looked at from every point of view, the whole thing seems superfluous and redundant and I think that this proviso may be omitted. It simply looks ridiculous to have a redundant clause in a statute.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The question is—
That proviso (a) (ii) of sub-clause (9) be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal : (South Western Towns, General, Urban) I move the following amendment :—

That in clause 2 (9) (a) (iii) between the words "loan" and "nor" add the following—

Except those loans the limitation of which expires within three months of the death of the money-lender and renews them without interest.

I will explain my amendment. Supposing a man dies to-day. His son steps in and inherits the property. There are loans to which he cannot attend all at once and they may be loans which may get time-barred on the following day. He cannot go into the court and sue the debtors for the recovery of those loans. But it is just possible that he may secure an acknowledgment from the debtors with regard to those loans. I want to give time to him to wind up his estate, to wind up his business and to get into touch with the debtors and I give him only three months. If the limitation of any loan expires within three months, instead of his going into the court and suing for the recovery of those loans, he may be empowered to get them renewed or to get them acknowledged from the debtors but without interest. Only I want to give him time so that if any loan expires within the period of three months after the death of his predecessor-in-interest, he may have the power to get them renewed, as immediately after the death of his father or predecessor-in-interest he may have to attend to the funeral ceremonies and cannot at once go to the court to sue for the recovery of the loan. According to the clause as it stands he cannot renew any loan. But I want to put him in a position to renew those loans the limitation of which expires within three months of the death of the money-lender.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is :—

That in clause 2 (9) (a) (iii) between the words "loan" and "nor" add the following :—

Except those loans the limitation of which expires within three months of the death of the money-lender and renews them without interest.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : I am afraid I have not been able quite to catch the point of my honourable friend opposite. What he said was that if the money-lender dies, his son is to look after his funeral ceremonies and therefore the period of limitation might expire. It is necessary therefore that we should give him a little latitude for about three months provided he gets this loan renewed without interest. I believe there are money-lenders now and they do die and if they die even now, what do their sons do ?

Diwan Bahadar Raja Narendra Nath : More will die hereafter.

Premier : Money-lenders are also human beings and what do their sons do when they die under the present conditions ?

Munshi Hari Lal : They can get their loans renewed.

Premier : If he puts down that he must renew within three months he is encouraging people not to renew. If the money-lender has got to get a licence within three months and the debtor says I am not prepared to renew this loan you have got to go to the court of law. This is the position. Why do you want to encourage him not to renew? If he knows that he does not renew and very likely he would refuse to renew, then you only force him to get easier terms from him. I am afraid that I cannot possibly accept this amendment.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Lahore, General, Urban) : I want to explain this thing. We are making exceptions to the rule. There is a rule that such and such legal heir of a licensed deceased money-lender shall be exempted from taking a licence and shall be entitled to sue in a court of law provided that he winds up his business and he realises only the outstanding loans and does not renew any existing loan nor does he advance any fresh loan. On the death of his father money-lender, the man must be engaged in ceremonies which are necessary after the death of the father or the relation from whom he inherits these loans. He does not want to carry on this business any further, but when he approaches the debtor, he says, please give me some more time. In this case he will be bound to go to the court of law. Now if he renews it he becomes a money-lender, because that is a loan and it comes under the definition of a loan and he cannot be exempted because he renewed that loan. We say that if there is a loan the limitation of which shall expire within three months of the death of the father money-lender and if the son approaches the debtor and says, if you cannot pay I do not want to go to the court and I want to settle it outside the court, you simply renew the loan, then it should not be necessary for him to take out a licence. Particularly when he says that it will not carry any interest it should not be considered a loan, for it is only a renewal of the existing loan. Therefore we want exemption of this particular kind of transaction.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : His only remedy is to file a suit immediately.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Question is—

That in clause 2 (9) (a) (iii) between the words "loan" and "nor" add the following:—

Except those loans the limitation of which expires within three months of the death of the money-lender and renews them without interest.

The motion was lost.

Premier : Sir, I am prepared to accept the previous amendment of Munshi Hari Lal to delete the word "licensed" in part (a) of the proviso.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Question is—

That in proviso (a) of sub-clause (9), line 4, the word "licensed" be omitted.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (9) (b), line 2, between the words "loan" and "to" the words "or decree" be inserted.

Exemption has already been granted in the case of a bona fide assignment by a money-lender of a single loan. If you will be pleased to look to the definition of a money-lender, it includes a legal representative and successor-in interest whether by inheritance, assignment or otherwise of the person who advanced the loan. In the case of assignment there is an exception made in sub-clause (b) in favour of a bona fide assignment by a money-lender of a single loan. I submit if a money-lender assigns a single decree to a person, the assignee should also enjoy the same privilege as in the case of a single loan. In the case of assignment of a single loan by a money-lender, the assignee is not a money-lender and he can however recover that loan without getting himself registered and without obtaining a certificate. Similarly in the case of assignment of a decree by a money-lender to a person, the assignee should also be exempt from obtaining a certificate. As it is, in the case of the execution of his decree, a person has to get himself registered and secure a licence before he can go into the court of law, I submit that in the case of assignment of a single decree by a money-lender the assignee should not be obliged to get a registration certificate and a licence. It is, for this reason, that I submit that in the case of a bona fide assignment

[Munshi Hari Lal.]

6 P. M. by a money-lender of single loan or a decree to a person other than a person (including his husband or wife as the case may be) the assignee should be exempted in the case of assignment of a decree.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved —

That in sub-clause (b) (b), line 2, between the words "loan" and "to" the words "or decree" be inserted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): The Premier would recollect that we brought it to his notice in the select committee that it should be possible for a money-lender to dispose of his assets or at any rate a portion of his assets to the other person in order to meet his own pressing liabilities. After all a money-lender stands as much in need of money on occasions as any other person as he may have to pay the money to his own creditors or may require it for the purpose of his business. He may not have ready cash but may have large assets. His assets consist of the loans which he has advanced to other persons whether those loans exist in the form of pro-notes and hundis or whether they have been adjudicated upon by courts and have been transformed into a decree. It was contended by some members of the select committee that supposing a money-lender has committed some undesirable practices and in order to get out of the consequences of those undesirable practices he transfers all his assets to a third person, such a thing should not be permitted. Therefore, the select committee unanimously accepted that it should not be possible for a money-lender to transfer all his assets, but he may transfer a single loan transaction to anybody else that he likes and the person who in good faith purchases that loan, should not be required to get a licence or he should not be required to be registered as a money-lender. You would observe, the words there are—

A bona fide assignment by a money-lender of a single loan to a person other than—

A "single loan" includes either a loan due on a pro-note or a loan which has been adjudicated upon by a court and has been found to be due. Therefore, this word would ordinarily include a decree but Munshi Hari Lal, with a view to place things beyond all doubt, has put forward an amendment so that the intention of the select committee may be carried out. I would respectfully ask the Honourable Premier, was it his intention that it should be possible for a money-lender to assign a transfer or sell one loan which is due to him on a pro-note but it should not be possible for him to sell a decree which has been passed in his favour? In fact, with respect to a decree greater reasons exist for a transfer than exist in the case of a pro-note. The judgment-debtor may belong to another district and it may not be possible for the decree-holder to go and execute his decree in the other district and, therefore, he might assign it to a person who can easily realise it. There is no principle involved in it. It is merely elucidation of what has been accepted by the select committee and, therefore, the words "or decree" may be added. My own idea is that if this amendment had not been put forward by the honourable member opposite, the court would in the light of common-sense interpret the word 'loan' to include a decree but it is capable of two opinions and it is certainly doubtful after the discussion which has taken place whether the decree would be included in the word 'loan'. Therefore, it is necessary that the words "or decree" be included.

Premier : My friend Mr. Mukand Lal Puri has referred to the proceedings of the select committee. I do not recollect that that was the intention of the select committee. What we decided in the select committee was on his motion when he suggested that supposing, I am quoting him, there was a money-lender who wanted money for his business and he wanted to pass on property mortgaged with him or some other immovable property to somebody else and if you do not exclude him you will be doing hardship because that fellow will not be able to raise money elsewhere definitely and, therefore, his business will suffer. We said, "Very well, we will allow one bona fide transaction to each one of those people if those transactions were bona fide". That is what we decided but now he wants to bring in the words 'or decree'. After his speech we would have naturally thought that there would be no harm in including the word 'decree' there. He has also said that probably decree is included in a loan. If it were included in a loan, it is no use our trying to discuss that point here but I want to avoid inclusion of the word 'decree' for this reason that a money-lender may get a decree and to avoid the consequences of this Act he can pass on the decree to somebody else.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Same with respect to loans.

Premier : With respect to loans he will have probably to give some property or something else to a third party. In the case of a decree it might be merely with a view to evasion of that decree. I, therefore, think that he should not insist on it.

Munshi Hari Lal : I submit that in the case of a decree there will absolutely be no difficulty because the money-lender, before he obtains a decree in the court after the commencement of this Act, will be producing a registration certificate as well as a licence. It is only then that the decree will be granted to him. He wants to assign that decree to another man. I do not understand that there would be any contravention of any principle. Where would the principle be contravened and where would it be evaded? Assignment of a single loan is conceded by the Premier. He says that there is absolutely no harm if a single loan is assigned by a money-lender and the assignee can go into the court without being put to the trouble of being registered. He can recover the money on the basis of the assigned loan in the law court. Supposing a money-lender obtains a decree and he assigns that decree to a person, should that assignee in order to get the execution of the decree get himself registered and get a license? I put him the question whether it will be providing any facility or creating hardship in his way?

Premier: My honourable friend has said that after the passing of this Act all decrees could be secured only after a man has got himself registered as a money-lender. There might be decrees outstanding before this Act is passed and those decrees will not be affected. Therefore, my honourable friend is not correct in saying that. (Voices: It affects executions also.) They will be affected and he says that they will not be affected.

Munshi Hari Lal: You may take that case also into consideration.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is—

That in sub-clause (9) (b), line 2, between the words "loan" and "to" the words "or decree" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I beg to move—

(i) That in proviso (b) to sub-clause (9), line 4, for the word "husband" the word "wife" be substituted.

(ii) That for the word "wife" the word "husband" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I beg to move—

That in proviso (b) to sub-clause (9), lines 3-4, for the words "a common" the words "the paternal" be substituted.

This is somewhat verbal because I do not think it carries much sense to say who has descended from a common grandfather of the assignor as if one could have many common grandfathers. I believe what they meant is this that the assignment should not be given to a collateral, descendant of the grandfather. What I would substitute for the words 'a common' is 'the paternal' grandfather so that it would read—

... as the case may be who is descended from a paternal grandfather of the assignor.

Premier: What about the maternal grandfather?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Who cares for the maternal grandfather? At least remove the word 'common'.

Premier: That is only a drafting amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is—

That in proviso (b) to sub-clause (9), lines 5-6, for the words "a common" the words "the paternal" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Lala Sita Ram (Trade Union Labour) (Urdu): Sir, I beg leave to move—

That at the end of the proviso to sub-clause (9), the following be added—

"(c) An unregistered money-lender who winds up his business of money-lending and does not renew any existing loan nor advances any fresh loan after the commencement of this Act, but confines himself to the realisation of the outstanding loans subsisting before the commencement of this Act."

My amendment is simple and needs no explanation. My object in moving this amendment is that those money-lenders who on account of the debtors' mentality prevalent in these days and the day to day legislation in one form or the other in favour of the debtor are already fed up with the profession may get an opportunity to discontinue their business if they so desire. In my opinion such persons should also be given the same facilities which have been given to the legal representatives of the deceased money-lender in proviso (a) of sub-clause (9) of clause 2 on the very same conditions, namely—

- (1) they wind up their business ;
- (2) realise their outstanding loans ;
- (3) do not renew any of their existing loans nor advance any fresh loans.

I hope that the Government would have no hesitation in accepting this amendment as the principle underlying is the same. The only difference between the two is that in the one case a person has died a natural death while in the other a constructive one.

With these words I move my amendment, and hope that the House would kindly lend its appreciation to it and thus give time to the honest money-lender to wind up his business in case he does not want to carry on his business any further under such hard conditions.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That at the end of the proviso to sub-clause (9), the following be added :—

"(c) An unregistered money-lender who winds up his business of money-lending and does not renew any existing loan nor advances any fresh loan after the commencement of this Act, but confines himself to the realisation of the outstanding loans subsisting before the commencement of this Act."

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, the House should form and lay down a clear opinion as to what the object of this legislation is. Is it the object of this legislation to regulate money-lending in future and to register and licence money-lenders or is it also the intention of this legislation to wipe out any old debts? It appears to me that the real intention of the framers of this Bill is not merely to regulate the money-lenders but is an indirect attempt in some cases to wipe out the old debts by getting the licences of some of the money-lenders cancelled. When I was putting forward my point of view with respect to the previous amendment against retrospective application of the Act the Honourable the Premier in reply to my arguments said, "if you are not going to make the Act retrospective you might as well put a match to the whole Bill." Yesterday Mir Magbool Mahmood while discussing the provisions of this Act mentioned the indebtedness of the peasantry of this province and pointed out that several other countries like Bulgaria and others had wiped out the entire debts. Let us therefore make our position clear. Is it the intention to regulate money-lending in future or is this Money-lenders' Act to be used to wipe out debts which have already been advanced and debts with respect to most of which decrees may have already been passed? I most respectfully submit that if the intention of the framers of the Act even remotely is to achieve that object then it is one of the most dishonest objects that could possibly be imagined. If you want to wipe out old debts and scale down the debts you ought to do so by a proper legislation. I would like to point out that this House has already taken sufficient measures in that direction with respect to scaling down the debts or with respect to wiping out old debts, i.e., the Relief of Indebtedness Act, the Debtors Protection Act, the Land Alienation Act, and several other amendments of the Civil Procedure Code which have made it impossible to realise any money by execution of decrees. It is not a question of scaling down the debts. The entire unsecured debt of the province has already been wiped out. The difficulties created by the recent legislation in the realisation of debts have resulted in wiping out the entire debt of the statutory agricultural tribes of this province. Let this legislation not be indirectly used with a view to wipe out decrees which have already been passed. Supposing a decree for three lakhs or 20 thousands has already been passed against any person, whether he is a member of the notified agricultural tribe or not, is it the intention of the Government to get the license of the money-lender cancelled and then wipe out the decree? If this is even remotely the intention of this legislation then to say the least it is not honest. This is not the alleged object of the legislation and I don't think, even this Government will admit this, in spite of a lurking hope in the mind of debtor members of this House. Therefore let us get rid of the idea of wiping out the old debts by means of this legislation and let us confine ourselves to evolving the best method and laying down correct provision for regulating the money-lending business only. Look at this amendment. What does it say? It says that a person who does not wish to carry on the business of money-lending should not be registered. Kindly peruse the amendment again. It runs thus :—

"An unregistered money-lender who winds up his business of money-lending and does not renew any existing loan nor advances any fresh loan after the commencement of this Act, but confines himself to the realisation of the outstanding loans subsisting before the commencement of this Act."

What is the idea of registering this man? Do you want to injure him in the advances which have already been made and which may also have already been adjudicated upon by courts and which may exist in the form of decrees? Why do you insist upon registering such a person who does not wish to carry on the business of money-lending? After all when you insist upon registration, you can only ask those persons for registration, who are carrying on at present the business of money-lending and who propose to do so in future. Here is a man who says, "I do not wish to carry on the business of money-lending. I will not advance a single penny in future to any one. No doubt, I have some old loans existing before coming into force of this Act and I will only realise them. I will not advance a single penny even to them. I will not even renew these loans so that the business is wound up expeditiously". Why insist upon registration in this case, if the object is only to regulate money-lending, and to weed out dishonest money-lenders? He is weeding out himself. Why not let him do so? So, I most earnestly commend this amendment to the consideration of this House.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I hope that the Honourable Premier believes in the theory of penitence.

That is, if a man commits a sin and sincerely repents having committed that sin at a later stage, he should be pardoned for his sins howsoever serious they may be. If the Premier really believes in this theory that a penitent man should be forgiven, then I put it to him that when a money-lender comes to him and says that, "I am very sorry for having carried on all these years the business of money-lending which you have now declared to be a sin. I hereby undertake to desist from this business and promise that I will never in future indulge or dabble in this trade, but, kindly let me realise my old debts," should I hope that the worthy Premier will kindly accept the penitence of this man?

Khawaja Ghulam Samad : His repentance and the repentance of the honourable members sitting on Opposition benches lies in their accepting this Bill.

Dr. Sir Cokul Chand Narang (West Lahore, Division, General, Rural) : Sir, I think my honourable friend, Lala Duni Chand was too optimistic if he really thought that he would get from the Ministerial benches any opportunity for his friends, the money-lenders, for making even toba, assuming that money-lending was a sin. I do not believe that money-lending is a sin, nor do I think that it is necessary to make toba or to do toba for having been a money-lender. But the question is, does the Government really think that people, who do not want to carry on this legitimate and profitable business after the commencement of this Act, should also be penalised and trouble should be created in the way of realisation of their debts. I think a remark was made by the Honourable Premier that there was an amendment going to be moved probably by one of his supporters to the effect that the Bill would not have retrospective effect. But I have not been able to discover that amendment yet. (Premier : I never said so.) I might have misunderstood him, but he did make a remark of some kind to that effect that this Bill would not affect the past debts. (Premier : Past delinquencies.) I do not know what he means by past delinquencies, unless he means that if a person has failed to send the copies of his accounts to the debtors before the commencement of this Act, he will not be punished under this Act. If that is what he had in his mind, then it is something. I think there is a provision somewhere in the clauses as they exist at present, if I am not mistaken, with regard to penalties. If you refer to clause 6, you will find this :—

" A licence may be cancelled by the Collector and shall not be renewed for such period as may be specified by him, if after the commencement of this Act, a money-lender—" does so and so. That provision is already contained in clause 6. I think that is what the Honourable Premier was presuming. I do not know really what the amendment is? When it comes before the House, we shall see. But if that amendment does not make a provision for protecting those money-lenders, who give up the profession of money-lending after the commencement of this Act, I can assure him that that amendment will not satisfy us, because it is only just and fair that if people who have been carrying on the business of money-lending when it was not considered a sin to do so and when there were no provisions like those embodied in this Bill, give up the profession of money-lending after the commencement of this Act, they should not be prevented from realising their dues by compelling them to get themselves registered and obtain a licence. My honourable friend Mr. Puri pointed out with reference to the definition of the word "money-lenders" that a money-lender is a person who carries on the business of money-lending. From my point of view perhaps this amendment was unnecessary because it might be expected that courts would not include such a person in the definition of money-lender, whom my honourable friend Lala Sita Ram, by his amendment, wants to protect, because for the present tense no sensible court would read past tense. The words "who carries on the business" would not be read by any court as "who carried on the business." So a sensible, honest and just court would not penalise that kind of person who has been a money-lender, when he goes to the court to realise his past dues. But we know the vagaries of courts quite well. We cannot depend entirely on the good-will and good sense of sub-judges before whom those cases may go. I believe that it is as a precaution against any possible misunderstanding and danger that Lala Sita Ram has moved this amendment. It is always said that the object of this Bill is to weed out the dishonest money-lender and the Honourable Premier is never tired of repeating this expression and my other friends opposite also have been repeating this pet phrase that the object of this Bill is to weed out the dishonest money-lender. If the person weeds himself out, then why put your khurpa on him? You can only weed out a thing if it exists. Why do you use your khurpa or spade to no purpose? The money-lender says that he is sick of this business and he believes that this money-lending business cannot flourish in the Punjab and so he wants to adopt some other profession. Then, for heaven's sake let him try to get back the money which he has advanced. There seems to be no justification whatsoever for putting obstacles in his way. The learned Premier said that I was growing bitter against him. I may assure him that there is no bitterness in me. But he cannot expect me to bless him for making these laws for us. Unless he wants us to adopt the attitude of those people in poetry who say—

سر در سال سلامت که تو خدیو آزمایی

If you like I shall always repeat it before every amendment I move in this House, but certainly he cannot expect that people would bless him for stopping their business, for closing the avenues of realisation of their just dues and for closing the doors of livelihood at them. Does he expect us to be sweet, complimentary and grateful to him for all these things and does he expect us to present him with addresses as our saviour? Certainly he cannot expect that from the very people whom he wants to strangle. Even his own henchmen have turned against him on account of the laws which he has brought forward in this House, because they are convinced that he is doing an injustice. They have got up and shown some courage in opposing him. I would therefore, say there is no question of bitterness. We are trying to do him service. We want to save him from bad name. We want to prevent him from tarnishing his reputation which he at one time possessed of being just and fair.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member is not relevant.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : This is the main part of the motion. Otherwise what is there in the motion? (Laughter). Please allow us to have our full say in the matter. You know the fate of this motion. Let us at least give full vent to our feelings about them. I may assure the Premier that I have no personal animus against him. I do not say that he is not acting honestly. I only say that he is not acting wisely. And it is our duty as members of this House to warn him against the mistake before it is too late. If such an amendment which seeks to exempt a person who does not want to do the business of money-lending, but only wants to be permitted to realise his old outstandings and for that purpose wishes to be exempted from the operation of this clause, is not accepted by Government, what hope is there of getting justice and fairness from these gentlemen?

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Lahore City, General, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, this Bill has been brought forward in order to give effect to the recommendation for regulation of money-lending and registration of money-lenders contained in paragraph 11 of the Report of the Reserve Bank of India (Agricultural Credit Department) made under section 55 (1) of the Reserve Bank of India Act. The honourable mover of the Bill has expressly stated that as the Reserve Bank desires that money-lenders should be registered that is why they are getting them registered. In other words they are acting as the agents of the Reserve Bank inasmuch as they are giving effect to its recommendations. In view of the Report the Reserve Bank sent letters to all the provinces in which it was stated that all the provincial Governments should pass a law in order to regulate money-lending. When we pass an Act with this end in view, it means that all those people who do money-lending will have to carry on their business under the new Act and in quite a new way. Therefore it is but fair that when we compel any money-lender to work in a new way and in accordance with the provisions of a new Act, we should give him opportunity to adapt himself to the new surroundings. Moreover, it is our duty to give him time so that he should decide for himself, whether he would be prepared to carry on his business under the new Act and in a new way or not. If he wishes to carry on his business of money-lending he would adapt himself to the new surroundings and would prepare himself to carry on his business in accordance with the provisions of the new Act. If, however he does not want to carry on his business of renewing existing loans for advancing fresh loans, he would then wind up his business and would try to invest his money in some other business. After all, Sir, we do want that everybody who has some money in his possession or even those who do not possess money, should be able to make their both ends meet. We do not like to reduce anybody to a state of beggary. We do wish that every Punjabi should be able to live decently by doing either mental or manual labour. I, therefore, submit that it is quite fair and proper that when we pass an Act, which is supposed to affect the money-lenders, we should see that if any one is carrying on the business of money-lending previous to the passing of that Act, he should be given opportunity to wind up his old business and to realise his outstanding loans subsisting before the commencement of the Act. In order to explain this point I would like to cite an example. Last year the Insurance Companies Act was passed in the Central Legislative Assembly. Under the provisions of that Act new legislation has been framed for the Insurance Companies. It is provided in this Act that the

Insurance Companies shall have to deposit securities with the Government of India. But Sir, the Government of India has given to the Insurance Companies and the Provident Companies probably 2 years of grace to wind up their old business if they do not propose to carry on their business any further, and if they wish to start their business afresh they should do so in accordance with the provisions of the Insurance Companies Act. There is another provision in that Act that if two or four small companies who are unable to pay their securities individually, wish to form one company they can join together and are allowed to carry on their business. If however, these companies wish to close their business they have been given time to wind it up. In the same way we do not like to prevent you from passing this Act, but we desire that after the assent of the Governor has been given to this Act, a period of time should be fixed in which money-lenders should be allowed to wind up their business if they so desire. On the other hand if they desire to carry on their business they should prepare themselves to carry it on in accordance with the provisions of the new Act. Further if two or three money-lenders join hands and wish to start their business they should be also allowed to do so. I submit that this can only be done if after the assent of the Governor has been obtained for the Act, my friends over there declare that this Act will come into force after such and such a date and those who wish to wind up their business should do so within that time. Again, if my friends do not wish to give any time to them for adapting themselves to the new circumstances; they should at least allow those people who do not wish to carry on their business of money-lending to wind up their business without getting the required licence and they should be permitted to institute cases in order to recover their loans advanced before the commencement of the proposed Act and the provision regarding taking out of a licence must not be enforced in their cases. Besides, they may also be allowed to settle other business in connection with their outstanding loans subsisting before the commencement of the Act. True, that all those persons who wish to carry on money-lending shall be required to take out licences and without them they would not be allowed to carry on their business, but the amendment that we wish to move will go a long way in order to solve the difficulties of the money-lenders who do not wish to take to money-lending in future.

It is claimed by my friends opposite that this Bill has been moved with a view to regulate money-lending so that in future if anybody wishes to pursue this profession, he would have to carry on his business in accordance with the provisions of this Bill. They have also remarked that this Bill will purge dishonest money-lenders out of the class of money-lenders and those who will start their business shall have to act in accordance with the provisions of this Act. Moreover, it is urged by my friends opposite that as the dishonest money-lender cannot do his business except by indulging in dishonest dealings and thus paying the penalty, therefore, they are ousting them from the field of money-lending business and they are making rules for the honest money-lenders so that if they think it worthwhile to carry on their business they should do so. As the Honourable Premier has stated, if any money-lender is found guilty by a court.

his licence will be cancelled. But I may submit that it is not fair to punish him on account of a mistake in law. In the end I once again request the Government that a money-lender who does not want to continue his business as a money-lender, should be allowed to wind up his business and I am sure that this will not in any way adversely affect the provisions of the Bill now before the House.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, this amendment has created a certain amount of discussion and an unnecessary discussion in this House. My honourable friend, Mr. Puri, knew fully well that his case was not strong and like a good advocate what he lacked in reasoning and argument he made up by use of vehemence in language and my honourable friend, Sir Gokul Chand Narang, said, 'it does not matter if it is not relevant but I must have my say in any case.' All the time he knew perfectly well that the arguments put forward by him were not strong. My friend, Mr. Puri, said that if the object of the Government is to wipe off all debts, then why should they not say so; they should say that that is their object and they should not do so dishonestly under the guise of this Money-lenders Registration Act. My honourable friend knows perfectly well that this Bill cannot possibly wipe off the debts. It has got nothing to do with the wiping off of debts. It is intended merely to regulate the business of money-lending in this province and to see that the money-lenders do honest business and regular business in their own interest as well as in the interests of every one concerned. Now, my honourable friends, every one of them, have said it would be a great hardship if people who want to give up the profession of money-lending are not allowed to wind up their business. By all means let them wind up their business. But I am sure only those who would not like to do honest business would like to wind up their business. But an honest money-lender, I am sure, when he reads the provisions of this Act will welcome it, because he will then be on a pedestal higher than what he is now on because of his dishonest colleagues. I have already submitted this. Now what will be the position if this Bill comes into force? Suppose a money-lender has dealings worth about 10 or 15 or even 20 lakhs. My honourable friends say that he winds up the business. If he wants to wind up let him do so. I do not stop him from winding up. He has to bring in a suit within three years. That is the period of limitation. If he can do so within three years, he will have to pay a registration fee of Rs. 5 and a small licence fee. That is all. It is a big bogey to say that he will suffer. That is the only penal clause which this Bill provides. Why should he shirk that? But the real object is not that. The reason at the bottom of it is this. He may be a dishonest money-lender and he may be afraid that during those three years several of his dishonest dealings might come to light in a court of law and he may be debarred from carrying on his profession. That is the real object of this amendment. But if the man were honest, he will have nothing to fear and it would only cost him a registration of Rs. 5 and a renewal fee whatever it may be, a very small amount and I can assure him he can wind up his business within three years and three years is the maximum limit. (Inter-ruption). This amendment will allow him to wind up. The winding up of a big business involving 20 or 30 lakhs may take several years or even one or two generations. Then my honourable friend wants to exempt those people so that they might commit frauds and malpractices during this period. (Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: He is not going to be hauled up for any frauds committed before the commencement of the Act). I entirely agree with the honourable member. Suppose this Act comes into force on the 1st of January, 1939. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I hope not). I hope my honourable friend is hoping against hope. But suppose the Act comes into force on the 1st of January, 1939 and a money-lender wants to wind up his business. He may take 8 years or 5 years or 10 years or 20 years. I say he will not be liable for any acts of omission or commission prior to the commencement of the Act. But during this period of 10 or 20 years he might do some dishonest act. Instead of 1,500 he may make it 15,000, instead of 8 per cent, he may make it 18 per cent, or he might do such other acts which dishonest money-lenders are capable of doing. Does my honourable friend mean to say that if that man goes on committing dishonest acts for all these years he should be immune for that period, while his honest colleague who has got a licence should be put more or less at a discount as compared with that dishonest money-lender? That is an aspect of the question which my honourable friend has not properly understood. Now what has he got to do under this Bill? He has to pay a little fee of Rs. 5 to get himself registered as a money-lender. It would not be a great hardship on him if he is not committing any dishonesty or any fraud. But if he commits a fraud, my honourable friend opposite says he should not be hauled up or he should not be brought under the provisions of this law. That is an aspect of the question which my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, has probably not taken into consideration. Now as a matter of fact, as a result of the amendment which I have suggested to clause 6, to which my honourable friend, Dr. Narang, referred, a money-lender would not only have time between the notification and the actual promulgation of the Act, but he would have a further period of 5 years at least. (An honourable member: How?). It is like this. Now he will not be liable for any omission or commission before this Act. The Act comes into force in 1939. The man applies for licence within six months or whatever the period is. If he commits any fraudulent Act say about the end of 1939 or in the beginning of 1940 then the Act does not bar him still to carry on his business with impunity. It is only when a suit is filed in a court of law and that court of law adjudicates that that transaction is fraudulent that he comes under the purview of this Act. And then if the original court holds him guilty, he can go to the appellate court and then eventually to the High Court. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: "Which Court.?"?). He must be adjudicated as having done or committed a fraudulent action by a court of law. That is what I mean. So, by the time the case is decided by the High Court it will take 4 or 5 or 6 years. Therefore he would have ample opportunity, in addition to the time which the notification in the gazette will give him, may be 8 or 4 or 6 years, to put his house in order and he will not be touched by this Act during this period. Is that not sufficient? Is that not just? Six years are ample for anybody to put his house in order, but my honourable friends are still pressing that this amendment is harmless and if we accept it, it would be innocuous, but I am afraid it would mean that we would be opening the door for all dishonest money-lenders to continue their money-lending business for a long period and they can have a very long rope at the expense of their more honest brethren. I therefore am not prepared to accept this amendment.

(Premier)

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the chair).

Lala Sita Ram (Trade Union, Labour) (Urdu): Sir, there seems to be some misunderstanding about the amendment I have moved. I wanted to impress that as we are not penalising the transactions entered into before the commencement of the proposed Act, there would be no harm if we exempt also those people from the operation of this Act who intend to wind up the business of money-lending. The Honourable Premier has observed that the money-lenders will have ample time to set their houses in order before the Act applies to them. But Clause (9) only reads like this :

"Nothing in this Act shall apply to suits or applications for execution already pending at the commencement of this Act."

I want to urge that some of the loans advanced by the money-lenders are covered by those about whom suits are instituted and some about which applications are pending. But besides this some more loans remain which do not come under the above category and it is to them that my amendment relates. I would request therefore, that those money-lenders should be exempted who are neither prepared to renew old loans nor are ready to advance new ones but are simply going to close down their business for good. The Honourable Premier has lightly asked, where is the difficulty of getting ourselves registered on payment of five rupees? My reply is that besides the monetary consideration the limit of which would be known only after the rules have been framed, there would be several other considerations which would certainly compel the money-lender to say good bye to his profession if the Bill is allowed to remain in the present form. I personally am of the opinion that if this Bill is passed there will be certainly not much difficulty for the dishonest money-lenders as they can always devise their own methods with the connivance of dishonest borrowers. But the real difficulty will be experienced by the honest money-lenders who will be compelled to close down their business. I now therefore can very well anticipate the object of this Bill. It is this, that the people should bid good bye to this profession. The Government wants to make it clear that if the people want to resort to money-lending even after such a hard measure here are the risks which they must face. And if they are still willing to indulge in their trade of money-lending they will be doing so on their own responsibility.

Premier: The honourable member is merely repeating his own arguments.

Lala Sita Ram: Sir, in the end I would say that in case even that amendment of mine is not accepted the condition of the money-lenders would resemble that of the proverbial adventurer who jumped into the river mistaking a bear for a blanket and then wanted to escape but the "blanket" would not let him escape.

Premier (Urdu): I think I have not succeeded in convincing my honourable friend, Lala Sita Ram, that honest money-lenders will have nothing to complain on account of this Bill. He himself admits that a money-lender will be able to take out the licence easily on payment of a sum of five rupees. An honest money-lender will not feel any difficulty if he has to take out a licence. But so far as the dishonest money-lender is concerned, why should we feel perturbed about him? The fact of the matter is that it is only the guilty conscience which feels perturbed and is anxious to commit any number of fraudulent acts till the commencement of the proposed Act. I am, therefore, unable to accept this amendment.

(Premier.)

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That at the end of the proviso to sub-clause (9), the following be added :—

(c) An unregistered money-lender who winds up his business of money-lending and does not renew any existing loan nor advances any fresh loan after the commencement of this Act, but confines himself to the realization of the outstanding loans subsisting before the commencement of this Act.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That sub-clause (9) of clause 2 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That sub-clause (10) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I move—

That in sub-clause (11), line 13, between the words "sells" and "his", the word "only" be inserted.

One sentence only to explain. The clause as it stands says that assignee includes a person who sells his own agricultural produce or cattle or buys agricultural produce for his own use. A man may be selling his own agricultural produce, he may be selling his own cattle, but that should not give him the benefit. What is intended, I am sure is if he sells only his own agricultural produce and I think my amendment will carry out the object, unless it was intended to discriminate between those persons who may be agriculturist and those who are not—

Premier : What is the force of the word 'only'? The object is clear. It means that he sells his own produce.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : The Premier has just asked me to make myself clear. As the clause stands it will not prevent a man from carrying on money-lending while he is selling his own agricultural produce. As the clause stands he can sell his own agricultural produce and also carry on money-lending and give or receive loans, but if the object is to give protection only to that person or exempt that person only who sells only his own produce, etc., then I submit that my amendment should be accepted.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in sub-clause (11), line 13, between the words "sells" and "his", the word "only" be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

7 P. M.

That sub-clause (11) of clause 2 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That Clause 2 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

-----
Clause 3.

Munshi Hari Lal : I move—

That in lines 5—8, the words " or an application.....a loan " be deleted.

My amendment is very simple. They are providing in the Money-lenders Bill that for the execution of a decree when a decree-holder is going to put an application for execution he should attach a certificate of registration and licence. I submit that when a decree-holder has obtained a decree there should be no obstacle between the execution of the decree and the decree-holder. When he has come into the court and sued for his claim, and has got a decree, that decree becomes rule of the court and it is the duty of the court to see that it is properly executed and the decree-holder enjoys the fruits of the decree without any hindrance whatsoever.

Premier : You should go on enjoying the fruits and we should go on providing the fruits.

Munshi Hari Lal : I wish that you had provided so, but the fruits that you are providing are that you are licensing me and registering me as if I am a criminal.

Premier : As a lawyer I hope you were not a criminal when you got the licence.

Munshi Hari Lal : My submission is that for the execution of the decree there should be no necessity of producing a certificate of registration as well as the licence. With these very few words I beg to move my amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in lines 5—8, the words " or an application.....a loan " be deleted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I wholeheartedly support the amendment which has been moved by Munshi Hari Lal. Once an adjudication has been made by a court, that adjudication should be respected. The relation between the money-lender and his customer, between the creditor and the debtor is at an end and a decree or an order of a court, once it has been passed and upheld on an appeal is the only thing which stands. A decree or order of a court is not a transaction between a money-lender and his debtor.

Shaikh Faiz Muhammad : I invite your attention to amendment No. 63 to clause 2 which was discussed and rejected. I, therefore, doubt of the honourable member is in order.

Munshi Hari Lal : But I do not know if the honourable member is in order.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : This gives an indication that one of the ideas underlying this legislation is really to get rid of the old debts, otherwise how is the regulation of money-lending in any way improved by imposing restrictions in the execution of old decrees? No fraud can possibly be committed with respect to this realisation by the creditor. He is not allowed to charge a higher rate of interest than that which has been decreed to him. No payment made to him at home can be counted towards the satisfaction of the decree unless it is certified by the court. Therefore, there is no possibility of even the most astute and even the most fraudulent person committing any fraud in that transaction. If you look at the history of legislation on money-lending, you will find that after the money-lending transaction has been transformed into a judgment by the court, those judgments are decrees and are always excluded from any penalty which might be entailed under the money-lending legislation. A great deal has been made of the British Money-lenders Act. Does the British Money-lenders Act place any restrictions on the execution of judgment? The only restriction it places is that a suit for the recovery of money may not be allowed to persons who are not registered but absolutely no restrictions are placed on the execution of decrees. Sir, in this matter of registration of money-lenders, we have got no other precedent except an Act in the Central Provinces which I respectfully submit again, places no restrictions whatsoever on the execution of decrees, and the proposed Bombay Bill is equally silent on the point. Why should we include a thing which appears on the face of it to be outside the purview of money-lending legislation? Once a decree has been passed the decree or order of the court has superseded previous relationship. No court has the right to go behind that decree as to whether that decree arose out of a transaction between the money-lender and the debtor, or between the 'arti' and his principal or on account of breach of contract, it is a decree for the realisation of money. Therefore the inclusion of this does not advance the object of this legislation, and, as I have already submitted, gives support to the accusation which is being levelled by uncharitable critics of the legislation that this legislation is partly intended to wipe out old debts, even those debts which have been transformed into decrees on the off-chance of the creditor's licence being cancelled.

Premier : My honourable friend is worried about those uncharitable critics who say all kinds of things about me and my Government which have brought forward this measure. I am very grateful to him for this small mercy; but I am afraid that he continues to flog a dead horse. What actual hardship do those persons incur under this Act? Either that person is a money-lender or is not a money-lender. If he is not a money-lender this Act does not apply to him and his decree will be quite safe; he can go and lodge a suit. If he is a money-lender then he must possess a certificate of registration and a licence, and if he has got that, what hardship is there in his producing that certificate in a court or a copy of the certificate?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The hardship is this that if that licence is cancelled, he not only loses other debts but also his decree.

Premier : Exactly, I was coming to that point. I am glad he has anticipated me. I was going to say that they are again trying to shelter the dishonest money-lender. That is what their object is. If he is an honest money-lender he has got a certificate and a licence, goes to the court and says : here is my decree and licence and certificate, please get it executed. The court will order the execution. If he is not a money-lender he does not require a licence and the court cannot do it. My honourable friend says he might have committed a fraud with regard to another transaction. That is the thing which we want to eliminate : that is our object and I have told my honourable friend that if the money-lender is guilty of dishonest transaction after the commencement of the Act, then and then only he would be liable. The decrees which were passed during the past six years would not be affected. It is only the decrees after the commencement of this Act which might be affected if he has committed any fraudulent act during that period. Having that in view I am afraid it is no use saying that the decrees sanctioned by the High Court would be affected : these are not going to be affected. It is only a deterrent provision against committing fraud after the commencement of this Act with regard to new transactions. That is the position and I do not see what is worrying my honourable friend unless he wants to shield dishonest and fraudulent money-lenders.

Munshi Hari Lal : The Honourable the Premier has proceeded on wrong premises. It is the money-lender whose honesty he wants to ensure. The question is that as soon as a person obtains a decree he loses the character of a money-lender and he does not remain a money-lender, he becomes a decree-holder and a judgment-creditor. I wish the word ' money-lender ' should be altogether removed in the case of a decree-holder. The person who obtains a decree does not retain that status at all. He is not then a money-lender. The question is, should a decree-holder for getting his decree executed get a certificate or a licence or not ? To say that he is not an honest money-lender.....(Interruptions). If the Honourable Premier had allowed me to finish the sentence he would not have felt the necessity of interrupting me. (Premier : I never interrupted you). He says that he is shielding the honest money-lender. He says he is providing for the existence of honest money-lenders. My point is that as soon as a money-lender obtains a decree he does not remain a ' money-lender.' The word ' money-lender ' does not at all apply to him. The question of honesty or dishonesty does not at all arise in such a case when he has only to get his decree executed. Another point is that if after obtaining a decree a judgment-creditor is called dishonest, it is a fling at the court which decided his case and gave him a decree. The court has settled all the points that arose between the defendant and the plaintiff and after deciding all the points the court has given him the decree and that decree, if it is an honestly obtained decree, would make the decree-holder an honest decree-holder and if the decree is not honestly obtained, I leave it to the Premier to say whether it is the fault of the money-lender or the fault of the court that has awarded him the decree.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That in lines 5—8, the words " or an application . . . . a loan " be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move that—Sub-clause (b) (ii) be deleted.

Sir, I would refer you to clause 3 (a) and (b). It reads as follows—

- “ . . . . A suit . . . . shall be dismissed unless the money-lender—
- (a) at the time of the institution of the suit or presentation of the application for execution ; or
- (b) at the time of decreeing the suit or deciding the application for execution—
- (i) is registered ; and
- (ii) holds a valid licence, in such form and manner as may be prescribed.”

My amendment is that this sub-clause (b) (ii) should be deleted. I said in my speech proposing the circulation of this measure that licensing of money-lenders, apart from registration, was unnecessary. Why have two things, first registration and then licensing ? Why duplicate the same process ? Why sub-divide the same act into two ? This clause says that a person should be registered as well as licensed. Why not coalesce both these operations into one ? If you think that a particular fee or a higher fee is necessary, then it can be levied at the time of registration. Why insist upon another process of licensing before the money-lender would be entitled to function ? It appears to me to be a pure act of duplication, apart from the merits of the matter, as to why a simple process of registration should be divided into two parts ? First, a money-lender shall apply for registration and after he has applied for registration, he shall be licensed. I am glad to find that in the Act itself the action of registration is automatic. It is not left to the discretion of the Collector to refuse registration. Once a man is registered, then he has again to apply for a licence. Why should it be so ? Why not do both the things at one time ? Again, licensing is also automatic. The Collector has got no power to refuse a licence. Why not combine both these operations into one, for the sake of convenience and avoid the useless waste of time and expense and trouble ? It will be a more feasible and better proposition. Again, Sir, the reason why this licensing should not be insisted upon is—and that is on sentimental grounds—that money-lending should not be treated as a prohibited trade, which requires licensing. We have now got registration of partnerships. A partnership in this country now requires compulsory registration on payment of a fee. No licensing is necessary there. No licensing is insisted upon by the Government of India Act in order to enable a partner to carry on that business. Therefore, I submit that the procedure of licensing should be entirely left out both on the ground of convenience and simplicity.

That sub-clause (b) (ii) be deleted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikandar Hyat-Khan) : Sir, my honourable friend wanted to press the point as to why have two processes of registration and licensing. I was rather surprised that he has not quoted the English Act, as it was quoted on every occasion, whether it was relevant or irrelevant. (Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : There is no licensing under the English law). My honourable friend says that there is nothing in it. In the English Act there is not only licensing, but I may say there is licensing, there is registration and there is also a certificate, a third thing which we have not got here. Why have we provided two things is because registration is a preliminary thing and once you get yourself registered it is not necessary to get yourself registered again, unless your name is removed from the register. But a licence would be an annual thing. That is the difference between registration and licensing. Licence is a periodical thing. You can get yourself registered only once, but you will have to get your licence renewed every year. That is why we have laid down this provision.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Pari : Sir, I am glad that the Honourable Premier has supplied me another reason for proposing this amendment. I seriously object to the money-lenders being required to renew their licences every year. The business of money-lending necessarily is of a permanent character and with respect to a loan, necessarily 2, 3 or 4 years would be required in recovering it. Therefore, Sir, the system of renewal of licences every year would cause unnecessary hardship and that is also one of my main objections to this licensing because this licensing is going to be used as a method of taxation of money-lenders, which is certainly not the object of this Bill. Therefore, I strongly oppose the licensing of money-lenders as distinguished from registration.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

The sub-clause (b) (ii) be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : We have been working ever since 2 P.M. to-day and we have so far worked for 5½ hours. We have never worked so long continuously before. Formerly whenever we had to work for such a length of time we used to have an interval of about an hour in the middle. I would therefore suggest that we should adjourn now. Another point that I wish to draw your attention to is that it is very hard for us to work without a definite programme before us. I would therefore suggest that the farther programme of work be fixed.

Mr. Speaker : What has the Honourable Premier to say?

Premier : I am extremely sorry that the question of the hours of working should have been raised now, because we already decided on a previous occasion that instead of meeting at 11 o'clock in the morning and adjourning for one hour for lunch, we should sit in the afternoon so that if anybody had any other work to attend to he may do so in the forenoon. It was also decided that we should sit from 2 to 8 P.M. That answers the first part of my honourable friend's suggestions.

With regard to the programme of work, it is for you to decide in view of the progress we have made whether we should have an off-day to-morrow or not. I suggest that we should sit from day to day to finish our business expeditiously. If my honourable friend wants a holiday to-morrow and the House agrees with him, then we will have to sit on Saturday. I think the House realises its sense of responsibility and duty towards the province and I hope that it will decide to work continuously for a few days more.

Mr. Speaker : The House will not sit to-morrow. It will sit on the 14th and 15th, and, if necessary, on Saturday the 16th.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (b) (ii), lines 1-2, for the word "Commissioner" the words "senior sub-judge or district judge" be substituted.

Mr. Speaker: This question has already been discussed at length and therefore it does not require a long speech to commend it to the House.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I have only one argument to advance in support of this amendment and it is this. The Commissioner exercises jurisdiction over several districts and is not always present at headquarters of any district. A person who wishes to get a certificate will find it more convenient to approach the district judge who is usually available in the district or the sub-judge who is invariably in the district, apart from the desirability or undesirability of entrusting this work to judicial officers instead of to revenue officers. On the ground of convenience alone, an officer on the spot is more useful.

Mr. Speaker: Question is—

That in sub-clause (b) (iii), lines 1-2, for the word "Commissioner" the word "senior sub-judge or district judge" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban): I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (b) (iii), lines 1-2, the words 'from a Commissioner' be deleted.

The clause will then stand thus—

"holds a certificate granted under section 11," etc. There is a series of amendments to clause 11. Whatever may be the decision of the House with regard to the question of the 'officer' to grant a certificate under the clause, I submit that it must be left an open question until clause 11 comes up for consideration. Otherwise if we consider the question now, we will be prejudicing the amendments to clause 11. We should not prejudge even now what the attitude of the House will be when the amendments to clause 11 are moved. If we do not omit the words 'from a Commissioner' then we will be barred from moving amendments to clause 11 relating to the 'officer' who can issue certificates, because it will be contended that the House has already agreed in this clause to the grant of certificates by the Commissioner. If these words are now deleted it will then remain an open question for us to discuss under clause 11. We should not therefore tie our hands on this point at this stage.

Mr. Speaker: Amendments to clause 11 no doubt depend upon the decision of this amendment.

I will put the amendment slightly changed, so that it may cover both amendments under consideration. The question is—

That in sub-clause (b) (iii), line 1, the word "Commissioner" be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): I do want to move my amendment. I would like the Advocate-General to kindly read my amendment and also the clause as it stands in the Bill and if he thinks that my amendment is an improvement on that clause, then it may be accepted. But if he thinks that the clause as it stands is sufficiently clear and fair, then I shall have really nothing to say.

My amendment is—

That for the proviso the following be substituted :—

Provided that in such a case the suit or the application shall not be finally disposed of until the application of the money-lender for registration and licence pending before the Collector is finally disposed of.

In order to enable him to judge the effect, I would just like to read out the amendment as well as the clause as it stands. The proviso as it stands reads—

Provided that in such a case, the suit shall not be decreed or the application for execution of a loan granted, unless at the time of such decision, the money-lender is registered and licensed as prescribed.

You will notice that this proviso goes with paragraph (iv) of sub-clause (b) of clause 3. Paragraph (iv) reads as follows—

If he is not already a registered and licensed money-lender, satisfies the court that he has applied to the Collector to be registered and licensed and that such application is pending.

So that the position is this. A person has filed a suit. But at the time of filing the suit he was not a registered money-lender and did not possess a licence. This is permissible because part (b) says 'at the time of decreeing the suit or deciding the application for execution.' It is therefore permissible for a money-lender either to get himself registered and take out a licence at the time he files the suit or to get himself registered and take out a licence at the time the case is ripe for a decree. That being so, another position arises when he applies but has not yet been granted a licence. What is to happen then? The proviso as it stands, with all respect to the gentlemen who drafted it, is very crude and almost unworkable. It says that in such a case the suit shall not be decreed or the application for execution of a loan granted unless something happens. Now what is going to happen? Is he going to dismiss the suit, because the clause says the suit shall not be decreed? Should he dismiss it or should he keep it pending? What is he to do during that interval? In fact it would have been much better to use the word 'until' in place of the word 'unless' because it refers to time and not to a mere condition. Now, if he looks at my amendment he will find it to be very clear and definite. It says that in such a case the suit or the application shall not be finally disposed of until the application of the money-lender for registration and licence pending before the Collector is finally disposed of.

Premier : I am prepared to accept it, but may I suggest one verbal alteration that after the word 'and' and before the word 'licence,' the words 'grant of' be added.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : That makes little difference, but I have no objection.

Mr. Speaker : I shall put the amendment as amended by the Honourable Premier. The question is—

That for the proviso the following be substituted :—

Provided that in such a case, the suit or the application shall not be finally disposed of until the application of the money-lender for registration and grant of licence pending before the Collector is finally disposed of.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 3 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

The Assembly then adjourned till 2 p.m. on Thursday, 14th July, 1938.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

3RD SESSION OF THE 1ST PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Friday, 14th July, 1958.

The Assembly met at the Assembly Chamber, Simla, at 2-30 P.M., of the clock. Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

RELEASE OF OOTY BANK RAID CASE PRISONERS.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta (South-Eastern, Towns, General, Urban) : I beg to move that leave be granted to make a motion that the business of the Assembly be adjourned for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the obstacles created by the Punjab Government in the release of the prisoners convicted in the Ooty Bank Raid case in Madras.

Premier : May I, before I make any submission, ask my honourable friend opposite as to what is his authority for this motion ?

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : My authority for the motion is the A. P. I. report of a speech delivered by the Premier of the Madras Government wherein he says—

Premier : I have read that report.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Let us hear that also.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : It is as follows :—

At Pandi, the Premier, referring to the release of the Ooty Bank Case prisoners, said :
" Four people, who came from different places, raided the Ooty Bank, thinking that by raiding it they could serve the country. If they had taken money, they would not have distributed it among the people. I want to release them. They do not belong to our province. The Punjab Government state that I should release them on the condition that they would not go over to the Punjab. I am putting it to the Punjab Government that it is not my business. They had the right to keep them off and they might do so. On account of these differences, the release of those prisoners is delayed; but you may expect that they will be out soon. I shall fight for that. I know how to fight. I must decide when to fight and how, considering the responsibility on my shoulders."

I think, Sir, that this needs no comment.

Premier : It does not. Of course my honourable friend can start giving notices of adjournment motions merely on press reports and I might also give notice of an adjournment motion on the strength of what appeared in the Statesman with regard to your resignation. That is the substance of such adjournment motions. I would draw your attention to page 193 of Campion where it is stated :—

(*) It must not deal with a hypothetical case, or be based on uncorroborated report.

I submit that this is an uncorroborated report and I think that it is doing injustice to my friend the Premier of Madras because I cannot possibly conceive that he can make a statement like that or express himself in these terms. I cannot for a moment concede particularly with regard to my friend, Mr. Rajgopalachari, who we all know is held in great esteem and who is an administrator of great calibre, and acumen, that he can make such a statement. So far as the actual merits of the case are concerned, if my honourable friend wants to know what is the exact position then I might inform him that these prisoners are Madras prisoners and they are in the Punjab jails and we are keeping them as a matter of courtesy here. It is for Madras to release them. We sent some of our prisoners to Bihar and the Bihar Government told us that their health was such that they should be released. We issued orders and they were released and the Bihar Government had nothing to do with them. They were released on our orders. I understand that the Madras Government has ordered their release and if so, they will be released. That is all. I do not think there can be any question of fighting with the Punjab Government or anybody else.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : May I ask the Premier to throw light on that part of the report which concerns the Punjab Government whether—

Mr. Speaker : May I know whether those prisoners are in the Madras Presidency or in the Punjab ?

Premier : They are in the Punjab.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : They are here as guests, Sir. (Laughter). As you will see from the wording of the adjournment motion the object of the motion is to find out and to criticise if it is true, the attitude of the Punjab Government in asking—

Mr. Speaker : I do not know under what circumstances they have been sent to the Punjab, but they are here and must have been sent by the Madras Government. If the Madras Government releases them, how can the Punjab Government detain them ?

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : That is exactly my grievance.

Mr. Speaker : If the Punjab Government, after orders of their release are passed by the Madras Government, detains them, an adjournment motion might then be moved.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : The point at issue is whether or not it is a fact that the Punjab Government has written to the Madras Government that they should not release these prisoners unless they give an undertaking that they will not come back to the Punjab after they are released. The matter can end easily if the Premier throws light on this point and declares that the Punjab Government has not made any such suggestion to the Madras Government. I am only concerned to the extent of finding out as to whether the Punjab Government has or has not made a request of that nature to the Madras Government. If they have, I think that they deserve to be censured by us on the floor of this House. If on the other hand, they have not, then the matter ends there and I would not press for the adjournment motion. I would request, through you, the Premier to say either yes or no ; whether they have or they have not asked the Madras Government to impose those conditions on the prisoners.

Premier : I might inform my honourable friend that we have had no official communication from the Madras Government at all on the subject. There was certain correspondence between the Madras Government and the Government of India —rather the Governor-General who in turn informed the Governor of the Punjab with regard to these prisoners. As a matter of fact a prisoner released in the United Provinces under orders of the Madras Government, was allowed to go on his giving a certain undertaking and it was suggested that a similar undertaking be taken from these prisoners. So far as I am concerned, I told them that I did not attach any importance to the undertaking that a gentleman, who has more or less given his views about violence, gives and that so far as I am concerned it is purely of an academic interest whether an undertaking is taken or not. That is the position of the Punjab Government.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I am sorry the matter has not been made clear. The undertaking referred to is not about giving up non-violence or violence.

Mr. Speaker : The adjournment motion appears to be premature and is, therefore, disallowed.

PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND (THIRD AMENDMENT) BILL.

Premier : I do not propose to introduce the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill at the moment and will introduce it on a later day, because it requires certain corrections. The last portion of the Bill refers to the Punjab Registration of Money-Lenders Act, 1938, which has not been passed.

THE PUNJAB REGISTRATION OF MONEY-LENDERS BILL.

Clause 4.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban): Sir, I beg to move—

That in line 1, between the words "apply" and "for" the words "in person or by post or otherwise" be inserted.

My object is quite clear. I want that the money-lender may not appear in person before the collector for putting in an application for registration. He may send it by post, by a messenger, or by his agent or in any other legal way.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in line 1, between the words "apply" and "for" the words "in person or by post or otherwise" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): I beg to move—

That in line 4, between the words "district" and "and" the words "or the tahsildar of the tahsil" be inserted.

My object is to facilitate the application for the obtaining of a licence. As the clause stands, you will see, it says—

Every money-lender may apply for registration of his name at the office of the collector of the district; and his name shall be registered on furnishing such particulars as may be prescribed and on payment of a fee of Ru. 5.

The office of the collector of the district may be at a distance of 50 or 60 miles and there may be no railway communication and there may not be even motor communication. This means that the person must give up all business for days and must go there personally and apply at the office of the collector for registration and stay there for some time. I would not refer to other things which he may have to face there in the office of the collector and the expenses, I need not mention, which he may have to incur while there. But apart from anything else it would certainly facilitate the putting in of the application and obtaining the licence, if the words, which I have suggested, are inserted, because the headquarters of the tahsil are supposed to be nearer than the headquarters of a district. I do not think any harm would be done if the tahsildar is also authorised to issue these licences. The tahsildar is a responsible officer. He is the collector of one-third or one-fourth or even half of a district and I do not think there can be any objection in principle to his being authorised to give a licence. If Munshi Hari Lal's amendment, which has just been rejected, had been accepted, perhaps my amendment would not have been necessary; but considering that Government is not prepared even to allow this facility that people may obtain a licence by sending their application by post and sending in the registration fee that may be necessary by money order, I think they ought to accept this amendment at least. I know that in other countries to take out a licence for certain purposes a person has only to go to the nearest post office, pay a fee of 10 shillings or so and take a licence. Just as you buy stamps you buy licences by paying the requisite fee. But I do not see the philosophy of compelling every half-penny twopenny money-lender from the remotest village to come to the headquarters to have his name registered. Even a graduate of a university can get his name registered by sending a letter and the requisite fee; and even pleaders are not required personally to appear before the High Court for registration. They can ask some lawyer friend to pay the fee, and send their application and get themselves registered. I do not understand whether it would be necessary for the collector to study the physiognomy of the money-lender and see whether he is an honest money-lender or he is a dishonest money-lender and after putting him under the microscope would come to the conclusion that he is a person who deserves registration. Well, if that is the case, a microscope may also be supplied to the tahsildars so that they may also put them under the microscope and ascertain from the appearance of the money-lender, whether he deserves or does not deserve to be registered. But what is the reason that the man should be compelled to come at a distance of 70 miles or so to have his name registered when he is prepared to send the fee and send his application by post or through some messenger? If that is not accepted, why should he not be allowed to go to the tahsildar and have his name registered? I have no doubt that Government would issue some instructions about the qualifications and disqualifications of persons who should not be registered as money-lenders. Those disqualifications or qualifications, whatever the case may be, or any rules that may be framed on this point, for the guidance of the collector, can also be sent to tahsildars and they can study those rules fairly intelligently before they register the name of a money-lender. It is a very innocent and at the same time a very important amendment and unless the Government is bent upon giving all sorts of possible troubles to money-lenders, whether dishonest or honest, they ought to accept it.

That in line 4, between the words " district " and " and " the words " or the tahsildar of the tahsil " be inserted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General Rural) : Sir, whether the Government intends to incorporate the suggestions which have been made by Munshi Hari Lal or Dr. Gokul Chand in the rules, or whether the Government accepts at this stage and incorporates them in the Bill, it is very necessary to bring to the notice of the Government that a real hardship will be caused if facilities for registration are not afforded either by means of registered letters or by means of applications which may be put in at the nearest place. You will see, Sir, that the principle underlying both these amendments is the same that when the registration and licensing of money-lenders has been made automatic by the Government, no more difficulties ought to be placed in the way of registration and licensing and the licence should be obtainable with the minimum amount of trouble and inconvenience. That this is no mere imaginary difficulty would be apparent from the attitude adopted by the Amritsar Debt Conciliation Board, where the Board insisted upon creditors residing, say in Bombay, to appear personally for mere formal proof of debts and has dismissed the claims although the proofs were submitted by duly appointed attorneys. I invite the attention of the Government to the vagaries of this Conciliation Board. I am, therefore, anxious that no room be left for such vagaries by collectors. Legislation or rules should provide for registration by post or through attorneys. Therefore, Sir, these are the matters which are real difficulties of detail and I have every hope that while framing rules, if this amendment is not accepted now, at least the Government will, under the rules, permit registration by less difficult methods.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, I think my honourable friends have laid an unnecessary stress on this motion. As a matter of fact all these matters will have to be dealt with in the rules. You cannot possibly bring in tahsildars, naib-tahsildars or kanungos, because during the select committee stage, strong opposition was taken to the inclusion of the assistant collector first grade. But it was with a view to facilitate the grant of these licences that we included somebody else because the collector may, sometimes, be not free to do so and, therefore, somebody is authorised to do certain things. So far as the question of applications is concerned, it is obvious that Government must provide other reasonable facilities to these people to get their licences. I would submit that licences will be available automatically on application. We can lay down and include tahsildars and naib-tahsildars, but then they may be authorised, under their own signatures to verify that the application sent by registered post is signed by such and such person, and he can get the licence unless the collector wants to take some action. It should be automatically sent to the headquarters of the collector. I do not think that my honourable friend need worry about that particular point. We will try to give all reasonable facilities to them to apply personally or through agents or through post.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: There is one thing which I want to say in reply. The Honourable Premier said that others have been authorised to act for the collector. If he would turn to sub-clause (2) of clause 2 to the definition of 'Collector', he would find this—

“Collector means the Collector of the District or such other officer not below the rank of Assistant Collector, first grade, as may be specially empowered. . . .”

So, it is generally the assistant collector, first grade, who would be deputed to do this work. So far as my information goes no assistant collector of first grade can be found in a tahsil. Tahsildar is not an assistant collector of first grade. Therefore, that facility will not be afforded at tahsil headquarters, but an application will have to be made to the collector at the headquarters of the collector and so far as the language of this clause is concerned, the application is to be made at the office of the collector. From another point of view also I think that it is better to distribute this work because if all applications from the whole district have to go to the collector, it would take a longer time than if the money-lenders filed their applications with tahsildars. In fact, I could have suggested even sub-inspectors posted near a village in which a money-lender resides. He can go to them, and pay the necessary fee and get a licence. Where is the harm? If the intention is really to make this system automatic, then why was the amendment of Munshi Hari Lal rejected and why is this not being accepted? I do not know whether under the rules, they can even say that the sadr kanungo might be authorised to register. I do not know if they have any such intention. If not, serious difficulties might arise.

Premier: I am afraid I have not been able to make myself clear to my honourable friend. What I said was that it would not serve any purpose if they put their applications at tahsil headquarters, if we can under the rules provide that they might send their applications by registered post to the deputy commissioner. You have to centralise the work in one place instead of spreading it over several tahsils. If you do that, there will be duplication of work and there might be some inconvenience to money-lenders, because a tahsildar is not so responsible as an assistant collector, first grade or the collector himself. This matter was thrashed out in the select committee. I think my honourable friend is merely flogging a dead horse. I have told that we will consider all these questions when we frame the rules.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang: If these things are in view and the Government think that they can do that, I have no pleasure in insisting upon my amendment. I only wanted to draw the attention of the Honourable Premier to this matter. I therefore, withdraw my amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): I beg to move—

That in line 7, for the words "Rs. 5" the words "Rs. 1" be substituted.

This may look rather a puerile amendment in the eyes of rich people but there are many money-lenders to whom a difference of Rs. 4 will mean a good deal. There is another point also. I want to ask whether the object of this Bill is fiscal or only reformatory. From all the speeches that have been made it appears that the object is only reformatory, that is, to weed out dishonest money-lenders—to repeat that much hackneyed expression—and to help the honest money-lenders in plying their legitimate trade. If that is so, why should any fee for registration be fixed at all? The money-lenders are already put to one hardship of registering themselves. Why should they be put to another hardship of paying for the registration? It has never been said that one of the objects of the Bill is to raise revenue. If that is not an object, it should serve the purpose of the Government, if at all they should fix a registration fee, to fix a nominal fee, say a court fee or stamp fee of two annas or four annas or at the most Rs. 1. The Government should have no objection in accepting my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in line 7, for the words "Rs. 5" the words "Rs. 1" be substituted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): My friend is quite right in believing that this is not a fiscal measure. I believe that my honourable friend will remember that when I introduced this Bill I made it clear that for the present the Government has no intention of making this measure a fiscal one. I may also point out that Rs. 5 is not after all a very big figure considering that this payment is to be made only once. The money-lender has to pay Rs. 5, only once to get himself registered. My honourable friend will realise that we have to set up a machinery with a view to avoid inconvenience to money-lenders. We will have to employ several clerks to see that there is no avoidable delay in registering these money-lenders and in order to cover the cost of this establishment a small fee of Rs. 5 is proposed. If we wanted to put in a bigger figure as has been provided in the Bombay Bill, starting from Rs. 10 to Rs. 4,000, it would then become a fiscal measure. From my point of view, although the Bombay Government does not consider it a fiscal measure which proposes to levy a fee in accordance with the amount of the turn over or the gross income of the person concerned, still from my point of view it is a fiscal measure. But as I have already said, there is no intention on the part of Government here to make this a fiscal measure for the present. We have fixed a minimum figure compatible with the expenditure which would be necessary for the proper working and operation of this Bill.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : It may appear as if I am quarrelling for Rs. 4. But that is not so. I am quarrelling for Rs. 2,20,000. It was said by Mir Maqbool Mahmood the other day that there are about 55,000 money-lenders in the Punjab. If the fee is reduced by Rs. 4 the money-lenders save in the aggregate a sum of Rs. 2,20,000. If the amendment is not accepted, the Government will mulct the money-lenders in an additional sum of Rs. 2,20,000. (An honourable member : But doctors pay Rs. 82.) But how many doctors are there?

Then, as regards overhead expenses, if we divide these 55,000 money-lenders over 29 districts, we get an average of about 2,000 for each district. That means that if the fee is only Re. 1, then the Government will have Rs. 2,000 for each district and if a clerk is employed on Rs. 25 per mensem, then these Rs. 2,000 can cover his salary for eighty months.

Again, a fee of Rs. 5 may not be a big figure for a person who spends so much in the Davico's tea room, but I know from personal knowledge that there are several money-lenders to whom a fee of Rs. 5 is really a big figure. I remember when I was at school the fee for all the primary classes was one anna. Then some educational authority increased the school fees fixing them at one anna for the first class, two annas for the second class and so on. The result was that some boys were withdrawn from school, boys who belonged to the non-agriculturist classes to which the money-lenders mainly belonged, because they could not afford to pay so much in school fees. Our people are poor and we cannot dream of comparing ourselves to Bombay which is a province of millionaires. Therefore, we must consider the position of our own province. Finally, I would close by saying that it is not for Rs. 4, that I am fighting, but I am really trying to appeal to Government for Rs. 2,20,000.

Premier : I am afraid I am not a mathematician, but I can assure my honourable friend that, as I have already repeatedly said on the floor of the House, it is not intended to make this a fiscal measure. The number of money-lenders, according to my honourable friend and also of several of my friends on this side will be reduced when this Act comes into force. As a matter of fact one member went so far as to suggest that no money-lenders would be left in the province. My own calculation is that 30,000 money-lenders would be left in the province and if you work out the figures the income per district from these registrations will be only about Rs. 400.

This is just sufficient to meet what I may call out of pocket expenses of Government.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in line 7, for the words "Rs. 5" the words "Rs. 1" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I shall move the next amendment without making a speech and you may put it to vote.

Mr. Speaker : It is out of order. According to parliamentary practice as well as the practice of this House no amendment can be made in the first part of a clause after its latter part has been amended or has been proposed to be amended, if a question has been proposed from the Chair upon such amendment.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : The matter rests in your discretion.

Mr. Speaker : The question is :—

That clause 4 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

-----
Clause 5.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : I move—

That in lines 3—4, the words "subject to the provisions of section 6" be deleted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : I may at once inform my honourable friend that I have already pointed out to the House that this is one of the printing errors which are to be rectified. I am, therefore, prepared to accept this amendment.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in lines 4—5 for the words "for such period" the words "for five years" be substituted.

I submit that the period for which a licence has to be granted should be five years. It would save the money-lender a lot of inconvenience and annoyance and would ensure stability of his business for some time. When he gets the licence he should be sure that it would not be necessary to worry for a period of at least five years. It is, therefore, that I propose that the words 'five years' be substituted for the words 'for such period'. 'Such period' should not be left undefined in the Act. 'Such period' should be defined so that the money-lenders may know it that they have got the licence for a period of so many years. I know that the Government is bent upon turning down even the most reasonable of amendemnts. It does not even consent to the application being made by post or otherwise. I know that it does not like to save the money-lender from this little worry even. But I submit that it should well consider the present amendment before it rejects it. The period for which the licence is to be granted should be fixed and should not be left to the mercy of the collector.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in lines 4—5 for the words "for such period" the words "for five years" be substituted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): I wish just to say a few words to show the desirability of the omission of these words. The clause as it stands, says that money-lenders may apply to the collector for a licence which shall be granted for such period, in such form, on such conditions and on payment of such fees as may be prescribed.

Premier: Unless he is removed.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Again he has to pay in that case.

Premier: If his name is removed.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Quite right. That means double payment. Still if registration is to be made permanent. Subject to contingencies which might make it necessary for the collector to remove the money-lender's name from the register, why should not the licence also be made permanent, unless the licence-holder commits some offence which necessitates the cancellation of that licence. My submission is that in olden times there was no doubt a rule that the licences of pleaders were renewed from year to year or for some time, though the advocates' licences were not liable to renewal. Then a rule was made that on payment of certain fee in a lump sum, the licence is granted to all the advocates once for all and no renewal from year to year or from time to time is necessary. My submission is that just as registration of money-lenders is to be made only once for all, but is liable to cancellation on the commission or omission of certain things so the licence should also be permanent being only liable to cancellation when a certain thing has been done, but if he goes on honestly and regularly and does not commit any offence or dishonesty or does not omit to do what he is required to do under this Act, why should he be put to the trouble of renewing his licence and to the expense of having to do it every year. If I am not mistaken, in this Bill no fee has yet been mentioned for the grant of a licence, I do not know whether this is also to be made a source of income to the Government or it is only going to be a nominal fee although I suspect from certain speeches and writings of the Honourable Minister of Development that he had in view this tax on the money-lenders for the augmentation of the revenues of the province and it is probable that this idea is working in the minds of the Government when they are prescribing these fees and these periodical renewals of licences and periodical payments of fees. I do not know what fees they are going to fix, because they have left it to the rules and it may please Chaudhri Chhotu Ram to say, 'Well, money-lenders ex-hypothesi are very rich and ex-hypothesi very dishonest, so let us get a little share of their wealth and also punish them for their dishonesty and ask them to pay Rs. 500 as licence fee or Rs. 50'. My submission is that there is no justification for making this licence only a temporary one. Why should not they be given a licence once for all when they are made subject to cancellation on the omission or commission of certain things?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): I pointed out the other day that under the scheme of the Act as it has now developed, licensing is practically useless. It is unnecessary duplication of work when registration and licensing have both been made automatic. It is absolutely undesirable that a person should be made to go through two procedures under the scheme of the Act. A person has now, in order to get himself registered, to apply and on payment of certain amount of fee and on filing in a certain form, he will be automatically registered. Similarly if he wishes to obtain a licence he has only to apply and the grant of licence will be automatic. The words 'subject to conditions in section 6,' have just now been deleted. If the period of licence is over and he wants to renew his licence then also he has only to put in an application and the renewal of the licence is also automatic. Therefore, separate licensing appears to me to be entirely useless. Such duplication of procedure is entirely uncalled for. Therefore, the motion of Sir Gokul Chand Narang that licensing might be permanent should in the circumstances commend itself to the House but if that is not acceptable, the lesser of the two evils would be the motion of Munshi Hari Lal that licensing may be for five years.

It appears that those who are responsible for the Bill have, in spite of the protestations of the Premier to the contrary, an intention of making it a fiscal measure. That would appear from section 13, sub-clause 2 (b) where it is laid down that the provincial Government may make rules for determining the scale of fees payable for the issue or renewal of a licence of a money-lender. I submit that after the statement of the Premier it would be entirely wrong to presume that the Government has any other intention except that openly and deliberately expressed by the Premier on the floor of this House and, therefore, if the fiscal aspect of the question is ruled out, then the licences to be granted every year would only mean additional work to the collector and unnecessary and avoidable hardship to the licensee. Therefore, I wholeheartedly support the amendment in the first instance of Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang and, if that is not acceptable, the amendment of Munshi Hari Lal.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): I am afraid I have to trouble the House every time these amendments are moved. I thought that I had made myself quite clear on the previous amendment. The objects of keeping these words in this particular clause are to give Government an opportunity to provide in the rule itself the methods of licensing and the period of licensing. I have, as my honourable friend Mr. Mukand Lal Puri just stated, deliberately on the floor of this House declared that the Government has, at present, no intention of making this Bill a fiscal measure; and I can assure them that it is not with a view to making it a productive measure, as you might call it, from the point of view of helping the exchequer that we would frame those rules. I am not prepared at this stage to commit myself that they will not provide for annual renewal—that the licence will not be annually renewable. In England the period fixed is one year. The licence there has to be renewed annually. Here also, very likely, we will have to make it an annually renewable licence.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Horrible.

Premier: But there are several other considerations which would have to be kept in view in framing rules and laying down conditions. For instance, a money-lender may be doing business in a particular area only. Therefore, subject to any decision which the Government might later take, my own tentative view is that it would be unfair to charge him the same fee as from a money-lender who operates throughout the province. It is obvious that a money-lender whose business is restricted within the limits of a tahsil or a district, should be asked to pay less than a money-lender who has got his business connections or ramifications throughout the province.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Lawyers pay the same fee.

Premier : We are not talking of lawyers. Let us take the case of a game licence. If you take it for a district you have to pay a smaller fee, but if you want it for the province you pay a bigger fee and if you want one for the whole of India you have to pay a still bigger fee. On that analogy money-lenders also, if they restrict their trade to a district, should have to pay a smaller fee and if they decide to extend it to the whole province, they ought to pay a bigger fee.

Munshi Hari Lal : Will it be more lethal than a gun ?

Premier : It might be more lethal for a certain type of people. I am talking of the dishonest money-lenders and not of honest money-lenders, who are friends of the people. I can give this much assurance to my friends opposite that when the rules are prescribed, we will keep all these various factors in view and I can again give an assurance that we do not at the moment propose to convert it into a fiscal measure. Beyond that I am afraid I cannot give any undertaking.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Lahore City, General, Urban) (Trdu) : Sir, I may submit that the need for such an amendment has arisen, because we want that that form and period should be fixed under which a money-lender shall have to apply for a licence. On reading the report of the select committee one feels that the Government have reserved the right of determining the form and making rules to themselves. Moreover, when the Government frame these rules, they will not bring them before the House. It is, therefore, felt that we should express our ideas by moving this amendment. The Honourable Premier has given an assurance, but I submit that if he gives us this much assurance that when the rules are framed, he will place them on the table of the House, then this amendment would not be required at this stage but we would move this amendment at the time when the rules come before the House.

There is the question whether the licence should be taken annually or after five years or only once for all. If the Honourable Premier gives us the above mentioned assurance, then it will not be necessary to discuss this question at this time. If, however, he is not prepared to give that assurance, then we have no other alternative but to discuss the amendment just now, whether the licence which would be given to the sahukar under this Act, should be renewed after one year, five years or ten years.

I am of opinion that after we have registered the money-lenders, it is not good that we should renew their licences annually unless and until a new rule is framed under which it would be necessary to renew the money-lender's licence. For example, if once a form is adopted for the granting of a licence and a money-lender, whether he is an agriculturist or a non-agriculturist, agreeing on that form decides to take it after signing his name, its renewal would be required only when that money-lender wishes to affect any change in that licence or when any change is affected in the rules. In the latter case, we can only ask the money-lender that such and such a rule has been newly framed and that he should get his licence renewed. As long as one of the two situations does not arise, I do not see any reason why the licence of a money-lender should be renewed annually. If the Honourable Premier were to let us know why this taking out of licences is necessary annually, then, of course, we can decide whether the licence should be renewed annually, after two years or after five years. We have suggested that for the present the licence should be given for five years and if during that time it is found out that this period is not sufficient, then, of course, we will ask the Government to amend the section. For the present we feel that the period of five years must be fixed, after which a money-lender may be required to renew his licence and if after some time we come to the conclusion that the taking of a licence periodically is not necessary, we shall have to make a request to the Government to provide that a licence taken once will hold good for ever. I may assure the Government that I see no reason why it should be necessary for a money-lender to renew his licence every year and in fact no reasons have been given on which we could agree to this provision. Because no such reasons have been given and we ourselves are not convinced that renewal is necessary every year, we cannot permit the Government to do whatever it likes so far as this matter is concerned.

One thing more that I would like to say in this connection is that no responsible Government should reserve to itself very extensive and arbitrary powers and flout the opinion of those who have come here in the Assembly to advise the Government with a view to facilitate the work of administration. Of course, if there is some secret motive behind this provision, then it is different but if that is not so, why should we leave this entirely to the discretion of the executive? I may as well say that I shall be too glad to withdraw this opposition and leave the matter here if we are assured that before finally framing the rules on the point an opportunity will be given to us to have our say and to suggest improvements in those rules.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural): Sir, two similar amendments stand in my name. In connection with this amendment I have to lay before this Honourable House only one aspect of the question: namely either a particular period should be fixed for which it would be necessary for the money-lender to obtain the licence or it should be left to the discretion of the money-lender to decide the period for which he wants to obtain the licence. It would be extremely harmful and undesirable to the money-lender that he should be required to obtain the licence every year. I may point out in this connection the classes and the variety of money-lenders who would be required to obtain the licence. A petty money-lender shall be required to obtain a licence as well as a very big money-lender. Sir, you can well understand how extremely inconvenient and to some extent how expensive it will be for the small money-lender. You should also take into consideration the fact that the money-lenders of all classes shall have to come to the collector from distant parts of the district and they will be subjected to a good deal of inconvenience. The Government is going to lay down certain rules in regard to the licensing of the money-lender. Let them lay down such rules and if he complies with those rules there is no reason why he should be forced to obtain a licence every year or every second year. You take as many precautions as you want and after that has been done the money-lender should not be forced to obtain the licence every year. There will be lot of money-lenders who do not carry on money-lending themselves, for instance, a minor, an orphan or a female. Some of the money-lenders will inherit money-lending from other people. It may not be very difficult for men who attend courts every day to go to the collector's office but it will be extremely difficult for a minor or a female to obtain a licence. Therefore, at least this concession should be shown that it should be left to the money-lender to decide the period for which he wants to obtain the licence. In the case of a licensee it is a general rule that a licence is given to a licensee for the period for which he wants to practise a particular profession. Supposing a money-lender wants to practise money-lending business only for a stated number of years, if he wants to give it up, there is no reason why the period should be fixed. It is a very reasonable amendment and all the amendments which are going to be considered collectively are reasonable. The fixation of the period should be left either to the money-lender or a particular period should be fixed.

Munshi Hari Lal : Sir, in spite of the statement made by the Honourable the Premier the House is in the dark as to the period which is going to be fixed for a licence. The Honourable the Premier does not say one way or the other. I submit that the period is uncertain. We do not know what will be the period for which a money-lender should get a licence. If it is yearly, it means the money-lender has to dance attendance on the collector every year. He will be put to an expense, and there will be corruption, jobbery and nepotism and slavery. I submit that the money-lender, who is so much abused by the Unionist party, should be saved from this worry at least. He should know for how much period his licence stands so that at the end of this period he may think of getting it renewed.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) (Urdu) : Sir, I have already made the position of the Government very clear in this matter and even on this occasion I was about to say that the members would do well to send in their proposals before these rules are actually framed and published. I can assure them that their suggestions will be carefully considered and it is possible that they might be of help to us in framing the rules. But if they mean only to criticise the rules when we have framed them and when they are published in their final form, then I can only say that they will be acting like the person who would not assist in cooking meal but is always ready to find fault after it has been cooked.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : But who is going to listen to what we may say?

Premier : As I have already said the the suggestions received from the honourable members will be duly considered. Let my friends Dr. Narang, Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and Dr. Gopi Chand send in their suggestions and they can take it from me that very careful consideration will be given to them.

My honourable friend, Lala Duni Chand, made a complaint that it would be very inconvenient for the money-lenders if they were to be required to get their licences renewed every year. I concede that this renewal business will cause some inconvenience to the money-lenders just as it causes inconvenience to the pleaders, and particularly those practising in the mufassil and those who have sometimes to appear in the courts for a trifling fee and yet they have to renew their licences every year and to pay as much as Rs. 25 for that renewal.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Please do not insult them like that.

Premier : I am not talking of those who are practising at the headquarters and who like my friend, Munshi Hari Lal, may be earning several hundred rupees a month but of those who may be really finding it difficult to get their licences renewed every year. Some honourable members appear to think that Government will derive a substantial income by means of this measure. That is not correct. It is not the intention of the Government to make money out of it. Our object is to regulate business. By doing so we might drive out of the profession dishonest money-lenders but will try to provide all facilities to the honest money-lenders and it is for this reason that we want time to consider how best we can secure that object. It is for this reason that we have not fixed any period in the Bill itself because we want to see in what way we can legitimately assist the honest money-lender in his business. Let me illustrate my point. Supposing we fix five years as the period for renewal of a licence. In that case naturally the fee will be bigger than if it would be for an annually renewable licence. (Voices : But why?) The answer is obvious. Government is not to be run by subscriptions. We will require money to administer efficiently. To-morrow you will ask, why have police at all? (Voices : But the Police Department is not a revenue paying department.) Under the Police Act, Government derives some income and if all the wishes of some of the honourable members opposite were to be accepted it would become very difficult to carry on the work of Government.

I have already explained more than once that it is not the present intention of Government to make this measure a fiscal one. It is intended to be an administrative measure and it will be worked as such. But how can I accede to the requests of my friends opposite who want me to tax the zamindar to find money to work this Act? It will be sheer injustice if the money-lender is allowed to carry on his profession and the burden of the Government expenditure with respect to that profession is made to fall on the shoulders of the zamindar.

My honourable friend, Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava, has observed that the Government should not take any responsibility for such a measure. I want to impress upon him the fact that carrying on the Government necessarily entails certain responsibilities and there is no escape from them. Does my honourable friend mean to say that we should leave the responsibilities of Government to other people? If I am not to assume responsibility for the acts of my Government, I should like to know who will? My shoulders are broad and strong enough for such responsibilities and I mean to bear them.

Mr. Speaker : The amendment is that—

In lines 4—5 for the words "for such period" the words "for five years" be substituted.

But I would put it as follows. The question is that—

In lines 4-5, the words "for such period" stand part of the clause.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural): I beg to move—

That in line 6, between the words "period" and "in" the words "as may be fixed by the money-lender" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural): I beg to MOVE—

That in line 6, the words "and on such conditions" be omitted.

My point is that already too many hardships have been placed on the money-lender in the matter of obtaining a licence. No further hardship should be placed on him. It is with that object that I move this amendment. After all money-lending has been acknowledged as a legitimate profession to pursue. I can understand if it is considered a crime to pursue the profession of money-lending. But it has been recognised as one of the legitimate trades in which a person can engage himself and it is considered as honourable as any other. There are honest money-lenders as there are honest people in other walks of life. The general presumption also is that every person carries on his profession honestly until it is proved to the contrary. When that is the case and when it has been recognised that a money-lender is an economic asset to society, I do not see why further restrictions should be imposed on him. It is unjust, unfair and inequitable. With these words I commend my amendment for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in line 6, the words "and on such conditions" be omitted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General Rural): I rise to support the amendment. I may point out that if these words are retained in the clause it will give rise to many flaws. As it is, we do not know what those conditions are going to be. The Premier has again and again said that he will frame rules and provide for everything there. These rules are going to be framed behind our back and it is not even provided that they will be placed before the House for its approval.

[Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.]

They will come into force on publication in the Gazette. That will not meet the situation at all. One of the rules may say that a licence shall not be renewed if the person is disloyal. Who is to interpret what is loyalty and what is disloyalty? It will be one of those gentlemen sitting on the Treasury benches. He may interpret loyalty to mean personal homage to be paid to the Ministers and disloyalty may mean criticising the Muslim League which might soon develop into a ruling organisation in this province. The present clause therefore is fraught with all sorts of evils. I do not know what the Honourable Premier has up his sleeves. He is not placing all the cards on the table. Why should he not put in a few more clauses in the Bill and disarm those people of all kinds of suspicions, doubts and misapprehensions? Keeping everything for the rules and not placing those rules before this House will certainly not satisfy the members of this House.

When Dr. Gopi Chand said it is a responsible Government and it should do this and that the Honourable Premier said: 'Yes, we are a responsible Government, we do not shirk our business, we have got broad shoulders and we are prepared to take the burden on ourselves'. This is not what Dr. Gopi Chand meant. What he meant was that you are our servants. (Premier: We are here to carry out the behests of the people.) We also belong to this province and you have to carry out what we say. The Honourable Premier said: "Let Dr. Gopi Chand make rules and send in, let Mr. Puri send in the rules." Why, only to be insulted? All these gentlemen who have not the guts to argue properly and are not fairminded enough to accept even reasonable proposals, invite us to make suggestions. What are we doing now? Are we not now making suggestions? We are making suggestions. But how are our suggestions being treated? You ask people privately, ask members of your own party privately, they say, 'yeh zulum to hai.' (Voices: Question. Who are they?) I am not going to name them. They are voting with you, because they consider their party discipline is perhaps even more important than their own conscience.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I have finished.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General Rural): Sir, on the face of it this amendment appears to be of a very ordinary character and as it relates to the inclusion or non-inclusion of certain words—three words—it appears to be of an insignificant character. But I respectfully submit that these three words 'on such conditions,' meaning that the collector may grant the licence on such conditions as he thinks fit, takes away in the first instance the entire legislative powers of this House. It has been pointed out that in England the executive is assuming powers and depriving the legislature of its legitimate functions. When there are certain conditions which can be imposed on the exercise of the profession of money-lending by money-lenders, let them be laid down here and let them be voted upon by the House. It is very necessary that permissible "conditions" should be placed before the House and should be voted upon by the House rather than that they should be left to the discretion of an executive officer. Again, this is a matter which should never be left to the discretion of the executive Government. Fancy such:

a matter being left to the discretion of 25 collectors in this province, who might exercise their discretion on entirely different grounds and in totally different manners. It is broadly stated that the collector is authorised to grant the licence to the money-lender "on such conditions as he thinks necessary." To one money-lender he may grant the licence saying, "you are permitted to lend on bonds and promotes alone." To another he might say, 'you are permitted to lend money on bahi account alone.' To yet another he may say, 'you should carry on money-lending in towns and small towns of this district but not in notified areas.' (Interruption). I hear voices of 'no, no.' If that is not so, provide it here. Is the collector, for instance, entitled to lay down any such conditions? If you allow these words to stand, there is nothing to prevent the collector from doing so and certainly it is not the intention of the House that such vast powers should be vested in any individual. Again, we are all familiar with the provision which exists in the licences of certain professions. For instance, those of us lawyers, who practice in courts, have a foot note printed on the licence of the second grade pleaders, which states that one of the conditions of the licence is that the licensee shall not take part in any movement of a subversive character or in any seditious movement. Now what is there, if these words are allowed to stand in this Bill, to prevent the collector from putting in a condition that this licence is subject, as Sir Gokul Chand Narang put it, to the loyal behaviour of the licensee? Therefore, I respectfully submit that it is very necessary that these words should be omitted. They should be omitted on the broad ground that if any conditions are to be laid down they should be put before the legislature and passed by it. In the interests of uniformity also it is necessary that those conditions should be laid down. Further, if you allow these words to remain, you will be practically negating the effect of the various clauses of the Bill which you have already passed. You have laid down that the original registration and licensing is to be automatic and that the renewal of the licence is also to be automatic. If at the time of the granting of the licence or its renewal, in the case of five out of 100 money-lenders in a district, you lay down a restrictive condition, the automatic nature of the licence or registration or of the renewal goes out altogether. Therefore, if the intention of the Government is that these things should be automatic, they should be pleased to accept the suggestion of Lala Duni Chand and delete the words 'on such condition.' In any case it is up to the Government to lay down in the Act itself, if they so desire, that the registration or licensing or the renewal should be on such and such conditions. They ought to lay down what precisely those conditions are. Even if they are not prepared to do that, they should at any rate take the House into their confidence as to what their intention is, as to what the nature and extent of those conditions can and might be. Therefore, I whole-heartedly support the amendment moved by Lala Duni Chand and request the Government that they should not give such a carte blanche to their collectors who at the best of times are over-burdened officials.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, used strong language in supporting this motion.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Which word ?

Premier : But this is not going to provoke me. He can rest assured that nothing by way of strong language can provoke me, because I believe in that well-known adage that strong words are no substitute for good arguments. He said that we do not even answer his arguments. I confess that. I have no capacity or inclination to answer arguments which I consider wholly fatuous and irrelevant. For instance, another capable lawyer got up a few seconds ago and tried to convince this House that these words in the clause are likely to give power to the collector which he will use arbitrarily. I am surprised that a lawyer of his calibre should try to confuse the House and confuse issues like this. There is no such intention. If you read that clause, you will find that it is not the collector who will lay down the conditions but it is the Government which will lay down such conditions and if my honourable friend studies clause 13 (c), he will find that the conditions under which the collector will grant the licence will be prescribed by Government. Nevertheless ignoring this specific clause the honourable member was on his legs for ten minutes trying to convince this House that we are giving this power to the collector which he will be using arbitrarily and to the detriment of the money-lender. If these are the arguments which we are not capable of meeting, I am at one with my honourable friend and I confess my incapacity. But as regards the merits of the motion, if my honourable friend has seen clause 13 of the Bill, he will find that we have made the necessary provision there. We have used these words in this clause, because we have not laid down any period for this renewal in the body of this Bill, that would be one of the conditions to be prescribed. We will lay down this condition in the rule itself that the licence shall be renewed for a period of one year or two years or may be for five years. Unless we reserve that power for ourselves in the Act itself it may subsequently be questioned whether we have the power to make these rules and these rules may be considered ultra vires as going beyond the scope of the Act itself. It is for that reason that we want to put in these words, but I can assure my honourable friend, that it is not our intention to give that power to the collector. The collector will obey the rules which we prescribe and it is for this reason that we have used these words. My honourable friends who are lawyers know that if an Act were to contain all the working details under which it is to be applied then it would become a cumbersome measure and even in spite of its cumbersomeness it may yet be found later to be unworkable because we might miss just one small screw or rivet. It is for that reason that in all enactments the rule making power is taken by Government subject to certain limitations and these limitations are contained in clause 3 (2). If you see the English Money-lenders Act, you will find that the Secretary of State has rule making power and under that power he frames rules and you will also find that under that Act penalties are laid down for any infringement. Therefore, I hope that after hearing me my honourable friend, Lala Duni Chand, will agree that these words are essential in order to give Government power to lay down necessary instructions for the collector. (Hear, hear.)

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar (North-Western Towns, General, Urban) : The Honourable Premier has tried to assure the House that this power is intended to be taken because he does not want to leave the period of the licence in the hands of the collector. If this is the only idea—

Premier : No. Not the only idea. There are several other things.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Then why not say so ?

Premier : I have said so.

Lala Duni Chand : If it had been possible for me to agree with the Honourable Premier, with regard to the interpretation that he seeks to put on this clause, I would have gladly done so. I do not claim to be as capable a lawyer as Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang or Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, but so far as the interpretation of the Honourable Premier goes, I join issues with him. I submit that if the words had been 'conditions as may be prescribed' the Honourable Premier would have been perfectly right and in that case it would have been in the power of the Government to make rules, but there are no such words. The plain meaning of this clause is that these powers are given to the collector to impose such conditions as he likes. I suggest to the Honourable Premier and I think that Mr. Manohar Lal and Sir Chhotu Ram would agree with me, that so far as you do not qualify such conditions, it would mean that these conditions are to be prescribed by the collector. This is the clear meaning of the words as they stand. If he is prepared to add the words as prescribed, I shall be glad to accept the clause. It appears there are three kinds of authorities that are going to put as many halters round the neck of a bania, as they can. There is the Premier as the legislator. He has put as many halters round the bania's neck, as he could. Then power has been given to the rule-making committee. That would be an executive conclave and there you can make any rule you like and then you have given further power to the collector. Be fair and straightforward. Do what you like here in this House, but do not take further powers and give them to the rule making committee or the executive conclave or the collector. I say, come out in the open and put as many halters as you like round the neck of the poor bania, but you should not act in this way. That is not a fair game. The Honourable Premier very often refers to cricket in support of fairness. I appeal to the sense of fairness of the Premier. If you want to impose conditions, do so by all means, but do so openly and in this House and not in the committees and do not take more and more powers.

Premier I am not a lawyer and, therefore, may not be inclined to join issues with my honourable friend on legal matters, but the point now raised is a simple one of following the King's English. I wish to convince my honourable friend that the words which he wants to be added are already in the clause. If he will kindly follow me, I will read the clause very slowly. It reads—

"shall be granted for such period, in such form, and on such conditions, and on payment of such fees as may be prescribed."

Now if my honourable friend's contention is that 'may be prescribed' should have been after 'such conditions', I will join issue with him that it is not necessary. Therefore, so far as the construction of

[Premier.]

English is concerned, for the reasons that you suggest, the addition of the words 'such condition' as proposed will make no sense.

I might also point out to my honourable friend that the word, 'prescribed' is already defined in this Bill. No doubts or misgivings therefore, should exist on this point. Other points I have already explained.

Mr. Speaker : In my opinion the word 'and' in the last but one line of the clause is superfluous and it is that which is creating confusion.

Premier : I submit that it is not superfluous, because it relates to a definite matter contained here, and there are several different things and therefore 'and' is used there. Even if it is superfluous, the drafting committee can look to it. Perhaps a comma after the word 'fees' will make it clearer.

Mr. Speaker : Commas and punctuations are not part of legislation. Therefore commas do not matter.

Premier : It is the commas that have confused my honourable friends opposite. If you remove all the commas the clause would be quite clear and the use of the word 'such' before 'period,' 'form' 'conditions' and 'fees' makes it obvious that the words 'as may be prescribed' qualify them all.

4 P.M.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That the words "and on such conditions" occurring in line 6 of clause 5 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban): I move—

That in lines 6—7, the words "and on payment of such fees" be deleted.

There is no doubt about the fact that the fee in the Money-Lenders Act of England is fixed and, similarly, I submit that in this Act also the fees should be fixed. The fees should not be left to the discretion of the provincial Government. We should know definitely what is the fee that has to be charged and what is the principle that is going to govern the fees. We know nothing at present. We are leaving it to the provincial Government. The words 'as may be prescribed' indicate that the Government may make the rule on a principle which is not even known to the House and about which we are quite in the dark. Are they going to fix a specified fee or are they going to fix the fees on a sliding scale? Are they going to fix the fee for the tahsil, for the district, for the division or for the province? What is in the mind of the provincial Government we do not at all know. My submission is that it will be to the advantage of the moneylender if we know in the Act itself as to what is the fee that he has to pay. It will be seen that there is a series of amendments bearing on this question, some relate to Rs. 5, others to Rs. 10 and others to Re. 1. In the Insurance Act that was recently passed by the Government of India, only one rupee has been fixed as the fee for the licence of an insurance agent but here we do not know what multiple of one will be the fee fixed by the Government. I submit that in order to be clear to the money-lenders, the fee should be fixed. I submit that the words "and on payment of such fees" should be deleted. Licensing and registration should go hand in hand. It should be the registration and not the licence that should confer the right upon the money-lender to go to the court. When he has paid the registration fee, where is the necessity for paying for the licence? The registration fee and the licence fee should be one and the same. So, I sum up my arguments on all the amendments that have to be moved. I submit that the words "and on payment of such fees" should be entirely deleted. There should be only one fee fixed for registration which should suffice for licensing also. If the Government is not prepared to show this favour to the money-lender, then the fee to be fixed should not be more than one rupee as it is in the case of the insurance agent. With these words I move the amendment that the words 'and on payment of such fees' be deleted and that the fee, if it is to be fixed should be only one rupee.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in lines 6—7, the words "and on payment of such fees" be deleted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I have also an amendment and lest I should forget it I shall move it even now. I move—

That in line 7 between the words "fees" and "as" the words "not exceeding Rs. 5" be inserted.

Mr. Speaker : One amendment is already moved.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : You may then take it as not moved. I will move it later if necessary.

There are two principles involved in a discussion of this kind. One is whether the Government should withhold from this House their intention regarding the amount of fees and condition with respect to the grant of a licence. The other is the amount that should be charged. The first one is much more important as it involves a constitutional question. The only reply that the Premier had to give to this part of the argument was, "if we do not leave it to the rules, the Bill will become or the Act, when the Bill is passed, will become too cumbersome." We have had Acts which are very lengthy and which have hundreds of clauses and we have Acts which have very few clauses, say, 10, 12 and sometimes even less than that. But my submission is that when a piece of legislation affects the monetary interests of a large class of people—interests of some 55 thousand people or, even according to the Premier 30 thousand people—who, according to him, are sure to get themselves registered and would apply for a licence, there seems to be no reason why the Government should not lay its cards on the table and allow this House to have a voice in the matter. I urged it then and I urge it again, why do they fight shy of taking the House into their confidence and then appeal to the members to send in their suggestions? The Honourable the Premier was certainly very lucky when he pounced upon one slip made by one of the honourable speakers or rather where there was some room for a difference of opinion at the utmost. He was not really fully justified in subjecting Mr. Puri and Lala Duni Chand to the castigation to which he subjected them. There is room for difference of opinion, but even if there was not, any one can make a slip. That does not mean that all the arguments urged by this side are unsound or are simply urged in order to waste the time of the House. My submission is that it does involve a very important and serious principle. If they are frank and if they are honest, why do they not say, "this is our opinion". Then we shall be in a position to express our opinion. Sir, you will see that in the previous clause they have actually prescribed Rs. 5. They have said so, although in the original clause Rs. 5 was not mentioned. It means that somebody made a suggestion in the select committee. It was a reasonable suggestion and they accepted it ; but here they seem to have something else in their mind. Why did they not accept the suggestion if it was made or why do they not accept the suggestion now being made ? Let them take the House into their confidence and say, "This is the amount of licence fee that we are going to charge." The Honourable the Premier said in another place, "We do not know whether a money-lender is going to extend the operations over the whole province or over one or two districts or over a tahsil or over a more restricted area." My submission is, they can say, "Well, for a provincial practitioner they will charge so much fee for the licence, for a district practitioner they will charge so much and for a tahsil so much." But let us know in any case what they intend to do. Why are they keeping it back from the House ? Secrecy always creates suspicion and it is in their own interest that they should say what they intend to do. I may tell you, Sir, that when the Honourable the Premier came out with, what he said to be an assurance, he said that the licences would in all probability be renewed every year. Now I was simply surprised when the Honourable the Premier said it was an assurance, as if it would re-assure the people who had some doubts or suspicions on the point. No arguments have been given why a licence should be renewed every year and then again, if it is to be renewed every year what fee is to be expected. If they do not intend that the fees should be excessive, why do they not say so ? If they want high fees, why do they not say that this is a fiscal measure ? It becomes a fiscal measure if high fees are charged. My submission is that instead of leaving the matter to the rules they should make it clear in the sub-clause.

Lala Sita Ram (Trade Union, Labour) : Sir, I have stood up to lend my support to the motion moved by my honourable friend, Munshi Hari Lal. As a good deal of discussion has already taken place on this subject, I do not propose to speak at length. I have to simply draw your attention to a few points which I urged even in the select committee.

It has been said on behalf of the Government that it is not their intention to increase taxation by introducing this measure. They simply want to make it hot for the dishonest money lenders to carry on his bad business. On the other hand, it is intended to encourage the honest money-lender. So far so good. But what do we find in practice ? Even the honest money-lender is put to a lot of trouble. He is to be taxed twice at least—once at the time of registration and again at the time of taking out a licence. I want to urge upon this House and on the Government that the money-lender is already paying sufficient taxes. He is paying a lot by way of income-tax. I shall give you an instance. If a money-lender realises one rupee as interest on the loan advanced by him he has to pay as much as two or two and-a-half annas out of this one rupee by way of taxes. Over and above all this, the Government is imposing a double penalty or double punishment, as I shall prefer to call it, in the shape of registration fee and licence fee. One word more and I have done, and that is that the fee payable for the issue of a licence should be of a uniform nature. It should not vary with the position of the money lender as the object of the Bill is not a fiscal one as assured by the Honourable Premier more than once. With these words, I support Munshi Hari Lal's motion.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): Sir, I am afraid there appears to be some unnecessary misunderstanding with regard to this clause. The Honourable the Leader of the House has made it definitely clear that it is not the intention of the Government at present to treat this measure as a fiscal measure. That, I submit, should be enough assurance to all fair-minded sections of the House so far as the intentions of the Government are concerned. Moreover, they will find in clause 18 that it is definitely provided that the rules will be notified and that they will be subject to previous publication. As such, the rules will be in the possession of the members of the House and of the province before they are enforced. That being the position, there should be no misunderstanding. If any honourable member feels aggrieved with regard to any draft rules it will be open to him at the next session or at the proper time to come forward with an amendment or a resolution as he may consider necessary. Moreover, it is ignored by my honourable friend opposite that the business of moneylending in this province is a very complicated affair. There are firms, joint families, there are money-lenders doing more than one business. There are money-lenders who deal with certain parts of the districts or divisions or the whole of the province. All these factors will have to be carefully considered before Government prescribes the fees for licensing. Therefore it would not be fair at this stage to expect the Government to put forward clear-cut rules which would apply to all such cases. Secondly, let it be frankly recognised that the whole problem of taxation in the province is just now in the melting pot. There is the Resources and Retrenchment Committee whose report is expected and it would not be proper for the Government at this stage to rush into a definite commitment. The Bill is not a fiscal measure to-day. It may be so three years hence, and if it is then decided with the concurrence of the House to raise the fees, why should it be necessary to go through the rigidity of an amending law and why should we not in the beginning leave matters to rules which can conveniently be altered? Then, it may be found that the fees are too high for certain type of money-lenders and they may have to be revised. Sir, there is another point to be considered. You will find various amendments cited by my friends opposite suggesting different principles of assessment, in certain cases fluctuating and in other cases a fixed scale is suggested, in still other cases some other principles have been introduced. All these matters will be carefully gone into by Government before the Act is finally enforced. I am sure after the statement made by the Honourable the Premier the House may rest assured that it is not intended at present to impose heavy fees. My honourable friend has referred to the English Act. I am sure he does not desire that we may provide the fees prescribed in the English Act which is a fee of £ 15 annually and £ 10 for six-monthly licensing.

Munshi Hari Lal: Sir, there are certain points which require reply from this side of the House. The Honourable Premier as well as the honourable member, who has just spoken said, that there is at present no intention to make the Bill a fiscal measure. What do these words "at present" mean? Do they mean to-day and not when they are making these rules?

[Munshi Fari Lal.]

They say that at present it is not the intention to make it a fiscal measure, but this will hardly satisfy any member in this House, much less anybody outside. I submit that these very words will create an alarm when we say that to-morrow the Government's intention might change and this Bill might be converted into a fiscal measure.

We are told that the rules will be before us. Quite right. They will be put before us and opinions may also be invited, but where is the guarantee that those opinions will be honoured? They may be turned down.

It is also said that in the English Money-lenders Act, the fee is £ 15. But I was drawing upon that Act from the only point of view that there the fee is fixed. It may be according to the average income of an individual, but here the Government is going to fix a fee, which may be beyond the income of an ordinary Punjabi.

Then, Sir, it is said that taxation problem is in the melting pot. That is exactly why we fear that at the time when fees are going to be fixed, something by way of taxation may enter the mind of the Government. Then, Sir, it is said that principles would be different. What are the principles? We want to know the principles on which the fee is going to be fixed. The argument that there is absolutely no necessity for charging a separate fee for licences because there is a fee for registration, is not at all being answered or challenged. Why should there be two fees charged for registration and licensing. One fee will suffice in the present circumstances of the Punjab and keeping in view that the income of the Punjabi is not so high as it is in England, a separate fee for a licence should not be charged and if charged it should be slight and fixed. My point of view is that when you are passing this Act, make it as attractive as you can possibly do. But you are giving us your mind that in future you might convert it into a fiscal measure and impose a greater burden upon us. Why not proceed slowly? Why not content yourself with charging only the registration fee and not charging the licensing fee? With these remarks I support the motion.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

In lines 6—7, the words "and on payment of such fees" stand part of the clause.
The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): Sir, I beg to move that—

In line 7, between the words "fees" and "as" the words "not exceeding Rs. 5" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Clause 5 up to Explanation as amended stand part of the Bill.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : You will see, Sir, that during the discussion on numerous amendments moved and rejected, no argument has been advanced directly and definitely on the question of the necessity for this clause. This clause as it stands says—

"Every money-lender may apply to the Collector for a licence, which, subject to the provisions of section 6, shall be granted for such period, in such form, and on such conditions, and on payment of such fees as may be prescribed. ...."

The language as it stands does not make it obligatory for a money-lender to apply for a licence, but as a matter of fact, we find that no money-lender can bring a suit nor can even put in an application for execution of a decree which he might have obtained even before the passing of this Act, unless he not only gets himself registered, but also holds a licence either at the time of the institution of the suit or before he asks the court to pass a decree in his favour or to pass a final order on his application for execution. In other words, this section has been worded in a most suspicious form, so that if one were to read this section it might look very innocent. It is not obligatory for a money-lender to apply for a licence. He may or may not, because the word used in the clause is 'may.' It does not say 'shall.' They could not say 'shall', because a money-lender may say, 'As there is no hope of realising anything, why should I waste Rs. 5 on taking out a licence? Thanks to Chaudhr Sahib or Sardar Sahib, there is no possibility of any money being realised, why waste even Rs. 5, on taking out a licence?' So the only word they could use was 'may.' As I have pointed out, it is full of great mischief, because unless one takes out a licence, one cannot take the help of the court at all in realising his debts. Then again, when the money-lender takes out a licence, he has to get it renewed, because we find a reference to renewal and we find a reference to the conditions on which a licence is to be granted and the conditions on which a licence is to be cancelled and conditions on which it is to be renewed and so on. So, this clause really, I would say, is the crux of the whole Bill because without saying that it is obligatory, it makes it absolutely necessary for a money-lender if at all he cares to realise his debts, to take out a licence. It has been argued that this Bill is based on the recommendations of the Banking Enquiry Committee. If you will turn to the Banking Enquiry Committee's Report you will find at page 142 the question of taking out a licence is discussed. It seems that the members of this Committee made extensive enquiries, heard many people interested in the matter and after hearing them they arrived at this conclusion. The conclusion is embodied in paragraph 217 of their report. With your permission I shall read a few lines therefrom--

With a view to providing cheaper credit facilities for those who are not members of co-operative societies, it has been suggested that selected money-lenders should be licensed and given special facilities for carrying on their business on condition, inter alia, that they should not charge more than a certain rate of interest, say 12 per cent. We have carefully considered this suggestion; and, though we realise that the co-operative thrift and credit movement has so far touched only 11 per cent. of the population, and that, even if the proposals made in Chapter XI are accepted, it must be twelve to fifteen years before every suitable village obtains a co-operative society, we are of opinion that the suggestion is not practicable. Few money-lenders, we think, would be willing to submit to any restriction in their charges unless they were given special facilities for recovering their debts from defaulters. At present, as explained in Chapter XII, when they sue a client, they have two main difficulties to contend with: decrees cannot be obtained either promptly or cheaply; and, when obtained, they cannot be executed either promptly or fully.

In fact as has been remarked by the Privy Council in some cases the difficulties of a money-lender or decree-holder really begin when he has obtained the decree, because it is then that all sorts of difficulties are thrown in his way. So long as execution proceedings last, declaratory suits are filed by sons, wives and other relations of the judgment-debtors so that

[Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang.]

These gentlemen were perfectly right when they made these remarks. To go on with the Report:—

The last (that is realisation of debts) is much the greater difficulty of the two; and if licensing is to make any appeal to the money-lender, it would have to be removed, or at least greatly mitigated. This could not be done without prejudicing other interests of equal, if not greater, importance; for instance, co-operative societies, which have been given no special facilities in this respect. Nor could it be done at all unless the number of money-lenders licensed were restricted to comparatively few in each district, a course to which there are obvious objections. We do not therefore support the proposal (of licensing money-lenders).

During the course of this debate you must have noticed that the Honourable Premier has been referring sometimes to the English Money-lenders Act and sometimes to parts of speeches of Premiers and Ministers of other provinces. If you had observed carefully you must have noticed that our Government has been very careful in selecting what was bad in the legislations of other provinces and omitting what was good in them. They have taken all the provisions that are calculated to create difficulties in the way of poor money-lenders and have scrupulously omitted what might have helped them to any extent whatsoever. Only the other day the Honourable Premier referred to the debt legislation in other parts of the country and he referred in particular to the legislation of the Central Provinces. I at once asked him whether there was any provision in our Bill corresponding to the provision in the Central Provinces legislation which after the debts were scaled down helped the creditors to realise their money.

Chaudhri Tikka Ram: The honourable member has already referred to this in his previous speeches and he is repeating the same again.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang: There is no point of order. I am only illustrating my point that the Government has chosen only those provisions which would strangle the money-lenders but have omitted all those provisions which would have done good to them. My submission is that if the Government really wanted that people should be obliged to take out a licence, something at least should have been done to facilitate the realisation of the debts. The Punjab Banking Enquiry Committee rejected the question of licensing on that very ground, namely, that the money-lenders would not like this unless some facilities are afforded to them for the realisation of debts. But those gentlemen were really counting without their hosts, if I may use that expression. They did not know at that time that within a few years of their writing the report a revolutionary change would take place in the constitution of the country and that a government would come into the province which would not care for their opinions nor for the interests of the money-lenders in the least degree and would only do things which would make the position of the money-lenders absolutely untenable in the province. There seems, therefore, to be no justification why people should be compelled to take out licences. I may submit that if the object is not to make the position of the money-lenders difficult there is no justification for charging double fees from them. The only object in asking them to register themselves is to get control over them and to see that they are not allowed to ply their trade without being known who they are. The second object could be that their services might be utilised as middlemen between the Reserve Bank and the rural people, that they might serve as the vehicle of rural credit from the Reserve Bank to the rural people. That object can be achieved by merely asking the money-lenders to register themselves. In fact it was not even necessary to compel them to register themselves. It might have been left to their option, people wishing to derive advantage from registration being allowed to register themselves and those who did not want to derive any advantage from registration and acting as agents of the Reserve Bank for the purposes of extension of rural credit not being compelled to register themselves. In any case mere registration was sufficient for the fulfilment of the purpose of Government. It is very difficult to see the purpose of this double process of registration and licensing. Again, if as pointed out by the Honourable Premier the object of the measure is not fiscal, there is no reason why any fees should be charged as is provided for in this clause. I think Mir Maqbool Mahmood was more candid than his chief when he said that the Government did not want to include any definite amount of fee in the clause, because circumstances might change, a committee is sitting to find out additional sources of revenue and it is possible that that committee might recommend that five or ten lakhs should be recovered from these money-lenders. At any rate this is what I understood him to say: If that has to be done, the Government would not be put to the necessity of coming to this House for altering the amounts, but could itself alter the figures by the rule-making power which it has reserved to itself. But that is exactly the question on which I have to raise objection against this measure. We do not want that Government should have power to alter the rules without any notice being given to this House or even after giving notice to this House. My honourable friend said that the rules would be framed and any honourable member could then bring forward a resolution to amend or rectify any fault in the rules. Apparently he is quite all-right. But let us examine it. Suppose the rules are framed. According to the provisions of this Bill it is not necessary that these rules should be placed before the House for its approval. The only requirement is that it should be published. There is nothing in it compelling the Government to come forward with a motion for the approval of the rules. Now, assuming that any member can bring in a motion in regard to these rules, that he can bring forward a resolution for the amendment or modification of the rules framed by the Government, we all know what the fate of the resolution moved by the Opposition will be. In the first place it is not necessary nor likely that any resolution of which notice is given by a member of the Opposition would survive the ballot. But let us assume that it survives the ballot and is placed before the House. It is bound to be rejected. There is a great difference between a resolution and a Bill which is to be passed into an Act. They may say, "If we can defeat a resolution we can also defeat an amendment to a Bill, we have got the majority and we can amend a Bill whenever we like." But there is a difference. The passing of a Bill does not end here, does not rest entirely and finally with this House. There are some other people who are outside this House and who have some say in the matter and by reserving this thing for the rules they are trying to keep the higher authorities out of the show altogether and depriving the opposition of the benefit of drawing the attention of those who can veto a Bill. So far as the modification of a rule is concerned, nobody else outside this House or outside the Government has any voice, and even if these rules are placed before this House, they can be carried. There is no power to veto them. It is only a Bill on which somebody else outside this House and outside the Government can have a say. I am sure I have made the position clear that the reserving of the power of making rules to the Government in this Bill would not satisfy the Opposition. Our contention is that the position should be made clear on the floor of this House and all these things should be embodied in the Bill. This contention is perfectly sound and reasonable and it is only the high handedness on the part of the Government not to accept amendments moved by the Opposition.

Then I come to the provision as to renewal. Now I think this is potential of great mischief. If a licence is to be granted for a year, as the Honourable Premier says it is likely to be so, then it means that every money-lender has to lick somebody's shoes to have his licence renewed. Is not this encouraging nepotism? Will it not encourage favouritism? Will it not encourage slavery? (An honourable member: That is not before the House.) You will see that I am absolutely relevant. You will see that the expression 'for such period' comes to this. I am justified in objecting to the retention of these words 'for such period' which have been passed by this House.

Premier: Then my honourable friend is discussing what the House has already passed. All these arguments with regard to renewal, etc., have already been discussed threadbare on the substantive amendments moved to this clause and my honourable friend is repeating the arguments. He may be perfectly relevant; but he is repeating the arguments which have already been advanced and which have been met with from this side. If he merely wants to waste the time of the House he may do so. But I must appeal to you that he is repeating the arguments already advanced under the garb of opposing the whole clause.

Mr. Speaker: I request the honourable member not to repeat arguments.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang: I will try not to repeat them. But let me meet the argument of my honourable friend the Premier. He says these words 'for such period' have been passed. My submission is that what we are discussing is the whole of clause 5 and the mere vote of this House that the words 'for such period' should stand part of the Bill or part of the clause does not stand in my way, because if this clause is defeated you are quite welcome to have the words 'for such period' if they can stand by themselves. Therefore, when I oppose the whole clause the words 'for such period' which have been passed become absolutely useless. Therefore, I am not irrelevant.

Premier: But my point is that the arguments are being repeated.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member should not repeat arguments.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang: You can stop me when I am repeating an argument. I have certainly no pleasure in exhausting myself or wasting the time of the House by repeating arguments. What I was saying was this. When you are having these words 'for such period' you are opening the way to nepotism, favouritism and slavery.

I would simply say that the very idea of compelling money-lenders to take out a licence is calculated to demoralise them, to demoralise the whole province, so far as the trading classes and money-lending classes are concerned. Let me explain how. Now if I have to take out a licence and have to renew it again and again it means I must try to keep myself in the good books of the authorities. My political convictions may be entirely different.

Mr. Speaker : Has not the honourable member used this argument before ?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : No. You can point out to any such argument used before. I used these words only three minutes ago and I am now elaborating them. What will happen will be that the money-lenders will be so afraid of approaching even two penny a half-penny official, not to speak of Ministers, and all political activities in this province will come to an end. According to Government it is these moneyed-classes or the trading classes or these money-lenders who encourage political activities, who are at the back of political propaganda. My submission is that by making it obligatory for the money-lenders to take out licences they will be demoralised and they will always be in terror and then if the grant of licence or the renewal of licence depends upon the discretion of the collector, although he acts according to conditions and rules prescribed by Government, it means that all the money-lenders will be under the thumb of the collector and of the higher authorities.

Mr. Speaker : All this has been said already.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I never discussed this point in this way. I submit that for these reasons, that it is demoralising, that it is creating unnecessary difficulties in the way of money-lenders and that it was never recommended by the Punjab Enquiry Committee, the provision as to licence should be deleted and for this reason I oppose clause 5.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 5 up to Explanation as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Khawaja Ghulam Samad (Southern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in line 3 of Explanation between the words "Money-lender" and "before" the words "a fortnight" be inserted.

Sir, the object of clause 4 of this Bill is that a person who wants to do money-lending shall apply for his name being registered as a money-lender and that if his licence is cancelled according to any of the provisions of clause 6, he will according to the Explanation to clause 5, be at liberty to apply for the renewal of the licence. But no period is specified within which he should apply for the renewal of that licence and the object of my amendment is that a period of at least a fortnight may be fixed during which the application for renewal should be submitted. This is all that I want to say and I think there will be no difficulty in accepting this motion.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in line 3 of Explanation between the words "Money-lender" and "before" the words "a fortnight" be inserted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) (Urdu) : Sir, I quite appreciate the object of this amendment which says that at least a fortnight must expire before an application for the renewal of a licence is made and if the House is very keen on its being accepted I have no objection to include the words proposed in the Explanation. But I must point out that the amendment, if accepted, is likely to create some administrative difficulties. It may happen and it does happen many times that the collector and even the assistant collector of the first grade, who are being vested with the powers of issuing licences, are very busy otherwise and have little time to dispose of such applications within the period proposed and consequently if in any case the period of a fortnight expires before a licence is renewed, the money-lender concerned will become liable to penalties provided in the Bill and that is what I wish to avoid. I feel that even without this amendment the object which the honourable mover has in view will be amply served and, I therefore, see no justification why we should place unnecessary restrictions on our officers who are already overworked. In the circumstances I hope that the honourable mover will not press this amendment.

Khawaja Ghulam Samad : In obedience to the wishes of the majority of the House I beg leave to withdraw my motion.

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That Explanation to clause 5 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

At this stage Mr. Speaker left the chair, which was occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker.

Clause 6.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in line 1 for the word "Collector" the words "court of senior sub-judge of the district" be substituted.

Sir, it is right that the power to issue licences should be vested, as these have been vested, in the collector as it is purely an executive affair and I may say that the House and even the Opposition has nothing to say against this power being given to the collectors. But I see no earthly reason why the same authority be empowered to adjudicate on a very delicate matter like the cancellation of licences. It is against all canons of jurisprudence that the same person should be empowered to issue and cancel licences. I need hardly remind the House and the Government that the cancellation of licences is a sort of punishment that will be inflicted upon the money-lenders for breaches laid down in clause 6 of the Bill and it is only fair that the authority other than that which is to issue such licences should be required to deal with this matter. This matter must necessarily come before a court of law. And the reasons for my contention are quite obvious. The senior sub-judges, who are apparently free from bias and who possess a judicial mind, will not be actuated by any extraneous considerations in deciding such cases and will see that injustice is not done in any case.

But similar treatment cannot be expected from the collectors and assistant collectors of first grade. In the first place, they do not possess a judicial mind as strong as the senior sub-judges are expected to possess. As the executive head of the districts, they have to go about and meet people in their ilqas. They have to and they do listen to all sorts of stories true or untrue. The number of such persons in every district who backbite and who take pleasure in bringing into disfavour others is not small. The result is that these officers are prejudiced against those who are complained against. It is natural, therefore, that if a money-lender happens to be one of the persons complained against and is ever found guilty of a breach of any of the provisions of clause 6 of the Bill, it is not very unlikely that he will not have proper justice at the hands of the collector concerned. This is what I fear and it is to protect the interests of the money-lender that I have thought it fit to bring forward this amendment. I may as well say that this is not an imaginary fear. It is the result of my experience and experience of others who have had to deal with the collectors.

This fear of mine is augmented when I find that the matter does not end at the cancellation of the licences. The collector will have, according to the clause under consideration, unfettered discretion to cancel the licence for any period that may be specified by him. This is really too much in the hands of those who are at the helm of affairs in the district. Even according to the English Act, on which the Government members fall back for support so often, provides that civil courts will have powers to decide such cases.

Premier: Not only that. The criminal courts have also been given these powers according to that Act.

Munshi Hari Lal: The Honourable Premier has come to my rescue and solved my difficulties. If that is admitted, there should be no reason for rejecting my amendment. I do not want criminal courts but only civil courts to be substituted for the collectors. It has been said that the collector is also a deputy commissioner. Granted that it is so, my friends should bear in mind that the collectors in deciding such cases will not be acting as district magistrates but only as collectors and, as it very often happens, when they have to decide cases as a collector, they decide them summarily. Some of my honourable friends who have the experience of collectors will bear me out that in exercising powers of discretion the collectors act very differently from sub-judges and for the simple reason that the collectors being more or less executive officers show very little patience to go into the cases calmly and human beings, as they are, they have also to act under certain prejudices and pre-possessions in their minds which are worked upon them by their free contact with all kinds of persons in their ilqas. This fact should not be lost sight of when considering my amendment. To be a little frank, my submission is that the case of a money-lender, who has committed a breach of some of the provisions of this Bill, may be prejudiced by what may pass in an interview between the collector and a humbardar or a zaidar inimically disposed towards the money-lender of his ilqa. You can judge for yourself what will be the fate of a money-lender in such a case. But if this power to punish is vested in the senior sub-judges, it may be used judicially as they do not move out, as they remain at the headquarters and as people seldom meet them. They may be open to outside influence but very much less than the collectors. We can, therefore, expect full justice from them and that is why I am pressing that these powers should be vested in them.

This is a universally recognised principle of jurisprudence that if an infringement of law is committed, the court to adjudicate upon that infringement must be other than the one which has got any connection with the breach of law. It is only then that an unprejudiced decision is possible. The power of cancelling a licence or the power of deciding for how long a period the licence is to be cancelled, is being given to the collector who is the issuing authority of licences. The collector being an executive officer may consider these questions with an executive mind, and the money-lender may consequently suffer. It is in view of these considerations that I have proposed that in the place of the collector the power should be given to a senior sub-judge. The English law on the subject is referred to many a time during the discussion. But there in England the power of registration is vested in the Commissioner of Inland Revenue and the power of adjudicating upon the alleged infringement of the conditions of licences vested in the courts. My submission is that some of the good points in the English Law may also be introduced here in the Punjab with advantage. May I hope that at least this point of mine will be conceded. The powers now proposed to be given to the collector should be vested in the court of the senior sub-judge. With these words, I move my amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in line 1 for the word "Collector" the words "court of senior sub-judge of the district" be substituted.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): Sir, I am surprised to see this proposal emanating from my learned friend Munshi Hari Lal. I am afraid that he has not paid full attention to the wording of the clause. If he does so now he will find that it is not the collector who has been given plenary powers to decide whether the licence of a money-lender should be cancelled or not. His powers are only automatic and consequential. If a court holds that a money-lender has infringed certain provisions of the law or has gone against the conditions laid down in his licence, the collector will automatically cancel his licence. He has only to follow the finding of the court. Of course, he will see to it that the licence is cancelled for a short time for a small offence and for a longer period for a more serious offence. Under these circumstances, I am surprised as to why objection is being taken to the provisions of this clause. Then, an objection has been raised that in the English Act the power of cancelling a licence is vested in a civil court but here it is proposed to vest it in the collector, a criminal court. But even in England the power of cancelling the licences is vested in the police magistrate so far as bigger cities are concerned. So, that does not help my honourable friend very much. Does my honourable friend contend that the civil courts are more sympathetically inclined towards the sahukars than other courts, and therefore, these cases should go to judges with a particular bias? I hope that an able and experienced lawyer like my friend does not seriously advocate that and will not raise objections based on such considerations. He should bear in mind that the licence of the sahukar will be cancelled by the collector only if a competent court will have adjudicated upon the case and found the sahukar guilty. In these circumstances, there can be no reasonable objection to the clause under consideration.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, in view of the rigidity of this clause, it would be only fair and just that the power of cancelling licence of a money-lender be not vested in a collector but in a court of senior sub-judge. My honourable friend Mir Maqbool Mahmood has said that it will be the civil court which will adjudicate upon any offence alleged to have been committed by the money-lender and which will be responsible in fact for the cancellation of the licence of the money-lender. But as a matter of fact the civil court will only decide under section 87 if section 3 has been infringed or a money-lender has made any change in some important document. After that it will be the collector who will decide whether the punishment awarded by the court is sufficient and whether it will not be proper to cancel the licence of the money-lender. I hope my honourable friend Mir Maqbool Mahmood will admit that it is so. I would request this Honourable House to consider how unjust and unfair are the conditions laid down for the cancellation of a money-lender's licence. The first is that a licence may be cancelled if it has been held by a court that a money-lender has contravened the provisions of section 3 of the Regulation of Accounts Act. But under section 3 of this Act sufficient punishment has already been provided. Why should we add to the power already sufficiently drastic by empowering the collector to cancel the licence of the money-lender? Secondly, the licence may be cancelled if a suit of the money-lender is dismissed, in whole or in part, under section 87 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act. Such a suit would be dismissed on account of the money-lender having committed some fraud or forgery or a material change in some important document. Moreover, the money-lender may be hauled up under sections 198, 472 and 465 and may be punished for forgery. Over and above all these drastic provisions of law the provision now proposed seems to be unnecessarily harsh. Furthermore, there is section 35 (A) which provides equally harsh punishment. In view of these rigidities of clause 6, the amendment to give the power of cancellation of the licence of a money-lender to the court of a senior sub-judge and not to the collector, has been moved. It is, therefore, in the interests of justice and equity that we claim some protection for the money-lender.

We all know that if it is established that the money-lender has committed some fraudulent act not only his suit will be dismissed under section 35-A of the Code of Civil Procedure but he can also be directed to pay damages amounting to Rs. 1,000.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member is going beyond the scope of the amendment.

Lala Duni Chand: It is only a small amendment. The Government should have no objection to it. I was submitting, Sir, that we should have taken both sides in view. If the money-lender goes beyond the limit, does not the debtor follow suit? If we admit that money-lenders are dishonest we should not lose sight of the fact that the debtors also pay them in the same coin. It is quite obvious from the cases in the courts that the money-lender and debtor both do not play a fair game with each other. So far as dishonesty is concerned both are sailing in the same boat. It has been said that the money-lender sometimes makes false or forged entries in his books. It is also true that the plaintiffs put their debtor's thumb-impressions on documents. When the case goes to a court the debtor refuses to accept that thumb-impression, even if it is a genuine one. The defendant says, "I did not fix this thumb-impression on this document as a debtor, I did it as a witness." So the conduct of both the plaintiff and the defendant is objectionable. Sometimes it so happens that a debtor sends for the creditor to his place and beats him severely. I think Chaudhri Chhotu Ram is well aware of it and he knows how many creditors are murdered at the hands of debtors. I leave this matter in your hands and you better judge for yourself, who deserves more justice, the creditor or the debtor. I submit that the Government should have considered the conduct of both the debtor and the creditor. I think Chaudhri Chhotu Ram should have enacted a Bill for the safety of money-lenders who are frequently murdered at the hands of his supporters. (Interruptions).

I was submitting that in reality dishonesty is innate in man's nature to some extent whether he may be a defendant or a plaintiff. In these circumstances, I request that a licence may be cancelled by the court of a senior sub-judge and not by a collector. The suits are generally filed between an agriculturist and a non-agriculturist and in most cases as our experience shows, the collector gives his decision against non-agriculturists. Moreover, the collectors are not likely persons to take a judicial view of a case. As the amendment moved by Munshi Hari Lal is very reasonable, I hope that Chaudhri Chhotu Ram would be pleased to lend his appreciation to this amendment.

I would like to submit one word more, namely, that cancellation of a licence is a question of life and death for a money-lender. The poor fellow would not be able to file a suit in the court and his loans would be lost. May I in the light of the above arguments, request the Government to be more soft-hearted in this particular matter? In these circumstances, I do not think there is any harm if the cases be sent to the civil courts.

Chaudhri Ram Sarup (Rohtak Central, General, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, what I can understand from the irrelevant speech in which my friend Lala Duni Chand has wasted his breath is that he wants to vest powers to decide cases under the Money-lenders Act in the civil courts and neither in collectors nor in assistant collectors as has been provided in the Bill. I did not expect such an objection being raised by an honourable member who is a lawyer himself. I would like to submit for the information of my honourable friend, Lala Duni Chand, why the Government have drafted this measure and why it has been proposed that all the cases regarding money-lending should be dealt with by the executive and not by the civil courts. Strictly speaking the decisions given by the civil courts were such that they necessitated non-agriculturists to send their cases to the executive and not to the civil courts. How strange it is that the honourable member wants to take the patient back wherefrom the poor fellow caught the disease ?

The honourable members sitting on the opposite benches want to defeat the very purpose of this Bill. Let me tell my honourable friend who has just sat down that we know what he has in his heart; he wants to defeat the proposed Bill.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should not ascribe motives.

Chaudhri Ram Sarup : Sir, he was ascribing motives, not I. I was simply submitting that if cases of money-lenders be decided in civil courts there would be a chance of dishonesty being done to the debtors because the senior sub-judges do not take the consideration of hard facts. It has happened sometimes and I think it might be within your knowledge, Mr. Deputy Speaker, as you are also a lawyer, that the civil courts have given decisions against the plaintiffs in false cases brought by the money-lenders. On the other hand, collectors and assistant collectors would be the first to take judicial view of the case. I would like to submit that the mentality of collectors and sub-judges also differs. We can easily go to a collector, but in case we go to a sub-judge, he would at once think that we have come to recommend somebody involved in such and such a case. This is the lesson which our experience has given us. Moreover, if cases are decided by the executive according to file and in courts according to facts—

Lala Duni Chand : I rise to a point of order. The honourable member says that the matter should not be entrusted to a court, because the court decides according to facts and the collector decides the case according to file. Is he justified in saying that?

Mr. Deputy Speaker : No doubt it is a bad argument but there is nothing objectionable.

Chaudhri Ram Sarup : It has been stated by Lala Duni Chand that Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has brought forward a Bill with a view to put a stop to the murders of sahukars.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member is irrelevant.

Chaudhri Ram Sarup : No, Sir, I am not irrelevant. I think this sort of statement would affect the proposed Bill and therefore it is very necessary to reply to such a statement. Why did you not stop the honourable member when he was advancing such a defective argument? I was submitting why it has been thought necessary to introduce this Bill. The honourable member has stated that it has been introduced in order to stop the murders of sahukars. It is absolutely wrong. The present Bill simply seeks to stop dishonest money-lending and if by stopping it the murders of dishonest money-lenders committed by debtors come to an end this is an advantage of the Bill and not the very opposite of it. This measure has been brought forward with a view to put a stop to the dishonest practices of the money-lenders. If cheating by the money-lenders comes to an end, no one will ever be tempted to murder a sahukar. But if some of my honourable friends wish that money-lenders should continue to be harassed and murdered as a result of their dishonesty, I have no quarrel with them. But I must make it clear that this Bill is calculated to benefit money-lenders.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Chaudhri Ram Sarup : Sir, I am already speaking to the motion. I was explaining the circumstances which have necessitated the introduction of this Bill.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : This point is not before the House.

Chaudhri Ram Sarup : Sir, the point is that civil courts sometimes take too much time in deciding such issues, and it may be noted that justice delayed may mean justice denied in certain cases. Some civil courts indulge in legal quibbles and put up new interpretations of law, which may be contrary to the aims and objects of the Act.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should not reflect on courts.

Chaudhri Ram Sarup : Sir, I was submitting why it has been thought necessary to introduce this Bill. My honourable friend Lala Dani Chand proposed that powers to decide cases under the Money-Lenders Bill should be vested in the civil courts and not in collectors, as has been provided in the Bill. If we accept this proposal, we will be defeating the very purpose of this Bill.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : Sir, the real reason for this amendment and for this legislation has been given by an honest member of this House. In spite of repeated hints from the Ministerial benches, that he should not advance this argument, he has had the courage to place it before the House. He has said that we do not want these matters to go to civil courts because even if we approach the house of a sub-judge, we are likely to be taken for having gone to him for sufarish, i.e. (recommendation) and further the sub-judges have to decide things on evidence and the materials which may be placed before them by either party and cannot decide in their own discretion or on the information which they may get from their friends. The Government wants these matters to be placed before collectors, not because they consider and honestly consider that collectors are a better authority than district judges, but because collectors are their henchmen and also because they would decide matters on instructions issued to them and not on any judicial principles.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : On a point of order, Sir. I am sorry to say that my honourable friend is imputing motives to the Government that they want all these matters to be decided by collectors because they are their henchmen and that they would do according to the wishes of the Government. I would appeal to my honourable friend to withdraw that insinuation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : I would request the honourable member to use dignified language.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, the words used by me were the chastest words of the English language. I have absolutely no intention to attribute any motives to this Government or to any Government. I must, however, state facts. You wish to ask the collector to decide between the claims of two individuals, one a highly placed officer of Government or a friend of a highly placed officer of Government or let us say an influential supporter and an elector—let me say of the Honourable Premier himself—because I know that he would not misunderstand me and therefore I use his name. You place the decision of the dispute between that individual and the ordinary royyat before a collector, who depends upon Government with respect to his transfer, with respect to his promotion and with respect to his allowance, and who is also taking daily instructions from the headquarters of the Government, not by letters, but verbal instructions or even telephonic messages. Is it fair that the decision of such matters should be placed in the hands of that individual or is it proper that such matters should be placed in the hands of an agency, which, as was pointed out by Chaudhri Ram Sarup, is professedly a non-partisan agency? Therefore one reason for giving the duties of cancellation of licences to the district judge or to the senior sub-judge is that he is professedly a non-partisan agency. To-morrow this Government may not be in office and the Congress Government may be in power. Would you like that this decision should be influenced by the Government of the day? Would you like the collector, as Chaudhri Ram Sarup said, to act in accordance with the wishes of the persons who interview them and in accordance with the wishes of the persons who give them information and in accordance with the wishes of the party in power. That is my reason for withdrawing these powers from collectors.

Take another view of the matter. Take, for example, the question of cancellation of licences. The Honourable Premier has repeatedly stated that the cancellation of licences is made dependent upon some kind of judicial finding of the court. If you study clause 6, you will find that under every sub-clause of this clause some kind of judicial finding is necessary. Therefore, if you make judicial finding of the court the basis of punishment, is it not proper that the person who interprets that finding must be a person experienced in law and a person who should be dealing with judicial findings, and not a comparative layman who cannot interpret a judicial finding at its proper value. Again, Sir, the collectors after all are not going to be super-human beings. Are your collectors at present under-worked? We know very well that collectors have to work very hard. They themselves even feel the burden placed upon their shoulders. You are placing a further burden of dealing with benami transactions, which would extend to thousands of transactions in each district. You are also placing upon their shoulders the burden of dealing with mortgages before 1901. Do you wish to add this function of cancellation of licences, which would be of the nature of a judicial function, on their heads? Do you think that an over-worked official like him would be able to carry on this work efficiently? It is more or less a routine work and in practice it resolves itself into the opinions of the superintendents or head clerks who always write their reports and the collector signs them as a matter of routine. It is really a matter of indifference, whether Mr. Darling or Mian Hakim-ud-Din decides this matter as a district judge or decides this as a collector. But if he sits as a district judge to decide the matter of rights between two individuals, he would proceed on a judicial principle and would proceed without fear or favour in the matter. As a collector, he is to proceed on instructions and instructions are freely given to him as a collector which no one would dare give to him while he is working as a district judge or in any other judicial office.

[B. B. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

In the other atmosphere many matters come up before him in his executive capacity, merchants and various other, people applying for all sorts of licenses and we all know that in such cases it is really the head clerk getting Rs. 70 or Rs. 80 a month who really decides the case. I do not imagine for a moment that the district judge is more likely to favour the money-lenders than the collector. As a matter of fact a district judge is more likely to give effect to the finding of the sub-judge than the collector who may not care for the finding of the sub-judge of the fourth class. But when I say that the district judge or sub-judge should be vested with this power, I am not speaking for the money-lender. I do not believe that the district judge or the sub-judge would be more favourable to the money-lender; rather the reverse will be the case, that is, the collector will be more favourably inclined towards the money-lender. But my real object is that I do not wish to increase the judicial functions of the collector or that the judicial functions should in future be discharged by executive agency. This point was very prominently brought out when Chaudhri Ram Sarup stated that he did not want the courts to interfere with his business but that the matter should rest with the collector. There is the fundamental difference of opinion between his and my outlook and therefore it is that I wholeheartedly support the amendment.

Khan Sahib Raja Fateh Khan (Bawalpindi East, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, before I oppose this amendment I would request you to allow me to say a few introductory remarks like Lala Deshbandhu Gupta and Lala Duni Chand although the subject matter may be quite different. This is a fact that my friends of the Congress party have supported this amendment, but I am constrained to remark that though it is written quite clearly in the Congress Manifesto that they would support the cause of the zamindars, still my friends have exhibited their true non-agriculturalist spirit and capitalist mentality.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Khan Sahib Raja Fateh Khan: Instead of helping the poor they have thought fit to plead the cause of the money-lender. I may submit that there is an Arabic proverb that: كل شيء يرجع إلى أصله i.e. truth is always out. This is but natural and that is why they have supported the cause of the capitalists and aristocrats. It is also a fact that if zamindars are not saved from ruin surely they will go into the jaws of death. If the provisions of the Bill are weakened or this Bill is suspended, it would mean nothing less than that the zamindars should wait for Doomsday. It is the duty of the Government that they should treat justly all the sections of the public and that they should frame laws for protecting the lives of the poor and down-trodden people, and I urge them to pass this Bill without any fear and hesitation.

My honourable friend Chaudhri Ram Sarup has suggested that senior sub-judges should not be appointed in place of collectors to make inquiries regarding the matters now before the House. He never meant that these senior sub-judges do not do justice and therefore they should not be appointed to institute inquiries. What he meant was that the senior sub-judges were not in touch with the zamindars and were generally unaware of the fraudulent practices of the sahukars. Further, the zamindars were not in a position to bring all the details before the senior sub-judges in connection with the malpractices of the sahukars. Therefore, he suggested that the senior sub-judges should not be appointed to institute inquiries into the loans and debts of the zamindars. I also whole-heartedly support that contention that the executive officers know rural conditions more than any other official and therefore they should be given these powers. With these words, I oppose the amendment now before the House.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): I will not take more than a few minutes to answer the points raised by honourable members on this amendment. I regret I was absent from the House when several speakers spoke on this amendment, but I heard a portion of the speech of my honourable friend Mr. Mukand Lal Puri. His main arguments are these. Firstly, he said that the collector is a very hardworked person and therefore it is not desirable to saddle him with further work or duties. He probably forgot that we have provided in the definition of 'Collector' that it would also include the assistant collector of the first grade specially empowered in this behalf. This was deliberately included with a view to provide the much needed assistance to the hardworked collector. Secondly, he said that the collector being hardworked may not be able to give that care and consideration to the adjudication of these various items mentioned in the sub-clause, and these matters were of far reaching importance to the money-lending section. My honourable friend, is no doubt aware that the collector has got extensive powers under the Land Alienation Act, which might affect a person's whole career financially and yet he has been satisfactorily discharging those powers and we have not heard any complaints that he has not been acting judicially or that he is prejudiced or has bias against any particular community. Mr. Puri's argument in favour of the amendment was that the district judge who is judicially minded will be able to give more care, more judicial care to these matters which will come up under this Act. Now, apart from the question of time which both the district judge and the collector will have to give if either of them is appointed to adjudicate on these matters, I beg to invite attention to the specific matters on which the collector will have to adjudicate under this Bill. They are not matters involving intricate legal problems. There are no complex points of law at issue. He will mainly have to decide matters of fact. If you examine the various sub-clauses you will find that he will have to adjudicate whether a person has been held by any court to have contravened the provisions of section 3 of the Regulation of Accounts Act in more than two suits. That is a question of fact. Any person who puts in an application will have to put in certified copies of judgments. Therefore it becomes purely a question of fact and not of law on which the collector has to adjudicate. The next point on which he has to adjudicate is whether a suit had been dismissed in whole or in part under section 87 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act. Here also no question of law is involved. The next item is whether he has had his suit dismissed with the finding that he has made dishonestly or fraudulently a material alteration in any document. That is also a question of fact based on the judgment of a court of law. Similarly item 4 is—'has had his suit dismissed with a finding that it is fraudulent.' That means that a court has to give a finding to that effect, and that finding has only to be brought to the notice of the collector. So also in the case of the other two sub-clauses. All these involve only matters of fact and not of law. In view of these considerations I think that it is wholly unnecessary to complicate this Bill by giving this power to a district judge. The collector would be perfectly capable with the assistance of the assistant collector to adjudicate all these matters in the light of facts produced before him and based on the findings of the courts. (Hear, hear and cheers).

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (Urdu) : Sir, in considering my motion this fact has been lost sight of that collectors are being given unfettered discretionary powers in this matter and it is being left entirely to them to cancel licences for any length of time. This is really very objectionable. It is strange that one of my friends sitting on the Government benches was pleased to remark that it is due to the behaviour of the civil courts in general that such legislations have become necessary. No one should take notice of this remark as it is obviously beside the mark. But it makes one feel that it is perhaps in a retaliatory spirit that the power of cancellation of licences for an indefinite period is being given to the collector. For God's sake do not let this spirit creep in this legislation which will affect so many people. This measure which is being passed into law at the Simla heights is to apply equally to all zamindars and non-zamindars. It makes no discrimination between one and the other. It is, therefore, necessary that we should consider it calmly and dispassionately. This enactment should be absolutely free from the spirit of vengeance. Before I close I may as well remind the House that where a collector is the executive head of a district, a senior sub-judge is the head of administration of civil justice in his district. The two authorities are, therefore, parallel and on that account also there should be no hesitation in accepting my amendment. With these words I commend my motion for the acceptance of the House.

Premier : Sir, my honourable friend was perfectly right when he said in the course of his speech that this Bill is not intended to benefit the zamindars at the cost of non-zamindars or vice versa, and that its provisions will apply to agriculturists and non-agriculturists alike. Undoubtedly, it is not the intention of the Government to differentiate between man and man so far as the application of this measure is concerned.

So far as the motion under consideration is concerned, I submitted in my last speech that the collector would give his decision with respect to the cancellation of the licence of a money-lender on the basis of facts proved during the proceedings before a court and he, therefore, would not be acting arbitrarily when passing an order under this Act. To this submission of mine the honourable member has made no reply and in fact he had no reply to make.

Munshi Hari Lal : But it is in the power of the collector to decide for how long a period of time the licence is to be cancelled.

Premier : It will be more advantageous for my honourable friend to listen to me than to interrupt me. True, in the English law provision is made to empower a civil court to cancel the licence of an erring money-lender. But the provision of the Bill proposed by us is all to the good of the money-lender. In accordance with this provision the licence of the money-lender will not come up for cancellation even if the court makes adverse remarks about him. The judgment of the court will have absolutely no effect on the cancellation of his licence. It will be only on an application made in the court of the collector in this behalf, that the question of the cancellation of the licence will be taken up by itself. I think that this provision is more favourable to the money-lender. On the other hand, if my honourable friends wish that the adverse remarks of a court should ipso facto involve the cancellation of a money-lender's licence, I have no objection. I am prepared to get a law framed so that the courts may be empowered to cancel the licence of the money-lender there and then, if they find that he has offended against the law. (Voices from the Opposition : Yes, do make such a law). Then, my honourable friend has said that zaildars and lambardars have access to the collector and by poisoning his mind against the money-lenders they will be able to influence his judgment. I am surprised to see that a capable lawyer like my friend should have put forward such an argument which has no basis in fact and which is absolutely untenable. The collector will give his order, if at all he has to give it, in view of the certified judgment of the civil court before him. After carefully going through the judgment, he will decide whether a licence should be cancelled for a fortnight, or for a period of three months or for six months or longer. Where does the influence of the zaildar and the lambardar come in? I am sure my honourable friend has ignored this point.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The question is—

That is line 1 for the word "Collector" the words "court of senior sub-judge of the district" be substituted.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : I move—

That in lines 2—4 for the words "for each period as may be specified by him" the words "for a period not exceeding one year" be substituted.

The reason why we have proposed this amendment is that we want to impose a limit on the discretion of a collector. We stand for the separation of executive and judicial functions. We are of the opinion that executive officers are not constitutionally the proper persons for deciding matters which should be entrusted to the decision of persons with judicial training. There is no doubt, as the Honourable Premier has observed, that a collector will cancel a licence after a finding of a court but then the collector has to determine the period for which a licence may be cancelled.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : The motion before the House is that the licence may be cancelled for a period not exceeding one year. I was giving my reasons for having this limitation on the powers of a collector and why a collector should not be given unlimited power in the matter. This is a measure over the general principles of which there is not much ground for criticism or counter-criticism. This measure will embrace all classes who deal in money-lending. The cancellation of a licence is and will be a serious matter. When a person who carried on a certain profession is debarred from carrying on that profession and is to fall back upon other resources and has to leave a line which he is pursuing, it will be agreed that it is a very serious matter. That order will deprive that individual, who is following a certain profession, of a substantive right and it is, therefore, natural that there should be a curb on the unrestricted discretion of an executive officer.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.)

Say what we may, it cannot be denied that an executive officer is bound to be influenced by extra-judicial considerations in passing his orders.

Those of us who have experience of courts of law have not the slightest hesitation in saying that an executive officer, more often than not, is not suited to discharge the functions which should be entrusted to judicial hands. When a certain act is committed which entitles a collector to cancel a licence, the licence shall be cancelled. There is no option. What we want is that the collector should not be given an absolutely free hand in the matter, as we know that these executive officers when they pass orders allow themselves to be influenced by extraneous circumstances. There must be a large number of honourable members of this House who know that the district magistrates have not unoften called upon even legal practitioners to render accounts of their activities simply because those activities were not palatable to those executive officers. Those of the lawyers who took part in the national political activities were always out of favour with the executive authorities and when an executive authority had to mention a particular lawyer in official documents it was influenced by this fact whether he was connected with the Congress movement or not.

Mr. Speaker : That is not relevant to the motion.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani : Does the honourable member believe that all money-lenders are Congressites and disloyal and all debtors are loyal ?

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : The amendment is—.....for such period as may be specified for a period not exceeding one year.

We say that the powers of a collector should be restricted. Why should they be restricted ? Because when he will view the problem he will, more often than not, permit extraneous circumstances to enter in the matter ; and I am supporting my arguments by reference to the experience which we have of the executive officers. When I say this my reason is that the collector by the very nature of his duties would be connected with some group or the other. (Premier : Question). We have seen some very responsible people set at naught constitutional conventions, and come forward to tell the people that they stand for this or that party only. There is therefore no reason why a collector will not follow suit and exhibit such a tendency which is anti-national. We have our experience of executive officers. These executive officers may not take a judicial view and will be often influenced by the considerations whether a man is a help to the Government or not. I am reminded of a small anecdote. An independent extra assistant commissioner while talking to a district magistrate was told by the latter "پولیس آپکی شکایت کہنی ہے" "ہاں کہنے ہوئیے کہ رشوت" he retorted. "No, no, that is out of the question. They say "بد-عاشوں کا ہم چالان کرتے ہیں انکو آپ چھوڑ دیجئے ہیں" "بد-عاشوں کو تو نہیں چھوڑتا البتہ [نہ] دہری کے بد-عاشوں کو چھوڑ دیجئے ہوں"—replied the extra assistant commissioner and explained himself saying "the question is very simple. The superintendent of police has to go on tour. A robkar goes to the inspector and through him to the sub-inspector and in turn to the zaildar and the lambardar. Thereupon responsibility for the sahib's murghis and andas is distributed amongst various persons, and those of the persons who do not supply murghis and andas are then challenged." Sir, those of us who have experience of the executive know that the executive is not always capable of a judicial view.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani : Is that your experience of the Congress provinces ?

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : That is our experience in this province. High sounding statements are thrown in our faces and yet what do we see? Do you not see executive tyranny committed.....

Premier : On a point of order. Is that all relevant?

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Yes, it is perfectly relevant. I am adducing my reasons for restricting the discretion of the executive officers. I am sure my honourable friends over there who have got considerable experience of the high-handedness of the executive would be able to support my view that very often executive is not capable of taking an independent judicial view of a case.

Mr. Speaker : That matter is not now before the House.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : The point is why we want to prescribe the limits. I was saying that we do not want to give unlimited authority in the matter of cancelling of licences. Of course there will be absolutely no objection to entrusting all the powers we have.....

Mr. Speaker : The words of the original clause are for 'such period as may be specified'. The honourable member proposes a period not exceeding one year. So, he should confine his speech to that point.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : The Premier has his own notion of a responsible government and it consists in not being responsive to the people.

Mr. Speaker : What has that to do with the motion?

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : The relevancy is that the executive not being responsible is bound to go astray and take a view of things which a judicial officer will not take. That is the point which I wanted to stress.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in lines 2—4 for the words "for such period as may be specified by him" the words "for a period not exceeding one year" be substituted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) Sir, I would like to say a few words on this amendment. My reading of the Bill shows that there is no provision for saving the limitation of the suit which might be brought by a money-lender for the recovery of his loan during the period when his licence has been suspended. If I am wrong I would like to be corrected. I shall make myself a little more clear to enable the Honourable Premier to follow me. Now, when the collector cancels—let us assume it for good reasons—a licence of a money-lender say, for a year, there does not seem to be any provision to save the limitation for those loans which might be due to become timebarred during the year for which the collector cancels the licence. If there is any, I should like to be pointed out, but I believe there is none. (Premier : There is. He can appeal to the commissioner for a certificate). That I know. I have submitted an amendment with respect to that clause which deals with the certificate to be issued by the commissioner and that is clause 11, I believe. But there is no provision to save the limitation even there because even in that clause the word is 'may' and not 'shall'. Therefore, even if a money-lender, whose licence is cancelled by the deputy commissioner, goes to the commissioner in appeal, it is not obligatory on the commissioner to issue a certificate to save limitation.

Mr. Speaker : That is not now before the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Listen to me Sir. I most respectfully submit that you were a little too hasty. What I was going to say was this. I am adducing a reason to support the amendment moved by Mr. Sachar. I say that as there is no provision to save the limitation, the amendment of Mr. Sachar, if accepted, will reduce an evil. Supposing there are 50 suits which may become timebarred, if licences are cancelled for 2 years, there may be 100 suits which may become timebarred if licences are cancelled for 3 years and 70 suits will be saved if the period of cancellation is reduced to one year and only 30 may become timebarred and not 100 suits. Therefore, I submit that in order to reduce the evil which arises from the absence of safeguards for limitation, Mr. Sachar's amendment should be accepted, because if we cannot remove the evil altogether, the best we can do is to at least reduce or minimise it. It is from that point of view that I support Mr. Sachar's amendment.

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi (Lyallpur Jhang, General, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I have not been able to understand the objects of giving indefinite and unlimited powers to the collector. The Honourable Premier has stated that collectors in general are very honest and just officials. Even granting that, I submit that such wide powers should not be given to the collectors at all.

Mr. Speaker : Repetition should be avoided.

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi : I was submitting, Sir, that we on this side of the House are on principle opposed to the collector being invested with the powers to cancel a licence. I am of the opinion that it is absolutely unnecessary to give such wide powers to an executive official. It would be better if we define the powers of the collector as regards the cancellation of a licence and the maximum period should also be fixed for which the collector should be allowed to cancel the licence of a sahuakar. I, therefore, suggest that in lines 2—4 of clause 6 for the words "for such period as may be specified by him" the words "for a period not exceeding one year be substituted.

(Voices : Question may now be put.)

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The amendment moved is that—

In lines 2—4 for the words "for such period as may be specified by him" the words "for a period not exceeding one year" be substituted.

The question is that—

The words "for such period as may be specified by him" stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan) : Sir, I beg to move that—

In line 6, after the word "money-lender," the following be added :—

"Commits an act or is guilty of an omission with reference to which he."

Sir, as the honourable members will realise, the object of moving this amendment is to provide that punishments, prescribed in this Act which we are now going to pass, will not be inflicted upon any person who has acted against the provisions of this Act previous to its coming into force. I am sure that this amendment will be unanimously supported because it is based on equity and justice.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in line 8 after the words "money-lender" the following be added:—

'Commits an act or is guilty of an omission with reference to which he.'

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the opening six lines of clause 6 as amended stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) (Urdu) :
Sir, I beg to move

That in sub-clause (4) lines 1—2 between the words "have" and "contravened" the word "intentionally" be inserted.

I want to submit that only the licence of that money-lender should be cancelled who intentionally contravenes the provisions of section 8 of the Regulation of Accounts Act. If he does not intentionally contravene the provisions of section 8 of the Regulation of Accounts Act his licence should not be cancelled. Day before yesterday my honourable friend Mir Maqbool Mahmood referred to section 4 of the Regulation of Accounts Act and stated in the course of his speech that the word "intentionally" is provided in section 4 of the Regulation of Accounts Act. I have myself studied section 4 and I read it out to you :

"A person who has kept his accounts and sent his six-monthly statements of accounts in the form and manner prescribed in clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) of section 3 shall be held to have complied with the provisions of these clauses, in spite of errors and omissions, if the court finds that the errors and omissions are accidental and not material and that the accounts have been kept in good faith with the intention of complying with the provisions of these clauses."

Sir, much stress is being laid by my honourable friend on the word 'accidental', but if it is any omission or error in the issuing of notice under section 4 of the Regulation of Accounts Act, that the court can condone and can decide that the costs should not be given to the money-lender. It is provided in that section that a money-lender's licence shall be cancelled if he "has been held by a court to have contravened the provisions of section 3 of the Regulation of Accounts Act." Under the Regulation of Accounts Act if a money-lender issues any notice to the debtors and if in the judgment of the court there is any omission which is 'accidental' and not material, then it can condone the omission. The case is different if no notice has been given at all. If any money-lender does not give any notice to his debtor the consequence would be that he would lose his interest as well as his costs. But according to this section the licence of a money-lender will be cancelled if he has been held by a court to have contravened the provisions of section 3 of the Regulation of Accounts Act in more than two suits. If we insert the word 'intentionally' after the word 'have', then it will make the position fair and just. So long as a person does not commit any breach of law 'intentionally' he is not punished. If a money-lender intentionally contravenes the provisions of section 3 of the Regulation of Accounts Act, his licence should be cancelled. If any money-lender does not give notice with an honest view to forego his interest and costs in the event of a suit he should not be punished. With these words I move my amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (i), lines 1—2, between the words "have" and "contravened," the word "intentionally" be inserted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Bawalpindi Division, General Rural) : Under section 6 you will find several conditions which would lead to the cancellation of the licence. These relate to acts of omission and commission. You will also see that all of them do not stand on the same footing. Some are omissions or commissions about whose gravity no two opinions can be held. There are others which are merely technical non-compliance with a particular law. Now with respect to these technical non-compliance of the provisions of particular statutes, it is necessary to prove that the act was intentionally committed. Now, for instance, take the first sub-clause. It refers to a money-lender who has been held to have contravened the provisions of section 3 of the Regulation of Accounts Act. Section 3 of that Act requires two things of a creditor. One is that he should keep his accounts in a particular form. The second is that he should send six-monthly copy of accounts to his debtors. Now, supposing a person keeps his account in a particular form, but due to some accident or oversight or due to the negligence of his agent he has failed to send the six-monthly statement of accounts to two out of a thousand debtors. The question is whether his licence should be cancelled on this account. He will not only be deprived of his means of living, but it may possibly lead to confiscation of his entire assets. Therefore I wish to commend to the House this amendment. If the word 'intentionally' is added, it would be carrying out the wishes of the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : Sir, we are frightened by the remarks which you were pleased to make that you would keep us in this House until the consideration of the Bill is finished. It creates an uneasiness in the minds of the members—though it may not be justified—as if you want to hustle and hurry through. I hope you did not mean to carry out the threat.

Now I would just say a few words in support of the motion. The importance of the word 'intentionally' would be apparent when we consider a hypothetical case. Suppose a money-lender goes to England and gives directions to his clerk. (Premier : Has the honourable member read the section in the Regulation of Accounts Act ?) If there is a provision in that Act which we passed a few years ago that the omission or contravention should be intentional before he is penalised, then there is no question. But I would ask the Honourable the Premier, what is the justification for the omission of the word in this Bill ? Now let us read the section in that Act. Section 8 of the Regulation of Accounts Act says :

A creditor shall in order to comply with the provisions of this Act—

- (a) regularly record and maintain an account for each debtor separately, of all transactions relating to any loan advanced to that debtor, in such manner as the Local Government may prescribe ;

- (b) furnish each debtor every six months with a legible statement of account signed by the creditor or his agent of any balances or amount that may be outstanding against such debtor on the 30th day of June or 15th Har and the 31st day of December or 15th Pak in each year. This statement of account shall include all transactions relating to the loan entered into during the six months to which the statement relates and shall be sent—

Then I come to section 4 relating to penalty with which I am concerned. It says :—

Notwithstanding anything contained in any other enactment in force for the time being—

- (a) in any suit or proceeding relating to a loan the court shall, before deciding the claim on the merits, frame and decide the issue, whether the creditor has complied with the provisions of clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) of section 3 ;
- (b) if the court finds that the provisions of clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 3 have not been complied with by the creditor, the court shall, if the plaintiff's claim is established in whole or in part, disallow the whole or a portion of the interest found due, as may seem reasonable to the court in the circumstances of the case and shall disallow costs ;
- (c) if the court finds that the provisions of clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 3 have not been complied with by the creditor, the court shall in computing the amount of interest due upon the loan exclude every period for which the creditor omitted duly to furnish the account as required by clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 3 : provided that if the creditor has after the time prescribed in that clause furnished the account and the plaintiff satisfies the court that he had sufficient cause for not furnishing it earlier, the court may, notwithstanding such omission, include any such period or periods for the purpose of computing the interest.

Explanation.—A person who has kept his account and sent his six-monthly statements of accounts in the form and manner prescribed in clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) of section 3 shall be held to have complied with the provisions of these clauses, in spite of errors and omissions, if the court finds that the errors and omissions are accidental and not material and that the accounts have been kept in good faith with the intention of complying with the provisions of these clauses.

Therefore my submission is that the Honourable Premier does not derive any assistance from section 3 or section 4 of the Regulation of Accounts Act, because only such errors and omissions which probably he had in mind are exempt from penalisation which may be accidental. That is not the omission relating to the actual forwarding of account but only in the body of the account. Supposing there is in one item Rs. 10-8-9 and by mistake it is given as Rs. 10-8-9 because 3 is often mistaken for 8. Such errors might occur where there is a difference of an anna or two by mistake or oversight. Then he will not be penalised. My submission is that in that Act the penalty is only forfeiture of part of interest or disallowance of costs which would not matter much if a money-lender fails to comply with section 3 of that Act. But here the penalty is so heavy that it is necessary to put him on his guard so that he should not be punished without proof of dishonest intention. As I have submitted, there may be no dishonesty at all. It might have been physically impossible for him to have complied with the provisions of section 3 of the Regulation of Accounts Act in more suits than one. That means if he has not supplied accounts in three suits irrespective of any causes whatsoever, then he becomes liable to the cancellation of his licence. My submission is that the punishment is very severe and this safeguard must be provided that the court before it cancels the licence must be satisfied that the act was done intentionally. Otherwise if owing to his unavoidable absence from home or for some other causes or the sudden illness of his clerk which could not be foreseen, he will not be able to comply in that very week possibly in three cases with the provisions of section 8 of the Regulation of Accounts, he would be penalised. I think the amendment moved is very reasonable. After all what do they lose if that word 'intentionally' is inserted?

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : My honourable friend started his speech with the fear that we might have to sit burning the midnight electricity—I cannot say oil—to make progress with this Bill and yet he has made a speech—of course being a lawyer and an able lawyer too he can say anything—without studying the Act carefully. Had he done so, he would have seen that this amendment is wholly unnecessary for the simple reason that if the man has made any omission or commission accidentally the court is bound to give due consideration to it. It is said clearly in the section which he has read.

Now he says that this is merely with regard to the keeping of the accounts and if there is no deliberate omission, then and then alone the court can protect him. But supposing a man does not send a six-monthly statement of account this is not protected under the explanation to section 4 of Regulation of Accounts Act, 1930. This has been so framed because we want to be sure that he will not make an omission of this kind on the ground that his munim was ill or that his grand-mother was ill for which reason he was not able to send his six-monthly statement in time. It is in view of these considerations that in the select committee we discussed this matter and came to the conclusion that it would be hard if we do not give him some latitude and that is why we added the words 'not more than two suits'. That is to say if he makes a mistake or omission in more than two suits, that is, at least in three suits, then and only then this provision will be applicable against him. Three suits might mean 20 omissions, but it should be only in three separate suits. That I think is a sufficient latitude to cover all bona fide exigencies or mistakes on his part. Now, my honourable friend should realize that unless we fix a limit to these protected omissions they might become a rule rather than exception and that is what we want to avoid. Then he said that the punishment under this Bill would be very hard while under the Regulation of Accounts Act he can only disallow a portion of the interest, but under this Bill it would be a very drastic punishment. But what is the punishment? It is stated in sub-clause (a) that the collector shall find out if a mistake has been made and if it is a mistake which is not of a very serious nature, but is just an ordinary mistake or omission, then, if it is at all necessary, he would cancel the licence only for a week or two weeks. The punishment would be only according to the magnitude of the offence itself. The collector will have to take all these things into consideration before cancelling the license for any period. Therefore my honourable friend's argument, over which he waxed very eloquent and on which he took such a long time of the House was not very strong. If he had read the Regulation of Accounts Act, carefully, it would not have been necessary for him to take the time of the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : What is the harm in adding this one word? It would not make the Bill very bulky.

Premier : It would be encouraging omissions.

Munshi Hari Lal : The Honourable Premier has not made out a proper case. Supposing a man is in England for six months and during that time he cannot issue notices to all his debtors. He brings suits against all his debtors afterwards and in all those cases, it is held that he has contravened the provisions of the Regulation of Accounts Act. His licence is liable to cancellation. How would you meet his case ?

It was argued that the period of cancellation may be one week or fortnight. It is quite all right for us to hear and for the Honourable Premier to assure us, but where is the guarantee that the collector will only cancel for one or two weeks unless he is going to restrict the power of the collector. He may give three years under extraneous influence. It is therefore necessary to insert the word 'intentionally'. I submit that this amendment regarding the addition of the word 'intentionally' is reasonable and it should not be rejected.

Premier : My honourable friend has argued in favour of his amendment. He said supposing a poor money-lender goes to England for six months (Voices : Poor agriculturist money-lender) he might have failed to send six-monthly statements in so many suits and he might have made several mistakes. Now if he goes to England for six months he may as well overlook filing suits in the court that may get time-barred. Would he forget filing these suits? I am sure he will be vigilant here. If he would not forget filing suits why should he forget sending six-monthly statement of accounts? If he cannot allow his suits to be time-barred, he should also send his due statement of accounts.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That in sub-clause (i), lines 1-2, between the words "have" and "contravened" the word "intentionally" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I move my amendment No. 29<sup>a</sup> ?

Mr. Speaker : Deletion or negation of a clause is not an amendment.

Question is—

That sub-clause (i) of clause 6 stand part of the clause.

Lala Sita Ram (Trade Union, Labour) (Urda) : Sir, I want to oppose the whole sub-clause (1) of clause 6. A change of some word here or there cannot satisfy me. I oppose the whole of it on a matter of principle. In order to explain my reasons for it I would like to read before the Honourable House only such extracts of section 8 of the Regulation of Accounts Act which have direct bearing on this clause and run as follows :—

- * 3. (1) A creditor shall in order to comply with the provisions of this Act—
- (a) regularly record and maintain, an account for each debtor separately of all transactions relating to any loan advanced to that debtor in such manner as the Local Government may prescribe ;
  - (b) furnish each debtor every six months with a legible statement of account signed by the creditor or his agent of any balance or amount that may be outstanding against such debtor on the 30th day of June and 31st day of December in each year. The statement of account shall include.....

<sup>a</sup>That sub-clause (i) be deleted.

[L. Sita Ram.]

Now, Sir, let us read the penalty imposed for non-compliance with the provisions of section 3 which is given in clause 4 of the same Act and runs as follows :—

4. Notwithstanding anything contained in any other enactment in force for the time being—
- (a) in any suit or proceedings relating to a loan, the court shall before deciding the claim on the merits, frame and decide the issue, whether the creditor has complied with the provisions of clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) of section 3 ;
  - (b) if the court finds that the provisions of clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 3 have not been complied with by the creditor the court shall, if the plaintiff's claim is established in whole or in part disallow the whole or a portion of the interest found due as may seem reasonable to the court in the circumstances of the case and shall disallow costs .....

Now Sir my contention is that it is quite obvious from the above extracts that in case any money-lender does not comply with the provisions of section 3 of the said Act he takes upon himself the risk of foregoing the whole interest besides the costs.

Sir, in view of the above I fail to understand why the Government wants to punish the same person by cancelling his licence as provided for in the sub-clause under discussion in addition to the above punishment for the same offence. In my humble opinion that would tantamount to a double punishment for a so-called offence. In this case there is no dishonesty on the part of the money-lender and the debtor does not lose anything he rather gains. It is the money-lender who loses by it. He should be at liberty to do anything in his own interest. When he is ready to forego his whole interest and costs, why should we compel him to send the accounts to his debtor against his wishes? Besides this there are other punishments which have already been provided under the Regulation of Accounts Act and the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act for a money-lender who does not send regular accounts to his debtor or charges higher rate of interest than those prescribed in the Act or Acts under section 37 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act. The court can deprive the money-lender of his interest or principal or both as the case may be. But if you also wish to rob the money-lender of his principal along with his interest, then I may not quarrel, otherwise it is neither

7 P. M. fair nor desirable that a collector should cancel the licence of a money-lender for a year or two or three simply because he failed to comply with a minor provision of another Act. During this period a money-lender may suffer a loss of several rupees. That would constitute a great hardship to him indeed. In view of this, I want to get this clause deleted altogether. My remarks would also apply to sub-clauses (ii) and (v) of clause 6, the principle being the same. Again, this clause has 6 sub-clauses under it and in every one of them different offences are mentioned but it is surprising indeed that the same punishment is laid down for every offence enumerated there. If we study the Indian Penal Code, we will find that every offence has a different punishment for it but here in this Bill one and the same punishment is proposed to be meted out for different offences. I fail to comprehend what could be the justification for that. Supposing a money-lender does not submit his six-monthly accounts to his debtor as required under the Regulation of Accounts Act his licence will be cancelled. Again, if he commits a fraud and cheats an innocent agriculturist, even then his licence will be cancelled. This is very strange. There must be some distinction between different offences. Let our Government draw a line somewhere and not punish people indiscriminately. Besides, what makes the position of the money-lender even worse, is the fact that if he has once been punished for a certain offence under the Regulation of Accounts Act, he may be punished again for that very offence under the Money-lenders Bill. This double punishment is unheard of. I can never regard it fair, or justifiable. This is, Sir, another example which proves my contention that the honest money-lender would suffer more than the dishonest one under the provisions of this Bill.

With these words, Sir, I strongly oppose sub-clause (1) of clause 6 under discussion.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: You would find that all the six sub-clauses are defining acts which might necessitate the cancellation of the licence. This is the one clause in which dishonesty or fraud or any kind of bad intention need not form a necessary part. In every other clause you will find that where the acts of commission and omission are penalised, there is either fraud or dishonesty or attempt to charge higher interest or putting down to the debit of a person higher amount than originally advanced. This is the one clause where the thing might happen without any dishonest intention. When every other clause contains as an essential element fraud or dishonesty, I think the object of the legislature would be served if such a thing, of which fraud or dishonesty does not form an integral part, were kept out. It has been pointed out by the Honourable Premier that in the Regulation of Accounts Act it has come to the knowledge of the courts that the creditors do not usually comply with this provision and that there is evasion on that score. People do not comply because in the case of all creditors, out of thousand accounts there are fifty such accounts where it is not possible to recover anything from those fifty persons and the creditor knows that even if he files a suit he will not be able to recover his principal what to talk of costs and interest. He may ultimately file a suit for five hundred rupees while two thousand rupees are due because no more than five hundred rupees can be recovered. In this case the creditor finds it an unnecessary botheration to send any account. On the other hand it can be legitimately argued by the Premier and the Government that the intention of the legislature was that this should be done, and if it is not being done, the legislature ought to step in to induce people, by penalty or compulsion, to do it. If that is the intention of the legislature, then the proper thing is to amend the Regulation of Accounts Act and put greater penalties there, not that you should have an indifferent and insignificant omission under the Accounts Act made an occasion for the cancellation of the licence leading to such results. Therefore, the object of the Act will not be defeated and no great harm will be done if you omit this clause.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikandar Hyat-Khan) (Urdu): Sir, my honourable friend Lala Sita Ram has observed just now that if a money-lender commits an offence, a very severe punishment is meted out to him, and that he may also be punished a second time for that very offence.

[Premier.]

It appears as if my honourable friend imagined that we are enamoured of punishing the money-lenders and will be always on the look out to entrap a money-lender. That is not our object at all. Had my honourable friend considered this clause dispassionately he would have seen it for himself that the Bill is really calculated to benefit the money-lender himself. In fact money-lenders stand to gain by it more than anybody else. Let it not be understood that an honest money-lender will be punished for every minor omission or commission of his under this Bill. Supposing he submits a wrong form once or twice or makes a minor mistake in filling it properly, he will not be punished. It is only when he persists in violating the minor provisions of the Bill that he will be punished and even then according to the circumstances of the case.

Again, my honourable friend complained that the same punishment is proposed for different offences. It is not so. As a matter of fact I strongly repudiate this charge. A collector will see to it that if ends of justice can be met by cancelling a licence for 10 days, he will certainly cancel a licence for that period only. But if he finds that a certain money-lender has been guilty of cheating an innocent debtor, he will, of course cancel his licence for a longer period. The mere fact that a money-lender's licence will be cancelled for any offence under this clause, should not cause my honourable friends opposite to jump to the conclusion that the same degree of punishment will be meted out to all money-lenders, because the cancellation may be only for a week or two in some cases and for a year or two in some other cases. The mere word 'cancellation' need not frighten my friends over there. I am sorry that whereas they have tried to point out minor differences in the different offences mentioned in this clause, they have not taken the trouble of realising that the period of cancellation will not be the same in each case.

The second argument put forward against this clause was that a money-lender will be twice punished for one and the same offence. But let me point out the other side of the question. The money-lenders who generally neglect their duties under the previous Act will become more cautious in submitting their accounts regularly. Sometimes they think now what is the use of going to the court when they have already made enough money out of the bargain, and thus arguing the money-lenders fail to submit accounts properly. But after the Bill is passed the money-lender will fear the cancellation of his licence and prick up his ears. He will keep a regular account of his business and thus be able to realise his money to the last penny. Here I may point out the fallacy underlying the argument of my honourable friend Lala Sita Ram. He said that every money-lender will be once punished under the Regulation of Accounts Act and then be punished again for that very offence under the Money-lenders Bill. It is not going to be so, because money-lenders will take care to comply with the provisions of the previous Act, and, when they do so, they will not be punished under that Act. Any money-lender who is not punished under any other law shall not be punished under the Money-lenders Bill, because it is laid down in this Bill that if any money-lender is found guilty of the offences mentioned here by a court, then and then alone the licence will be cancelled. It is clear therefore, that an honest money-lender will not be touched by this Bill. Only a dishonest money-lender should be afraid of this. But I am not prepared to help him at all, moreover, if a lawyer is found guilty of fraud, he is punished under the Penal Code, but his licence as a lawyer is also liable to be cancelled.

Lala Bhagat Ram Choda : Sir, I want to ask only one question from the Premier, and it is this. Why should any man who does not charge interest come under this Bill?

Premier : Such a man would remain absolutely unaffected by this Bill. He is clearly outside the scope of this measure.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That sub-clause (i) of clause 6 stand part of the Clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Sub-clause (ii) of Clause 6 will now be considered.

Munshi Hari Lal : I move—

That in sub-clause (ii), line 2, between the words "part" and "under" the word "more than twice" be inserted.

I submit that man is a sinner from the dawn of humanity. Judge him but be merciful. If a man has had his suit dismissed once in whole or in part, under section 87 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act, he stands liable and his licence may be cancelled. I submit that if a money-lender's suits have been dismissed more than twice, he may be penalised and not in cases when only one of his suits has been dismissed. In section 87 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act, it is laid down—

Where, in a suit for the recovery of a loan, the court is satisfied that an entry relating to the loan has been made in any document showing the amount of the sum advanced to be in excess of that actually advanced plus legitimate expenses incurred, the court may, at its discretion, disallow the whole or any part of the sum claimed by the plaintiff.

My submission is that the man should not be penalised and his licence should not be cancelled if one suit of his is dismissed. I have suggested 'if more than twice his suits be dismissed' he should then suffer. I submit that the penalty provided in the clause is quite disproportionate. With these words I move the amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in sub-clause (ii), line 2, between the words "part" and "under" the words "more than twice", be inserted.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I would not repeat any of the arguments which have been advanced. Section 87 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act, 1934 lays stress on this that—

Where, in a suit for the recovery of a loan the court is satisfied that an entry relating to the loan has been made in any document showing the amount of the sum advanced to be in excess of that actually advanced plus legitimate expenses incurred, the court may, at its discretion, disallow the whole or any part of the sum claimed by the plaintiff.

I do not know if you are aware, or if the Premier is aware that in certain parts of the Punjab there is a practice, justification or non-justification of it is a different question, that when an advance is made, a very small percentage is charged on account of what is called 'kada.'

Premier : It may not be of 'kada' but some other term.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: It is called 'karda' or 'kada'. The origin of this seems to be this that in olden times when money was not so safe and there was danger of burglaries, even of dacoities, and there were no banks, people used to bury what little cash they had. Supposing they had to advance Rs. 10 to a debtor, they had to dig up their little cash and that involved some labour and also some risk of exposure because every time you dig you run the risk of your treasure being found out and it was therefore customary to charge one anna or say one pise per rupee, something like that on the amount advanced. Even in these days where there are no banks and where people do not consider themselves to be so safe, they bury their money underground and when a person comes to them to borrow some money they have to dig it up and they may still be charging a little on account of 'kada' which means labour or wages for digging out. That practice might have died out in towns but it may still be in vogue in certain places and the practice might be so well established that it has never occurred either to the creditor or the debtor that there is any thing wrong about it and some people quite innocently might charge a little money say of four annas or eight annas on a loan of hundred rupees or so. When it comes to the court, probably the creditor innocently without knowing that there was anything wrong when questioned on the point and asked 'did you charge this' says, yes I charged Rs. 0-8-0 on account of kada. He has never entered it in the debit account of the debtor. As soon as this admission is made by him it is established that he has entered more in his account than he actually advanced and what happens; he loses either the whole or some part of the sum which he was claiming as a plaintiff in the money suit; that is well and good. Now another suit may be brought by that man after the commencement of the Money-lenders Registration Act, when it does become an Act, and it is proved that in such and such suit it was found that he had charged Rs. 0-8-0 more than he had actually advanced, the result is that he incurs this penalty without any warning. It may be said that everybody is presumed to know the law, but as a matter of fact we know it takes time before a novel legislation of this kind penetrates into the remote corners of the country and people might, as I have said, be still following that practice. Now no locus penitentiae is given to that man because if one instance of this kind is proved it renders his licence liable to cancellation. My submission is that it would be a great hardship on him. It would not be a question of deliberate dishonesty; it would be only a mistake in following a practice which has come down from time immemorial in that part of the country and although he was punished for having lost the whole or part of the amount for which he sued in the suit in which the finding was given he also loses his licence, as no limitation has been prescribed here whether he does it once or twice. He is not given the benefit of having done it once and having received a warning. My submission therefore is, that if the Honourable the Premier was good enough to have added the words 'more than two suits' in sub-clause (1), why did he not remain equally considerate when he came to sub-clause (2) of this clause. Why did he not add similar words at the end of this clause or in the middle as has been proposed in the amendment under discussion. I have sent in an amendment to the effect that the words 'more than once' be added at the end of the sub-clause. I was very reluctant, if not timid, knowing the temper of the Government: I said only 'more than once.' Munshi Hari Lal has been bold enough: he says more than twice, the same as in sub-clause (1).

I do not see really any reason why Government should not accept this amendment. After all what is it that they had in their mind. Every offence is punishable, but the punishment must be commensurate with the seriousness of the offence. A friend of mine was just remarking to the Honourable Premier that if a punishment of transportation for life was prescribed, it would certainly be a greater deterrent. But the punishment proposed here may prove even heavier. There you take away a man's liberty for 14 or 20 years and here you make him liable to lose all that he has earned in his life, if his licence is cancelled for a long time and all his suits become time-barred. My submission is that the Honourable Premier should accept this amendment and if not the whole of it, let him at least accept the words "more than once" and that would be some safeguard for the poor and innocent money-lender who might have made a slip in one instance and which when come to light might serve as a warning from the court, and who does not repeat that practice.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, I have listened with interest to my honourable friend, Dr. Gokul Chand's discourse on the intricacies of kharta, bharta and so on. So far as I am aware—and I speak subject to correction because I have no personal experience of these matters—such transactions or such amounts or deductions—you might call them by any name which you please but I would merely for the sake of facility call them deductions but they are not shown in the khata of the account. If they are shown, at all they may be shown in the rough day book or bahi of the money-lender which is kept by him to tally his accounts. I am almost certain that those amounts are never shown in the khata. Therefore, for our present purpose it is out of the question and out of the picture. What we are at present concerned with and which my honourable friend will concede with regard to those offences which a money-lender commits is that it is necessary that he should be under some disability with regard to this law or any other law for such fraudulent transactions. This is a dishonest loophole which can enable a dishonest money-lender to evade this law by paying out Rs. 100, and getting from his client a promote for Rs. 200 or he may ask him to put his thumb impression on a receipt of Rs. 300 or Rs. 400. Now, if that possibility is there and if that is a dishonest act on the part of a money-lender, does not my honourable friend consider it necessary that we should try to safeguard the interest, not only of the debtor, but also with a view to ensure the object which we have in passing this Bill, that is, to take away this temptation from the way of the money-lender? If you see section 37 of the Relief of Indebtedness Act, you will find there that all legitimate expenses are excluded. The money-lender will not be penalised for them and if he is not penalised by a court, he will not be penalised under this Act. After all what is the penalty which he has to pay? I have repeatedly said on the floor of the House that the penalty would be the cancellation of his licence. Now, Sir, you know better than I do—because you are more experienced in such matters—supposing a lawyer commits an offence or an irregularity, the duration of cancellation of his licence would depend on the nature of his offence. If the offence is only a light one, his licence will be suspended for 2, 3 or 6 months only.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Not by the blessed collector, but a full bench of the High Court sits.

Premier : Yes, and here too he would have been condemned by a competent court. The offence may be merely for getting help of the tout or may be that he takes extra money from his client for which he is liable criminally. But I merely give you an analogy. There also the licence is cancelled. If a money-lender pays Rs. 100 to a man, and he asks him to put his thumb impression or signature on Rs. 200 or Rs. 300, does not my honourable friend consider that this is a heinous offence and that the collector should take action to cancel his licence? If that is his argument, then I think it does not hold any water at all. That is why we have not given similar facilities here as are given in some other clauses. Such money-lenders cannot be given any asylum and should be penalised if they are caught even once after committing this fraud? It is a grossly dishonest action on the part of a money-lender. It is the most heinous offence of cheating and forgery on the part of a money-lender. It is an offence, which every man with a sense of morality, would not only condemn, but would condemn very strongly. It is to that particular offence that this clause relates. I hope my honourable friend will not press his amendment.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

In sub-clause (i), line 2, between the words "part" and "under" the word "more than twice" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, I beg to move that—

At the end of sub-clause (ii) the words "more than once" be added.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Sub-clause (ii) stand part of clause 6.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal : I beg to move that—

In sub-clause (iii), line 1, between the words "dismissed" and "with" the word "more than twice" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (iii) stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (iv), line (1), between the words "suit" and "dismissed" the words "for the recovery of a loan" be inserted.

As repeatedly announced by the Honourable Premier the object of the Bill is to purify money-lending and to reform the money-lenders, to get rid of dishonest ones and to help if possible honest ones and to place them, as one honourable member on the other side said, in the position of patriarchs in the villages so to say. My submission is that sub-clause (iv) does not qualify the suit mentioned in it. It simply says—'has had his suit dismissed with a finding that it is fraudulent.' My objection to this sub-clause is that it is too wide and too vague. Is it meant to cover all money suits? From what I see, it covers other suits also. It may not be a suit between a money-lender and the debtor. It may be a suit between a brother and brother with respect to partition. It may be a suit between partners in a business with respect to rendition of accounts. There may be various other kinds of suits. It may be that the courts may hold that a suit is not bona fide that the plaintiff is trying to take advantage of his partner or of his brother and so on. I submit that the Government by means of this Bill does not propose to set itself up as an inquisition, the inquisition with which we are familiar in the history of Spain and of some other countries. Is the Premier out to preach morality all round, to teach honesty to all people or is he going to purify money-lending so far as this Bill is concerned? I shall welcome his efforts to purify the world and to make people more moral and righteous if he can, but the question is whether he is not going beyond the scope of the Bill by penalising all kinds of suits. The word 'fraudulent' is not defined in this Bill. The question is whether it is to be taken in the sense of section 417 or 420. Again there are various shades of fraud, for instance, cheating as defined in the Indian Penal Code. Is the object of the Bill really to set up a moral code and penalise people in their money suits or for something they might have done in a suit which has absolutely nothing to do with monetary transactions? Is the Government going to set up a standard for money-lenders which they have not set up for anybody else? Is the Government going to deprive a money-lender of his licence simply because in a single case a sub-judge happens to find that the suit is fraudulent?

Mr. Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in sub-clause (iv), line 1, between the words "suit" and "dismissed" the words "for the recovery of a loan" be inserted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General Rural): Unless the Government has made up its mind not to make any alterations in the Bill as reported by the select committee, I think that in my humble opinion this seems to be a case of omission which must be supplied. If you read sub-clause (iii) you will find that the Government itself provides that if a person makes a material alteration dishonestly and fraudulently in any document relating to a loan he is penalised. But if he is found by a court to have made material alterations in a document not relating to a loan—he may have made it fraudulently and dishonestly—then he is not penalised. But in sub-clause (iv) you do not find a similar exception. Here also some exceptions should have been made in the case of fraud not relating to loan transaction. There is no reason why the words 'document relating to loans' which appear in sub-clause (iii) should not equally be found in sub-clause (iv) also. To me it appears that this is a case of pure omission. The intention of the select committee of which I was a member and the intention of Government as I could gather, was only to penalise those delinquents who committed fraud in their relationship as creditors and debtors and not to penalise persons for other moral delinquencies with respect to cancellation of licences. Therefore I commend the amendment to the support of the House. By accepting this amendment the original intention of Government will be carried out; otherwise we will be setting up a code of morality for money-lenders which we do not expect from any one else.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : I feel that on this occasion the Government should feel thankful to Dr. Narang for the effort he has taken in order to get the Government out of a difficulty. The position he has pointed out with respect to this clause is very clear. There are one thousand and one forms of frauds which have nothing to do with money-lending. But to make this an excuse for cancelling the licence or to make any suit of a money-lender for recovery of his money liable to be dismissed is really very extraordinary. I can well understand that moral turpitude or moral delinquency sometimes enters into the consideration of the question of punishment. But I am not aware of any rule of jurisprudence which lays down that if a certain kind of suit of a money-lender has been dismissed, his claim with regard to all kinds of money transactions should be dismissed. This is a hopeless proposition. It appears that particular attention has not been paid to the drafting of these Bills. I find that some of these Bills have been badly drafted. It is mainly due to Sir Gokul Chand Narang that the defects in the drafting of these Bills have been pointed out. I am sure the Honourable Premier will realise the effect of bad drafting and will accept the suggestion made.

Munshi Hari Lal : (South Western Towns, General, Urban) : I want to add a few remarks to the arguments advanced by my honourable friends. All the sub-clauses except (iv) of clause 6 deal with loan or money transaction in some form or other. But it is only sub-clause (iv) that does not refer to the word 'loan' or the 'money transaction'. The word 'suit' has been left undefined there. I believe that this is an inadvertent omission, not an intentional omission. This mistake was not discovered in the select committee. If it had been pointed out there the omission would have been considered and necessary amendment would have been made. The whole basis of clause 6 is 'money transaction' and 'loan' and no other transaction. I, therefore, submit that this amendment should be accepted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I might at the very outset point out to my honourable friends, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang and Mr. Puri, that it was not an omission on the part of the Government that this clause appears as it is. If my honourable friends would refer to the original sub-clause as it went before the select committee, it is worded like this, 'has had his suit dismissed as vexatious, fraudulent or frivolous.' We cut out those words 'vexatious' and 'frivolous' in the select committee. If I may be permitted to explain to my honourable friends as best as I can why this sub-clause was put in, I might point out that the various sub-clauses give a definite indication of a specific kind of offence committed by the money-lender and it is only when those specified offences are committed that the collector can refuse the licence. The value of these offences need not necessarily be the same—the penal value. If, for instance, Dr. Sir Narang is adjudicating on a case like this he is likely to give 4 black marks for the offence enumerated in sub-clause (iii) and he might give only 2 black marks for another offence mentioned in sub-clause (iv). Therefore, the actual penalty of cancellation of the licence would vary according to the offence. It may be a cancellation for 15 days, or it may be a cancellation for a month. I was surprised at the argument of my honourable friend over there. He said it is quite possible that these suits may not relate to any money transaction concerning a loan as defined in this Act but it might be a matter concerning a partition with his brother or rendition of accounts with a partner. I beg to submit that if he has committed a fraud against his brother or against his partner in business, certainly the offence would be very heinous from whatever point you look at it. If a person is capable of cheating his own brother or his own partner, then surely he is not a person to be given a licence so that he may go on robbing everybody. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: A man who commits incest?) It is quite possible that the subordinate court may find that he has committed some sort of fraud. Then he can go to the appellate court and then finally to the High Court and if the highest court in the province finds him guilty of cheating his brother, do you think that that person can go about with impunity and rob people right and left? He is not the right type of man to be given a licence for money-lending. It is the character of the dishonest money-lender which is under review. A money-lender who cheats his own partner surely cannot be described by any stretch of language to be an honest money-lender. But as I have said it is the question of the nature of the offence and on which the collector bases his penalty. My honourable friend, Lala Duni Chand, referred to jurisdiction. There he has advantage over me because, as I have said, I am not a lawyer. When he talks about jurisdiction I shudder in my seat because he always comes forward with several legal complexities which are beyond me to understand. He referred to jurisprudence and said that my honourable friend, Sir Gokul Chand Narang had come to the help of Government, to get us out of a bad piece of drafting. But if this is jurisprudence, I think I can become a lawyer to-morrow without passing an examination.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: You narrowly missed it.

Premier: There is one other point and that is with regard to the nature and value of delinquency which my friend Rai Bahadur Mukand Lal Puri put forward. He said but this is a lesser delinquency, therefore, we should also put in a word suggested by my friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand. It would be a repetition, but if cheating a brother is a lesser delinquency I do not know what would be more heinous.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: May I put one question? What is the reason for retaining the word relating to loans in sub-clause (3) which does not apply to sub-clause (4).

Premier: I had tried to explain that in sub-clause (3) we had given indication of a definite kind of guilt that if he committed forgery, he would be penalized. It would be for the collector to decide the nature and extent of that offence. Under this clause it is the cases of the kind which my honourable friend has mentioned in his argument which we had in view. For instance, a man is held by a court to have committed a deliberate fraud and then he comes forward and says, 'yes, I have committed a fraud but I must have my licence.' Should he be allowed to go on cheating and committing fraud? I think in such a case a collector should have a right to cancel his licence if he finds that he has been guilty of a deliberate fraud. This is what I want to submit.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I do not want to make a lengthy speech in reply, but it is probably the hundredth time if you do not want any exaggeration, the Honourable Premier has repeated and repeated, and repeated it again and again ad-nauseam that he is out to punish the dishonest money-lender and if a money-lender is dishonest in this respect or that respect, he does not deserve to carry on his business. My submission is this and this is unfortunately the point which the Honourable Premier has missed, we are dealing with the money-lender as such, and therefore, when we make the clauses too extensive and too wide, we are really going beyond the scope of the Bill. Now if a man cheats his brother, he says he commits a heinous sin. Certainly he does commit a heinous sin, but if he commits incest does he not commit a heinous offence, is it not more heinous say if he abducts a woman, some body's daughter? Does he not commit a more heinous sin than a man commits in defrauding some one? Why do you not include this and why do you not legislate that a money-lender should be an angel descended from heaven, a cherub as honest as Adam was before he fell, and then alone he can carry on the business of money-lending? We are not out to defend a dishonest money-lender; what we are urging is that you should not go beyond the scope of this Bill. Deal only with those acts which he commits as a money-lender and do not enter into his private life, because entering into peoples' private life is a delicate matter and we should confine ourselves only to the issue that we have before us, namely, whether a money-lender as a money-lender has committed dishonesty or fraud? We are not here to see that no money-lender should commit fraud, we are not here to see that no money-lender should commit theft or that no money-lender should commit perjury in courts. Why have you not included even perjury and other sins enumerated either in the Bible or the Indian Penal Code? If the idea is to make a money-lender a paragon of virtue, if this is the idea we should see that he is free from all sorts of sins like a babe born yesterday. Is this the object of the Bill? I respectfully submit that this is not the object of the Bill and that is why I am telling them that if in a suit for the recovery of a loan, he has been found guilty of fraud, do punish him but do not go beyond his capacity as a money-lender because then we are treading on dangerous ground, on ground which is not covered by the Bill. We should not be misunderstood when we move these amendments that we are protecting dishonest money-lenders. We only object when you expect a money-lender to be virtuous beyond all measure of morality which is applicable to ordinary men. This is the position. If we impose such a high standard we do not know where people would be. I would therefore respectfully submit to the Honourable Premier that he should confine his efforts to the scope of the Bill itself. I draw his attention to sub-clause (B) which we have just passed. He says there 'a material alteration in any document relating to a loan.' Supposing a man buys ten acres of land, from some poor zamindar for a thousand rupees, but fraudulently he enters another zero again by entering into a conspiracy with the petition-writer or the naib-tahsildar and supposing mutation also is made to the extent of 100 acres, is not that fraud and a very heinous fraud? But you have not included it in this sub-clause three, but you have included only alteration in a document dealing with the loan. There is a pronote or a namoon in haki and he makes an alteration there, you punish him because this is in his capacity as a money-lender and because it is legitimately within the scope of the Bill, but you do not go into other forgeries which he may commit in connection with other affairs. I submit that in sub-clause (4) also you should confine his delinquency to a suit for the recovery of a loan in which he might be found to have committed a fraud.

Premier : I am afraid it is not possible for me to make myself clear to the honourable member. What I tried to explain was that we know that there are several offences. My honourable friend says, supposing somebody abducts a woman. It is an offence under the Penal Code and the man who abducts will be punished and we have nothing further to do with him, but if he is a money-lender he will be sent to jail if convicted.

We were merely indicating the nature and extent of an offence for which a collector can take action in suspending the licence of a money-lender. The point which I was making was that a man who is guilty of a fraudulent transaction—supposing he does not lend money to an agriculturist but to a trader and he has been found guilty of fraud and he has been held by a court to have been guilty of fraud—is he not a proper person to be properly dealt with? This is what I was submitting with due deference to my honourable friends. If he is a money-lender we suspend his licence for a certain period so as to show him that if he commits another offence of that kind his licence may be withheld for a longer period. That is what we want to do and nothing more nor less. We are not concerned here whether he commits cheating or any other offence. If he does so he will get his due by being duly punished. It is only as a money-lender that we are concerned with him and if he commits a fraudulent transaction the presumption would be that he is corrupt. If he commits a fraud vis-a-vis an intelligent man or a lawyer, the presumption would be that he can cheat an unsophisticated zamindar who goes to him for a little loan. Therefore he should be warned or penalized to some extent for that offence and the period of suspension will depend on the nature of the offence.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That in sub-clause (iv), line 1, between the words "suit" and "dismissed" the words "for the recovery of a loan" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That sub-clause (iv) stand part of clause 6.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (v) stand part of clause 6.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : It is now 8 o'clock and the only remedy is that either we should keep quiet or we should sit here till the business is finished. I would respectfully submit that neither of these conditions would be quite reasonable. We have been working here since 2 o'clock and it is 8 o'clock now. But for a cup of tea for five minutes we have not left the hall. Either we should keep quiet, as I have said, or we should over-strain ourselves. Time was fixed from 2 P. M. to 8 P. M. and there seems to be no reason why we should sit later than the time which was fixed with the consent of both sides of the House. As I submitted the other day, it is rather unusual either for the Leader of the House or the Speaker to say at the rag-end of the day "We shall sit for another hour or two hours." I say with all respect that that is irregular and no one is a better judge than yourself whether it is in accordance with May's Parliamentary Practice or not. Do kindly tell me if it is in accordance with Parliamentary Practice to extend the time when the time fixed for the day's business is over. I think it is irregular.

Premier : Originally we decided to sit from 2 to 7. Then we decided to sit from 2 to 8. When I suggested that the sitting should be from 2 to 8, I also submitted that it would be in your discretion, i.e., if you think that the business of the House is proceeding satisfactorily you can have Wednesday as an off day but if you think that the business of the House is not proceeding satisfactorily you can extend the time so that we may sit for longer hours to finish the business. I know that it is inconvenient to both sides of the House, but last time when it was decided that we shall sit from 2 to 8, my honourable friend will bear me out, it was decided that we shall normally sit from 2 to 8 but if necessary we shall sit longer so as to finish the business as expeditiously as possible. That is what I recollect. I have no intention of slave-driving my honourable friend here. I know that these gentlemen—Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang and Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri—vie with each other in speaking on the same motion and dwell on the same arguments. They are perfectly at liberty to speak—and everybody else is at liberty to speak—but I may submit that if they have been sitting from 2 to 8, I also have been sitting likewise.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : We are equally anxious about your health.

Premier : I have in addition to do other work also. I am prepared, in the interest of this House and in the interest of curtailing time and in the interest of the province to sit till even mid-night but I would request my honourable friends either to curtail their speeches or else.....

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : May I say a word about what the Premier has said? I distinctly remember his having said on that day that he would like to sit after 8 P. M. if within a few minutes after 8 P. M. we can finish the business and he made pointed reference to me and said "Dr. Narang knows that sometimes we are at the end of the business and it would take only a few minutes to finish it and if we postpone it, it would take much longer time the following day." If it is the case that we can finish in five minutes it is useless to raise any objection, but it does not appear that we can finish the consideration of the various clauses of the Bill in five minutes or in fifty minutes and, therefore, I would request that we should stick to the time that was fixed by mutual consent.

Mr. Speaker : I suggest that we should sit on Saturday from 3 P. M. to 7 P. M. as usual and again from 10 P. M. to 4 A. M.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Everybody is not so strong as you. I wish we were and then we would sit the whole day and night.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I think ten days or a fortnight ago it was suggested that either we should sit longer or we should sit on off days. In accordance with the decision of the House you decided to sit from 11 to 6 or 6-30. We sat like that for only one day and we found that we could not work. We had an interval of 1½ hours that day. We again decided to sit from 2 to 7 and to sit on Wednesdays and Saturdays if necessary. Sir, we have been sitting from 2 to 3 and I suggested that day also and I do so to-day as well, that no man, who has to do any brain work, can work longer than six hours at a stretch (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Except the Speaker) and if he does so I am quite certain that he cannot think clearly, speak clearly and act clearly. I know that I have got no choice. We shall have to abide by whatever the time is fixed by the Leader of the House or you.

Mr. Speaker : I shall be guided by the wish of the House.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : But I would submit that it will be very hard upon us to ask us or to require us to sit longer than six hours each day. In my opinion six hours' work is quite sufficient. If the business of the day or the business which was fixed for the session has to be finished—I know that it has to be finished—it does not mean that discussion should be stifled by asking us to sit longer than six hours. If it is the desire that we should not express our opinion then it is a different thing.

Mr. Speaker : Has discussion been stifled up to this time ?

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I do not say that it has been stifled but if we sit longer, as has been suggested, it will be impossible for us to work and that will mean stifling of the discussion. That is my point. I do not mean that you have stifled discussion. I was submitting that if we repeat arguments you have every authority to stop us and also prevent us from making irrelevant speeches, but we have to express our opinion. Therefore I would submit with all humility that we should not be called upon to sit longer than six hours a day at the cost of our health.

Premier : Sir, so far as I am concerned I am at a disadvantage because I cannot possibly controvert what my honourable friend says on the point as he is a medical man and knows all about it perfectly well. But from my own experience I can say that surely there are people who work not only for six hours a day but work for 14 hours a day, day in and day out, week in and week out. I can from my personal experience testify to the fact that there are several secretaries in the Secretariat who sit for more than 10 hours a day and very late in the evening ; that is not so only in the case of one or two secretaries who have not heavy portfolios. I think it is rather the rule than an exception. The main proposition I have to put forward before you is this that we have to finish the work expeditiously.

[Premier.]

There may be some people outside who think that by this process of delay we might be able to elbow out these Bills. My submission is that that is not the intention of the Government. I have heard rumours of that kind. As a matter of fact I believe one or two irresponsible rags have given a hint to that effect. So far as I am concerned let me assure my honourable friend opposite that we have brought this legislation deliberately and we intend to proceed with it even if I have to go to Lahore and sit there to finish this legislation. Let me make that quite clear. I would appeal to my honourable friends and I appeal to you to get this work finished expeditiously.

Mr. Speaker : I see no objection to our sitting on Saturday.

Premier : I have not yet finished. I was submitting that last time I left it to you to fix off-days. My honourable friend said that Wednesday should be an off-day. No objection was taken to it. If we had sat yesterday it would have meant that we would have worked for six more precious hours which have been lost. My submission is that ordinarily every day we should sit from 2 to 8. So far as to-day is concerned we might finish the clause which is under consideration. On Saturday we should sit from 2 to 8 and if we find that the work has not made sufficient progress we can sit late. Before I sit down I want to make it quite clear to the House that we are going to sit on Saturday definitely.

Mr. Speaker : Yes, we will sit from 2 to 8.

Premier : I might for the information of my honourable friends say that if we do not finish the work on Saturday we will sit on Monday and Tuesday and if need be on Wednesday and Thursday also. I now submit that we might finish the clause to-day.

Mr. Speaker : Why not sit on Monday and Tuesday, observing Wednesday as off-day, and then again on Thursday, Friday and Saturday?

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : To-day we must rise at 8 o'clock. It is past 8. I think the sense of the House is that Saturday should be an off-day.

Premier : No.

Mr. Speaker : We will sit on five days in a week, Wednesday and Sunday being off-days.

Premier : Would it be necessary to adopt the procedure even now? We might finish the business on Wednesday.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : If we are sitting for five days a week and at the same time we are working for six hours a day instead of 4½, I would submit that it would be very hard upon us to sit longer than 8 o'clock to-day.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : We always used to sit for four hours a day and got through our business all right; the debate was never stifled.

Premier : Those old days are not likely to come now. We have to work hard. We are the servants of the people and have to work hard even if we die.

Mr. Speaker : If we are to finish clause 6, we may have to sit for an hour or so. About 42 amendments still remain and over and above them there are 4 new amendments by Sayad Amjad Ali.

Premier : So far as these new amendments are concerned, I give a guarantee that they will not take more than 4 minutes. Other amendments also are more or less of the same nature which we have already discussed.

Mr. Speaker : Finish we may not; but we can do something. So, let us sit for a little while at least.

Lieutenant Sardar Nannihal Singh Mann : Sir, I would make a request on behalf of members sitting on these benches that instead of having a holiday on Wednesday, we should get Saturday, because most of us want to go to our homes and so we must be given two days.

Mr. Speaker : I admire the honourable members who can sit for 5 days continuously, but I cannot. So, we must have one off-day.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : The sense of the House on this side is that we should disperse now.

Mr. Speaker : Strictly speaking, it is for the House to continue its business for as many hours as it decides.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I understand that we should decide this matter before the working hours and not after it.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of order, Sir. Is it constitutionally right and proper to sit after a fixed time? I want your ruling on this point, because no motion was moved in the beginning of working hours to-day that the House should sit after 8 o'clock.

Mr. Speaker : Once the House fixes the number of hours for any particular day, I think, it must follow its own decision, unless it reverses or modifies it unanimously.

Premier : Now the Parliamentary practice has been brought in and I know that practice. I say that I will, if necessary, move to-morrow that the House should sit up to 12 midnight till the business is finished.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Now that you have given your ruling on this point, it is open to the Honourable Premier to move a motion that we should sit from 2 P.M. up to 12 midnight or up to 2 A.M. next day. Let him move this motion if he likes. If he is so vindictive, we are prepared—

(Cries of Order, order from the Treasury benches.) I would not give way unless Mr. Speaker wants me to sit down. I ask the Honourable Premier whether he made this proposal seriously. (Voices : Order, order.)

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member should not have used the word "vindictive". It may not be undesirable from his point of view; but it may be undesirable from the point of view of others, if not unparliamentary. (Voices : It must be withdrawn.)

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I ask the Honourable Premier, through you, what is his objection to this word? I want to know how the word "vindictive" is undesirable.

Mr. Speaker : It is prima facie offensive.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I would ask the Honourable Premier to say first whether he made that proposal in seriousness and whether it was not by way of retaliation and then I will be pleased to withdraw this word.

Mr. Speaker : No honourable member of this House should disbelieve the Honourable Premier or attribute motives. The honourable member not only used the word "vindictive", but he further used the word "retaliation."

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I bow to your ruling. I appeal to you and to the Honourable Premier himself to say that the threat that he gave to us that he would move a motion to-morrow that the House should sit from 2 P.M. to 12 midnight, was a serious one or a reasonable one and was not actuated by any other consideration. Let him say that he made that remark seriously and then I can assure you that I will withdraw the words "vindictive" and "retaliation."

Mr. Speaker : The Honourable Premier has been openly saying that he wished to finish the business as soon as possible. He has not concealed it. So, I hope the honourable member would, in fairness, withdraw his words.

Premier : If I had used that remark with any sense which my honourable friend wanted to attribute to me, he is wrong, because I had been submitting, a few minutes ago, that we should sit to-day till we finish the business. If there was any vindictiveness I would not have suggested that. It would only suit my purpose if you would allow me to move that motion to-morrow. You have now appealed to the House and I have also appealed to the House. As a matter of fact, I knew the sense of the House at least on this side of the House and they want to go through the work as soon as possible. It was for that reason that I suggested that we might sit regularly from 2 P.M. to 12 midnight until we finish our business. The Parliament has done it several times. It sits from 8 to 11 o'clock and sometimes even longer. I do not see why we should not do the same thing here in the interest of public business. I can assure my honourable friends that the strain on me, considering that I have to do my ordinary routine work and other work connected with the administration of the province, which is in addition to this work, is greater than on anybody else. I say, after fullest consideration, that in the interest of public business I am prepared to sit here till 12 o'clock and I expect my honourable friends—whatever their feelings may be with regard to this particular legislation—that in the interest of the province they should also co-operate with me in expediting the business of the House.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : The Honourable Premier has been pleased to remark that this part of the House does not want to carry on the work expeditiously. He also remarked that whatever we may feel about the Bill we should help him in carrying out our duty. I have told him several times that it is not with a desire to obstruct his work that I say that we cannot go on any further to-day. I think it is very unfair on the part of the Honourable Premier to attach motives to us.

Premier : I may assure my honourable friend that I attach no motives to anybody. I only said that some of us are in favour of the Bill and others not, and that in spite of whatever our feelings on this Bill may be, every section of the House must co-operate with me in getting through the work expeditiously.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : My objection is to the remark of the Honourable Premier that this part of the House does not want to carry on the work expeditiously.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : So far as I am concerned, the Honourable Premier's remarks led me to believe that he wanted to punish us. As he has now said that that was not his intention and that he seriously meant to sit late in the night, I have no objection to withdrawing the words, "vindictive" and "retaliatory" which I used.

Premier : I am much obliged.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General Rural) : I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (vi), line 3, for the words "money transaction" the word "loan" be substituted.

You will observe that clause (vi) reads like this—"has been found guilty by a court of forgery or cheating in respect of a money transaction."

I quite agree that forgery is a great sin and that cheating also is equally a great sin. These are no doubt offences under the Penal Code. But the present sub-clause is very vague. I really do not understand the scope of the words "money transactions" occurring in the sub-clause. To buy vegetables in the market is a money transaction, to buy postage stamps is also a money transaction, buying a pair of shoes is also a money transaction. What is the money transaction that is referred to in this sub-clause? The object of this Bill is to get better control over money-lenders in the pursuit of their profession. Therefore only those transactions which fall within the purview of this Bill should be included in the sub-clause and not all monetary transactions in the world. In order to bring this sub-clause within the scope of the Bill it is necessary that the word "loan" should be substituted for the words "money transactions." The word "loan" has been defined at length in the Bill and all that is necessary is only to reform and regulate all money transactions with respect to loans. We should not wander away from the scope of the Bill.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (vi), line 3, for the words " money transactions " the word " loan " be substituted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : It will be observed that the expression " money transaction " is nowhere defined in the Bill. We should not leave anything in the Bill vague and meaningless. The word " loan " on the other hand is defined. Therefore in the interest of preciseness and in the interest of decent legislation if we stick to the one term which we have defined we will be doing the right thing. I support the amendment.

Premier : (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat Khan.) I have not got very much to say on the question now before the House. As a matter of fact the argument put forward by my honourable friend opposite more or less applies to the previous clause also. No doubt the expression " money transaction " is not defined in this Bill. But I believe everybody understands what that expression means. Moreover the sub-clause refers to money transactions in which a court has found a person guilty of fraud or cheating. If we substitute the word " loan " in the sub-clause it will restrict the principle of this clause. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Then, make the expression more definite). Money transaction is quite clear to everybody. I fear that my friend's apprehension that money transaction may refer to buying something in the market looks ridiculous.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in sub-clause (vi), line 3, for the words " money transaction " the word " loan " be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (vi) stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : I beg to move—

That in Proviso, line 2, between the words " appeal " and " or " the words " or review " be inserted.

It will be observed that in this proviso there is an appeal provided as also revision. But there is no provision for review. Clause 11 provides for review and naturally the licence should not be cancelled till the period allowed for review has expired.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in Proviso, line 2, between the words " appeal " and " or " the words " or review " be inserted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : There is an amendment in my name on this very point. It reads as follows :—

That in the proviso, lines 3-4, for the words " or in cases of appeal . . . decided " the following be substituted :—

" and in case an appeal or revision has been filed until it has been finally decided. "

May I move it ?

Premier : I fear Munshi Hari Lal was arguing on wrong premises. As a matter of fact the proviso here refers to appeals and revisions in courts and not before collectors or commissioners. This proviso deals with offences committed by money-lenders and tried in a court of law. As far as Dr. Narang's amendment is concerned, I would be prepared to accept it, but in a different language. We ourselves propose moving an amendment to achieve the object which Dr. Narang has in view.

Munshi Hari Lal : I beg leave to withdraw my amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghasanfar Ali Khan) : I beg to move—

That the proviso be amended so as to read as follows :—

“ Provided that the Collector shall not cancel a licence until the period of appeal or revision, as the case may be, has expired ; or in case of appeal or revision, the appeal or revision has been finally decided.”

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That the proviso be amended so as to read as follows :—

Provided that the Collector shall not cancel a licence until the period of appeal or revision, as the case may be, has expired ; or in case of appeal or revision the appeal or revision has been finally decided.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : There is one point I wish to point out. There is no provision for review. The period allowed for revision is less than that allowed for review. Therefore you must provide for review also. There have been several cases where parties have succeeded on reviews. The period allowed for review is sometimes longer even than the limitation for appeals. I am sure the learned Advocate-General will be able to throw light on this point. I would, therefore, suggest that the word “ review ” also should be added in the proviso.

Premier : I accept the suggestion of the honourable member, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, and agree to the insertion of the word “ review.”

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : The proviso will have to be carefully worded so as to include the word ‘ review. ’ I do not think it would be advisable to hurry through this proviso at this late hour. I think it may be left to the learned Advocate-General to amend the proviso in such a way that it is properly worded inserting the word ‘ review ’ in its proper place and bring up the amendment before the House to-morrow.

Premier : May I read it out to see if it is approved by my honourable friends ? After I have accepted the suggestions of all of you which are incorporated in Raja Ghasanfar Ali's draft, the proviso will read thus :—

Provided that the Collector shall not cancel a licence until the period of appeal, revision or review, as the case may be, has expired ; or in case of appeal, revision or review, the appeal, revision or review has been finally decided.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : That is all right.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the proposed proviso, as amended, and which runs as follows, be adopted :—

Provided that the Collector shall not cancel a licence until the period of appeal, revision or review, as the case may be, has expired ; or in case of appeal, revision or review, the appeal, revision or review has been finally decided.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That Clause 6, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : We sat after your ruling to please and appease the Premier (laughter) and I am sure he would not carry his threat any further by keeping us in the House till 12 midnight.

Premier : I would suggest that we should meet from 2-30 to 9-30 to-morrow.

Mrs. J. A. Shah Nawaz : Mr. Speaker, I am surprised to find that there is such a strong opposition to our sitting longer. At the end of the year 1930 on New Year's Eve, we were sitting until 2 o'clock in the morning for the work of the Round Table Conference. Although the Chairman was not well and repeated requests were made to him, he said that the work must be finished.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : But I cannot congratulate them on their achievements in England. Let us not follow them.

Mrs. J. A. Shah Nawaz : It is because of those achievements that you are here in this Hall to-day.

The Assembly then adjourned till 2-30 P. M. on Friday, 15th July, 1938.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

*3322-A.—Vide Debates of 21st July, 1938.

CASUALTIES RESULTING FROM CHANGE OF CASTE.

*3323. Sardar Uttam Singh Duggal : Will the Honourable Premier be pleased to state whether he has read the Statement of Objects and Reasons annexed to the Agricultural Tribes Right of Defence Bill, notice of which has been given by Khan Muhammad Yusuf Khan, M.L.A., for this session of the Assembly ; if so, the number of cases in which as stated in the said Statement the change of caste has resulted in bloodshed and mutual ill-will amongst the inhabitants of any village and the nature of casualties resulting therefrom, giving the name of the place and parties affected and also the number of suits filed during the last ten years in courts for the change of caste with the number of those successful ?

The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The information is not readily available and the time and labour involved in the collection of information asked for by the honourable member will not be commensurate with the results.

SARDAR GURMUKH SINGH, PRISONER.

*3324. Munshi Hari Lal : Will the Honourable Minister for Finance be pleased to state—

(a) the weight of Sardar Gurmukh Singh, repatriated Andaman prisoner residing in the Multan Central Jail at the time of his admission to the Multan Jail and his present weight ;

(b) the condition of his health at present ?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : Attention is invited to the reply given to parts (c) and (d) of the Assembly question No. *9151<sup>1</sup> put by the honourable member Sardar Hari Singh.

FRUIT TRANSPORT ON HINDUSTAN-TIBET ROAD.

*3325. Lala Duni Chand : Will the Honourable Minister for Public Works be pleased to state—

(a) whether he has received a copy of the resolutions passed at a meeting of the Kotgarh Fruit Growers Associations held on 17th June 1938 at Kotgarh embodying the reasons for opening up the Hindustan-Tibet Road for the motor transport of fruit to Simla and a request for being allowed to wait in deputation upon him and the Honourable Premier and if so, the reply, if any, sent to the Association ;

*3322-A.—Vide Debates of 21st July, 1938.

- (b) whether in view of the urgency and importance of the matter the Government has considered the question of opening up the said road for the said purpose, and if so, what decision has been arrived at ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that Sardar Lal Singh, Honorary Secretary, Punjab P. C. Fruit Development Board, Lahore, has also sent a representation to the Punjab Government accompanied by a memorandum in which he has exhaustively dealt with the question of opening up the said road for fruit transport purposes, if so, what action has been taken thereon ?

The Honourable Nawabzada Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana : (a) Yes, it was received on the 20th June, 1938. No reply has yet been sent to the Kotgarh Fruit Growers Association as the matter is under consideration.

(b) The road is in the charge of the Punjab Public Works Department only for purposes of maintenance. It is the concern of the Government of India to open it for public motor transport or not. The subject has been referred to the Government of India.

(c) Yes. As stated above, action in the matter taken by the Punjab Government was to refer the matter to the Government of India.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it true that as a result of encouragement given by the Punjab Agricultural Department a number of fruit orchards have been planted recently in Kotgarh tahsil, particularly in Kotgarh area ?

Mr. Speaker : That does not arise out of this question.

Lala Duni Chand : The object of the whole question is whether the Government has provided any transport facilities on this road for the fruit growers. I also want to know whether the Government is prepared to grant any transport facilities.

Mr. Speaker : That question has been answered. What is the supplementary question ?

Lala Duni Chand : The question is whether the Government, in view of the fact that the Agricultural Department of the Punjab Government has encouraged the promotion of fruit industry, is prepared to afford any transport facilities on this road.

Mr. Speaker : Responsibility to maintain this road, if I understand it aright, is entirely that of the Government of India.

Minister : The Punjab Government is maintaining the road on behalf of the Government of India.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it not open to the Punjab Government to suggest to the Government of India that transportation facilities should be given on this road ?

Minister : I might inform the honourable member that representations containing all that he has been saying, have been forwarded to the Government of India and they are being considered on merits.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : Is the Honourable Minister aware of the fact that after the Punjab Government had recommended that the road be opened to traffic, the late Governor of the Punjab opposed this proposal of opening the road ?

Minister : It does not arise out of this question.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : I know it definitely that after the Punjab Government had recommended the opening of this road the late Governor of the Punjab opposed the suggestion.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is giving information.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : My question is that the Honourable Minister has stated that it is a central subject, but I may state that after the Punjab Government had recommended the opening of the road, the late Governor of the Punjab opposed the suggestion.

Premier : No.

Minister : No. It is wrong.

Lala Duni Chand : Is it true that on account of the lack of transport facilities lot of fruit, which it would be possible to export, is not being exported ?

Mr. Speaker : That is a question of opinion.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

SUPPLY OF WATER ON THE RAYA DISTRIBUTARY OF THE UPPER BARI DOAB CANAL.

Khan Sahib Chaudhri Fazal Din : Will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state whether he is aware of the fact that there is serious discontent among the irrigators on the Raya Distributary of the Upper Bari Doab Canal on account of the outlets of this channel having been considerably reduced and that the zamindars have closed the outlets in protest ? If so, what action Government intends to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : The Raya Distributary has an authorised full supply of twenty cusecs against which it has actually been given a temporary full supply discharge of twenty seven cusecs to carry hag to the tail, but in spite of this the tail of the distributary was getting 12 per cent. less and its minor 44 per cent. less than their share of the water at the head. Government must give the proper share of the available water to all shareholders on a channel, and to secure this, 13 outlets out of 21 were adjusted to ensure the proper supply to the tail, still keeping 27 cusecs at the head of the distributary. Even after carrying out these adjustments these 13 outlets are getting 35 per cent. more water than their authorized full supply or hag with 20 cusecs at the head of the distributary.

Government considers that there are no real grounds for any agitation and that the closure of the outlets is unwarranted, and is, probably, due to undue pressure from interested parties. This unwarranted closure of outlets on the upper reaches of the distributary seriously interferes with the distribution of water in the middle and tail reaches of the distributary which causes loss to those who wish to have canal water and have not joined this bolstered up agitation. In the interest of the irrigators of the distributary and to ensure equitable supply of water to the zamindars Government may have to consider the question of permanently closing down the outlets of irrigators who have, at the instigation of interested parties, stopped taking the canal water since the 1st and 2nd of June, 1938, as apparently canal water is not required by them. It is necessary that water should be distributed equitably to all shareholders on this distributary and to ensure that those who have not closed their outlets do not suffer. Moreover, in the interests of the State the surplus water must be utilised elsewhere and given to those who want it.

It may be noted that in case the Government is compelled to take such action, the interests of zamindars who have been misled into closing their outlets will permanently suffer as once these outlets are closed down and water distributed elsewhere it will not be possible for Government to give water to those who have refused to take it. The result would be that the unsophisticated zamindars who have been duped into closing their outlets by agitators, for their own ends, would suffer.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : May I enquire from the Honourable Minister since when supply of water has been reduced to the tail ?

Minister : If the honourable member wants that information he should give notice.

REFUSAL TO ADMIT TO J. A.-V. CLASS GIRLS NOT TAKING UP ALGEBRA AND GEOMETRY IN MATRICULATION.

Begum Rashida Latif Baji : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the girls are refused admissions to the J. A.-V. classes on the ground of their not having taken up Algebra and Geometry for their Matriculation Examination and whether it is also a fact that in most of the Government girls' schools no arrangement exists for the teaching of these subjects, if so, the action intended to be taken to remove the grievances of the girls seeking admission to the J. A.-V. ?

The Honourable Mian Abdul Haye : (a) Yes. Girls are refused admission to J. A.-V. classes on the ground of their not having taken Algebra and Geometry in the Matriculation Examination, because mathematics is a compulsory subject in the J. A.-V. examination.

(b) It is not a fact that in most Government girls' schools no arrangements exist for the teaching of these subjects, as arrangements do exist in all Government girls' schools.

(c) The question of action to be taken, therefore, does not arise.

THE PUNJAB REGISTRATION OF MONEYLENDERS BILL.

Clause 7.

Mr. Speaker : The House will proceed to consider the Moneylenders Registration Bill.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (1), line 2, the words " suo motu or " be omitted.

My object is that it should not be open to the collector to take action of his own free will. We know, Sir, that there will be parties, and persons who will be affected and it will be open to them to represent the matter to the collector. After all the collector is not a person who is interested in this matter. There are other persons who are interested in the matter. There is another thing also why the collector should not be given that power. The collector is exercising mostly executive powers and this law places most of the executive powers in his hands. It does not appear to be fair that the collector should be given initiative in the matter. The initiative should lie with other persons who have got real interest in the matter. With these words I move my amendment and I hope that it will commend itself to the other side of the House also.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

In sub-clause (1), line 2, the words "suo motu or" stand part of clause 7.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move that—

In sub-clause (1), line 5, after the word "hence," the words "within the period prescribed" be added.

My object in moving this amendment is to suggest that if a court declares that a moneylender has been guilty of contravention of the provisions of law and that his suits are therefore dismissed, there should be a time limit for the collector or for an applicant to move the collector to take proceedings for the cancellation of the money-lenders' licence. If no such period of time is fixed, the sword of Democles, so to say, will always be hanging over the head of the moneylender by virtue of the provisions of clause 6. He will never know when the action to cancel his licence may be taken against him. It is therefore necessary that the collector should proceed or the person who presents an application for the cancellation of the licence of the money-lender should do so within a prescribed period. I have in my amendment merely requested the Government to fix a time. What that time will be, I have left to the Government to decide at the time of framing rules. I hope that the Government will see the reasonableness of my amendment and will accept it.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

In sub-clause (1), line 5, after the word "hence" the words "within the period prescribed" be added.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Sub-clause (1) of clause 7 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Sub-clause (2) of clause 7 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Clause 7 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 8.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban).
(Urdu): Sir, I beg to move my amendment in the following amended form—

That in proviso, line 3, between the words "application" and "is" the words "for review" be inserted.

The object of this amendment is that a licence shall not be deemed to be cancelled during the period when an appeal or any application for review is pending before the commissioner under section 11. You are giving to the commissioner the powers of review also. He can review his own order under section 11. Therefore, I propose this amendment and if it is accepted the proviso would read as follows :—

.....when an appeal or an application for review.....

Premier : Section 11 covers this.

Munshi Hari Lal : No. It is provided in this clause that a licence shall not be deemed to be cancelled unless the appeal is disposed of. I submit that it should not be deemed to be cancelled if any application for review is pending before the commissioner and until that is disposed of.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : Sir, I will try to explain the position. What Munshi Hari Lal means is this and that is how the clause should be redrafted :—

Provided that a licence shall not be deemed to be cancelled during the period when an appeal or an application for review or revision is pending before the Commissioner under section 11.

He has pointed out that, as there is no provision in this Bill for a petition for revision before the commissioner or before anybody else, he is omitting the words "or revision" and is confining his amendment only to 'review'. I think he is perfectly right and I hope that the Government would not oppose his amended amendment, because the idea is that a licence shall not be deemed as cancelled while an appeal is pending. It follows that it should not be deemed to have been cancelled when an application for review is pending before the collector himself. Previously in an amendment which was accepted yesterday they have recognised the possibility of a review being filed either before the collector or before the commissioner. You will see, Sir, that in the proviso to clause 6 and also in sub-clause (2) of sub-clause 7....

Premier : That is not relevant here. I think what you want is that it should be "or application for review or application under sub-clause (4) of section 11 pending before the commissioner."

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : No, these are two separate things. There is a provision for an application being made to the commissioner for a certificate. That is provided in clause 11, but before that stage is reached, the person affected may like to move the collector again to review his order. Now when you are allowing for the period when the appeal is pending why should you not allow also for the period during which a review before the collector is pending or when an appeal has been rejected by the commissioner and an application for review of that order is pending before the commissioner? I will make the whole position clear. In the first place, there is an order by the collector, then a possibility of a review before him, and supposing the review is also rejected, an appeal shall lie to the commissioner. When that appeal too has been rejected, then there is a further possibility of an application for review before the commissioner. What Munshi Hari Lal wants, and I support him in that, is this: When you say that a licence shall not be deemed to be cancelled during the period when an appeal is pending, you should also say that it shall not be deemed to be cancelled when an appeal or an application for review or an application before a commissioner under section 11 is pending.

3 P. M.

Premier: That is exactly what I suggest. It is that the licence shall not be deemed to be cancelled during the period when an appeal or an application for review or an application under sub-section (4) of section 11 is pending before the commissioner.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: That meets my case.

Malik Barkat Ali: May I draw the attention of the Honourable Premier before he accepts this, to a very interesting situation? Supposing the collector cancels a licence to which an application is made.

Mr. Speaker: To which amendment is the honourable member speaking?

Malik Barkat Ali: I am opposing the amendment of Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.

Mr. Speaker: There is no amendment of his before the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Before the Honourable Premier sends in his amendment, I would like to avoid complication and move my amendment first. It is this:

That in the proviso, line 2, between the words "cancelled" and "during" the words "nor the name of the money-lender deemed to be struck off the register" be inserted.

I must acknowledge that it is for the benefit of the moneylender to help him out of an awkward position. I believe that is the object of the insertion of this proviso. My submission is that the proviso as it stands will be of no help to him unless the words that I have suggested are inserted. What does this proviso say? It says that as long as an appeal is pending or an application for review or an application under section 11 is pending a licence even after it has been cancelled by the collector shall not be deemed to have been cancelled for that period so that a moneylender's business during that period shall not be disturbed or hampered. That is the idea. But the framers of this proviso forget that if once his name has been struck off the register as is provided for in the first part of clause 3, the mere fact that his licence shall not be deemed to have been cancelled will not help him because under clause 3 which we have already passed, he cannot bring in a suit for the recovery of a loan unless his name is on the register and unless he holds a valid licence.

Mr. Speaker: The question is—

That in the proviso, line 2, between the words "cancelled" and "during", the words "nor the name of the money-lender deemed to be struck off the register" be inserted.

Premier: I accept the amendment.

The motion was carried.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : I move—
That in line 3 of the proviso, after the word "application" the following words be inserted :—

For review or an application under section 11.

The motion was carried.

Premier : I move :

That the last six words in the proviso be deleted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is :

That clause 8 with the proviso as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 9.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I move—

That the proviso be omitted.

The proviso as given in the clause begins with 'provided' and ends with 'cancelled' and forms part of the clause itself without being put separately. The reason why I want to omit it is this. It was fair on the part of the Government to have proposed the first part of the clause ending with 'moneylenders'. It was a necessary concession. But it seems that what they have given with one hand, they are taking away with the other by the addition of this proviso. I may submit that I have spent a lot of time over this proviso and I must say that I could not follow or comprehend its real object.

It seems something like

کھیر آئے سواہ بیان والی کل ۵

Or probably I have misunderstood the Government. If they had put in something like this 'provided that between the commencement of the Act and the date on which his current licence etc., he should not have committed this and that', that would have had some sense, though it would have been unnecessary in view of what we have already passed in connection with clause 6. Now what is the object of this proviso? The utmost that I could imagine as to what they mean is this : that the suits and applications pending at the time the Act came into force shall not be affected. But somebody suggested, what if after the commencement of the Act and before the day the licence is granted or the licence is renewed something has happened which has put a blot on the moneylender? If a blot has been put upon him during that time—it may be one week may be ten days and at the maximum it may be six months because that is the period prescribed in the Bill for taking out a licence after the commencement of the Act—if during that time he has done something, then even the suit which was pending at the time of the commencement of the Act or the application for execution pending at the time of the commencement of the Act will also be affected by the provisions of this Act. (Interruption.) If it does not mean that then it means nothing. (Interruption.) A period may not be prescribed. But that is where the difficulty arises. Say the Act comes into force on the 1st of January 1939. A suit of a moneylender is already pending on that day. He has not till then taken out a licence because he could not. (Premier : That would not be covered in any case). Under the first part of the clause that suit will not be affected nor an application for execution if it had been filed before the 1st January 1939 will be affected. Now comes the proviso. (Malik Barkat Ali : There is a semi-colon before 'provided'; it does not refer to the first part). (Premier : The semi-colon ought to be removed). The Honourable Premier says that the proviso has some relation to the first part and my honourable friend, Malik Barkat Ali is laying so much emphasis on the semi-colon which the Honourable Premier says ought to be removed. Let us say that Malik Barkat Ali is right and the semi-colon is put there ; then the proviso becomes more meaningless. Now if we take the clause as if there was no punctuation, the argument that this proviso does not cover the first part is obviously without any force. The proviso is always intended to cover what goes before it, not what comes after one or two clauses. That is the usual scheme of drafting Bills. A proviso must cover what goes before it. That is why I say that what Government is giving with one hand in the first part of the clause it is to my mind taking away with the other hand by adding this proviso. The proviso says 'provided that on the date on which his current licence was granted or renewed, the moneylender had not as the result of a finding by a court incurred any of the disabilities enumerated in section 6 for which his licence might have been cancelled'. 'On the date on which his current licence was granted'—what period does it refer to? Does it mean that there should be a finding on that or that he should incur the liability of having committed something heinous? I submit that the proviso is not at all clear and I would reserve my further remarks when I reply after hearing what the Honourable Premier has got to say.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That the proviso be omitted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : I confess I share the confusion created in the mind of my honourable friend Sir Gokul Chand Narang and there are several people also who suffer from the same confusion. But I will explain why this proviso is necessary. (An honourable member : In spite of the confusion that you share?) I look from a different aspect, and it is possible that with an alteration of a word here and the addition of a word there, the meaning may become more clear. Now what is the object of this proviso? The object is very simple. We do not want this Act or this clause to have retrospective effect on suits pending before the commencement of the Act nor do we want to bar suits which have been lodged prior to his getting licence or renewing the licence. That is quite clear. You must keep in mind the fact that under the Act as now amended registration is automatic and the grant of licence is automatic. You have to apply and you must get it. The collector cannot refuse. Similarly for renewal you have merely to pay the prescribed fee and fill in the form and it must be renewed. That is the position according to the present Act. Now let me give you an instance where we want to safeguard and why we have inserted this proviso. Supposing A goes on the 30th of June to renew his licence and puts in an application, knowing full well that on the 29th of June the Court had found him guilty of one of the offences under the various clauses. But since the grant or renewal of licence is automatic, he puts in an application and gets the licence and thus saves suits which would have been otherwise barred by time during the next fortnight or month before his delinquency comes to light, to the collector, or on application by somebody else. Those suits would not be barred although under the Act the intention is that such suits should be barred if he is responsible for any delinquency under section 6. (Interruption). We want to save two things, one, suits already pending before the commencement of the Act and two, suits pending before the next renewal of the licence. It is in favour of the money-lender himself. I think my honourable friend should concentrate a little bit and then he will realise that unless we give this retrospective effect we cannot save the money-lender and if we give the retrospective effect without this proviso, it means that the money-lender will not be able to save those suits lodged prior to the cancellation or renewal of his licence. (Interruption). Now let me try to explain again. A money-lender finds that a court has given a finding adverse to him which may result in his licence being cancelled under clause 6, on the 29th of June, and has several of his suits which are likely to be time-barred within the next two or three months. He goes and lodges those suits and he also goes and applies for renewal of licence. That licence will be valid and during the pendency of his application, those suits will not be time-barred. He goes and automatically gets his licence renewed and then lodges his suits before the licence can be cancelled which might be 15 days or even 6 months hence. He mala fide gets the licence and lodges several suits which otherwise he would not have been able to do if his acts had come to light.

[Premier.]

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I understand what you mean now, but it does not explain the proviso.

Premier : If you want to suggest any alteration to make that position clear I would be prepared to accept it.

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) : My point is this. As I read this clause I see that the proviso has absolutely nothing to do with the earlier part of the section which enacts that "nothing in this Act shall apply to suits or applications for execution already pending at the commencement of this Act". The Honourable Premier has admitted it.

Mr. Speaker : What about the next line?

Malik Barkat Ali : I am dealing with that. I want him to note the semi-colon, because it appears to me as a matter of principle clear that this Act cannot possibly apply to suits or applications pending before the commencement of this Act. When it does not apply to them, how can any proviso apply to those suits? This is my first submission. If the Act comes into force to-day, then all suits pending today and all applications for execution pending to-day remain unaffected by the coming into operation of the Act. This is the meaning of the select committee. This is perfectly justifiable on principle and I cannot understand how any proviso can alter that situation. I believe it was for this reason that this semi-colon was put. I can understand the relation between the proviso and the cancellation of the licence. I believe the proviso really relates to a situation where the licence has been cancelled but before the date of the cancellation of the licence the money-lender was detected guilty of another malpractice which had not been discovered on the day the licence was granted or renewed to him.

Suppose the licence is cancelled to-day. Now it is perfectly reasonable that all suits pending to-day and all applications for execution pending to-day when the licence has been cancelled should remain unaffected by that licence. That, I take it, is the position which is conceded by the Honourable Premier. But the Honourable Premier has tried to justify this proviso. I must say that I have not been able to follow him. It is stated that "provided that on the day on which his current licence was granted or renewed, the money-lender had not incurred any of the disabilities under section 6". To my mind this proviso is full of contradiction. The proviso says that "on the day on which current licence was granted or renewed". That postulates that when the collector was granting him or renewing his licence, the collector with all his enquiry was not able to find that the money-lender was suffering from any of the disabilities which are enumerated in clause 6, otherwise he would not have granted or renewed the licence. The grant of the licence or the renewal of the licence pre-supposes that on the date of the grant or renewal none of those disqualifications existed, unless it be said that these disqualifications have come to light after the grant or after the renewal of the licence.

Premier : That is the point.

Malik Barkat Ali : That is why I was trying to explain that there is a contradiction, because you do not say that these disqualifications must be those which had not come to the notice of the grantor of the licence or the renewer of the licence on that date. That should have been made clear. This is number two. As this licence has been granted to-day or renewed to-day, and later on it has been discovered that this money-lender had incurred some of the disabilities mentioned in section 6, naturally the collector can review his order. My respectful submission is this that we are here contemplating the date of the cancellation of the licence. On the date of the cancellation of the licence, the situation existing on that date should really remain unaffected, and I feel that this proviso is really unfair and would introduce any amount of complications. I am opposing this proviso not because through this proviso the Government is taking away with one hand what, my learned friend says, it has given with the other in the earlier part. Nothing of that kind. So far as the earlier part of section 9 is concerned, it has been conceded that the Act is not going to have any retrospective effect and all suits pending at the commencement of the Act shall continue unaffected notwithstanding the proviso, but it is only in cases of cancellation of the licence, that the proviso will come into play and affect cases pending on the date of the cancellation of the licence, but I think the position should be in para materia the same. As originally put down in the Bill, pending suits and pending applications shall remain unaffected by any subsequent cancellation. If the cancellation takes place to-day, then I would press to the Honourable Premier that all the suits that are pending and all the applications that are pending for execution should remain unaffected by any subsequent conduct of the money-lender. Any subsequent conduct of the money-lender cannot certainly affect suits and applications for execution which are prior in time. The only case in which this proviso can apply would be when the disqualifications have been discovered subsequently to the date of the grant of the licence or the renewal of the licence. This is the only case which is covered by the proviso. If

[Malik Barkat Ali.]

There is any other case which is covered by the proviso, I should like to know. But as I have tried to understand this clause, it cannot possibly be applied to any other case except that where since the grant of licence or renewal of licence an anterior disqualification has been discovered. A disqualification which has been incurred after the grant or renewal cannot on your own case have retrospective effect. You cannot punish a man to-day for what he is going to do six months hence or three months hence. You can punish him to-day for what he has done before to-day. So I submit that this proviso can only apply to a situation of that kind. If you want to make it apply to any other case, you should make your language clear. As it stands, it is very defective.

Premier : Then suggest a clearer language.

Malik Barkat Ali : Do you agree with me that this proviso is intended to apply to situations of this kind where the disqualification already incurred has been discovered after the date of the grant or renewal ?

Advocate-General (Mr. M. Sleem) : So far as the second part of the clause is concerned, I will read the clause omitting the reference to the commencement of the Act. It reads as follows —

Nothing in this Act shall apply to suits or applications for execution already pending before the date of the cancellation of the licence of the money-lender provided that on the date on which his current licence is granted or renewed, the money-lender is.....

If we read it in this way, the meaning is perfectly clear. The mere fact that we have introduced into the first part that "nothing in this Act shall apply to suits or applications for execution already pending at the commencement of this Act" does not in fact make it difficult to interpret this clause because the cancellation of a licence can only take place after the Act comes into force. If the licence could be cancelled before the Act came into force, there might have been room for doubt. As that contingency cannot arise, it is easy to interpret it. I admit it requires careful reading and reading three or four times, but actually there is no difficulty.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General Rural) : Sir, I am afraid I am where I was. The speech made by my learned friend Malik Barkat Ali was certainly more illuminating than the remarks made by the Honourable Premier or, I submit, with due deference, even by the learned Advocate-General. If the Government agrees to the remarks of Malik Barkat Ali with respect to suits and applications already pending at the commencement of the Act, then the remark of the Honourable Premier that semi-colon should be removed is absolutely out of order, because then it destroys the very object of the first part of this clause. What I feel and what I understood from Mr. Barkat Ali was that the first four lines up to the end of the word 'Act' and before the semi-colon, should be taken as an independent clause and not affected by anything that comes after it. If that is so, then the Honourable Premier was certainly mistaken in suggesting the deletion of the semi-colon. In fact I would then suggest that there should be a full-stop and some more words should be introduced to make the intention clear, e.g., nor shall it affect any suits or applications filed before the date of the cancellation of the licence of the money-lender, provided that....

That would make it more clear. There seems to be a difference of opinion between the Honourable Premier, Malik Barkat Ali and myself. Let us be clear about one thing and let these first four lines of the clause stand absolutely independently. Then, as I suggested, let us use these words which were approved of by Sir Chhotu Ram :—

Nor shall it apply to any suits or applications for execution filed before the date of the cancellation of the licence of the money-lender.

Then, I think, a little change in the body of the proviso would also be necessary. The words :—

Provided that on the date on which his current licence was granted become unnecessary if the first four lines are to stand absolutely independently. Why then take into consideration the date on which the first licence was granted? The explanation that the Honourable Premier gave and the examples that he gave only related to the period after a money-lender has taken out the licence, after the commencement of the Act, and had done something which exposed him to the penalty which was known only to himself and not known to the court. He files those suits thinking that he would take advantage of this before a finding is given on this point or before the collector comes to know of this fault and cancels his licence. (Premier : Exactly). If that is the object, then take out these words :—

On the date on which his current licence was granted and say

Provided that on the date of the renewal of the licence of the money-lender he had not as the result of, etc.

If that is the object, that would make it clear; otherwise the whole thing is in a confusion.

Premier : I have followed but I am not sure that the suggestion made by my honourable friend quite meets the case. There is an initial grant of licence and then there is the process of renewal.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : What if something happens on the day on which the first licence is granted? Why should the clause, as it stands, affect suits or applications which had been filed before the commencement of the Act? If you are protecting them—as you say that you are protecting them—then my submission is that, if you really want to give that protection to the suits and applications pending at the commencement of the Act, you need not use these words and use only the words with respect to the date of the renewal of the licence. How does it affect you if you delete the whole of this complicated proviso which very few people can understand? Or, as had been suggested by my friend over there, have two clauses instead of one. You might split up this clause into two clauses; let one sub-clause deal with the suits or applications already pending at the commencement of the Act and let the other sub-clause deal with the subsequent matter.

Premier : You mean that there should be 9 (i) and 9 (ii) but have you quite followed what I want?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I have understood that. I have followed you but that relates to events which may occur after the Act has come into force and a licence has been granted and a liability is incurred which may result in the cancellation of that licence and you want to prevent a dishonest money-lender from taking advantage. (Premier : Yes.) You do not want to exempt him from these delinquencies after a licence has been granted to him which means after the commencement of the Act. Then say so. I would ask the Advocate-General to draw up this clause into two. (Premier : He is drawing up.) I am just giving way.

Premier : I want to point out to my honourable friend that he has ignored one factor and that is this. Licensing or registration is not—

Mr. Speaker : Is the Honourable Premier giving reply ?

Premier : I want to point out one factor which he has missed.

Mr. Speaker : But that can be done in reply.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Then I do not want to take any more time of the House. I have made a request. My amendment is quite clear to the Honourable Premier and I request the Honourable Premier to ask the learned Advocate-General to draw up this clause into two parts. One part should make it clear that the suits and applications already pending at the commencement of the Act shall not be affected by anything contained in this Act and the second part should impose disabilities or make the dishonest money-lender liable to the consequence of his delinquencies after a licence has been granted to him and he has incurred a disability under clause 6. That would make the position clear.

Mr. Speaker : May I suggest that further consideration of this clause be postponed till it is carefully redrafted ?

Premier : I wanted to submit that one contingency which my honourable friend has over-looked is this. It is not incumbent on anybody to get himself registered. It is not necessary for anybody to get himself licensed. It is purely a voluntary thing and it is not imperative on a moneylender to do so. The Act comes into force on 1st January 1939 as my honourable friend knows and the money-lender does not get himself registered till 1942 and in 1941 he finds that he has committed certain irregularities which would bar him from getting the licence. He goes and applies for a licence and automatically gets the licence. I do not want to give retrospective effect after the commencement of the Act. At the same time I want to save those particular cases which may mala fide be put in after obtaining the licence. If the power originally suggested had been retained by the collector that he should grant the licence subject to certain conditions, then it would not have been necessary to bring this in. It was for the benefit of the money-lenders that the clause is made automatic.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Clause 6 will prevent him from committing it. What I say is supposing he gets a licence and puts in several suits.

Malik Barkat Ali : And subsequently the licence is cancelled.

Premier : Yes. I think we may leave consideration of this clause and proceed with the rest.

The Assembly agreed to the proposal.

Clause 10.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Rural) : I beg to move—

That in line 10, for the words " of Rs. 5 " the words " of Rs. 2 " be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : I beg to move—

That in lines 11-12 the words " and subject to such conditions " be deleted.

In order to make the object of my amendment clear I have to read out clause 10 : it runs as follows :—

A money-lender may, after the termination of the period for which his licence has been cancelled, apply for registration and for the grant of a licence, to the collector who shall, on his furnishing such particulars as may be prescribed, register his name on payment of a fee of Rs. 5 ; and shall grant him a licence for such period, in such form and subject to such conditions and on payment of such fees, as may be prescribed.

It will be clear that before a money-lender, whose licence has been cancelled, wants to apply for being registered or for a licence being granted, he must fulfil the conditions, namely that he shall comply with the particulars that shall be prescribed under the rules. I particularly invite the attention of the Honourable the Premier and Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang to this aspect and to the implications of my amendment. Already you have laid down the conditions that no name shall be registered and no licence shall be granted unless the money-lender complies with the particulars that shall be prescribed ; and it would be necessary that he must comply with those particulars. That will serve the purpose which the Government has in view. After he has complied with all the particulars that will be prescribed, after he has fulfilled all those conditions, where is the necessity for laying down that his name shall not be registered and the licence will not be granted to him unless he fulfils certain prescribed conditions? Is he required to fulfil some other conditions also? First he shall have to comply with the particulars : that is one set of conditions.

Mr. Speaker : I do not think the honourable member's amendment is in order. When clause 5 was under discussion, the words " in such form and on such conditions and payment of such fees " occurred. That is with regard to first registration.

Lala Duni Chand : This will be second registration after his licence has been once cancelled.

Mr. Speaker : The principle underlying this amendment has been discussed and disapproved already.

Lala Duni Chand : There may be considerations with regard to the first registration which may be different from the considerations that might weigh in a case in which second registration is applied for or the licence is granted the second time. I was submitting that two sets of conditions should not be imposed on the money-lenders who apply for registration or for licence.

Mr. Speaker : This matter was discussed under Clause 5.

Lala Duni Chand : Clause 5 dealt with the first registration or first licensing. This deals with the registration or licence after the licence has been cancelled.

Mr. Speaker : The principle is the same.

Premier : If you will allow me one minute I will make the position quite clear and my honourable friend may not like to press his amendment. This clause is merely an enabling clause.

Mr. Speaker : I consider it a mere repetition. If it is in order I will propose it to the House and then the Honourable Premier can give his reply.

Lala Duni Chand : My submission is that further conditions should not be imposed upon the money-lender. Whatever conditions are to be imposed should be imposed in the first instance. After the conditions have been imposed no second set of conditions should be imposed upon him. I shall particularly appeal to the Honourable the Premier to understand the significance of my amendment. He should have no objection to it. As a last word I wish to say on the subject that if force of argument applies my amendment should be accepted but if the force of number applies it should be rejected. With these words I move my amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in lines 11-12 the words " and subject to such conditions " be deleted.

Premier : This clause is very simple. It is merely meant to avoid any doubt that once the name of a money-lender is removed from the register it can be brought on to the register again after application. That is the main reason why it has been brought. Similarly, when he can get himself re-registered, he can again apply for a licence and get it, after it has been suspended for a certain period. It is merely to clear that doubt that was raised that he may not be able again to get himself registered, that we have put in this clause. He will get the licence exactly on the same terms as he would have when he originally applied for it.

Mr. Speaker : The reason why I am inclined to hold this amendment out of order is : If a money-lender applies for a licence and gets it but commits some irregularity and his licence is cancelled, does the honourable member mean that if the money-lender wants to renew his licence, he should be rewarded for his misbehaviour and granted a fresh licence without any restrictions ?

Lala Duni Chand : Sir, I wish to press my amendment.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

In lines 11-12, the words " and subject to such conditions " be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal : Sir, I beg to move that—

In lines 12-13, between the words " fees " and " as " the words " not exceeding Rs. 4 " be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Clause 10 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 11.

Munshi Hari Lal (South Western Towns, General, Urban) : Sir, I beg to move that—

In sub-clause (1), lines 1-2, for the word "Commissioner" the words "court of the District Judge" be substituted.

Premier : On a point of order, Sir. The amendment will make clause 7 absolutely meaningless. In clause 7 we have accepted that—

The collector may during the period of limitation for an appeal, either of his own motion or on the application of a party interested, review his own order, provided no appeal is pending with the commissioner.

We have already accepted that principle that the appeal must lie with the commissioner. We cannot possibly alter this clause now and make the whole Bill unintelligible.

Munshi Hari Lal (Urdu) : Sir, you might recollect that when I moved amendment to clause 8, you were pleased to give your ruling that in clause 11 this amendment will be made as a consequential amendment.

Mr. Speaker : I wish the ruling were produced. But I believe the honourable member and he may proceed.

Munshi Hari Lal : Sir, I was submitting that the appeal against the order of a collector cancelling a licence of a money-lender, should not be lodged with the commissioner. He has to hear many appeals and he has lot of other work to do. What he ordinarily does is that he treats those appeals that are filed in his court summarily and he dismisses them without hearing the parties under powers that are vested in him under the Punjab Land Revenue Act. If any appeal is to be accepted, then a notice is issued, otherwise not. But I may submit that the commissioner has so much work to do that he cannot do justice to all the appeals that are filed in his court. What is done is that his subordinates write notes on those appeals and on the basis of those notes the commissioner announces his judgment. This is the way how the fate of the appellant is settled in the court of a commissioner.

Besides, I may submit what is the good of lodging an appeal with the commissioner when—

Syed Amjad Ali Shah : On a point of order, Sir. The honourable member is repeating the arguments which have been given on the floor of the House again and again.

Maulvi Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din : May I draw your attention to the fact that in amendment No. 22, clause 8, we have already decided that the words 'district judge' shall not be substituted for the word 'commissioner'

Munshi Hari Lal : I may submit that if the Government is prepared to give any right of appeal to the money-lender, it should give such a right which can be effective. It can only be effective if the appeal goes before such an official who can hear it patiently and carefully weigh the merits of the case and give his judgment.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (1), lines 1-2, for the words "Commissioner" the words "court of the District Judge" be substituted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) (Urdu): Sir, the discussion on this subject has been going on for the last so many days and various points in connection with it have been discussed threadbare. My honourable friend Munshi Hari Lal has observed that the power of hearing appeals should not be vested in the commissioner. I do not agree with him that as a rule every appeal is decided without hearing the parties. It may be his experience, but I am sure that it is not the experience of my lawyer friends here. The commissioner considers the appeals in his dual capacity of an executive as well as a judicial officer. In his former capacity the procedure followed is the same as referred to by my friend Munshi Hari Lal. While hearing appeals in his judicial capacity he allows the lawyers of both the parties to appear and argue the case before him and after giving his careful consideration to the points raised by the parties, he gives his judgment. I may state it for the information of my honourable friend that if any legal question is involved in the case it is decided on the facts of the case alone. Moreover in deciding such cases the procedure followed by the civil courts is always observed. In the end I would submit that by this time my honourable friend would have come to know of the feelings of the House in this matter and I hope that he will not press his motion.

Mr. Speaker: The question is—

That in sub-clause (1), lines 1-2, for the word "Commissioner" the words "court of the District Judge" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban): Sir, I move—

That in sub-clause (1), lines 4-5, the words "or refusing to renew a licence" be deleted.

I would only say a few words in support of my amendment. There is no power given to the collector to refuse to renew a licence when the period during which a licence stands cancelled has expired. After the expiry of the period for which a money-lender's licence has been cancelled, the collector automatically renews his licence. On the other hand, the wording of clause 11 (1) says that—

An appeal shall lie to the Commissioner against the order of the Collector under section 6 cancelling a licence or refusing to renew a licence.

I ask, where is that power given to the collector to refuse to renew a licence.

Premier: I agree with the honourable member.

Munshi Hari Lal: Then these words are redundant and should be deleted.

Premier: As a matter of fact this wording has been taken from the original clause before we decided to make renewal automatic. Now that the renewal has been made automatic, I see no objection to the deletion of these words.

Mr. Speaker: The question is—

That in sub-clause (1), lines 4-5, the words "or refusing to renew a licence" be deleted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (1) as amended stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : I beg to ask for leave to move—

That for sub-clause (2) the following be substituted :—

If the money-lender or the appellant is not present at the time of the announcement of the original or the appellate order, the order shall be communicated to him in such a manner as may be prescribed and the time for appeal will run against him from the date of the receipt of the order by him.

It was pointed out in the select committee that if the collector passes an order in camp the money-lender may not have notice of it and the time provided in the Bill for appeal may expire before he receives any notice from the collector or before the money-lender comes to know of it. I wish that the collector's orders should be communicated to the money-lender when it is passed and the time should run from the date of the receipt of the order. That is my first point. The second point is that when the commissioner passes the order, that order also should be communicated to the money-lender. In the clause, as it stands, it is only the commissioner's order that is to be communicated. I provide that the collector's order should also be communicated as well as the commissioner's order.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member (Munshi Hari Lal) has moved that he may be given leave to move the following clause :—

If the money-lender or the appellant is not present at the time of the announcement of the original or the appellate order, the order shall be communicated to him in such a manner as may be prescribed and the time for appeal will run against him from the date of the receipt of the order by him.

The question is that leave be given to move the new clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (2) of clause 11 stand part of the clause.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The new clause moved by Munshi Hari Lal is now under consideration.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : I am prepared to accept it provided the words beginning with 'and' in the third line up to the end of the clause are omitted. I therefore, move :—

That the words beginning with 'and' up to the end of the clause be omitted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is :—

That the following be sub-clause (2) of clause 11 :—

If the money-lender or the appellant is not present at the time of the announcement of the original or the appellate order, the order shall be communicated to him in such a manner as may be prescribed.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : I move :—

That in sub-clause (3), lines 1-2 for the words "the commissioner may in dismissing an appeal" the words "the collector or the commissioner may" be substituted.

I make this slight change of 'may' with your permission. The clause with my amendment will read, "The collector or the commissioner may grant to the money-lender a certificate" and so on. The power here is given to the commissioner to grant the certificate.

Mr. Speaker : Does the honourable member also propose that the collector should have that power ?

Munshi Hari Lal : Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in sub-clause (3) lines 1-2, for the words 'the commissioner may, in dismissing the appeal', the words 'collector or the commissioner may' be substituted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I support this amendment. There seems to be no objection in principle. Government cannot have any objection in principle to the collector being invested with the power of granting of a certificate like the commissioner. Why should a man run from Gujrat to Balwalpindi after his licence has been cancelled ? The collector may himself think that though this man should not be allowed to ply his trade this is the object of cancellation of the licence still it would be a hard thing to prevent him from realizing some of his debts which might be due to be time-barred during the period for which his licence has been cancelled ? If the collector is competent to cancel the licence, he is also competent to grant a certificate to enable the money-lender whose licence is cancelled to file suits with respect to certain loans. Why should a money-lender be compelled to run from the district headquarters to the commissioner's headquarters ? It would mean delay and unnecessary expense. The commissioner will have to send for the record, may have to hear the case over again while the collector knows all about the case. In proper cases even after the cancellation of the licence he can issue certificates. I do not think there is any harm in accepting this amendment. No principle of the Bill is affected.

Malik Barkat Ali : I rise to a point of order. The point of order is that the amendment is out of order. You will be pleased to see that in sections 6 and 7 the collector has been authorized to cancel licences. The proper time to move this amendment should have been when section 6 and section 7 were being discussed. Section 7 says that when the collector has passed an order of cancellation that order shall not take effect until the period of appeal or review has expired or in the case of appeal, the appeal has been finally disposed of. Therefore, the collector has not been given power to give the certificate or cutting down his own order of cancellation. Therefore, my submission is that it is out of order on that ground. Secondly, the language of the amended clause is meaningless. It reads "the collector or the commissioner may grant to the money-lender". The collector can only grant at the time of cancellation; the commissioner can only grant at the time of dismissing the appeal. In the absence of these words I respectfully submit that these words would be meaningless, but I rely more on the point of order that I have raised that by passing the 6th and 7th clause my learned friend is precluded from moving this amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : There is nothing contradictory between the amendment and these sections.

Lala Sita Ram (Trade Union, Labour) (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move that—

In sub-clause (3), line 1, for the word 'may' the word 'shall' be substituted.

This amendment, Sir, is most reasonable. The money-lender should have this permission as a matter of right and for the commissioner it should be obligatory and not discretionary to issue such certificates, so that the other transactions of the money-lender should not suffer during the period of cancellation of his licence.

Let me bring it to your notice, Sir, that there was no such provision in the original Bill, to enable the money-lender to file such suits during the period of cancellation of his licence. Debts might become time-barred, the debtors might run away to evade payment or squander the money in any way. The money-lender, had his licence been cancelled, could not sue them. We pointed it out in the select committee. The force of our argument was felt and a provision was made that the commissioner may grant certificates for this purpose to the punished money-lenders. But, Sir, the difficulty still remains unsolved. Everything is left to the discretion and sweet will of the said officer as I have already pointed out in my previous speeches. My submission is that after the cancellation of his licence, the money-lender may be authorised to institute suits in the courts regarding his other debts and he should not suffer monetary losses because of this cancellation of the licence. I tried my best to get it done in the select committee and urged this point, with all the force at my disposal, but it was decided by the vast majority of our friends in the same committee that it should be left to the discretion of the commissioner.

My opinion, Sir, is that getting of this permission is a matter of right. It is no favour. In the case of being refused such a permission, the money-lender would be made to lose large sums of money on account of time-barred and other cases, besides losing his licence. The monetary loss, in my opinion, is a double punishment. My contention is that this Bill should not interfere at least with other business of the money-lender. And as this provision stands in the way of all money-lenders, it should, therefore, be amended as proposed.

That in sub-clause (3), line 1, for the word "may" the word "shall" be substituted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : The amendment which has been moved by the honourable member for Labour is one of the most important amendments of the Bill. As I think and as I also brought to the notice of the Premier, if he accepts this amendment he will be removing one of the greatest blemishes of the Bill and would be bringing the Bill into some workable form. You would notice that this amendment aims at reducing the punishment which is to follow the cancellation of the licence. This Bill provides that if a money-lender has been guilty of certain omissions or commissions his licence may be cancelled by the collector permanently or for a certain period. One of the punishments provided under the Act is therefore that the money-lender will lose his profession—a profession to which he may have been trained for his life—a profession which he may have inherited from his ancestors and with the possibility of not being able to take to any other profession in the middle of his life. That punishment is sufficiently severe in itself but to that punishment has been added the possibility of the entire confiscation of his assets. A money-lender's assets would usually consist of his outstandings, the debts which he has advanced to his customers. The Bill provides that if a person's licence is cancelled he is debarred from bringing suits to recover any of his outstandings unless the commissioner gives a certificate as to all of his outstandings or some of his outstandings. Now, if the word "may" is left there, it is entirely within the discretion of the commissioner to certify any of the outstandings or refuse to do so. No indication or no direction is given to the commissioner as to the circumstances when he would refuse such a certificate or when he would grant the certificate. Therefore, this is a matter which is entirely left to his whim or to his discretion. I wish to ask the House, would any respectable person or a person of substance carry on the profession of money-lending if he knows that for any of those petty delinquencies he stands to lose not only the suit in which the petty delinquency may have been committed, not only stands to lose the profession which he has been carrying on for a lifetime, but also stands the risk of the confiscation of his entire property? The other day the Premier brought to the notice of the House the instances of legal practitioners and he said, supposing a legal practitioner is guilty of a slight delinquency in associating with a tout in one case, the punishment awarded to him is not that he loses his case but that he is debarred from further practice for ever, I wish to apply the same analogy here. Here is a money-lender who is guilty of delinquency in a small measure. Not only will he suffer in the matter of that suit, not only will he be subject to the liabilities which the criminal law may impose upon him, but he will lose his profession by the cancellation of his licence. But why confiscate his property? A lawyer, when he loses his licence, loses his right to practice. No order is passed that his past earnings or his entire property should be confiscated. (Hear, hear). Such an order is not given even for murderers, or even for people who commit robberies coupled with murders and other heinous offences. Why are you imposing this penalty on the head of the money-lender? I am not making this submission in the interest of any guilty money-lender, but I make this submission that if you wish to regulate and control money-lending, you must frame rules which would induce respectable, decent and moneyed men to take to this profession and not dissuade every respectable man of substance from keeping away from it, as he would do if he has to run the risk of losing his entire property. One of the objects which was mentioned by the Honourable Premier in introducing this legislation and which has been referred to, off and on, on the floor of this House is that the Reserve Bank wishes to help the agriculturists of this province by making available its vast unapplied funds for the development of agriculture provided it can find intermediaries.

Mr. Speaker: Will the honourable member please speak to the motion?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am pointing out that the punishment is out of all proportion and, therefore, this punishment ought to be modified. In deference to your wishes, I will not speak for more than five or six minutes on this motion but you would readily realise that this is the most important argument that any one could give in favour of reducing the punishment. What I am pointing out is that the main object, the chief object of this legislation, will vanish inasmuch as it would dissuade substantial persons from following this profession and it is only the substantial persons through whom the Reserve Bank can distribute the credit, advance the money which it has got at its command and which it wishes to advance to the agriculturists, provided respectable money-lenders are available. The present legislation will effectively prevent all that. It would only ensure the existence of the petty money-lenders, money-lenders who have got nothing, who have no great assets to lose, money-lenders who only carry on their business with an asset of say three or four thousand rupees. That will be the type which might survive this legislation and which might carry on a precarious existence. If you really wish to induce respectable men to stay in the profession, I say most emphatically that you should lighten the punishment proposed. Do not make it impossible for the respectable man to stay in the profession and if you keep the punishment as high as you have done, if you do not substitute the word "shall" for "may" which would compel the commissioner to grant a certificate for the realisation of old outstandings, you would be enacting a measure which would practically kill money-lending in this province and would defeat the object that you profess to have in view. In this connection it may be necessary to recall the previous history on the subject of punishment for the delinquent money-lenders. As I pointed out the other day, the Honourable Lala Sir Chhotu Ram brought..... (Interruptions) (Voices : Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram and not 'Lala.') I have not followed the interruptions. I spoke with great respect. (Premier : You are lucky that he is not here.) Oh, he objects to the use of the word 'Lala' ? (Laughter). Perhaps the designation is too good for him. However I had no intention of injuring any one's feelings and fortunately he is not here to have his feelings injured. I certainly consider that the word 'Lala' is a word of respect and I do not think that he or any Hindu should take objection to the use of this prefix before his name, I did not mean any insult to him. If he objects to it I certainly think that the word 'chaudhri' would equally be objectionable.

Mr. Speaker : Please speak to the motion.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I was pointing out to the House that the punishment provided even in the Bill of 1935 of Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram himself did not contemplate the dismissal of the suits for other outstandings.

Cancellation of his licence would only entail that he would not be able to carry on his profession or lend loans, in future but there was no provision that he will not be able to realise his old outstandings. This was what was desired to be enacted in 1935. This Bill was sent to the select committee by the then Council to which the names of Raja Narindra Nath and myself were proposed as members of the select committee. Well, we both refused to act on the select committee on the ground that this was a Bill the principle of which we did not agree to and it was much better that Chaudhri Chhotu Ram should be left to make what he liked of the Bill. Therefore none of us had any hand in the proceedings of that select committee. When it went to the select committee they substituted in place of this punishment a fine and did not at all include in the punishment possible dismissal of suits other than those to which the delinquency related. That punishment is detailed in section 16 of the report of select committee on Debtors' Protection Act, 1935.

Mr. Speaker : I would request the honourable member to speak to the motion. Was he relevant in saying that the Raja Sahib and he refused to serve on the committee ?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Yes, the report of the select committee was the report of the persons who brought forward the Bill unassisted by those who were opposed to it. If you will permit me to place before the House that section 16, the punishment there provided was only a fine which may extend to Rs. 1,000. The section runs as follows :—

Mr. Speaker : Please do not read that section ; it is sufficient to say that it is there.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I wanted to be very precise. But I will not read it out if you think I need not do so. What I submit is this that in 1935 the Government of the Punjab wanted to introduce the licensing and the registration of money-lenders and the chief exponent of this measure drafted the Bill in which he provided certain punishments, and it never occurred either to him at the time of the introduction of the Bill nor did it occur to the united wisdom of the select committee which consisted only of the members of his party, assisted by the then Government to enact such a monstrous punishment which one finds in this Bill. I respectfully wish to enquire what has happened during these two years. Have the circumstances in the Punjab changed except for the fact that he is a greater autocrat on account of the larger majority in the House which he possesses? My submission before you, Sir, is this that if you retain such a punishment in the Bill you may possibly be satisfying your feelings of having done the maximum injury to the other side, i.e., to the money-lenders whom you hate, but what I earnestly ask this House is to ensure that in doing so you may not injure the vital interests of the province and lay the axe at the root of the entire system of credit. I am afraid, if you stick to this provision, you would succeed in destroying the entire system of credit in urban areas as you have already successfully done in rural areas. Therefore with due respect I most strongly support the amendment which has been moved, that the commissioner shall give certificates to a money-lender who has been disqualified from practising to realise the loans which have been advanced before the cancellation of his licence.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar (North-Western Towns, General, Urban) : When once we accept this principle that a certificate should be granted to a person whose licence has been cancelled it does not appear to me to stand to reason that this right of obtaining a certificate should be dependent upon the whim or the sweet will of an individual. You must have noticed, Sir, that at every step we have tried for giving as little power as possible to the executive officer as against the great desire of the Government to give as much as they can to the executive officer. The reason for our doing this is perfectly clear. This Bill is intended to protect us all, whether statutory agriculturists or non-agriculturists against the money-lenders whether statutory agriculturists or non-agriculturists. There is no distinction so far as that goes. Just as we are trying to protect ourselves against a dishonest money-lender, whether he is an agriculturist or non-agriculturist, similarly we must defend and protect ourselves against a dishonest officer. It cannot be denied that just as amongst money-lenders there may be fraudulent and dishonest money-lenders, similarly amongst the class of officers who are entrusted with these powers there may be people who are thoroughly dishonest and corrupt. We have to protect ourselves against such officers and therefore it is that the powers that are being passed on in the hands of the officers should be as little and should be consistent with the spirit and the principle of the Bill. I do not think the Government should have any objection to recognise that that man shall be granted a certificate unless, of course, the idea is that the punishment will also contain non-realisation of his other dues. If that is the idea then they should put it plainly so that everybody may know that this is so. I hope Government will accept the amendment.

Premier (The Hon'ble Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Most of the arguments put forward were mere repetition of certain generalities which were expressed on the floor of this House on several occasions previously. My honourable friend, the mover of this amendment, either thinks that all the members in this House conform to the Punjabi adage—agal da anna te gand da pura. If he thinks that that is the view of the House with regard to his amendment, I am afraid he is living in a fool's paradise because we all know what 'may' and 'shall' mean—and its significance—in this particular clause. As a matter of fact, it was during the select committee stage with a view to mitigate any hardships in genuine bona fide cases that we—my honourable friend will bear me out—included this clause so that a commissioner may have an opportunity to meet the case after going through the facts and weighing them whether a money-lender has made a default in a very small matter of two or three hundred rupees and his licence is cancelled for a fortnight or three weeks and during that period certain loans amounting to several thousands may be time-barred. The commissioner naturally is given the right to grant a certificate with regard to these loans if he thinks that the delinquency is of a minor character. Now, I come to another case. A man may have committed a very gross irregularity and if you do not give this latitude to the commissioner, my honourable friends know perfectly well, that the man would say, 'I do care if my licence is cancelled because I have committed an irregularity, but so far as my debts worth thousands are concerned, they are quite safe'. He would enjoy with impunity and will go on defrauding and cheating people. There is no other penalty for this except non-suiting of the person. Now, if you analyse the actual hardship in practice, you will come to the conclusion, as I have come, that it would not be a great hardship after all. The first thing the collector will see is the nature and extent of the offence and then he will cancel the licence for 3 months or 6 months or one year. The next factor is the number of suits which are likely to become time-barred by that period and the third consideration which he will have to take in view is whether the offence which is committed is of such a gross nature that he should bar those suits which may be of considerable value worth 5 thousand or 10 thousand rupees. If he comes to the conclusion that the irregularity committed by the man is of a serious character, he will say: 'I will grant you a certificate with regard to those loans worth 2 thousand rupees but I still punish you with regard to the loans worth 5 thousand rupees'. So he will have the fullest possible latitude to consider each case on its merits before granting a certificate. If you substitute the word "shall", as I have pointed out before, this Act will be absolutely a dead letter, because it would be meaningless and in that case, as I have said, the money-lender would go on defrauding and cheating in regard to every single transaction without suffering any penalty for it. He cannot be non-suited at all, and we want to give him an incentive to become honest and not defraud anybody. (A voice: But he shall not be permitted to work in future. He cannot defraud with regard to his present transactions in future, and he will not have to do so.) I am afraid my angle of vision is different from the honourable member opposite. I presume that most of the money-lenders are honest. My honourable friends opposite throughout have been arguing that I presume that all the money-lenders are dishonest and therefore we want to do this thing or that thing. I presume that a large number of them are honest and there are some who are dishonest and whom we want to weed out. My honourable friend argued from another point of view that if a person has committed an offence, why penalise him severely, why penalise him for fraud, why penalise him for cheating and for this and that? All money-lenders are not fraudulent or dishonest. We must look at it from that point of view. I may say—if this is any consolation to my honourable friends opposite and to Lala Sita Ram—that after this Act comes into force, a money-lender will get at least 5 years in which to put his house in order. If he cannot put his house in order in 5 years and if he does not get the benefit of various exceptions provided here, that is, the first mistake will not be penalised, the second mistake will not be penalised and even in the case of the third mistake only the collector will take into consideration all these things and cancel his licence for a fortnight or so, if the offence is a light one—if the man does not get the benefit of these exceptions—we cannot help. You will find that we have tried to be as lenient as possible. This is the position and I am almost certain that in the actual working of this Act, dangers will not arise and if they do arise and if there is any real hardship, we are here to amend it at any time.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General Rural): Sir, I have got an amendment in my name which is more or less similar to this. Can I discuss it at this stage?

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member may discuss his amendment and also the amendment which is before the House without, of course, moving his amendment. When its turn comes he may move it without making any speech at that stage.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: My submission is that the amendment that has been moved is a very important one. The gist of the Honourable Premier's arguments during the last so many days, has been: 'Well, it is the dishonest money-lender who will suffer, why should he be protected and why should we reduce the punishment if it is to be inflicted on a dishonest man? If he had been here, I would have asked him whether he knows that at one time in England people used to be hanged even for petty thefts. If a man stole an egg or a fowl or perhaps, if I am not mistaken, even an apple from an orchard, he was liable to be hanged, because punishment for such offence was death. The arguments that the jurists of those days naturally gave were the same as in the 20th century the Honourable Premier of the Punjab is giving. This punishment must be deterrent. Why should not the man lose his property if he has committed a fraud in one or two respects? He should not only be forbidden to carry on his business but his assets should also be taken away from him. If I am not mistaken, I think, there is only one section in the Penal Code which involves punishment of forfeiture of property. There may be one or two more. (Mahik Barhat Ali: Waging war against the King.) Yes, waging war against the King. I remember it because I was charged with that section once. I do not know of any other section under which a person is liable to be hanged and also to have his property forfeited. Even for the most heinous offence, murder, the murderer is punished with death or with transportation for life, but the children of the murderer are not deprived of the property that their murderer father might have left to them. But in this case an argument is given: 'What does it matter if the penalty is severe because it is only to be inflicted upon a guilty person and upon a fraudulent man?' Why should not a penalty of death be prescribed because they have committed a forgery? Disproportionateness is not being realised by the Honourable Premier. He thinks that as the man is dishonest, therefore any kind of punishment is permissible. The whole argument on our side has been that we do not want to protect any dishonest money-lender, but that on principle the punishment should have some proportion to the offence and the offence should have some proportion to the punishment. But that is not the case. When I move my amendment, you will see that it is really to the effect that if the certificate is not given in ordinary cases—and you are not prepared to make it obligatory for the commissioner to grant a certificate in every case and you are not prepared to substitute the word "shall" for the word "may"—then at least there is one case, in which it would be necessary to make it obligatory for the commissioner to grant a certificate in the interest of justice, and that case is when during the time for which the licence is cancelled by the collector, some debts are due to become time-barred. Supposing the collector cancels my licence for a year. There may be loans amounting to 50 thousand rupees which may be due to become time-barred during that year. I go to the commissioner. He may not like my face, he may not like my reputation, he might have heard that at such and such a meeting I delivered a lecture which was against the Government or against him and he may not like me and he says: 'I am not prepared to grant you any certificate. It is discretionary with me.' You know as a lawyer, Sir, that where to give relief is discretionary, the courts are not bound to give that relief, as we find under the Specific Relief Act. He can say that the word in the Act is "may." He may adopt the argument of the Honourable Premier saying: 'Why did you commit this fraud? It was you who brought this fraudulent suit; you charged more interest than is prescribed in the Relief of Indebtedness Act more than once and therefore you have yourself brought this punishment on you and I am not going to give you any certificate.' Is that the object of this Bill? Is it reformatory? This is really a reform with vengeance. My submission is that the amendment moved is a fair one and if that cannot be accepted, then at least mine should be accepted that a certificate shall be given in cases where the debts are due to become time-barred during the period for which the licence has been cancelled and three months after that. I have added three months so that the money-lender may have time to renew his licence as it is possible that in spite of a certificate having been given by the commissioner, he may not be able to file his suits within time owing to the delay in taking out a licence.

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): Sir, I fully support the position taken up by my friends, Mr. Puri and Dr. Narang, to a certain extent. A licence is cancelled as a punishment for an offence which a money-lender may commit and the necessary provision has already been made in the Bill. As soon as a licence is cancelled, the name of the money-lender shall be removed from the register and he ceases to be a money-lender. He is then remitted to his rights as an ordinary citizen under the law; it is perfectly open to him not to apply for a further licence as he may not continue in his profession as a money-lender. At the present time, this trouble has largely been brought about by those friends who tabled these amendments in the select committee. For my part, I do not support the word "shall," because if the Act is retrospective and if the man is to be punished, it would be better that the discretion should be vested in the punishing officer so that he may modulate the punishment in the light of the offence that has been committed. Therefore, I am against the word 'shall.' I am certainly in favour of the words 'may grant a certificate.'

My second submission is that the words 'specifying the loans' in sub-clause (3) are very undefined.....

Mr. Speaker: No amendment to that effect is on the agenda.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Malik Barkat Ali has referred to sub-clause (3) and has made particular reference to the words 'certificate being granted in respect of certain loans specified.' My amendment refers to certain suits and he wanted to argue with respect to those suits.

Mr. Speaker: I do not find any amendment to that effect.

Malik Barkat Ali: My respectful submission is that the language of this sub-clause is very defective. Certainly what the authors of this provision meant was to give protection to those suits which are due to expire within the period for which a money-lender's licence has been cancelled by empowering the commissioner to grant a certificate in regard to those loans. Even from the wording of clause 8, it is clear that with the cancellation of the licence the suits would become time barred. If that is so, how can a commissioner extend the period of limitation by giving a certificate? I am, therefore, in favour of the words 'may grant such certificate in respect of the loans whose limitation is due to expire within the period for which the money-lender's licence has been cancelled' being added at the end of sub-clause (3) of clause 11. That is really the intention. But as at present worded the clause goes much beyond the scope of the Bill and is unlimited in the punishment that will be meted out to the money-lender. The punishment is the cancellation of the licence; there should be nothing beyond that.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: You were pleased to say that I could speak on the amendment moved by Munshi Hari Lal and also on mine, but that I may move my amendment later without making a speech thereon afterwards. Now, if I move my amendment later as suggested by you and there are to be no speeches on that amendment, how am I to reply to the remarks made by Mr. Barkat Ali with respect to my amendment? Will I be allowed to exercise my right of reply which I would have had if I had moved my amendment and it had been the subject of debate?

Mr. Speaker: The original amendment moved by Munshi Hari Lal was that in sub-clause (3), lines 1-2, for the words 'the Commissioner may, in dismissing an appeal' the words 'the Collector or the Commissioner may' be substituted. Afterwards an amendment was moved which to all intents and purposes was an amendment to the amendment, that is, for the word 'may' the word 'shall' be substituted. It was that amendment that was under discussion, that is, the substitution of the word 'shall' for 'may.' As regards the other part of Munshi Hari Lal's amendment, that may be discussed, but I cannot allow a general discussion of the whole amendment. Malik Barkat Ali was not right in discussing the whole amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: It was not yet under discussion.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): I am ordinarily a great admirer of the clarity of the arguments of my friend, Malik Barkat Ali, but he will forgive me if I say that his arguments to-day sounded like the lawyer's statement that much can be said on both sides. With due deference to his knowledge of law I submit that he appears to have misunderstood the clause and its import.

Mr. Speaker: The whole clause is not under discussion. So the discussion should be confined to the use of the words 'may' and 'shall.'

Parliamentary Secretary: Then, I shall confine myself to the arguments advanced by my honourable friends, Dr. Narang and Mr. Mukand Lal Puri. Their main plank is that the penalty provided is very severe and unless the word 'may' is changed into 'shall', there will be severe hardship on the money-lenders. I wish them to apply themselves to the practical side of the case. I will first take up the question whether the substitution of the word "shall" can bring about any change in the clause as drafted or not. Supposing the word 'may' is changed into 'shall', that does not affect the purport of this clause, because the clause would then read—'The Commissioner shall..... grant to the money-lender a certificate specifying the loans in respect of which a suit may be instituted.' The decision will still remain with the commissioner as to which particular loans are such in regard to which he should grant the certificate. Therefore, my first submission is that this change of word does not so far as the legal implication is concerned make any difference.

Now, coming to the substantive part of the argument as to the severity of the penalty, here also I wish them to apply themselves to two aspects of the case. On the one side, there is the dishonest money-lender who is in the habit of entering into fraudulent transactions and whom apparently nobody wishes to save. On the other side, there is the honest money-lender who unfortunately makes an accidental slip and though it technically comes within the provisions of section 6 nobody wants to deal with him severely. (An honourable member: Why?). Because he is an honest money-lender. Between these two classes we have to see how the penalty operates. With regard to the dishonest money-lender, supposing the law is amended as advocated by Dr. Narang or as interpreted by Mr. Puri, it means that the commissioner shall be bound to grant a certificate with respect to all those loans which are likely to get time barred. Take first the case of a dishonest money-lender who fraudulently plays havoc with transactions with all his borrowers with whom he has been dealing and he is found to be consistently and systematically fraudulent. I am sure neither my friend, Dr. Narang nor Mr. Puri, would like to show him any consideration. (Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: But the punishment must be made to fit with the offence.) In that particular case what happens? Suppose the clause as sought to be amended is accepted. The only punishment which will be given to the dishonest money-lender who has played havoc with his borrowers will possibly be that he will lose his interest and costs, or as Mr. Puri says, he will lose his business during the period his licence is cancelled. But I submit that the loss of his business is only on paper, because if his licence is cancelled to-day, tomorrow he will carry on the same business in the name of his son or some cousin or some friend of his and thus the money-lending business will continue. So far as the dishonest money-lender is concerned, there should be no difference of opinion on the point that any penalty which is likely to be effective shall be inflicted on him. That is one aspect of the case.

Now, take up the other case, the case of the honest money-lender. If an honest money-lender accidentally commits an offence, the collector or the commissioner will go into the equity of the case and if he finds that it is only a technical offence not committed intentionally, he will not inflict severe penalty. Possibly as the Honourable Premier said he might cancel the licence for a short time. What is more, there is nothing in the Bill to suggest that the commissioner in such hard cases shall not give him exemption certificates with regard to all loans which are likely to get time-barred.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Is it entirely dependent upon his discretion?

Mr. Speaker: I cannot allow questions at this stage.

Parliamentary Secretary: If I may take my honourable friend back to the proceedings of the Punjab Legislative Council for the year 1925 the illuminating speech which you, Sir, delivered then when you sat on this side of the House, he will find that you made a very clear exposition of the legal position supported by the rulings on the English Act. Even under the English Act the moment the licence of a money-lender is cancelled his registration is cancelled, he is non-suited with regard to all his existing claims and he cannot go to court till his licence is renewed.

Malik Barkat Ali: Will the honourable member please read the section?

Parliamentary Secretary: I invite my honourable friend's attention to page 201 of Halsbury's Laws of England, latest edition. He will find there—

A money-lender who is not licensed under the Money-Lenders Act cannot maintain an action to recover the money he has lent; in such case the borrower does not need to apply to the court for relief, nor need the borrower do so in any case when the money-lender, though duly licensed, has committed some breach of the statutory provisions affecting his business or transactions which renders the transaction unenforceable or illegal.

If under the English Money-Lenders Act any money-lender has failed in any of the provisions of the Act he is non-suited, so long as that defect is not made good, with regard to all his claims. Now, I would repeat that the whole thing revolves on this, whether the clause that we have before us with the change of the word 'may' into 'shall' in any way inflicts any severity more than the offence deserves. On this there cannot be two opinions. The decision on that question can only be given after the collector or the commissioner has exercised his discretion under the Act. I think that as the matter stands all that we can do we have done. By bringing up this clause we have mitigated the ordinary automatic severity of section 6. If this clause had not been there the honest money-lenders may have suffered unduly in certain cases. In order to save the really honest money-lender we have thought fit to introduce this clause (Cheers).

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Lahore City, General, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, when this amendment was moved and being discussed I was not present in the House, but now that I have arrived and listened to some of the arguments, which my honourable friends opposite have advanced against it, I am constrained to make a few observations in this connection. It is a thousand pities that whenever any honourable member on this side of the House raises any objection against any clause of this Bill the Treasury benches charge him with the motive that he protects the dishonest money-lenders. Under these circumstances it is very difficult for us to say any word against the Bill. (A note: Only those who want to protect the dishonest money-lenders are prompted to oppose this Bill.) When a money-lender's licence is cancelled under clause 6, it is contended that an honest money-lender shall be granted a certificate under clause 11. The Unionists hold that there cannot be any hitch in granting such an honest money-lender the necessary certificate. But I may add that it is only a dishonest money-lender whose licence can be cancelled and it is he who shall need a certificate for the recovery of his past debts. The question of the grant of a certificate does not arise in the case of the honest money-lender, because his licence shall never be cancelled. Such being the case, how can my honourable friends sitting opposite satisfy us that the certificate will be easily granted to a money-lender whose licence has been cancelled? It can only be granted easily to an honest money-lender, but the fact of the matter is that an honest money-lender will never stand in need of getting a certificate because his licence will not be cancelled, as the Treasury benches say. It is only the dishonest money-lender that will need this protection. But may we not say, in fairness to this wretched money-lender, that when he has already been punished under the Regulation of Accounts Act, where is the necessity of punishing him a second time under the Money-lenders Bill? Even if you punish him a second time under this Bill, why should you inflict so severe a punishment on him by which he would be debarred from recovering his past legitimate debts which even the debtor may be willing to pay ?

Sir, the Bill has gone to the length of providing that even if a money-lender has committed an offence, not in the course of his money transaction, but in some other business, his licence for carrying on the money-lending business shall be cancelled forthwith. Just imagine, Sir, that if a money-lender has been honest in his money-lending business, but has perchance failed while selling his horse to tell the buyer that the horse was lame, he may get his licence cancelled by the collector under this Bill. Now Sir, I put it to you. Is it fair, is it just, is it desirable ? If he committed a fraud in some other business, he gets due punishment for that. If you again want to punish him, cancel his licence so that he may not be able to carry on the business of money-lending in future. But do you propose to deprive him of the right to recover his old debts ? This treble punishment cannot be justified under any code whatever. I am not a lawyer but I claim to possess some common-sense, and, common-sense, I may add, is three-fourths of law. I have that common-sense which guides those, who frame laws and rules, which guides those who have to interpret law and which guides those who have to decide cases under any law. I can, therefore, say that this punishment that you want to give to a money-lender will be over and above that he has already got under some other law. Not only that. This Bill aims at turning the money-lender into a destitute and a beggar. If this was not the object of the Bill, why does the Government object to substituting the word 'shall' for the word 'may' in clause 3, line 1 ? If the word 'may' remains here, the commissioner will not be required to give reasons for his refusing to grant the money-lender a certificate. But if the word "shall" is substituted, then he will have to assign reasons for his refusal. It is only this small mercy which we want for the money-lender who has already been punished by some other court for his offence and whom you have punished a second time by cancelling his licence. We only want to save him from a third punishment, that is, he should not be deprived of his right to recover his lawful debts of the past. We do not object to his being debarred from carrying on the business of money-lending in future. Do award this punishment to him. But for God's sake, do not crush him altogether. If the word 'shall' is substituted for 'may' he may hope to recover his past debts which may be on the verge of being time barred. May be, when he is again granted a licence after the expiry of the time for which this licence was cancelled, all of his debts may become time barred and he may not be able to institute any civil suit.

Now, Sir, add to this the further misery of the money-lender inasmuch as his licence is not to be cancelled or renewed by a civil court but by a collector or by a commissioner. I need not labour this point that the collector or the commissioner has to take note of the political activities also and in this capacity he may not like to renew the licence of a money-lender simply because he does not like the political views of the money-lender. It is not fair, thus, to leave the money-lender to the mercy of the collector or the commissioner.

With these words, Sir, I strongly support the amendment moved by my honourable friend Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.

Mr. S. P. Singha (East Central Punjab, Indian Christian) (Urdu): Sir, In my opinion the amendment moved is a very moderate one and it should not be regarded as running counter to the object of the Government. When I read this clause I understand it to be an enabling clause, in continuation of clause 8, sub-clause (vi) which reads—

“.....a suit by a money-lender for the recovery of a loan shall.....be dismissed unless the money-lender.....holds a certificate from a Commissioner granted under section 11, specifying the loan in respect of which the suit is instituted, on the decree in respect of which the application for execution is prevented.”

Without this provision a money-lender whose licence has been cancelled would be barred from suing for recovery of his loans. It is therefore an enabling clause. But judging from to-day's speeches, it is not an enabling clause but a penal clause. If the object is to punish the money-lenders, why should we not provide for it in an unambiguous, straightforward manner? If the Government want to punish the money-lenders, why do they not give authority to the commissioner to fine a fraudulent money-lender to the extent of say Rs. 5,000, Rs. 10,000 or even a lakh of rupees according to his deserts. In this way the Government treasury would also gain much. If, however, a certificate is not given to the money-lender, the Government will not gain anything, but only those people will gain who are owing money to the money-lender. Why should the punishment of the money-lender be an underseverd, unearned gain of borrowers who must pay back what they have borrowed? There would be some point in it, if as a punishment the loans not specified in the certificate were deemed to be forfeited to Government.

My friend, Malik Barkat Ali, in the course of his eloquent, forensic speech stated that the cancellation of a licence should not have any retrospective effect and that loans given by the money-lender prior to the cancellation of the licence should not be invalidated. But holding their views he ended his speech by saying that the word “shall” should not be substituted for the word “may” in sub-clause (8) of section 11. I am constrained to remark that I have not been able to understand the logic of his argument.

Again, my friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, has argued that even if the Government were to accept the word “shall”, even then there will be “may” in the second place, so that in spite of the word “shall” the commissioner would have the power to use his discretion in granting the certificate. He may include some loans and exclude others. From this he has argued that to change “may” into “shall” is purposeless. My submission is that if the commissioner retains his discretion in spite of the “shall” where is the harm in accepting the amendment? If we substitute the word “shall” for the word “may”, even then the commissioner has the discretion to punish the money-lenders if he so desires. The difference between the word “shall” and the word “may” is that of emphasis. In the case of “shall” the commissioner shall have to go into the details and he shall have to scrutinise the list of loans and he would then specify the loans which the money-lender is permitted to sue for recovery. If, however, we let the word “may” remain here, then it would be entirely left to his sweet will to grant any certificate or not. For example, if a money-lender applies for a certificate, and the commissioner disapproves of the man sufficiently, he can summarily turn down his application on the score that he was a dishonest fellow. If the word "shall" is substituted for the word "may", then he would be duty bound to go into the details of every loan. But if the case is otherwise then without going into the merits of the case he can give the money-lender punishment by not granting him a certificate for recovering any of his loans. In view of the arguments I have given, I beg to submit that it would be better if we substitute the word "shall" for the word "may" and I hope that my honourable friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, would recommend to the Government that this amendment should be accepted. If it is accepted, I think, it will not harm the Government in any way.

Syed Amjad Ali Shah (Ferozapore East, Muhammdan, Rural) : Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition has very lucidly brought out a point which some of us have forgotten, that this clause will only apply to dishonest money-lenders. I am rather surprised to hear from the lips of the Leader of the Opposition that the dishonest money-lender should be leniently dealt with. We have been hearing speeches from the Opposition with regard to corruption. The profession of a person employed in Education, Police or Irrigation Department is Government service and the profession of a money-lender is money-lending, but when a Government servant is corrupt, my friends of the Opposition cry in season and out of season that corruption should be dealt with with a very strong hand, but I am really surprised to hear the argument advanced by my friend that when a money-lender is corrupt, he should be dealt with leniently. I cannot understand this logic. If corruption is a bad thing—as it surely is—then it is bad for every one, whether a Government official or money-lender. Then, Sir, my friends overlook that the cases will be decided on merits. The commissioner after all is a responsible person. He has the charge of a division. Why should we think even for a moment that he will not go into a case on merits and dispose it off justly after having gone into all the pros and cons of the question?

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : But what about a perverse officer?

Syed Amjad Ali Shah : Sir, after all, the administration of the province is being carried on by officers. If they were perverse, as my honourable friend suggests, then the administration would not be what it is. You cannot therefore argue that officers would be perverse for this legislation. Sir, I would once again appeal to my honourable friends to bear it in mind that it is a question of merits alone and the commissioner will go into the merits before he decides the case. (Hear, hear).

Khawaja Ghulam Samad (Southern Towns, Muhammdan, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I stand to oppose the amendment moved by my friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang. My honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, while supporting the motion that the word 'may' be substituted by 'shall' has raised a question that this section if passed as it is will affect not only the dishonest money-lender whose licence can be cancelled but the honest money-lender would also be affected by this clause which should not have been done and an honest money-lender, if his licence is cancelled for any other reason than dishonesty, should be granted a licence if he stands in need of a certificate and applies therefor. It appears as if my honourable friend has not studied those disqualifications that are mentioned in clause 6. In sub-clause (1) it is provided that a money-lender who has been held by a court to have contravened the provisions of section 9 of the Regulation of Accounts Act, in more than two suits shall forfeit his licence. In sub-clause (2) it is provided that a money-lender shall forfeit his licence if he has had his suit dismissed in whole or in part under section 37 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act. Sub-clause (3) says that a money-lender shall forfeit his licence if he has had his suit dismissed with the finding that he has made dishonestly or fraudulently a material alteration in any document relating to a loan. In sub-clause (4) it is provided that a money-lender shall forfeit his licence if he has had his suit dismissed with a finding that it is fraudulent. In sub-clause (5) it is laid down that a money-lender shall forfeit his licence if he has been found by a court to have charged higher rates of interest than those prescribed under section 5 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act in more than one suit. In sub-clause (6) it is provided that a money-lender shall forfeit his licence if he has been found guilty by a court of forgery or cheating in respect of a money transaction. I may submit that three sub-clauses would be especially applied to the dishonest money-lender. First would be of forgery and cheating, secondly for keeping bad accounts and thirdly for contravening the Acts already in force. The licence of the honest money-lender, who can hardly be found in this province, can be cancelled if he contravenes the provisions of law in force or charges higher rates of interest. In order to prevent the dishonest and the said honest money-lenders from resorting to malpractices, charging high rates of interest and contravening the laws in force it is necessary to give powers to the commissioner and it should be left entirely to his will whether to give the certificate or not. In my opinion it should not be made obligatory but he should exercise discretionary powers.

Sir, it is my firm conviction that obedience to the provisions of section 6 which I have enumerated above can only be compelled if the word 'may' is allowed to remain and that the word 'shall' is not substituted for it. It goes without saying that if it is made obligatory on the commissioners to grant certificates and this thing is not left to their discretion, money-lenders whether honest or dishonest will be encouraged to defy the provisions of clause 6 of the Bill. I have to repeat again that if we want that the provisions of clause 6 must be complied with, we must not waver, but stick to the word 'may' in the clause under consideration.

Hai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Why not propose some severe penalty for the money-lenders ?

Khawaja Ghulam Samad : When you grudge the provision of this simple penalty, how can you tolerate if some further punishment is proposed ?

Mr. Speaker : Please address the chair.

Khawaja Ghulam Samad : I will close my remarks by saying that the word 'may' should not be allowed to be substituted by the word 'shall' in any case.

Lala Bhagat Ram Choda (Jullundur, General, Rural) (Urdu): Sir,

I have heard so much against the money-lenders and listened to it with patience, but I cannot help saying that it will be very unfair to punish not only the person who has offended against any of the provisions of the Bill, but also his children and grandchildren. I say that it will be a great hardship if for the fault of one person the whole family were to be penalised and the money which a father and perhaps a great-grand-father had earned and advanced to some of the debtors should not be allowed to be realised. Sir, a thief after undergoing imprisonment for the theft committed by him can and does become a member of this Honourable House and even comes to occupy an exalted position under the Government. Similarly, some of the officers even after devouring so many fowls and goats without making any payment for them continue to remain as officers and some of us are allowed to charge 1½ first class railway fare even if we may not have travelled in that class. The sin of the sahukar however, is considered to be so great and heinous that not only he but the whole of his family including his brothers and sisters are sought to be punished and punished with a vengeance. Perhaps the Government has not taken this point into consideration that in many cases families are joint at least so far as their business is concerned and if in such cases a person, who acts on behalf of all the members of a family, goes wrong the whole family will have to suffer. You may award any punishment to that person; you may send him to jail or send him to the Andamans and you may hang him if you like, but there is no reason why you should punish all others for the sins of one man. I am here reminded of the story of a mirasi who had once gone out somewhere to fight his enemies. When he returned to his place he was asked how many of them had gone out for fighting and how many of them had been killed on the battlefield. He replied that three of them had gone out but six had been killed. On being further questioned how that could be possible, the mirasi satisfied his questioners by saying that two of them had been actually killed and for the remaining four he had given his enemies in writing that they could be killed at our place. So this is what this Bill is intended really to do. It will not kill only the business of the person going wrong but will ruin some others also with him.

Sir, it is my genuine fear that this Bill will be used to crush many legitimate activities. Supposing there is a demonstration against any of the Honourable Ministers of the Government and the demonstrators decide to give vent to their feelings by presenting black flags on the arrival of that Minister at a particular place, efforts will be made to coerce the leader of that demonstration party, say, by cancelling his licence if he happens to be a money-lender. I take my own case. Supposing I happen to be the leader of the demonstrators and I am also a money-lender. Surely the executive officers who are being given these powers will be told that the licence of Bhagat Ram should at once be cancelled. This is what I fear and I may say that this fear is shared by many others. It is, therefore, necessary that such wide powers be not given to the executive officers of the Government. With these words I support the amendment now before the House.

Mahant Girdhari Das (South-East Multan Division, General, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, it is unfortunate that the Honourable Premier was not in his seat when the honourable member, Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava, raised some very important points in his speech. It is my own conviction and I really fail to understand why the Government should oppose the substitution of the word 'shall' for the word 'may.' It has been explained to us that even if the proposed amendment is accepted, it will still be left to the discretion of the commissioners to grant a certificate for any suits or even to refuse to grant such a certificate for any of the suits and if that is so, I wonder what harm it will do if the word 'shall' is substituted for the word 'may' in the clause under consideration. I need not remind the House that every money-lender is not dishonest and even a dishonest money-lender can claim to have many transactions, at any rate with some of his friends and honest borrowers, which must be free from all irregularities. It will also be conceded that a dishonest money-lender cannot continue to cheat his borrowers for any length of time and a time must come even in his life when he should cease to commit any irregularities and when he should begin to deal like an honest man. Now if it is to be left entirely to the discretion of the commissioners to grant or not to grant certificates for any of the transactions of a money-lender, however much these may be, free from irregularities, I must say that it will be doing injustice pure and simple to this much maligned class of money-lenders. I am inclined to think that this Bill with all its severities is, more or less, intended to turn this class of money-lenders into so many slaves.

Every time my friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, has risen to speak, he has quoted profusely from the English Act. This Act is meant for those who can understand and who are in fact masters of the language in which it is couched; and it may be quite in keeping with the circumstances prevailing in the country in which it is applicable. But to bring in the Act at every stage for supporting every point while discussing this measure, which is going to be, what I feel, a law in this province which is a hundred years behind England in every respect is not justified. I may as well say that I have listened to this debate on the Bill with patience and without any protest. But the attitude of the Government has exhausted my patience and I feel called upon to say and say like the Honourable Premier, who declared only the other day that 'before man and God I honestly say that I am here to do everything for the good of the poor'; that before man and God I swear that I see no weight in the arguments advanced by the Government for rushing through this measure and for not accepting the word "shall" as proposed by this amendment. With these words I support the amendment.

Lala Sita Ram (Trade Union, Labour) (Urdu): Sir, I think this amendment has been sufficiently discussed already and I do not propose to take up much of the time of this House in merely repeating what already has been said by other honourable speakers. I have only to reply to two or three points which have been raised by the Honourable Premier and other honourable members and with respect to which some objections have been raised about my attitude. I think there has been some misunderstanding in this connection. I want simply to ask in unequivocal terms as to what is the punishment after all which the Government wishes to fix for a money-lender who may be dishonest. This is the question to which I wanted and still want a definite answer. Do you think that the punishment for even a dishonest money-lender which has been fixed in clause 6 of this Bill is sufficient or is not sufficient and whether more stringent punishment should be provided for him ? The punishment provided in the law is that his suit can be dismissed and all the money advanced by him by way of loan can go to the dogs. Over and above all this, you have provided in clause 6 that his licence may be cancelled. I am afraid, you have taken the cancellation of the licence a little too lightly. Perhaps the Government is of the opinion that the cancellation of licence in itself is no punishment. But the fact of the matter is that the cancellation of a licence means the complete ruination of the profession of a person. It means degradation for him. Especially so far as the banking is concerned, the cancellation of a banker's licence means the evaporation of his credit. And without credit the business of banking cannot be carried on for a single minute. My point is, do you not think that the punishment already provided for the dishonest money-lender under the existing laws is sufficient to meet the ends of justice that you consider the cancellation of his licence so necessary for your purpose ? Then, in this clause you have further provided that the property of a money-lender may also be confiscated. And there is no limit attached to this provision. Over and above the wiping out of his particular debts which may run into thousands you consider the loss of his property fair and just. You have strange conceptions of fairness and justice indeed ! And even in the matter of confiscation of property there should be some certainty and limit. It is not proper that you should proceed to deport the money-lender right away and confiscate all his property. The punishment provided should be reasonable. Even in the distant past there was a limit to punishments. But we in these days of civilization look down upon punishments provided by the ancients. For instance, the amputation of hand for theft is looked upon as brutality in these days. Why ? Because the person so punished is maimed for life and cannot continue his profession. But you, though you are not cutting the hands of the sahakar, you are making it impossible for him to continue his profession. Is this justice ? My honourable friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, is in the habit of quoting English Law every time he stands on his feet. I should have liked him to quote the English Law in this connection too. I am not very erudite nor can I cite many instances to support my point, but I am certain that in England and other civilized countries crime is now being considered in the category of diseases. It is with this consideration in view, that punishments there are tempered with mercy. Even the convicts imprisoned for most heinous crimes are given all sorts of facilities in prisons to reform themselves. I wish my honourable friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, could apply the same civilized mind to the case of money-lenders also while supporting certain forms of punishment for them.

I am indeed surprised at the progressive views of our Government so far as the reformation of money-lenders is concerned. But whenever I raise the question of the improvement of the lot of labourers, providing better wages for them, giving them better houses to live in and so on and so forth, I am always reminded that our country is not sufficiently advanced to introduce all the reforms which have been introduced in other civilized countries in this respect. Thank God we are sufficiently civilized to wipe out the sahakars out of existence. I would submit with all the emphasis at my command that even if we have to punish a dishonest money-lender we should see to it that his punishment is not out of all proportion to the offence committed by him.

One word more and I have done. I think it is not legal to deprive a man of all of his property. This is inequitable from another point of view. It is a recognised principle of justice that the punishment should be strictly confined to the wrong-doer. But by confiscating the property of a guilty sahukar we will be extending the hardship of punishment to his children and wife too. This is not justice. In the end I will submit that such like provisions have led me to believe that the Bill in the present form would not help the Government to achieve their so-called object of weeding out the dishonest money-lenders, but would be detrimental to the profession as a whole. It will, on the other hand, ruin the trade and industry of the province. With these words, Sir, I lend my whole-hearted support to the innocent amendment moved by me in the Honourable House.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) (Urdu): Sir, I am sorry to find that all the speeches that have been delivered were merely repetitions of the arguments already advanced in the course of previous speeches. Lala Bhagat Ram was pleased to narrate an interesting story during his speech. He said that there was a "mirasi", some people asked him how many persons were killed in the war. The mirasi said: "Six people were killed." The people said: "Only three had gone to the war, how were six killed?" The mirasi replied: "We got six instead of three entered in the Tamassuk." I would like to remind my honourable friend that this story was in favour of my argument. (Voices: He never said so.) He did say: "Instead of three we got six entered in the Tamassuk, keeping the three in reserve, to be made use of when the necessity arose." I am very glad to find that the maiden speech made by my honourable friend, Mahant Girdhari Dass, was on the whole reasonable but his arguments were not so weighty as to make me or the majority of the House change its convictions. It has been pointed out by the Opposition that Government spokesmen have been quoting the English Law extensively in this connection and that they do not do so in other matters. I have already stated that the English Law is very complete and comprehensive and we make use of it from time to time just as many of my friends take shelter behind it in time of necessity. But it is a pity that after they have done this, they indulge in abuse and bad names for the Britisher and his institutions.

My next submission is that the provisions of this Bill are going to strike a hard blow only to the dishonest money-lenders. I may, however, assure the House that this Bill is not intended to touch one hair of the honest money-lender. I admit that a money-lender did not at first indulge in fraudulent transactions because he was afraid of the prestige and discipline of the village community. Almost every honourable member who has spoken from the opposite benches has repeated the argument that this Bill prescribes extremely severe punishment for an ordinary or minor offence. Some honourable members remarked that if these harsh provisions are allowed to remain in the Bill the profession of money-lending would be wiped out of existence, while some other honourable members said that the proposed Bill would sound the deathknell of this profession and all the monetary transactions entered into by the creditor and the debtor of their free will would become null and void. I do not think that they have clearly understood the import of this Bill but if they have understood it, they have not honestly expressed their views with regard to it. Let me assure them that if a money-lender is guilty of an offence punishable under section 6 for the first time and the collector does not come to know of it, his licence is safe. But if he commits the same offence for a second time and the collector comes to know of it, his licence will be cancelled for a certain period. My honourable friends fear that the collector might cancel the licence for a period longer than is appropriate or necessary. Let me assure them that such a thing is not likely to happen. Do they think that the collectors are dishonest like some money-lenders? If a case for the cancellation of the licence of a money-lender is brought to the notice of the collector he would go into details very carefully and if he finds that the offence was a minor one, he would cancel the licence for a short period, say 15 days. Under this cancellation only those loans would be time barred which come within the period of 15 days. If the amount involved is Rs. 200 or Rs. 300 the money-lender would not think it necessary to go to the commissioner. But in case the amount involved is ten or fifteen thousand rupees, the cancellation of the licence for even a fortnight would involve great hardship and the money-lender would rush to file an appeal with the commissioner praying that pending the decision of the appeal he may be granted a certificate specifying the loans in respect of which a suit may be instituted by him.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : If the commissioner does not grant such a certificate?

Premier : I would like to ask my learned friend whether he thinks that the commissioner is an enemy of money-lenders. I would ask him not to think so. If the commissioner thinks that the punishment is adequate he would permit the money-lender to realise his loans. Supposing the principal lent amounts to 25 thousand rupees, the money-lender goes to the commissioner and he after finding that the punishment is a little too severe grants him a certificate for realising 20 thousand rupees. In case the offence is a serious one, e.g., as my learned friend has pointed out that a money-lender cheats his brother, then the licence might be cancelled for one year. If such a case goes to the commissioner he would say: 'I give you a certificate for 15 thousand rupees only'.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I put a question to the honourable member through you, how would the learned commissioner decide who are those particularly favoured judgment-debtors with respect to whom he should not grant a certificate and who are those with respect to whom he should grant a certificate?

Premier : My learned friend has asked me a question the like of which are put in courts. The commissioner would after all take all the considerations in view before granting a certificate to a money-lender. He may deny certificates for loans with respect to which the money-lender had committed fraud or where he had already enjoyed more than fair benefit, or where the debtors were the poorest or proportionately, but I would not like to fetter his discretion. The honourable member may rest assured that commissioners would go into the merits of each case.

It has been emphasised by some honourable members opposite that the cancellation of licences would sound the deathknell of the money-lending business. It is absolutely wrong. If my friends sitting on the opposite benches are of the opinion that every money-lender in the Punjab is a dishonest money-lender and, therefore, the licences of all of them should be cancelled and they should not be able to get certificates, then, I would accept what they have said, but I am of the opinion that 90 per cent. of the money-lenders are or can be honest and the provisions of this Bill will not affect them at all. But the provisions of this Bill would be applicable to the remaining 10 per cent. of money-lenders who are dishonest and are determined to indulge in fraudulent practices. We have made this Bill automatic. I am at a loss to understand why my honourable friends are showing so much sympathy for only the dishonest out of 35 to 55 thousand money-lenders and why they do not extend a helping hand to the deserving debtors who are about 2 crores. (Cheers). My submission is that the amendment before the House is a sentimental one. I should like, Sir, to assure the House that the Bill is intended neither to ruin the profession of money-lending nor does it create the question of life or death for anybody. The Bill is intended merely as a warning to dishonest money-lenders so that they may be more careful in dealing with poor villagers and the needy citizens and if they attempt fraud, they do so at their peril.

Mr. Speaker : The first portion of sub-clause (3) of clause 11 reads as follows :—

“ The Commissioner may, in dismissing an appeal grant to the money-lender a certificate..... ”

The first amendment moved by Munshi Hari Lal is—

That the following words be inserted for the words “ The Commissioner may ” :—

“ The Collector or the Commissioner may.”

Secondly, he says that the words “ in dismissing an appeal ” be deleted, and the clause be read as follows :—

“ The Collector or the Commissioner may grant to the money-lender a certificate..... ”

Now I will put the first amendment to the vote of the House.

The question is that—

In sub-clause (3), line 1, for the words “ The Commissioner may ” the words “ The Collector or the Commissioner may ” be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That the word “ may ” stand part of sub-clause (3), clause 11, line 1.

The Assembly divided : Ayes 81, Noes 36.

Mr. Speaker : Before allowing the honourable, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, to move his amendment, I must say that from the very beginning I have allowed discussion to be focussed on the change of the word 'may' into 'shall'. Therefore whatever decision was arrived at with regard to this change, it shall govern the honourable member's amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : If that is your ruling then there will be nothing left in my amendment.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : The amendment which you put to the vote of the House was that the word 'shall' be substituted for the word 'may.' That amendment was rejected meaning that the House has decided in favour of retaining the word 'may'. But the amendment of Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang is the addition of certain words.

Mr. Speaker : When I allowed discussion on the substitution of the word 'shall' for the word 'may', it was with reference to both amendments. I allowed a common discussion on this point with the object of putting the rest of Dr. Gokul Chand Narang's amendment separately to the vote of the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : May I be permitted to say one word. My amendment is entirely different. I shall explain how. If you glance at my amendment you will see that it proposes the addition of certain words at the end of sub-clause (B). I am not trying to disturb any decision that has been arrived at. I am only asking the leave of the House to have these words added to the sub-clause as it stands. Let the word 'may' be there as decided by the House. I am not disturbing that decision. I only want that these words be added, namely 'and shall grant such certificate in respect of the loans whose limitation is due to expire within the period for which the money-lender's licence has been cancelled and during three months after such period.' This means that I am only asking the House to agree that in certain specified cases the limitation of which is due to expire within the period for which the licence is cancelled and three months after the commissioner shall grant a certificate. It is not inconsistent with any part of the clause.

Mr. Speaker : I expressly stated that the use of the word 'shall' in the first part of the sub-clause as well as in the amendment of Dr. Gokul

[Mr. Speaker.]

Chand Narang shall be discussed together and voted upon separately, if necessary. Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang's amendment is—

That at the end of sub-clause (3) the following be added:—

“And shall grant such certificate in respect of the loan whose limitation is due to expire within the period for which the money-lender's licence has been cancelled and during three months after such period.”

But the original sub-clause (3), as agreed to by the House, gives discretion to the commissioner to give a certificate in all suits and applications for execution; while the object of the honourable member's amendment is not to leave all these cases to the commissioner's discretion. In some cases he proposes it to be mandatory for the commissioner to give a certificate. Consequently, the amendment is clearly out of order, because it is inconsistent with what the House has already passed.

7 P.M.

The question is—

That sub-clause (3) stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (4) stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (5) stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 11 as amended stand part of the Bill.

(Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang stood up to speak.)

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member should not refer or speak to individual matters mentioned in various clauses. His arguments should apply to the clause as a whole.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General Rural): Supposing, Sir, I want to reject an apple, is it necessary that the whole apple should be rotten and I should say that as the whole apple is rotten I am not prepared to eat it? Can I not say that I am not going to eat the apple because a part of it is rotten and therefore I must reject it? In the same way supposing a clause is put and a part of it is rotten, defective, unacceptable, undesirable and inadvisable, then is it necessary that before I can oppose the whole clause I should say every bit of it is rotten and bad? No. When the whole clause is put and any part is unacceptable I can say: 'Away with your clause; I am not prepared to accept it,' and I would therefore submit that for reasons which I would just now give this clause should not be accepted. This clause is very high handed. It denies to the persons who are likely to be affected of valuable rights. It does not do even the ordinary justice to the people who might be affected by the collector's orders. The Government has rejected very reasonable amendments which were proposed by various members of this House. They have not agreed even to save the money-lender from what might prove to be his utter ruin. They have not made it obligatory on the commissioner to grant a certificate even in those cases where limitation might be about to expire, and the Honourable the Premier had nothing else to say to the criticism offered by this part of the House except asking us to have faith in the commissioner, to trust to his good sense: he would act justly and fairly and he would not give the same punishment to everyone and would measure out the punishment according to the nature of the offence. But our objection is: 'Why do you in every case throw us at the mercy of the commissioner?' He may have 99 reasons to be offended or displeased with anyone of the money-lenders. My honourable friends over there pointed out some of those reasons which may displease an executive officer. You have not made any provision for the assistance of judicial officers. The Honourable the Premier the other day said and I think one of his lieutenants also referred to the English law on the point and said that in England both the judiciary and the executive function and we have made provision for the functioning of the executive. I ask them, as I remarked the other day, why should they pick out all that is defective in that law and leave out all that is best? Now if they are following the English law, why do they not follow it in full? Because it does not suit them? In the English law the judiciary and the executive both function, but why deprive the money-lenders in this province of a judicial finding by a court of law and throw them at the mercy of the executive officer? I do not say that all executive officers are fools or that they are incompetent or that they are dishonest. I do not say that at all. I have great respect for most of them, but the gentlemen to whom you are going to entrust these duties have their hands so full that they cannot be expected to go into the cases placed before them as thoroughly as a judicial officer would do. A judicial officer never says: "Oh, I must finish all these cases to-day." If he says that, he is not true to his duties because his business is not to finish half a dozen cases or a dozen cases every day; his duty is to do justice. An executive officer cannot do it, because suddenly a telegram may come of a riot which occurs at a distance of 20 miles in the district and he has to leave the cases and run away. The cases are kept pending and whatever he has heard he forgets by the time he is next able to take up those cases, or something else happens, as he has so many calls on his time and he has so many various duties to perform that he cannot give the amount of time which it is necessary to give to those cases. These are not twopenny, halfpenny cases which an executive officer can dispose of by an order of three lines. These cases may involve very intricate questions and property worth thousands and even lakhs. Why have they not made any provision for even these matters to go to the judicial officers? There were several amendments proposing the substitution of the district judge and senior sub-judge in place of the collector and commissioner and so on, but they have all been rejected, I would, therefore, say, without taking any further time of the House that the clause, as it has been placed before the House, is very defective and should not be passed. They have not accepted even my amendment which only wanted that protection for those dues which are to become time barred during the period of cancellation of a licence. If they had accepted the word "shall" in sub-clause (8), it would have mitigated the rigour of injustice that they are inflicting upon people who are likely to be affected adversely by this measure.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): Sir, I oppose this clause, not only because of the severity of punishment which has been prescribed, but also because of the great uncertainty which lies in various clauses regarding punishment.

Premier: On a point of order, Sir. I seek your ruling on the point. This practice of making speeches, more or less general speeches, on sub-clauses, is a new practice and was not followed in this House before, and I dare say that you might have been influenced by the Parliamentary practice on the subject to allow members to speak on each individual clause. If that is your view, I say that it is perfectly correct. But at the same time, I most respectfully draw your attention to another Parliamentary convention that there members are allowed to discuss the clauses only at the second reading of the Bill. As a matter of fact, most of the work is done in a committee of the whole House and if any discussion takes place in the House, members are allowed to make speeches. You are aware that the third reading stage is merely a formality and nobody is allowed to make a speech. It is merely the Clerk of the House, who puts on record that the third reading has taken place and the Bill is passed. If we follow the Parliamentary convention with regard to each clause, I submit that we should also follow the subsequent convention with regard to the third reading.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I most strongly protest against the suggestion which the Honourable Premier has been pleased to make. He is placing a restriction on the freedom of speech in this House. Every motion that is put before the House, unless it suffers from technical defects, is open to debate, and every member of this House has a right to discuss it and speak on it. It is for you to check him if he repeats or talks irrelevant things. But we are not prepared to give up our right of discussing any motion that you may be pleased to put from the Chair.

Mr. Speaker: The Parliamentary practice, as well as the practice of this House, is that if any member wishes to oppose the passage of a clause, he can make a general speech applying to the whole clause. He should not re-open consideration of sub-clauses or other matters which have been discussed and disposed of.

Premier: The convention is that if you want to discuss a sub-clause, then you oppose the whole clause and speak on that motion. But to speak on every sub-clause and discuss the whole thing and then again to speak on the clause itself, I think, is unnecessary waste of the time of the House. If you do not follow that convention, I have no objection.

Mr. Speaker: No one has spoken on any sub-clause.

Premier: Honourable members have spoken nearly on every amendment.

Mr. Speaker: To speak on an amendment to a clause is one thing while the opposition of the whole clause is another thing.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: We intend to exercise our right of opposing each clause. Several clauses have been passed without any speech from this side of the House.

Mr. Speaker: I would request the honourable member to be brief, if possible.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I will not take more time than has been taken in interrupting me. I would have finished my speech long ago. I submit that it is one of the most crucial clauses in the Bill, and, therefore, it is necessary to point out to the House that this clause, if it continues to exist, will defeat the object of the Bill. Kindly see the severity of punishment, which is already before you. What is it? Is it not proper that a person who is to be punished ought to know the extent to which he can be punished? What have we got here? The commissioner may not take action at all, i.e., he may give a certificate with respect to all of his debts. Or he may certify half of his entire debts or  $\frac{1}{3}$ rd or  $\frac{1}{4}$ th. In some cases he may choose not to certify any debt at all which may amount to several lakhs. The punishment may be to the tune of Rs. 500 or 5 lakhs of rupees. Sir, this extreme uncertainty militates against the basic principle of punishment. Again, Sir, an extreme type of injustice is involved in the proposed measure of punishment. If for any matter a person is fined Rs. 5,000 that amount goes to the exchequer and to the State. But in this case the fine when realised is not to go to the Government treasury, but is to benefit the person or persons who are the least entitled to any consideration. A person mortgages with possession a beautiful mansion in Lahore, say a building on the Mall with a money-lender for Rs. 50,000 and when the licence is cancelled and the debts are not certified, the person who would benefit by the punishment is not the State, is not the general public, but a person who has borrowed fifty thousand rupees cash on a registered mortgage. What is the idea in making a present of Rs. 50,000 to him by robbing the real owner? What justice is there? What is the equity in favour of this urban debtor? I fail to see any grain of justice, equity or commonsense in it. It is a pity that the Punjab Government cannot and will not see the obvious injustice involved in a punishment of this type. It appears they do not care whether the legislation is equitable or reasonable or can stand the test of commonsense and good sense. With these words I oppose this clause.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, my honourable friend, Mr. Puri, has made a very eloquent and vehement speech. I was sure that he would speak, because Dr. Narang and Mr. Puri are vying with each other to out-do each other. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: What is happening in the province?) I know what is happening in the province. I am feeling the pulse of the province as a whole, that is of 2 crores and 85 lakhs of people; while my honourable friend is feeling the pulse of only 40 thousand people.

My honourable friends criticised that the punishment under this clause is so severe that it would lead to the utter ruination of money-lenders. I submit that this clause has nothing to do with punishment. You were busy in reading Campion, otherwise I am almost certain that you would have ruled this criticism out as being irrelevant. This clause has nothing to do with punishment. It is clause 6 which this House has already passed and which deals with punishments. This clause, as a matter of fact, merely indicates the manner in which that severe punishment would be mitigated and that is, that if a person thinks that he is likely to lose heavily by cancellation of his licence, he can go to the commissioner and apply for a certificate. It also lays down the method of appeal against an order of the collector. My honourable friends have been wasting the time of the House by repeating the same arguments which were advanced on clause 6. As I have said, you were busy otherwise, and they got an opportunity to put on record again their repeated objections to this Bill.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : On a point of order, Sir. Is not the expression 'waste the time of the House' unparliamentary?

Premier : The word 'waste' is certainly not unparliamentary.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : It is certainly offensive.

Mr. Speaker : I shall give my ruling on this point later.

Premier : My honourable friends time and again have repeated these very arguments that this Bill would utterly ruin a large class of people. Lala Duni Chand remarked 'why are you riding rough-shod over a class of people'? I assure him I am doing nothing of the sort. I merely want them to turn into honest businessmen. If there are 90 per cent. honest money-lenders, only 10 per cent. would be affected and out of those 10 per cent. only 1 per cent. would be caught red-handed. Lala Duni Chand presented me with old legal doctrines from the English Law. I would present him with a frank English saying 'Honesty is the best policy' (Hear, hear).

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 11, as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : I promised to give my ruling regarding the expression 'waste the time of the House'. I maintain that the charge that a member has obstructed the business of the House or that a speech is an abuse of the rules of the House is not out of order.

Clause 12.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : Sir, I do not want to propose my amendment, but I will speak against the clause as a whole. The clause runs as follows:—

The Provincial Government may, by notification exempt any person or class of persons from the operation of this Act or from any of the provisions thereof.

Sir, we on this side have been whole-heartedly in agreement with the principle of the Bill, namely, that there is a great necessity for regulating and controlling the money-lenders. At the same time we are opposed to many important provisions of the Bill and one of those provisions is clause 12. Clause 12 places power in the hands of the local Government to exempt persons or classes of persons from the operation of this Act or from any of the provisions thereof. Sir, we do not want to place this power in the hands of the executive. In our view it should not have been difficult for the occupants of the Treasury Benches or for the matter of that for the framers of the Bill to specify those persons who in their opinion were entitled to be exempted from the operation of this Act. With the best of our intentions we have grave apprehensions in regard to what will be done by those in whose hands this power is given. We seriously object to it. If they want to exempt any class of persons they should specify now. There is a very large number of persons who are evidently entitled to exemption from the operation of this Act, and the most deserving class is that of women. I think women belonging to all classes, both agricultural and non-agricultural, inherit money lending business. Are women of our country capable of managing their affairs? Are they capable of understanding the intricacies of this Bill; applying for registration; applying for licences and so on? Imagine the lot of widows who will be required to go through all these formalities.

Mrs. J. A. Shah Nawaz : May I request the honourable member to withdraw the remarks that women are not capable of managing their own affairs? I am sure that Mrs. Duni Chand can manage her affairs as well as he can, if not better.

Lala Duni Chand : With due respect to every word uttered by the honourable lady member I submit that she will be prepared to concede that while some women may be able to do great things, there are others who may not be able to attend to their own affairs.

Mrs. J. A. Shah Nawaz : I am sure the honourable member will agree with me that women who are placed in charge of their homes have to manage several affairs connected with the management of those little kingdoms and they do manage them better than men could ever do.

Lala Duni Chand : I am perfectly prepared to concede that the Honourable Begum Shah Nawaz is even capable of governing the province better than these ministers. (Laughter and cheers). If the country had all its womenfolk as gifted as Begum Shah Nawaz, then the condition of the country will be altogether different. I was submitting that in view of the position in which some of our women are situated, they are entitled to the exemption from the operation of this Bill. There is no reason why provision should not be made to this effect. There is another class of persons who are also entitled to exemption from this measure, I mean minors. It is conceded on all sides that minors are incapable of committing fraud or anything like that. Why, minors up to a certain age are even exempted from criminal liability.

Mr. Speaker : If the honourable member will read the Bill carefully, he will find that there is a provision empowering Government to exempt by notification any class of persons from the operation of this law.

Lala Duni Chand : I am pointing out the class of persons who should be exempted from the operation of this law.

Premier : It would perhaps save the time of the House and of my honourable friend opposite if he will only say whether he wants this clause to be deleted or not.

Lala Duni Chand : I want this clause to be deleted.

Premier : I am prepared to accept it.

Lala Duni Chand : If the Government is prepared to accept the responsibility of not exempting any class of persons, I welcome that.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I think this clause should be retained, so that any mistakes and shortcomings may be rectified under the authority of this clause.

Lala Duni Chand : While I welcome exemption to certain classes of people I am opposed to this power being given to Government under the rule-making power.

Mr. Speaker : When rules are made and Government makes exemptions, then it will be for the honourable member to make suggestions to Government.

Lala Duni Chand : There are several occasions on which I can make suggestions and this is one of them.

Mr. Speaker : All that the honourable member can discuss at this juncture is whether the Government should be given power to exempt certain persons from the operation of the law. He cannot go beyond that.

Lala Duni Chand : Can I not make mention of the class of persons who ought to be exempted ?

Mr. Speaker : No. That would be irrelevant.

Lala Duni Chand : The last thing that I wish to place before this House is that one of the fundamental rules of legislation is that in regard to the essential matters the law should make provision and it should not be left to the rule-making power of the executive authority. If this power is vested in the executive authority it is liable to be abused. I, therefore, submit that this power should not be given to Government.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 12 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 13.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) : I beg
8 P. M. to move—

That in sub-clause (1), lines 2-4, between the words 'publication' and 'for' the words 'and approval of the Legislative Assembly' be inserted.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (1), lines 3-4, between the words 'publication' and 'for' the word 'and approval of the Legislative Assembly' be inserted.

This amendment as well as the amendment of which notice has been given by Tikka Jagjit Singh for the insertion of the words 'approbation by the Legislative Assembly' between the words 'publication' and 'for' may be discussed together.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I just want to support this amendment. Honourable members of this House who were members of the previous Council will remember that when the Executive Officers Bill was passed a similar power of making rules was reserved to Government, but there was also a provision that the rules should be published and the House should be enabled to move a motion, for the consideration of the rules. I shall be satisfied and my friend, the mover of the amendment also will be satisfied, if a similar provision is made in this Bill also. There are several clauses in this Bill which leave several matters to be regulated by rules to be framed under this law. Practically the whole working of this law would be governed more by the rules to be framed by the executive authority than by the sections of this law. It is therefore necessary that this House should have a say in the matter of these rules. The Government may make rules, and I am sure they will have the assistance of their law officers in framing the rules. The whole Secretariat will be behind them. But it is the right of this House that it should have a say so far as these rules are concerned. If the Government has really nothing to conceal from the public or from the members of this House, it should have no hesitation in accepting this amendment. Of course, the Government have got a great majority behind them and the rules will be passed by the House, but we should be given an opportunity of making suggestions or alterations in the rules which may or may not be accepted. I therefore trust that the Government will accept this amendment.

Tikka Jagjit Singh Bedi (Montgomery East, Sikh, Rural) : I also have got an amendment to this clause and it reads as follows :—

That in sub-clause (1), lines 3-4, between the words 'publication' and 'for' the words 'and approbation by the Legislative Assembly' be inserted.

Sir, my amendment is simple, sound, reasonable, and an important one. I believe that every one of us reads the morning papers and I am sure that every one who reads the papers will bear me out that there is a province-wide agitation in regard to what the people call black Bills. Practically in every district conferences are held and resolutions are passed condemning the measures. Letters and telegrams are being sent to Honourable Premier and to other members of this House on these measures. At this stage it is not necessary to discuss the merits or demerits of this Bill. When this Bill was introduced in the Assembly it was black. But what I wish to emphasise is that the Bills are very important—affecting a good many people of the province. I may submit that as a result of discussions in the select committee and in this House this Bill has now become a brown one. Now as a result of certain amendments accepted by the House to several clauses of the Bill, the Bill has become acceptable to some people though not to all. Similarly, if the rules to be framed under this measure are also laid on the table of the House and discussed, I daresay that they with the amendments suggested by the House will become acceptable to some people. They may not satisfy people, but might pacify them. I therefore strongly support the amendment.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General Rural) : After the able speech of my honourable friend it is hardly necessary to lend any further support to the amendment. He has given very good reasons that the rules should be brought for consideration before the House and I do not wish to add to the very able and elaborate arguments given by my friend (Hear, hear).

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I merely wanted to say a few words about the papers which we read every morning and which every body should read.

Mr. Speaker : But that would be irrelevant.

Premier : I merely wanted to point out that he probably reads a section of the press which naturally has raised a hue and cry. I happened to see one paper this morning which took strong objection to these Bills being called black Bills on certain grounds that I would not repeat in this House but I will respectfully refer my honourable friend to that paper and also yourself.

So far as the question of telegrams is concerned, I have received scores and scores of telegrams from various districts both for and against the Bills. I have also read the proceedings of the various meetings both for and against. As a matter of fact, one cannot possibly judge the situation in the province merely by reading a section of the press. One has to go further and look at the things more minutely in order not to be taken off his feet by this agitation in the press. As I had an occasion to point out the other day, when the Land Alienation Act was passed, there was a hue and cry throughout the country, calling it a black measure and now that it is an Act people have hailed it as a measure of great relief.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

“That in sub-clause (1), lines 3-4, between the words ‘publication’ and ‘for’, the word ‘and approval of the Legislative Assembly’ be inserted”.

Mr. Speaker : The question is —

That sub-clause (1) of Clause 13 stand part of the Clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the first three lines of sub-clause (2) stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Munshi Hari Lal (South-Western Towns, General, Urban) (Urdu) r
I move—

That in sub-clause (2) (a), lines 7-8, the words "and the area of validity of licence" be deleted.

The object of this amendment is to save the money-lenders from unnecessary troubles. It appears from the statement of the Honourable Premier that the money-lender shall have to obtain licence for every district in which he wishes to carry on his trade. For example, if a money-lender institutes a case against a defendant and obtains a decree against him but at the time of execution that judgment-debtor goes to a district other than the one for which the money-lender holds the licence, then that money-lender would be required under the provisions of this Bill to have licence for that district as well. Again if the judgment-debtor slips off to another district.

[Manahi Hari Lal.]

then the money-lender would be required to have a licence for that district as well. In this way the judgment-debtor can go from one district to another district in order to avoid the money-lender and in this the money-lender would be required to have licences for all the districts of the Punjab in order to get the decree issued against the judgment-debtor. In my opinion this is unnecessary hardship for the money-lenders and I would therefore request that these words "and the area of validity of licence" may be deleted.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration. Amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (2) (a), lines 7-8, the words "and the area of validity of licence" be deleted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : I am opposed to introducing unnecessary and avoidable complexity in a piece of legislation which should ordinarily be very simple. The licence should be for lending money and not for lending money in any particular area. You are aware that the territorial divisions into districts and tahsils are not based on any scientific basis. Money-lenders, for instance, in Khushab lend money to persons residing in Mianwali district or certain villages in Campbellpur and Jhelum districts which adjoin a particular village in the Khushab tahsil where the money-lender may have his residence. Again, with respect to those districts which lie near the Frontier or lie near Delhi and the United Provinces money-lenders advance considerable number of loans to areas which are not within the jurisdiction of the Punjab. I know that certain money-lenders in the Phalia tahsil of Gujrat district have extensive loan transactions with people residing in the United Provinces and it is not essential that a person carrying on business in more than one district or throughout the province should get more than one licence. Therefore, I would like this to be omitted so that the Government may not necessarily sub-divide these licences into district licences or tahsil licences or provincial licences. It would also reduce the difficulty. For instance, a person from Madras or an Indian State wishes to borrow money at Lahore. Most of the money-lenders may have only a local licence and, therefore, he would be confined to money-lenders who have an extra-provincial licence. Therefore, it would serve no useful purpose in granting these licences with respect to particular areas. The grant of a licence should be with respect to the profession.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : I am afraid my honourable friends are unnecessarily apprehensive about these words. I think that if the money-lenders, whom they are trying to represent here, knew that these amendments had been moved by them, they would only cry out, "God save us from our friends". What is the object of this clause ? It gives the Government discretion to prescribe the greater scale of fee for a licence for one district or for a provincial licence. I said the other day that the Government had not come to any definite decision yet but if we decide that there should be a separate licence for a district and another licence for a provincial money-lender, then it would be entirely left to the voluntary application of the money-lender himself whether he wants to apply for a district licence or a division licence or for a provincial licence if such a thing is decided eventually by the Government.

I have included this clause so that we may have the fullest possible latitude to give relief to the smaller man. If you have only one licence do you mean that you will have to fix one rate for the licence? Would it be fair to charge the same rate from a money-lender whose business ramifications extend throughout the province and in various districts? Would it be fair to charge the same fee from a small village money-lender whose business is limited to a few villages or may be inside a district? Therefore if you fix one fee it would be cumbersome for the small money-lender and too small for a big money-lender. We have full power to differentiate, if we find it is necessary to do so, and would prescribe a smaller fee for the district licence and a larger fee for the provincial licence. That is what I tried to explain on a previous occasion and this is the object of keeping this clause in the present form. If my honourable friend wants that one rigid fee should be fixed for all kinds of licences, he will find that for a man doing business on a very small scale, it would be very hard. For that reason I am not prepared to accept the amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Sir, I think that the reply given by the Honourable Premier is not satisfactory. The object of this Bill, Sir, as has been admitted by the Premier himself, is not to make money, but is to give a sort of permit to the money-lender to carry on his business. Why does he suppose that if there is only one fee it would be so heavy that it would weigh on the petty money-lender and it might be too small for a big money-lender? My submission is that the fee should be as low as possible because their object is not to make money: it is only to give a sort of approval to the man to carry on his business; it does not matter whether he carries on the business and makes Rs. 8,000 a month or Rs. 10,000. At the Bar the enrolment fee is exactly the same for ordinary advocates: they pay the same fee and they are at liberty to practise wherever they like. I may tell you as we people have no confidence in this Government every word makes us suspicious. When I read this I thought, "Well, there seems to be some mischief hidden in this and that is to make money out of the money-lender". If a man is carrying on his business, say in Gujranwala, he pays Rs. 2 for a district licence. If a judgment-debtor goes to Sialkot district he cannot pursue him there or file an execution application there because he has no licence for the Sialkot district; or if another judgment-debtor goes to Lahore district he cannot follow him to Lahore district unless he obtains a licence for Lahore district. I shall be glad to know if I am mistaken—I do not want to impute mischievous motives to the members of Government but certainly it is liable to this suspicion that you want to make money out of the people by prescribing different scales of fees for provincial operators and for district operators and so on. Another suspicion is that you want them to take out more licences than one before they are able to realise their debts. It is very necessary that the rules which you want to frame on this point, should be placed before the House so that we may have some voice in the matter.

Malik Barkat Ali: Sir, I do not want to make a speech. I just wish to remind my learned friend—and I hope he will agree with me—that a pleader who practises in one district has only to pay a licence fee of Rs. 25 whereas an advocate like himself, who practises in the whole province, has to pay a fee of Rs. 500. Therefore I would respectfully submit that the point of view brought out by my learned friend the Premier is more consistent with truth and equity than the point of view which has commended itself to my learned friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.

Clause 9.

Mr. Speaker : The House will now take up the postponed clause 9.

Premier : I beg to move—

That for the existing clause the following be substituted :—

- "9. Nothing in this Act shall apply to suits or applications for execution pending—
- (a) at the time of the commencement of this Act; or
  - (b) on the date of the cancellation of the licence of the money-lender, if before his current licence is granted or renewed, a court has not given any such finding as would render him liable to have his licence cancelled under the provisions of section 6 of this Act."

Mr. Speaker : Clause 9, which had been postponed on certain understanding between members of the various parties of the House, is now redrafted as follows :—

That for the existing clause the following be substituted :—

- "9. Nothing in this Act shall apply to suits or applications for execution pending—
- (a) at the time of the commencement of this Act; or
  - (b) on the date of the cancellation of the licence of the money-lender, if before his current licence is granted or renewed, a court has not given any such finding as would render him liable to have his licence cancelled under the provisions of section 6 of this Act."

Malik Barkat Ali : I do not propose to move my amendment.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the present clause 9 of the Bill stand part of the Bill.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

Preamble.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

This be the preamble of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 1.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Clause 1 (1) stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The amendment of Lala Bita Ram is out of order.

Lala Sita Ram : Sir, may I know the reason?

Mr. Speaker : The simplest and plainest reason is that the clause itself relates to area, while the honourable member's amendment relates to person.

Amendments Nos. 5, 6 and 7 are also out of order.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I know how my amendment No. 7 is out of order?

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member may read the clause with the amendment which he proposes to make and he will understand the reason.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : My amendment is—

That at the end of sub-clause (3), the words "and may be enforced in such areas as the Provincial Government may from time to time prescribe" be added.

Mr. Speaker : It is inconsistent with the first part.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Not at all. The extent of the operation of this Act is limited to areas within the Punjab, but as to when and how it may be enforced in various parts of the Punjab is a matter which is being left to the discretion of the provincial Government. The Act may extend to the whole of the Punjab, or it may be enforced in one district or in one division only.

Mr. Speaker : Order, order. The provision that 'this Act shall extend to the Punjab' clearly means that it shall be in force in the whole of the Punjab. But the honourable member proposes to add that it—

"may be enforced in such areas as the Provincial Government may from time to time prescribe."

This amendment is certainly inconsistent with the first part of the clause.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The extent of the operation of the Act is entirely different from the time and date on which it may be enforced. My amendment is that, although this Act applies to the whole Punjab, yet a discretion should vest in the Provincial Government to enforce it when and how they like. That is certainly not irrelevant. I also put forward this view in the select committee. I intend to vest these powers in the Provincial Government so that if they like they may enforce it immediately to the whole of the Punjab or to any portion of it.

Premier : I think, Sir, that this amendment is certainly out of order. As you have pointed out, under this clause, it shall extend to the Punjab and it is incumbent on the Government to extend it to the whole Punjab as soon as it comes into force, and therefore you cannot add anything saying that it should be extended to a certain part of the Punjab.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I would refer you to the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act and you will find that the same provision is there. It is stated :—

“ This Act may be called the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act. This part and parts 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 shall extend to the whole of the Punjab, and part 2 to such areas as the Local Government may from time to time by notification direct.”

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member's amendment is out of order.

Question is—

That sub-clause (2) of clause 1 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Lala Sita Ram (Trade Union Labour (Urdu) : I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (3), lines 1—3, for the words “ on such.....direct ” the words “ not earlier than two years after the publication of the Act in the Gazette ” be substituted.

Sir, I wish to submit a few words with your permission. When I moved the first time that the Bill be circulated, I fully believed that the provisions of the Bill were such as should have been circulated. This belief of mine was proved true when at the time of consideration of the proposed Bill amendment after amendment was tabled. With the exception of some grammatical or technical amendments, no substantial amendments are accepted by the Government.

My submission is that according to the amendment under consideration the money-lenders would be spared a plenty of time to realise their old debts and give up the business of money-lending if they are willing to do so.

Mr. Speaker : Please speak to the motion.

Lala Sita Ram : I am, Sir, giving reasons in support of the amendment before the House. If this amendment be passed, those money-lenders who would not like to stick to this profession would be in a position to take up some other respectable profession and they may, therefore, be permitted to realise their old debts. Under these circumstances I would like to suggest my money-lender friends to give up this profession and make the most of their money by starting private factories or other useful concerns where their capital should be safer and producing more income. This will help the poor labour class as well. The pity is that the Government by passing this Bill wish to stop dishonest money-lending but so far as these provisions are present in the Bill even honest money-lenders would be obliged to abandon this profession. How strange it is that the Government want to tar every money-lender with the same brush. On the one hand, the Government want to stop dishonest money-lending and, on the other hand, they do not spare them time to give up this profession. It reminds me of a well known Persian couplet which runs as follows:—

در زمان لغز دریا تشنه بندم کرده
باز می موئی که داس تو من هشیار باش

The cash and property of money-lenders are scattered to the winds, they suffer severe punishments, their business is ruined and still they are asked to continue the same profession. How far is it justified, Sir?

With these words, Sir, I move my amendment and I hope that in view of the other substantial amendments having been accepted, at least this would be adopted by the honourable House for reasons mentioned before.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (3), lines 1-3, for the words "on such... direct," the words "not earlier than two years after the publication of the Act in the Gazette" be substituted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) (Punjabi): Sir, before it rains, the clouds appear and thunder and people begin to feel that rain is coming. If anybody has spread clothes, grain, cotton or paddy outside, he would at once run to collect them and bring them to a place of safety.

My submission is that if this Bill is going to come into force in the Punjab immediately after it is passed, it would cause a great hardship to the money-lenders, who would not get even a year to put their house in order. This storm is going to burst suddenly over the province and there will not be left any time for the people to save their meagre belongings from the deluge. If a period of two years be given before the proposed Bill actually comes into force, I think, two purposes would be served in so doing. First, the people who are not aware of the provisions the Government have passed would be able to understand every part of the Bill. There would be no fear of their being slaughtered. They are at present unaware of the provisions of the Bill. What they have come to know as yet is that the Punjab Government is passing a legislation which would affect the business-men and ahrits and others. But the poor fellows do not know how the provisions of the Bill are packed with bombs and shells. When their suits would begin to be dismissed by courts the realities of this Bill would be discovered by them. (Honourable Premier: It is ab-i-hayat). No, it is poison. It is very sad that our Sikander even in the company of Khizar has failed to find out ab-i-hayat (nectar) for the use of the people of this province. What an old post said long ago aptly applies to him, ms.,

نہی داستان قسمت را چه سود از رهبر کامل
کہ خضراز آب حیوان تشنه می آرد سکندر را

(Cheers.)

Being disappointed in finding out elixir, our Sikander is now preparing poison for the use of the people of the Punjab. (Voices: It is not a poison). Had it not been poison the people would not have waited for the cups and they would have rushed on like anything to drink it.

Sir, I would request the Government that if they are going to slaughter the money-lenders like this, some period of time at least, say one year, may kindly be given to them so that they may be in a position to put their house in order. How strange it is that even a butcher, before slaughtering sheep or goats gives them time out of mercy to rest awhile. But our Government have surpassed even butchers in this respect. They want to slaughter the people at once by using a blunt knife. (Voices : Jhalka ?) I believe, it is worse than jhalka. I leave it to Sardar Sir Sundar Singh and Major Sir Sikander Hyat, to decide whether it is jhalka or kalal. But it is quite clear that both are after the blood of the money-lenders. (Laughter). The result would be that those people who lend a few rupees to the zamindars in villages to meet emergencies, would be killed by this blunt knife of the Government.

Lala Duni Chand has stated that those women, minors, widows and sahukars (who are merely nominal sahukars), may be exempted from the operation of the Bill. I believe, my friend Lala Duni Chand was reasonable enough in demanding their exemption from this Bill. I know personally that in villages some money-lenders are uneducated and some who are minors, left behind by their parents to the tender mercies of the present Ministry (laughter) have appointed munshis or munims to look after their business of money-lending. If the Government is not going to exempt them then some period of time may be granted to them so that they may arrange their affairs before the Act comes into force in the country. I would like to submit that even a dog barks before he bites and a small mosquito declares war before it stings as it is said in a verse :

پیشہ سے سینکڑے شیوہ سردالگی کوئی
جب قصد خون کو آئے تو پہلے بھنگ دے

(Cheers.)

Our Government is worse than an insignificant mosquito, because when the latter comes to attack, he warns his victim that he is coming to attack him. But our Government cannot follow even this small creature's noble example. They neither circulate the Bill nor accept its recommendation to the select committee.

My submission is that the Government may give at least two years' time to the people concerned for arranging their affair and winding up their business. You have not spared even traders. You should have left them alone. They do not want any favour at your hands.

Sir, I ask for two years' time simply because the present legislation is going to shut all avenues of business and trade in this Province. Money-lenders are going to be crushed and the ahnts in the markets are to be deprived of their legitimate and time honoured dues through the Markets Bill. The traders and merchants do not know where to turn in face of their being deserted by the Government of the day. The Unionists have not left even a single field of business free for them. I want time for them so that they may be able to close their shop and set out in search of other means of livelihood in some other parts of the country. Every new Bill that comes up before this House, aims at ruining the business of money-lenders and traders in the Punjab. It is high time that they should chalk out a line of action for the future, and for this they require time. Two years are not quite sufficient for a whole class of people to burn their boats behind them and give up the calling of their forefathers and even migrate from their ancient home to some other place. Let it be understood that I am not asking for the moon. Such a respite is always given when laws of this character are passed. Examples are not far to seek. When the Government of India passed the Indian Companies Act they gave time to the people concerned to arrange their affairs. The same was done at the time of passing the Insurance Act. I wonder why our Government is afraid of giving the money-lenders a respite of two years. They will not eat up the agriculturists in two years' time when they have not been able to do so in the past 100 years. (A voice: They have already squeezed out their blood). I am prepared even to ask for one year but I will do so only when I am denied the full loaf because then I shall have to be content with half a loaf.

With these words, Sir, I lend my whole-hearted support to the amendment moved by my honourable friend Rai Bahadur Lala Mukand Lal Puri.

Mr. Speaker: Two amendments propose two years while two amendments propose one year. Both the amendments will be discussed together but they will be put to the vote of the House in the order in which the House desires them to be put.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: That is exactly what I have said. Kindly put the proposal asking for two years to the vote of the House first, if that fails, I shall press the second asking for one year. What I have in view is that if I am denied the full loaf, I shall be content with half a loaf.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmami: (Muzaffargarh, North, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment moved by the honourable member Lala Sita Ram. The amendments of Lala Sita Ram and Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang provide that the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders Act should not come into force earlier than two years and one year respectively after the publication of the Act in the Gazette. I fail to understand the wisdom of these proposals. My only conclusion is that the honourable members intend to allow this period of grace to the dishonest money-lenders for ripening the fruits of their dishonesty and fraud. If the Government and the Legislature were not convinced of the immediate necessity of this measure, then where was the necessity of bringing this Bill now and passing it into law? The Unionist Party realised the necessity of this legislation more than 10 years ago and one of its members moved the Punjab Money-lenders Bill which was passed by the Punjab Legislative Council, but the Governor refused his assent to the Bill. Then again the Leader of the Unionist Party made a provision for the registration of money-lenders in the Debtors' Protection Bill but the bureaucratic Government of the time did not allow the passage of this provision. Many other provinces in India have, however, already passed legislative measures providing the registration of money-lenders.

[K. B. Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani.]

A committee of the Reserve Bank of India has also laid a great stress on the registration of money-lenders in order to purify the money-lending industry in India from the existing corrupt and fraudulent practices. I can say without any fear of contradiction that the Punjab is in greater need of an immediate reform in the system of money-lending than any other province of India. The necessity of protecting the innocent debtors from the clutches of the dishonest money-lenders was felt in the Punjab so far ago as 1901 when the Punjab Alienation of Land Act was passed. Since 1901 efforts have been made to check the malpractices prevailing in the business of money-lending in the Punjab, but the Punjab sahukar was clever enough to find some loophole to evade the provisions of the law. The position of the Punjab with regard to the rural indebtedness is much worse than any other province in India and requires an immediate and serious attention. The cases of murders of money-lenders by their creditors have not been infrequent in the past and it is in the interest of money-lenders themselves that the sooner we weed out the dishonest men from their class the better. If the Government delays or postpones action, the things will go from bad to worse and after two years we may have to adopt much stronger measures to meet the situation. Let me warn my honourable friends who advocate the postponement of this measure for a period of further two years that this delay will not be in the interest of those whose cause they are pleading. Let me remind them of the well-known story of a fool who in trying to be too clever subjected himself to both of the alternative punishments of eating a hundred onions or receiving a hundred lashes. My own view is that the present measure will act as an elixir and remove all the poison from the body of the money-lending class, but if the poison is allowed to remain in the body for a longer period, it may be difficult to cure it.

Sir, before I conclude, I would like to say a word in reply to Dr. Narang with regard to his remarks about the Honourable the Premier. Dr. Narang quoted a Persian couplet—

تھی دستان قسمت را چه سود از رهبر کامل
کہ خضر از آب حیوان تشنه می آرد سکندر را and said that it is a waste of effort to bring round Sir Sikander to the right path. Let me frankly tell my friend Dr. Narang that the path which he is referring to is the path of selfishness and destruction and I can assure him that he will never succeed in misleading Sir Sikander to leave the path of righteousness which he is following. He is further mistaken in comparing our "Sikander" with the "Sikander" of the past. The "Sikander" mentioned in the Persian verse wanted to attain a long life for himself while our Sikander has dedicated his life to the service of his fellow beings and aims at infusing new life into the lifeless and the down trodden masses. Dr. Narang's "Sikander" sought life for himself while our "Sikander" gives life to others. Is it not due to the miraculous power of our Sikander that we find persons who had committed suicide by drinking "the cup of poison" having come to life again and talking loudest of all to-day. Sir, in moving this amendment my friend Dr. Narang might regain some measure of popularity in a certain section, but his proposal will prove detrimental to the best interests of the money-lending class in the province. I hope my friend Lala Sita Ram who represents a labour constituency, will realise that his amendment will do incalculable harm to his poor and toiling constituents and I would appeal to him to withdraw his amendment and save these poor labourers from being subjected to the atrocity of the stone-hearted Shylocks any longer.

With these words, Sir, I oppose the amendment under consideration.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the words 'on such date as the provincial Government may, by notification direct' stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (3) stand part of clause 1.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I have a mind to clear the issues which my honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang has raised during his eloquent speech in the homely Panjabi of our province. He argued that there was a great necessity for giving time to the money-lenders to set their house in order and to see if any of them wishes to give up the business of money-lending. All this sounds very well. But we have to see whether there is any real need for this respite of two years. The fact of the matter is that this Bill has yet to receive the assent of His Excellency the Governor and then it has to be notified in the Gazette. Moreover, the Government have to frame rules for the guidance of the collectors and other officials who will have to work this Bill. I assure my honourable friend that all these stages will take time, and the money-lenders will utilize that time as best as they can.

Again, coming to the actual working of this Bill, I may observe that it is only after a money-lender violates the Regulation of Accounts Act, that he will be brought to book under that Act and subsequently under the Money-lenders Bill. But rest assured that much water will have flown under the Bavi bridge before a money-lender is punished under the Regulation of Accounts Act and before the time allowed for appeal and review expires. After that the next stage will be that a debtor and a money-lender should come up before a court in connection with a debt suit under the Money-lenders Bill. All this cannot happen in a day or a month or a year. As a matter of fact it may take five years or more till cases begin to come up to courts under this Bill.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Would it be so? I should very much like the Premier to explain that.

Premier : At first the money-lenders will have to get themselves registered. It will take time. Then a money-lender will have to violate the provisions of the Regulation of Accounts Act before any case under the present Bill can start against him. That case, if started, will take several months in the civil courts till it is finally settled by a district judge or the High Court. My honourable friends being lawyers themselves are more acquainted with the proceedings of the civil courts than I am. Sometimes a civil case may take more than a year or two for its final settlement.

[Premier.]

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : But what about the questions of facts ?

Premier : I may observe that as long as such able lawyers as my honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang himself are available, even the questions of facts will not take less time to be finally settled. These lawyers can and will prolong the issues. After this stage, again, a long time will have to pass before an application is presented against a money-lender under this Act. It will only be after a sufficiently long time, therefore, that a money-lender's licence will come to be cancelled. But if some dishonest money-lender is brought to book even earlier, why should you or I worry about him? The sooner he is weeded out the better for us all, and even for himself. As to the honest money-lenders, let me assure this honourable House once again that we are out to provide all possible facilities to them. They will enjoy our confidence and esteem. They are sure to get five years' respite even though this Bill is passed into an Act as soon as possible. It is, therefore, highly undesirable as well as unnecessary to raise any hue and cry in this behalf and my honourable friends need not try to confuse the issues. With this assurance, Sir, I oppose the motion that is now before the House.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : I propose that the Bill be examined by a committee consisting of the following with orders to report by to-morrow what amendments of a formal or consequential character should be made in the Bill as a matter of drafting—

The Honourable Premier ;

The Deputy Speaker ; and

The Advocate-General.

[THE PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND (THIRD AMENDMENT) BILL.

Premier : Before the House adjourns I wish to make one statement. You will remember that notice was given of the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill. I did not make any motion with regard to that, because, as I said already, there were certain printing mistakes in the Bill and there were one or two points which I wanted to clarify. I believe that a new Bill has now been supplied to honourable members. I propose, subject to your approval to make motions with regard to this Bill on Monday next.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I wish to complain that the Government is going on adding to the list of business. I expected that the business would be finished soon, but at this rate there seems no prospect of the business finishing as early as is expected. Even the original legislative business of the Government has taken a good bit more time than was originally expected, but now the Government proposes to bring in new legislation.

Mr. Speaker : A statement made by the Premier or any Minister of Government is not open to discussion.

Premier : I think my honourable friend was absent from the House when I made a statement in this House a few days ago and gave an undertaking that I would not put on the Statute Book the Punjab Alienation of Land (Further Amendment) Bill until I had put the agriculturists also on the same basis as the non-agriculturists with regard to purchase of land so far as the Alienation of Land Act was concerned. I also assured the House that I would introduce the necessary legislation before the end of this session. It is in pursuance of that undertaking that I give notice of this Bill.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The Money-lenders' Act is not going to be enforced for the next three or four months. It is therefore very unfair that this piece of legislation should be discussed and passed even in this session. The Honourable Premier can introduce it now by all means, but it would be most unfair that people affected by this measure should come to know of it only after it is passed into law.

The Assembly then adjourned till 2 p.m. on Saturday, 16th July, 1936.

The motion was carried.

Minister for Revenue (The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia) : I beg to move—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Second Amendment) Bill be passed.

[Revenue Minister.]

I may be permitted to make a few observations in presenting my motion to the House. The object of the presentation of this Bill was that certain defects, which had arisen as to the interference of the civil courts in the decision regarding the caste of the people, who were affected by the Alienation of Land Act, may be removed. It was considered that this matter was to be decided by the deputy commissioner in his capacity as revenue officer and the Financial Commissioner also considered that it was only the deputy commissioner who had to decide this question. But it so happened that in certain cases people went to the civil courts and the civil courts decided that they were not bound by the decision of the deputy commissioner in this matter. These matters were taken up to the High Court in review and revision and the decision of the Judges of the High Court was that the civil courts had the right to decide this question on their own motion. As there was a conflict of opinion in this matter, we had to consider whether it was right to allow the civil courts to decide this question or whether to finally set at rest doubts that had been raised by the judgment of the High Court and finally fix the deputy commissioner as the authority who was to decide this question. The matter was fully considered by the Council of Ministers and Government and a Bill was put forward to provide two things: one, that as previously, the deputy commissioner's decision as to the caste or tribe of a person shall be final for the purposes of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, it must be made clear that the deputy commissioner was the person who had to decide this question and not the civil courts. The second was the evil of benami transactions which were becoming frequent in the province and were to be checked. These are the two points with which this Bill was concerned. Now, Sir, when the original Bill was passed it was passed with the object of giving relief to the despondent, debt-ridden, expropriated and impoverished land-holding classes of the province. These were the words which were used by Lord Curzon in his famous speech when the Bill was passed in 1900. He also said that he had to save the peasantry from an incubus which was slowly but steadily wearing them down. Since the passing of this measure on which a good deal of agitation was started in the country a lot has happened and I may be permitted to recapitulate the history in a few words. From the reports which have been prepared by the Punjab Government from the year 1901 to the year 1908, I may be permitted to say, that the measure secured a success beyond the expectation of the Punjab Government. There were in the Punjab as many as 62 million acres of land out of which 40 million acres were held in private ownership. At that time the value of the land was nearly Rs. 78 per cultivated acre on the average of 5 years before the passing of the Alienation of Land Act, then it became Rs. 75 and for the year 1908 it was Rs. 97. That was, I may be permitted to say, a year of drought and the prices during that year must not have been very high. Stated in terms of the land revenue assessment the selling price of land averaged 75 times that for the five years before the Act and 83 times for the following five years and 101 times in 1906-07. Coming to sales and mortgages; for the five years before the Act, the average cultivated area sold was 173,142 acres, for the next five years it was 150,191; in the year 1906-07 it was only 125,059 and in the year 1908 it was 131,865 acres. The last year that I am mentioning is 1907-08.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : This is the area which was mortgaged.

Minister for Revenue : Yes, mortgaged area. For the five years before the Act the average cultivated area mortgaged was 327,065 acres; for the next five years it was 203,527 acres; in 1906-07 it was 227,737 acres and in 1907-08 it was 249,578 acres. For the five years before the Act the average cultivated area redeemed was 235,395 acres, for the next five years it was 197,118 acres, in 1906-07 it was 319,044 acres and for the year 1907-08 it was 325,173 acres. The cultivated area under mortgage in 1908 was 3,584,299 acres against 3,868,587 in 1903-04 and the percentage of total cultivated area mortgaged was 11.5 as against 14.1. There are other interesting figures. In 1907-08 the cultivated area sold was 131,865 acres.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : May I ask the Hon'ble Minister, through you, what is the object of his mentioning these figures, which no one has been able to follow? Perhaps he is not to blame, for he cannot raise his voice but I have not really been able to see the connection of these figures with the question now before the House. At least no comments have been made.

Minister for Revenue : I am very sorry my friend has not been able to follow me. He will follow only one thing, i.e., protection of the non-agriculturists against the agriculturists (loud cheers). This is the effect of Lord Curzon's Act which was passed in his time and I am showing as to how the zamindars were saved from being expropriated of their lands. The figures in this book are up to 1908 and later figures are in the Government Reports. (A voice : Is that relevant ?) If it is not relevant to my friend's feelings.....

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : We do not hear what the Honourable Minister is saying. If it is anything useful he should make himself more audible.

Minister for Revenue : I am afraid I cannot speak louder than I can at the moment. It is no fault of mine if the honourable member is unable to hear me. As I have said before, the object of the Bill is that we must remove the jurisdiction of civil courts and secondly, we must check the evil of benami transactions. These are the two objects with which this Bill has been placed before this House. As regards the first one there were two methods that we could have adopted. One was that we should have come forward with a motion to amend the Act and the second was that we should have taken an opportunity to place the matter before the bench of the High Court. That opportunity may or may not arise and, therefore, the Government decided to take this opportunity of amending section 4 of the Land Alienation Act.

[Revenue Minister.]

Coming to benami transactions, I would say that this evil has spread to a very large extent. My friend in his remarks and criticism said that the Financial Commissioners, the Minister of Revenue and other officers have been sleeping over it. I might inform him that they have never been sleeping over it. If I may be permitted to say so in this House, the first thing that they did was that the standing orders were several times revised and it was finally in the year 1909 that instructions were issued and incorporated in section 31 of Financial Commissioners' Standing Order No. 1. Certain other instructions are given in paragraphs 32, 33 and 34 of the Standing Order. The original issue of the Standing Order is dated the 30th July, 1909, the first reprint is dated the 19th February, 1911, the second reprint is dated the 2nd September, 1914, and the revised issue of the Standing Order is dated the 1st October, 1937. I may be permitted to read a portion of the Report which dealt with Paupat tahsil for the year 1935-36. Therein it is stated that the provisions of the Act and the Standing Orders were proving more fatal than any epidemic disease to the zamindar and they have turned the Land Alienation Act into a dead letter and reduced the zamindars generally to slavery.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Who said so ?

Minister for Revenue : It is one of the tahsildars.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Oh ! why not quote one of your patwaris ?

Minister for Revenue : I am justified in quoting from any papers that I have got in my records.

" A palty sum borrowed to-day goes on multiplying and in spite of the best efforts of the zamindar to lighten it, he cannot do so, because the money-lender is as cunning as the zamindar is ignorant. The loans are seldom advanced in cash but the prevalent form of loan is a loan in kind or cattle. No receipt is ever taken of the repayments."

Therefore, you should realise what the condition of the zamindar is when no receipts are given and the accounts are being piled up from day to day.

Mr. Speaker : The motion before the House is that the Bill as considered be passed. If the speakers, who will speak after the Hon'ble Revenue Minister, follow his example, it will be impossible for me to enforce the rule of relevancy.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The Hon'ble the Revenue Minister is giving us very valuable data. I think the House should not be deprived of them.

Minister for Revenue : I will only read from the statement appended to this report showing how benami transactions have been entered into and the Land Alienation Act has been nullified.

Mr. Speaker : The House has considered the Bill clause by clause, and now the motion before it is that the Bill be passed.

Minister for Revenue : I will not say anything more if you have any objection.

Mr. Speaker: The motion moved is—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Second Amendment) Bill be passed.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): The Hon'ble Member-in-charge of the Bill has rightly stated that this Bill contains two different kinds of provisions. One, as has already been pointed out, is comparatively an insignificant matter, and the other is a matter of very great consequence to all the persons living in the Punjab whether they are agriculturists or non-agriculturists. Sir, with respect to the first matter nothing need be said beyond the fact that the Land Alienation Act confers the privilege of exemption from attachment and sale of the land belonging to members of notified agricultural tribes in execution of money decrees against them. The only effect of giving it to the collector would, in some cases, be that a person, who is heavily indebted and who is not so far a member of the notified agricultural tribe, might go and ask for the helpful assistance of the collector to get himself declared as a member of the notified agricultural tribe, and the result will be that his debts, though they may consist of decrees passed against him, will become unrealisable. That is the only danger which I anticipate. Sir, with respect to that matter the Government has thought it fit to substitute the discretion of the collector for judicial adjudication. That I personally regard as a retrograde step. But after reading the provisions of all the four pieces of legislation, I think, it is futile to cry over the matter. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and even the Premier has several times declared that the British system of law is too good and unsuited to our condition of society and that they want to go back on the methods of administration which had been laid down for us by the British rulers. Sir Chhotu Ram prides himself on the fact that the British system of administration, the law, the machinery of courts is far too advanced for our people and that we should go back upon it. I join issues with him on this point. I cannot look with equanimity on the growing tendency to substitute the rule of law by executive discretion, the replacement of the decision by professedly non-partisan tribunal by the will of an executive officer. Again, I cannot approve that the procedure to be followed in deciding these matters should be the whim of an individual rather than the procedure laid down for our courts. Therefore, Sir, I oppose this innovation. But I have submitted already that this part of the Bill is a trivial matter compared with the other. The real matter involved in this legislation, I submit, is the dealing with the so-called benami transactions. Now, Sir, the learned mover of the motion said that the object of the Bill is to check the evil of benami transactions. Well, if you want to check the evil of benami transactions, do it by all means and legislate for the future. But on the pretence of doing so, do not upset the transactions which have taken place during the last 40 years and which have not so far been questioned by any one. The present Bill gives effect to the obnoxious principle of expropriation of rights acquired under the sanction of law and which this Government and the previous Governments had equally recognised

[R. B. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Therefore, the first vicious principle which this Bill, after it has been enacted into law, would give effect to would be that it would make a change in the substantive law retrospective in operation not only for a few years but for the last 88 years.

Secondly, I submit this Bill would give recognition to another vicious principle to which I have already referred, i.e., that the will of the executive officer will be substituted for matters which have so far been the subject matter of decisions by the courts. In this connection you will kindly remember that an effort was made by some members of the Congress party to induce the Government to substitute some kind of procedure for decision of these matters. Some member proposed an amendment that the rights with respect to such valuable property should be adjudicated upon by civil courts. The Congress party later on put forward a modified amendment that revenue officers while deciding these matters should at least decide as revenue courts; but the Government turned down that proposal also. The proposal was that even if these matters were to be taken away from the purview of civil courts, and the questions were to be decided by an executive officer let him at any rate have a judicial atmosphere about him. Let him decide this matter as a revenue court. But the Government for reasons best known to themselves have also thrown that suggestion to the winds. Again, you will remember, Sir, that another amendment was moved by another member of the Congress party that if they are not going to have these matters decided by revenue courts, at any rate let them follow the procedure of revenue courts. Even that was turned down. Therefore, this vicious principle has been accepted for the first time in regard to the decision of matters pre-eminently fitted for decision by civil courts. It is an entirely different matter if you are dealing with small matters under the old Land Alienation Act. The only duty which the collectors had to perform under the Land Alienation Act was to give sanction for alienations which were affected in favour of non-agriculturists. This did not involve any complicated enquiry or adjudication. This is more or less an executive action. But when the questions which are to be decided are questions relating to hundreds of acres of land and involving thousands of rupees and dealing with complicated questions of law and fact the collector is not the proper agency for deciding these matters. No procedure is laid down which he should follow. He is to be deprived of even the assistance of lawyers and thus he would naturally act on the advice of his subordinate officers and ministerial establishment, thus giving occasions for corruption and all sorts of underhand dealings. Sir, this procedure for deciding valuable rights in property is an innovation of a revolutionary kind. Therefore, Sir, this is the second ground on which I oppose this proposal.

Sir, again, on the political plane, it is one of the most dangerous Bills passed, because it unsettles controversies which had been long ago regarded as settled. It was the recognised policy of the Punjab

Government that the provisions of the Land Alienation Act shall neither be extended nor restricted. The question is that after this Act, does the Hon'ble Premier still stick to that declaration or does he want to say that the present Government has given up that policy. A definite answer is called for on this matter, because, Sir, if the Punjab Government has definitely given up that policy, then 57·3 per cent. of the population of this province, which consists of people who are not members of notified agricultural tribes and who have got grievances—very genuine and serious grievances—of their own against the Land Alienation Act, also call for relief. If the Government has any sense of fairness, it is up to them to listen to their grievances and modify the Land Alienation Act. I am not here at present going into the details of the lines on which the Land Alienation Act should be modified. The criticism of this Act has been repeatedly put forward from the public platform and in public meetings and in the press and is the subject matter of certain very well written pamphlets and has been brought to the notice of the Government a large number of times. What I was submitting was that this Bill, for the first time unsettles the controversies, which both agricultural and non-agricultural tribes had agreed to consider and which had been considered as settled and which had been, under the influence of the late Mian Fazl-i-Husain, honoured for the last 20 years. Therefore, on the political plane, it introduces one of the most dangerous controversies in this province, which might lead to a great deal of trouble and which might create a discord and disunion among the various people inhabiting this province. Again, Sir, you will notice that this Bill is likely to lead to more litigation and trouble. If an alienation is set aside what happens to the consideration which has been paid? Will there be a suit for recovery or not and what will happen to it? Supposing the money has not been paid. Will the amount due on the promissory note be recoverable? If the alienation is set aside, it would lead to half a dozen kinds of suits. These are my objections to this Bill on principle.

Let us, for a moment, consider what would be the effect of the present legislation. I divide that effect as to its result on the members of the notified agricultural tribes and as to its effect on those who are not members of the notified agricultural tribes. With respect to the members of the notified agricultural tribes, you will notice that this Bill introduces an element of uncertainty with respect to the title to property, which might have been acquired by sale, gift or exchange by a member of the notified agricultural tribe or by his father or other ancestors provided the transaction has taken place after 1901. Supposing a member of a notified agricultural tribe has purchased property in 1906 from any member of the notified agricultural tribe, it is open to any other person to question that title even after 50 years by a mere application and therefore, any agriculturist, whether vendee or donee, would never feel secure about his title to property. The failure to embody any provision as to limitation will result in this most undesirable and disastrous result. You will remember, Sir, that I wanted to move an amendment that some kind of limitation may be fixed, may be for 2 years or 4 years, beyond which any alienation in favour of a vendee or donee, may not be questioned, but that was neither accepted in the select committee nor was it allowed to be moved for certain reasons on the floor of this House. I submit that the question of uncertainty will attach to the title of any member of the notified agricultural tribe, who or whose predecessor-in-interest purchased land after 1901. This would be one result of this Bill if it is passed into law.

Again, Sir, the second effect on the members of the notified agricultural tribes will be that when the ejection is ordered, the agriculturist loses his land without any return to him of any money or consideration which he may have spent on getting that alienation. He will not only be deprived of any money that he may have spent on improving the land, but also of any portion of the money which he may have paid.

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan): Is the honourable member reading his speech ?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, the honourable member is interrupting me merely for the sake of interruption.

Mr. Speaker : I have not followed the honourable member's objection ?

Parliamentary Secretary : The objection I raised was that the honourable member was reading the speech.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I leave it to your judgment and to the judgment of the House whether I ever read any speeches. I was trying to follow your advice of taking as little time as possible, but it appears that some of my friends do not propose to allow me to do so.

Sir, I was pointing out that not only the agriculturist alienee, will be deprived of any consideration that he might have paid for his alienation—and it might be that he bought the land for 2 thousand rupees and out of it he borrowed Rs. 1,500 from non-agriculturist creditor of the alienor and 500 rupees he has paid from his own pocket—now, he will not only be deprived of the actual consideration he paid but he will also be deprived of any improvement that he might have effected on the land. (Minister for Revenue: There is a provision to that effect.) Permit me to say, with due deference to the Honourable Minister-in-charge of the Bill, that he does not even now know the provisions of the Bill, when the Bill has passed through all the stages.

Mr. Speaker : Please do not be personal.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I was interrupted by a remark of the Honourable Minister for Revenue that there is a provision in the Bill to this effect. (A voice: There is.) I wish to give way to the honourable member. Now may I ask the Honourable Minister-in-charge of the Bill to read out that provision? There is no such provision and the Honourable Member-in-charge of the Bill is only showing his ignorance about the provisions of the Bill. The provision for improvement is only provided for a transferee from an alienee and not for the original alienee. I assert that the alienee under the Bill would be forced to vacate his land without getting a farthing for the improvements which he may have made on his property during the last 38 years. If the man is in possession of the land as owner—(Minister for Revenue: How can he be in possession as owner?) My honourable friend has been pleased to put a question as to how he can be in possession as owner. Does not the honourable member know that if a sale deed is executed in favour of a member of a notified agricultural tribe, he becomes the owner of the land and when there is not only a registered sale deed in his favour, but the land is actually mutated in his name in revenue records what else is he, except an owner? Every civil and revenue court will regard him as an owner. I am surprised to learn that this legislation is being pushed through this House without even the Member who is ostensibly in charge of the Bill knowing the provisions of it. I wish to emphasise that the statement of the Honourable Minister that there is a provision allowing compensation for improvements to the original alienee is not at all correct. I say there is absolutely no such provision. Therefore, I was submitting that the second evil effect on the members of the notified agricultural tribes would be that they will be deprived of money which they may have spent in effecting necessary improvements on the land and which may have substantially increased the value of their properties.

Again, Sir, let me take up another point which has been suggested to me by the interruption of the Hon'ble Minister for Revenue. I submit that no provision has been made to protect the interest of even a "bona fide transferee for value without notice." Supposing an agriculturist has purchased land and that transaction is vitiated on account of its being originally benami for a non-agriculturist, then a third party who might have bona fide purchased the land subsequently from such persons for value and without notice would be protected under the ordinary law, i. e., under the Transfer of Property Act, the principles of which are applicable to the Punjab. But unfortunately, on account of a provision in the Bill, he would not be protected with respect to these transactions and, therefore, a curious thing happens that even say, a seventh transferee would be ejected under the law in spite of the fact that five transferees have intervened, and they are all bona fide ones. I ask the Hon'ble Member-in-charge of the Bill if he has contemplated this aspect of the matter, this effect of his legislation. Is this legislation just and equitable to a bona fide transferee for value, without notice who has purchased a land from a person who has got a registered deed in his favour and in whose favour land is also mutated? Is it at all fair or equitable that those five transferees who have paid the money, who have been owners of those lands for a considerable period, who have made many improvements, should be deprived of their possession simply because you have passed this piece of legislation in the cool breeze of Simla without circulation, without consideration and have rushed through this measure in hot haste ?

Mr. Speaker : Not without consideration.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The Bill has not been circulated in spite of my two motions.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member used the word " consideration " .

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : " Consideration, " indeed ! When even the Honourable Member-in-charge of the Bill is ignorant of certain provisions of the Bill, what to talk of the vast majority of the members who simply raise their voices or walk into the lobbies after their leader ?

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan) : Sir, I have no intention to interrupt the honourable member, but I have to raise a point of order. Is the honourable member in order in saying that the Honourable Member-in-charge of the Bill knows nothing of the Bill or that a majority of members raise their hands or walk into the lobbies without understanding the provisions of the Bill ?

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member's words may not be unparliamentary ; but he should not be personal or call the honourable members of this House 'ignorant'.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Far be it from me, Sir, to suggest that the members of this House are ignorant. In fact, Sir, I acknowledge their ability. What I meant to say was that they have been deluded into a belief that this legislation is for their benefit. I make bold to say that most of them, at any rate, a very substantial number of them have not cared to look into the details of the provisions of this Bill. Had they done so, I am sure, they would not have allowed those provisions to stand part of the Bill. I myself have not been able to give as much attention to these Bills as the importance of those provisions deserved because of the fact that there are half a dozen of important measures that are being rushed through at a terrific speed. I would be the last person to question the intelligence of the Honourable Sir Sunder Singh Majithia.

Minister for Revenue : My honourable friend considers I am a dullard. That is what he would call me.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The honourable member has misunderstood me. I do not at all question his intelligence. I doubt if he has been able to devote sufficient time and attention to the Bill. He is far more busy than myself. I am not at all surprised if he has not been able to study carefully the provisions of the Bill which he has been asked formally to sponsor. I have felt that after working from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M. in the select committees, as I have had to do, and working here from 2 P. M. to 9 P. M. in the House, I have not been able to devote as much time as I would like to have done. I wish I had to cope with the difficult legislation at Lahore where one could have the use of libraries and other assistance. Such important legislation ought to be considered at leisure and with a great deal of care and caution. Sardar Sahib has not had, in fact could not have had, the requisite time and attention for this Bill. A cap should be allowed to fit only where it fits.

Minister for Revenue : No cap would fit my head. (Laughter.)

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I was pointing out before I was interrupted that under the ordinary law, under the principles of the Transfer of Property Act, a bona fide transferee for value would have been protected but for certain provisions in this Bill.

Mr. Speaker : That is repetition.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am now dealing with the case of a transferee. My argument will appeal to you as a lawyer of long standing, if you listen to me, I am sure you will appreciate it. What I am further going to state is that every one of these transferees would be deprived of the property without payment to him of any consideration which admittedly they have paid. There is no provision in this Bill which provides for payment of whole or any portion of that amount.

With respect to improvements a great deal was made that we have put in a clause which gives the bona fide transferee, the second man, something for improvements. If you kindly read the actual clause you would find that the improvements which are permitted to him are only those improvements which are permissible under the Tenancy Act. May I in this connection relate to you what was told me by one of the most important members of this House, a member of a notified agricultural tribe and of the ministerial party? He told me that he knows of cases where alienation has taken place and the first transferee has bought the land at Rs. 100 a bigha. Subsequently he has cut it into pieces, being near the town, and sold it at Rs. 100 a marla and on those sites beautiful houses have sprung up and those 2 or 3 bighas of land are now in possession of 80 or 90 persons with beautiful houses on them. What is going to happen to these 80 or 90 persons? I asked my friend whether these transferees were invariably members of notified agricultural tribes? He said, 'no'. In some cases they are members of the notified agricultural tribes, but in other cases they are not, alienations have taken place with the consent of the deputy commissioner. Now I put it to the framers of this law whether they have ever contemplated a contingency of this kind? Will these 80 or 90 persons, who may have spent 5 or 10 thousand rupees each for the construction of houses, be deprived of the possession of them? Will they be deprived of the possession of them without any payment being made to them for the value of the site? (An honourable member : Were they the mortgagees?) No. A benami sale has taken place and the benamidar has subsequently cut it in pieces and on that 80 or 90 persons have built houses. The effect of this legislation would be that these 80 or 90 persons, members of notified agricultural tribes and others, will have to give up their houses to the original alienor without a single pie being paid to them and without any compensation being given to them for the buildings which they have put up, because under the amendment which exists in the Act, the only kind of improvements which are permissible even to bona fide purchasers are the improvements permissible under the Tenancy Act and these buildings are not certainly permissible improvements under that Act. This, in my humble opinion, is the effect on the members of agricultural tribes which the legislation standing in the name of revered Sardar Sahib is going to have.

With respect to the effect of this Bill on the non-agricultural creditor, may I again crave your indulgence to put it in the language of a creditor who put it to me in the following form? He said. "This Government is out not only to make it impossible for us to recover anything that is due to us but it has decided to take back from us the money which we have already realised in payment of the dues." You would kindly see that the debts outstanding might be secured or unsecured. Now, with respect to the unsecured debts the legislation passed in the last two years especially that relating to providing maintenance for the family of the judgment-debtor has made it practically impossible for a non-agriculturist to realise even a farthing from the average agriculturist of this province. (An honourable member: Question.) There is a question. It may be possible to realise it from men like Pir Mubarak Ali Shah who owns thousands of bighas of land. But in regard to the average agriculturist of this province whose holding does not exceed 8 acres, all that is permissible to the decree-holder is 20 years lease—and from it provision has to be made for the maintenance of his family. The produce of his land is hardly enough for the family. Whether this provision is good or bad, I am not entering into that controversy now. The result is that the unsecured outstanding debt has been practically wiped out. With regard to the secured debt, you have got the Mortgages Bill pending before you. The appetite is not satiated with what has already been done. They want to take back what has already been paid. This would be the effect on the non-agriculturist. Kindly see what has been enacted in this Bill. It is said that a benami transaction would be void for all purposes. If a transaction is void for all purposes, any consideration which has been paid for that transaction is also tarred with the same brush. Therefore, if any bond has been executed or any promissory note is given, the money on that pro-note or bond will not be realised. (Interruption). I am very doubtful whether the money which has actually been paid can be recovered. The Honourable Sir Chhotu Ram has insisted upon the use of the phrase 'void for all purposes' and he would not explain that phrase until he was forced to do so in a meeting by some of his adherents who did not understand it. He explained it by saying that with reference to section 16 of the Contract Act it would be impossible to recover on the basis of that bond or pro-note. The hope seems to be to enable those persons to claim back the money which they have already paid. It is not that this contingency is not known or thoroughly understood by the framers of the Bill. I ask the Honourable Sir Chhotu Ram whether he had not this in contemplation. If so, is it not an attempt to take back from the creditors the money which has been paid to them during the last 20 years? So, I respectfully submit that if the effect on the agriculturists is in certain respects deleterious, with respect to non-agriculturists it is an expropriation, pure and simple.

There is one matter to which I may refer and which has been brought out in the learned speech of the honourable mover of this motion. He has drawn the attention of the House to the Financial Commissioners' Standing Order No. 1, paragraph 31 and I take it that the Government accepts that position. If that is so, that appears also to be in consonance with what the legislature has laid down that a transaction will only be a benami transaction when at the time the benami nature of the transaction is called in question the beneficiary is actually taking beneficial interest in the land. I take it, in virtue of reliance on this Standing Order, the Government does not intend to open transactions which may have been closed, say 10 or 20 years ago, where a brother agriculturist may have taken upon himself the liability and by paying off the debt of a non-agriculturist debtor, purchased the land from him. That appeared to be the object of the Standing Order which the Honourable Revenue Minister has quoted. That appears to be the interpretation. But the difficulty really is that this matter will have to be decided not by the Financial Commissioners, not even by the members of the Government who are the framers of this Bill, but by the collector who will proceed on the reports of the tahsildars, tahsildars who may transform even a genuine transaction into a benami transaction. I am afraid that the power of such vast magnitude relating to the civil rights of property vested in any individual is a very delicate matter especially when it is to be used by no known principles of law, is to be regulated by no precise procedure and when the collector is to be assisted by no legal talent and he has only the assistance of his subordinates in the form of tahsildars, kanungoes, naib-tahsildars and patwaris or at the final stage, his own reader. You are putting into the hands of these subordinate officials an engine of oppression which in the hands of some decent and honest people may perhaps not cause such havoc but with the average man and with the average facilities which the Government is providing, this Act cannot be worked with any kind of fairness or justice. I do not wish to add anything to the arguments which I have already placed before you, except that this Act has been rushed through in scandalous haste and its provisions have not been properly considered, with the care and attention which they deserved.

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan): Sir, it seems very strange that three-fourths of the speech of my honourable friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, should be devoted to safeguarding the interests of the agriculturist community. While discussing the various clauses of the Bill, Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri's contention was that the enactment of this Bill would result in great injustice being done to the non-agriculturist buyers of land. But to-day he has devoted himself to saying that this Bill will adversely affect the rights and interests of the agriculturist community. Although I admit that after one has been elected a member of this august Assembly his outlook should be very wide and he should represent all classes and communities, still it looks very strange that not a single agriculturist member would get up and endorse what my honourable friend, Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, has said that the object of the Bill is to do injury to the legitimate interests of the members of the agriculturist community.

The main objections raised by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri are these. Firstly, he said that it is not only intended to affect the transactions which will take place in future but has a retrospective effect. Sir, this matter has been discussed thoroughly when we discussed the different clauses of the Bill. Therefore, I will not detain the House by discussing those points again. The issue is very simple. We, on this side of the House, are honestly convinced that benami transactions are fraudulent and dishonest and, therefore, when we were bringing forward a measure to undo the wrongs done previously when an attempt is made to evade the provisions of the Land Alienation Act, then naturally we would like to give it a retrospective effect. We are not, by passing this Bill, depriving any honest man of his possessions. But what we are trying to do is merely to discover the cases of dishonesty and fraud and to restore the property to men who were subject to such a fraud. Therefore, there is no sense in bringing forward a Bill of this nature just to safeguard the future transactions, because the very fundamental principle of this Bill is to punish those people who have been a party to fraud and dishonesty so far as evading the provisions of the Land Alienation Act is concerned.

The second point which my honourable friend stated was that we were bringing in the collector where the civil courts used to decide the cases before. As a matter of fact, the Land Alienation Act itself is based on the ground that cases falling under the Act will be decided by the collector. Therefore, when we are bringing forward a Bill to amend the Alienation of Land Act it is but natural that the collector should exercise these powers as well. I personally do not understand why such a distinction has been drawn between the administration of justice by a civil court and the administration of justice by a collector. So far as qualifications are concerned, I do not think the collector possesses less qualifications than a judge of the civil court. Most of the collectors are members of the Indian Civil Service. They are competitors, they have passed examinations in law and are men of very high integrity. Therefore, for any honourable member to entertain a suspicion that if a case is decided by a collector it will not be decided in a judicial way while in the case of a civil court it will be so decided is wrong. It is very unfortunate that during the discussion of the Bill comparison should have been drawn between the members of the judicial service and members of the revenue service. The other reason why we want the collectors to have these powers is this. We all know that the deputy commissioner is practically all the year round on tour and so are his revenue assistants. It is so difficult for the officers to detect cases of these benami transactions. It is not a very easy thing because generally the man who sells property is under the clutches of the benamidar and, therefore, unless these powers are exercised by an officer who always remains in very close touch with the zamindar community, it will be impossible to discover any of these cases.

A great stress was laid by an honourable friend on the fact that the late Mian Sir Fazl-i-Husain had given an undertaking that the provisions of the Alienation of Land Act will not be extended. We have, on this side of the House, very great respect for the undertakings given by the late Mian Sir Fazl-i-Husain and I can assure this honourable House that none of us will be prepared to go against those undertakings which were given by a person whom we consider as the greatest leader Punjab has ever produced, but I fail to understand how by any stretch of imagination or language can anybody suggest that this Bill is an extension of the Land Alienation Act. What we are doing is that an act which is not allowed under the Alienation of Land Act, act which is strictly prohibited and is against the provisions of the Land Alienation Act, should be prohibited and those people who transgress the provisions of the Land Alienation Act should be punished. I ask, who gave you any undertaking that if some one is discovered dishonestly trying to evade the provisions of the Land Alienation Act, he will not be punished? Who promised that we will not stop him from committing such mischief? Such an undertaking was never given by anybody and I do not think any sensible person would ever give such an undertaking. Then another point which my honourable friend raised was that the Bill does not provide for any compensation to be paid to a man who is perfectly honest and has purchased land from another person without knowing that the person selling the land was a benamidar. I would submit that this is absolutely wrong, because it is provided in the Bill itself by the amendment moved by my honourable friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, that if the collector thinks that the transferee of the land spent something on making improvements on the land it will be up to the collector to award consideration up to the limit of the money originally advanced on that land. Now I would ask my honourable friend, how does he say that this will deprive the people of their legitimate rights?

Raj Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Only to the extent permitted in the Tenancy Act.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan: Not for building spacious buildings. Then my honourable friend said that if the land has been transferred to 7 persons, A has transferred to B, B to C, C to D and so on, then the Bill does not provide for compensation to be given to all these six persons. The Bill has provided that compensation should only be given to one of them. I am surprised to hear this argument. When A sells to B, A gets the price of the land valued at that time. It is the last man only who does not get his value, but he is to be compensated under the Act. Therefore, so far as that argument is concerned, it is entirely misleading and is ill-founded. I would submit that my honourable friend should not be so much upset on such measures being passed by this House which consists of a large number of members who represent constituencies where the voters are poor zamindars and poor kisans. If they press the Government to bring forward legislation which they consider is in the interests of the country and in the interest of the tiller of the soil who is a poor man, why should they object? No doubt the Government have brought forward four important measures in this Simla session. All of them are very important. My honourable friends during the last session were maligning the Government for not having fulfilled their promises given to their voters at the time of the elections and now when the Government after consideration and long deliberation have decided to bring forward such a legislation which will provide relief to the teeming millions and the poor peasants of the Punjab, they call them Russian measures. So many days have been spent on discussing every detail of the Bill, at every stage and at every step all members have been given full opportunity of expressing their opinions. After all this long discussion and after all the criticism published in the Press, to turn round and blame the Government for rushing through these measures is entirely unjustified. I am sure the House will be feeling a great deal of satisfaction and even pride in passing the motion which is now before the House. I support the motion.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): I rise to oppose the motion moved by the Hon'ble Minister for Revenue. I was surprised when I heard Mr. Puri referring to promises and undertakings and expressing surprise that these promises were not fulfilled. That really entitles him to the title which I gave to one or two other members for being rather innocent. A friend was just suggesting a verse which I think is from Ghalib:

تیرے وعدہ پر جتنے ہم توڑے جاں جھوٹ جانا
 کہ خوشی سے مراد نہ جائے اگر اعتبار ہوتا

This is the nature of the promises made by the Hon'ble Premier.

Mr. Speaker : I have more than once requested the honourable members not to refer to conversations or promises alleged to have been made verbally or outside the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Oh! no, Sir. I will never be guilty of that. I respect confidences, I never referred to anything said to me in confidence by Sir Sikander or anybody else. We referred to the promises made at one time on the floor of the House which are embodied in the reports which are issued under your imprimatura. I am not going to refer to any private conversation, nor do we refer to any promises made outside, but we refer to promises made more than once in this House, not in Simla perhaps, but in Lahore before the Legislative Assembly and perhaps once made to the Legislative Council, when the Punjab Legislative Assembly had not yet come into existence. Although the Premier might say that he was not bound by any declaration made by the late Sir Fazl-i-Hussain, we expected that he would have some regard for his own promises. But I shall never make any complaint against him now onwards for any breach of promise of which he might be guilty, for we have seen that he does not feel any compunction in breaking a most solemnly made promise, promise made on the floor of the House affecting a great population.

Mr. Speaker : Will the honourable member please speak to the motion?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I was only referring to the surprise expressed by Mr. Puri at the breach of these promises. I would not waste one second over it. I would leave it and would warn my friends on this side, if they had any intention to refer to these promises.

My grounds for opposing the motion moved by the Hon'ble Minister-in-charge are five or six. My first point is, that the measure is a discriminatory one. We have gone into the details of this discriminatory measure and I shall not go into them again but I shall only state my points. It is discriminatory in the sense that it does not affect agriculturists, but affects non-agriculturists only. It is said that it is only the mortgages or sales in favour of agriculturists that would be affected by this measure. This is obvious from the Bill itself. Now it has been said that non-agriculturists who were the beneficiaries or who derived any benefit from these transactions have been dishonest, for they circumvented the provisions of the Land Alienation Act. So far as honesty or dishonesty in its proper sense is concerned it makes no difference whether the money-lender is an agriculturist or a non-agriculturist.

It would not be maintained by the stoutest advocate of the agriculturists that they are paragons of virtue and the non-agriculturist money-lender is a personified devil. No one can have the audacity of maintaining this. So the head and front of the charge lies in this that by securing benami transfers the non-agriculturists have circumvented the provisions of the Land Alienation Act. I maintain, as I submitted in the course of my arguments on various amendments, that this is not dishonesty. I will not repeat what I said then but I will put one case before you. Supposing the Minister of Revenue borrows my gramophone or radio set to please himself after the day's labour and he sits tight over it and refuses to return it or somehow he is unable to return it. His front door is shut so that I might not go to his house to take away my gramophone or radio set. I know that my gramophone or radio set is lying in such and such a place. I go by the back door which is open. I do not break it but take away my gramophone or radio set without touching anything that may be lying at the time in the house of my honourable friend. I take away only my gramophone or radio set and nothing else. Have I committed theft or burglary? Have I committed any dishonesty? It was my gramophone or radio set and I have taken it away. I say only this that you cannot use it longer than the period for which you have borrowed. Apply this to the cases concerned in this Bill. Some Chaudhri owes me five hundred rupees and is honest. He says: "I am prepared to pay but somebody has created an obstacle in my way and therefore I cannot pay. The only source of payment that I have is my land and somebody has brought into existence a piece of legislation which prevents me from paying off my debt by means of this land." By mutual consent we get hold of some other Chaudhri whom we trust. He says to him: "You take this land and you pay my debts." He says: "All right" and he takes this Chaudhri's land; but he says to me: "I shall pay your debts but I have not got the money at present." I say: "All right; it does not matter, you can pay me after two or three years but you should give me some sort of document." He gives me a promissory note or a bond or puts his thumb-impression in my bahi and after two or three years he pays off my debt. Or it may be, he does not pay off my debt because he is unable to do so. He says: "I will go on paying you the produce of my land or the land I have taken from the other Chaudhri until I pay off your debts." I ask, is this dishonesty, is this theft? If this is theft, if the payment of debts or the realisation of debts is dishonesty, it affects agriculturists and non-agriculturists equally. Why should any land which passes from an agriculturist debtor to an agriculturist money-lender be safe, whether it is a direct sale or a mortgage? Why should that be safe and why should that land, when it passes to an agriculturist, but passes under the circumstances which I have mentioned, lead to any dishonesty or be construed to be dishonest? This is what we fail to understand. The circumvention of this law means only trying to enter by another door because the front door, owing to certain reasons, is closed. There is no dishonesty in it. I would submit that whatever justification they might have had in stopping these transactions, they had no justification whatsoever in wiping out the transactions which may be now 37 years old. Some of them may be 37 years old and more. Some may be 30 years old and so on. I have no instances before me of any country having passed any enactment which has been given such a drastic retrospective effect.

whose retrospectivity extends to 37 years backwards. The only instance or rather a sort of parallel that the Hon'ble Premier could quote was the example of Russia.

Premier: I never quoted Russia.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I have got the note of his argument.

Premier: I am afraid somebody else must have quoted it.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I have my note which runs as follows:—

"Russi, Premier: Ghalat (کلیا یوجہ لکے)"

This note relates to the speech he was making. I trust my notes taken at the time in black and white. If he will turn to his speech delivered on that day he would find that he made a reference to Russia. Russia certainly is not an example which should be followed or can be followed with impunity. If he is prepared to follow the example of Russia in every instance, then he must disgorge everything he has earned up to this time either from his lands or from his factories or from his salaries or by any other means whatsoever, because Russia does not permit or at least until recently it did not permit any private individual to own considerable private property. But even in Russia a change is coming about and they have begun to recognise the existence or inevitability of at least more prosperous peasants if not of capitalists in the ordinary sense of the word. That is what is happening in Russia but here is the Premier of the Punjab quoting instances of Russia. He says that he did not do so. He feels that he should not have quoted it. (Premier: I am afraid my honourable friend is forcing the mention of 'Russia' away from the context. He should read it along with the context.) What does it matter if in Russia the whole nation is being robbed and levelled down. Here these money-lenders are being levelled down and some of his people are being levelled up. Let him take everything that Russia is teaching and not one illustration. But Russia neither comes in here nor there. He has now begun to admit that he referred to Russia. If he will refer to his speech he will see that my discussion about his reference to Russia is quite in order and I am not doing him any injustice. I have also got a note in my note-book which is:

پہاں جات غور جات

which means that in the Punjab there is the question of agriculturists and non-agriculturists, an artificial division which does not exist in Russia.

So, if there is any levelling it is levelling everybody; either levelling up or levelling down. You level down one community or one class and try to pull up the other class. This is what you do. That is why I say the Act is discriminatory. It does injustice to one party and it does undue favour to another party.

although the damage done to one party is much greater than the benefit done to the other party.

Now, Sir, I will take note of another argument of my honourable friend, the Premier. I have also noted, he said 2½ crores of people or something like that. What does it matter if a few sahukars, money-lenders, suffer while 2½ would benefit, he used the word millions: he was obviously wrong: he means 2½ crores. This was his argument and it was also put forward by Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan to-day. This is an argument which is really a favourite argument of the gentlemen sitting on those benches. During the last few days even Mir Maqbool Mahmood, who is a barrister, and ought to have a sense of proportion and reasonableness, even he said, "Oh! in order to save a few you want these millions to starve, this law is being passed in order to save millions and millions from starvation and destitution" and so on. Let me examine this argument. It is no use talking in the air as the Hon'ble the Premier did when he was urging this argument. What is the real position? Let us suppose there are 10 thousand benami transactions in the province. How many families will be involved in these transactions? Ten thousand mortgagors, 10 thousand benami holders, vendees and mortgagees, and ten thousand beneficiaries. In all 30 thousand people are involved. The number of mortgagees is equal to the number of mortgagors, X sells or mortgages to Y and Y gives the benefit to Z who is a wretched bania or a money-lender. There are three parties involved and their number is equal. Why do you deprive 10 thousand people of the benefit of the transactions. You deprive another 10 thousand benami holders who in course of time after they paid off the beneficiaries might have become complete owners of the land. Whom do you benefit? You benefit ten thousand vendors or mortgagors. What is your justification for this mathematical monstrosity which you are perpetrating in this argument? This is my question to the Premier. It is very easy to talk of starving millions and blood-sucking of a few thousand. This is not the case. If that were so we might have put up with it. I might say "All right, let a few thousand die or ten thousand die so that 2 crores and 25 lakhs may live;" that would be something. We might persuade them to sacrifice their lives. But here you are killing 20 thousand, at least 10 thousand, to save 10 thousand, and not even them perhaps because it may be that the original mortgagor is not holding the land which he mortgaged in a benami transaction. He might have parted with the equity of redemption if it was mortgaged. He may have parted with the equity of redemption and whatever residuary rights were left in that land might have passed to a capitalist agriculturist. When a benami transaction is set aside the benefit may not go to a poor agriculturist but it may go to a big agriculturist magnate. What is your justification for this? From whatever point of view you look at this Bill you find that injustice is being perpetrated upon these people.

Then, Sir, take another aspect of the question. People have been doing this for the last 37 years and they might have honestly believed, in fact they did honestly believe that there was no harm in these transactions. I quoted a well-known Arabic phrase by way of illustration, viz., 'Ghalat-ul-am-Sahihun'. It means that if an inaccurate expression is used by a large number of people it becomes right. The Hon'ble Premier, with his superior knowledge of Persian and Arabic which he may possess or because he probably received his cue from that big scholar sitting behind him, said 'Ghalat-ul-am-fasihun' is the correct expression. Now, Sir, does it make any difference to my argument? It means if a mistake is repeated by a large number of people it becomes correct. There is a saying in Sanskrit also which means something of that kind. It means if a thing is correct but people are against it, it should not be done. Take the reverse of it: if a thing is improper and it is repeatedly done by a large number of people it really does not deserve condemnation. But apart from that, let us have the Premier's phrase. If I understand the meaning rightly it means if a phrase or an expression is repeated by a large number of people it becomes fasih, it becomes an elegant expression. That was only by the way: I should not have taken so much time over it. My point is that for 37 years people were following this practice unwarned and unchecked by the Government and it was therefore not considered to be objectionable. This is the crux of the matter so far as this Bill is concerned. For 37 years people had been adopting this practice and an idea had gone round that it was not an objectionable process because no warning had been conveyed to them by the Government. On the other hand what do we find? From 1907 up to 1937 the High Court has not been condemning this procedure but has been up-holding such transactions, transactions entered into by an agriculturist with an agriculturist to pay off the debts due to non-agriculturist money-lenders. This has been consistently the practice in the province and it has been again and again upheld by the High Court of our province. I have already submitted that a benami transaction as such is not an offence. I will quote to you a ruling from the Privy Council reported in 46 Calcutta, page 566. The head note says:—

*The benami system in India under which property is acquired and held and business carried on, in names other than those of the real owner, has long been a common practice in the country: there is nothing inherently wrong in it, and it accords within its legitimate scope, with the ideas and habits of the people.*

That is why I was quoting that expression. I thank you for the correction. Then it goes on:—

*So far, therefore, as a benami transaction does not contravene the provisions of the law the Courts are bound to give it effect.*

I challenge my lawyer friends on those benches to point out one section of the Land Alienation Act in which a transaction of the kind that is now under consideration can be held to be void. There would have been no necessity to introduce this Bill, if it was void under the existing law and that is what Their Lordships of the Privy

[Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.]
 Council mean. Again, Sir, on that day a reference was made to a judgment of the late Mr. Justice Shah Din and Mr. Justice Robertson. Mr. Puri referred to it, but the Honourable Premier, without reading it, as I presume, said that that judgment was not in point. Why? Because there was no question of the third party being a money-lender or sahukar and that it was a matter between agriculturists themselves. I make him a present of this judgment and for the benefit of the House and particularly for the benefit of the Honourable Premier, I shall quote a few lines from this judgment. The learned Divisional Judge, from whose order the appeal came before Justice Robertson and Justice Shah Din, had held as follows:—

“The Divisional Judge refused to decree possession of mortgaged property in favour of the mortgagee who was not debarred from taking the mortgage by the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act and had agreed to pay previous debts of the mortgagor and gave reason that the Act cannot be permitted to be circumvented by rival money-lenders.”

This was the ground on which the learned Divisional Judge had given his finding. Now, the Honourable Judges giving their Judgment at page 118 of the report, stated as follows:—

“The learned Divisional Judge, however, writes, “an important Act like the Punjab Alienation of Land Act is not to be permitted to be circumvented by rival money-lenders, and I shall not allow it.”

Can these honourable gentlemen put it more strongly than the Divisional Judge had put when he said, “I cannot allow the provisions of the Act to be circumvented.” Now, what did the Honourable Judges say?

Mr. Speaker: May I invite the honourable member's attention to the Parliamentary practice that debate on the third reading of a Bill is more restricted than on its second reading and therefore should be confined to the contents of the Bill.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: What else am I discussing, Sir?

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member is not discussing the contents of the Bill.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I am discussing the contents of the Bill because you will see what clause 3-A is.

It says:—

“When a sale, exchange, gift, will, mortgage, lease or farm purports to be made either before or after the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land (Second Amendment) Act, 1938...”

It means that it will be void either before or after the commencement of the Act. At present I am discussing that the words “either before or” should not have been included in the Bill at all, because for the last 37 years the people of the Punjab had been led to think that such transactions were not void.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member is repeating his own arguments.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I am replying to your remarks. Not only that but I want to say is that the province has been following that practice for the last 37 years and it is going to be penalised without any compensation whatsoever. This is what the learned Judges said :

" If Mui Chand, etc., really are at the back of Jahan Khan, the Land Alienation Act can be properly invoked should they ever attempt to assert any right to the possession of the land by virtue of the mortgage now before us. So far as Jahan Khan is the mortgagee, Jahan Khan asks for possession under his deed; he is entitled to it, and there is nothing in the Land Alienation or any other Act, which justifies us in refusing him the relief to which he is legally entitled."

Mr. Speaker : This was read out by Mr. Puri.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : The Honourable Premier unconsciously misled the House by saying that the money-lender was not concerned in the thing and therefore, it became necessary for me to set the matter right. That is the position; otherwise I would not have repeated what had been said before.

Then, Sir, from 1907 we come to 1916 and I would draw the attention of the Honourable Premier to the judgment of the Honourable Justice Broadway on a similar point. The judgment is reported in 37 Indian Cases at page 193. So that there may be no doubt on the point, I would like to read out a part of this judgment. It is as follows :—

" Fatch Khan, the defendant (an agriculturist) owed Rs. 1,000 to Chet Ram and Sahib Ditta (non-agriculturist). Fatch Khan entered into an agreement with Haider, the plaintiff (an agriculturist), by which Haider undertook to pay this sum of Rs. 1,000 to Chet Ram and Sahib Ditta on behalf of Fatch Khan, and Fatch Khan mortgaged his land with possession to Haider for that amount."

This was called benami. (Premier: That is not benami.) All right. I may submit that my object in referring to these decisions of the High Court is not at all to show that they are covered by the present Bill but my object is to show merely that these judgments led the people to think that transactions of this kind were not invalid and, therefore, now to turn round after 37 years is not consonant with justice. That is what I wanted to say. Similar arguments were stressed there that the mortgage was really for the benefit of the money-lenders whose names I have mentioned :—

The lower courts dismissed the suit, holding that Chet Ram and Sahib Ditta were the real mortgagees, Haider being merely their benamidar. Haider thereupon appealed to the High Court, and Broadway, J. in dismissing the appeal observed as follows :—

" What has been held by both the Courts below is that although as a matter of fact Fatch Khan did mortgage the land, it is bad in law, inasmuch as the real mortgagee was not Haider, but Chet Ram and Sahib Ditta were the actual mortgagees and they being non-agriculturists, could not take a valid mortgage.... The facts of the case are that Haider has paid Chet Ram and Sahib Ditta the money due by Fatch Khan and has taken a mortgage from the latter as security for himself. Counsel (for Fatch Khan) admitted that his client had been relieved from all liability to Chet Ram and Sahib Ditta who now could not, in any circumstances, recover any money from him, but look solely to Haider... In these circumstances it seems to me that there has been no contravention of the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act."

From 1916 we come to 1921. There is a judgment by the Hon'ble Justice Chevis on page 603. I do not want to tire the House by quoting the judgment, but I have given a reference to it

[Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.]

Then we come to 1925. There is a judgment by the late Justice Sir Moti Sagar reported in 1925 Lahore Indian Law Reporter, page 85. The same position is upheld there.

Then we come to 1928. We find Addison J., the present officiating Chief Justice of the Lahore High Court, taking the same view, the case is reported in 1928 Lahore Series of the Indian Law Reporter, page 962.

Then we come to 1934. Mr. Justice Munroe admitted the appeal and it went for hearing and final disposal to Justice Tek Chand. He also held the same view. This case will be found in 1934 Lahore series, page 484. Then again in the same year the same view was held by an honorable judge of Lahore High Court which is reported on page 909 of 1934 Lahore series.

In 1937, we practically come to the last moment. We find again Justice Tek Chand taking the same view. I hope no distinction will be made between Justice Munroe, Justice Broadway, Justice Tek Chand or Justice Shah Din nor can it be said that Justice Shah Din had a bania's soul thrust into him which made him give that judgment.

I can multiply such rulings, but I think that it would be unnecessary. I would, however, crave your permission to read one revenue judgment, because this is not the view of Mr. Justice Tek Chand or any other non-agriculturist judge, if there be any insinuation.

Premier : Nobody has made any insinuation.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : In the year 1929 a similar case came up before the Financial Commissioner of the Punjab. There was a transaction in which an agriculturist had mortgaged his land to an agriculturist but it was stated that it was for the benefit of a non-agriculturist money-lender. The Commissioner decided in favour of the original mortgagor and sent up the case for revision to the Financial Commissioner with these remarks :—

It is contended that the actual vendee is Isar Mal Giddar and, as such, the sale is against the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. That the sale was in reality of....bighas....That Wali Muhammad has never been in possession of the land. There is much in what is stated by applicant....

The Commissioner goes on to say—

There appears to have been a conspiracy between Isar Mal Giddar, Wali Muhammad so-called vendee, and the Patwari, by which this shady transaction was hatched and put through, for the benefit of Isar Mal Giddar, the benami vendee who, though personally served, did not choose to appear before me.

The Commissioner proceeds—

On merits also because the transaction is a benami one, I think the mutation should have been rejected. He recommended that revision should be accepted by the Financial Commissioner.

Now, Sir, I will quote a passage from what the Financial Commissioner decided. He stated :—

On behalf of the vendor it has been urged by his brother, who is present in Court, that the whole of the consideration has not passed and that a sum of Rs. 200 in cash is still due to the vendor. This was the plea put forward before the Naib-Tahildar by the vendor on.....

And this is what the Financial Commissioner held :—

It appears to me that what happened was that Weli Muhammad bought the land from Imam Bakhsh and agreed to discharge the latter's debt to Issar Bhal. This transaction did not itself offend against the provisions of the Alienation of Land Act.

And these words are important, Sir.

There is nothing to prevent a non-agriculturist creditor obtaining satisfaction of his debt by means of such a transaction.

This is the position.

Premier : There we are at one.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : By the way, the judgment was given by Mr. (now His Excellency Sir) Henry Craik, when he was working as Financial Commissioner.

Now, Sir, it might be said, as a matter of fact, it has been admitted by the Premier, that there is no objection to such transactions and such transactions will not be held to be benami. This is the utmost that they can say now in the face of these rulings that I have quoted. These judgments lead us to the conclusion that if a middleman agrees to take upon himself the payment of the debts of the original mortgagor or vendor and gives a security in favour of the real money-lender or creditor, it will not amount to a benami transaction. If this is their case then certainly the attack of this side becomes milder and loses a great deal of its force. But my objection is that they have not in the body of the Bill made the position very clear ; probably this is what they intended. If they did intend that my condemnation of this Bill would be much less because then this Bill would apply to cases where the circumstances are quite different. I would request the Hon'ble Premier to withhold the Bill even at this stage to make the position clear, otherwise without intending to do any injustice he may be doing injustice because in the hands of inexperienced collectors and revenue assistants who may not be able to take a very dispassionate view of the case, wrong decisions may be given. I would earnestly pray that this point might be cleared up ; otherwise, as I have said, gross injustice might be done although Government might not be intending to do that injustice.

It does not, however, mean that the Bill is justified otherwise. I would attack it even then, though as I

4 P. M. have said that attack might be milder or less severe, because even in the case where the middleman holds the land and has not paid back the debt of the original creditor, but is paying him bit by bit and year by year the produce of the land or the landlord's share of the produce of that land or the rent that he receives from the tenants, it would not make any difference; because on principles of morality no offence is committed. The original creditor is only realising his debt with the help of an obliging friend who intervenes and takes upon himself the discharge of his debts. That point of attack would still be there but if they want to confine the operation of this Bill only to these latter cases where from the very beginning it is understood and intended that although the land would stand in the name of the agriculturist the benefit would go to the non-agriculturist and would continue to go to the non-agriculturist and that the middleman will not be able to dispose of that property, if he received it by sale and would not redeem it even if redemption was offered, if there were such conditions then alone it might be said that there might be something wrong from their point of view. But, where there is no such intention, there is no restriction on the powers of disposal by the middleman of the property involved in the sale, there cannot be any question of benami or immorality or dishonesty. That is my submission. But in any case if that is the idea, that has not been clearly conveyed in the Bill and therefore the operative clause 3 is defective on that ground.

I shall now proceed to the next point. That point is that the Bill which aims at protecting the sanctity of the Land Alienation Act really contravenes the spirit of the Act. The Act allows, as I have already submitted, alienation for 20 years. It allows leasing or farming for 20 years. A usufructuary mortgage for 20 years is permitted. I have already quoted the section and I need not refer to it again. This Bill does not make any distinction whatsoever. I noticed what reply the Hon'ble Premier gave to my argument on this point. He said, 'Dr. Narang says that section 379 of the Indian Penal Code should be repealed' or something to that effect. He said that I argued that if a person received stolen property within 20 years he should not be punished, when I moved my amendment and said that only those transactions should be set aside which were more than 20 years old. This is the argument which he advanced. His argument was so fallacious, so wrong and so flimsy that he does not want to own it now. This is the position and certainly that is no argument at all. There is no question of receiving stolen property. I was simply referring to the provision of the Land Alienation Act which makes it legal for a non-agriculturist to take land on lease, etc., as provided in section 6. What is the reason for going beyond the Land Alienation Act? If they were just, fair and reasonable they should have said that any benami transaction which is more than 20 years old might be cancelled and set aside, but those which are less than 20 years old should not be touched. I may give one instance. Only last month or the month before that a big zamindar might have gone to a sahnkar and borrowed Rs. 50,000 for the purchase of land and might have mortgaged a part of his land to an agriculturist common friend of the parties. If this Bill is passed, while the mortgagor has added perhaps a number of squares to his already vast possessions, the sahukar will lose his 50,000 rupees. What is the justification for this? The only justification offered is, why did he circumvent the law? Is this circumvention? Let us assume that, and we know that people are punished for all sorts of circumventions of law. The whole Penal Code provides punishments for circumvention of law. We know people being punished when they commit such heinous offences as abduction, thieving, robbery, dacoity, bigamy. But for all such offences only reasonable and proportionate punishment are provided. Why should such a heavy punishment be provided for people who circumvent the provisions of the Land Alienation Act? There has been no answer to that point so far from that side of the House.

Next, when I said that these gentlemen had been keeping quiet and did not warn the people against such circumvention, the Premier said that the Sardar Sahib was now making up for his sins! I wonder whether he remembers this; but I have noted it here. He said that the Sardar Sahib was making up for his sins! How is he making up? Is he parting with part of his possessions in favour of people who would be robbed of the benefit of these mortgages? Is he going to share his vast property with those people, who will suffer under this measure? How else is he making up for his omissions? Is it simply by bringing forward this Bill? How are the other members of the Government making up for their sins—by robbing people who under the impression that they were not doing anything wrong got land by circumventing the provisions of the Land Alienation Act? Is this the way in which people atone for their sins? If so, how are the accomplices in this so-called fraud being punished? How does the mortgagor suffer? He is also a party to the fraud. Can it be said that in every case he was under undue influence or that he was an innocent victim to the machinations of a wily bania? Certainly not in every case, though there may be a few cases of that sort. But the Government does not want to enquire into those cases. It tars everybody with the same brush. You know that well known Latin maxim "in pari delicto, etc." which means that the position of the person who is in possession is stronger. Now the mortgagor or vendor and the mortgages or vendee and the beneficiary are all equally guilty if there is fraud. But you are robbing one and rewarding the other. Is this the justice that you are going to do by means of this Bill? Do you presume that in every case the agriculturist vendor or mortgagor was helpless, was an idiot and was not able to look after himself? Certainly you cannot make that presumption, nor can you presume that in every case it was the wily bania who got the better of an innocent agriculturist. When you have no means to go into the question and weigh the rights or wrongs of all these cases, how can you set in motion a law which sweeps away all the transactions, whether they were between innocent persons or between guilty persons †. You are certainly guilty of gross injustice.

Then again, in every case where something wrong has been done, there is always room for what is called in legal language locus penitentiae. Is there any locus penitentiae in such cases † These gentlemen are always praying.

ما اثم لرب كذاه و تو دريائے رحمتي—جانگه نضل تست چه باشد كذاه ما

We are full of sins, O Lord, and thou art the ocean of mercy. Thy mercy can sweep away our sins, and so on and so on. Every day probably they recite such expressions. How can they expect any pardon from God if they are not prepared to pardon these people for the sins they have committed if they were sins at all? (Interruption) I am not asking for any mercy at all. Let this be understood. I am pleading for people who are not guilty. They are not guilty. I have repeated it again and again. They are not guilty. They have acted honestly with a bona fide belief. Guilty people are those who borrow and do not pay or who make excuses for not paying loans, who borrow with all sorts of entreaties and prayers and then turn round and say, 'we cannot pay' and take shelter under this law and under that law as if they had no obligation to pay their debts, which had been incurred for valid necessity. I am not asking for mercy. But I am trying to meet you by your own argument because I was told by one of the honourable members on this side that Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani had said that no opportunity for repentance should be allowed or something of that kind. I was not here at that time. You are giving no locus penitentiae which is always necessary when you bring out a revolutionary change in the law. You always give people time to adjust their affairs and to give up their dishonest practices, if they were dishonest. I would not have objected so much if the Bill was to the effect that in future all benami transactions would be considered void. Probably not even one-tenth of the time now spent on this Bill would have been taken up if the Bill was confined only to future transactions. We had moved amendments on that point. But they were all ruthlessly rejected and that is why we feel that these people who acted innocently and in ignorance are being punished unjustly.

Then, I come to another gross injustice which this Bill contemplates to perpetrate and that is the absence of any provision for compensation. The Honourable Premier unfortunately is not here. He tried to teach me law on that day. I would try to reply to his arguments. It would have done him some good if he were present. What he said was this: when a title is found invalid and it is found that the original vendor did not have the right to sell the property, there is no question of compensation whether the purchaser is innocent or not. This proposition might appeal to people who have never studied law and have never dealt with law. But it certainly would not appeal to people who have even a smattering of law. You know, Sir, that innocent persons do not suffer. I referred the House, more than once, to section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act and said that an innocent purchaser, who has no notice of the invalidity of the original transactions and who buys for consideration and buys in good faith, will not suffer. I also quoted the instance of a declaratory suit based on customary law. An alienation has been made by an agriculturist owner and his son or some collateral brings in a suit. If it is found that the alienation was for necessity, to that extent compensation is awarded. Then, again my hon'ble friend should remember that in ordinary cases after 12 years, by adverse possession, the title becomes complete and cannot be defeated. Here you are defeating titles which have been in existence for 37 years and when I say this I am referring to the middlemen who have held the property either on mortgage or on sale on behalf of somebody whose debts they have undertaken to pay. They suffer. The beneficiary suffers and the land goes back after 37 years, it may be, to the original vendor or the mortgagor. There seems to be no justice in this at all. I pointed out and that point was touched again to-day by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri that the first transaction may have been followed by half a dozen transactions and nobody might know after the first transaction that there was any defect in the transaction. Every one of them, if he happens to be the last, will suffer and my honourable and learned friend, Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan, was pleased to say that it is only the last man who suffers and he gets compensation. Very good law, very good logic and very good information. Now Raja Sahib does not probably remember that whereas the Bill provides for some sort of compensation for improvements, it does not provide for the return of the principal consideration money. Now he is looking round on all sides. What is the use? He entirely overlooks it. (Interruption). My friend the scholar on my left says something. I will come to him presently. Let me parenthetically deal with Pir Sahib. He says it is not the mahajan, it is the agriculturist who will suffer. He has probably forgotten that when I was discussing this I turned my face to them and I said, it is for your interests that we are moving this and one learned member, Chaudhri Ram Sarup, got up and said, 'I am trying to make the zamindars beiman' (K. N. Mian Ahmad Yar Khan Dawlatana: No, he did not say so). He said that and I think that all these gentlemen must go to some physician for some treatment for short memories. Ask him whether he said it or not. He did say so. Either my honourable friend was absent or he did not hear. Ask Pir Sahib if he said this or not. You remember the occasion when I used that expression which I would not repeat and which I know I should not have used to the effect 'para pater'. But that was very apt because Pir Sahib now says the agriculturists only would lose. I then said that it was in the interests of the agriculturists that the amendment should have been accepted. We do not suffer, it is the agriculturist who would suffer. He obviously believes in this that

If an opponent asks him to take the name of God, he would not take even the name of God because it is an opponent who asks him to do so. My submission is, it is perfectly true, Pir Sahib is perfectly right, that it would be the agriculturist who would suffer, but why should an agriculturist suffer? We are not interested in agriculturists suffering. We are as interested in saving my friends unnecessary loss as we are interested in saving the non-agriculturists from it. You will remember my speech in connection with the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill when Raja Sahib said that all agriculturists would also be included. I said then 'no, I do not like it, because that would be following the policy of that hunch-back woman'. Now, you will probably remember that argument of mine. I am not interested in harming the agriculturists if I cannot save the non-agriculturists. I want to protect everyone, whether he is a sweeper or a Brat man and whether he is a non-agriculturist or an agriculturist from injustice and undeserved harm. Coming back to the real point—the parenthesis is over—the only reason Raja Ghazafar Ali could give on behalf of the Government was that the last man would be given compensation for improvements. You remember that even these improvements are very circumscribed. These improvements must come under the Land Revenue Act which mean perhaps digging khalis or making bands and so on and not any other kind of improvement. But let that be as it is. My submission is, is there any justification for depriving the last innocent man of his consideration which may be ten thousand or fifty thousand rupees which he has innocently invested in the purchase of that property? What justification has the Government got for not awarding any compensation to him, whether he is a jat or a bania makes not the slightest difference so far as justice is concerned.

Then, there is another point, why I want to oppose this motion and it is this. I said you would remember that it would lead to complications and as an incentive to the memory of my friends opposite I may say that in connection with this I made a reference to gurdwaras and mosques and said it might possibly lead to other complications like the one which we are suffering from at the present moment. And what did my honourable friend the Premier say in reply? He said, "This man does not know the definition of land." I wonder if he would remember, if he were here now. He said, "Land is defined in the Land Alienation Act." He should have given me some credit for knowing the definition of land. In trying to correct me the Premier made two serious mistakes. One was that his mind was directed to the time when the alienation in question took place and not to the time when the alienation will be sought to be set aside and the land would be restored to the original mortgagor. It is undoubtedly true that land does not include buildings. It might have included building sites. At the time it was alienated, sold or mortgaged, it might have been agricultural land. Perfectly true, but the Honourable Premier overlooked the fact that after 37 years buildings might have been erected on it, land might have changed hands a dozen times, might have changed hands a score of times and the last purchaser or even some intermediary innocent purchaser with full consideration who is covered by Section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act might have built buildings there. You might not give any compensation for their residential houses. You might say, all right, remove your malha, because the man from whom you derived your title had transgressed the provision of a sacred Act, therefore protection shall not be extended to anyone who obtains this property, no matter how innocently and with what consideration.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker left the chair which was occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker.)

This is the argument. That may be so as far as residential quarters are concerned. But supposing the innocent purchaser, into whose hands the land came thirty years after the original sale had been made and who did not even dream that the land would ever pass out of his hands, because his title had matured after 12 years, builds a religious building there, a mosque or dharamsala.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan: I rise to a point of order. I had no intention of interrupting my hon'ble friend but he goes into very minute details while we are discussing the third reading of the Bill. I would for your information submit three rulings by the Speakers of the Central Legislature with regard to the scope of the discussion of a Bill on the third reading. On one occasion the Speaker intervened and said:

"All these details have been fully thrashed out in the discussion which took place at the earlier stages. The hon'ble member must now confine himself to supporting or opposing the Bill."

On another occasion the Speaker gave a ruling in the following words—

"The hon'ble member cannot attempt an entirely second reading speech now."

I would, therefore, submit that when we are passing through the third reading of the Bill, the hon'ble member is not right in either discussing the detailed provisions of the Bill or discussing principles too widely which have been discussed at the time of the second reading. He can only discuss the principles underlying the amendments which have been accepted. I would, therefore, like to have your ruling whether the hon'ble member is now speaking in order while he is speaking on the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member is not going into very minute details of the Bill. He can discuss the details as he is doing.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: If I were discussing the minute details of the Bill, I could keep these gentlemen sitting here.

[Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.]

all the night with your permission, of course. But I am only discussing the principal features of the Bill. I have not, except once, when I read only two lines of one clause, referred in detail to any clause of the Bill. I am discussing simply the main features of the Bill. It is very unfortunate that my honourable friend got up at a time when I had nearly done.

I was referring to complications. An innocent purchaser, say a Sikh, builds a Gurdwara on the land. When the land passes out of his hand what becomes of the Gurdwara if the original vendor were a Muslim? And what would become of a mosque built by a Muslim innocent purchaser if the original vendor were a Sikh and the land reverts to him? Shall we not have so many more Shahid Gans?

I may also point out that, as there is not going to be any compensation, it may be that innocent people will suffer, and, as I have pointed out in the instances given, it may be undeserving people, e.g., assignees who may take the advantage. In 37 years much water has flown under the bridge of almost every river and neither the mortgagor may be in existence nor the middleman, the mortgagee or vendee, nor the sahukar. He might have realised his dues, the land might have been sold to somebody else, the original mortgagor might have been dead or if he were a mortgagor he might have sold the equity of redemption to somebody else and the result might be that deserving people would suffer and undeserving people might gain. I just give you one instance which has been reported to me. I have got it in black and white with me in one of the large number of letters which I have received.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Is the honourable member repeating the argument that he has already advanced?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I will not repeat and as a matter of fact I am going to finish. The mortgagee had some land. He gave part of his land to his brother. The land was taken by them for twelve hundred rupees and now the land is worth two thousand rupees. The equity of redemption has been purchased by a big zamindar from the original poor mortgagor for one hundred rupees. If the transaction is set aside the result would be that the original poor mortgagor would get no benefit whatsoever.

Lala Duni Chand : There are several cases of this kind.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : While the mortgagees who held the land are poor they would lose the land and who will get it? The big zamindar who has paid only one hundred rupees for the equity of redemption. This is what will happen. I respectfully submit before I sit down, that the Government has not given proper consideration to all these matters and they have rushed this measure through the House as if they were panic-stricken, as if they were fearing some landslide or so an attack from some unknown quarters and as if they thought that Simla was the safest place where they could get this Bill and other Bills through. I know it is no use asking the Government now to go back upon what they have done, but if they really want to be just and if they do not want to perpetrate injustice there is still time for them to withdraw this Bill and save themselves from the perpetration of this injustice. With these remarks I strongly oppose the motion which the Honourable Minister of Revenue made before the House.

Malik Barkat Ali [ Eastern Towns, Mubhatmadan, Urban ] : I assure my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, that I have listened with the greatest respect to his speech and I felt that in regard to many of the arguments which he advanced in the beginning he was speaking more in haste than in earnest. What was the argument of my learned friend ? My learned friend said that supposing he lent a radio set or a gramophone set to one of the Honourable Ministers and that the Honourable Minister, instead of returning that radio set or that gramophone, said to him that he would not let him enter his house by the front door and he gets an opportunity to go by the back door and removes his gramophone or his radio set ; would he be doing anything wrong ? My learned friend will agree with me that there is absolutely no analogy between this case and the case of sales prohibited under the Land Alienation Act. If it were the law of the land that Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang cannot lend a radio set or a gramophone to anybody, whether he be a Minister or an ordinary subject of the State, I could see some relevancy in that argument. I ask my learned friend to consider the argument he has advanced in the light of what I have said and see whether the observations he has made do really apply to transactions of the kind that are contemplated in this Bill.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Giving of loans is not prohibited.

Malik Barkat Ali : Quite so, but the sale of land is not the giving of a loan. My learned friend pointed out with a great deal of vehemence that the Bill is retrospective and that if retrospectivity is allowed, all those benami transactions, that have occurred during the last 37 years, will be undone. This argument presupposes that the benami transactions dealt with in the Bill are really permitted by or under the Land Alienation Act of 1900, namely, a permanent alienation obtained for himself by a member of a non-agricultural tribe from a member of an agricultural tribe, but through the nominal intervention of a member of an agricultural tribe. Nothing of the kind. Section 3 of the Land Alienation Act of 1900, prohibits permanent alienation of land by a member of an agricultural tribe to a member of a non-agricultural tribe, and this has been recognised by the courts in the past. My position is that even if this Bill were not passed and any one of those benami transactions, that have taken place during the last thirty years, ever came before the courts and the real secret owner ever wanted to establish his title or recover possession of the land that he had purchased in the name of a member of an agricultural tribe, no court of law would ever allow him to succeed in his claim and give him a decree for possession. My learned friend quoted a number of rulings. I ask him whether there is a single ruling quoted by him in which the secret owner has been granted a decree for possession of the land which he purchased in contravention of the Land Alienation Act, in the name of a member of an agricultural tribe or his title ever recognised. Therefore, my respectful submission is that there is no question of retrospectivity really in this Bill. All that this Bill has done is to declare the legal position, namely, that benami transactions shall not be recognised in any way or manner. There was one obstruction placed by certain maxims of law and the Bill seeks to remove that obstruction. My learned friend is a lawyer of very great standing and I have great respect for his legal acumen. He himself quoted the maxim of law that a person who is himself guilty of fraud cannot be permitted to take advantage of his own fraud. Therefore, a member of an agricultural tribe who was himself concerned in the benami transaction was not permitted to knock at the door of courts and get the transaction annulled. My learned friend should know that the Land Alienation Act is pre-eminently an enactment in which the policy of the State is crystallised more than the rights of individuals, (hear, hear), and, therefore, it is perfectly open to that State, when, in the wider interests of the State, it has once laid down that land in certain cases is inalienable, to further enact that the land shall remain inalienable and to set up a machinery whereby transactions benami, which have hitherto remained unearthed or unnoticed, are duly exposed and cancelled effectively. My learned friend quoted a ruling of Their Lordships of the Privy Council, to prove that benami transactions are valid. That ruling (46 C 566) dealt with a case which had nothing to do with the Land Alienation Act and merely laid down that the benami system under which property is acquired or held in names other than those of the real owner is a common form of conveyance in India. My learned friend will agree with me that there have been different pronouncements on this subject—not that I am contesting the pronouncement of the Privy Council and my learned friend will bear me out that when the Civil Justice Committee sat, it wanted to prohibit all benami transactions. Leaving this aspect of the matter, in this very ruling quoted by my learned friend, Their Lordships observe that where a transaction is permissible you may give it the form of benami, but where the transaction itself contravenes the provisions of the law—these are the very words of Their Lordships of the Privy Council as read out by my friend—the benami form of that transaction would be equally prohibited and bad in its origin and in its very inception and cannot be recognized or acted on by courts of law. According to Their Lordships courts will give effect to benami transactions, so long as they do not contravene the provisions of law.

[Malik Barkat Ali]

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Will my honourable friend quote the section of the Land Alienation Act which prohibits benami transactions?

Malik Barkat Ali : I am thankful to my learned friend. My learned friend will kindly read Section 3 of the Land Alienation Act and he will find that it lays down that no member of an agricultural tribe can make a permanent alienation of his land to a member of a non-agricultural tribe. This is prohibition, as much as the prohibition of a penal statute. In support of my argument I just give another instance to my learned friend. The other day Mir Maqbool Mahmood referred to the English Money-lenders Act and he said that certain suits were prohibited by the English Money-lenders Act. I asked him to quote the section of the Act and he referred me to a certain statement in Halsbury's Laws of England. So far as the Money-lenders Act was concerned, there was no direct prohibition of suits. The Act merely laid down that no person shall carry on the business of money-lending without registration and a licence, but did not enact in so many words that if he did carry on the business of money-lending without registration and without obtaining a valid licence, his suits shall fail. A case came before the courts in which such a money-lender figured as a plaintiff. The court threw him out on the ground that as he had advanced a loan without registering himself and without obtaining a valid licence, the loan was void and illegal and could not form the basis of his suit, although there was no direct prohibition of the suit in the statute. In the same way, my argument is that the very fact that section 3 lays down that no member of an agricultural tribe can make an alienation of land in favour of a person who is not a member of an agricultural tribe, constitutes the prohibition which my learned friend wants me to bring to his notice, and therefore with section 3 before it, no court of law will or can recognize any transaction in violation of this prohibition. I ask my honourable friend to quote to me a single case in which an alienation by a member of an agricultural tribe in favour of a member of a non-agricultural tribe has been or was ever upheld in the sense that a suit for possession of the property on the part of a member of the non-agricultural tribe was decreed. My honourable friend is a lawyer of very great acumen. I am really surprised that in this matter he should have been beaten by the Premier who certainly has no pretensions to that amount of knowledge which a lawyer certainly possesses. My friend referred to a ruling of the late Mr. Justice Shah Din reported as No. 142 P. E. 1907, and argued in all seriousness that the ruling fully supported the position which he took up. The Honourable Premier had pointed out that that ruling had nothing to do with the present discussion, but my learned friend pressed it and argued that in the ruling Mr. Justice Shah Din had upheld benami sales or mortgages of land by members of agricultural tribes in favour of persons belonging to non-agricultural tribes. I propose to discuss this ruling at some length, and want my learned friend to see whether the facts are as he has put them or as I am putting them. In this case there was a mortgage by a member of an agricultural tribe in favour of a member of an agricultural tribe, a mortgage perfectly permissible under the Land Alienation Act. There was no mortgage of any kind in favour of the money-lenders; only the consideration therefor, being a sum of two thousand rupees and odd, was to be paid by the mortgagee, the member of the agricultural tribe, to the money-lenders, A, B, C, previous creditors of the mortgagor. This money was paid by the mortgagee and a suit was thereafter brought by him for possession. His suit for possession on the basis of the mortgage was decreed by the High Court. The mortgagor tried to defeat that suit by stating that it was really a benami transaction in favour of the money-lenders. The High Court came to the conclusion that it was not a benami transaction and said that what had taken place was merely this that the consideration was paid by the mortgagee to A, B, C, the creditors of the original mortgagor, which was a perfectly legal and permissible affair. There was no element of benami in this case. I shall quote from the judgment itself :—

Here we have a mortgage perfectly legal on the face of it executed in favour of an agriculturist who seeks the aid of the courts to enforce his rights. As between him and the mortgagor there is no infringement whatever of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act in granting the relief claimed. The object of the Act is not to prevent money-lenders (non-agriculturists) from recovering sums justly due to them (from an agriculturist) by any legal means in their power, and if they can induce an agriculturist to pay off a debt due to them and to take a mortgage of land from their debtor as security for himself, there is nothing in the Act to prohibit such a course. Indeed the object of the Act is attained, rather than defeated by what has occurred here. Without the Act, Mul Chand, Megh Ra) and Bela Ram, non-agriculturist money-lenders, would undoubtedly have taken the mortgage themselves and obtained possession of the land. The Act prevents this, though of course they could have taken a mortgage in one of the specified permissible forms. But Jehan Khan (the plaintiff) is prepared to lend the debtor the money necessary to pay off the moneylenders and to take the land in mortgage himself, he being an agriculturist and we are only asked to decree him relief. So far as the plaintiff Jehan Khan is the mortgagee, Jehan Khan asks for possession under his deed; he is entitled to it, and there is nothing in the Alienation Act or any other Act, which justifies us in refusing him the relief to which he is legally entitled. We accordingly set aside the judgment and decree plaintiff's claim to possession against the mortgagors.

Therefore what this ruling lays down is this: (1) that it is perfectly legal for money-lenders to lend money to members of agricultural tribes; and (2) that it is equally legal for them to recover their dues from them by methods which are legal, e.g. by inducing a member of an agricultural tribe to take a mortgage of their debtor's land as security for himself and out of the consideration, pay his debts to them or by inducing the debtor himself to mortgage his land to another member of the agricultural tribe and out of the moneys so obtained, pay the money-lenders. But this ruling nowhere lays down that the money-lenders can acquire benami or purchase lands of members of agricultural tribes which they are prohibited by law from acquiring or purchasing. I will quote further from the very ruling :—

If Mul Chand, etc., are really at the back of Jehan Khan the Land Alienation Act can be properly invoked, should they ever attempt to assert any right to the possession of the lands by virtue of the mortgage before us.

This quotation is thus dead against my friend's contention. My honourable friend quoted three or four other rulings. I have seen these rulings and they merely lay down the perfectly correct and innocent propositions; (1) that agriculturists can borrow from non-agriculturists, and (2) that there is nothing illegal in one agriculturist taking the land of another agriculturist on mortgage, undertaking in exchange to pay off debts due by the mortgagor to a non-agriculturist. I ask my honourable friend, is there anything in the Act which lays down that a member of the agricultural tribe cannot borrow money from any money-lender or even Dr. Gokul Chand? There is no such prohibition. It is perfectly open to a member of an agricultural tribe to borrow money from A, B or C and if the latter want to take any security, this security must be in an approved form. In all those rulings quoted the Honourable Judges, viz., the late Mr. Justice Shah Din, Mr. Justice Chevis, and the Honourable Sir James Addison correctly say that there is nothing illegal in a member of an agricultural tribe borrowing from Dr. Gokul Chand and if they want to pay Dr. Gokul Chand they can pay so, or if Dr. Gokul Chand wants them to repay, he can induce a member of an agricultural tribe to take a mortgage, and out of the consideration of the mortgage, pay him the debt due to him. Are these benami transactions? My learned friend thinks that transactions of this kind are benami transactions. The Honourable Judges themselves held that none of these transactions were benami, and that 'under no conceivable circumstances, the money-lenders could ever obtain possession of the land. If they did attempt to get possession, they would be met at once by the Land Alienation Act.' With all deference, therefore, to him, I differ from him. It is of the essence of benami transactions, that the beneficial interest does not reside in the nominal or dummy alienee; the beneficial interest resides in the secret owner. If that be the position, can it be said that the cases cited by Dr. Gokul Chand are cases of benami? They are cases of alienations made by a member of an agricultural tribe in favour of another member of an agricultural tribe. In them, the money-lender does not figure at all as an alienee; he merely comes in to receive his debt. Therefore my submission is that my learned friend has completely failed to comprehend the scope and the essence of benami transactions. As I have said—I do not want to repeat—a benami transaction necessarily postulates interest residing not in the ostensible benamidar but in the secret owner. This finishes my discussion of the rulings on the strength of which my learned friend made his powerful speech.

I will now proceed to remind my honourable friend of another set of rulings in which their Lordships have upheld the policy of the Land Alienation Act in the most relentless manner. In this respect there has been some change in the current of authority. Prior to 1933, their Lordships of the Lahore High Court took the view that where a mortgage decree directed the sale of the land of a member of an agricultural tribe, the executing court must carry out the sale, however much the sale contravened Section 16 of the Land

[Malak Barakat Ali.]

Alienation Act, which lays down that "no land of a member of an agricultural tribe shall be sold in execution of a decree." The reasoning of the Honourable Judges was that an executing court cannot go behind a decree, and that even if a decree was wrong and opposed to Section 16 the executing court must carry it out. Section 16 of the Land Alienation Act was thus reduced to a dead letter. In 1933 the Honourable Sir James Addison, sitting with Mr. Justice Agha Haider, differed from this view and held that as the Punjab Land Alienation Act was a most beneficial piece of legislation, its provisions could not be thus set at naught and that even if a mortgage decree directed the sale of the land of an agriculturist, the executing court must stay its hand and refuse to sell. In this ruling, the views of the Calcutta and Allahabad High Courts to the same effect are quoted. It will thus be seen that although, under the ordinary law, executing courts are required to blindly execute decrees, yet in this case the Honourable Judges said, "we shall make an exception and we shall not allow the land of a member of an agricultural tribe to be sold, contrary to the express provisions of the Land Alienation Act, in execution of decrees, although the decrees themselves directed the sale of that land." I believe that in 1937, again, the same proposition was affirmed by the Honourable Justice Sir James Addison and by the Honourable Mr. Justice Rashid. There has been no counterruling in opposition to this. All these rulings make it perfectly clear that transactions which contravene the provisions of the Land Alienation Act have not been upheld by the courts, even if there were other principles of law which could have been upheld.

Ordinarily, executing courts must execute decrees as they stand but in this case they shall not. My submission, therefore, is that the rulings relied on by Dr. Gokul Chand, have no application; none of them relate to benami transactions. They are all cases of valid mortgages effected by members of agricultural tribes in favour of members of agricultural tribes. The consideration for those mortgages has gone to wipe off the debts due by the mortgagors to their money-lenders. In every one of them, the mortgagee, a member of the agricultural tribe, is the real mortgagee. There is no trace and there is no element of benami behind any of them.

I will now, Sir, turn to some ruling of the Financial Commissioner, to which my learned friend referred. I have not had the benefit of reading that ruling, but I should like to remind my learned friend that in Lahore Law times, 37, page 29—I quoted this case a few days ago and that is why I remember it—the Honourable Mr. Latif, Financial Commissioner, laid down that the policy of the Land Alienation Act of 1900 is that land shall never pass out of the possession of that socio-economic group known as the notified agricultural tribes, and therefore, no revenue court and no revenue officer shall ever recognize any transaction in which the provisions of the Land Alienation Act have been defeated in the sense that land belonging to a member of the agricultural tribe has actually gone into the possession of a member of a non-agricultural tribe. Mr. Latif's ruling most accurately sums up the policy underlying the Land Alienation Act, namely, that the State has decreed that land shall never pass out of the possession of the socio-economic group known as the notified agricultural tribes. If that is so, my learned friend is too late to-day after 37 years during which that policy has stood, to ask this House to go back on that policy. My learned friend will remember that this question was raised at the Round Table Conference and in the Government of India Act, there is a definite exception in favour of the policy of the Land Alienation Act. My learned friend has argued at great length that this measure is discriminatory and is a party measure. With regard to this, Parliament, while prohibiting discriminatory legislation, has laid down that a legislation based on the policy of the Land Alienation Act, shall never be deemed to be discriminatory for the purposes of the Government of India Act, 1935. Therefore, if the Government of India Act has recognized that policy which has stood for all these 37 years, how can my learned friend ask anybody to go back on that policy? It may be that my learned friend will come into power some day and with his party of non-agriculturist members wipe off this legislation, but so long as that time does not come, and so long as the policy of the Land Alienation Act obtains, it is perfectly reasonable, it is perfectly imperative to forge legislation under which the provisions of the Land Alienation Act shall not be contravened. My learned friend seems to have every sympathy for these people who break the law; but I must assure him that the law must be vindicated. Every man must suffer the penalties of the law. My friend seems to have conveniently assumed that these money-lenders who are his special theme, have taken benami sales, because they thought that the law allowed them to do so, and he, therefore, wants the legislature to be very kind to them. Now, this assumption is in the first instance utterly unfounded. In the second place, how can the legislature stultify its own legislation? How can ignorance of law excuse an action directly in contravention of the law? People are presumed to know the law of the land. The very fact that resort was had to this subterfuge of a benami transaction, shows that the money-lender was aware of the prohibition against him, and he is thus entitled to no sympathy. My learned friend has tried to protect him by advancing another wholly untenable argument, namely, that the Bill is retrospective and should not be retrospective. I proclaim that the Bill is not retrospective; it is merely declaratory and every declaratory legislation merely declares the law as it has existed. This has been the law during the last 87 years, that a permanent alienation contravening the provisions of the Land Alienation Act shall not be upheld in a court. There is not a single suit in regard to a benami alienation which has been upheld by any court at the instance of these violators of the law.

Lastly, my learned friend put in a powerful plea for compensation. I believe my honourable friend is aware that under the law a minor cannot transfer his property. A minor cannot sell or transfer his property to Dr. Gokul Chand Narang, and if my friend has obtained a transfer from a minor, he will, under the unanimous rulings of all High Courts, lose all the money that he has advanced to that minor. He will not only lose all the money but will also lose the property he has acquired. How can there be any equity, their Lordships say in these rulings, in favour of a man who, knowing the law, and must be presumed to know the law, contravenes the law? An exception has, however, been recognized where it is found that the minor led the transferee to believe that he was a major at the time of the alienation. Suppose the minor is of 3 to 10 years of age, the alienee will stand deprived absolutely of his moneys and property. But supposing the minor is somewhere between 17 and 18, then, Their Lordships say that if you succeed in proving that you were induced by him to advance money to him on the assurance that he was a major, then there is some equity in your favour and you will get compensation. But if the element of deceitful assurance or inducement is lacking, then in that case no court will help you and you will never get any compensation. Mind you, in such cases the policy of the State nowhere enters. They are merely cases of private rights. But in measures which are strongly linked up with important policies of state, effect must be given to them most rigorously and no question of compensation can arise in favour of persons who deliberately contravene those measures. There is legislation more or less akin to ours in the United Provinces. There is legislation restraining alienation of Vatan and other lands in the Bombay Presidency and I call upon my learned friend to point out a single case in which land declared to be inalienable in certain cases was ever allowed to be alienated by such methods as benami or where the persons violating the law were protected by any provisions as to compensation. I may tell my learned friend that there are better cases of compensation and yet courts have held that they would not allow any compensation when a person deliberately and with his eyes open contravenes the law. It is only in those limited cases in which a major, very near 18 years, has deceitfully induced you to make an advance on the assurance and in the belief created by him that he was a major, and you have made an advance on that assurance, that the law entitles you to some compensation. Therefore, I submit that in the case of persons taking benami, contrary to the provisions of the Land Alienation Act, there can be no question of compensation. The Land Alienation Act is an enactment which is more intimately bound up with an important policy of the State. The State is a party to this enactment in the sense that it has independent rights of its own which it wants to be protected. The State no doubt legislates for the regulation and enforcement of private rights, namely, rights of a private character, and it no doubt leaves it to the will of the individual concerned to enforce his rights or to waive them. But where private rights are mixed up with State or public rights or are bound up with matter, of essential State policy, the State cannot relegate to itself the role of a passive spectator. It must see that the policy of the State is not thwarted. The question of the alienation of land into the hands of non-centers is an important question of State policy. It is not a matter of merely private rights. The State has claimed and claims a sort of interest in the land belonging to the notified agricultural tribe. Therefore, the State is perfectly justified, on the basis of the interest that it has, to protect the land and to see that the expropriation of the actual tillers of the soil does not take place. I will not refer here to the circumstances under and the reasons for which the Land Alienation Act was passed. My learned friend ought to know that the circumstances and the conditions existing to-day are the same and, as I have already submitted, it is too late in the day for him to ask the Assembly to go back on that policy. He is perfectly wrong if he has the idea that this legislation is a gift to or is for the benefit of Muslims. Muslims who are not members of agricultural tribes, would suffer from it. There are any number of Muslims who are not members of agricultural tribes. But they do not cry, because this legislation is in the interest of the State. It is perfectly wrong to construe or represent every beneficial measure of this kind as a communal or discriminatory measure. Discrimination may be there, but it has received the blessings and the approval of the Mother of Parliaments in the Government of India Act.

Dr. Sir. Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of order, Sir. Is the honourable member in order in bringing in the Mother of Parliaments when discussing this Bill? Mother of Parliaments has never recognised that benami transactions of this kind should be set aside.

B. P. M.

Malik Barkat Ali : My learned friend has been pleased to cast the entire burden and responsibility of creating this discrimination between an agriculturist and a non-agriculturist on the shoulders of the Punjab Government. My submission is that the Mother of Parliaments has held that the discrimination introduced by such legislation prevailing in the Punjab, as the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, is valid and does not come within the mischief of the discriminatory legislation prohibited by the Government of India Act, 1935. He says that benami is itself a discrimination. I cannot understand this. I have very great regard for him and I am making these remarks with no disrespect towards him. I must inform him that he should realise the responsibility of his position as a legislator. Every sentence uttered in this hall will echo and re-echo throughout the length and breadth of this country where it may cause misunderstandings and misapprehensions (hear, hear). We must be very careful in what we say; let us be honest; let us meet the facts squarely and fairly. The principle of benami is not discriminatory. The Bill may be discriminatory in the very sense in which the Punjab Alienation of Land Act was discriminatory. But it merely implements the policy that was accepted and has since been accepted by practically everybody except that small and limited section of the public who very much like to but cannot lay their hands on the lands of the poor peasants. Every community, I respectfully submit, has accepted it. Even my honourable friend, Dr. Narang, in one of his statements on the policy of the Land Alienation Act, stated in so many words; 'Now that I have cried hoarse, but not succeeded in my intentions, I will be prepared to accept that policy.' I stand subject to correction. The statement was made by him at a time when he was canvassing support from the agricultural Hindu Party which was united with the Ministerial party.

[Malik Barkat Ali.]

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Yes, I will correct you.

Malik Barkat Ali : I do not propose to take further time of the House. As a matter of fact, I am not feeling well and am suffering from a mild touch of 'flu' and did not want to speak, but some of the arguments of my honourable friend provoked me into a speech. I conclude by saying that his arguments are fallacious; they have no substance in them, and are at the best unsubstantial airy nothing.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of personal explanation. As reference has been made about my declaration on the Alienation of Land Act, I want to explain my position as it is likely to be misunderstood.

Pir Akbar Ali : On a point of order, Sir. The honourable member has already spoken for three hours. After all we have also got to speak.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I can take 50 hours. That is no point of order. As my friend Malik Barkat Ali said that every word we utter here is bound to have repercussions outside and he attributed to me a statement that I was prepared to accept the policy of the Land Alienation Act, I think it is necessary for me to clear my position. On a certain occasion when a meeting of a number of Hindu friends was held, I certainly said that the Hindus should no longer waste their time in opposing the Land Alienation Act if thereby they could secure the co-operation of the agriculturist Hindus. It was stated that the opposition to this Act stood in the way of Hindu solidarity. My statement was not made with respect to the merits of the Act; I never accepted that the Act was an equitable measure. I only advised my non-agriculturist Hindu friends to cease agitating against the Act in order to secure the co-operation of the agriculturist Hindus.

Parliamentary Secretary (Chaudhri Tika Ram) : Was it meant to entrap us?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Not at all. I was very sincere.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : No questions are to be answered in this way.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I can assure Chaudhri Tika Ram that I was very sincere. I wanted to secure Hindu solidarity.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra (Ludhiana and Ferozepore, General, Rural) : Sir, without entering into the merits or morals of the provisions of the Bill now under consideration and without referring to the controversial points that have been raised by my learned friends from both sides of the House, I want to confine myself to some of the technical points so far as this Bill is concerned. It is necessary for me to say these words in the beginning so that the position of my friends on this side of the House may not in any way be misunderstood.

The points that I want to bring to the notice of the House at this stage are that so far as the operative portion of this Bill is concerned, it should not be passed into law because it contravenes some of the general principles in regard to the enactment of statutes and their interpretation. The major portion of this Bill deals with benami transactions. Here again without entering into the point whether the benami transactions are lawful or not, I shall only confine myself to the history of the legislation which this Bill proposes to amend. It was towards the closing years of the last century that the increasing expropriation of the peasants of the Punjab engaged the attention of the authorities.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member will confine himself to the contents of this Bill.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : I am contending that this Bill should not be passed for the reason that it goes against the spirit of the main Act which it seeks to amend.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should not go into the history of the legislation.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : What I wish to point out is that the intention of the legislators in passing the old Land Alienation Act was to stop, if possible, the lands passing from the agriculturists into the hands of non-agriculturists.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member is not relevant.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : My submission is that the object of the Land Alienation Act was to prevent the sale of land by agriculturists to non-agriculturists. I am going to examine whether the provisions of this Bill are in conformity with that principle of the Bill. My contention is that they are not. My reason is this. In the original Act there is no provision which gives retrospective effect to that legislation. But in this Bill there is a provision which gives retrospective effect and not only extends its operations to transactions during the lifetime of the mother Act but also to transactions even at a time when that Act was not in existence. That is the point which I want to bring to the notice of the House. My contention is that the amending Act cannot bring in a provision which does not only not exist in the main Act but which was not contemplated by the legislators of those days. Section 13 provides for not only the transactions entered into after the main Act came into force but also transactions which were lawful and entered into before the main Act came into force. This is my first point.

My second point is that persons who are in lawful possession of property cannot be deprived of their property as is provided in section 293 and these provisions contravene section 107 of the Government of India Act. The provincial legislature is not authorised to enact any law the provisions of which are repugnant to those which are already to be found in the existing Indian laws. This law under consideration of the House proposes to deprive a person of that property which he has acquired legally either as a result of contract or under the law relating to transfer of property. My submission is that the provisions of this Bill contravene the provisions of the law of contract and other laws relating to property and as such they are repugnant to the Indian laws and should not therefore be made part of this law.

Further, we have also to see whether this amendment is relevant to the main Bill. I just invite your attention to paragraph 184 of the Manual of Procedure for public business in the House of Commons in which it is clearly stated with regard to relevancy of amendments—

An amendment must be relevant to the subject matter of the Bill and the subject matter of the clause to which it relates,

My submission is that this amendment is out of order inasmuch as it gives retrospective effect and is not relevant to the main Act.

Then, with regard to the other operative portion of this Bill, that is clause 4, which relates to the change in procedure, it is of more value than the benami transactions. In that clause it is said that the deputy commissioner is the sole authority to determine whether a person belongs to an agricultural tribe or not. It is also provided that his decision shall be final and that he is not bound by any decree of any civil court. My submission is that it is also in contravention of the existing Indian law. Supposing a person gets a decree from a competent civil court about his status. According to the provisions of this Bill the deputy commissioner can override such a decree. This is not, in my view, a healthy provision and it is a departure from the existing Indian law, because under the Specific Relief Act there are certain remedies which are open to a person and he can have those remedies in the form of declaratory suits and thereafter, when he comes to the deputy commissioner of the district he will find that the decision of the competent civil court, even though that happens to be the Privy Council, will be discarded and overridden by the deputy commissioner. My submission is that this provision is repugnant to the Indian law.

There is one more point and that is with regard to the clause relating to the short title. In sub-clause (2) of clause 1, it is stated that this Act shall come into force on such date as the Governor of the Punjab might by notification direct. The expression "Governor of the Punjab' is not at all to be found in the Government of India Act nor is it defined in this Bill anywhere. It is the provincial Government that is authorised to notify any such thing or to give any such directions. The term provincial Government is defined in the General Clauses Act as 'the Governor acting by and with the advice of the Council of Ministers and also in his discretion or in his judgment', but there is no such expression as the Governor of the Punjab defined anywhere. Therefore, the correct expression which should have been used in the clause is 'provincial Government'. In paragraph 43-A of the General Clauses Act 'provincial Government' is defined as respects anything done or to be done after the commencement of Part III of the Government of India Act. With these few remarks with regard to the technical side of the question I submit that the Bill in its present form should not be brought on the statute book.

Pir Akbar Ali (Fazilka, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, four speeches in all have so far been made on the motion that is now before us and out of these three have been made against the motion and only one has been allowed to be made in favour of this Bill and I am inclined to think that even in this House the interests of the poor zamindars are not quite safe. In this House the opposition consisting of less than 35 members gets equal share with 135 members belonging to the zamindar party. In this House also the treatment accorded to the zamindar party is similar to that meted to the zamindars by the sahnkars. I may point out that it happens in almost every case that the sahnkars, while they advance Rs. 135, out of which Rs. 100 are deducted on the spot, get the thumb-impressions of the poor and needy zamindars on double the amount that is Rs. 270 at once and without any lapse of time. It is to check and put a stop to these malpractices that this Bill has been brought forward and this, it should be agreed, is a very laudable object.

As I have said three speeches have been made against this Bill and the notable of them are by Rai Bahadur Lala Mukand Lal Puri and Dr. Gokul Chand Narang. So far as the speech of Dr. Narang is concerned I need not say much against it to controvert the points raised by him, because my honourable friend Malik Barkat Ali has very ably stormed and razed to the ground the fort which the Doctor had so cleverly tried to build in the air. As regards the speech by the other gentleman, I really do not understand why not a word was said about it by my friend Malik Sahib. Perhaps it is because Rai Bahadur Lala Mukand Lal spoke from the Government benches or perhaps because he said that this measure was not going to benefit the zamindars. Anyway the fact remains that not a word was said about his speech by my honourable friend Malik Barkat Ali. But I cannot help saying that the solicitude on his part for the poor zamindars was what appeared to me something quite uncommon. When the Rai Bahadur was expressing his sympathy for the zamindars I was thinking of that woman who professed to love the children of others more than she loved her own children and who was rightly called an imposter, I have sufficient reasons to think like that. Some of the honourable members of the House will remember that during the discussion of the legislation passed so far to afford some relief to the poor zamindars and the debtors, not a word was ever said by the honourable member in its favour. I have a distinct recollection that on all such occasions the honourable member put all his might and eloquence in opposing that legislation and, therefore, I say that it was something quite uncommon when he was pleased to say something for the zamindars on this occasion.

As I have already said, I need not take much time of the House in discussing the points raised by Dr. Gokul Chand Narang, because those points have been sufficiently and successfully answered by my honourable friend Malik Sahib. Even if it were admitted that the Judges of the High Court and even the Privy Council had taken the view that benami transactions were permissible, then he should take it that some defect had been left in the language of the Land Alienation Act which made those Judges to interpret the law in the manner suggested and the honourable Doctor should also know, if he does not know it already, that, at any rate, it was not the intention of the legislators to leave any such loophole in that law. It is to remove such defects in that law and to clarify the position taken up in that legislation that this Bill has been brought forward. Otherwise there is no need to take this trouble over again. It is hoped that this Bill will, at least to some extent, go to remove the defects that might have enabled clever people to take advantage of their existence.

Now I may say a few words as to what are benami transactions and how these transactions have adversely affected the interests of the poor agriculturists. Supposing there is a person named Tola Singh and he owes some money to one Sita Ram. That Sita Ram happens to be the friend of one Bahmat Ali and he one day asks the latter to help him in realising his debts from that Tola Singh, a poor agriculturist. The conversation opens like this: "Bahmat Ali, you and I have been friends for a very long time and this relationship has come down from our forefathers. You know that I cannot purchase the land of Tola Singh in lieu of my debts that he owes me and I, therefore, request you to mortgage his land with possession. You will have to pay not a farthing for this transaction. You will have of course only to put your thumb-impression on my bat for a sum of Rs. 500 which you will not be required to pay at all". That simple and unsophisticated Bahmat Ali is persuaded to act as desired and the transaction is entered into as arranged. The thumb-impression is not put for a sum of Rs. 500 but for Rs. 1,500 without the knowledge of Bahmat Ali, and the land belonging to Tola Singh is mortgaged in favour of Bahmat Ali. The next request that Sita Ram makes to Bahmat Ali is that the latter should send all the produce of that land to the house of the former after every harvest without keeping anything to himself for all his trouble. This request is addressed in the same polite and sweet language and the poor Bahmat Ali is again prevailed upon to do as desired. In this way three years pass after the lapse of which Sita Ram one day asks Bahmat Ali to put his thumb-impression for a sum of Rs. 2,000. Bahmat Ali accordingly puts his thumb-impression for that amount without asking his friend why he should put his thumb-impression there and why his friend should mistrust him when he has put implicit faith in him. Then another three years pass and the amount of that debt increases. In this way 30 long years lapse and the amount goes up to many thousands. Then Lala Sita Ram, who had been taking the produce of the land, without crediting anything in the account of Tola Singh, goes to the court and sues not only Tola Singh but also his friend Bahmat Ali. The suit is brought in the court of a sub-judge at Muktsar and although all the lambaridars, zaidars, qanungoes and patwaris give to the effect evidences that the produce has all along been taken by Sita Ram, the suit for Rs. 4,000 is decreed against the defendants. This is how these benami transactions have done havoc and still some of my friends desire that these should be allowed to continue. This is not all. When after 1880 the prices of lands began to rise Sita Ram again saw the opportunity and began to expropriate not one Tola Singh but many such Tola Singhs and in lieu of a plate of laddoos or a little quantity of tobacco (laughter)—I am not talking of my friend Sita Ram who is our honourable colleague—to be frank, I do not know much about him, these are only supposed names that I am mentioning . . . .

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member will do well to substitute some other name for Sita Ram.

Pir Akbar Ali : Very well, Sir. I will say Sital Chand and not Sita Ram. I was saying that when Sital Chand saw that the prices of the lands had begun to rise, he also began to purchase lands through the medium of his old friend Bahmat Ali. Here it is that the Government came to the rescue of the zamindar and I may say not because it loved the zamindars so much but because its own interest lay in safeguarding the interests of the zamindars. The Government knew that if all the lands passed into the hands of the sabukars, these zamindars will be turned into so many serfs and will not remain as sturdy and strong and fit for recruitment to the armies as they were then and are now. This idea occurred to the Government in 1890, but owing to some technical difficulties and also to a certain extent on account of the fear of Sital Chand, it took full ten years to pass that Act which is called the Alienation of Land Act.

Begum Rashida Latif Baji : Is it then for recruitment for the army that this retaliatory step is being taken ?

Pir Akbar Ali : I need hardly say that the object of the legislators in framing this law was to make it impossible for the non-agriculturists to purchase any land from the agriculturists but many means were found out to defeat the object of that legislation and these benami transactions were thought of as the best possible means. It is fortunate that the present Government has come into power to save that very useful and deserving class of people. During the last 16 or 17 months that the present Government has been in power, it has done many good deeds and taken a number of steps to afford relief and protection to the poor and starving people of the province. The record of its work is so wonderful that even the Congress Governments have been eclipsed and it is hoped that this Government will continue to add to its glorious acts in future.

[Pir Akbar Ali.]

Sir, I was pointing out why this useful measure is being opposed. My honourable friends on the other side are grieving over the fact that it was destined for the Unionist Government to introduce measures the like of which have not been introduced even in the Congress-governed provinces.

Premier : No, my honourable friends are glad over it.

Pir Akbar Ali : My honourable friend, Sir Gokul Chand Narang, who has just left the House, said that if this Bill were passed into law as many as 10,000 creditors or mahajans, 10,000 benamidors and 10,000 real debtors would be ruined. I submit that no creditor will lose any thing if this Bill is passed because, as I just submitted, he will have realised at least 38,000 rupees by the time the proposed Act is enforced. And if Rahmat Ali has to suffer, let him suffer for the fraud he committed by conspiring, so to say, with Sital Chand to ruin poor Tola Singh. I think the Government should feel sympathetic also towards the much-wronged Rahmat Ali. The sabukars do not deserve any sympathy. I am of the opinion that Sital Chand especially should be dealt with very severely. He posed as a friend of Rahmat Ali but he was only a wolf in sheep's clothing.

Dr. Sant Ram Seth : Is the honorable member speaking to the motion ?

Pir Akbar Ali : I am relevant, I am a lawyer and I can never be irrelevant. My honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, has remarked that we should differentiate between a person who commits a burglary and another who makes a purchase. Quite so. But how can he advance, thereby, any argument in favour of a money-lender who has contravened the express provisions of a law, the Land Alienation Act ? He ought to have known that the Government had enacted that law for the protection of the zamindars, who comprise 95 per cent. of the population of the province. I know, as everybody else in this House knows, that various associations have sprung up, as it were, overnight, who send telegrams of protests against the laws meant to do good to the zamindars. The tongueless, dumb zamindars, who are silent and quiet like cattle, do not stir at all. Will any honourable member say if he has received any telegram or even a letter from any poor zamindar ? So, we are bound to help this helpless, friendless, poor creature. We think that this Bill is not sufficiently drastic; it does not go far enough. In spite of all that this Bill is being vehemently opposed. I fail to understand how my friends, who oppose this measure, find a justification for such a thing as benami transactions. All I can understand is that they are opposing this Bill as they think that by getting such a measure enacted the Unionist Party will have stolen a march over the Congress Governments of other provinces.

Sardar Ajit Singh (South-West Punjab, Sikh, Rural): Sir, I have stood up to remove a misunderstanding. It is being said in some quarters that Congress is strongly opposed to these measures for agrarian legislation. I must clear the position of the Congress Party, on the floor of the House, by saying that the Congress Party is strongly in favour of such agrarian legislation and in spite of the fact that some amendments tabled by our party to better the scope of the Bills in favour of the poor peasantry, were either disallowed or lost, we strongly endorse the Bills. It has been proposed by some persons that some compensation should be given to those who have made benami transactions. We are of the opinion that compensation apart, these people should be made to pay some fine for the dishonest transactions. (Hear, hear). With these words, I lend my whole-hearted support to this Bill. (Cheers from the Treasury benches).

Premier (The Hon'ble Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, before I reply to some of the arguments put forward by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and Dr. Gokul Chand Narang, I wish to congratulate my honourable friend, the last speaker, who has pointedly and openly stated that the Congress is supporting this measure. I know it perfectly well that that is the creed of the Congress and it is one of the basic principles in its programme that they should support such measures and it was for that reason that some of us were disagreeably surprised that amendment after amendment from those benches were tabled against this measure and every inch was fought. So there seems to be some sort of tug-of-war going on inside the Congress benches (Voices: No, no, never; you are wrong). My honourable friends say that nothing is going on in the Congress benches. I am very glad to hear it. (A voice: It may be in your party). Sir, as I was just submitting the amendments of some of the members of that party will indicate the nature of that tug-of-war and I need say no more on that point.

My friend Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, made the point that the rule of law is being substituted by the rule of the executive. He said that the judicial basis of administration laid so wisely by our British rulers is being thrown to the winds. Those are, as I understand, the exact words which he used in making this argument. My friend very conveniently ignored the fact that this Bill is no more than an amendment of the parent Act, i.e., the Land Alienation Act and that we are doing with regard to the actual procedure of the various matters laid down in this Bill is that we are following the procedure laid down in the parent Act, and every one of us is aware that under the Land Alienation Act, it is the Collector, the Commissioner and the Financial Commissioner, who deal with the various important points which fall within the purview of the Land Alienation Act. So, I think that his argument holds no water whatever when he says that [Premier.] We are trying to do something which is new or original. We are doing nothing of the sort. We are following the practice and principle already laid down in the Land Alienation Act. His next point was that it is unfair to apply the measure retrospectively to past benami transactions. We are not giving retrospective effect to a measure which is a new measure. We are merely trying to stop the loophole in the Land Alienation Act. There are benami transactions galore, benami transactions probably in every district and in every province throughout the country, but those transactions will not be affected by this Bill, those benami transactions are perfectly valid. For instance, I, not being an agriculturist, make a benami transaction to another friend of mine considering that if I do not make that transaction perhaps my sons would squander the property. I leave it to my friends and say that this should be constituted as trust for my sons. That benami transaction is not illegal. We only want to stop those transactions which are in contravention of the Land Alienation Act, or, to put it very briefly, to stop that loophole or that evasion which has been resorted to by certain people who have fraudulently tried to evade the provisions of the Alienation of Land Act. My honourable friend then went on to praise the Congress for some of the amendments which they had moved. I do not think I should refer to these praiseworthy amendments but I am glad the House thought fit not to approve of those amendments with whatever motive they might have been moved. He has also said that if we pass this Bill, it would lead to litigation and that would be very detrimental to the interests of the province as a whole. If we want to avoid something illegal being done and that in turn may lead to litigation, does that mean that we should allow dishonesty and fraud to go on merely for the reason that a certain amount of litigation will result in consequence of that legislation? I am afraid that argument will not appeal to anybody, either here or outside, provided he looks at it with an unprejudiced and unbiased mind.

If you will allow me I will take up some of the points which my friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang sought to make. Both he and Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, first tried to accuse me of going back on the promises which I had given and Sir Gokul Chand Narang even went further and said that I was trying not to stick to the undertaking which was given by the late Sir Fazl-i-Husain in this House. You are aware of the nature of the undertaking which was given by Sir Fazl-i-Husain and eventually repeated by myself on the floor of this House in the previous Council. That undertaking was that we would not allow the scope of the Land Alienation Act to be extended or restricted and I endorse that undertaking given in the old Council that Government of the time would not allow any departure from the principles of the Land Alienation Act. As a matter of fact, the exact words were: "we will not go a pace forward nor a pace backward." Those were the words used by Sir Fazl-i-Husain and I stand by those words and I repeat that I did endorse that undertaking. That was the policy of the last Government. During the budget session I said that we would try our best to adhere to that policy provided the Land Alienation Act itself remains watertight and no evasion of that Act is allowed, but in view of the changed circumstances and conditions of the country it may be necessary for us—though personally I may not wish it, but it may be in the interest of the province and the country as a whole—to go beyond the Land Alienation Act. (Hear, hear and loud applause.) If that contingency arises my individual opinion will not matter or for that matter the individual opinion of any member of this House will not matter, it is the opinion of the masses outside which might force me and force these benches or the whole House to attend to the interest of the country as a whole. So far as this Bill is concerned, I think that the accusation is wholly irrelevant and uncalled for. Why? Because so far as this particular enactment is concerned, we are not going a step beyond the Land Alienation Act. We are merely trying to block those holes which have been surreptitiously made by those people who are dishonestly inclined. It is nothing more than that. We merely want to stop that evasion of the Act not only in spirit but also in practice. That is what we want to stop. So, that argument does not hold good either. Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang went on to say, "Why should you penalise these transactions, are they dishonest?" That is just the reason why we are making this law because we are convinced that those transactions are dishonest and they are dishonestly meant to evade the Land Alienation Act; if that were not the position it would not have been necessary for us to come forward with this measure because then, if the Land Alienation Act had not been evaded, it would have been allowed to function as the framers of that Act intended it to function and it would not have been necessary for us to come with so many amending measures. It is only to stop those loopholes and block those holes which have been surreptitiously introduced that it is necessary for us from time to time to bring forward these amending measures.

He also repeated the argument made by Mr. Puri that giving it retrospective effect would be a very drastic step indeed. But I have already answered that point. We are not giving this Act retrospective effect. We are merely trying to find out and rectify those departures and evasions which have been made since the passing of the Land Alienation Act.

He referred to Russia or he alleged that I had made certain references with regard to the present Russian regime and he went on to argue on that basis. I do not know from where he got that impression that I had quoted Russia in connection with this Bill. I may have mentioned the name of Russia. He went on to say that in Russia there are several other things done. I know that several other things are done in Russia, but if a measure of this kind were necessary in Russia, it would not have been necessary to face criticisms from Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang. He would probably not be there. He and several other people of his way of thinking would, under the present system of Russian Government, probably find themselves lined against a wall. (Voices from Opposition benches: Question.) But I never said that I approved of the Russian system of Government. If the Russian system means that it wants to bring up the down-trodden masses to a higher level, every one of us would sympathise with it: thus far and no farther. Beyond that I do not think we need follow the Russian example, because if we follow, several gentlemen on the opposite benches will not be in this House but would be somewhere else.

(Premier.)

Then my hon'ble friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang made an argument in passing which was met to some extent by Pir Akbar Ali. He referred to the view that this Bill is going to benefit a large number of people in this province, and then he started in his usual calculating way. He said, supposing there are ten thousand mortgagors and such benami transactions, it would mean there would be only ten thousand mortgagors whom you want to benefit. He very conveniently overlooked the fact that it is not the ten thousand mortgagors whom we want to benefit. We want to stop for ever the victimisation of the 224 lakhs of people. You cannot stop them from being victimised unless we stop these nefarious, dishonest and fraudulent transactions now resorted to. It is not in any way to benefit the ten thousand mortgagors who may or may not get the benefit. Naturally that side of the argument would not strike my hon'ble friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang. He further went on and said why penalise those people who honestly believed that they were not doing anything wrong. Now that was a very strange argument coming from one who is a lawyer, because, after all, if a hundred people commit an offence it does not in any way give immunity from law. He further elaborated his argument by saying that because a large number of people resort to this kind of offence therefore انظر الامر they should be allowed to do that kind of thing and we should countenance it. I am afraid there again he was only looking from a narrow, parochial and sectional point of view, because even if a very large number of people, may be five thousand, six thousand or seven thousand, were dishonestly inclined and thought that they could do this kind of thing with impunity, there will be several thousand victims throughout the province, and it is not proper that we should allow these people to be victimised perpetually by this kind of thing. He said if a large number of people perpetrate mal-practices like that we should countenance them because it is being done by a large number of people. He cited several rulings of High Courts and one of the Privy Council. I do not think I need enter that part of argument for, my learned friend Malik Barkat Ali in his very eloquent and excellent speech smashed to smithereens the arguments put forward by him. He proved that what he meant was not really conveyed by these rulings at all. He also quoted the case in which a gentleman called Haider was involved and he cited the ruling of one of the learned Financial Commissioners. After listening to it I came to the conclusion that this gentleman probably double-crossed the benamidar; but he got nothing and eventually the benamidar won the case. That is what I understood. Since Haider double-crossed the benamidar he deserved to be punished: that is the real point which my honourable friend has failed to understand. Benami transactions contain certain definite and specific ingredients. If an agriculturist sells his land to another agriculturist it is not benami. It is only when that agriculturist transfers his land to another agriculturist while the real beneficiary is a third person who is a non-agriculturist, it is then and then alone that a benami transaction which we want to stop, is constituted. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: You have not defined it.) He says there is nothing in the Act which would define that transaction and the transaction which we want to stop is not clearly defined in the Bill itself. Let me read to you Clause 3-A. It is laid down therein—

.....before or after the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land (Second Amendment) Act, 1938, by a member of an agricultural tribe to a member of the same agricultural tribe or of a tribe in the same group, but the effect of the transaction is to pass the beneficial interest to a person who is not a member of the same tribe or of a tribe in the same group.....

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : What is beneficial interest ?

Premier : So far as I can understand, it is this. When a land is transferred in my name, I am an agriculturist, and all the produce or income from the land is enjoyed by my honourable friend opposite, that is benami transaction. That is what I understand. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Yes, that is so.) If it is benami transaction between an agriculturist and an agriculturist it will not be benami transaction under the Land Alienation Act. I am glad I have at least satisfied my honourable friend on one point. He went on further and said, as a matter of fact, by bringing forward this measure we were actually contravening the spirit and the letter of the Land Alienation Act. He said, under the Land Alienation Act a man could lease his property for 20 years but under this Act you do not even allow that. Now, my honourable friend must have been speaking with his tongue in his cheek. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I am not in the habit of doing that, I speak straight.) He said that the Bill violates the provisions of the Act and according to the spirit of the Act anybody who wanted fraudulently to evade the Act could do so. That is not the spirit of the Act. The spirit of the Act is this, that no land of an agriculturist should pass into the hands of a non-agriculturist except in accordance with the provisions of section 6 of the Act. Now that section clearly lays down that an agriculturist can mortgage his property for 20 years, farm or lease for 20 years even to a non-agriculturist. Why do not those persons honestly and straightforwardly come through the front door and say, you owe me so much money, make a farm or lease for 20 years and I will be satisfied. That is not what he does. He does not go by the front door: he goes through the back door and in the darkness of night tries to hoodwink. My honourable friend went on to say, even supposing that he commits this offence or he evades this Act, why should he be punished?

[Premier.]
 so heavily? What is that heavy punishment, I do not know. Next, he says that no compensation would be given to that person and that the property would be returned to the original owner. Would that mean that you would be heavily punishing the benamidar? His argument, if translated into other words would be this. A man has committed a theft and after stealing property worth Rs. 1,000, he is held up in a court of law and eventually gets a punishment of 10 years' transportation for life. Would my honourable friend say, now that he has been punished for 10 years for that offence, why return the stolen property to the original owner? (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Are you honest in making this comparison?) My honesty is not in question at the moment. I am merely trying to answer the argument which my honourable friend put forward, and that was, to my mind the gist of his argument, that since the property would be returned without compensation, he would be suffering from a hardship. A man has committed a theft and he is sentenced and imprisoned and the property if it had been obtained, would be returned to its original owner. Here we are not giving any punishment which a thief gets, but merely returning the property to the original owner where it has gone beyond the original owner. We are giving him a certain amount of compensation. My honourable friend, Mr. Puri, said that we were giving no compensation to the original alienee. How can you think that we are not giving any compensation? There are High Court rulings—and my honourable friend being a lawyer must know—that where a person is a party to a fraud he cannot get a benefit from that fraud himself and it is in accordance with those rulings that we are giving him no compensation.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair)

My honourable friend then went on to say that the Government were rushing these measures through as if they were panic-stricken. Now, Sir, I took a great deal of time in trying to convince my honourable friend, if that could be done, and other gentlemen in this House, that the Government had taken no hasty steps and that they had been considering this measure for some time and they had collected opinions with regard to this matter before this Bill was drafted. I do not think it would serve any purpose of mine to repeat this argument and give that information which I have already given to the House. I think that my honourable friend, if he looks at it from an unbiased point of view, will agree with me that it is time that we should try to stop the loopholes which have been bared in the body of the Land Alienation Act. Sir, the anxiety would have been clear, if some facts and figures, which my honourable colleague the Minister for Revenue wanted to quote, had been put before the house. But since you were pleased to rule that he could not put those figures, he was not in a position to place that information before the House. But I hope you will allow me to quote a few figures which will convince my honourable friend opposite. I submit that for a few months we employed benami tahsildars to find out those transactions. They have, during four months, unearthed not less than 6,697 cases which are suspected to be benami transactions. Out of these 6,697 cases—we have not yet got the figures for two divisions, that is Jullundur and Rawalpindi—but for the remaining three divisions I find that 2,473 cases only were recommended for review. That answers my honourable friend's argument, because out of nearly 7,000 cases only 2,473 were recommended for review. Therefore, he should be satisfied that only these cases would come within the category of benami cases and the remaining ones will not come clearly under that category and they have been left out.

As I have pointed out, I have made it clear to the House that it was necessary, not in the interest of agriculturists alone, but in the interest of the province as a whole, that we should proceed with this Bill with a view to stop such transactions in future. I may inform my honourable friend that the real object of the Land Alienation Act was not only to see that the agriculturist classes and proprietary classes were not expropriated out of their land and livelihood, but there was something bigger and further in their view when that Act was mooted and eventually passed. If those classes, who have got no other livelihood except their land, are exploited and if they are expropriated of their land, time might come when those people, who are full of energy, would not only be a danger to the peace of the province, but a real menace to those very classes who tried to exploit them. That was the main reason why the Land Alienation Act was enacted and that reason holds good to-day. We want to see that the Act, in its spirit and letter, is not flouted by dishonest and fraudulent people. As a matter of fact I want to avoid bloody revolution.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : May I, through you, ask one question from the Honourable Premier? Is he aware that tahsildars have actually been giving effect to the Bill before it is passed? We have heard complaints.

Premier : No. My honourable friend is not correct. They are merely finding out those cases and reporting to the collector. So, Sir, it is to avoid a repetition of those things which the framers of the Land Alienation Act did, that we are trying to do this. I am glad to say ما ايم پر گناه و تو دريا گير رحمتي. But we do not want to show any mercy to those exploiters. My honourable friend should rest assured that so far as I am concerned and my other friends on these benches are concerned, we pray that they be given light and be guided on right path. They must remember that mercy must be mercy for all and we have no mercy for those who have no mercy for the teeming millions of down-trodden people.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, I move—

That the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders Bill be passed.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved—

That the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders Bill be passed.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (East Punjab, Landholders) (Urdu): Sir, on this occasion I will also exercise the right that has been allowed to the members and speak in my own tongue. But I may assure the House that I will be very brief in what I have to say in regard to the Bill under discussion. Honourable members are aware that I gave notice of no amendment because I knew the mood in which the Government was and the attitude it had adopted towards this measure. I knew full well that even if I tried to speak against some of the provisions of the Bill, I would only be crying hoarse and getting throat trouble without any effect on the Government which had decided not to listen to wiser counsels. I, therefore, left this task to my younger colleagues. But at this last stage I feel called upon to break the ice and to say that I am opposed to the policy underlying this Bill. I very much desired that this Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon and you will remember, Sir, that I supported the motion for the circulation of the Bill. Here I may express my gratitude to the honourable member, Munshi Hari Lal, who has fully explained in his minute of dissent why some of us desired that this Bill should be circulated before it was taken up for consideration. But we could not prevail upon the Government although it is a fact that the English Act, on which the Government has relied, was placed on the Statute Book after a detailed inquiry into the conditions obtaining in that country. Perhaps honourable members are aware that the English Act, before it was passed, remained under consideration for two sessions of the Parliament and the judges, county judges, money-lenders and borrowers, in fact, the representatives of all classes of people, who were likely to be affected by that legislation, were called in evidence before it was decided to give the shape that the Bill assumed. It was not passed in a rough shod manner in which this Bill is being rushed through. I know that the Honourable Premier has tried to meet this point by saying that the opinions of all grades of officers were invited before the Bill was framed, but those opinions have not been placed before us. May be they are lying in the almirah of the Honourable Premier, but these have not been given any publicity. At any rate opportunity has not been given to us to study those opinions and to form our own opinion about them. If the Bill were not to be circulated the proper course for the Government was to have published those opinions to enable the members and the public to judge the necessity for such a Bill. But the Government did not even adopt that course and I do not know why.

The Honourable Premier has assured time and again that this Bill is only intended to weed out dishonest money-lenders and to help and raise the status of the honest money-lenders. But I feel that the effect of this Bill will be quite the reverse of what the Government intends to produce. Let me explain myself. I need not say that, luckily I have never borrowed nor lent, but all the same, I know the general condition of the people of the province. I know that there is a very large number of persons in the province who belong to very high families and who are perfect gentlemen and who have sometimes to borrow and even lend. And I may also say that they do not borrow or lend because they are fond of taking or giving interest but because they want to help one another. Now if this Bill is passed, and it is bound to be passed, such persons will consider it a disgrace to be dragged to the courts and be adjudged money-lenders by the courts. They will rather give up lending than get themselves registered as money-lenders. It will happen particularly so because it has been left to the discretion of the courts to decide as to who is a regular money-lender and who is not. This Bill will prove very harmful to the simple-minded sabukars in the villages.

Premier : Are they really simple-minded ?

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Yes, many of them. And so far as the clever money-lenders are concerned, you can do no harm to them. They know how to evade the provisions of any law that you may pass. But so far as the simple-minded money-lenders are concerned, they will find it impossible to comply with the provisions of this Bill as they have found it impossible to comply with the provisions of the Regulation of Accounts Act and other similar Acts. I am very much doubtful whether the petty dharwanis in the villages, who occasionally also lend money to those who come to ask for loans from them, will be able to take the trouble of getting out licences and getting themselves registered. The result will be that such money-lenders will be deprived of their profession. But leaving aside the fact that such petty money-lenders will be deprived of their profession and will perhaps be thrown in the streets to beg for their living, the borrowers will be put to a very great difficulty. No money-lender, with even a little sense about him, will be prepared to advance loans to them without the security of ornaments and it is now an open secret that the poor zamindars have been left with few ornaments.

Dr. Sant Ram Seth : They have been left with no ornaments at all. All that they had has been sold to pay off the land revenue.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Then it will be still more difficult for the zamindars to get any advances and I fail to understand how it is intended to raise the standard of living of the peasants, for which so much fuss is being made and instructions are being issued every day that mosquito nets should be purchased and houses should be kept clean and well ventilated. If their credit is destroyed how will it be possible for them to raise their standard of living ?

Minister for Development : By passing the Marketing Bill.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : That will be seen when it comes and passed. But till then I must say that the object intended to be secured by this Bill, will never be secured. I know that it is only a lip sympathy that is being shown to the zamindars and this Bill will not go a long way to ameliorate their condition.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker left the chair and it was occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker.)

As the credit of the zamindar will be crippled as a result of such measures and all the avenues of raising money will have been closed for him, I am sure he himself will feel fed up with these measures after the lapse of eight or ten years. He will have no reason to thank my honourable friend the Premier for enacting such measures one after another and will turn round and read this verse disappointedly :—

چہ زلفم آدم بونوائے تو کہ ہنوز تیر جھانے تو
بدلم نکرده بکے مگر ز قہانے او دگرے رسد (بیدل)

I have to refer yet to another thing before I sit down and it is this. In bringing forward such measures the Premier seems to have followed in the rut of a fashion which has been in vogue these days. As such measures have been introduced by other provincial Governments too, he has tried to follow in their foot-steps. Before proceeding to follow these Governments in hot haste, he ought to have closely and carefully examined the effects of these measures in other provinces. I am sorry that I am obliged to say that he has done nothing of the kind. With these words, I oppose this measure.

Chaudhri Muhammad Hussain (Gujranwala East, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, the Honourable Premier deserves our heartfelt thanks for having shown commendable coolness of mind in the face of vehement opposition which he had to face both in the press and on the platform of a certain section of the people, for having introduced this measure and others of its kind. In fact such measures were long overdue.

An honourable member: When should they have been passed?

Chaudhri Muhammad Hussain: They ought to have been passed even with the inauguration of the last reforms. At least they ought to have been enacted somewhere in 1923. It is a well-known fact that fraudulent transactions are on the increase on account of the activities of a dishonest section of sahukars. In spite of all this the present measure is being opposed. This should never be done. This measure has not been conceived in a communal spirit. It will affect Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs alike. It is meant to eradicate corruption from the money-lending business and it will operate only in those cases where corruption is found rampant. All the demonstrations, protests and kartihs, therefore, which have been carried on to show indignation against the introduction of this measure, are meaningless. The Government should ignore them. They are intended simply to shield dishonest sahukars. All opposition to this measure seems to be directed against reason itself. After all what is the real harm in turning a dishonest sahukar out of the profession? How can you justify the appellation 'Black Bill' used in the case of the present measure?

Then, I have to say something about the attitude of the Congress benches vis-à-vis this measure. Since 1927 when provincial autonomy was introduced and the Congress entered the legislature these worthies have been chattering from house-tops that they were out to help the poor and the needy and that they were the best friends of the labourer and the petty peasant. Here was an occasion to test the genuineness of their sympathy for the poor and down-trodden classes of the province—the labourers and the zamindars. But throughout the time these measures, calculated to benefit the zamindars and poor labourers who are in debt, have been on the anvil of this legislature, they have either maintained significant silence or have tabled amendments meant to defeat the purpose of these Bills. It was only the Unionist party which includes zamindars and the kith and kin of zamindars that stood firmly and solidly behind these Bills.

Begum Rashida Latif Baji : Not only the zamindar members, but urban members too supported these measures from these benches.

Chaudhri Muhammad Hussain : Much heat has been caused over the supposed handing over of more powers to the collector. But in fact all the powers are left in the hands of the civil court. Clause 6 clearly lays down that the collector will make his decision about the cancellation of a licence on the basis of a certified judgment of the civil court. What then remains there to complain of I fail to understand.

The first ground on which the licence of the money-lender may be cancelled by the collector as laid down in clause 6 is that it is held by a court that the money-lender has contravened the provisions of section 8 of the Regulation of Accounts Act. It is clear, therefore, that this power is vested in the court and not in the collector. The second ground is that a money-lender has had his suit dismissed, in whole or in part under section 87 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act. This again is the power which is virtually exercised by a civil court. The collector has only to act in accordance with the findings of the court.

The third ground is that the money-lender has had his suit dismissed with the finding that he has made dishonestly or fraudulently a material alteration in any document relating to a loan. In view of these provisions which are quite clear, I cannot understand, for the life of me, how any person is justified in complaining that the collector has been given too much power. Moreover the collectors have got more experience in these matters as compared with the civil courts. They go on tour in their sloqa. They are well acquainted with the people concerned, and they know perfectly well what sahukars generally do.

Under these circumstances, I think, it is proper and just if these authorities are vested in them. So far as the penalty is concerned, I would like to submit that it is not so severe and hard as it has been stated from the opposite benches.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh (Hoshiarpur West, General, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, my learned friend has tried to bring forward some allegations against the Congress Party.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : Sir, the Opposition sent in very useful Bills during the last session, viz., the reduction of land revenue at the rate of Rs. 5 per hundred and anti-begar Bill which proposed to stop begar.

taken from poor Ashbuts, but the present Government that profess to be the friends of the zamindars threw them in the waste paper basket. Sir, I beg to reply to them first and then I would take up the motion under consideration.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Order, order. The honourable member has no right to give a reply to something irrelevant said by other members.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : Now, Sir, I want to point out the object of this Bill with which the Unionist Government has brought this measure before the House. Much has been said on this Bill from both sides and the Government has been pleased to submit while quoting the report of the Reserve Bank that so long as restrictions are not imposed on sahukars dishonest money-lending would not stop. Let me make an important observation in this respect saying that the foremost object of the British Government is to stop direct money-lending so that the Reserve Bank may prosper. As sahukar stands in the way of the prosperity of the Bank, therefore, the British Government want to remove it any way and it is their heart's desire that the people of India may invest their money in this Bank. The British Government as you might be aware, requested money-lenders and Merchants' Association sometime ago, to the effect that they should not open their accounts with mahajans or private money-lenders but they should invest their money in the Reserve Bank and borrow from them. We understand this policy of the Reserve Bank perfectly well, why the people were requested to invest their money with them. It means that rifles and machine-guns for the use of the British Government may be purchased in order to strengthen them for the next war. What a marvellous policy it is! Now I want to draw your attention to the provinces where the Congress is in majority. I admit that Money-lending Bills have been introduced in those provinces, too, but the object behind them is quite different from the object of this Bill. Strictly speaking what the British Raj could not achieve during the past many years is going to be achieved now through the present so-called zamindara Government of the Punjab. Another object of the proposed Bill is that lands may be mortgaged with big-bellied zamindars and petty zamindars may thus be deprived of their lands. In short I would like to submit that our sympathetic Government want to see this land of the five rivers in the strong grip of the talukdars like the United Provinces. Fortunately our Punjab despite these undue attempts on the part of the Government cannot be sold to big landlords and rural magnates. (Cheers.) But our friends sitting on the Treasury benches have now compelled the small zamindar neither to mortgage his land to a petty zamindar nor to borrow money from a money-lender but, if some necessity arises, he shall have either to sell his land to a big zamindar or to borrow money from him. Had the Government introduced a Bill in the interests of agriculturists or managed to lend money to the zamindar at the rate of 3 or 4 percent., we would have agreed to their proposals. Let me assure them that we would have been one with them if they had stopped dishonest money-lending and made some adequate and efficient arrangements for lending money at comparatively lower rate of interest to zamindars. But how deplorable it is that the policy of our Government is dictated by agents of the English bourgeois Government. The Honourable Premier has remarked that the money-lender is dishonest and further stated that these were the advantages of the British rule that they were removing that evil from the country. I think, this does not lie in the mouth of our Honourable Premier who has been working as a piece in the machinery of the British Government for the last few years. To-day he says the money-lender is dishonest. May I make bold to say how the Honourable Premier is honest?

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should not impute motives.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : I am not imputing motives, Sir, but I am speaking about the import of the Bill. I beg your permission to criticise the objects of the Government underlying this Bill. Let me ask the Government whether they have so far learned one thing only, viz., to give the dog a bad name and hang him? (Cheers). If they are honestly going to give relief to kisans, they may rest assured that they will have the full support of the Congress. But this policy which the Government is going to adopt, we are certain, would not prove useful for zamindars, and if the Government says so, they are guilty of down-right deception, fraud and petty-fogging. We made one submission the other day to the effect that the authority of granting licences might be vested in tahsildars and a money-lender might get his licence on sending an application to him from his village. But the Government did not agree to it and said 'No'. If a man resides in a village which is situated 70 miles away from one side and 40 miles away from the other, from a district, say Hoshiarpur, he shall have to present himself personally before the deputy commissioner of the district for taking a licence. I appreciate these facilities provided to money-lenders.

I would like to submit that it is a conviction with us that zamindars can prosper in one way only and that is this. If the Punjab Government take serious steps to lend them money at a lower rate of interest which they may conveniently pay, I am sure only this measure if seriously taken would improve their plight a lot. Had our Government done so, we would have been convinced of their honesty and good intentions. My next submission is that if our Government declare zamindars, tillers of the soil, statutory agriculturists and that non-agriculturists cannot take money-lending as a profession, and after establishing branches of the Reserve Bank in various places begin to lend money to needy zamindars at a lower rate of interest, we would be the last persons to utter a single word against the present Government. But really speaking they are not playing a fair game with the province. As my learned friend Raja Sahib has stated, this is only a lip sympathy. I do not believe that the zamindar would be able to get shelter and safety behind the proposed Bill, if it becomes an Act.

I fail to understand what relief this Bill will give to the country. In a way the Regulation of Accounts Act is a much more salutary measure than the present Bill. In the Regulation of Accounts Act, a creditor is compelled to present his six-monthly accounts to the debtor and clearly mention therein the amount of the principal and the exact amount of the interest. But may I ask what benefit will accrue to the debtors from the proposed measure? It will lead to only this that a creditor will advance Rs. 100 and get a receipt for Rs. 500 from the debtor who will affix his thumb-impression on the bahi. By passing this measure in this way the Government will be compelling the debt-ridden and impoverished agriculturists to offer their very last drop of blood to the money-lenders.

I, for one, do not object to the Government freely passing this measure, but let them for God's sake arrange that the poor agriculturists may be able to borrow at cheaper rates of interest. We are crying ourselves hoarse in telling the Government that this Bill is not going to benefit the poor zamindars. The Opposition is foreseeing this danger and is expressing its warning in unmistakable terms. But no one listens to the cry of a man where drums are being beaten...

In the end, I may sound a note of warning to the Honourable the Premier. There is no doubt that he is at the helm of affairs in this province. But let him remember my prophecy that these Bills will cause a civil war among the various classes in the Punjab and will lead to a bloody revolution. Let him be ready to face that consequence. His attitude is quite unintelligible. On the one hand he gets meetings of the Muslim League held and obtains the support of the Muslim Leaguers in favour of these Bills, and on the other hand he claims to be the head of the national Government in the province. But we do not raise any objection to that. I wish to answer those who ask why the Congress is observing silence on this important occasion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh: Sir, I have well-nigh finished my speech. One word more and I have done. Let the Government pass this measure on their own responsibility. The Congress will not be responsible for its good or bad consequences. The Government will be solely responsible for them. We consider this Bill defective and yet support the Government in the hope that some little good may be done to the kisans of the province.

Shaikh Karamat Ali (Nankana Sahib, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, being a non-agriculturist myself I am naturally diffident in commenting upon the irregularities that the people belonging to my own group commit in their business of money-lending. They might well expect me to support their cause in this House but I cannot help speaking the truth at this moment. The time has come when we should rise above our class prejudices and join our heads together in order to deliver the impoverished and debt-ridden agriculturists of their sufferings. But what do we find in this House? I am surprised to note that my non-agriculturist brethren are opposing the Money-lenders' Bill which aims at improving the business of money-lending by trying to weed out the dishonest money-lenders. Instead of lending their wholehearted support to this salutary measure, my honourable friends sitting on the opposite benches are raising a storm of objections against this Bill. But when we examine their objections, we find that they are based on mere sentiments. In fact they have not been able to level any serious objection against the principle underlying this Bill. All their objections boil down to this that the penalties proposed to be meted out to the offending money-lenders are rather severe. Again, much heat has been caused over the question of supposed delegation of more powers to the collectors. But I want to ask from them whether they have the audacity to deny the necessity for the passing of such a measure. As a matter of fact a legislation of this character was long over-due. But my honourable friend Diwan Bahadar Raja Narendra Nath has observed that the Government have brought forward this measure merely because of the fashion that has been set in other provinces, and not out of any genuine necessity. With due deference to my honourable friend I would like to reply to this charge in an Urdu couplet which says :—

کسی کی جان گئی آپ کی ادا نہیں

(Laughter).

Surely this charge cannot hold water because the agriculturists of this province have almost been ruined by the dishonest money-lenders, and still Raja Sahib believes that it is following the fashion and not because of any genuine necessity that the Government has now brought forward this measure. Just imagine the hardship which the tiller of the soil has to suffer in order to cultivate his field. He works under the scorching heat of the summer sun and he has also to go about his fields in the icy-cold nights of winter. But the produce which he gets after these troubles passes on to the money-lenders leaving the cultivators no richer than before. The hard-earned money of the peasants goes to provide comforts to the sabukars who have to do no hard work. The dishonest money-lenders have squeezed out the very blood of the agriculturists and, in fact, are eating into their vitals. It is this state of affairs that has necessitated the introduction of this Bill. I would, therefore, address the following Persian couplet to those who object to this Bill.

اے باد صبا این دم آوردہ تست

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Shaikh Karamat Ali : Sir, I am trying to explain the necessity for this Bill. I may observe in this connection that one of the objects of this Bill as laid down in the statement of objects and reasons, is that some money-lenders indulge in malpractices and commit dishonesty in the course of their business. The time has come when these dishonest money-lenders should be weeded out and their highly objectionable activities should be brought to an end. They have been sucking the very blood of the poor agriculturists, and in fact they have not realised that the poor victims of their nefarious activities are human beings after all and deserve humane treatment at their hands. There is a limit to human patience. The agriculturists being ignorant and having only the knowledge of affixing their thumb-impression, know nothing of the extent of their loss or of the misery to which they are drifting. The result is that the clever bania seldom allows him to get out of his clutches and the poor zamindar practically exhausts his whole life time in paying off his dues and the tillers of the soil are completely impoverished. The money-lender has two sets of bahis, one for genuine transactions and the other for fraudulent purposes. The innocent cultivators readily affix their thumb-impressions on whatever paper the money-lender offers them. In this way their debts get multiplied beyond all reasonable limits. The produce which he pays to the money-lender is nowhere entered in the batia with the result that the debts could never be paid off. Another malpractice resorted to by the banias is that if they lend one hundred rupees to the zamindar they make an entry of rupees two hundred apart from interest which certainly is at usurious rates against the name of the agriculturist. Thus the whole of the yearly produce of the cultivators go into the hands of the money-lenders and yet the debts show absolutely no decrease. On the other hand the debts would ever show a tendency towards increase. One may reasonably ask, where have the earnings of the zamindars gone? They lead a simple life but still they have no savings at all. It is sometimes argued that zamindars live a luxurious life and that is why they always remain debt-ridden. It is hardly fair, because only 5 per cent. of the agriculturists or even less might be indulging in luxuries and 95 per cent. agriculturists live only from hand to mouth. They cannot even get one square meal a day. Luxuries are quite unknown to them. They cannot even enjoy a sound sleep.

In order to have just an idea of the havoc these money-lenders have wrought, allow me, Sir, to describe the way in which accounts are kept. I will not go into minute details but will be content with telling you how the illiterate tiller of the soil has been robbed of his earnings in the past. One shop-keeper would call another shop-keeper—a chip of the same block—in order to satisfy the zamindar that his accounts are correct. This second shop-keeper would assure the zamindar that there is nothing wrong with the book-keeping. At this stage the zamindar is often entertained with a cold drink which assures the innocent man that the bania is very sympathetic towards him. It will not be out of place to mention that the money-lender would say at this time that 6 multiplied by 6 equals 66 and thus the debt of the zamindar would multiply out of proportion to any calculations. Let me make it clear that it does not give me any pleasure to mention these malpractices of the non-agriculturists. I am their kith and kin and my own group fellows have been doing this. The small courtesies shown to the zamindars are intended to conceal the wrong arithmetic. Such are the tactics used by dishonest money-lenders to rob the innocent zamindars of their hard-earned money. As a result of these machinations on the part of the clever bania the poor cultivator is rendered destitute. The butter, grain and all other agricultural produce pass into the hands of the money-lenders and the zamindar is left to lassi alone.

Allow me, Sir, to narrate a story in order to illustrate the way in which the dishonest money-lenders have been fleecing and cheating the illiterate cultivators. There was a poor zamindar, Damri by name in a village. A bania wanted to entrap him and give him some debt. But he was a man of plain habits. The bania wanted to show him the way to luxuries and with this end in view he asked him one day whether he had ever tasted the hemp-water (Sardai). The poor fellow shook his head and replied that he had never tasted any drink except lassi. Damri drank one day Sardai from the shop of the sahukar and he got used to it. The price of that Sardai was only one damri and the sahukar wrote his accounts in the following way:—Damri de sardai Damri le gaya. In this way the poor Jat daily drank one sardai and the sahukar continued writing his accounts in the above-mentioned form.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member is not discussing the motion.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Is this an amusement hall that the honourable member has got up to entertain or amuse us? It is certainly not a theatre.

Shaikh Karamat Ali: Sir, I was giving reasons why this Bill has been introduced in this House.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member should discuss the contents of the Bill.

Shaikh Karamat Ali: I was drawing your attention to the reasons which led the Government to introduce a Bill the object of which is to control money-lending transactions and to check the malpractices on the part of certain dishonest money-lenders. In order to illustrate my point I was citing the example of a Jat named Damri. Well Sir, that sabukar daily wrote against the name of that Jat that, "Damri de Sardai Damri le gaya". In this way when after a considerable time the accounts of the Jat were settled, it was found out that Damri owed many thousands of rupees to that sabukar. The poor Jat was astounded to know that his debt had assumed such proportions, while in fact he never drank sardai costing more than one pie and he was astonished to know how these two pies have been noted down against his name daily. Such are the ways of the money-lenders and thus they cheat and defraud the poor and simple peasants of their hard earned money, and do not allow them to enjoy the fruits of their hard labour. The result of this cheating is that the poor peasants cannot give anything to their children or to their wives to eat. When the time of harvesting comes the bania reaches the spot and takes away every grain of corn and leaves the wretched kisan in the lurch. May I question my friends opposite whether this state of affairs is not sufficient to move the Government to introduce such a Bill?

There is no denying the fact that our Honourable Premier belongs to the class about which we know full well, that they have for centuries fallen an easy prey to the cunning ways of the fraudulent and dishonest sabukars. That is the reason which has compelled him to move such a Bill, which in fact means nothing more than an attempt to extricate the poor kisan from the jaws of death and destruction. Had he not belonged to that class and known their pitiable condition, I am sure, he might have surely agreed to the points put forward by friends opposite.

After all, what is this Bill? I may submit that the object of this Bill is merely to register the money-lenders and to regulate money-lending business so that the money-lenders may not contravene section 8 of the Regulation of Accounts Act, and they should not charge high rates of interest and that they should keep their accounts honestly and properly. This is in a nutshell the object of this Bill. May I ask my honourable friends opposite, what is the harm in moving such a Bill? Over and over again this argument has been advanced by the supporters of the money-lenders that if the provisions of this Bill were enforced the money-lenders would be forced to leave this business of money-lending. May I question them whether it is fair to raise such a contention? This only means that if steps are taken for reforming and regularising the money-lenders then the only way of showing their appreciation of such honest legislation as the present measure is that they would give up their calling rather than continue it. Is it fair to say like this? This is absolutely a flimsy argument and in my opinion there is no justification for advancing it. I would have regarded them a group of really brave people if they had been open-minded enough to accept this Bill and show a sense of revolt against dishonest and fraudulent practices. But, Sir, they have not done so and are on the other hand vehemently opposing this Bill.

I have listened to the arguments of Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath. He is an old veteran politician but I never expected that he would advance such an incogent argument. He has stated in the course of his speech that if the provisions of this Bill were given effect to, then the business of the money-lenders would be stopped because they would feel it as an insult to them to get the required licence and registration. But may I question him, what is the harm, shame or dishonesty in doing a thing which is simply straight and honest? I would like to illustrate my point by citing an example. Suppose for a minute that section 420 were not in the Indian Penal Code and somebody proposes to include it in the Indian Penal Code, would that inclusion be objected to merely on the score that it is likely to cast aspersions on the character of the public? If that be so, I will say unhesitatingly that their attitude of non-co-operation with honest and straight measures would strongly be condemned and deprecated by fair-minded and honest folk. Would it be fair and just opposition? In my opinion this would mean nothing more than this that they in fact wish that such a section should not be included in the Indian Penal Code which would bring to light their misdeeds. Every one is aware of the fact that the frauds and dishonesties of the money-lenders have assumed such high proportions that a great necessity is felt for putting an end to their malpractices.

The second argument that has been advanced against this Bill is that honest men will stop lending and borrowing money. I very respectfully invite the attention of Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath to the fact that according to this Bill a money-lender is a person who carries on the business of advancing loans. This does not mean that two friends who lend or borrow money occasionally would also be required to obtain licences. Nor do I think that the authors of this Bill would include them in the class of money-lenders. No court is presumed to proceed from motives of rancour on the decision of these questions whether certain stray transactions can be included in the category of money-lending. This argument practically holds no water.

Then my friend Chaudhri Kartar Singh stated in the course of his speech that this Bill has been moved merely to give effect to the recommendations of the Reserve Bank and thus they want to give undue importance to that Bank. I am constrained to remark that I have not been able to understand the logic of his argument. Probably he does not know that the said Bank was floated at the express request of the Indians. Anybody who carries on the business of advancing loans will not leave his business merely because rules have been framed according to which he should do his business. He is used to that profession and I am confident that he would never give it up. My friends say that this Bill is likely to work a great hardship on the money-lenders. I say, think for a while the condition of that villager who works in the hottest of months and who keeps awake in the coldest of the winter nights and who has physical privations such as his bullocks dying and he has not got money or means enough to buy another instantaneously. In fact he has nothing to fall back upon. This Bill has been moved merely to give him a bit of relief. But my friends over there say that if such laws are passed, the consequence would be that the money-lender would be disheartened. I have not been able to find out what particular section in the Bill is obnoxious to them. There is only one thing that may be pinching them and that is the fee of Rs. 5 which the money-lenders would be required to pay for getting themselves registered. My honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang has been laying a great stress on this fee of Rs. 5. He has remarked that if this Bill is not a fiscal measure, why the Government has provided in it a fee of Rs. 5 and not a fee of rupee one which would be sufficient thus leaving four rupees to the poor money-lender to feed himself upon. Sir, when he used the word "poor" for the money-lenders I was greatly astonished and personally would not like to include the money-lenders among the class of those poor people. It is a misnomer to call a bania "helpless". I am unable to understand how by paying Rs. 5 to the Government he will become the poorer thereby.

The fact is this that these money-lenders can make a lot of money even from a few rupees. In fact there appears to be a dormant idea in the mind of my friend Sir Narang that by the reduction of registration fee to one rupee only, the money-lender would be saving to himself rupees four, which he must naturally invest in lending to the zamindar or others to bring him interest. (Loud laughter and cheers.) I am of the opinion that if a bania is given even Rs. 5 he can very well make his life thereby. I have seen many money-lenders who started their business with small sums say only two rupees, and made plenty out of the small beginning by investing on interest amongst the simple village folk. What they did was that they bought their souda for one and half rupees and reserved annas eight for lending to other people on interest. In a few years they amassed sufficient wealth and then after some time they would run to Sheikhpura or some other colony town, to purchase a residential site for a handsome price with a view to build a palatial bungalow on it for rental purposes.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member is not speaking to the motion.

Shaikh Karamat Ali: Sir, objection has been raised that the collector should not be given powers to decide such cases and in support of this objection it has been said that accustomed as these collectors are to issuing orders as executive heads of the administration in the district they will not be able to do full justice to the money-lenders particularly in cases of cancellation of licences. But my friends who have raised this objection perhaps are not aware that a person comes to have an attitude of mind according to the circumstances and the atmosphere in which he happens to live and move about and, therefore, even if it be conceded that the collectors should decide such cases as a court, it will make no difference. And the reason is obvious. Even as a court a collector will act in the same manner as he would have acted as a collector because, as I have said, he has come to have a certain attitude of mind by working continuously in a particular manner as a collector for a very long time. Of course there would have been some sense if it were asked that these cases should be entrusted to senior sub-judges or district judges.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : That also was asked for by the Congress people.

Shaikh Karamat Ali : But even the senior sub-judges are not free from bias and their communal outlook has not changed so far.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : And the collectors are angels. Are they ?

Shaikh Karamat Ali : So far as my own experience goes I have seen them going thoroughly into every case and deciding them definitely on their merits. I have had to conduct many mutation cases before many a collector and I have found them never acting as some of my honourable friends fear they would act. Therefore the gentlemen who have raised this objection need have no fears on that score.

Now I proceed to say something with regard to the speech of my honourable friend Chaudhri Kartar Singh. He was pleased to say that this Bill was intended to crush the money-lenders and thereby to help the Reserve Bank. How absurd and unreasonable is this view on the very face of it ? My honourable friend appears to be labouring under a misunderstanding. He seems to think that when this Bill is passed and is enforced, the money-lenders will give up their profession and will have to willy nilly deposit their money in the Reserve Bank. That, I may assure the honourable member will never happen. The money-lenders will seldom give up this profession even if many more restrictions were placed on them. And to illustrate the mentality of these money-lenders I may relate the story of a sahukar in one of the villages in Siakot district. It happened that one night a number of dacoits managed to enter into the house of a sahukar and at the point of a sword or a revolver demanded from him the keys of his safe where he used to keep his bahis and cash. I may as well tell you that among the dacoits were those persons who owed debts to him and who knew that many extortionate, and unconscionable entries had been made in those bahis in their accounts. That night the son of that sahukar happened to be with his father and that boy, who had not read much and who, at any rate had not received higher education but was sensible enough in his simple and innocent way asked his father as to why he does not leave this profession which is a source of so great a trouble and botheration and which always keeps the sword hanging over his head. The reply that he gave to his son is worthy of note. He said that unless he were killed and as long as there was even a little spark of life left, he would not be prepared to give up that profession. The mysterious charms of this calling far exceed in value the occasional risks involved. He further told his son that a better profession than that could not be found on this earth. It brings not only money, but brings plenty without trouble. There are no worries, no difficulties and no hard work. You have only to keep sitting in ease and appreciate the marvellous, automatic and mechanical results of the working of the bahis. Therefore, my friends may rest assured that this Bill and even many more similar in nature will not deter the sahukars from following this profession. There is no doubt about it that this Bill is intended to place some restrictions on the activities of the money-lenders and particularly on the activities of the dishonest money-lenders and that no secret has been made of it even by the sponsors of this Bill. But that is no reason why we should raise so much hue and cry over it. On the other hand we, who belong to the money-lending classes or their representatives and who are very well read and who claim to have reached a higher standard of morality, should conduct ourselves and ask our brethren to conduct themselves in such a manner as to earn a good name for the profession and make it popular among the people. We should try to see that all irregularities, malpractices and cheating become a thing of the past and if we can do that, these restrictions which appear at present to cut us to the quick, will appear to be only certain wholesome regulations and there will be no occasion to cry over them or rue the fate.

I may as well assure those who are opposed to this Bill that it has not been brought forward by way of a joke or in a haphazard manner. It is the result of the feelings that those responsible for it have in the matter. I know that the hearts of those who have sponsored this Bill and who at present occupy the Ministerial offices are torn with what they have been seeing in the country side. They have known and seen poverty, misfortune and misery among the people who are being victimised by the money-lenders and it is their legitimate desire that these people should be helped to get out of that deep-dug slough of misery and misfortune. Therefore we should all welcome this step and it is in our own interest that we should welcome it because no trader, no lawyer and no doctor can flourish if these poor zamindars and debtors are allowed to be victimised by the money-lenders for all their lives and are eventually driven to the verge of extinction. Some of my friends, who have pleaded the cause of the sahukars have said that they are very good at heart and cannot even tolerate the idea of giving trouble to anybody. This has reminded me of a verse which is as follows:—

سنگین دل است چه چه بظاہر • لائیم است
صائب درون • بندہ بین • بندہ دارہ را

My friends who have been misled to believe this, have not seen them from within, where they are as hard as that binaca in the cotton. We who live in the towns know very little what a miserable life the poor zamindars lead. It is up to us, who enjoy all amenities of life and who have little worries, to help the Government in improving the miserable lot of our brethren in the villages.

Begum Rashida Latif Baji: On a point of order, Sir. Is it fair for the honourable member to attack the urban people again and again?

Shahk Karamat Ali: I bow to the objection raised by the lady member. It is not at all my intention to say anything to offend the feelings of the people living in the towns. I was only saying that it is their duty to help the Government in bringing up the people in the villages to the same level which they have already reached and not try to stand in the way of the Government bringing about these reforms. In fact by townspeople I meant the money-lenders and their representatives. With these words I strongly support the motion before the House (cheers).

Lala Sita Ram (Trade Union, Labour) (Urdu): Sir, it is a pity that my honourable friend who has just finished his speech has been allowed to make such irresponsible remarks in his speech on such an important matter. All the time he spoke, he tried to present before the House that dark picture about money-lending which is certainly a thing of the past and I think I shall be wasting the time of the House if I try to dwell upon the same stale subject.

I have already said many a time before, that if this Bill was meant to punish the dishonest money-lender I, for one, would not defend him though of course I must plead that the punishment proposed should be commensurate with the offence committed. But my grievance is that whereas there are two classes of money-lenders, honest and dishonest ones, you have provided in this Bill largely for the punishment of the honest money-lenders.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani: Now, say something about labour.

Lala Sita Ram: I have already pointed out that this measure hits labour as well. When capital is withdrawn, who will care for labour? My honourable friend should wait to hear from me a lot about labour too and I hope that when I propose something for their betterment my honourable friend will not desert me. I wanted to tell you that if you had any intention to encourage the honest money-lender you should have agreed to my amendment which I moved to exempt the deposits made with money-lenders from the application of the word 'loan' just as you have agreed to make an exception in the case of monies deposited with banks and companies. But you did not accept my amendment. Then, it was claimed by the Government that it was not their intention to raise taxation by passing this Bill. But the honest money-lenders have not been exempted from the registration fee and the licence fee. Even if on the authority of the Income-tax department a money-lender is able to establish that he has been keeping regular accounts and has not charged exorbitant rates of interest, you are not prepared to exempt him from the afore-mentioned exactions. Is it what you call encouraging the honest money-lender? Let me in this connection tell you that sometimes the money-lender may not think it worth while to send the six-monthly accounts in the case of some debtors as he knows that no interest is forthcoming from such borrowers. But his licence is cancelled if he repeats this mistake the second time although he is prepared to forego his interest for that period. Is it not just and fair, I ask, to make some exemption in the case of this man in view of the fact that he had no mind to charge any interest?

I refuse to admit that a sahukar can charge exorbitant rates of interest these days without the connivance of the debtor. No one who raises a loan for productive purposes is prepared to pay exorbitant rates of interest. For instance, if a person takes a loan of one thousand rupees for business, he will never be prepared to pay 15 per cent. or even 16 per cent. I shall tell you who agrees to these exorbitant rates of interest or who suffers himself to be charged at these rates. He is the person who drinks or gambles. This is the type of debtor who borrows a hundred and executes a prom-note for a hundred and fifty or even two hundred. But this debtor is a bad character. He will go on raising money, squander it in one way or the other in drinking or gambling. When the figure of his debt mounts up to say, Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 20,000, he tries to escape payment. How does he do it? He simply asks his son to make a representation that his father is in the habit of squandering money on drink or in gambling and that his ancestral property be exempted from attachment as the son is the rightful owner and the father has no right to deprive him of the benefit of the ancestral property. Does the Government wish to protect this sort of debtor also? Then come wakf, Haq-mahar, Hibbeh, bogus transfers and mortgages and last but not the least the Insolvency Act comes to his rescue. He sells his land to a friend and then declares himself insolvent. In such cases, the creditor does not get a single penny. To say that the debtor has no position whatsoever is perfectly wrong. I would like to submit for the information of the sponsors of the Bill that this measure which they have adopted in order to crush down the dishonest money-lenders would be a help for the dishonest borrower on the other hand. He is equipped with so many weapons to defend himself with. Strictly speaking, the Government under the provisions of the proposed Bill would make the honest borrowers lose. It means that the dishonest borrowers would be encouraged on one hand and so many restrictions would be imposed on the money-lenders on the other that they would think thrice before they advance any loan even to honest borrowers. Any dishonest debtor who would acquire the services of a competent lawyer and defend himself well in the court by hook or crook, would be able to deprive the money-lender of all the capital which the debtor had borrowed from him. I am sure this enactment would largely come to their rescue. Do the Government mean to treat a dishonest borrower and an honest money-lender alike? I have already stated in the note of dissent that so far as the Government want to remove dishonest money-lenders from the province, I am at one with them. Sir, another submission of mine is that for every offence some punishment is mentioned in the Indian Penal Code and if it lacks somewhere the Government may add some new clauses to it. We do not want to shield the dishonest money-lenders. The Government may send them to jail instead of cancelling their licences, we would not speak a word for them. But my objection is that if 10 or 12 persons out of 100 are corrupt or dishonest and we pass an Act in order to reform or punish them, it would not be justified anyway if honest persons are also made to suffer on account of that legislation. Sir, in all the speeches that have been made on the floor of this House, there was one point common to them, viz., a money-lender is always dishonest. Their contention is that charging of interest is haram, but I would like to ask these honourable members that if charging of interest and living upon that income is haram then what is borrowing and not paying a pie of the borrowed capital? It is surely all the more haram. My submission is, Sir, that you make a hero out of this person. When somebody indulges in such practices and tries his utmost to defeat the money-lender in the court by hook or crook, he is encouraged and patted by everybody. The people would say to him "Bravo"! You have done well." Sir, I admit that money-lenders sometimes get more amount entered in their accounts than what they actually lend to a person, but if some persons do not pay them back a single pie out of the principal itself, then who is the more dishonest and worse cheat? I am sorry that honourable member, Pir Akbar Ali, has gone out of this House. Otherwise I would have given him a hundred and one instances in which money-lenders were deceived by the debtors. I know a person of village Badoke. I do not remember his exact name. Probably his name was Ali Akbar. He was of this sort. He used to borrow money from the money-lenders and squander it on drinks and luxuries. He was a man of no mean rank. He used to deliver speeches in public even against money-lending. To avoid payment to his lender he went so far that he declared himself insolvent and did not pay a single penny to the creditor. The people said, "This man has done well. Money-lenders should be treated like that. They are stone-hearted people etc., etc." Sir, time went on and the village community made him a hero. Even cases would come to him for settlement. The story goes that to this arbitrator there once came a case for arbitration. The point in dispute was that a certain group of crows had stolen a swan whereupon the rest of the swans sought relief from the arbitrator. They demanded the return of their stolen swan. The crows deposed that although they had nothing to say against the charge of theft which they had really committed yet they were on no account prepared to return the stolen swan. Their plea was a simple one and it was this. "Sir, we plead guilty to the charge of theft but kindly just consider how many swans they still have. This stolen swan is the only one we have got." The arbitrator decided the issue in favour of the crows.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should confine himself to the contents of the Bill.

Lala Sita Ram : I mean to explain the principle on which this Bill is based.

Adverting to the story, I may submit that the swans took this judgment very ill. In fact it was against the very rudiments of law. But the strangest part of the story is that even the crows began to cry and murmur. The arbitrator was extremely surprised to see this. He wondered that whereas the swans had a real cause for anxiety and disappointment, what had dismayed the crows. He asked both the parties to appear again before him to show cause why both were disappointed by his judgment. One party could reasonably feel aggrieved as is generally the case, but why should both be dissatisfied by his order which to him appeared quite equitable. The swans replied that their grievance was a genuine one, because he had given his order against them. Then he asked the crows, "What disappoints you in my judgment?" "Nothing but the anxiety as to who shall deliver such partial judgments in our favour when you die and are no more in our midst." (Cheers and laughter.) So let it be, Sir, with the findings of our Unionist Government. They are robbing Peter to pay Paul. They are out to fleece the rich of their wealth for no other fault of theirs except that they have wealth with them. Their wealth must be given to the poor, because, they have enough and the poor have none. This is the principle on which the Unionist Government is acting. The pity is that it has no constructive programme before it. The Government had better try to make the poor rich, and not rob the rich of their wealth if they have any. This might be the order of the barbarous society of the past but does not sound well to-day. The resources of the poor ought to be improved, instead of the rich being pulled to pieces.

Here I may narrate another story to show that the poor debtors of old are no longer simple now. An agriculturist borrowed a rupee from a money-lender who charged him 2 annas as interest and deducted it from the rupee he lent. The money-lender was glad that he had charged a high rate of interest and what is more, he had deducted it in advance. But the so-called simple-minded debtor said that he had outwitted the clever money-lender, in much as he had borrowed 14 annas from the money-lender which he had no intention to pay back. It was wholly a gain.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member is again out of order.

Lala Sita Ram : Sir, the object of this story is to show that the poor debtors whom our Government is out to protect are not quite innocent. They also defraud the money-lenders of their money by borrowing loans which they never intend to repay. Coming to the contents of the Bill I may observe that the penalties proposed in this measure are very severe in the first instance. Secondly, they are vague and indefinite. There is no precision about them. The Government may pass this Bill with the support of their sheer majority, but it is not fair and equitable. The operation of the Bill should have been confined to the limits prescribed in the amendment—that this Bill should be confined, for the present, to those money-lenders who deal with statutory agriculturist tribes—which I had given notice of, but was ruled out by you, Sir.

Syed Amjad Ali Shah : Is the honourable member in order to discuss an amendment which was ruled out of order ?

Lala Sita Ram : It would have been to the advantage of all the agriculturists and the non-agriculturists alike. Sir, even if we admit that the time has come when the debts of the agriculturists should be wiped off, or that restrictions should be placed on the business of money-lending, I would request the Government to do it by all means. But the business of money-lending among the traders and the urban classes should not be stopped. We do not want any such restrictions being placed on the business of traders and merchants.

Besides, the Unionists are not tired of saying that they are out to help the tiller of the soil. But have they made it sure that the so-called Shylocks are really all Shylocks and none aggrieved ? The Government makes nothing of the heavy losses which the money-lenders suffer on account of bad debts which have often to be written off. Who is going to compensate them for that ? Even one bad debt takes away the savings of years of money-lenders. This is never taken into account. It is a thousand pities that the Unionists have never said a soft word on this sad side of the picture. They only dilate on the so-called woes of the debtors but they do not shed a tear when a money-lender is defrauded of his hard earned money. Have you ever cared to see the bright side of money-lending ? The money-lenders very often advance loans to good people without any security for the education of their children and go a long way in making many families. They enable people, by advancing them capital, to increase their business which fetches them many times profit, and do not ask them for anything more except their reasonable interest. Are you not putting a stop to all this by this severe enactment?

One word more and I have done. The class of money-lenders is only a minority in this province. Their rights, therefore, must be safeguarded. My honourable friend Mir Maqbool Mahmood remarked a little while ago that there were 55,000 money-lenders in the Panjab.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.)

Sir, even if we suppose that there are 100 people attached to every money-lender the number of such people would come to 5,500,000. If these figures are correct, they form no minority and my submission is that you are passing a law without giving so many people any chance to say a word about it.

Mr. Speaker : What is the honourable member speaking about?

Lala Sita Ram : Sir, I was submitting that this Bill is against the money-lenders and it is being passed with all its obnoxious provisions.

Mr. Speaker : Which clause or part of the Bill is the honourable member now discussing?

Lala Sita Ram : Sir, I am discussing whether the Bill should be passed or not. It is often claimed by my friends of the Government that they are the protectors of the rights of minorities but actually they believe in 'might is right'. If they want to pass this Bill on the strength of reason they should at least allow the minority its right to place before them its view point. But if you want to pass the Bill on the strength of your majority, you may do whatever you like and we are helpless. With these words I oppose the Bill.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq (Amritsar City, Muhammadan, Urban) : Sir, I was surprised to hear the speech of my honourable friend representing the labour constituency. I was of the opinion that the representative of labour would say something in favour of labourers and would protest against the troubles and hardships which the poor labourers have to meet at the hands of the sabukars. But instead of saying anything in their favour he has thought fit to plead the cause of the money-lenders alone. I wish he had said something in favour of the poor people whom he represents here. My friend has stated in the course of his speech that if money-lenders are to be given licences they should not be deprived of them even if they contravene the provisions of the Act. Thereby he wishes to give them licence for doing any and every kind of mischief. The object of the Government by moving this Bill is to check the malpractices of the sabukars. There is no provision in this Bill which can be called harsh if applied to the honest money-lender. If my friends regard this Bill to be harsh, they should look to the laws of Manu Dharam Shastar and they would find that those laws were much more rigorous than the laws that have been framed by the present Government. At that time the business of money-lending was not a bed of roses and the rate of interest charged was not as high as is at present in vogue in this province.

[Sh. Mohd. Sadiq.]

I may submit that the modern money-lender came into existence with the advent of the British in India. For the last 100 years the British people did not even move their little finger to put a stop to the atrocious methods of the money-lenders. They practically remained silent and some of these cruel Shylocks have been charging 100 per cent. interest from the poor people of India. Now when the present Government have taken upon itself the duty of setting this bad state of affair right, my friends are pleading for the sahukars.

Besides, I may submit that there was a time when this money-lending was known as shahkara meaning thereby that it was the work of the kings and that they did money-lending in order to help the poor people. But now this has come to be a sahukaru meaning thereby that it is the work of the thieves. I do not mean that all the money-lenders are dishonest and fraudulent people, but just as there are pearls in the sea so there are good and honest money-lenders as well. But it is regrettable that just as there is dearth of pearls in the sea, so there is dearth of honest money-lenders as well.

What is the object of this Bill and what do we want? We desire that just as the banks charge a small rate of interest, in the same way these money-lenders should charge reasonable rates from the kisans. I may submit that the money-lenders now charge 18 or 25 per cent. interest from the poor people. No commercial person can afford to pay high interests, and much less can it be tolerated that a poor man should pay intolerable rates of interest which he cannot possibly repay. There is no justification for them to charge such high rates of interests. It is really inhuman to charge so high a rate of interest from people who cannot make both their ends meet. What we want is that such laws should be passed under which no one should be allowed to perpetrate dishonesty over the poor people and to defraud and cheat them. If anybody is found out contravening the provisions of the Bill he should at once be made incapable of dealing in this business and he should not be allowed to continue his nefarious business. Instead of thanking the Government my friends are blaming them that it has imposed a licence over the money-lenders. I may submit that when a lawyer enrols himself as an advocate for practising in the High Court he has to pay a fee of Rs. 700. If a fee of Rs. 5 is charged from the money-lender what is the harm in it? This fee is small as it will be levied only in view of the public interest and in order to carry on the work of the department that will be opened for seeing that the provisions of this Bill are properly followed or not.

What is the object of our moving this Bill? The object of this Bill is to lay down conditions for the honest carrying out of the business of money-lending and to punish dishonest money-lenders. Our object is not to rob the rich, but to protect the poor. Just as it is the duty of the Government to see that the poor people get sufficient to make their both ends meet, so also it is our duty that poor man is protected from the clutches of rapacious money-lender. If a rich man becomes poor by only paying a small fee then he should bless his stars only. In Great Britain many rich people have to pay 60 percent. taxes as income-tax and still they remain rich by legitimate trade. I want to draw the attention of my honourable friend Lala Sita Ram to the fact that the rich people there have to pay death duties as well. In fact Sir, the rich people in Great Britain have to pay heavy taxes from the date of their birth till death. In spite of the fact that they pay so many taxes there are millions of rich persons there. So I submit that if the money-lenders pay a sum of Rs. 5 they will not become the poorer thereby.

I really wonder why my friends have been so much upset over this Bill. They should now be prepared for something much worse. I may tell them that times are in sight when the rich people will have to part with their riches to accommodate their poor and needy fellows. My honourable friend Dr. Gokul Chand Narang shall have to give a part of his earnings from sugar to his needy neighbour and send him two or three bags of sugar.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : But you will also be required to supply durries to those who will require them.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : Why not? Some of my friends have complained that these money-lenders have certain bad debts owed from the zamindars and asked, who is going to make up the loss on account of those bad debts. I ask them, who advised them to pile up these debts by charging interest at unheard of rates? Then it was argued that some borrowers take money and squander it on drinking liquor and such other things, and it was asked, why is it that the sahukar who lent money to such a man should be penalised? We know that there are some such cases and we also know that such persons quite willingly write a promote for Rs. 200 while only a sum of Rs. 50 or at the most Rs. 100 was lent to them and we also know that such persons bring ruin not only upon themselves but also on their families and it is one of the objects of this Bill that such persons should not be allowed to ruin their lives. It is to restrict their credit and their folly that this measure and other similar measures have been brought forward.

So much hue and cry has been raised over the penalties provided in the Bill. So far as I can see the Bill provides that the licences of only such persons will be liable to cancellation who will be found to have acted fraudulently. I therefore, see no fun in this hue and cry. By the grace of God there are many honest money-lenders and them this Bill will not touch at all. Then, why is it that my friends are so much upset? I am inclined to think that there is something wrong in the matter, otherwise they should have no fears from any of the provisions of the Bill.

Mr. Speaker : Repetition should be avoided.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : I admit there are strict provisions against dishonest money-lenders, but there is no provision in the Bill which will cause hardship to any honest money-lender. Those who are opposed to this should not also lose sight of the fact that the Honourable Premier has been pleased to assure that as soon as genuine cases of hardship are brought to his notice, he will see that that hardship is at once removed by an amending legislation and I am sure that in practice these provisions will be leniently applied. This should fully satisfy my friends who really fear some harm coming to the honest money-lenders.

Grievance has been made against the powers being vested in the commissioners. My honourable friend Dr. Narang could not have forgotten that when in the old Council I asked him not to give very wide powers to the commissioners, he was pleased to say that they were officers who could be fully trusted. I do not know why he and his supporters are now so suspicious of these commissioners.

This Bill has been before the Government since 1924 and if it is not passed even now, it will be very unfortunate for the province. Some of my friends have said that many of the money-lenders have been declared insolvents during the last few years. May be it is true, but I ask them why they do not give up this profession when there are so many complaints against it. I feel and I am sure that there must be something nice and good and sweet that keeps the money-lenders stick to this profession in spite of so many complaints. Why should they not continue to stick to it when they can get every kind of amenities and big bellies to boot by following this profession? I know of a person in my own city who advanced only a few thousand rupees to a certain person and after a lapse of some time got a decree for 2½ lakhs of rupees against him. This is what compels the money-lenders to remain in the profession and they know that they cannot get so much benefit anywhere else. And need I remind my friends that even if some of the money-lenders will give up this profession, their money will go to help and flourish industries of the province and that is what we should all welcome. One word more and I have done. This Bill is to apply to all equally, whether Muslims, Hindus or Sikhs. There are money-lenders among the Muslims also and these Pathans are worse than many others. Therefore any particular community should not unnecessarily be apprehensive of this Bill. With these words I lend my whole-hearted support to this Bill.

Dr. Sir Gobal Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : The first thing I want to say is that the trading classes and the money-lending classes should now understand clearly that they can hope for nothing from this Government and they must take all the steps they can to protect themselves without looking for any assistance or relief from this Government. This Bill along with other Bills is a sufficient evidence to that effect. The next thing I want to say is that this Bill will absolutely destroy credit. They might help the poor agriculturist by all means, but it will destroy credit so far as they are concerned. It will destroy credit so far as trading classes themselves are concerned. In spite of our efforts they have not exempted the trading classes from the operations of this law. If it becomes law, it will discourage industry, it will discourage trade and let me tell you, Sir, it will end in ruining those very classes whom you want to save. That is not the way of raising the prices of agricultural produce. This is the surest way of depressing the prices of agricultural produce and you will see what the result of this Bill is when it becomes law. As Raja Sahib pointed out, it is the agriculturists themselves who will cry over it, and they will come to the Honourable Premier if he is then in his seat to repeal this law. He may take this warning which Raja Sahib who is so to say in loco parentis to him has given him. This is the advice or warning that he has given him.

I also believe that this law will lead to corruption and to dishonesty and will demoralise the people in this province whether they are traders or they are agriculturists. Next, I believe that it will encourage slavery and it will also encourage nepotism.

It will make the trading classes, the money-lenders and all others who have anything to do with monetary transactions, in this province, slaves to the collectors, and their independence and freedom of speech and freedom of action would be destroyed. This would set back the hands of the clock of political progress. This is another warning that I am giving him. I have, let me say in one or two sentences, the fullest and heartiest sympathy with the poor agriculturists. I was born among them, I have played with them, I have shared their joys and sorrows during my life in the village. I am a villager, as I have told the House before, and I cannot forget the scenes of misery, and starvation that I have seen among these poor agriculturists. No one probably knows better than I do. They may know equally well as I do, but certainly they cannot know better than myself. I cannot forget a Jat friend of mine of my age who, when the dinner time—I mean bhatta-wela—came, was given one chapati by his mother to eat. I was then sitting with him at the auloo of the well and when that one loaf of bread was given to him, there was not even salt with which to eat that bread. There was no dal, no vegetables and, as I have said, there was not even a pinch of salt. I saw that Jat friend of mine eating that bread bit by bit and drinking water from the auloo with his hands. I have never forgotten that sight although forty years have passed. These gentlemen should not think that we do not appreciate their misery and their troubles and their poverty. I have seen them and have sympathised with them but let me tell you that it is that very class whom you are now condemning as dishonest and whom the Premier, I am very sorry to say, was pleased to compare with thieves in one of his speeches to-day, it is that class, in spite of some dishonest people amongst them, which comes to the rescue of such starving people. I can say from my own experience, from my knowledge of village life, that many Jats, many agriculturists, would actually starve, their daughters would not get married, their wives would not be able to pass through their lying-in stage successfully but for this accursed bania who comes to their help at the hour of need, and that is the bania whom you are out to destroy simply because there are some dishonest people among them. You can do whatever you like, for power is in your hands, but I have no doubt that you will one day realise that you have done injustice. I would not like to waste one word on what Shaikh Karamat Ali said. He belongs as he said to a non-agriculturist class, to a money-lending class. Every one speaks from his own surroundings, from his personal knowledge. I do not know to which class of non-agriculturists he belongs. He has probably seen all this chicanery, all this fraud, all this deceit, and all this cheating going on at the hands of his own people of whom he has sufficient knowledge. I can speak from my own experience and I know that they have been honest and they would never cheat the poor agriculturists and they have always stood in good stead to them and have always helped them whenever they required help. You can do whatever you like and I would not like to say anything more. I do not want to reply to anything that Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq has said because he has said nothing new. With these words I oppose the motion.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra (Ludhiana and Ferozepore, General, Rural) : There are certain provisions in this Bill which are ultra vires and defective and should not form part of the Act. These are clause 7 and some parts of clause 6. Clause 7 deals with the procedure which has to be adopted at the time of cancellation of a certificate of a money-lender if he happens to commit some of the offences which are . . . . .

Mr. Speaker : Does the honourable member propose to move an amendment ?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : This is not the stage for moving amendments.

Mr. Speaker : Then please restrict yourself to the contents of the Bill.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Clause 7, sub-clause (1) lays down the procedure which has to be adopted by the collector for the cancellation of the licence if the money-lender happens to commit some of the offences.

Chaudhri Tika Ram : Is that clause going to be put separately to the House ?

Mr. Speaker : According to parliamentary practice when a Bill is read the third time speeches are more restricted than at the earlier stages of the Bill.

Premier : Here it is the other way about.

Mr. Speaker : According to parliamentary practice the speeches at this stage should be restricted to the contents of the Bill.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Clause 7 (1) is as follows :

7 (1) The collector may take proceedings suo moto or on the application of any person interested for the cancellation of a money-lender's licence:

Provided that no licence shall be cancelled without giving the money-lender a notice in such form as may be prescribed.

So that the proviso to this clause deals with the procedure that has to be adopted by the collector. I now confine my attention to the third and the fourth sub-clauses of clause 6. According to sub-clause (3) if after the commencement of this Act, a money-lender "has had his suit dismissed with the finding that he has made dishonestly or fraudulently a material alteration in any document relating to a loan." (Interruption). I will refer to the definition of the offence dealing with false statement or fabricating false evidence given in section 193 of the Indian Penal Code.

Mr. Speaker : I cannot allow the honourable member to go into such minor details at this stage.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : My submission is that the offence given here is identical with the offence that is given in section 193 of the Indian Penal Code. Sub-clause (iv) of this clause is—

Has had his suit dismissed with a finding that it is fraudulent.

This is a thing or an act which is an offence under sections 209 and 210 of the Indian Penal Code. With regard to the offences that are described in these sections 193, 209 and 210, for them a special procedure is laid down in the Criminal Procedure Code under section 195. According to that Code if an offence of this nature is committed, no action can be taken against the persons who committed this offence except on the complaint of the presiding officer of the court. In this case there is departure from that procedure. In these cases only on the finding of a civil court itself that a civil court comes to the conclusion that there has been a fraudulent transaction, or that there has been a material alteration, in that case the collector will follow a different procedure to try them and deprive the person of civil rights. My submission is that the procedure for this offense is already laid down in section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and as that procedure is departed and the provision given here is repugnant to that procedure, I submit that so far as these two sub-clauses are concerned, they are ultra vires in the light of section 107 and therefore they should not form part of the Bill.

Mian Abdul Rab (Jullundur South, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu):
Sir, I do not want to take much time of the House. My learned friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang stated, a few moments ago, that he understood the condition of a zamindar much better than we and further on the honourable member was pleased to cite an instance of a zamindar who was eating a piece of bread. When the honourable member cited that instance of a poor zamindar, I at once remembered a well-known saying in Punjabi—

پنہاں در آکھیا سر جتھے ہرنالہ ارتی دا ارتی

(Cheers). In spite of the fact that the honourable member is aware of the miserable condition of the zamindars, he does not want to pass this legislation. How strange and cruel! I wish the honourable member could support the proposed Bill in a befitting manner. But how deplorable it is, and I cannot help quoting a verse from Mirza Ghalib which I think would properly apply to the situation. It says—

ہوئے گل نالہ دل دود چراغ سبقت

جو تری ہزم سے نکلا سو ہریشان ہو

Sir, I do not like to indulge in the lengthy discussion regarding the different clauses of the Registration of Money-lenders Bill. But I would like to submit a few words straight off. Just imagine, there is a rich and wealthy sahukar on the one hand and on the other is a zamindar simpleton, down trodden, poverty-stricken, miserable, uneducated and what not. Sir, it behoves our Government to save the poor zamindars from the clutches of money-lenders. The business of money-lending is a profession like hundred other professions. If other professions become defective and corrupt, then we deem it our duty to improve and reform it. Why should not the present Government take similar steps to remove all those defects in money-lending profession, which have gone deep into the soil? As the circumstances when the legal profession was defective necessitated the Government to frame the Legal Practitioners Act, similarly now when the profession of money-lending has become dishonest I do not think there is any harm in passing a legislation in order to purify this profession of money-lending from all wrongs and evils that have taken roots in it.

As somebody has cut short the purport of Hir Waris Shah by saying that "the jat after all took away the jutti" similarly I would submit that the honourable members may not indulge in lengthy discussion and by way of cutting it short they may kindly let the proposed Bill pass, as it is quite simple and obvious and only those who contravene the provisions of the Bill would be penalised. That is all and I think there is no scope for any further discussion on this subject. I end my speech with a couplet which may perhaps fully explain my meaning—

یہ کہان کی دوستی ہے کہ بیٹے ہیں دوستہ نامع
کوئی چارہ ساز ہوتا کوئی غمگسار ہوتا

Sheikh Karamat Ali: On a point of personal explanation. In my absence Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, as usual, made a sly reference to me saying, "I do not know to what particular class of money-lenders Shaikh Karamat Ali belongs. The few examples that he quoted in his speech showing the malpractices on the part of some of the money-lenders were clearly of cheating in fact and I presume that he may be having an intimate connection with such a class of money-lenders." With due deference to the remarks made by him in my absence I should tell him that I showed good taste in not disclosing the name of the money-lender who was guilty of those dishonest practices to which I referred in my speech or even the caste to which that money-lender belonged. Since my friend, Sir Narang, is very keen on probing into the identity of that money-lender I may say for his personal satisfaction that he belonged to the Narang caste.

Mr. Speaker: That is no personal explanation.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, I believe everybody in this House is now getting restive and wants to get away home after the hard labours of these two days.

This Bill has been dubbed by a section of the people as a communal measure. Another section, need a stronger epithet and called it a class measure and both of them joined forces at some public conferences held by them. In a section of the press, I have noticed, it has been dubbed as a black Bill. Now, Sir, so far as the first charge, that it is a communal measure, is concerned, you are aware and every member in this House is aware that money-lending is not confined merely to one community and to one religious community. You have got Aroras, Khatrias and at the same time you have got Sheikhs, Khojas and that very virulent money-lender, the Pathan. So far as that charge is concerned, I am sure every one will agree with me that it is absolutely unwarranted and baseless to call it a class measure. My honourable friends in this House and in the previous council have been crying hoarse, whenever the question of money-lending or any other similar legislation came before the House, "what about that rapacious agricultural money-lender?" They, as a matter of fact, strongly condemn the exclusion of the agricultural money-lender from the purview of the Land Alienation Act and from other legislation with regard to money-lenders. They have themselves admitted that this profession is not confined to non-agriculturists alone. We all know and we admit that this also exists among the agriculturists. Therefore, Sir, it cannot be dubbed as a class measure either. As I have said, it is not a communal measure and it cannot be dubbed as a class measure. Now, my honourable friend also said that the agriculturist money-lender is even more rapacious; we are doing nothing to him; here is the poor non-agriculturist money-lender and everybody is trying to down him and do all manner of injustice to harm him. I can assure my honourable friend they have also this Bill before them and they must study it. It is my intention, and I have already given an undertaking to this House that this Act will not become law and will not go into the statute book until we also include that rapacious agricultural money-lender and until he also comes within the purview of the Act.

Chandhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : Why not include the agricultural money-lender now ?

Premier : When we come to that I will be able to include him also. We must take everything in turn and at the proper time. Now, so far as the agriculturist money-lender is concerned, he will not only be affected by this measure—because any money-lender whether he is an agriculturist or non-agriculturist will be subject to the provisions of this Bill, but he will also have to take out a license and shall have to get himself registered. He will be bound by every single provision of this Bill which I hope will be passed to-day. But beyond that I am going to bring him within the purview of the Land Alienation Act so as to debar him from purchasing the land of another member of the agricultural group, so that he may be brought to the same level as a non-agriculturist money-lender in every other respect.

My honourable friend Raja Sahib again referred to the English law saying that it took several years before it became the law of the land. I do not wish to repeat my arguments, but I have said that this particular measure has been before the province and before this House or its predecessor for the last 15 years and we have discussed it threadbare. As I have said, we have got over 600 opinions from bar associations, various bodies and influential associations. I do not think it is necessary for Raja Sahib to say so. Further he went on to say that this Bill is likely to kill the honest money-lender. I have said repeatedly that it is meant to cramp the style of the dishonest money-lender only. I hope that unfortunate event will not happen and I am almost certain that this unfortunate event is not likely to arise out of this Bill. As a matter of fact, an honest money-lender, as I have repeatedly said on the floor of this House, will find that this measure will be a source of strength and help to him. If there is a dishonest money-lender, he will not come in this category and he will be weeded out and elbowed out. The honourable member also referred to certain people who lend money casually to their friends and other people. He has read the Bill and I think every member of this House has read the Bill. We have so devised this measure that a casual loan will not come under its provisions. A man, who lends casually to somebody, will not under the circumstances be deemed to be carrying on the business of money-lending. There are several factors and ingredients and all those factors combined make a money-lender. He must be a money-lender, then he must advance loans and that too on interest. Casual loans have been specifically excluded. Therefore, I think that apprehension is not well founded.

Again, my honourable friend, the Raja Sahib, went on more or less to express his sympathy with what he calls the simple-minded village money-lender. I am afraid he does not understand him. I do not want to go into the description or dilate upon the merits or demerits of a village money-lender or his capacity to imbibe various rules and regulations and law. The general impression is that it is the village money-lender at whose hands the poor agriculturists have most suffered and they want to save themselves and their brethren. Although there are some simple-minded money-lenders, yet you must also remember that those who deal with them are simpler than those simple-minded village money-lenders, and they get into the clutches even of those simple-minded money-lenders. I am sure Raja Sahib will agree with me that it is only a question of degree. The simple-minded village money-lender is cleverer than the unsophisticated and ignorant villager, who has been ensnared by the money-lender and who can never come out of it, and this will go on from generation to generation, from son to great grandson. There are several such instances.

Then, he went on to say that if we enforce this law it would mean that those people who lend, will not lend money to the agriculturists except on security of ornaments and jewellery of that kind. I would submit that it is not likely to be a bad thing for the province. The result would be that the money of the money-lender will be safe, because he will have a tangible security in his hand, and the borrower will gain because when he deposits a security, the rate of interest would be less. This is a very good thing and this Act is going to produce conditions which the Raja Sahib visualised. I am sure that both the borrowers and the lenders are likely to gain and the province as a whole would gain.

Again, Raja Sahib went on to say that the Government had done nothing to devise any new measures which would increase the purchasing power of the agriculturist and that by this flimsy measure we wanted to please our constituents. I am afraid that this is somewhat personal, but I must confess frankly before Raja Sahib that I am not accused of being too generous or liberal to those people. As a matter of fact I am accused of being not generous or liberal enough, because they say that I want khush-karo Raja Sahib ko and that I do not treat them fairly because of my regard and respect for Raja Sahib. Then in the press also, it was the accusation which has been several times levelled against me (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : By ?) by a section of the press and a section of that press also which is now abusing me for bringing in this Bill. But let me assure Raja Sahib that whatever be the motives of this Government, they are not dishonest motives and we are not following this fashion or going with the tide so far as other provinces are concerned. They may be following this fashion, as he assumed, or doing it merely to keep themselves in office. But there is no such question here. We have been, as everybody is aware, trying to build for the last 15 years a structure of a legislation, which would benefit the people. We started in 1923 and in these 15 years we have built a structure, which though not magnificent, yet will be an envy of every other province in this country, and will also result in bringing prosperity and happiness to all classes of people and not only to the agriculturists. (Cheers from the Treasury benches.)

I was not here myself, but I understand that Chaudhri Kartar Singh made a speech and a somewhat irresponsible speech. He had the audacity to say something about the Reserve Bank also. I ask, what does Chaudhri Kartar Singh know about the Reserve Bank? Does he know what the Reserve Bank means and why it has been instituted? He knows nothing about it and yet he had a fling at this national institution, an institution which has been established at the express wish and desire of the people so that the finances and the fiscal policy of this country eventually—(Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt: Excluding the constitution of the Reserve Bank.) The constitution of the Reserve Bank has been approved by the Central Legislature, but I can assure my honourable friend that the directorate there consists of a majority of elected people and elected representatives and the very best brains in the country, which we could get to control the destiny of this institution, and it is meant to control the currency policy and fiscal policy eventually of this country.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is not speaking to the motion

Premier : I am merely replying to an argument.

نہم حکم خطرو جان - نہم کہ خطرو ایمان

I think I better ignore it with that indifference which it deserves.

He went on to ask, what is the use of this Bill because the sabukar will not be affected as he will evade the provisions of this Bill by paying only 100 rupees and getting the thumb-impression of the debtor for 500 rupees and so on? This is the very thing that we have been discussing for hours and hours together and we have tried our best to prevent that kind of thing. But if he thinks that our method is defective he should have come forward with some constructive suggestions.

Munshi Hari Lal : I suggest drive against illiteracy.

Premier : No doubt that would be very useful. But if my honourable friend Chaudhri Kartar Singh really meant to help us he ought to have suggested some more effective method instead of merely criticising the Bill. He went on to say that this measure was meant to benefit big zamindars although he knew it full well that this Bill would benefit everybody, zamindar and non-zamindar alike. Though the honourable representative of Labour, Lala Sita Ram, does not wish to help his constituents, in spite of that, this Bill is going to help his constituents, rich and poor alike.

An Honourable Member : What about your constituents?

Premier : I represent the same constituency as the Honourable Itaja Sahib does, but unfortunately, in this particular matter, we have not seen eye to eye. With that great deference that I have for Raja Sahib I do not want to pursue this matter. He may, probably, be doing some justice to money-lending business, but, he will permit me to say, he has done some injustice to a portion of his constituents by not supporting this measure.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I have taken a broad view.

Premier : Where he thinks that it is necessary for him to take a broad view, I would not grudge him.

Then Chaudhri Kartar Singh went on to say that if disorder took place in this country as a result of these Bills including the Bill that we are discussing now, the responsibility would entirely be of the Government. After having said that Chaudhri Kartar Singh proceeded "the Congress is [Premier.] supporting this measure; we are all for this measure." (Laughter from the Ministerial benches). If this is the way the Congress is going to support this measure, I would request the honourable member who himself has been opposing the measure from A to Z, to be more honest to himself and to his party. We find the Congress spokesmen occasionally saying that they are supporting this Bill in spite of the fact that they have been opposing certain provisions of it inch by inch.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : They are obnoxious provisions.

Premier : It is not for you to judge, it would be for the public outside to judge.

I was submitting, Sir, that most of the speech that the honourable member, Chandhri Kartar Singh, made was contrary to the creed of the party to which he belongs.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : This is very ungrateful on your part. The honourable member is not here to explain his position.

Premier : The honourable member interrupting was not in the House when Chaudhri Kartar Singh made that speech to which I am referring.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : Was the Honourable Premier himself in the House?

Premier : I have ample notes.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : Where did you get those notes from?

Premier : From my honourable colleague, Sir Sundar Singh Majithia.

I am afraid my honourable friend is feeling unnecessarily uncomfortable. I know that similar speeches have been delivered by some honourable members outside the House from certain platforms. I have information, Sir, that some of the Congress members have actually presided over the protest meetings against this Bill. They have explained the Congress position.

My honourable friend Dr. Gokul Chand Narang said that the money-lending class should not expect anything from the present Government and they should now bear the consequence of these measures. I believe that the class to which he refers are not only denouncing the present Government but also the Congress. In reality they denounce the Congress because they see that the Congress has taken a luke-warm attitude. Dr. Gokul Chand was warning those classes who have returned several representatives to this House and it is possible that some of them might have returned members of the Congress in the hope that if Congress got into power they would not be able to steer through these Bills in this House. They must have been disillusioned after having seen the luke-warm attitude of the Congress. But that is the business of my friends of the Congress and their constituents.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : Sir, is not the honourable member irrelevant in explaining the position of the Congress and discussing what an honourable member said regarding the attitude of the Congress? Let a Congress member get up and explain the position of Chaudhri Kartar Singh and the position of the Congress.

Mr. Speaker : According to the Honourable Sir Sunder Singh, Chaudhri Kartar Singh made certain remarks. It is open to Chaudhri Kartar Singh to come forward and explain his position.

Chaudhri Krishna Gopal Dutt : But the Congress outside this House should not be brought in.

Premier : I have no grievance against the Congress, Sir. So far as we are concerned we came with a clear mandate, a set programme and we are following and we mean to follow that programme. (Hear, hear.)

As a matter of fact unnecessary heat has been engendered by my honourable friend opposite. I know that he and his party are in a delicate position. I suppose that in course of time they will be able to answer their constituents. I hope that those classes whom my honourable friend Dr. Narang was addressing in his concluding speech on this Bill will now find that after all in spite of the fact that they voted for certain representatives in this House they had not the courage of their convictions to pass measures like this because there are higher powers and authorities under which they have to work and whom they have to obey. All honour to them. The electors cannot blame them, because it is a very difficult position they are in.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of order. The Honourable Premier appears to be commenting on my speech, but I never mentioned the Congress in my speech nor did I say anything about their electors or voters. Is the Honourable Premier speaking to the motion when he speaks of high command and other things?

Premier : Lest there should be any misunderstanding I shall repeat what Dr. Narang said. What he said was that the money-lending classes should not now expect anything from the present Government. It is with reference to that that I am making these remarks. Those classes have certain representatives of theirs in this House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Do you say that the money-lenders should not expect anything from them?

Premier : They naturally expect their representatives to safeguard their interests and if they cannot safeguard them, then it is a matter between the representatives and their constituents and not of me or of the Congress party here.

Now, Dr. Narang in his speech, I am afraid through misunderstanding, said that I had compared all money-lenders with thieves. Nothing could be farther from the truth. I can assure him that I did not compare them with thieves. As a matter of fact I have always said that I proceed on the assumption that 90 per cent. of the money-lenders are honest and it is only the 10 per cent. that are dishonest whom I compared to thieves because of their nefarious practices. It is only that section of the money-lending class which I criticised; and I again want to make it clear that as a class I consider the profession of money-lending very honourable and I want to raise it to that level where it was before they got shelter under the British made laws and when they earned the esteem of the elders of the village and served (Premier) really as friends in need and in deed and not like the money-lenders of the present day who resort to all kinds of fraudulent devices to augment their income dishonestly. It is only that class that I condemned and not the money-lending class as a whole. I cannot do better here than quote a few lines from the first preliminary report of the Reserve Bank, every word of which I endorse and which will indicate to my honourable friend my attitude towards money-lenders and their profession—

We have already stated that to eliminate this institution altogether will seriously dislocate village economy and embarrass the cultivator. What is required is radical reform in their methods of business through pressure of educated public opinion and suitable legislative action with a view to weeding out the dishonest and more rapacious among them. With regard to the agriculturist money-lender we have suggested in a previous chapter that this class should be brought within the scope of preventive legislation. As regards money-lenders as a whole, some provinces have already taken steps to regulate money-lending by passing Money Lenders' Acts, making the keeping of regular accounts and giving of receipts obligatory, forbidding unjustifiable charges and laying down the maximum rates of interest, but legislation is not by itself sufficient to regulate credit. In the long run this depends on the economic law of supply and demand and legislation can and will be evaded. We feel however that a system of compulsory licensing of all and registration of approved money-lenders coupled with legal provision for keeping regular and standardised accounts and controlling rates of interest should go a long way in restoring harmony between the agriculturist and the Banis and establishing the usefulness of the latter to the village society. We would be prepared to help by accepting the names of money-lenders, approved and registered by Local Governments, as one of the names on two-name paper, coming through scheduled banks, subject of course to general business restrictions as to amount, etc., carrying a particular name. This should result in providing an additional and more direct link between the Reserve Bank and the agriculturist.

That is the position which the expert authority in the country takes and that is the position which I have taken up in bringing forward this measure.

Before I sit down let me assure every member of this House and every one outside whom this Bill will affect that so far as the present Government is concerned and so far as I am concerned, it will be my bounden duty to see that if as a result of this legislation the honest money-lender is put to any real hardship, that hardship will be removed and I will see to it that that hardship is removed without delay. (Cheers).

Lala Sita Ram (Urdu): Sir, I rise to a point of personal explanation. The Honourable Premier and Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq have remarked that in spite of being a representative of labour, I have opposed this measure. My contention is that so long as capital and labour do not go hand in hand, no progress is possible.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. I cannot allow the honourable member to proceed further, as he is not offering a personal explanation but is trying to make another speech.

The question is—

That the Punjab Registration of Money Lenders Bill be passed.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

The Assembly met at the Assembly Chamber, Simla, at 2 p. m. of the clock. Mr. Speaker in the chair.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

FATEHWAL MURDER CASE UNDERTRIAL PRISONERS.

*3326. Sardar Hari Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Finance be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Fatehwal Murder case under-trial prisoners have resorted to hunger-strike as a protest against the continuance of their grievances ; if so, the details of their complaints and action taken by the Government to redress them ?

The Honourable Mr. Manohar Lal : Enquiries show that the under-trial prisoners in the Fatehwal Murder case did not take their morning meal on the 30th of June, 1938. They all took their evening meal the same day and there has been no hunger-strike since then. The prisoners went on this short and temporary hunger-strike, if it can be called so, because of some alleged grievances against the police. Enquiries show that these grievances were baseless and were made in order to enlist public sympathy.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I ask how he has come to know that they had resorted to one meal hunger-strike only to enlist public sympathy ?

Minister : If the honourable member would see the application which they made to the special magistrate in charge of the case, he will see the utter baselessness of the position taken by them. And what was this hunger-strike ? If a person does not take his morning meal and takes his evening meal in the normal way and makes an application in the court, which I put on the table of the House, there can be no other inference possible than that it was only to enlist public sympathy.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Have they stated that the defence witnesses are being threatened ?

Minister : The statement is here and it makes a meaningless grievance of the fact that prosecution was not proceeding in the manner in which the accused wanted it to proceed.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Is it a fact that pistols have been distributed to the prosecution witnesses in the claque so that there may not be any defence witness ?

Minister : As I said, the statement is here and there is nothing in it of the kind.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Can you state how many pistols have been distributed since the starting of this case ?

Minister : None that I am aware of.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Then your knowledge is very poor.

Sardar Hari Singh : Is the answer to this question based on the report made by the Superintendent of Jail ?

Minister : The Superintendent of Jail can only be concerned with this matter to the extent that the prisoners took or did not take any particular meal.

Sardar Hari Singh : I want to know whether the report made by the Superintendent of Jail is the basis of this answer or whether it is the report of the magistrate.

Minister : It is the basis of this answer that they did not take their morning meal and they took their evening meal.

Sardar Hari Singh : What is the basis of the answer ?

Minister : The honourable member has only got to read the application to come to the conclusion, how long this so-called hunger-strike lasted.

Sardar Hari Singh : What were the grievances alleged ?

Minister : Only those set forth here. And if the police were obliged to conduct the prosecution in the way the accused desired, there could be no prosecution at all.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Was the hunger-strike discontinued by these men of their own accord, or was it discontinued because of some body's inducement ?

Minister : I shall be very loath to call it a hunger-strike.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Please answer my question which is whether the hunger-strike was abandoned by the accused of their own accord or because of some body's inducement ?

Minister : Probably they gave it up themselves. No one went about inducing them to do so.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Our difficulty is that he does not know anything.

Sardar Hari Singh : May I ask the Honourable Minister to state the manner in which the accused wanted the prosecution to proceed ?

Minister : The application is here and the honourable member can read it. I can add nothing to it.

Translation of the application made by the accused in Crown versus Fateh Singh, etc., under Section 802-149, in the Court of Rai Sahib Lala Ram Nath Luthra, Special Magistrate.

We the accused in the Fatehwal case consider it necessary to put before you the following facts for favour of proper action—

- (1) We have come to know from a reliable source that the prosecution witnesses are always present in Serai Agha Khan which place is set apart for their staying. Chandhri Shahab Din, Thanedar and Hazara Singh, head constable coach them all the day long to give evidence supporting the prosecution version. It is evident from the fact that the prosecution witnesses are seen in the company of these police officers in the court compound and they identify the accused in the morning and evening.
- (2) It is seen from the evidence of the Supplementary Case that the order of the examination of the prosecution witnesses is changed to suit the prosecution and additional matter is brought in the evidence to cover the defects and reconcile the discrepancies.
- (3) The local officials have put up such witnesses who bear grudge against the accused. The pro-Government witnesses are being produced against the nationalist workers from all sides. The prosecution witnesses have been supplied with arms and they make a demonstration in the ilaga by wearing pistols which creates an adverse effect on the defence of the accused. Some police officers after having been relieved from other duties have been specially deputed to supervise and prepare the Fatehwal case.
- (4) The officers are having a regular touring and patrolling of the ilaga, e.g., the police officers along with their agents patrol the ilaga with a view to overawe and terrorise our relatives and their children so that they may desist from appearing in our defence. We are thus being deprived of our just rights.
- (5) Of the accused that have been arrested many belong to the same families and are agriculturists. Their harvests have been devastated, and they have not been able to sow the crops (azoni). Their family members are in a sore condition. Due to the setting in of rains early the crops have been damaged as a result of which there has been nothing left to pay in the revenue and maintain the family.
- (6) In spite of this two of the accused have been enlarged on bail. There is material discrepancy in the statements of the witnesses. On the one hand the Government has not appointed any defence counsel for the 46 accused and on the other hand, money is being freely spent on the witnesses and counsel for the prosecution. Special importance has been and is being attached to the prosecution and efforts are being made to see that the accused do not escape.
- (7) Our counsels have told us that before the enquiry of the Supplementary Case is over you (the court) will be proceeding on leave as a result of which we will remain in illegal custody for another two weeks. In spite of the day-to-day trial the prosecution has taken too long a time. This period will provide a golden opportunity to the prosecution to tailor their witnesses.
- (8) Under these circumstances we feel convinced of the prejudicial attitude of the Police in the last 4 months and we are convinced that we cannot get a redress of our grievances anywhere. Therefore all of us (accused) will go on a hunger-strike as a protest on the 30th June, 1938, and some of us will continue the hunger strike so long as we are not satisfied that those responsible for the illegalities have been punished.

ZAILDAR IN ZAIL BEHGAN.

*327. Subedar-Major Raja Farman Ali Khan: Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state the population of Ghakhars and Rajputs in Zail Behgan; tahsil Gujer Khan in the Rawalpindi district, and whether any person from among the Rajputs has ever been appointed zaildar or inamkhar in the said zail.

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : I regret that the information could not be collected at such a short notice. Information is being called for from the local officers and it will be communicated to the honourable member when ready.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

STRICTURES PASSED BY THE SESSIONS JUDGE, LYALLPUR, AGAINST THE TAHSEEDAR, JHANG.

Munshi Hari Lal : Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state whether he is aware of the strictures passed by the Sessions Judge at Lyallpur against Sayed Shabir Husain, Tahsildar, Jhang, in the case against Sawan Singh and his wife Ram Ditti under sections 332, 224 and 225, Indian Penal Code, and if so, whether Government has made or intends to make an inquiry into the matter as suggested by the Sessions Judge in his judgment?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : The matter has just come to the notice of Government and an enquiry is being made from the local officers.

RESTITUTION OF MORTGAGED LANDS BILL.

BENEFITS TO BE DERIVED BY MINISTERS.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, Mr. Deshbandhu Gupta gave notice of a short notice question which I understand was disallowed, but I think it will be in the public interest to answer that question. I would, therefore, make a public statement as the question has received a certain amount of publicity and it is necessary to disabuse people's mind of any misunderstanding that may have been caused on that particular point. The question which Mr. Deshbandhu Gupta gave notice of was this—

With reference to the statement made by the Premier in his speech, dated the 8th July on the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill, will the Honourable Minister for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that one of the Honourable Ministers has recently purchased a big plot of agricultural land in Shahpur district which had been mortgaged with non-agriculturist money-lenders for about last 50 years;
- (b) if so, the extent and price of the land paid by him, the date of the purchase as well as the amount due to the mortgagee on the same;
- (c) whether this land will be redeemed by paying a nominal compensation if the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill is passed, as reported on by the select committee;
- (d) the name of the Honourable Minister mentioned in part (c) of this question; and
- (e) what steps Government propose to take in the matter in view of the Premier's statement referred to above?

This was the question and, I think, I might make a statement in the form of a reply to that question so that the position might be quite clear. The answer is—

- (a) No. As a matter of fact the land was purchased by General Sir Malik Umar Hayat Khan during the years 1921—26 who gifted that very land to his son, The Honourable Major Malik Khizar Hayat Khan long ago. This land was mortgaged with Maya Das, a non-agriculturist money-lender, for the last 60 years.
- (b) (1) Sale-deed, dated 18th January 1921, executed by Muhammad and his two brothers in favour of General Sir Malik Umar Hayat Khan relating to 1,900 kanals for Rs. 44,000.
- (2) On 16th May 1923, 640 kanals were sold by the sons of Ahmad Yar to General Sir Umar Hayat Khan for Rs. 21,000.
- (3) On 17th May 1923, 23 bighas of land were sold by Mohammad, son of Ahmad Yar, to General Sir Umar Hayat Khan for Rs. 2,500.
- (4) On 5th January 1926, 550½ kanals were sold by one Jalal to General Sir Umar Hayat Khan for Rs. 16,507.

The mortgage amount was Rs. 3,600 plus Rs. 3,514 on account of interest and compound interest as found by the civil courts the cost of improvements, etc., to be ascertained after April 1939, when he received possession according to the judgment of the High Court. The judgment was given by Justice Tek Chand and Din Muhammad.

- (c) In view of answer to part (b) above, this does not arise, because the actual amount plus interest and compound interest have already been paid. Unfortunately my friend paid in a lump sum the interest as well as the compound interest to the previous mortgagee.
- (d) The Honourable Major Nawabzada Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana.
- (e) This does not arise. On the contrary the Honourable Minister shall be losing Rs. 60,000 by the contemplated legislation in the following manner:—

Jowala Shahai had a mortgage deed, dated 26th October 1888 for Rs. 4,000 executed by one Ahmad Yar in his favour whereas Maya Das had a prior mortgage for Rs. 3,500 in his favour in respect of this very land. The mortgage deed in favour of Jowala Shahai had to take effect after the expiry of the stipulated period in favour of Maya Das. Now on 4th May 1923 the amount due to Dev Datt, son of Jowala Shahai was Rs. 24,000 and this had to carry interest at Rs. 0.13-7 per mensem in accordance with the stipulation in the mortgage deed. Thus the amount of interest due from 4th May 1923 up to date exceeds Rs. 34,000 and therefore by the passing of the legislation in question the Honourable Minister would lose Rs. 60,000, minus the amount of compensation to which The Honourable Minister of Public Works may be found entitled under the new law which would be approximately Rs. 10,000. Even so the loss would amount to half a lakh of rupees.

Sardar Sohan Singh Jush : Can we ask certain questions ?

Mr. Speaker : There can be no question, no criticism, and no debate on a Minister's statement.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : This was in the form of an answer to a question and not in the form of a comprehensive statement.

Mr. Speaker : The form of statement is immaterial.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : It was not a comprehensive statement.

Premier : The net result is that the Honourable Minister is going to lose half a lakh of rupees if this Act is passed. I can refer you to the High Court judgment. If you will come to me, I will give you the High Court judgment.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

LATHI CHARGE BY POLICE ON KISANS OF CHAK No. 254, LYALLPUR DISTRICT.

Sardar Hari Singh (Kangra and Northern Hoshiarpur, Sikh, Rural): I move for leave to make a motion for the adjournment of the business of the House to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the lathi charge by the Police on peaceful Kisans of Chak No. 254, Ganga Singh Wala, District Lyallpur, on 15th July 1938, in connection with the agitation against the reduction in width of canal outlets, causing injuries to many innocent persons.

Mr. Speaker : The adjournment motion which is proposed to be moved is to ask for leave to make a motion for the adjournment of the business of the House to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the lathi charge by the Police on peaceful Kisans of Chak No. 254, Ganga Singh Wala, District Lyallpur, on 15th July 1938, in connection with the agitation against the reduction in width of canal outlets, causing injuries to many innocent persons. May I ask whether the honourable member has leave of the House? Is there any objection?

Premier : I have got two serious objections. Firstly, I should like to know the authority of my honourable friend for making the statement. Secondly, I beg to submit that if there is any substance in these allegations, I am not aware of it, because I have received no information so far. Unless we get full details, we cannot know whether the police were acting within their authority or not, under the ordinary law.

Mr. Speaker : An adjournment motion cannot be based on an uncorroborated statement. Up till now the Premier has received no information. So the motion appears to be out of order. But if the honourable member is in a position to have it corroborated—

Sardar Hari Singh : The adjournment motion is based on certain private advices which we have received from very responsible, and well-placed public men. Private information and telegrams have been received by the Leader of the Opposition from well-placed and highly responsible public men belonging to the Lyallpur district and we have no reason to disbelieve the accuracy and the correctness of the reports that we have got. The Premier may not have received the information and we have no quarrel if he has not received any information so far. If he is not willing to discuss it to-day on the ground that he has not got details of the case, the adjournment motion may be allowed and it may be discussed to-morrow. So far as we are concerned, we have got facts in our possession.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member may move the adjournment motion to-morrow.

Sardar Hari Singh : Very well.

Mr. Speaker : I think the Premier will, in the meantime, be able to ascertain facts.

Premier : It is suggested by my honourable friend who has moved this adjournment motion that the allegations were addressed to my friend, the Leader of the Opposition. I, therefore, think that he should have made himself responsible for this adjournment motion and not somebody else.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I declare that I am fully responsible for what my friend and colleague, Sardar Hari Singh—an honourable member of my party—has said in his adjournment motion. I received much more information than what has been stated by him. My information last night on the telephone was that two people were arrested or were taken, I do not know whether in custody or otherwise, by the Deputy Superintendent of Police of Lyallpur. They were brought to Lyallpur and then one man returned alive and the dead body of the other was returned. That is not brought out in this adjournment motion. The second point that I beg to submit is that we shall move it to-morrow and I think you will not have any objection to our moving it to-morrow on the ground of its being not recent.

Mr. Speaker : Certainly not.

THE PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND (THIRD AMENDMENT) BILL.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I introduce the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill. I also beg to move—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill be taken into consideration at once.

The Bill, as I have said on several occasions on the floor of the House, is to implement the undertaking given by me with a view to restrict the agriculturist money-lender from purchasing land of his debtors. I need not make a lengthy speech at this stage, because I believe that the whole House would be in sympathy with this measure; and this is merely in pursuance of the undertaking which I gave to this House on several occasions.

Mr. Speaker : The motion moved is—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill be taken into consideration at once.

Sardar Hari Singh : Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill be referred to a select committee with instructions to report thereon by the 22nd July, 1938.

Premier : 22nd would be too late; let it be by to-morrow.

Sardar Hari Singh : Yes, to report by to-morrow.

Premier : I am quite prepared to accept that amendment.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill be referred to a select committee with instructions to report thereon by to-morrow.

The motion was carried.

Sardar Hari Singh : I move that the select committee do consist of the following gentlemen :—

Raj Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.

Chaudhri Muhammad Hassan.

Sardar Kapur Singh.

Minister for Revenue.

Minister for Development.

Pir Akbar Ali.

Shaikh Karamat Ali.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood.

Advocate-General.

Nominee of the Speaker.

Member-in-charge of the Bill, and

The mover.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The quorum of the select committee will be 5 and my nominee will be the Deputy Speaker.

The Assembly agreed to the proposal.

THE PUNJAB RESTITUTION OF MORTGAGED LANDS BILL.

Mr. Speaker : The Assembly will now proceed to take the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill into consideration clause by clause.

Clause 2.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in lines 1-2, for the words "the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900" the words "any enactment for the time being in force" be substituted.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

In lines 1-2, for the words "the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900" the words "any enactment for the time being in force" be substituted.

Lala Duni Chand : On a point of order, Sir. An identical amendment, which stood in my name, was rejected. May I know whether a similar amendment can be now moved ?

Parliamentary Secretary : The honourable member's amendment was that the words "the Punjab Alienation of Land Act" be retained and further additional words be added ; while my amendment substitutes other words for the words "the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900." Therefore, that amendment was not exactly the same.

Lala Duni Chand : The object, which the Government has in view, is the same as it was in my amendment. But it was rejected because it was moved from this side of the House.

Mr. Speaker : The point raised by Mr. Maqbool Mahmood appears to be a sound one. The honourable member suggested that in addition to the words "the Punjab Alienation of Land Act," the words "or in any other law for the time being in force" be inserted. Now, the amendment moved by the Government member is that for the words "the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900," the words "any enactment for the time being in force" be substituted. I think the two amendments are not identical.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : This amendment has been practically sprung upon us, to extend the scope of the Bill. Will the honourable mover of this amendment be kind enough to explain this amendment and what his object is in moving it.

Mr. Speaker : What happened was this. Amendment No. 5 which stood in the name of Lala Duni Chand was moved the other day and lost. What the Parliamentary Secretary is now moving is that for the words "the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900" the words "any enactment for the time being in force" be substituted. To a certain extent, it does, no doubt, extend the scope of the Bill.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On that ground I am not objecting to it. I am only asking the honourable mover of the amendment whether he would be kind enough to enlighten the House as to the object of this amendment, because personally I must say that I have not been able to see the implications of this amendment.

Mr. Speaker : I cannot allow this question at this stage for the simple reason that the amendment, which stood in the name of Lala Duni Chand, was moved the other day and rejected. It was at that stage that this question should have been asked.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : It was never moved—

Mr. Speaker : No. It was moved after the recommittal motion was turned down.

Lala Duni Chand : Yes, I moved it and it was rejected.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the words "the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900" stand part of the clause.
The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the words "any enactment for the time being in force" take the place of the words which have been deleted.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move that—

In line 4 between the words "to" and "the" the words "or after" be inserted.

In the first place, as there has been no discussion on the motion which has just been passed, I do not know how you are going to adjust the language of sub-clause 2, because, if we substitute those words the clause would read thus :—

"Notwithstanding anything contained in any enactment for the time being in force."

[Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.]

I do not know how these words are to be interpreted which come after that in the 4th line, i.e. "which were effected prior to the commencement of that Act by a member of a tribe, since notified...." I must, therefore, modify my amendment.

The position is not clear.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood: Sir, this amendment cannot be moved. My amendment and amendments Nos. 19 and 28 can come together. Amendment No. 28 says—

That in lines 4—6, the words "commencement.....to the same group" be deleted.

And amendment No. 19 suggests—

That in line 4 between the words "to" and "the" the words "8th June, 1901," be inserted.

So if you take amendments Nos. 12, 13 and 28 together, then the clause will be perfectly logical and consistent, as we propose that it should be.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): ir I move—

That in line 4 between the words "to" and "the", the words "or after 8th June, 1901" be inserted.

Sir, my original amendment was that the words "or after" be inserted between the words "to" and "the", but I have slightly modified my original amendment, this being a consequential amendment arising naturally from the amendment which has just been passed. My position is this that there is no sanctity attached to the date 8th June 1901 and if the idea is to do justice or rather to show pity and render assistance to the poor mortgagor, that pity should not be restricted and bound by this time-limit terminating on the 8th June 1901. There is no reason why it should not extend further.

The original idea was that all mortgages affected by agriculturists in favour of non-agriculturists before the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act should be redeemed on payment of some compensation or without compensation as the case may be. Now the argument is two fold. One is that no sanctity attaches to the 8th June 1901. If people deserve any consideration who executed their mortgages before 1901, people who executed mortgages after 1901 also deserve the same consideration. If those mortgagors were poor there is no evidence before us to show that the mortgagors who parted with their land after 1901 were very rich or that they parted with their lands without any detriment to their economic interest. No reason whatsoever has been given for this distinction. On the other hand it is being suspected that this date is fixed on a particular ground and I want to make that ground clear. It is being said that up to 1901 the mortgagees were as a rule members of one particular community. After 1901 owing to the help which the Punjab Alienation of Land Act gave them, the members of another community also came in as mortgagees; and the idea is that by confining the redemption of mortgages to those which were affected prior to 1901 it is intended to afford protection to the mortgagees who came in after 1901 and belonged to a particular community. Otherwise if, as professed by the Government, the intention is to afford relief to the poor there is no reason why that relief should be restricted to the period prior to 1901.

As I have said there is nothing to show that after 1901 there was a wave of prosperity all over the province and that people executed mortgages in favour of other people simply for fun or pleasure. We are not aware of any particular wave of prosperity or wave of insanity coming over the province after 1901 that people should have parted with their lands simply for the fun of it. We must assume that even after 1901 people who parted with their lands did so under pressure of necessity, that they were driven to this course by poverty. If that is so, I should like to know the reasons why a line should be drawn at the 8th June 1901.

Then again, whatever might have been the justification for fixing that date as the turning point in these transactions, now that the Government has moved an amendment which has been accepted to the effect that the words 'The Punjab Alienation of Land Act' should be deleted and in their place the words 'any enactment for the time being in force' be substituted, the sanctity that attaches to the date of commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act disappears and all mortgages whether in connection with the Land Alienation Act or not have been brought within the purview of this Bill. Therefore, no sanctity should now attach to the 8th June 1901. In fact, as I submitted, there is probably greater necessity for affording relief to those people who executed mortgages of their lands after 1901. In any case, as I have said, there is no difference pointed out between one set of mortgages and another. I would, therefore, submit that the words I have suggested should be inserted after the words 'prior to', namely, the words 'after the 8th June 1901.'

Mr. Speaker : May I propose the amendment in the following form ?

That in clause 2, lines 4-5, for the words "commencement of that Act" the words "or after 8th June 1901" be substituted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I agree.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, my honourable friend asked, why are we restricting the provisions of this Act to mortgages prior to 8th June 1901? There are several reasons. He said that it is suspected that this date 8th June 1901 has been inserted with some sinister object and that otherwise there was no sanctity attached to that date. Let me point out that our object was very simple and there is nothing sinister about it at all. The 8th June 1901 was the date on which the Punjab Alienation of Land Act which is known as the Magna Charta of the agriculturist classes came into force. That is the reason why that date has been fixed. Prior to 8th June 1901 there was no distinction between agriculturists and non-agriculturists and, therefore, in deference to the wishes of several honourable members on both sides of this House, we have decided that we would not make any distinction between agriculturist and non-agriculturist classes prior to that date after which the agriculturists received immunity from the exploitation by other classes.

My honourable friend's next objection was this—"if you have pity for those people who had mortgaged their lands prior to 1901, why should not that pity be extended to people who mortgaged their lands after 1901?" My honourable friend is a lawyer and he must have had occasion to read the Punjab Alienation of Land Act several times. He must, therefore, remember that one of the things which the Alienation of Land Act did away with was the conditional sale. If he will refer to section 10 of the Act he will find that conditional sale was done away with. It is only those conditional sales affected prior to 1901 which could neither be converted into sale nor redeemed which would still subsist. That is obvious.

3 P.M.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Read the book again.

Premier : I have read it.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Then you have not understood it.

Premier : My honourable friend may please himself if he thinks that I have not understood. It is only those mortgages that still subsist that we want to redeem. Why do we want to redeem them? Our main reason is that they have been in possession of mortgagees for periods ranging from 40 to 60 years and on grounds of justice and equity we feel that people who have benefited for such a long period from 48 per cent. to more should now return the lands to their owners. My friend asks, why should you not extend the same privilege for mortgages after 1901? My reason is that after 1901 only agriculturists could mortgage lands for a period beyond 20 years with another agriculturist. The agriculturists could also buy land and agriculturists could also sell land to other agriculturists. There is no bar. Therefore, after 1901 if there are any mortgages those mortgages must still be in existence for the mere reason that they benefit the mortgagor and not the mortgagee, because the mortgagees could buy that land and the mortgagor could sell it to the mortgagees. I will give you one instance. My honourable friend is trying to look cynical. Now there are several people, pensioned soldiers and retired military officers, who saved a little bit of money and have come back. They find that their own land is not sufficient to give them occupation. Their holdings are very small. They find that one of their agricultural brethren of the same tribe who was at one time poor now holds a bigger plot and is in debt and he wants to get out of it. They pay a portion of their savings and take a small parcel of land on mortgage and add it on to their own.

Lala Duni Chand : Similar was the case prior to 1900. Were there no soldiers then?

Premier : Prior to 1900 it was the black fish swallowing the red and the yellow ones and it is that kind of mortgages which you find still subsisting. So far as transactions between agriculturists are concerned, as I have said there is no bar to an agriculturist buying land of an agriculturist. So if the mortgage subsists it benefits the mortgagor himself. Apart from that there are other grounds and from my point of view stronger grounds which would not allow me to extend the provisions of this Act beyond 1901. In the first place we stand by the Land Alienation Act and I am not prepared to do anything—and I am sure that the majority of this House agrees with me—to undermine the efficacy of that Act so long as we stand by that Act. (Hear, hear). When you decide to do away with that Act or to throw that Act into the dust-bin—I hope that time will not come during my regime at any rate—when you decide to do that, then it will not be necessary to make an Act of this kind. It is only to protect that sturdy peasantry of the Punjab that we want to make this enactment which, without doing any real injustice to any other class, would do some good to that class and give them a sense of safety and security which the Land Alienation Act has given them. In view of this, I cannot accept my honourable friend's amendment.

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): Sir, may I draw the attention of the honourable mover of this amendment to an aspect of the case which will show how terribly iniquitous the effect of his amendment would be? Assuming for the sake of argument that his amendment is accepted by the House, then the result would be that a mortgage made only 5 years ago will have to be forcibly redeemed by payment of either nothing or a nominal figure. As I understand, the policy of this Bill is that lands which have been mortgaged before the 8th June, 1901, and have stood unredeemed since that date up to this time, shall be restored to the mortgagors and taken back from the mortgagees either on payment of nothing or on payment of a nominal figure. This is on the basis that the mortgagees have in the meantime enjoyed the proceeds of the land at least since the 8th of June, 1901, namely 38 years, —not to take into account the period of the mortgage that might have elapsed before the 8th of June, 1901. My learned friend is attacking the principle of this Bill and he has made no secret of his view, that a Bill of this kind is of an expropriatory nature. I want to put it to him, does he want to make the expropriation still more grievous? Is he really serious that mortgagees affected within the last 4 or 5 years shall be wiped off by a stroke of the pen, and that those mortgagees who have been in enjoyment barely for 4 or 5 years must be regarded as having been fully paid out their debt? It appears to me that my learned friend has not fully appreciated the consequences of his amendment. I would put it to him, what does he mean? If he wants the Bill to be extended to all mortgages which have been affected since 8th of June, 1901, irrespective of the parties in whose favour they may have been executed, then the result would be that the very expropriation on the ground of which he is bringing forward his amendment will be rendered still more grievous.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: What do you say about the expropriation?

Malik Barkat Ali: Not that there is any expropriation, because this Bill necessarily postulates enjoyment for at least 37 years and many more also, though under the Land Alienation Act 20 years' enjoyment is enough. I certainly would be satisfied with an enjoyment of 37 years and more as a sufficient discharge of the original debt. So far as the present amendment is concerned, I do not know how he makes his case of expropriation better by the introduction of this amendment.

Sardar Hari Singh (Kangra and Northern Hoshiarpur, Sikh, Rural): With your permission I am going to speak on this amendment. Although I have got a more comprehensive amendment later on, I think I had better speak on this one and give a reply to certain arguments used by my friend, the Leader of the House, opposing the amendment of Dr. Sir Gokul Chand. I confess, Mr. Speaker, that I have never heard so fallacious and fatuous arguments, I think, he would pardon me, falling from the lips of my friend, the Honourable Premier for whose debating talents I have got a great regard. His arguments might have appealed to the phalanx of the majority of members, who sit behind him but his arguments are not at all going to appeal to the poor agriculturist mortgagor who wants back his land whether that land is in the hands of a non-agriculturist money-lender or an agriculturist money-lender. He wants land to till, he wants bread, he is hungry, he wants land both from the bania as well as from a zamindar although that zamindar may be an ex-captain of the Army, a comrade in the arms of the Honourable the Premier. What is his argument in reply to the demand of the hungry mortgagor who wants back his land? It makes no difference whether his land is with a bania or in the hands of anybody else. These arguments are totally fallacious and fatuous. Mr. Speaker, I am at one with my friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand that the retention of 8th June, 1901, in the Bill as it is going to be amended by amendments moved by Mir Maqbool Mahmood taking together certain consequential amendments that are going to be taken up later, is not intelligible. In view of the fact that the Bill is going to be amended so that all the mortgages before the 8th June, 1901, shall be restituted, no sanctity can be attached to the 8th June, 1901. It could have some logic and meaning if this Bill were going to be based on the Land Alienation Act, but the Land Alienation Act is no longer the basis of this Bill. The mortgages, whether with the agriculturist or the non-agriculturist, before a certain date are going to be restituted. Where then is the sanctity, where then is the logic attached to 8th of June, 1901? My friend got up and said 8th June, 1901, is the date on which the Magna Charta of the zamindars, the Land Alienation Act, was inaugurated. This is a purely sentimental argument. I respect the sentiments of my honourable friend, I have a great regard for his respect for the Land Alienation Act. Let him keep it in tact as long as he is in office, I have no quarrel with him, but that is not the argument for the retention of the 8th June, 1901. Because the 8th of June is the birth day of the Land Alienation Act, therefore we want that mortgages before that date should be restituted and mortgages after that date should not be restituted, is no argument at all. He went on to sermonise on the virtues of the Land Alienation Act. That was totally beside the point. We have nothing to do with the virtues or the vices of the Land Alienation Act at present. He further went on to say that we want to retribute all mortgaged lands which have been subsisting for between 40 to 60 years. I may tell him that there may be mortgages of a shorter duration from which the mortgagees have got adequate return. Supposing I got some land mortgaged to me in the year 1930, for an amount of Rs. 400. Suppose further that that fellow was very ignorant and a very poor man and fell into my snare and mortgaged 8 acres of land for Rs. 400. I may have got more than Rs. 400 and its interest out of that land. Why should not that land pass from my hands into the hands of the mortgagor when I have got according to the argument on which this Bill is based, enough by way of return on my capital? Why should not mortgages after 1901 be restituted? Again, I put it to my friend, the Leader of the House, suppose a mortgage was effected on the 7th of June, 1901, and another on the 9th of June, 1901. Why does he wish that the mortgage effected on the 7th of June should be restituted and not the one brought about a day after the 8th June, 1901? I want to give two examples which would show the nature of mortgages effected after the date—8th of June, 1901. These examples are taken from page 197 of Mr. Darling's famous book "Punjab Peasant in Prosperity and Debt". One case gives an account of a transaction between 1901—11. An agriculturist borrowed Rs. 2,500 at 25 per cent. interest, probably from an agriculturist money-lender. In the year 1912, he got Rs. 50 more and the total became Rs. 2,550. This is the sum of money he borrowed from an agriculturist friend. The debtor repaid in the following way. Two thousand and four hundred maunds of grain worth Rs. 5,000 in one instalment. Then again another instalment of grain and cattle worth Rs. 800 and a third instalment between the years 1912 and 1918. During these years he paid cash amounting to Rs. 1,100. In all he paid a total sum of Rs. 6,900 between the year 1912 and 1918. In the year 1918 a settlement of this account was made and 8 acres were mortgaged to secure Rs. 1,300 of unpaid balance while a bond was executed for Rs. 1,200. In 18 years a loan of Rs. 2,500 became Rs. 9,400. Interest at 12 per cent. in 18 years would amount to Rs. 5,400. So the total would be Rs. 7,900. Now the poor debtor has paid the whole of the sum and its interest, yet he has mortgaged 8 acres of his land for the unpaid balance of Rs. 1,300. Now my friend wants that this mortgaged land should not be restituted to the poor debtor. That shows his sympathy for the debtor peasant of this province. He is not going to liquidate this mortgage.

Premier : This mortgage could only be in favour of an agriculturist.

Sardar Hari Singh : This mortgage possibly still subsists. After the year 1901 a mortgage could be effected only in favour of agriculturists. Mr. Speaker, another case illustrating the same thing relates to the year 1896. A land owner of Gurdaspur district died. He left behind an unpaid debt of Rs. 400. This is the district from which my friend, the Honourable Minister of Revenue hails as a member of this House. Probably he must have been canvassing for votes in Batala tehsil from the sons of the deceased.

Minister for Revenue : How do you know?

Sardar Hari Singh : I presume that when canvassing for votes he must have been—

Mr. Speaker : Please speak to the motion.

Sardar Hari Singh : His son executed a bond which was renewed in 1899, 1903 and 1906. In the year 1909 the debt which was Rs. 2,700 was repaid by borrowing the amount from another money-lender—an agriculturist money-lender. A few years later, you will be surprised to hear, fifty acres were mortgaged to secure the debt which had risen from Rs. 400 only. This debt now amounts to Rs. 5,000 though nothing was borrowed in the interval. Rupees 400 which was the amount of debt raised has amounted to Rs. 5,000 in twenty years' time. Fifty acres of land of the poor debtor which he had mortgaged in return for the original money is still with the mortgagee and my friend opposite wants that this 56 acres of land should not be returned to the mortgagor. That shows his sympathy for the poor peasant who is poverty-stricken—nay for the peasants of the province of the Punjab.

Pandit Shri Ram Sharma (Southern Towns, General, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I have risen to support the amendment moved by my friend, Dr. Sir

[Pandit Shri Ram Sharma.]

Gokul Chand Narang. The first and foremost reason for my support to this amendment is that this clause, as it stands, does not in any way benefit that part of the country from which I come. I may add for the information of the House that my ilaqa is Haryana, i.e., southern districts and when I say my ilaqa, I mean thereby the poor kisans and zamindars of that area. Sir, I do not know what is going on in the rest of the Punjab, i.e., in the Western or the Central Punjab. But as far as the South Eastern Punjab is concerned this Bill does not benefit that part of the Punjab at all, because it does not give any relief to those people whose lands were mortgaged after 8th June, 1901. This Bill only gives relief to those people whose lands were mortgaged before 8th June, 1901, and the lands of those persons which were mortgaged after June, 1901 will not be redeemed at all. I, therefore, request the Government to do away with this distinction between the lands that were mortgaged before June, 1901, and the lands that were mortgaged after June, 1901. If the Government are desirous of helping the zamindars of that area they should, and also the Minister who belongs to that area, should do their best to remove this time-limit of June, 1901, so that the poor zamindars of Haryana and particularly of Tehsil Jajjar would also benefit by this Bill.

The second thing, which I wish to submit before the House, is that before the year 1901 only 16 lakh acres of land went into the hands of the non-agriculturists and after the year 1901, 36 lakh acres of land passed into the hands of big landholders. I may submit that the Government are claiming that they are giving relief to the poor zamindars and that they want to extricate them from their woeful condition but in fact they are doing quite the reverse of it. Everybody knows that since the year 1901, something like 36 lakh acres of lands passed into the hands of well-to-do and rich landholders whose representatives are sitting in large numbers on the benches over there, but the Government have not even moved their little finger to save the small landholders from going into the dust. I have risen to support this amendment merely for the sake of bringing to light the woeful plight of those poor kisans whose lands are held in mortgage by the rich zamindars after 8th June, 1901.

The next point to which I wish to refer is that after the year 1901, there were certain groups of people who were declared as agriculturists and they were termed as a special group of agriculturists. Some of these groups were declared agriculturists in the year 1903 and others in 1914. Recently in reply to my question the Honourable Revenue Minister stated that seven such groups have been declared agriculturists, who mainly depend on agriculture. I ask my friends on the opposite benches that if they have been declared agriculturists under special circumstances and if they have lost much of their lands during the last 20 years, why should they not receive the same facilities which are being provided to others? I may further submit that they mainly depend on agriculture and there are many such special groups of agriculturists who depend on land for their maintenance. I am of the opinion that their mortgages should also be included in the same class as has been included the mortgages previous to the year 1901. I may submit that zamindars are not only those who lived previous to the year 1901, but there are other zamindars who should also be regarded as zamindars. I mean the special groups. Let not anybody think that I am calling them zamindars by way of courtesy, but it was the Government of this province who declared them as agriculturists and for the reason that their lands were going into other hands and in order to save them from utter destruction and ruin they declared them as agriculturists. They have been saved from the jaws of death and I would request the Honourable Premier, the Honourable Minister of Development and the Honourable Minister for Revenue, if they have any sympathy for these zamindars who were declared zamindars after 8th June, 1901, to come forward and help them. They should not confine their sympathies to the people who mortgaged their lands before the year 1901, but they should also take into consideration all these people who have been declared agriculturists after the year 1901, and they should do something to get their mortgages made before their being declared agriculturists redeemed as well. In my opinion they deserve it more than others. If they do not deserve such help, why did the Government declare them as agriculturists? I, therefore, request the Government that no differentiation should be made between the agriculturists previous to the year 1901 and those after the year 1901.

Besides, I may submit that as long as the lands of those people who mortgaged them after the year 1901 are not redeemed those people cannot benefit by this Bill. I am personally unable to understand as to why the Government are not prepared to help these people. Further the Honourable Premier stated a very interesting thing in the course of his speech. This is that those military men who have returned to their homes with a little savings of theirs and have bought some lands, cannot in any way harm other zamindars. I do not mind if the poor military people, who draw a small salary or who have obtained a pension of Rs. 12 or 14 or less than Rs. 25, have bought some lands for their livelihood. But, Sir, most of the lands have passed into the hands of captains, majors and colonels who brought much wealth and have literally enslaved poor zamindars. They are the people who have taken large tracts of land and are ruling like anything over them. It is the duty of the Government to save the poor and small landholders from big landholders and big military pensioners. But instead of helping them this Government have brought in a Bill the object of which does not seem to benefit a very large number of poor zamindars. The Government are showing undue favour to big landholders, who are depriving the small zamindars of their small holdings. This argument holds no water that the Government have moved this Bill in order to safeguard the interests of the poor landowners.

Sir, it is strange that no opportunity is missed to taunt and thereby to bring into disfavour the Congress party in the Assembly. This is really very bad. It so happens that the honourable Dr. Narang is in favour of this amendment and sympathises with the poor zamindars. Otherwise this amendment had been tabled by the members of the Congress party as well and even if he had not moved this amendment, you would have seen that the Congress party would not have kept quiet over it. And if in spite of it, it is said that the Congress party has been keeping quiet and has adopted an attitude of neutrality, it cannot be helped. I ask where it is and on what suitable occasion the Congress has kept quiet. We have demanded on more than one occasion that such of the zamindars, who do not own more than ten acres of land in the canal irrigated areas, should be exempted from the payment of land revenue. We have raised our voice against the imposition of any land revenue on those zamindars who own not more than 24 acres of land in the barani areas and we have asked for remission of chahi rates and for many more such concessions for the poor agriculturists.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Pandit Shri Ram Sharma : Sir, I am only trying to clear our position particularly because the question of our attitude has been raised and discussed here on many occasions. I challenge the Government to refute the arguments that I have advanced in favour of the amendment. I am sure that in their heart of hearts the Government members feel that they stand on very flimsy ground so far as this matter is concerned, but because this amendment has been moved from this side of the House, it has to be opposed, however, righteous the cause may be that we plead. With these words I support the amendment now before the House.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani (Muzaffargarh North, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment moved by my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, which provides that the provisions of this Bill should also apply to all subsisting mortgages of land which were effected after the 8th June, 1901. This amendment not only extends the scope of the Bill but also infringes one of the basic principles underlying the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. We have two distinct periods in the economic history of the province since the inception of the British rule in the Punjab, one period relates to the time preceding the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act and the other which follows it. To understand the position fully, we must keep in view the distinctive features of these two periods. Prior to the British rule though debt was as common as it is to-day, yet the money-lender was not so powerful as he subsequently became. He laboured under two restraints which the British rule removed, or anyhow weakened. The first was the existence of a vigorous village community which was strong enough to hold the bania in partial check. The money-lender was no doubt considered a necessary factor in the village life, but was not allowed to coerce his debtor and unconscionable bargains were usually avoided. The second check was the apathy of the state towards the recovery. There were no formal courts of justice and if a cultivator owed a money-lender money or grain and matters could not be arranged between themselves, the case went before the local punchayat. The punchayat after examining the bania's accounts and taking into consideration the paying capacity of the debtor brought about a settlement. The creditor and the debtor were kept on a footing of comparative equality and the latter was not allowed to antagonise or coerce the former. For some time after the establishment of the British rule these satisfactory conditions continued. The village communities retained their cohesion and though courts were set up everywhere in which debtors could be sued, suits against agriculturists were heard by the deputy commissioner and his assistants, who, with their intimate knowledge of village life, tended to decide them according to the broad principles of equity, justice and good conscience, rather than by a rigid application of the law. Kindly feeling, therefore, prevailed between debtor and creditor during this period. In 1875 suits for debts were handed over to civil courts presided over by professional judges, men trained in the straightest sect of the law, for the most part born in the town, knowing little of the village and often allied to the money-lender by caste if not by actual relationship. Owing to the pressure of work, there was little temptation on their part, to go behind the bond and the loose haphazard way in which the money-lender kept his accounts, made it extremely difficult to disentangle the facts. Cases were too often rushed through and decided on unreliable evidence by these town-bred men of the desk who were ignorant of rural affairs. The rigid application of the law, which ensued, put the ignorant peasant entirely at the mercy of his creditor. For 25 years the money-lender had been entirely uncontrolled and in this brief space a serious situation developed. The British rule freed the bania from restraints and armed him with the power of the law. He became as oppressive as he had hitherto been submissive. In the words of Mr. Thornburn: "Shylock was a gentleman by the side of Nand Lal Kirar, as Shylock, though he spoiled the gentiles, was yet a man of honour, Nand Lal has none commercially speaking. His greed for gain, the shameless effrontery with which he adds 50 per cent. to a debt, calls the total principal, causes his debtor to execute a bond for that principal with interest at 36 per cent. per annum more, a year or two after strikes a balance against his debtor and wears him into mortgaging to him an ancestral plot of good land on the understanding, carefully excluded from the bond that the mortgagor is to remain in cultivating possession, have entirely alienated the sympathies of people from men of his calling. Such hard business qualities make him feared, hated and despised by the agricultural classes."

Prior to the British rule a money-lender conspired not for the land, but for the crop as the land was then of little value and difficult to acquire; nor had the ordinary bania either aptitude or inclination to farm it. Being, too, a shopkeeper as well as a money-lender he preferred to get the produce, on which, without much effort, he could reap a double profit, one from the producer to whom he lent and the other from the consumers to whom he sold. He was, therefore, content with the crop and shared with the State the whole of the cultivator's surplus. After 1870 the circumstances, however, changed: land which had been almost unsaleable began to have value. In the days of pre-British rule owing to the general insecurity and the exactions of those in authority, no money-lender would buy land; but with the advent of security and good Government, of a fixed assessment and rising prices, it became an object of general desire. Land became a first rate investment which was always rising in value. As soon as the money-lender realized this, he began to use it as an outlet for his rapidly accumulating capital, and finding the investment more and more profitable sought with increasing ingenuity to get the cultivator into his clutches and oust him from his land. In little over 25 years, he succeeded in acquiring over 2½ million acres of land in different parts of the province by sale and mortgage. It was this phenomenon as much as anything else that led to the passing of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act in 1900.

In introducing the Punjab Alienation of Land Bill the Honourable Mr. Rivaz (afterwards Sir Charles Rivaz) said, "After all, it must be borne in mind that we are aiming at reverting to some extent to a state of things which prevailed in the Punjab before it came under British rule. It is an arguable question whether the right of free transfer of land was recognised under Native rule, or whether it is what has been called the 'fatal gift' of the British Government, but, in any case, the question is, for practical purposes one of mere academic interest; for it is an undisputed fact that in former times the exercise of the right of transfer, at all events, in favour of money-lenders and other outsiders, even allowing that such right did exist in theory, was, for several reasons, exceedingly rare, and we know that even in these days in most Native States alienations of land are either absolutely prohibited or largely restricted. We know, too, that in the Punjab the custom of transferring land did not gain a footing for several years after the annexation of the Province, but that as land has increased in value and become more attractive as a profitable investment, the number of transfers has increased correspondingly and is still increasing." He further remarked, "That the Punjab is pre-eminently a land of yeomen and peasant proprietors, and the expropriation by the money-lending classes of these sturdy land-holders—men who furnish the flower of the Native army of India, and who look forward, amid all the hardship and glories of a military career, to spend their declining years on their ancestral acres—has, under the influence of conditions which have sprung up under British rule, been progressing as I have shown, in different degrees of rapidity in all parts of the Province. The sole and entire object of the measure which I have been explaining is, while affording ample facilities and a sufficient market for unobjectionable transfers, to arrest the further progress of this mischief and to check, by remedial action, an ever-increasing political danger."

Sir, such were the conditions before the enactment of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. The present Bill deals only with those subsisting mortgages which were effected during this period, i.e., prior to the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900. During this period the creditor did not take the land of his debtor in mortgage as a security for loan, but he used this device in order to expropriate his debtor who was, unwilling, under the influence of custom and traditions, to sell his land. The money-lender did not demand any security at the time of advancing loan, but after sometime when the debt had accumulated by the addition of compound interest at usurious rates, the money-lender cajoled his debtor into mortgaging his land under the threat of civil suit and imprisonment. In most cases the conditions of these bargains were unconscionable. The produce of the mortgaged land was taken by the mortgagee in part payment of the interest, while the remaining interest was to be added to the mortgage money. Under such conditions it became impossible for a mortgagor to get his mortgaged land redeemed, and after the expiry of 60 years the mortgagee became the permanent owner of the land. I shall illustrate my point by giving an example of such mortgages. In Attock district an agriculturist debtor mortgaged his land to a money-lender in the seventies for Rs. 500. About two or three years ago he applied to the court for the redemption of his mortgaged land on payment of the mortgage money. The case came up to the High Court in appeal and the High Court decided after calculating the compound interest on mortgage money that the mortgagor could only get his land redeemed after paying Rs. 2,70,000.

On the 8th June, 1901, the Punjab Alienation of Land Act came into force. Henceforward the professional money-lender could not dispossess an agriculturist from his land for more than 20 years. The main object of the Act was to prevent the peasant proprietor from being expropriated by the village money-lender. Since then money-lender had to be content with the produce only. Repayment of debt depended entirely upon the harvest and if a series of harvests failed it became difficult to realise the debt. The limitations imposed on the power of alienation of an agriculturist restricted his credit. On account of insecure agricultural conditions and visitation of famine, the peasant proprietor needed money in his 'lean' years. In the time of his need he mortgaged a portion of his land to his thrifty and better off neighbour or relative who lent him the money on the security of land. In better years he got his mortgaged land redeemed. A glance on the figures will show that between 1901 and 1920 the area redeemed is in excess of the area mortgaged. Between the years 1921 and 1925 the mortgaged area is more than the area redeemed. This excess is due to the following reasons :—

- (a) Rise in the standard of living as a result of the high prices of agricultural produce during the post-war years and the expansion of credit.
- (b) By the activities of military pensioners who advanced money on the security of land.
- (c) The purchase of considerable areas of land in canal colonies for which purpose the zamindars raised money by mortgaging their lands.
- (d) The amendment of the Limitation Act in 1923—24 which induced the money-lenders to call in debts and compel the zamindars to mortgage their lands in order to pay.
- (e) Successive failure of harvest due to climatic conditions, floods and attacks of pests.
- (f) Unprecedented and sudden fall in prices of agricultural produce.

But in spite of this the percentage of the area redeemed over the total mortgaged area during this period is much higher than the period preceding the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. It may also be remembered that during this period the mortgaged area has not passed out of the hands of the village community. The land has merely passed from one person to the other belonging to the same tribe. After 1901 the credit of an agriculturist has been further restricted by the passing of certain legislation such as the Usurious Loans Act, the Punjab Regulation of Accounts Act, the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act and the Punjab Debtor's Protection Act. If the provisions of the present Bill are made applicable to the period after the 8th June, 1901, we shall be jeopardising the interests of peasant proprietors and agriculturists inasmuch as he will be forced to sell his land instead of mortgaging it. Moreover, a peasant proprietor can always seek remedy under the Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act and it is unnecessary to apply the provisions of the present Bill to the subsisting mortgages effected after the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. As I have already shown, the mortgages effected prior to the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act were, in a large majority of cases, unconscionable and the accumulated usurious rate of compound interest makes it impossible for a mortgagor to redeem his land. The fact that merely 1½ million acres of land mortgaged during this period has not been redeemed so far, speaks for itself. Under the existing law all subsisting mortgages become sales after the expiry of 60 years. The main object of the present Bill is to avoid such expropriation. It provides for the restitution of mortgaged lands to the mortgagors where the mortgagee has benefited from the income of such land to the extent of double the mortgage money or where the mortgagee has been in possession of such land for more than 90 years, on compensation at given rates. No land mortgaged after the 8th June 1901 could either become sale before 1961 or could ever permanently pass into the hands of non-agriculturist mortgagees. My friend Pandit Shri Bam Sharma remarked in his speech that the area under mortgage prior to 8th June, 1901 is 16 lacs of acres while the mortgaged area after that date is 87 lacs of acres and that it would be in the interest of the poor zamindars to extend the application of this Bill to this latter period. I have already explained the difference between the nature of the mortgages effected before and after the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. I might further point out that a large number of mortgages effected after the 8th June, 1901, will come out to be benami transactions. The number of genuine long time mortgages from agriculturists to agriculturists is comparatively small. We have already passed a measure during this session nullifying benami transactions. Another Congressite friend, Sardar Hari Singh remarked that he could not understand as to why the mortgages effected before and after the 8th June, 1901, should be treated on different basis and why a special sanctity has been attached to the 8th June, 1901. Probably, on account of his associations with the 'banias' my honourable friend's genius and agriculturist spirit is rusted. Let me point out that there is a glaring difference between these two periods and we do attach a special sanctity to 8th June, 1901, because on this historic day the Manga Charta of the agriculturists, the Punjab Alienation of Land Act was brought into force. (Cheers). A new era started from this day in the life of the agriculturists of the Punjab and they were protected from the exploitations of the banias and allowed to live a life of self-respect (cheers). The present Bill provides no discrimination between the agriculturist or non-agriculturist mortgagee, because it relates to a period when no distinction existed between these two classes. If the scope of the Bill is extended to the period following the commencement of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, it will in a way, abolish the distinction which the Punjab Alienation of Land Act provides and in the wider interest of the agriculturist community we are not prepared to accept the removal of this distinction between the agriculturist and non-agriculturist classes. (Cheers).

I would appeal to my agriculturist friends sitting on Congress benches to beware of the mischief which this amendment will create in removing this distinction. I hope my simple-minded friends will see through the game and will not be misled by the soft words and misleading arguments of Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: You too are a zamindar; why are you not misled by what I say?

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani : Because I know you too well.

پھر (تجے) کہ خواہی جانہ می خوش

من انداز قدرت رومی شد اسم

With these words, Sir, I oppose the amendment under consideration.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : Sir, in answer to the very pertinent objection raised by the Opposition and Dr. Gokul Chand Narang as to why this date has been fixed, nothing has been said beyond singing the praises of the Land Alienation Act. I have no desire to detract in any way from the value of these praises, but these praises are no reply to the serious argument of the other side. The Government have signally failed to give any reason why the year 1901 is fixed. Let us now carefully consider what the scope of the present Bill is. The Bill, as originally introduced, related to mortgages by members of tribes, who have been since notified as agriculturists, in favour of non-agriculturists alone. Now, this has been extended to 3 other kinds of mortgages. First the mortgages by a member of the notified agricultural tribe in favour of another member of the agricultural tribe, a transaction which is not prohibited by the Land Alienation Act ; it has further been extended to all mortgages which have been effected by non-agriculturists in favour of non-agriculturists, again a transaction with which the Land Alienation Act had no concern and mortgages to which this Bill was never originally intended to apply ; and thirdly it has also been extended to mortgages effected by non-agriculturists in favour of agriculturists, again a transaction which was not prohibited by Land Alienation Act. Therefore, Sir, whatever reasons there may originally have been to fix the 8th June, 1901, the date when the Land Alienation Act came into force in this province, there is absolutely no reason now why you should select only the mortgages effected before the year 1901 for resumption. I submit there is absolutely no reason now for confining the operation of the Bill to mortgages effected before the year 1901. Let us see if there is any other general ground for this selection. The main ground for allowing this restitution is that mortgagees by being in possession of the land have derived more advantage from the land than is justified by the amount of principal which they have advanced or by the amount which may be due on the mortgage. We, living in this province, know very well as to when the price of agricultural produce was highest and what are the years when the persons in possession benefited most. We know very well that the value of the agricultural produce in this province was never so high as during the War years 1914—1919 and if any mortgages have been paid off or paid off twice, thrice or four times over, they have been paid off during those 6 years. If you do not extend this Bill to those years what on earth is the use of bringing in this Bill at all, if the object is to allow lands to be redeemed, whose mortgagees have derived considerable profit from the land ? I do not say that you should necessarily extend it to the year 1938. What harm would be done if this was extended to 1930 or 1925 or even to the year 1920 ? So, I respectfully say that there is no earthly reason why the scope of the Bill should be confined to mortgages effected before 1901. The Honourable Premier has said that Dr. Gokul Chand Narang has attributed a sinister motive to the Government. Dr. Gokul Chand pointed out that whatever may be the reasons, the fact remains that mortgages before 1901 happened to be in favour of one community and after 1901 they happened to be mainly in favour of agricultural tribe or they happened to be in a large majority of cases in favour of another community. (Premier: Question.) This argument is not met by a mere denial on the floor of this House or by merely questioning the statements which are made. As soon as the select committee sat, I asked the Chairman to allow me to have the statistics on the following points:—firstly, the probable acreage of land which is likely to be affected by this legislation; secondly, the approximate amount of mortgage money that is likely to be dealt with by this legislation; and thirdly, the most important of all, the number of mortgagees likely to be affected with their distribution communitywise. This is an information which does not require any census operation. It can easily be obtained from revenue records of this province. Only the girdawar kanungo of a tahsil is to be asked to supply that information. I asked for this information, because in a legislation of such important character, you could not do justice to it without being in possession of those necessary details. I must say that the Chairman, the Honourable Minister for Revenue, was pleased to take down my queries in writing and sent a chit to the Financial Commissioner asking for that information. The answer came that information on none of those points was available at Simla. Then I asked that I would like to examine witnesses who would bring all the material on record before the select committee, but that request of mine was not granted. Therefore, Sir, when you deliberately shut out all enquiries on the matter and do not even take steps to supply this information, when it is formally asked, by a mere denial here on the floor of the House and by mere questioning of my or Dr. Gokul Chand's statement, you cannot be said to have controverted these statements. We did not rest here, we did much more; we sent a petition to the Honourable Premier signed by a dozen Hindu members of this House and we enclosed a cheque for Rs. 1,200 requesting him to get this information before this Bill is passed into an Act. We pointed out to him that we sent the cheque for the maximum amount which would be spent on getting that information. It was a matter of only a few days to get that information by means of girdawar kanungos. We were desirous to get that information and we had done this simply to give an opportunity to the Government to dispel that suspicion which the Honourable Premier says, Dr. Gokul Chand Narang has attributed in a sinister fashion. Why did not the Government take that opportunity before enacting this Bill into law? Is it not a fact that the date has been fixed to deprive one community of crores of rupees in the interest of another community? These are our allegations and these are our grievances. This is where the shoe pinches.

My friend, Malik Barkat Ali said, "You are opposed to expropriation." I for one endorse that view. I am opposed to it tooth and nail. He said, "Why extend the area of that expropriation by extending the scope of this Bill to mortgages before 1901?" My answer is that if by any chance you include within the purview of this legislation persons in whom the present Government is even slightly interested, the nature of the compensations proposed would not be an eye-wash which is provided in this legislation but would be something reasonable.

as stated in the Preamble and not 5 times or 10 times the land revenue, a matter which has absolutely no connection with or relevancy to the amount of mortgage money which may be a charge on the land. There is absolutely no reason why this legislation should be confined to mortgages up to 1901, except the one which I put forward before the select committee and which Dr. Narang supported on the floor of the House and to which no satisfactory answer has been given. There is just another point, to which I should like to make a reply, I mean the point made by Malik Barkat Ali, viz., that if Dr. Narang's amendment is accepted even mortgages of five years would be redeemed. I say what harm is there if that is so. Only those mortgages will be redeemed for which the mortgagors have derived sufficient benefit and if the transaction is of such a type that within even five years the benefit derived has been to such an extent as to wipe out the amount due to the mortgagee, well and good, the sooner the mortgage is redeemed the better. If they accept the principle that the mortgagee is to be ousted as soon as the amount due to him is paid irrespective of the terms agreed upon, where is the harm if mortgages of five years also be redeemed? I, therefore, strongly support the amendment moved by Dr. Narang.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): I have been rather surprised at the attitude of Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and the attitude of certain other speakers from the Opposition whose main line of argument was that through some sinister reasons of their own, the Government has selected the year prior to 1901 for limiting the application of this Act, because at that time it were mostly the non-agriculturists who had mortgaged lands. I wish to invite the attention of the House to page 387 of the Provincial Banking Enquiry Committee Report. They will find in that Report on the authority of Mr. Darling and of that great industrialist, the late Lala Harkishan Lal, that during 5 years ending 1900, the area mortgaged to the agriculturist tribes out of the total percentage of mortgaged area, was 61 per cent. Now, Sir, I ask my honourable friend Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and those who support him, is it fair that without a proper study of facts and figures they should charge the Government with a sinister proposition which on facts and figures is negatived? Sir, on actual data the Government want the restitution of mortgaged lands,  $\frac{2}{3}$  of which were mortgaged to the agriculturists and only  $\frac{1}{3}$  to the non-agricultural tribes. This is my first submission.

The second argument was raised by my honourable friend, Sardar Hari Singh, for whose acumen and industry I have great respect, on what authority and logic are the Government denying the benefit of this legislation to mortgagors between the year 1901 and later date. He said that most of the mortgages were effected after the year 1901 and how can we deny the benefit of this humanitarian legislation to those mortgagors? I will confine my figures to the amendments tabled by Sardar Hari Singh. In one of those amendments he suggests that this Act shall apply to all mortgages of land, unless they are in conformity with section 6 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, in other words, he advocates that the mortgages of the last 20 years—say up to the year 1929 should not be excluded and all others included. Let me invite his attention to the figures as they speak. He will find from the Provincial Banking Enquiry Committee Report and from Mr. Darling's book, the Punjab Peasant in Prosperity and Debt, that up to the year 1900 or 1899 when the Punjab

[Mir. Maqbool Mahmood.]

Alienation of Land Act was introduced the mortgaged debt was in the near figure of 16 crores of rupees. In the year 1929 it has been calculated that the actual figures of mortgage debt work out to about 52 crores of rupees. Professor Brij Narain has given a figure which has been accepted by the Provincial Banking Enquiry Committee, that the value of the rupee in this later period was about  $\frac{2}{3}$  of the value of the rupee in the earlier period. If you accept this value the mortgage debt in the year 1929 would come somewhere near 21 crores on the rupee value of 1901. A Government which is giving, by legislation, a relief applicable to mortgages amounting to about  $\frac{2}{3}$  of the par rupee value is not entitled to such glib-tongued criticism from the honourable members opposite.

One of the honourable members of the Opposition suggested "look at what we and our party elsewhere have been doing; how badly you fare as compared with what we have done in this respect." I ask, Sir, does this argument lie well on the lips of those of my friends opposite who have from their camp tabled even to this Bill certain amendments which with one stroke of pen would deny the benefit of this legislation practically to 99 per cent. of the poor peasants? I will now quote a few figures in reply to some of the arguments of the Opposition. The first is that so far as figures speak, in the year 1900, 61 per cent. of the mortgages of agricultural land were held by the agriculturists. Secondly, by this legislation we are offering relief which should effect in par money value about 16 crores out of 21 crores of mortgage debts. It may be asked, why have we not applied this Bill to the later period. Apart from the arguments advanced by my friends, Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani and Malik Barkat Ali, I submit that if we applied the Bill to the latest 20 years, i.e., from now up to say the year 1909 it will not be fair because the mortgagee would in all such cases not have taken undue benefit out of his mortgage transaction and if we applied it from 1901 to 1919, we will be guilty of that charge of discrimination against agriculturists which my honourable friend Rai Bahadur Mukand Lal Puri has been loudest to warn us.

Dr. Narang said, "why this discrimination against non-agriculturist mortgages?" Has he considered that the mortgages effected between 1901 and 1919 and which are still subsisting were practically all with the agriculturists, because under the Alienation of Land Act non-agriculturists could ordinarily not have a mortgage for more than 20 years? Dr. Narang does not want any discrimination against the non-agriculturists, but does want us to discriminate against the agriculturists of the Punjab? I appeal to my friends opposite that when they claim equity they should deal equity to all classes.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh (Amritsar North, Sikh, Rural) (Punjabi): Sir, the section of this Bill that is now under consideration aims at restituting those lands to the agriculturists which had passed away into the hands of non-agriculturists prior to the introduction of the Punjab Land Alienation Act of 1900. The amendment that is before the House at present was also tabled by me and is included in the list of amendments. The only difference is that you have suggested the addition of a word or two at the end which has been accepted by my learned friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang. I have risen to support this amendment and it means that all those lands which were mortgaged prior as well as subsequent to the enforcement of the Land Alienation Act of 1900 should be returned to the original mortgagors. The Bill should affect all mortgages irrespective of the fact whether they were mortgaged before 1901 or after that date. In short this amendment aims at restituting those lands as well which were mortgaged after 1901. It is this proposal that I intend to support. I may be allowed to mention that before the introduction of the Land Alienation Act in 1901, a large area of land belonging to the agriculturists had passed into the hands of the non-agriculturists with the result that a number of agriculturists had become landless. When the Government noticed this they hit upon the idea of introducing the Land Alienation Act. Their first ground for passing this Act was that if the agriculturists become landless, they would create trouble and disorder in the country. Their second ground for this Act was that 'kisans' generally supply recruits to the Army but if kisans were no more in possession of their lands, who will supply the recruits to the Imperial forces? I admit that this Act has also benefited the agriculturists but the fact remains that the Government was actuated to pass that Act by considerations of recruitment to the Army. I feel a little hesitation in exposing the real intention of that Government.

Besides, the Honourable the Premier remarked that if the Congress opposed this measure the 'kisans' would hoot them out of their meetings. But I am prepared to make this amendment the basis of our popularity among the kisans. Let it serve as a test. If the agriculturists do not readily approve of our amendment, we are prepared to resign from the Assembly. Is the Government also prepared to accept the challenge and resign office on this issue?

Minister for Revenue: May I ask what the honourable member is going to challenge me about?

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh: Sir, I have thrown no challenge to him so far, but if you now permit me, I have a mind to say something. (Great uproar and noise) I cannot proceed owing to the noise in the House. I seek your protection, Sir. There is noise and people are hurling challenges against one another.

Sir, It is a well-known fact that since the enforcement of the Land Alienation Act, no land could have passed from the hands of the agriculturists into the hands of the non-agriculturists. All mortgaged lands, therefore, which have passed from the hands of the poor agriculturists must have gone into the possession of bigger agriculturists. I may point out here that agriculturist money-lenders are far more cruel than the non-agriculturist money-lenders. It was possible sometimes for the agriculturists to intimidate the bani and get the time limit of his debts extended but the agriculturist money-lenders recover their debts forcibly from the debtors and take the adverse possession of their lands. In these days all the mortgaged lands go into the possession of the agriculturist money-lenders. But the Unionist Government proposes by passing this Bill to restitute only those lands which are mortgaged with non-agriculturists and it does not intend to return those lands of the poor agriculturists which are in possession of the agriculturist money-lender, although they are only 5 per cent. in the province. May be they are even less in number. As a matter of fact the Unionist Government is not out to protect 95 per cent. of the agriculturists but wants to benefit the remaining 5 per cent. only who are money-lenders. I think the agriculturist money-lenders are less than 5 per cent. of the total number of agriculturists in this province. Here I may be allowed to mention that I have toured extensively in the rural areas and gathered an idea of what the people really want. In fact I have been feeling their pulse on this point.

Premier : But the truth seems to be the other way about.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : The people want that their lands which have passed into the hands of the agriculturist money-lenders should be restituted to them. But the Premier seems to think that if some land belonging to an agriculturist goes into the possession of some other agriculturist then it does not matter very much. In a way it remains in the same general group of agriculturists. But I may remind the Honourable Premier that if my neighbour takes possession of my land I wish to kill him in order to recover my land. In view of this fact I wish to make it plain to the Government that, whatever I may feel personally about this Bill, the Congress does not like any class legislation. In the eyes of the Congress all the rich are rich and all the poor are poor, unlike the Unionist Government which regards even the big zamindars as the poorest of the poor. This Government makes distinction between people who do not differ in reality. It means to protect the agriculturist money-lenders and ruin the non-agriculturist money-lenders. Perhaps the House has not forgotten the time when the Government vehemently opposed the Resolution that aimed at excluding the lambardars, sufedposhes and zaidars from the right of voting in the provincial elections. In fact the Government wanted to safeguard the interests of their henchmen. It is an open secret that this Government has all along been keeping the interests of the rich in the fore-front. Even now it is following the same policy. But if our amendment is accepted the poor stand to gain by it to a large extent. They can get back a considerably large area of land which they have parted with already. In view of these facts I strongly support this amendment so that the poor agriculturists may benefit by it.

Honourable members : The question may now be put.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the question be now put.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, it seems that the House is impatient and some people have even complained that this is an attempt to stifle discussion. Whether that is true or not, I shall be very brief. I shall very briefly touch the points discussed by the Honourable Premier, Malik Barkat Ali, Mir Maqbool Mahmood and some others.

The Honourable Premier and Malik Barkat Ali were pleased to say that the 8th of June 1901 was fixed because it was presumed that people who had secured mortgages before 1901 had derived sufficient benefit from mortgages. My simple answer to this is that this presumption is absolutely unwarranted. Some people might have taken their mortgages in 1900, while others might have taken their mortgages in 1902, so that it cannot be said that people who took mortgages in 1900 have derived sufficient benefit from the mortgages and those who took mortgages in 1902 or soon after the Land Alienation Act came into force did not derive sufficient benefit from the mortgages.

Then again, my submission is that you will kindly refer to sub-clause (a) of clause 7 which runs as follows :—

“ If the Collector finds that the mortgage is one to which this Act does apply, he may, notwithstanding anything contained in any other enactment for the time being in force, direct by order in writing—
 (a) that the mortgage be extinguished.”

So that it is clear that the test is not the measure of time, but the test is the measure of the benefit derived from the mortgage. From their own argument, therefore, the fixing of the closing point at the 8th June, 1901 is out of order. It is quite possible that a man who has had a mortgage for ten years might have derived more benefit from his mortgage than the man who has been in possession for 50 years up to 1901 or up to now. If there was any condition or provision for the measurement of the benefit derived or the test was simply the duration of the mortgage, there might have been some force in the argument of the Honourable Premier and that advanced by Malik Barkat Ali. I was more surprised at the argument advanced by Malik Barkat Ali. He was absolutely ignoring the provision of clause 7 of the Bill. He drew my attention, as he said, to one aspect of my argument and that was that some people might have taken their mortgages only for 5 years and they might not have derived sufficient benefit. If they have not derived sufficient benefit the mortgage would not be compulsorily redeemed and compensation would not be given. Then again, I would put just one question to the Honourable Premier and Malik Barkat Ali, though the latter is not here at present. When I was discussing the question of benamis, the Honourable Premier would remember that one of the points urged by me was this. Suppose a man has taken a benami mortgage in January 1938 and this Bill which has already been passed comes into force in another few weeks or a few days. What becomes of the money which may be ten thousand or fifty thousand rupees and the man who has taken the benami mortgage in the full belief that it was an innocent mortgage. Then they said he is a thief and like a thief he must be punished simply because he tried to circumvent the Land Alienation Act. Now the same argument is being urged which was not accepted when I urged it in favour of my amendment which I was moving in connection with that Bill. Then, my honourable friend, the Premier tried to discuss a question of law and I submit with all respect, as usual he floundered when he was discussing the question of conditional sales and their effect. I must say that I was not able to follow the legal conclusions which he was trying to place before this House and I would ask him again if he can possibly do so to make his position clear when he gets up to reply. The cat was out of the bag when the Honourable Premier admitted that after 1901 all the mortgages are in favour of the zamindars and, therefore, we cannot touch them. The question is not of legality or illegality. Even the mortgages executed before 1901 were legal. They were not benami. We are no longer discussing the benami transactions. We are discussing the mortgages which from every point of view, the point of view of law and morality, were perfectly valid and good and are now sought to be set aside, not on the ground of fraud or deceit or any such consideration, but simply on the ground of—Government has really no ground—benefiting poor people, on the assumption that all mortgagors were poor and all mortgagees were rich. If this is so and the question of Land Alienation Act and its circumvention does not arise at all, what is then the distinction between the mortgages effected before 1901 and those effected after 1901? Beyond this that those prior to 1901 might also be in favour of non-agriculturists while those executed after 1901 would be almost entirely in favour of agriculturists Government have no grounds whatsoever. The sum and substance of the whole argument of the Honourable Premier was that it was 'Ghar ki ghar men rahi' گھر کی گھر میں رہی. It does not matter whether a poor and starving agriculturist mortgaged the only land that he had in favour of a big bellied agriculturist who had lakhs and lakhs at his disposal. It does not matter simply because it is an agriculturist who is mortgaging it in favour of an agriculturist. Now, is that an argument, is not that an evasion of the principle trotted out by themselves? Is it not clear that they are not proceeding on any moral principles at all but that they are proceeding only on class considerations and are making a discrimination between one class and another? If they were proceeding on moral principles, even on economic principles, even on partially socialistic principles, they would have fixed no limit of time, because there is nothing to show that the mortgagors, before 1901 were poor and those after 1901 were rich. Then again, I may ask the member-in-charge of the Bill, rather I would draw his attention to the argument of the Honourable Premier that if after 1901 it is 'Ghar ki ghar men rahi', گھر کی گھر میں رہی, then why are they dragging in the agriculturist mortgagees of the period prior to 1901? That also is 'Ghar ki ghar men rahi', گھر کی گھر میں رہی. Why are you dragging them in? And here I may just refer back to the argument which I advanced on a previous occasion. I trust many people said to Raja Sahib, "ap te galean Bakhsa jayman vi gale." آپ نے گلوں بادمان چومان when he insisted that agriculturists should also be included. It means that the agriculturists before 1901 will also be ruined if they happened to be mortgagees. Some of course will benefit if their lands are restored to them but I am just now discussing the argument of the Honourable Premier that after 1901 it is a case of Ghar ki ghar men rahi گھر کی گھر میں رہی transfer of an agriculturist in favour of an agriculturist. If that argument has any force, you should exclude the agriculturist mortgagees who had secured mortgages before 1901 because the same principle would apply to them with equal force. Originally, as you know, they were confining the operation of the Bill only to non-agriculturists, but it was owing to some reason, may be to remove the legal defect in the Bill under Section 298, that they decided otherwise. All right, drag in the agriculturist also so far as the mortgages before 1901 are concerned. I am not concerned with the motives but I am only concerned with the argument advanced by the Honourable Premier and I beg to submit that that argument had absolutely no force. It is an argument of sheer force, of expropriation or spoliation and if I may use an anglicised Indian word of purely 'loot'. Because certain people who hold certain mortgages have not got physical strength on their side and they cannot fight, they are being looted. There is no other argument except the argument of force. A lathi, which happens to be now in the hand of Sir Sikender Hyat-Khan, is being used against these poor people who have the misfortune of securing mortgages before 1901. This is the position, and you see the hollowness of the argument advanced by the other side. You know Sardar Hari Singh did great service to the House when he quoted certain figures to show how these big zamindars who take poor zamindars' lands on mortgages, suck their blood and, as I submitted day before yesterday or the day before, they are worse blood-suckers than the most blood-sucking of the banias because in addition to the power of money that they have, they have the advantage of having superior force also in their hands. They have the lathi in their hands while the bania has only his bahi which cannot break anybody's bones. The zamindars have bahis and have also got lathis. We have heard stories here of poor zamindars and agriculturists labouring from sun-rise to sun-set and working in the cold nights of Poh and Magh and the hot days of Jeth and Asrah and then the bania coming and taking away his produce. Is it the bania who takes away the produce? Is it not the agriculturist landlord who takes away half his produce? Measure the paunches even in this House and you will find that the weight is on the side of the zamindar benches if I may take the liberty of saying so. It is, therefore, a myth to say that it is the bania alone who loots these people and it is only against the bania mortgagee that a relief to the mortgagor is necessary. In no less degree is relief necessary for poor agriculturists against the big wigs of the zamindar classes and there is no reason why they should not have been dragged in if a feeling of pity and compassion was at the bottom of this Bill.

The Honourable Premier said, "Well, you will see what happened after 1901. Poor soldiers returned from the War and after their pensions they took some mortgages and therefore, it would be very harsh to deprive them of those mortgages." Was the Indian Army recruited only after 1901? Were not there any poor soldiers in the field before 1901 whose conditions required consideration? And then, is it the poor soldier alone who has to be considered? Is it he alone who takes a mortgage for the maintenance of his family out of the small earnings, out of the small savings of his service? Can't you consider the case of a poor clerk who has been working for eight to ten hours a day for 25 or 30 years and retires after a long service with a few hundred rupees in his hand? He goes to his village, he would like to keep a cow and for the maintenance of that cow he would like to have a small piece of land if possible and invests a few hundred rupees in a mortgage. Why should he be deprived? Why should a widow, who gets a little insurance money after her husband's death, and invests it in a mortgage, be deprived and why should her orphaned children be deprived of this advantage? The whole argument was one sided and discriminatory. These gentlemen seem to feel only for one class. For them other classes do not seem to exist. They wax eloquent when they talk of the poor zamindar but they do not know that the number of non-zamindars is equal to the number of zamindars in this province and they are also the creation of the same God who rules this universe. Now that they are in power, it is their duty to look not to the interests of one class only but to the interests of other classes as well.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): On a point of order. The motion now before the House is not whether the Bill only applies to the agriculturists and not to non-agriculturists. The motion is with regard to the extension of time and so far as its application to agriculturists and non-agriculturists is concerned, the Government has already made that point clear.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I know that. Probably he was not present here when his Chief advanced this argument. He said, "After the year 1901 it is the zamindars who have taken the land and, therefore, they should be protected and they should not be included in the operation of this Bill." There is, therefore, no point of order. As you will see, Sir, the same argument was repeated by my honourable friend, Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani. He said, "This Land Alienation Act is the Magna Charta of the zamindars. We are not going in any way to impair its efficacy and its efficiency". He merely repeated and translated the words of the Honourable Premier. He said, "For the sake of a few people we are not going to injure the zamindars". What did he mean by "few people"? Who are these "few people"? These few people are the mortgagors and cannot be anybody else and who are these mortgagors? Are they few? Is it a few people whose lands to the extent of 84,37,800 acres are with these big wigs of the agricultural classes? Are they few people? On the other hand, perhaps comparatively speaking it is a few people who have taken and grabbed their lands and the number of people who have been deprived of their lands is much larger. Look at the argument being advanced from that side. You will remember when it was a question of benami the Honourable the Premier argued, "oh, for the sake of a few people are you going to injure 2½ crores". There the number of mortgagors became 2½ crores and the number of mortgagees a few thousand at the utmost; and now the number of mortgagees is very large and the mortgagors are very few! These benami transactions, as he himself argued, are included in these 34 lakh acres. That means that they are smaller than the holders of the 34 lakh acres, so that it is not a question of benami holders: the beneficiaries under the benami were more numerous than in the present case. The number of mortgagees, therefore, is certainly smaller than the number of mortgagors: the argument of my honourable friend was that he would not touch the Land Alienation Act for the sake of a few people. These mortgagors now become a few, who according to the Premier were 2½ crores. I cannot understand the sense of consistency or inconsistency of the gentlemen opposite. The honourable Mir Maqbool Mahmood referred to the Punjab Banking Enquiry Committee, page 337. He said that even five years before 1900 the percentage of land held in mortgage by agriculturists was 61. That is perfectly right and he says, "have we not done a great favour to the non-agriculturists or an act of great justice or impartiality that we have brought in the holders of 61 per cent. of mortgaged land under the operation of this Bill". My submission is why not bring in now cent per cent. people who are holding mortgages after 1901? They may not be cent per cent. I am only adopting the argument of the Honourable the Premier. If they are cent. per cent. what is the justification for allowing them to sit tight on their mortgages, some of which they might have held for the last 37 years because they might have taken them immediately after the Act of 1901? Is there any justification to allow them to suck the blood of the poor mortgagees, because ex-hypothesi according to these gentlemen they are poor and they are helpless and simplotons as my honourable friend Mr. Gurmani himself claimed to be (laughter). Why should the mortgagors after 1901 lose to the extent of 34 lakhs of acres? Why should these zamindars be not given any relief? My honourable friend S. Sohan Singh Josh is a man of the masses, a man of the people, and he has said on the floor of the House that he has gone from village to village and met people and he was prepared to accept the challenge of the Honourable the Premier, whether it was parliamentary or not I am not concerned, and that he was prepared to resign his seat and seek re-election on the strength of this amendment of mine. He feels sure and I am sure that he would be returned even with a greater majority if he resigned and made that a test of his election propaganda. There is, therefore, nothing to justify the conclusion that ordinary agriculturists, poor agriculturists, are not for the inclusion of mortgages after 1901. Then Mir Maqbool Mahmood advanced a very interesting argument. He said Mr. Puri and Dr. Narang have been advancing arguments against discrimination and will it not be discriminatory to deprive poor zamindars who had taken mortgages after 1901? Well what can I say to an argument like this? Unfortunately he is not attentive. The argument has only to be stated to carry its refutation with it. It is not by division of time that we have to judge of discrimination or lack of discrimination. We have to take the whole thing together, all mortgages as such, apart from the fact whether it is an agriculturist in favour of an agriculturist or in favour of a non-agriculturist, whether they were made 50 years ago or 80 years ago because the test is the receiving of benefit and not the duration of time. Therefore this is a Bill of discrimination flung at our face, and what we are asking for is to remove the discrimination, I would submit if they have any honest motives behind this Bill, if they have any sincerity behind this Bill, if they are really anxious to help the poor agriculturist, who under stress of circumstances and to meet his urgent needs, mortgaged his land, probably the only holding he had in favour of an agriculturist or non-agriculturist, they should make no distinction whatsoever either as to the caste of the mortgagee or as to the time before which or after which the mortgages were executed.

Minister for Revenue (The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia) (Punjab): It has been stated by my learned friends Dr. Narang and Pandit Shri Ram Sharma that they do not object to the mortgages made with petty military pensioners who made their pile and are receiving their pensions also. But they object to high salaried military officers. They have asked us why do not the Government weigh these two classes of military pensioners in one balance. Furthermore, it has been stated by my honourable friend, Pandit Shri Ram Sharma, that he and his colleagues are soldiers of the Congress Party, although they may not have seen swords in actual use during their life time. (Laughter). It is not an insinuation, Sir, I have made this remark because they believe in non-violence. In reply to the objection raised by my honourable friends opposite I would like to submit that honorary captains and subedar-majors are not generally high-salaried officers. The honourable members can verify this statement from my honourable friend sitting there who is a retired Subedar-Major. The pensions given to these captains and subedar-majors are say Rs. 50, Rs. 60 or Rs. 75. If these military officers hold mortgages in their native villages, I do not think they deserve to be rebuked on that score. Now, the point is this that before 1901 there was no distinction between an agriculturist and a non-agriculturist. Everybody could purchase land without let or hindrance. The people who were not notified as agriculturists at that time are now raising a hue and cry that they may also be included among notified agriculturists so that they may be able to deprive the petty zamindars of their lands. That is why the honourable members opposite are making persistent efforts to oppose the proposed Bill. Sir, the Land Alienation Act was passed during the regime of Lord Curzon and proved a boon for the petty zamindar. Before that a zamindar could mortgage his land with a non-agriculturist, but after 1901 only agriculturists were permitted to purchase and that is why they are opposing the proposed legislation. My honourable friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri was pleased to remark that during the Great War wheat was very dear. The zamindars made heaps of money and they could have redeemed their lands. (Voices: We can't hear; a little louder please.) You cannot provoke me like that. Sir, the Opposition wants us to collect facts and figures regarding the mortgaged land proposed to be restituted under this Bill, community-wise and class-wise. Let me assure the honourable members sitting on the opposite benches that the Government is making inquiry into this matter and as soon as relevant facts and figures are collected they would be placed before the House. I express my deep regret that I could not collect them here at Simla but I hope to be able to do so at Lahore. It is very unfair on the part of the Opposition that they have adopted new tactics. They want to blacken the face of the Government by presenting them a cheque of Rs. 1,200 for the expenses to be incurred in connection with the collection of facts and figures.....

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Our money is not smeared with coal-tar.

Minister for Revenue : Why do you wish to offer us a cheque for Rs. 1,900? Government can spend money to collect figures.

Now, Sir, the question is that my honourable friends opposite want that facts and figures regarding the redeemed land should be collected at their expenses. In this connection I would like to submit that at present we are collecting facts and figures regarding benami transactions and as soon as this work is completed we will at once turn our attention to the collection of facts and figures regarding redeemed mortgaged land and try to satisfy our friends.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of order. Sir, the honourable members sitting on this side are taking exception to the words "Cha!" used by the Honourable Minister.

Minister for Revenue : If the Opposition really object to it I am ready to withdraw it.

Sardar Partab Singh : As far as I remember the honourable members are taking exception to these words: "They are going to blacken the face of the Government, etc., etc."

Mr. Speaker : The Punjabi language is not unparliamentary. (Laughter).

Minister for Revenue : Sir, the total area of land which has been redeemed by zamindars from agriculturists is—(Here the Honourable Minister began to quibe and there was laughter and noise). I began to count the figures for the benefit of the Opposition so that they may be fully satisfied. I was submitting that the total area of land which has been redeemed by zamindars from agriculturists is 118,000 acres.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Up to which year?

Minister for Revenue : For the year ending 15th June, 1931. Now I will tell you how many acres of land were redeemed by zamindars from non-agriculturists.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I know whether these figures relate to the redemptions made in one year or more?

Minister for Revenue : These figures relate to one year only. I may submit that my friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, has stated that after the year 1901 lands have not been mortgaged with the non-agriculturists but only the big landholders got them from the small landholders. I have already given a reply to this very question on some previous occasion and I do not like to add anything to what I have already said that the number of big landlords is very very small.

Again my friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang advanced another argument that the bania has not got a lathi in his possession by which he can compel the ministerial party to accept his view points. The zamindars in his opinion have a lathi and they get every thing done if they so desire. But I may submit that the bania has such a lathi which can break all other lathis and that is his baht. The lathi of the zamindar is powerless to save him from the lathi of a Bania.

I may submit that once a poor jat questioned someone as to how baniya make money. He was told that they made it by the pasaku, i.e., a baniya weighs less by binding a small stone with his balance and thus he earns much. A jat also conceived the idea of opening a shop of tas tale. He opened a shop and sat on his shop and attached a big stone with his scales as pasaku.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, should not we reserve these talks for after-dinner function? I think that would be the most appropriate occasion.

Minister for Revenue : I was submitting that the Jat sat in his shop and was waiting for some one to come to him and buy from him. After a short while a small girl came with some corn in her lap and asked the Jat shopkeeper to give her oil in exchange. (Interruptions). The Jat shopkeeper put the whole of the grains in one pan of his scales, but on account of the weight of stone which he had tied with his scales as pasaku, the pan did not come down. When the girl asked for tale in exchange for her corn he remarked how could he give her oil, her corn was not sufficient to adjust even the poise of the scales. So, Sir, is the case of my friends on the opposite. They are crying because their pasaku is being adjusted.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That in lines 4—5 of clause 2, for the words "commencement of that Act" the words "or after 8th June 1901" be substituted.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : I move—

That in line 4, between the words "to" and "the", the words "8th June, 1901" be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : Sir, I move :

That in lines 4—8, the words "the commencement" to the same group" be deleted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is —

That clause 2, without the explanation, as amended stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Sardar Mula Singh : Sir, what about my amendment?

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member's amendment is out of order. The object of this Bill is not to create a new class of agriculturists. So by moving an amendment to a clause of the Bill under consideration, the honourable member cannot amend the Land Alienation Act.

Mr. Speaker : The motion is—

That the explanation stand part of the clause.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : Sir, my submission is that this explanation should not stand part of the clause or of the Bill. This explanation did not exist in the Bill as originally introduced and it seems that it was introduced during the discussions in the select committee. My submission is that it will be gross injustice to deprive people who have already been sued and against whom a decree for redemption has been passed and a certain sum as redemption money has been fixed in that decree. The decree might not have been executed. The amount settled by the court might not have been paid. But the rights of the parties inter se have certainly been settled by the courts. I submit that in such cases this Act should not apply. After all the principle on which this Bill is based is that the poor mortgagor should be protected against the rich and possibly rapacious mortgagee who has secured valuable lands for inadequate consideration or even if they have been secured for adequate consideration, has received sufficient benefit out of the income of the land. Now when a mortgagor goes to court and sues the mortgagee for redemption and is prepared to pay the principal money with whatever interest the court might have decreed, the mortgagor does not deserve any concession. I am told that a case was actually in the minds of some gentlemen who have been dealing with this Bill. In that particular case a decree has already been passed and the amount has been settled. No appeal has been filed against that order. It means that the mortgagor has accepted the decree and is not feeling any grievance against the decree as passed by the Court.

That in line 7 between the words "person" and "who" the words "other than a member of a scheduled caste" be inserted.

Premier : May I ask the honourable member to make himself more clear, because after all I must know the exact nature of the case he is referring to.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I shall make myself clear by putting the Honourable Premier a question whether he was not aware that there was a definite case, probably coming from Jullundur or some such place where a decree was passed for redemption on payment of Rs. 50,000 or Rs. 60,000 and it is pending execution and whether the decree-holder in that case will not be benefited by the inclusion of this explanation in that clause?

Premier : I am afraid my honourable friend has again got his facts topsyturvy. The information which I received is this that a decree had been given in a certain case where the original amount of mortgage was only Rs. 500 but a decree was eventually given for about Rs. 50,000 and where the mortgagor himself applied to the court that his property should be sold and the mortgagee be paid Rs. 50,000 and the rest may be paid back to him or the remaining land be handed over to him. I understand that the mortgagee himself objected and went right up to the High Court to object to the land being sold, because he said that he is a non-agriculturist whereas the debtor is an agriculturist and his land cannot be sold.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Was it a suit for redemption?

Premier : Yes.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : And the decree was passed on payment of Rs. 50,000?

Premier : Yes. The mortgagor accepted the decree and he was preparing to sell the land so that the amount of the decree should be deducted out of the sale-proceeds of the land and the rest of the land or the money be given to him. The mortgagee in that case protested and objected to this and went right up to the High Court and said that because this man is an agriculturist and the mortgagee is a non-agriculturist, this transaction cannot possibly be valid and therefore he should not be allowed to sell his land and the High Court has held that he cannot sell his land and therefore it cannot be redeemed.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Where does the case stand now?

Premier : It is a subsisting mortgage.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I am greatly obliged to the Premier for throwing further light on this case. My information certainly was hearsay, for I was not a member of the select committee. But it does not matter how this case stands or any other particular cases stand. The question is whether there cannot be cases and numerous cases where suits for redemption have been upheld and decrees have been passed and probably execution proceedings are going on? Is there any justification for treating these mortgages as subsisting mortgages, as this explanation says? You kindly read this explanation once more with your usual care. The explanation says —

A mortgage shall be deemed to subsist notwithstanding a decree or order for its redemption having been passed, provided redemption has not taken place before the commencement of this Act.

There might be hundreds of cases where decrees have been passed and execution proceedings are pending and the mortgagor decree-holder is probably about to pay the money and redeem the land. Does the principle of this Bill apply to such cases? The principle of this Bill, as I understand it, is, as I was just pointing out when I was interrupted, compassion and pity for the poor mortgagor, but when a mortgagor himself goes to court and says that he is prepared to pay ten thousand or fifty thousand or even a hundred thousand rupees if the land is given to him, what right has the Government to intervene and say, 'no we shall give you the land without payment of anything on payment of a nominal consideration?' What justification is there for including such mortgages in the Bill? It is clearly a matter between two parties. The parties have agreed or the parties have been made to agree by the court that has passed a decree in a suit for redemption, or perhaps the mortgagor is raising money for the redemption of the mortgage and then this Bill is brought forward and he stays his hands. He says 'let me see when this Bill is passed, the moment this Bill is passed I get my land without payment of the consideration or the redemption money which a regular court of law has decreed and which I have accepted as proper and just.' My submission is that this Explanation is fraught with the greatest mischief and embodies the greatest injustice that any law-maker can conceive of and I think the Government would be fair enough to delete this.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : I have an amendment in my name in regard to this Explanation and it runs:—

That for the Explanation, the following be substituted:—

A mortgage shall be deemed to cease to subsist if a decree or order for its redemption has been passed before the commencement of this Act.

My reasons are that after a mortgagor and a mortgagee have fought out in a court of law and the mortgagor has got a decree the mortgage debt is sometime not paid for five or even six years. My submission is that if the parties concerned have fought out their case in a court of law and a judicial decision has been given, it is extremely unfair and unjust that this Act should come and intervene. If the redemption has taken place or not, the Explanation as put in the Bill appears to me to be quite unnecessary. If the redemption has actually taken place the mortgage ceases to exist. If there is any question of a mortgage subsisting or not subsisting that question can arise only if the decree is passed and the redemption has not taken place. Therefore, with that object in view, I have substituted my explanation in place of the Explanation put in by the Government. My explanation, as I have explained, is that if a decree has been passed the mortgage will not be regarded as a subsisting mortgage. It will be a judicial decision and a judicial decision must be accepted. There should be a finality to the dispute between the parties. There were certain points of dispute and both parties fought out those points in a court of law and the court gave its decision. After that to set aside that decision and return the land to the mortgagor without payment of the mortgage money and to prevent the mortgagee from having the land sold appears to me to be unjust. There might be some equity in favour of the mortgagor. If he has, he must fight out in a court of law, but after he has fought it out in a court there can be no equity in favour of the mortgagee.

[L. Duni Chand.]

I further submit that it is a kind of reflection upon the judicial courts. Some of the mortgage decrees may be decrees of the Privy Council. Most of these big mortgage cases go to the Privy Council. Some of the Privy Council decrees might be now pending in execution courts. There might be various decrees of the High Court which this Bill is going to set aside. With these remarks, I move my amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Explanation under consideration. Amendment moved—

That for the Explanation, the following be substituted.

A mortgage shall be deemed to cease to subsist if a decree or order for its redemption has been passed before the commencement of this Act.

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan Urban): I rise to oppose the amendment of my learned friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang as also the amendment tabled by my learned friend, Lala Duni Chand. I am really surprised that in supporting his amendment arguments of the kind put forward should have really been put forward by a lawyer of the standing of Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang. Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang will bear me out that irrespective of this Bill even under the law as it stands under the Transfer of Property Act, the mere passage of a decree for redemption does not mean redemption and does not extinguish the mortgage. (Hear, hear). Under the Transfer of Property Act a mortgage is extinguished only when redemption has taken place; and even where a redemption decree has been passed, if that redemption decree has not been executed, it is perfectly open to a mortgagor to bring a second suit for redemption. A second suit for redemption can be permissible to a mortgagor in these circumstances only, because in the eye of the law the mortgage is not extinguished; the mortgage subsists. If that is the existing law, namely, that the passage of a decree for redemption will not automatically extinguish the mortgage but that the mortgage subsists, how can my learned friend argue that this Explanation which merely restates the existing law amounts to great injustice? I can quite understand the argument of my learned friend and it was because I felt that an argument of this kind might be advanced to mislead the collector—it was my fear that the ingenuity of my friends like Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang may at times mislead the collector in holding: “well, the mortgage has been extinguished because a redemption decree has been passed, although not yet carried out”—that I had the audacity of—call it whatever you like—suggesting the insertion of this Explanation. The responsibility of this Explanation, I candidly confess, rests on my shoulders, and the Premier who has been unjustly attacked, had nothing to do with it; and I respectfully submit that this Explanation is perfectly in keeping with the existing law on the subject. I challenge any of my friends opposite—Lala Duni Chand or any other friend—to establish in this House that under the existing law of redemption, a decree for redemption—an unexecuted decree for redemption—automatically extinguishes the mortgage. If they admit that under the existing law a mortgage subsists, in spite of a decree for redemption, which has not yet been executed, then when you have enacted in clause 2 that this Act shall apply to all subsisting mortgages, my submission is how can you oppose the insertion of this Explanation? You can certainly say that the Explanation is redundant. But we have introduced this Explanation as a measure of precaution lest any lawyer on the other side might try to mislead the collector or lest any collector, through any mistake, may pass a judgment which will work out injustice. That being so, if it is a fact that an unexecuted decree for redemption is nothing, that in spite of it the mortgage subsists, then this explanation is inserted merely out of the abundance of caution (ex abundanti cautela). It has been stated by Lala Duni Chand, but before I argue on his contentions, let me say that his amendment is as follows :—

That for the explanation, the following be substituted :—

A mortgage shall be deemed to cease to subsist if a decree or order for its redemption has been passed before the commencement of this Act.

Lala Duni Chand will agree with me that if his amendment is accepted it really reverses and wipes out the existing law under the Transfer of Property Act, because, as I have already said, a decree for redemption which has not been executed, namely, where redemption has not actually taken place, where land has not gone back into the possession of the mortgagor, the mortgage subsists and until the land has come back to him on the basis of that very mortgage, a mortgagor can bring a second suit for redemption. A reference was made to a Jullundur case. Details of that case are horri-fying indeed, and I should like to acquaint my learned friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, if he wants to be acquainted—if he likes to—with the details of that case. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I do not want to be acquainted) but if he is not anxious, it is not necessary for me to give the details of that case, though that case was mentioned by him and that case may have been the inspiration for this explanation. But the explanation is of general applicability and will apply to all mortgages which subsist on the date of the commencement of this Act. It has been said that where a court of law has passed a redemption decree and has directed that on payment of a particular amount redemption shall take place, you cannot disregard the amount fixed by the court and place the case again under the jurisdiction of the collector. My answer is that if the poor mortgagor because of his inability cannot pay that heavy amount and redemption has neither taken place nor will take place, how can you by any reasoning or justice on your side argue that this Bill should not apply to that land because the poor mortgagor had the misfortune of knocking at the doors of courts of justice? If mortgages subsist, what does it matter if courts have worked out any sums? Courts go by the terms of the contract between the parties; there is no doubt about it. This Bill has been introduced because of the hardship involved in taking account according to the terms of the contract. If we were to go by the terms of the contract between the parties, no redemption could possibly take place. The cases which this Bill is intended to meet are cases of genuine hardship, cases where, as a matter of fact, mortgagees have got more than their original advance, several times more than the original advance plus even the interest and when it is a question of calculation according to the bansi's baki, in spite of those benefits the bansi can still show you a balance of several thousands as against the original advance of three thousand. This Jullundur case was a case of 1871 in which the original advance was Rs. 2,000 and later on increased to Rs. 8,000 and notwithstanding the fact that the mortgagee had been in possession of this valuable land situated in the vicinity of a town—very valuable land indeed, most fertile land—he could not produce his accounts—he dare not—he was a mortgagee with possession, bound under the law to keep accounts—the first court gave a decree for redemption on payment of about Rs. 30,000. When the matter went to the High Court, the amount was raised to something like Rs. 60,000. The mortgagor had come to the court with the payment that he may be ordered redemption on payment of nothing. The redemption was finally ordered on payment of Rs. 65,000. The man is not in a position to pay. He tried his best to find the money but he could not. He went to court with the request, "Very well, let me parcel out this valuable land into two or four pieces and let me sell half or one quarter of it because I feel certain that the sale of half or one-fourth will fetch a sum of Rs. 65,000." When he went to court with this request, the mortgagee opposed him in that request and threw against him section 16 of the Land Alienation Act which lays down that the land of a member of an agricultural tribe cannot be sold by a court in execution of a decree. It was thus objected that the court cannot order this land, even half of the land, to be sold. The court did as the mortgagee desired. The poor mortgagor went to the High Court. The High Court had every sympathy with him. One of the Honourable Judges told me to cite this case before the legislature and discuss it in the Legislative Assembly so that the Assembly may prescribe an appropriate remedy to meet a situation of this kind. I drew the attention of the High Court to Order 21, Rule 81 or 88, of the Civil Procedure Code, which lays down that it is open to a judgment-debtor to sell his property privately with the permission of the court. I asked for that permission but unfortunately there is a clause in that very rule which says that this rule to permit private sale on certain conditions shall not apply to those mortgage decrees in which the sale of property is directed by the decree itself. Therefore, the Civil Procedure Code did not help the poor mortgagor. I was actually asked by the Honourable Judge to move the Premier with a view to have rule 88 amended so that justice may be done. These are the particulars of that case. The land still remains unredeemed and shall remain unredeemed because the wherewithal for that redemption—the amount—cannot be obtained. Therefore, I put it to the House, if the mortgage subsists, what does it matter whether the amount as worked out by the court is this much or that much? After all, the collector has been given power in every case to work out equities. Why should people who have got redemption decrees passed on the basis of contracts, be deprived of those equities which are the basis of this legislation? I, therefore, respectfully submit that the addition of this explanation is essential particularly in view of the attitude taken up by some of the members on the opposite side. The explanation only seeks to make the position perfectly clear so that people who fall within the purview of this legislation may not be deprived of its benefits on the ground of any technical quibble of the character discussed in this House. I, therefore, support the explanation as it stands in this Bill.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : Sir, I have heard with a certain amount of despair the learned speech which has just now been made. You will notice that the explanation did not form part of the original Bill but was introduced in the select committee.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is repeating the arguments given by Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : If one cannot even begin a speech by an introductory remark of that kind then no speech is possible.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is dealing with the fact whether the explanation was in the original Bill or it was inserted afterwards in the select committee.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : That is very relevant to the motion placed before you. No valid reasons have been given as to why the explanation was added. Of course, I understand the reasons now after the explanation of Malik Sahib, that the impelling motive of adding the explanation was the case of a particular individual mortgagor, who had been adjudicated by a court to pay 60 thousand, and in the interest of equity he thought that a man like that should be saved from payment of these dues. I have noticed in Simla several mortgagors against whom decrees up to a tune of Rs. 50,000—at any rate I have met one and know another—had been passed and who have flocked to Simla to induce the Ministers and legislators to help them to get out of the adjudications of the court and in some cases of the Privy Council. It is such things against which I wish to lodge a most vehement protest, i.e., that a legislation should be passed not on any general ground but with a view to meet individual cases and in whom some members may possibly be interested or who may succeed in inducing members to take interest in their case.

Dealing with the merits of the point raised by Malik Sahib, the question is not whether a second suit for redemption is barred or is not barred. The question simply is whether the collector is to be allowed to go behind the adjudication of the highest courts say that of the High Court or of the Privy Council. The question in redemption suits always is a question of account taken between the mortgagor and the mortgagee and if the Privy Council have passed a decree that after account-taking between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, an amount of Rs. 50,000 is due, should it be open to the collector to say that on his account-taking not only Rs. 50,000 is not due as decreed by the Privy Council but say Rs. 500 is due or that even nothing is due. No doubt technically a second suit for redemption is not barred but in the second suit for redemption the second court will be bound by the adjudication which has taken place between the parties in the previous suit by the principle of res judicata. Therefore, the mere fact that in some cases, a second suit for redemption is not barred, does not make any difference because the findings of the first suit are findings in the second suit. It is preposterous, in my opinion, that valid decrees of the highest courts passed in accordance with the law of the land should be ignored and thrown to the winds. Are you going to allow the collector to upset the decrees of the court, by which the parties have so far considered themselves to be bound? I say this kind of zulum should not be allowed to be perpetrated. By adding the explanation you have only brought to light and into prominence what is being enacted. Therefore, as I have submitted, I have no quarrel with the proposition of law which my learned friend pointed out: I object to the main policy of the Government which allows not only an old mortgage to be redeemed, without any payment, but which allows the decrees of the Privy Council to the tune of Rs. 50,000 or a lakh which have been passed several years ago, to be set aside by the collector. Sir,

[R. B. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

I wholeheartedly support the amendment which has been read out and commend it to the consideration of the Premier and of the House. It will not only be a great injustice but a violent interference with the principles on which our Government and in fact all civilised governments are based, if by this legislation you are also going to interfere with the previous adjudications by courts.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I do not think it is necessary for me at all to make a speech on this subject because my honourable friend Malik Barkat Ali has again come to my aid with his knowledge of law and his eloquence. He has met all the various points which Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang made and which my friend Mr. Puri has now made. But the two main points which were raised by both the speakers—also to some extent by Lala Duni Chand—were that by putting in this explanation we are practically putting the collector in the position where he will sit in judgment over the various civil courts which have given decrees. I am not a lawyer and I do not want to join issue with my friends over a legal point which I would, as a layman, call a legal quibble; but what my friend Malik Barkat Ali has explained is that a decree may have been given under which the mortgagor may be enabled to redeem his land and the decree may have been given two years ago and therefore he is exactly in the same position as the mortgagee in whose favour a decree is given. There is no difference whatsoever between them.

S. M. There is no question whatever of flouting the rulings of the Privy Council or the orders of the Privy Council, or going behind the decision of the Privy Council, much less setting aside the decision of the Privy Council. The position is that when a decree is given by a civil court with regard to a certain mortgage, it is open to the mortgagee to get the decree executed and it is also open to him not to get it executed. The exact position, which my honourable friend, Malik Barkat Ali, tried to explain was that we want to apply this measure, which has been devised purely on principle of equity, to all the subsisting mortgages. Now, before the Act comes into force, there may be several mortgagees, who think that it is going to pay them and they can get those decrees executed before it comes into law, or they can wait till the Act comes into force. If the High Court or the Privy Council or the lower courts have given judgments on the basis of the existing law, then it would be considered defective and, therefore, such decrees are out of the picture. Anybody who has not had his decree executed before this law comes into force will be on the same footing as a man who has not got into the court at all.

My honourable friend gave certain instances, but he forgot to cite one instance which I would quote now and that is that there is an instance where my honourable colleague, the Minister for Public Works, will lose to the tune of 60 thousands rupees as soon as this law comes into force. Now, in equity, we wish to see redeemed all mortgages that have been in existence for more than 40 years. In this case the redemption would cause hardship upon him, but we do not want to cater for any individual.

My honourable friend had the audacity to say that several people have been canvassing with regard to their individual cases. It is a most unbecoming insinuation on his part. After all, the legislature consists of a majority of persons who are not persuaded or tempted like him in these matters. We are not here to cater for any individual. We are here to cater for the vast majority of people who have lost their lands. I think that the arguments put forward by my honourable friend, although they may appear to have some ostensible validity, have no force in equity or justice.

Sardar Ajit Singh (South-West Punjab, Sikh, Rural) (Urdu) : It is a legal question and I, not being a lawyer, cannot go into the details of this motion. However, it is an ordinary custom that if a mortgagor wants to get his mortgaged land redeemed, he applies to the civil court and gets a decree for a certain sum fixed by the civil court and unless the mortgagor deposits the money decreed with the court, his land is not redeemed. If he does not deposit money, he has to do it and get a fresh decree from the court. So, in this case the mortgage subsists unless and until the decree money is paid off and the redemption obtained. Sir, I am of opinion that a mortgage must be considered to subsist even after a decree is passed by a court and therefore this explanation added to the clause must be allowed to remain in tact.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

The original explanation to clause 2 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Clause 2 as amended with its Explanation stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 3.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (1) of clause 3 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : Sir, I beg to move that—

At the end of sub-clause (2) the following be added :—

“specially appointed by the provincial Government to perform the duties of the collector for the purposes of this Act.”

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is that—

At the end of sub-clause (2) the following be added :—

“specially appointed by the provincial Government to perform duties of the collector for the purposes of this Act.”

Dr. Sir Gukul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : Sir, the clause, as it stands, reads thus:—

“The expression ‘Collector’ means the collector of the District in which the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situated, and shall include the assistant collector of the 1st grade.”

[Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.]

To this the honourable member wants to add as follows :—

“specially appointed by the provincial Government to perform the duties of the collector for the purposes of this Act.”

I shall be very brief and say only one or two sentences. I feel, Sir, that as this is rather an extraordinary and revolutionary law, it would be much better if the duty of deciding these cases is left only to the collector, and if that is not to be done, as there is a provision for the duties being entrusted to the assistant collector of the 1st grade, I would particularly object to a special man being appointed for this purpose.

Premier : Sir, I would like that the word “empowered” be substituted for the word “appointed”. The object is that instead of allowing every assistant collector automatically to act under this Act, we want to further impose the restriction that only those assistant collectors of the 1st grade, who are specially empowered, should deal with these cases, and we would see that only suitable and capable assistant collectors are empowered.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Yes, you may use the word “empowered.” But it would all depend upon the person you empower.

Premier : We will try to be as careful as we can to see that a proper person is appointed. So, I suggest that in place of the word “appointed” the word “empowered” be substituted.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

For the word “appointed” the word “empowered” be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

At the end of sub-clause (2) the following be added :—

“specially empowered by the provincial Government to perform the duties of the collector for the purposes of this Act.”

The motion was carried.

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan) : Sir, I beg to move—

That after sub-clause (2) the following explanation be added :—

“The words ‘mortgagor’ and ‘mortgagee’ shall include the successors-in-interest or assignees of the original mortgagor and mortgagee.”

Mr. Speaker : Motion moved.—

That after sub-clause (2) the following explanation be added :—

“The words mortgagor and mortgagee shall include the successors-in-interest or assignees of the original mortgagor and mortgagee.”

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maghbool Mahmood) : I support the amendment moved by my friend and suggest that the words ‘as the case may be’ be added at the end of his amendment.

Mr. Speaker : I cannot allow this amendment to amendment without notice.

(The proceedings here were expunged by the order of the Assembly.)

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan): I want to withdraw my amendment.

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): I move—

That the following new sub-clause be added:—

"(4) Mortgagor or mortgagee respectively shall include the assignee and the representative-in-interest of such mortgagor or mortgagee as the case may be."

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved—

That the following new sub-clause be added:—

"(4) Mortgagor or mortgagee respectively shall include the assignee and the representative-in-interest of such mortgagor or mortgagee as the case may be."

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural): Sir, one has to refer to the principle of the Bill again and again, but a little introduction seems sometimes to be inevitable. In this case not only is the mortgagor likely to benefit by the passing of this Bill into law but under Mir Maqbool Mahmood's amendment, if accepted, it means that his assignee would also benefit. One might put up with the property of a richer man passing into the hands of a poor man to whom that property originally belonged, whether the compensation is inadequate or adequate. One might put up with that amount of injustice. But where an assignee of a mortgagor is sought to be benefited, then certainly it becomes incumbent upon us to raise our protest. Yesterday or the day before yesterday I referred to a case. I have got it in writing from a mortgagee, a very poor man who possessed mortgage to the extent of only Rs. 600, one-half of what he and his brother held on mortgage. The land is worth about Rs. 2,000. The equity of redemption has been purchased by a big man from the mortgagor for Rs. 100. I have the concrete case with me. I have got the names and locality and everything else so that there cannot be any question about the genuineness of this grievance. Now the land is worth about Rs. 2,000. A big zamindar, a Sikh Sardar, has purchased the equity of redemption for Rs. 100 and as soon as this Bill becomes law, he will move the collector, if this amendment is accepted, as the assignee of the original mortgagor and will get that land worth Rs. 2,000 for Rs. 100 which he paid to the original mortgagor, and, may be, a few rupees which may be 5 or 10 or 20 time the jama of the land at the time. Do you really intend to include such cases in your law? Are you out to protect the poor or are you out to pamper the rich people, the land grabbers, whose hunger for land is never satisfied and who purchase the equity of redemption from the poor mortgagors, who under stress of necessity, are obliged to part with their land? I hope in the name of goodness you are not going to pamper the already much too pampered class of big zamindars who are out to buy out the poorer people. If you allow this amendment to become law there will probably be hundreds and may be thousands of such cases of transfers of equity of redemption for nominal consideration and big people will come in to take advantage of this Bill. I particularly appeal, earnestly appeal, to the Honourable Minister of Revenue to take this into consideration. This is an amendment—I do not know whether it has been moved with or without his knowledge and permission—but which if it has been moved without his permission, he should strongly oppose it and not be taken in by its innocent look. I have no objection if you substitute the word "assignee" for the word "mortgagee," because then it means something. If you do not include this he might be dead and the original mortgagor would not be able to get hold of the land. But to allow an assignee of a mortgagor to grab that land is against the principles of this Bill, although as a matter of principle I do not want the word "assignee" to be brought into the Bill at all, whether in the case of the mortgagor or in the case of the mortgagee and my reasons are these. The mortgagee might have parted with his mortgagee rights in favour of another person. He might have transferred those rights to somebody else and anything might have happened to that land. A disturbance of these transactions certainly should not be allowed by any law and so far as the mortgagor is concerned, it is, as I have pointed out, entirely inequitable that a big man should come in and on payment of a nominal consideration should get the land of a poor man. In that case the mortgagor parted with his land first in the form of mortgage and then in the form of sale of his proprietary rights called the equity of redemption. He is out of it altogether and this Bill will confer no benefit upon him whatsoever. But he will be exploited by the land grabbers who are out to wipe out the poor and on payment of nominal consideration they will acquire valuable lands. I hope the Honourable Revenue Minister is following me and is giving all attention to my request. In the name of the poor people, let the land, if it has to go out, go to the poor mortgagor and not to the other people. Now I will draw your attention to a preliminary provision in a Bill which we have just passed, viz., the Alienation of Land (Further amendment) Bill. I am not going to discuss any of its provisions, but I am going to point out only this. In clause 2 dealing with definitions we had the words "assignee or representative-in-interest." After a good deal of discussion, whether assignee or representative-in-interest should remain or 'lawful heir' should come in, the words 'lawful heir' were inserted. I would, therefore, suggest, if the honourable member, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, is really out to protect the poor mortgagor, that we substitute the words 'lawful heir' and not 'assignee,' because, as I have pointed out, if the word "assignee" is allowed to creep into this clause, the benefit will go to the land grabbers and not the original mortgagor. I have already given an instance but the Honourable Premier was not here at that time. He is now here and I hope the Honourable Minister of Revenue would kindly communicate to him the concrete instance that I have given.

At this stage Mr. Speaker left the chair and it was occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker.

(Punjabi) : Sir, if I am permitted to repeat in Punjabi what I have already stated in English, I would do so. I was referring to a case and the Honourable Premier was not here at that time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Yes.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : The point is this. I have received a letter from a poor man who possessed a mortgage to the extent of only Rs. 600. He writes in his letter that he and his brother held one-half of that mortgage. The land was worth about Rs. 2,000 and a big Sardar of the village purchased the equity of redemption from the mortgagor for Rs. 100. I want to point out to my learned friends opposite that as soon as this Bill becomes law the poor mortgagor would not be able to reap the benefit and the land would not be redeemed to him. But it would be redeemed to that big zamindar, a Sikh Sardar, who has purchased the equity of redemption for Rs. 100 only. The mortgagee, the big sardar, will have to pay a small amount of land revenue as compared with the benefit of the land. By quoting this instance I want to bring home to the sponsors of the Bill that if this amendment is accepted by the Government the mortgagor would not be able to reap the benefit but on the other hand the big-bellied zamindars would be benefited by this Act. There is not only one case of this kind. One can imagine many other cases of this kind. This will lead to disastrous results and many poor persons will be deprived of their lands. The rich will derive undue advantage of the poverty of poor agriculturists and will get possession of the whole of their land by paying them a fraction of the price. The impoverished cultivators, whom it is being sought to help, will fail to get any benefit out of this Bill. In view of these hard facts I would strongly but respectfully urge upon the Government to reject the amendment straight off. This should on no account be accepted by the Government.

2nd Lieut. Bhai Fatch Jang Singh (South East, Sikh, Rural) : I am utterly at a loss to understand the point of view expressed by the learned Doctor. Dealing with the assignee of the mortgagee or his representative-in-interest, the position will be the same whether this amendment is adopted by the House or not. The assignee is out of benefit in both cases. My learned friend gave an example. Now suppose a land has been mortgaged for Rs. 2,000. Somebody else buys the right as an assignee for Rs. 100. I ask the honourable member whether that assignee would not be justified to recover that Rs. 2,000. It is in that spirit that this amendment is quite just. The land that passes possession, cannot be redeemed unless the Rs. 2,000 are paid. Dealing with the assignee of the mortgagor, if a person in his life time assigns his land to his son or to his daughter as a gift or the interest of the mortgage to his wife, that son, daughter or wife should certainly benefit by the assignment. If they are debarred from that benefit, it would mean that you are imposing restrictions on the natural right of the man who assigns the land. With these words I support the amendment.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : I oppose the amendment. If there is any fair-minded member in this House his conscience must revolt against such machinations (Interruption) as this amendment involves. So far as the sons, daughters and other heirs are concerned, we have no objection whatsoever to their having the same advantage as the original mortgagor. Let the mortgagor or his heirs have the land free of payment. So far as this amendment is concerned I accept the principle, but to extend the benefit to the assignee, I think, is a gross act of injustice. Suppose a man mortgages his land for Rs. 50,000, but the value of equity of redemption is Rs. 500. You know very well that sometimes the value of redemption is very little and sometimes nil. Suppose the mortgagor transfers his redemption to a stranger for Rs. 5, 10 or even Rs. 100. The assignee thus acquires a right under this law, if this amendment is accepted and he is freed from the obligation of paying Rs. 50,000. I concede that there are certain equities in favour of a mortgagor. Let those equities be extended to his heirs, because his heir is entitled to all the benefits and rights of the mortgagor. But it is unfair that this redemption should go to a stranger who should have the benefit of these Rs. 50,000. I think the honourable member who moved this amendment must have felt abashed at the time. His conscience must have pricked him. This is the most unjust and inequitable amendment that can be thought of. I know that in 99 per cent. of cases the mortgagor is unable to redeem his property. It is for this reason that the period of limitation for redemption has been fixed at 60 years. But it is very seldom that the mortgagor or his heirs have been able to redeem the property. What happens is that some enterprising person gets hold of the mortgagor and gets the transfer of equity of redemption to himself for a nominal sum. The mortgagor knows that it will not be possible for him to redeem the land. So he transfers the right of redemption for a nominal consideration of Rs. 500 or some such small amount. The transferee of the equity of redemption is placed in the position of the mortgagor and he acquires the right to redeem the land. Now, according to this amendment, the assignee or the transferee of the right of redemption will have all the benefit of this law and any decree obtained by the mortgagee will not be of any use to him. The mortgagee will have to surrender his land and all the rights to it. What this amendment comes to is this that a perfect stranger will have all the benefits to the detriment of the mortgagee. I, therefore, oppose the amendment.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar (North-Western Towns, General, Urban): I have no intention to be very long on this amendment. I merely want to add a few words to what has been said by Lala Duni Chand and in saying so I beg leave to remind the Honourable Premier of a portion of his speech that he made when dealing with the introduction of this Bill. He assured us by saying "I am proposing this measure with a view to benefit those who are without land. I want to return the land to the landless, I want to return the land to those who have no other means of subsistence, I want to return the land to the poor, I want to return the land to the indigent." This is what the Honourable Premier told us while introducing the measure in this House. Through you I just put it to the Premier, how he will prevent the passing of this land from the person whom he wants to benefit into the hands of a person who is already possessed of considerable land and who certainly does not stand in any need of this extra stretch of land? There may be a well-informed person, there may be a clever man who might have scented this legislation and he might have gone about purchasing the equity of redemption from various people. If this amendment is incorporated, how is the Premier's above-quoted object to be fulfilled? How is the landless person, who has no land, going to be put back in possession of his land? I do not propose to say anything further and I would be glad to hear what the Honourable Premier has to say.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): In the amendment which was accepted by the Government to a similar clause relating to the Alienation of Land (II) Amendment Bill the question raised was that lawful heirs of the alienor should be allowed to benefit from the cancellation of the alienation and it was the feeling of the House that a person who had purchased the rights of the alienor—may be for a mere trifle—did not have any equities in his favour and therefore, the benefit of these cancellations should not be extended to him. This very reason which led the legislature to incorporate a few days ago that amendment in that Bill applies a fortiori to the case of mortgages which we are considering now. You have no doubt observed that these mortgages are very old and in some cases have not been redeemed because the mortgage amount which is a charge on them either exceeds the market value of that land or is equal to the market value of the land so that it is neither worth the while of the mortgagor, nor that of any other enterprising zamindar friend of his to help him out of this mortgage. Therefore, in this case what has happened is this. Supposing a piece of land is mortgaged and the amount due on the foot of the mortgage is Rs. 50,000 and the value of the land is Rs. 55,000 or Rs. 52,000 or even perhaps Rs. 50,000. After all the value varies according to the estimate or the views of the purchaser. In such a case it is not worth the while of the mortgagor to redeem that property and it may be that at a time of necessity he borrows a hundred rupees from a neighbour and sells the equity of redemption. The purchaser thinks that he is getting the ownership of a big piece of land for a song and one hundred rupees is nothing to him. The mortgagor thinks that the property is already mortgaged for about the market value of the land and he says he is getting one hundred rupees for nothing. Now, Sir, if this legislation is passed what would be the result? This Rs. 50,000 would be wiped out and will go to the person who has only paid a hundred rupees and the mortgagor the alleged poor man in whose interest this legislation is being brought would get nothing. If you are enacting this legislation in the interests of the persons to whom this land originally belonged, and if you want to benefit that class of persons, it is necessary that you should confine the benefit or the power of redemption only to these persons who were the actual mortgagors or their lawful heirs, may be their sons may be their nephews or their collaterals or daughters. But if you once permit the assignee, who is not the lawful heir, to redeem the land, you are certainly not conferring the benefit upon that class whom you profess to benefit. Therefore, I request the Premier not to be content in a formal manner with accepting an amendment or not accepting an amendment, but to draft an amendment himself which would carry out the purpose of his Bill, as well as safeguard against the possible injustice which I have mentioned in this case. Now, according to the decree of the court, as I have submitted, Rs. 50,000 are due to the mortgagee because your Bill applied to the mortgage as well as to the decree. You are depriving one man of Rs. 50,000 not to pay it to the original owner but to the man who has only paid Rs. 100. In fact the mortgagee is much more interested in the land than the assignee because he is connected with it from old times, and the purchaser of the equity of redemption is a recent purchaser. Therefore, I have requested the Premier to draft an amendment on the lines of the amendment which was drafted at the time of the last Bill and put it before the House and I have no doubt that the House will welcome such a suggestion. The mere moving of an amendment that the words mortgagor and mortgagee shall include the successor in interest or assignee of the original mortgagor and mortgagee may not serve that purpose, because even if that clause does not exist my own view is that the use of the words mortgagor and mortgagee without anything more would include his assignees or representatives in interest according to the interpretation clause in the General Clauses Act. Therefore, I again request the Honourable Premier to have an amendment of this type that the words mortgagor and mortgagee shall include his lawful heirs but not assignees and not to allow such injustice to be committed.

Khan Sahib Chaudhri Sahib Dad Khan (Hissar, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I feel that it is necessary to include this provision in the Bill. I need hardly remind the House that many cases may arise in which the assignees or representatives-in-interest are bona fide successors of the original mortgagors and have been assigned the equity of redemption not with any bad intention but because they were the only bona fide successors. In order to illustrate my point, I may say that supposing a mortgagor, who had mortgaged his land for a sum of money and sells the equity of redemption, on which a suit for pre-emption is brought and decreed. The pre-emptor then sues for the redemption of that mortgage, and he is ordered to pay Rs. 22,000 according to the terms of the mortgage deed. Now the pre-emptor mortgagor finds that he cannot pay the sum of Rs. 22,000 in order to get back his land which he must pay according to the decree so as to redeem his land.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Do you want that the remaining sum of Rs. 19,000 should not be paid back and that the advantage of this non-payment should go to the assignee or the successor-in-interest?

Khan Sahib Chaudhri Sahib Dad Khan: I wonder why my honourable friend Mr. Puri, who is a lawyer of great repute, has not been able to follow what I mean. It is not my object that the assignee should get back the land without paying the sum decreed, but what I mean to say is that supposing the original mortgagor is unable to pay that amount and sells the equity of redemption to his successor-in-interest, who is more favourably circumstanced and who can pay that amount, that successor-in-interest should not be debarred from redeeming that land. It may also happen that there may be cases in which the original mortgagors may sell the equity of redemption and the persons who have the right of pre-emption go to the court and get a decree in their favour. In such cases the pre-emptors will be debarred from getting the lands in question redeemed if the proposed provision is not made in the Bill. In any case it is necessary that bona fide successors are allowed to redeem lands mortgaged by those to whom they succeed and I feel that the words chosen are quite suitable to secure that object. With these words I support the amendment.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, as I am not a lawyer, I am at a disadvantage with regard to this discussion. My friends have put forward certain instances which ostensibly show that if we include this word, this might mean some hardship. On the other hand I have got a problem for them and if they answer my question and satisfy me, perhaps I might be prepared to meet them half way if not to the full extent. My difficulty is this. You have given one instance. I give you another instance from a different point of view. Under Customary Law daughters do not succeed in some cases. (Interruptions). There are two lawyers at loggerheads. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Both are right.) (Interruption).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would request the honourable members not to interrupt.

Premier : Under Customary Law, in a large number of cases the daughter is not a lawful heir and supposing a father assigns his equity of redemption or lands, which he has mortgaged, to his daughter, if we do away with the word 'assignee' would she benefit from this Act or not?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Pari : You can make an exception.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : He has put this question to me. Can I answer that with your permission?

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Yes.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : In the first place, under the Customary Law, the daughter ordinarily is not the heir so far as ancestral property is concerned. She is the heir if the property is self-acquired. Among certain people, who are not governed by Customary Law, but by Muhammadan Law, she is an heir. When a proprietor dies without any sons, and only a daughter is left, that is the case which the Honourable Premier seems to contemplate. (Premier : No, no.) It makes the position clear. A proprietor has either a male issue or he has not. Let us first take the case where he has sons and also has a daughter. If after mortgaging a portion of his land he assigns the equity of redemption to his daughter, certainly she is not in the least an heir if the family is governed by Customary Law and she should really not come in as an assignee; she should not benefit by this Act because the lawful heirs, the sons, are there. This is the proper position. If he has assigned that land which is under mortgage to his daughter and then dies, let us say, then as assignee she will take, subject to the mortgage money being paid to her brothers who are the real heirs, so it is the lawful heirs who must benefit and not people who are not in the line of lawful heirs. That is the position. A person governed by the Customary Law cannot get out of the law by which he is governed by making such an assignment in this indirect manner.

Pir Akbar Ali : I take exception to the proposition put forward by the honourable member. This is not the correct law. (Interruption.)

Lala Duni Chand : With every respect to the legal view that Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang has put with regard to the daughters, I say—and I say without any fear of contradiction—that under all cases daughters are heirs both with regard to the ancestral property and self-acquired property under the Customary Law. The only difference is that they are not preferential heirs in the presence of near collaterals. They may not be nearest heirs but they are in the category of heirs.

Premier : That does not help us.

Pir Akbar Ali : With your permission may I submit that that was not the question. The question put by the Honourable Premier was not whether a daughter is an heir or not.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Order please. The honourable member may put a question if the Honourable Premier gives way, otherwise the honourable member has no right to explain. Moreover, if he gives way, the honourable member may put a question to the Honourable Premier but he cannot answer any questions.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Pari : Cannot the Premier's objection be met by specifically excluding gifts in favour of relations from the definition of 'assignment.' We can add a proviso to meet his object which is very legitimate that such assignee should also get. . . . .

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Order please. This is not a question. The honourable member may explain all this privately to the Premier.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I put it in the form of a question. Is not the point of the Premier met by putting in a proviso to this effect ?

Provided that gifts in favour of relations would not be considered assignments under this section.

If this proviso is put in the object of the Premier would be carried out and the other object of the Bill would also be carried out.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Would the Honourable Premier allow me to answer his question ? (The Honourable Premier agreed). May I put it to you ? You want to take the case of a daughter in which a man would like to pass his land to that daughter. As Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang has told you, in the case of male heirs and others that question need not come in. You admit, and the Honourable Minister of Development will also admit, that a daughter will be included in the list of heirs. So, when there are no nearer heirs, then the daughter will automatically come in and if the other heirs are there, she will not come in and your question will be met thereby.

Premier : I am afraid the question which I put has not been satisfactorily answered from my point of view. They are thinking merely of succession but I am not thinking of succession at all. I am merely thinking of assignments deliberately made from the self-acquired property to the daughter. That is the case I had in view and there may be several other similar cases ; and therefore there seems to be some doubt. I suggest in the circumstances that we pass this clause as it is. Later, I shall discuss with my friends opposite and if it be felt necessary we can put in an amendment later on.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : May I make a suggestion ? Instead of passing this amendment I would suggest to the Premier that it would be better to pass over the present amendment until a suitable draft has been made of this amendment and we may consider it afterwards as was done exactly in the case of another Bill. We can keep it over and in fact I would assist his draftsman in drafting the amendment if he so desires.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Does the Honourable Premier accept the suggestion which has been made ?

Premier : I am not prepared to accept the suggestion. I think that if the word bona fide, which has been suggested by Khan Sahib Chandhri Sahib Dad Khan, is added that would meet all the difficulties. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : No. (Interruptions)).

Mr. Deputy Speaker : I would request honourable members not to make such suggestions here. All this should be discussed and decided outside the House. Does the Honourable Premier agree to the postponement of the consideration of this clause ?

Premier : I am doubtful if this would serve any useful purpose for the simple reason that my question has not been satisfactorily answered. I gave the instance of a daughter, and then there is the case of a son-in-law. All those cases might crop up and by deleting that word we might be barring those transactions.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Sir, the legal aspect of the question now before the House has been discussed threadbare. We have only this simple point to consider—whether the object of the Bill will or will not be fulfilled if this amendment is accepted.

(After informal discussion.)

Premier : I suggest that we might postpone the consideration of this explanation till a later stage. In the meanwhile we might have conversations amongst ourselves.

(This was agreed to.)

Clause 4.

Sardar Hari Singh (Kangra and Northern Hoshiarpur, Sikh, Bural)

Sir, I beg to move—

That in lines 2-3, between the words "apply" and "may" the words "and who pays less than Rs. 300 per annum as land revenue to the Government" be inserted.

If this amendment is accepted, clause 4 will read like this—

A mortgagor to whose land the provisions of this Act apply and who pays less than Rs. 300 per annum as land revenue to the Government may at any time present a petition to the Collector praying for restitution of possession of the land mortgaged. The petition shall be duly verified in the manner prescribed for such petitions.

While moving this amendment, Mr. Deputy Speaker, I have to make a few observations.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : On a point of order. We have already decided in Clause 2 that notwithstanding anything in the enactment for the time being in force this Act shall apply to any subsisting mortgages of land which were effected prior to the commencement of that Act....."

That covers all the mortgages prior to that day and the amendment of my honourable friend is against that clause.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : That was the extent of the Bill; here we are laying down to whom it is to be applied.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member is perfectly in order.

Sardar Hari Singh : I was submitting that the intention of this Bill, as stated by the Premier the other day and as stated again during the course of discussion on another day, is that the land should go back to the landless people, and to the people who need land and the people from whose hands the land passed out many years ago and those people who find it difficult to make both ends meet. If that is the real object of this Bill, I hope my friends opposite will have no hesitation in accepting this amendment which merely says that the big landlord should not fall within the provisions of this Act. The chief objection, on the basis of which agitation outside the House—in the province—exists against this Bill, is that this Bill is intended to benefit big landlords. The smaller peasants are benefited under this Bill only accidentally. If this limit and if this line of demarcation between the big landlords and small landlords is accepted by the honourable members opposite, that objection will be liquidated entirely and the agitation against this Bill will have its bottom knocked out altogether. My honourable friend has told the House already that there are not very many big landlords in this province. Therefore if this line of demarcation is accepted, we shall be excluding not very many people from the benefit to be provided under this Bill. Therefore, I commend it to the attention and consideration of the House that it may be accepted. I am also agreeable to raise the limit further, if the principle of this amendment is accepted, and it is merely this, that those big landlords, who do not work with their own hands, should not be benefited under the provisions of this Bill.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved is that—

In lines 2-3, between the words "apply" and "may" the words "and who pays less than Rs. 300 per annum as land revenue to the Government" be inserted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, I rise to a point of order. My point of order is that this clause 4, which we are discussing now, is merely a procedural clause. It has got nothing to do with the substantive clauses of the Act itself. It merely lays down the procedure, that is, how the people, who are affected by this Act, should proceed in making applications and in securing the benefit of this Act. Therefore, I do not think that my honourable friend's amendment would be in order, since we have already passed the substantive clause where he should have moved that amendment. So I request you to consider that aspect of the question also.

Sardar Hari Singh: On a point of order Sir. I beg to submit that this was the very point of order raised by Mir Magbool Mahmood. When you have once given your ruling, you should not entertain this point of order again.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I can have the benefit of the advice of the learned Advocate-General, and if necessary, I might revise my own ruling.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia: Will you hear the other side also?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yes.

Advocate-General (Mr. M. Sleem): Sir, I wish to submit that clause 2, which has already been passed, is as follows:—

"Notwithstanding anything contained in any enactment for the time being in force, this Act shall apply to any subsisting mortgages of land, which were effected prior to the commencement of that Act by a member. . . ."

Now the amendment proposed really amounts to this, that it shall only apply to those subsisting mortgages in which the mortgagor pays less than Rs. 300 per annum as land revenue to the Government. Clause 4 deals only with the procedure. Supposing this amendment is passed, what would be the procedure with regard to other subsisting mortgages, because section 7, to which we will come later, says:—

"If the Collector finds that the mortgage is one to which this Act applies, he shall, notwithstanding anything contained in any other enactment for the time being in force . . . . . order in writing that the mortgage be extinguished. . . ."

So, the position would really be that the Act shall apply to all subsisting mortgages of a certain kind, but the procedure would be limited to those mortgages in which the mortgagor pays less than Rs. 300 as land revenue. I hope I have made myself clear. If it has been an amendment to clause 3, it would have been perfectly in order.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Sir, the point is not so difficult as it is presented to be. It is a simple case. Clause 4 relates to 'Petition for restitution.' This amendment qualifies the persons, that is, persons who pay less than Rs. 300 per annum as land revenue to the Government, are qualified to present that petition. There is no difficulty in it. It only qualifies a person who can apply for a petition. This is the only proper place where this amendment can take place and should be inserted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I deal with the point which has been raised by the learned Advocate-General? The mere fact that this amendment can be moved to another section, does not debar the House from considering it as an amendment to this section, if it is otherwise relevant. My honourable friend has pointed out that in section 2 we have created a substantive right, and he proceeded to argue that having created a substantive right, the remedy should also be afforded for carrying on that right. Are you not aware, Sir, that under the law, as it stands to-day, a right may exist and yet the law may provide no remedy? You are aware of the well-known principle of law that a time-barred debt is not extinguished. It exists and according to law, it can form a good consideration for a new contract, but due to efflux of time, by operation of the statute of limitation, the remedy to recover it is barred. Therefore, there is absolutely no contradiction in section 2, providing that this Act shall apply to all subsisting mortgages, but when we are to provide remedy, we lay down that although the Act applies to all subsisting mortgages, the only persons to whom remedy is afforded are persons who pay less than Rs. 300 per annum as land revenue to the Government. The point raised by my honourable friend is purely a technical one. You have already given your decision and that point has absolutely no force.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I would add one sentence and that is that a subsequent clause may restrict, extend or expand any provision which goes before; so I do not see any real technical objection to this amendment. It may be that it would have, perhaps, been better if this amendment had been moved at that time, but I do not think that any rule of procedure or any rule of interpretation of a statute or of making a statute bars the present amendment. I entirely endorse the remarks of Mr. Puri that it is a question of remedy and that it is not a question of creating a right. A time-barred debt may be recovered without any offence having been committed, though no court would grant any relief with respect to a time-barred debt. A debtor is not prevented from paying or a creditor from recovering a time-barred debt. Only the case cannot go to a court.

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi (Lyallpur and Jhang, General, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I am greatly surprised to find that whenever we raise any question to benefit the poverty-stricken peasantry of the Panjab, the Unionist Government takes shelter behind some legal quibbles and avoids the issue altogether. The amendment that we have brought forward to-day is going to prove a touch-stone for ascertaining whether the Unionists have a genuine sympathy for the poor. There are about 31 lakhs of zamindars in the province. Out of these the number of those who pay Rs. 1,000 or more as land revenue annually, is about 800. Those who pay Rs. 500 or more as land revenue, number 3,000. The number of those landholders who pay Rs. 300 or more as land revenue is only 20,000. Thus out of a total number of 31 lakhs, 20,000, 25,000 or even 30,000 zamindars can be sacrificed by the Government as they form only one per cent. of the total number of zamindars in the province. We want the Government to ignore this small fraction and concentrate their attention on the remaining 99 per cent. of zamindars. It is these poor agriculturists who need the help of the Government very badly. A man paying Rs. 300 as land revenue is likely to possess 100 acres of land or more. Why should a zamindar with 4 squares of land be entitled to any relief? But the Unionist Government seem to be bent on continuing the old feudal system in this province. This Bill is not meant for the benefit of the poor agriculturists. In reality this measure is designed to hoodwink the poor agriculturists whose name is being exploited to the advantage of the bigger zamindars. This attempt of the Unionists amounts to throwing dust in the eyes of the public. But I may remind them that these tactics of theirs are not going to deceive the masses any longer. The Government intends to favour not the 31 lakhs of Zamindars in the province but the big landlords primarily.

Besides this, the agriculturist money-lender is no less cruel to the poor agriculturist than the non-agriculturist money-lender is. But it is a thousand pities that the Government wants to protect the agriculturist money-lender and is out to ruin the non-agriculturist money-lender by not applying the Act up to-date. This is clearly a class legislation. In order to remove this blot from the face of this Bill, the Congress Party has given notice of an amendment to the effect that those who pay Rs. 300 or more as Land Revenue should be exempted from the operation of this Bill. If this amendment of the Congress Party is accepted, the Bill will become an impartial measure and will really benefit the debt-ridden peasantry of the province. With these words I strongly commend this amendment for the favourable consideration of the House.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani (Muzaffargarh North, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, the honourable member who has preceded me, was pleased to remark that the Congress Party has put the Unionist Government to test by moving the amendment under consideration. He also suggested that if the Government did not accept the amendments it will mean that the object of the Bill is not to help the poor peasants but to benefit the big zamindars. I am however, of the opinion that my Congress friends, in trying to put the Government in the wrong, have exposed themselves. I will presently show that the amendments moved by our Congress friends are aimed at helping and benefiting the capitalist 'sahukars' and money-lenders at the cost of the poor peasants. The Congress Party has proposed two amendments. Sardar Hari Singh's amendment proposes to deprive all those agriculturist mortgagors who pay Rs. 300 or more land revenue, from the benefits of the Bill, as in his opinion a person who pays Rs. 300 or more as land revenue is a big zamindar. The other amendment, which stands in the name of Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava, Leader of the Congress Party, and 5 other Congress members, seeks to exclude all those mortgagors, the value of whose land exceeds Rs. 8,000, from the benefits of this Bill. I shall discuss these amendments seriatim.

In regard to Sardar Hari Singh's amendment, Sir, let us first see as to whether a person who pays Rs. 800 per annum as land revenue is really a big zamindar. I believe every member of this House knows that land revenue is one quarter of the total net assets of the land-owners. Therefore, the net assets of a person who pays Rs. 800 per annum as land revenue, will amount to Rs. 1,200. After paying the land revenue he will have Rs. 900 per annum.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : This is wrong.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani : I am surprised at the ignorance of my lawyer friend. He had better read the Punjab Land Revenue Act and the Settlement Manual to refresh his memory. Sir, as I have submitted, the net assets of a person, who pays Rs. 800 as land revenue, come to Rs. 900 per annum or Rs. 75 per month. I might point out in this connection that the net assets of a person do not represent his net profits or net annual income. In fact, the net income of a land-owner falls much short of his net assets, but without going into the complex and highly technical question of net assets, even if we presume that the annual net assets of a land-holder represent his annual income, the land-owner paying Rs. 800 per annum as land revenue does not get more than Rs. 75 per month. Now let us compare the economic position of this so-called big zamindar with that of a non-agriculturist who derives his income from sources other than agriculture. A money-lender, a business man, an artisan, an industrial labourer or any other person, who is not dependent on agriculture, is immune from income-tax up to a net income of Rs. 2,000 per annum. A public servant or a private employee drawing Rs. 100 a month is not only immune from income-tax, but his salary is not liable to attachment in execution of a decree of a Civil Court. It means a non-agriculturist whose income is less than Rs. 167 per mensem is not considered rich enough to pay the income-tax, while my congress friends are pleased to classify an agriculturist with an income of Rs. 75 a month from land as a big zamindar. A zamindar paying even Rs. 500 per annum as land revenue does not have an income of more than Rs. 125 per month.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : A zamindar of what standing pays Rs. 800 as land revenue ?

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani : Sir, as I have already said a land-owner whose income is not more than Rs. 75 a month pays Rs. 800 per annum as land revenue.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, that is not my question. I want to know as to how much land is owned by a person who pays Rs. 800 per annum as land revenue ?

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani : Sir, I do not blame my friend for asking such a question. After all he is a non-agriculturist. (Cheers). Let me, however, tell him that it is wrong to judge the economic position of a land-holder from the area he owns. The income of a zamindar is dependent on many factors such as the quality of his land, irrigation facilities, standard of cultivation and weather conditions. An owner of a thousand acres of desert or unculturable land may not be getting an income of even one hundred rupees per annum from such land. A zamindar owning ten acres of land in a colony district gets more income from his land than a person owning one hundred acres of "barani" land. You cannot, therefore, determine the income of a land-owner on the basis of the area that he owns. This income can be more accurately assessed on the basis of land revenue. May I know if my friend will call a money-lender possessing time-barred or bad debts to the value of a lakh of rupees, which he can never recover, a rich man or a big sakutar? Sir, the House will agree with me that a person, who pays Rs. 800 or even Rs. 500 per annum is no more than a peasant proprietor and if we accept Sardar Hari Singh's amendment we would exclude a large number of deserving persons from the benefits of this salutary measure.

Now coming to the next amendment Sir, which proposes to exclude all mortgagors the value of whose lands exceeds Rs. 8,000, from the benefits of this Bill, I would submit that if this amendment is accepted, every mortgagor who owns more than 7 acres of cultivated land will be deprived of the benefits of the Bill. The quadrennial average sale price of cultivated land in the Punjab for the years 1931—1935 is estimated at Rs. 410 per acre. Therefore, on an average the value of a holding of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  acres or more will exceed Rs. 8,000. The average net income of a land-owner owning 8 acres of land in a colony district, does not exceed Rs. 120 per annum or Rs. 10 per month. Do our Congress friends consider an agriculturist having an income of Rs. 10 per month a big landlord? This attitude of the Congress Party needs no comment. Their amendments show as to how far they are interested in the welfare of the peasants and the poor classes of the province. It will not be out of place to mention that in the Congress provinces only those land-owners who pay Rs. 5,000 or more land revenue per annum have been classified as big zamindars. In the Punjab we have only 23 zamindars who pay Rs. 5,000 or more as land revenue and only 13 who pay Rs. 10,000 or more. This will show that the number of big zamindars even according to the Congress standard is insignificant in this Province. It is, therefore, unnecessary to exclude any mortgagor from the benefits of this measure. The Leader of the Opposition and other honourable members sitting opposite suggested in their speeches that it was undesirable to give the benefit of this measure to big and well-to-do zamindars. According to them even those land-owners whose income from land is Rs. 10 per month are big zamindars in the Punjab. I am at a loss to understand as to how could those, who had not been able to redeem their mortgaged lands for more than 40 years, be considered as well-to-do and rich zamindars?

Mr. Dev Raj Sathi : They waste their money on luxuries.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani : Sir, I wish my capitalist friends sitting opposite would come and live with us in the villages. I am sure, they will not stand the hardships of village life even for a week. Probably my friend is not aware that even the biggest zamindar in the province does not get as many amenities of life in the village as an ordinary citizen enjoys in the town. (A voice: How many big zamindars live in the villages?) My friends are probably unaware of the fact that the class of absentee landlords does not exist in this Province. There are few land-owners in the Punjab who do not permanently reside in their estates. I would like to draw the attention of the House to one other aspect of these amendments. While the movers of these amendments propose to exclude peasant proprietors and agriculturists having an income of Rs. 10 per month from the benefits of this Bill, they do not exclude those mortgagors who may be paying income-tax and may be having an income of lakhs of rupees from sources other than agriculture. According to these amendments a mortgagor who pays less than Rs. 300 per annum as land revenue, even though he may be paying Rs. 1,000 as income-tax, or a person the value of whose land is less than Rs. 3,000 but apart from such land he has other property worth lakhs of rupees, will be allowed to enjoy the benefits of this Bill, while on the other hand a zamindar solely dependent on agricultural income will be deprived of the benefit from the provisions of this Bill if he is paying more than Rs. 300 land revenue or if the value of his land exceeds Rs. 3,000. Sir, may I know whether by excluding these persons from the benefits of this Bill, we shall be helping the smaller agriculturists or poorer mortgagors? By excluding these persons we help neither the poorer mortgagors nor the peasants. We shall be helping only the capitalist money-lender mortgagee, who has already recovered from these mortgagors many times the value of his mortgage money, at the cost of the poor mortgagor. I cannot conceive of any other reason for my Congress friends having moved such frivolous amendments except that "blood is always thicker than water." (Cheers). This, however, cannot be true in the case of my friends Sardar Hari Singh and Sardar Sohan Singh Josh. With regard to their attitude, the only explanation that I can think of is that they have been influenced by the associations of their non-agriculturist comrades. I am more than ever convinced in the truth of the Persian couplet which says

اسی را با خر بہ بندد مدح یکجا ہم
 رنگ از یکجا بماند خوئے او دیگر شود

Sir, I cannot persuade myself to act in accordance with the Persian proverb :

نه خود خویم نه بکس دهم کفده کلم و به سگ دهم which seems to be the attitude of my friends sitting opposite.

Sir, I oppose the amendments under consideration.

Sardar Kartar Singh (Lyallpur East, Sikh, Rural) (Punjabi): Sir, the matter now before the House is what kind of zamindars should be permitted to benefit by the provisions of this Bill and what kind of zamindars should be debarred from getting any benefit. On the last occasion the Honourable Premier agreed to the principle that big (mota) zamindars should not be given any concessions under the provisions of this Bill.

Premier: May I inquire what does the honourable member mean by the word mota zamindars?

Sardar Kartar Singh: I was submitting that the Honourable Premier has already agreed to the principle that big zamindars would not be given any concessions under the provisions of this Bill. But now it has been suggested by his companions that those zamindars who pay Rs. 1,000 or more as land revenue should not be given any concessions. May I submit that outside the Punjab province it can be conceded that those people who pay Rs. 1,000 or more as land revenue should be regarded as big zamindars, but here in the Punjab we would have to fix some other limit because different conditions prevail in different provinces? It is, therefore, necessary that we should consider this matter very carefully and specify a certain sum; that those zamindars who pay more than that sum as land revenue should be regarded as big landlords and should not be permitted to benefit by the provisions of this Bill. I may also submit that the standard that has been fixed for voters of the landholders' constituencies in the Punjab is Rs. 500 only. It is stated in the constitution that those zamindars who pay Rs. 500 should be regarded as big landlords. I, therefore, submit that we in the Punjab should also fix Rs. 500 as the lowest limit, i.e., those zamindars who pay Rs. 500 or more as land revenue should be regarded as big landlords. Although up till now I have not formally moved my amendment, I now submit it for the consideration of the House. I may add that I have based my amendment on the definition that has been laid down for the voters of the landholders' constituencies in the Punjab and on the basis of which five seats have been allotted to the big zamindars. It is, therefore, just and proper that the basis on which 5 landholders' seats in the Punjab have been created should be adhered to in this respect as well. If the amendment, which says that those people who pay Rs. 300 or more as land revenue should be regarded as big landlords, is not accepted, then at least that amendment which lays down that those zamindars who pay Rs. 500 or more as land revenue should be regarded as big landlords and should not be allowed to benefit by this Bill, should be accepted.

The Honourable Premier has declared over and over again that the Bill that has been passed for registering the money-lenders means that the class of money-lenders should be purged of the dishonest money-lenders and only the honest money-lenders should be allowed to carry on the business of money-lending. What we desire is that not only the dishonest money-lenders should be turned out of the class of honest money-lenders, but that big zamindars should also be left out of the pale of those zamindars who would benefit by the provisions of this Bill. It is highly necessary that the dishonest rich people and dishonest big zamindars should also be corrected. They should not be allowed to benefit at all so that they should not grow rich at the cost of others. It has been stated on the floor of the House—rather an appeal has been made—that no distinction and differentiation should be made between different classes of zamindars. But I may point out that we, on this side of the House, cannot be deceived by the speeches of my friends on the opposite. Further, we have been asked by the honourable members on the opposite that we should act in a brotherly way. Some of my friends on the opposite have also urged that the interests of the rich and poor zamindars being common, where is the harm if perchance any big zamindar gets any benefit under the provisions of this Bill? But may I inquire the reason why the poor zamindars should be left to die of hunger and the big zamindars should get all the benefit? These big zamindars who are snakes in the guise of human beings would begin to suck the blood of the poor zamindars under the provisions of this Bill. These big zamindars are more dangerous than the dishonest money-lenders. They will very quickly eat away the small landholders.

It has also been stated that those zamindars who pay Rs. 800 as land revenue are not big zamindars at all. But my friends on the opposite are not aware of the fact that the big zamindars have many other means of income. They do not simply depend on land. They act as zaildars and lambardars and they receive panchotra from the Government. Besides this, they can secure very easily Government services for their relatives and the poor zamindars have to forego all these concessions.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Please speak to the motion.

Sardar Kartar Singh : Sir, I was submitting that the big landholders should not be given benefits under the provisions of this Bill, because in addition to the income which they get from land they have other income as well. If honorary magistrates are to be appointed they are selected from amongst their ranks and many from among them become rich by getting bribes from the public and in a few years' time they build palatial bungalows for themselves. I, therefore, submit that in order to know their exact position we should not only look to the amount of Rs. 800 which they pay as land revenue, but we should take into consideration other factors as well. I would submit that all the possible ways of earning money are entirely in their hands and, therefore, they should not be allowed to benefit under the provisions of this Bill. The Congress Party cannot put up with this. I request the Honourable Premier that the big zamindars of the constituency of which he is a representative should not try to lower their prestige by joining among the ranks of the poor landholders. Before I finish my speech I may submit that if the amendment of Sardar Hari Singh is not acceptable then at least my amendment should be accepted. I have given notice of one amendment and I request that it should be accepted. With these words I whole-heartedly support the amendment now before the House.

Chaudhri Jalal-ud-Din Amber (West Central Punjab, Indian Christian), (Urdu) : Sir, I may first of all be allowed to say that after we have passed clause 2 of the Bill, the amendment now moved is meaningless.

یہ تو قریم کی توہین ہے قریم نہیں

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Chaudhri Jalal-ud-Din Amber : But since you have allowed it to be moved, I proceed to say something about it. We know to our cost that in spite of any number of restrictions provided in the Alienation of Land Act on the sale of agricultural lands in favour of non-agriculturists, a back door was found out in the form of benami transactions and it is with a view to close that door that it was found necessary to amend that Act. Now my friends, who happen to be very clever, have moved this amendment so that a back door may again be left open, even now, to allow them to enter through it. I feel sure that if this amendment, which says that all zamindars paying Rs. 800 or more as land revenue per annum, should not be allowed to take advantage of the provisions of this Bill, is passed, the whole object of the Bill will be frustrated. I must say once again that this amendment is intended to provide a back door for the clever people to expropriate once more the zamindars of the province. I am here reminded of an Urdu verse which is as follows:—

پکا اسے کیا ہے کسی پختہ کار نے      دوہرا مکان بنایا ہے رہنے کو یار نے
جب میں گیا ادھر وہ ادھر سے نکل گیا

Our experience of the past has made us very careful and it is now our duty to allow no loophole to be left in this Bill. I may also say that this sum of Rs. 800 is not the standard to judge whether a zamindar paying that amount annually as revenue is rich. That is not a very great amount and that should make no sensible person to think that such zamindars are really very rich who will be able to purchase any lands from their poor brethren. And one thing more. If you dub all mortgagors paying less than Rs. 800 as revenue as poor then it might reasonably be asked why should not the mortgagees paying less than Rs. 800 as revenue be dubbed as poor. (Voices from the Congress benches: We have no objection to that). This discrimination will land us in many difficulties besides frustrating the object of the Bill and, it is, therefore, necessary that we should all oppose it. This Bill, if passed, will affect those lands which were mortgaged forty years ago. I am sure, if their owners had been well-to-do people they would have certainly redeemed them by this time.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.)

The very fact that these lands were allowed to remain mortgaged for such a long time is proof positive to show that the owners of these lands were terribly poor. There are grades even of poverty. I think that a person who may otherwise be called well-to-do can come under the category of poor if he cannot meet his requirements. But there is one sure test of a big zamindar and a small zamindar which has suggested itself to me at this time. The big zamindars may be those who refuse to be led by others and the small zamindars those who are easily misled. (Hear, hear.)

The policy of our Congress friends has been strangely uncertain so far as these agrarian Bills are concerned. It can be aptly illustrated by this line—

صائب چہنچہ بھی نہیں سامنے آئے بھی نہیں

Although they say that these agrarian Bills are necessary, they move such amendments to them which are calculated to defeat their very object. It is really very strange that they want to benefit the poor zamindar and at the same time oppose such measures which are meant to bring about this result. I, for one, have not been able to follow the trend of their speeches and I feel like reading to them these verses of the Urdu poet—

کلام میر سمجھ اور زبان دہریا سمجھ
مگر ان کا کیا ہے آپ سمجھیں یا خدا سمجھ
اگر اپنا کہا تم آپ ہی سمجھ تو کیا سمجھ
مزا کہنے کا جیسا ہے اک کہے اور دوسرا سمجھ

With these words, I wish to remind my friends on the opposite benches that our first and foremost duty should be to help the poor zamindars. They are our brethren. We should not move amendments to these measures calculated to benefit them, with a view to defeating their very object.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, this very question was discussed to some extent on the first day when this Bill was introduced and I had occasion even to quote certain figures which were conclusive. Apparently my friends opposite do not believe in reason or logic but they merely believe in the propaganda value of their amendments. My honourable friend the mover of this amendment himself suggested an amendment in the select committee which fixed the limit at rupees one thousand and not at rupees three hundred and I had the fullest possible sympathy with that amendment, because, as has been explained in this House on more than one occasion, a zamindar who pays one thousand rupees as land revenue has only a net income of Rs. 3,000 a year based on calculation on which land revenue is assessed in this province, and even so my honourable friends opposite cry themselves hoarse just as I had been crying myself hoarse from those benches in the old days, that we are heavily pressed and land revenue should be further reduced, and now my honourable friends want to create a new definition of big landlords. As I have submitted, a person who barely has Rs. 250 a month cannot really be called a big landlord as if this is the ideal that they have before them. Is this the standard to which they want to raise the province? The standard that I have in view and to which I want to raise my zamindar brethren and all others in the province is that they should be able to live as comfortably as they live in other civilized countries. But according to the present amendment a zamindar who is getting barely Rs. 75 a month would be a big zamindar.

Sardar Hari Singh: Then raise the limit.

Premier: Why do you want to raise the limit? Where are you going to draw a line? It is merely a question of degree. You can draw a line at Rs. 200, or Rs. 300 to-day and to-morrow raise it to one thousand. My idea is that every one who pays land revenue should have an income so big that he can live comfortably in the same style as some one paying Rs. 2,000 land revenue does. That is the ideal which we should keep before us and not the ideal by which you want to bring the standard down. I perfectly know that there is a school of thought led by one of our most prominent leaders which this country has ever produced, a school of thought which believes in simple living to the extent that we should subsist on the barest necessities and that we should not even wear clothes except a loin cloth. This standard, from a spiritual point of view, may be an ideal worthy of emulating but from a simple worldly point of view or economic point of view and even cultural point of view, I think it would be wrong for a country to adopt that standard. If the country is to adopt that standard, why are we trying to emulate Russia or other civilized countries, why do we quote day in and day out that people of these countries are living in comfort and although they are merely labourers they enjoy all comforts of life? But here even those who have got large parcels of land are not living in comfort. (Interruption). My honourable friend Dr. Sant Ram Sethi is feeling very uncomfortable. I sympathise with him, but he should wait. As I said, he himself moved an amendment suggesting one thousand as the limit, but he has thought better of it.

[Premier.]

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Select committee proceedings are confidential.

Premier : As a matter of fact they were mentioned in this very House and when it was done I said that they should be confidential, but it was ruled that they were not. My honourable friend has apparently thought better of it, because Rs. 800 will probably give more value for propaganda purposes than rupees one thousand. But if my honourable friend were honest and I should not think otherwise and there are other honest members also on the opposite benches (Voices : All are honest) I am not talking from the point of view of personal honesty or morality, I am merely saying that when he goes to his constituency he should have the courage of his conviction and go and tell those people that we want all zamindars to be provided with comforts of life. As I submitted the other day, there are only 13 people in the province who can be called big zamindars in the real sense of the word. If you compare our standard with any other province like the United Provinces or Bihar and then see these 13 people, you will find that they do not compare with the taluqdars or big zamindars in the United Provinces, because they hardly pay Rs. 10,000 or more. But as I pointed out the other day, in the United Provinces there are hundreds of zamindars who pay several thousands and even in the Congress Party there are at least three who pay more than thirty thousand as land revenue and yet they are socialists and we here are big zamindars. They say, why should you benefit those big zamindars because they have squandered their money on luxuries? We are dealing with all mortgages made between 40 and 60 years. Let me borrow an argument from my honourable friends which they are never tired of repeating in this House. Supposing a man who mortgaged his property in 1878, squandered his money. We are assuming that there was an instance where the land was mortgaged, because of his extravagant habits and money spent on extravagance and luxuries and may be even on evil living but that happened in 1878. We are now in the year of grace 1938. During these 59 years that original mortgagor probably joined the majority—the great majority—and his sons or grandsons or greatgrandsons may be 8, 12, or 16 are not those big land-owners. Even assuming that they were big land-owners who mortgaged their land, they will not be big land-owners now. They will be small petty zamindars at the moment and, as I said, I repeat the argument put forward by my friend, is it fair, is it just to pillory those grandsons and greatgrandsons, for the sins of their greatgrandfather because their land has been out of their possession for the last forty to sixty years and punish those great-grandchildren or grandchildren for the sins of their greatgrandfather or grand-father who might have, in a solitary instance, mortgaged his land, because he spent the money on unwise and extravagant habits? Supposing, a big landlord has got ten thousand acres of land. He has mortgaged five thousand acres to somebody else. Do you think that five thousand acres were mortgaged to my friend Sardar Hari Singh or people of my calibre? No, because we would not be able to pay that amount on the mortgage.

S. P. M.

That mortgage must have been made to a very big fish (A voix: Crocodile) or an agriculturist or a non-agriculturist whale and do you want that non-agriculturist whale or a big agriculturist fish to continue to benefit at the expense of that fellow who either for some necessity or sheer force of circumstances was forced to mortgage five thousand acres to that big fish? What would be the result of your amendment? Supposing we accept it and we assume also, just for the sake of argument, although I will be able to convince the House that even that assumption would not be correct, then what would be the result? Assuming that there were two, three, four or five big land-owners who each mortgaged five thousand acres of their land with a big agriculturist or a big sahakar. We want to redeem those lands, because we assert that fairness and equity demands that those people who have benefited from these lands for forty to sixty years have got enough benefit out of the land, and therefore these lands should go to the original owner. In all these cases where big slices of land have been mortgaged, they were mortgaged not to small petty people like Sardar Hari Singh and myself but to big fishes and it would be no hardship if we take from those big crocodiles and whales that land and give to the descendants of the original owners who probably are 25 now instead of one.....

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : And not 25 in the case of mortgagees.

Premier : My honourable friend has not followed my point. I am afraid I can supply argument but I cannot supply the capacity of understanding. (Loud applause). My point is that the main basic principle of this Bill is this, that a land has been out of possession of A and it has been with B a mortgagee for say forty to sixty years. My honourable friend is perfectly aware that when you lend out money on mortgage, you usually lend about one-fourth of the capital value of the property on mortgages. My honourable friend is a banker and he is also a big insurance magnate. He knows perfectly well what proportion of the capital value is advanced on mortgages and where the agriculturist is concerned, my honourable friend is also aware that there the loan advanced is even less than is done in the case of business and tradesmen. Assuming and taking a generous view that the amount of money advanced on a mortgage is 25 per cent. of the capital value of that land and then again, assuming that the income from that land is 3 per cent. that 3 per cent. would, since the amount advanced on mortgage is one-fourth of the capital value of land become 12 per cent. on the amount actually advanced. That is for one year and if you multiply  $12 \times 40$ —and mind you—that is a very conservative figure because minimum figures have been taken, you get a figure of 480. That mortgagee has benefited to the extent of 480 per cent. on that land. If you take the period nearing sixty years, it would be somewhere 700 per cent. I ask you now in all fairness and justice, put your hands on your heart and say whether it is not a fair and equitable return. Is it not an even unconscionably large return? It is unconscionable and I say that anything beyond the spirit of damdapat would not be fair but would be unjust and cruel and therefore my honourable friend should keep that aspect of the matter in view.

I am glad that nobody has mentioned to-day the Ministers and Parliamentary Secretaries but let me, on the floor of this House, most emphatically repeat my assertion and statement which I made that not a single

[Premier.]

Minister of the Crown on these benches or a single Parliamentary Secretary is going to benefit by this Act (loud cheers). As a matter of fact, as I told you this morning in my statement, one of the Ministers is going to be affected adversely and he is going to lose to the tune of Rs. 60,000 and I know of several other honourable members in this House who are going to lose much more and I would not give my own instance because that would be sheer presumption and may be considered presumptuous on my part, but I know that my family is going to suffer to the tune of several lakhs of rupees if this Act comes into force. But my honourable friend is under a delusion if he thinks that bigger people are going to benefit. They are actually going to suffer for the simple reason that several mortgages.....

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : No one will touch you.

Premier : The mortgage rights in the case of original mortgages which were made to non-agriculturists passed from hand to hand and I know that in my own district there are several big owners who bought mortgage rights of land which was mortgaged to non-agriculturists and now it is with big zamindars there. They will all suffer and, as a matter of fact, I am giving away no secret when I say that I received several letters and S. O. S. messages from that part of the world saying that they are going to be affected adversely and they have, as a matter of fact, more or less appealed to me as a representative of their district, to see that they do not suffer and my reply to them was that on a matter of principle I and my family and friends must come first to suffer (loud cheers). If we are going to suffer, it is our misfortune, but I wanted to mention this fact that they are not going to benefit in practice and you will see that when this Act is enforced they will be the people who will actually suffer.

Take even the original limit of a thousand rupees and assume again for the moment that that zamindar is a big zamindar. I do not for the moment concede that that is my view, but assume that he is also a big zamindar. You know perfectly well that only a portion of cultivated area in the Punjab is mortgaged. Let me give you the average figure. Average figures from 1901 onward are between  $2\frac{1}{2}$  to  $3\frac{1}{2}$  acres for each mortgage. The present number of mortgages is 1,849,000 and total cultivated area is 8,867,000 acres and if you calculate you will find that the average area of mortgaged land is  $2\frac{1}{2}$  acres, not big but there may be some big mortgages as well. That is the average area. The cultivated area which is mortgaged is 8,867,000 acres. That would work out to somewhere near  $2\frac{1}{2}$  crores. Keeping these figures in view does my honourable friend consider that it will be necessary for us to draw a line anywhere? As I was saying, even taking the Congress figure only 775 zamindars pay a thousand rupees of land revenue and their average income is 250 per month. Let us for the sake of argument assume that they are big zamindars. My honourable friend is aware that a big zamindar, if he pays one thousand as land revenue, according to our census figures, in the next generation that will be divided into 5 and each zamindar would be paying barely 200. If you go to the third generation it will come down to 40 each. Now, as I mentioned before, the number of those who pay a thousand rupees is only 775 and even amongst the big people if you take the provincial average of 12 per cent. who mortgage their land, the total number would be between 80 and 90 in the whole province—of those who pay a thousand rupees or more than thousand rupees. Of those 80 people most of them in the next generation will be paying 200 per annum as land revenue even below the figure which my honourable friend has suggested in his revised amendment. My honourable friend assumed that he is going to live for an indefinitely large number of years and that therefore his property will not go through the process of disintegration which is the continuous process in this province and will not be reduced to smaller zamindars. Why does he assume that he will remain and always continue as a big zamindar—I am not prepared to concede that they are big zamindars. I would only call those people big zamindars who pay more than Rs. 5,000 and their number, as I have said, is only 28. If you take the provincial average you will find that there would be only 2 big zamindars who have effected mortgages. For the sake of these 2 zamindars you want to amend the whole Act. You do not keep in view the fact that if the present owner dies to-morrow his successor would be paying 200. (A voice: Then he can redeem). But what is the object of trying to separate about 80 people in the province and making the law discriminatory? As I have said, if these big zamindars, who pay Rs. 5,000, as land revenue, mortgage their land, it must have been mortgaged to people who are even richer than themselves. (Lala Duni Chand: This criterion applies only to present mortgages). Why take the trouble because in a few years they will come below that category? Then my friend's objection is that it is in the neighbouring province and not in this province— (Sardar Hari Singh: Then give us more booty). I am not a lotera (a robber). I believe in honest dealings. My honourable friend's amendment would exclude all those persons who pay Rs. 901 as land revenue but my honourable friend's amendment would not exclude those who pay Rs. 299 land revenue and ten thousand as income-tax. He merely wants to exclude his own brethren, he does not want to exclude those who pay ten thousand as income-tax: I was merely pointing out that my honourable friend has forgotten the other rich people and merely wants to come down upon his own class and community whom he professes to serve.

I would not take any more time of the House except to answer one point which was again made by one of the non-agriculturist friends of the Congress Party. He says, "Why do you call all these people zamindars because these big people stand on a different footing altogether?" That is natural, because the honourable gentleman is not a zamindar and does not know the conditions in the province. If he had known the conditions of the province, he would not have made that remark. He has been returned from a rural constituency unopposed and if he would fight the election on agricultural votes, he would have found several things about the zamindars and he would not have made the slip that he has made. Now let me tell you what is the position in the Punjab, and let me inform my honourable friend opposite that the main characteristic and the main pride of the Punjab is that ours is a province of peasant proprietors (hear, hear). That is our strength and it is for that reason that the question of big zamindar does not exist in this province. If you look to the neighbouring province you will find that the big zamindar is enjoying himself in Lucknow and the poor tenant—there is nobody in between—tilling the soil day and night. Now, of course, something is being done there, but there is still much hue and cry and tenant agitation persists. There is no such thing here. If there had been such a thing, our condition would have been exactly the same as in the United Provinces and in other provinces. Why it is not so is because our average holding is less than 10 acres. There may be the Nawab of Mamdot who owns more than 5,000 acres. But if you look to the vast majority of the people, the total number approximately is 35 lakhs who are land-owners, but the number of those who can be termed as big zamindars is only 13. In the United Provinces a big zamindar is a big zamindar and nobody can go near him. If he is a Rajput he is Rajput by himself. There a poor Rajput tenant has got nothing in common with a big zamindar. What is the position here in the Punjab? The Nawab of Mamdot is a Pathan and is a big zamindar, but a small Pathan in the village who pays Rs. 5 does not consider himself in any way less than the Nawab of Mamdot. That is our proud characteristic (hear, hear). It is that characteristic which has supported the Punjab through centuries of vicissitudes and privations. Other provinces may suffer but I am sure the Punjab will not suffer because of that characteristic. My honourable friend is perfectly aware that in a bradri I may be rich—

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Then do not say that you do not waste time.

Premier : My honourable friend naturally finds it waste of time.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Go on. I am enjoying the lecture thoroughly, only it is not relevant.

Premier : I am glad that my honourable friend is enjoying it. He considers it a waste of time because I am trying merely to depict the position of this province and of big zamindars to whom he wants to give some relief. He knows perfectly well that I may be a big zamindar, though I am not, but assuming that I am a big zamindar and in my khattar bradri, which my honourable friend opposite probably knows, or take the Rajput bradri, we all sit in a punchayat. I may be a man with an income of Rs. 20,000 and there may be another man paying Rs. 5 as land revenue or earning an income of Rs. 15 per mensem whoever the aged gentleman or the leader of the bradri may be, I would pay my homage and respect to him and it is he who will decide everything and not I, in the punchayat. (Cheers). That is the position which my honourable friend is forgetting. Therefore, he would be well advised not to be misled by his friends who want to push a wedge into the society and in the community of zamindars for their own purpose. You want to draw a line of Rs. 1,000 to-day, what would happen if to-morrow it comes down to Rs. 500 or Rs. 300? It is a question of degree and therefore you will be more or less driving in a wedge which eventually may be ruination not only of this community but of the province as a whole. It is for that reason that I am not prepared to accept this proposal.

(Voices : Question may now be put.)

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Sardar Hari Singh : I hope, my honourable friend, the Leader of the House, who has just sat down, will listen to my remarks as patiently and attentively as I have listened to his speech. Sir, in answering the irrelevant portions of the Honourable Premier's speech, I hope, you will allow me to be irrelevant, if you consider that I am irrelevant in certain matters, because I am compelled to answer all the arguments and points raised by him—because unless they are answered, they may create a wrong impression inside and outside this House. For some days past, it has been the fashion with the Honourable Premier to flirt with Sardar Sohan Singh Josh and I have often asked Sardar Sohan Singh Josh to stand up and repudiate his flirtations. Their political ideologies lie poles asunder. (Interruptions). Let the Honourable Premier rest assured that my honourable friend Sardar Sohan Singh Josh would not be willing even to accompany him to heaven. The Honourable Premier himself is a big landlord, he owns a big cement factory and belongs to an aristocratic family in the Punjab and beside whom sit such big landlords as my honourable friends, Tiwana and Majithia, the latter of whom besides being a landlord, is the owner of big sugar factories in the United Provinces. (Minister for Revenue : Dr. Sir Gokul Chand is also the owner of a sugar factory). He has pointed out that Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang is also the owner of a sugar factory. Has he forgotten that only a year and three months ago, he was a colleague of Sir Sikander and he may be a colleague of Sir Sikander in a future Ministry? After a few moments of relaxation, let us be serious now. We have been seeing Sir Sikander always getting upon his legs and talking of the interest of poor down-trodden peasantry of the Punjab. All this sentimental talk of solidarity of zamindars in the Punjab is a mere camouflage. The fact of the matter is that there is now a sharp cleavage and division between landlord and his tenant. (Premier : Question). The big landlord, like a communal leader, is trying to exploit him for his own benefit. The late Maulana Muhammad Ali, in one of his statements said, that the communal leader in India is in reality a self-seeker. Similarly, a big landlord who talks of the interest of the entire zamindar community of the Punjab and the zamindar class of the Punjab is not his real benefactor. The peasants are wide-awake and they are no longer to be enchanted by the magic of words.

Now coming to the kernel of the argument advanced by my honourable friend against this harmless amendment of mine, he said that he has the feeblest sympathy for the amendment which I proposed to the select committee, that those zamindars who pay Rs. 1,000 per annum as land revenue to the Government should be excluded from the benefit enjoyed under this Bill. I hope, he will listen to me with as much courtesy and attention as I paid to his speech. All his arguments and all his eloquence has left us utterly cold. He had a very poor case to defend and he could not change a bad case into a good one. His position is not clear because at one moment he says that he has got sympathy for my proposal and then he says that it is quite irrelevant, not reasonable and is harmful to the peasants of the Punjab. He blows hot and cold in the same breath—having sympathy and no sympathy. What is his argument? He says, "What are you going to do, there are only very few big landlords in the Punjab, why are you talking of big zamindars?" What is my definition of a big landlord? My definition is that a big landlord is a zamindar who does not till the soil with his own hands. What right and justice morally has he to have more land than the one who tills the soil with his own hand? It is utterly immoral, unjust and unwise to give him more land than the person who tills with his own hands. (Premier: How many are there)? There may be 20, there may be 50 or 100. My argument remains that a person, who is a parasite on society in the garb of a landlord and with all the praises of solidarity of zamindars on his lips, has no right to have more land unless he tills it with his own hands. My honourable friend went out of his way to have a fling at our great national leader, Mahatma Gandhi, by contemptuous mention of his loin cloth.

Premier: I said nothing which was undesirable or which could be in any way disrespectful to Mahatma Gandhi.

Sardar Hari Singh: My honourable friend cannot appreciate the simplicity of Mahatma Gandhi. He cannot appreciate what the loin cloth denotes; it denotes the subjection and poverty of India. How can he appreciate that? He was born with a silver spoon in his mouth and all along he has been rolling in wealth. He must remember that he must be born a hundred times before he can have a fling at Mahatma Gandhi. (Interruption). I again say that Sir Sikander must be born a hundred times before he can speak of that great national hero in the way in which he has done to-day.

Premier: I am not so devoid of manners as to attempt even remotely a fling at a great leader like Mahatma Gandhi. I have every respect for him. My friend is merely trying to make capital out of my remarks which implied or meant no disrespect to the personality of Mahatma Gandhi.

Sardar Hari Singh: I submit, Sir, that my honourable friend again went out of his way unnecessarily to call my amendment a propaganda amendment. Let me remind him that as he is the Leader of the House, he is also a leader in playing to the gallery.

Mr. Speaker: It is unparliamentary to say that a member is playing to the gallery.

Sardar Hari Singh: If it is unparliamentary, why has the Honourable Premier been allowed to use the word "propagandists" for us so many times?

Mr. Speaker: The expression that members are playing to the gallery is unparliamentary. The honourable member should withdraw it and proceed with his speech.

Sardar Hari Singh: I withdraw and I substitute it by saying that my honourable friend himself is a pastmaster in the art of propaganda stunts.

Premier: Thank you for this compliment.

Sardar Hari Singh: The Honourable Premier advanced the argument that the big landlord must have mortgaged his land with a landlord wealthier than himself. Let me remind him that he in the select committee as well as in the House said that it was the small-holder, the poor zamindar who was buying lands from big landlords. (Premier: Since 1901). Even before that. I can conceive of cases where a tenant of a landlord after saving some money out of his hard-earned wages and income might take a bit of land by way of mortgage from his landlord. How does my honourable friend in equity and justice ask that that tenant should part with the mortgaged land of the landlord who does not till the land himself? Why should poor zamindars be made to pay for the extravagance and follies of the big landlords who do not work but simply squander away money on immoral vices? Why should those big landlords get back lands from their tenants or even from banias? I can have every sympathy for the poor zamindar who parted with his land by way of mortgage for he ran into debt in order to pay land revenue of the Government under that most iniquitous system of land revenue assessment in the world. That poor zamindar might have parted with his land on account of adverse natural circumstances. I can conceive of a poor peasant struggling against poverty working day and night, but not being able to make both ends meet and getting some money from a landlord or some bania and thus parting with his land by way of mortgage. Such a poor peasant ought to be protected, but no sympathy should be shown to that big zamindar who runs into debts on account of his follies and vices.

One word more and I will finish my speech. The party in power now here in this province is standing on the plank of the Land Alienation Act and they think that as long as they are in power they can win the support of the poor ignorant zamindars by strengthening this plank. I want to remind them that this sympathy for the poor peasant will be revealed when they bring forth proposals for the reduction in land revenue. This plank is not going to last for any length of time in the face of new economic forces at work. Perhaps they are aware of it and that is the reason why they have added a further plank of the Muslim League in order to keep in office a little longer. But I want to warn them that such plank will not help them in this province now and the poor zamindar is no longer going to be exploited by the slogan of zamindar solidarity.

Minister for Revenue (The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia): The honourable member opposite was pleased to call the big zamindars parasites. I really do not know whether it is the big zamindar who is a parasite or he who exploits other people for his own advantage (hear, hear). My own impression is that those who call the big zamindars as parasites, and themselves live on other people's income are the biggest parasites.

Now, the Honourable Premier has told the House so often and I have said too that in this province the question of big zamindars does not arise at all. This is a province of petty land-holders (An honourable member: Like yourself). Yes, like myself, I am not a big landlord. If there is a petty landholder who ekes out his living by taking some more land of his neighbour on rent, if that is the sort of zamindar whom my honourable friend was please to call a parasite, I do not know what name he would give to a really big zamindar.

My honourable friend said "let me conceive a case." Probably he conceived several times, but brought forth nothing. He said that the big zamindars wasted their time and money in debauchery and such other things. Probably some landholder may have done so. What happened 97 years ago and even before? Has he got any knowledge of what happened in the past? Or, was he merely conjecturing all sorts of ideas to strengthen his case? He thought that probably by his argument he was cutting to pieces the case which was so ably presented to the House by the Honourable Premier. He said that the big zamindars enjoyed nauteshes during Holi festival and thus squandered their money. But it is equally probable that our friends opposite are doing the same whenever they indulge in entertainments. Therefore the honourable member should not have had the audacity to call everybody names in this House. He must have some decency not to speak in that language. In his vocabulary a zamindar is the only man who can till the land whether he is big or small. If that is the sort of big zamindar whom he calls a parasite, then God save us from such friends (cheers).

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in lines 2-3 between the words "apply" and "may," the words "and who pays less than Rs. 300 per annum as land revenues to the Government" be inserted.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

3RD SESSION OF THE 1ST PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 19th July, 1938.

The Assembly met at the Assembly Chamber, Simla, at 2 p. m. of the clock.
Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

RE-ASSESSMENT OF AMRITSAR DISTRICT.

Chaudhri Faqir Hussain : Will the Honourable Minister of Revenue be pleased to state whether his attention has been invited to the feeling of uncertainty and difficulty felt by a large section of the rural section of the Amritsar district, with regard to the pending re-assessment; if so, what action has the Government taken or proposes taking in the matter?

The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia : Government are aware that in certain sections of the Amritsar rural population misunderstandings have arisen with regard to the pending re-assessment. As enjoined under the Rules, the Settlement Officer has already invited objections from all concerned, which have been receiving, and will continue to receive, the consideration which they deserve. Moreover, the Settlement Officer and his subordinate officers are ready and willing to explain any points with regard to the pending re-assessment and to clear away any ambiguities or doubts brought to their notice by any bona fide persons interested in these matters. Further, the Government has already given proof of their practical sympathy by declaring that for five years after the announcement of the new settlement old rates should remain in force and the new rates of assessment would not be applied till the five year period is over.

If there be any genuine misunderstandings or difficulties, which cannot be met by local officers, and bona fide representations are made to the Government through the proper channel, they will receive the sympathetic consideration which they deserve. At the same time, I would like to warn all concerned not to allow themselves to be exploited by interested parties, who distort facts and create misunderstandings where none should exist.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : What is the nature of the misunderstandings that have arisen?

Mian Abdul Rab : May I know from the Honourable Revenue Minister what steps he proposes to take to acquaint the rural population with the implications of the sliding scale system? I mean to explain to those people who do not come to the Settlement Officer of their own accord.

Minister : The Settlement Officer will be instructed to explain the implications and the method of the application of the sliding scale system to the people in the ilaga.

Mian Abdul Rab : I am enquiring about those people who do not come to him of their own accord. Has the Settlement Officer been instructed to go about and explain things in the villages ?

Minister : He is already going about from village to village in connection with his inspection work and during these inspections he comes in contact with the zamindars and explains to them the implications of the system.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : What is the nature of the misunderstandings that have arisen?

Minister : Probably these have been created by people thinking that the assessment is going to be enhanced.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Has the assessment not been enhanced as a matter of fact ?

Minister : No papers have yet come to me ; the Settlement Officer is yet doing his work and no final assessment has so far been made.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : How do you assume that the rates will not go up ?

Minister : No. We do not.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Then why do you say that for five years the old rates will be applicable ?

Minister : In case the new assessment, when it is made, is more than the old one according to undertaking given the old assessment will remain in force for five years.

Sardar Partab Singh : What steps does Government propose to take to explain to the villagers the implications of the sliding scale ?

Minister : I cannot add anything to the reply already given.

Sardar Partab Singh : You have not answered this question.

Minister : I have.

Sardar Partab Singh : You have said that the Settlement Officer is going about on his inspection work and in that work he comes in contact with the villagers. You have not said anything further.

Mr. Speaker : Is the honourable member addressing the Minister or the Chair ?

Sardar Partab Singh : I am addressing the Minister through you.

Mian Abdul Rab : May I know whether the Government will consider the advisability of issuing pamphlets in Urdu in order to explain in simple language to the rural population the difficulties of the sliding scale system ?

Minister : It is a request for action, but we shall consider it.

Sardar Partab Singh : Will the Revenue Minister kindly state if he will instruct the settlement officers to go to the meetings held to discuss the implications of the sliding scale system and explain to those attending the meetings the implications of the system ?

Sardar Sobhan Singh Jash : May I know whether it is a fact that the land revenue will be increased ?

Minister : My honourable friend either does not intentionally try to understand or he was not attentive when I gave the answer to that question.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : What is meant by the words 'bona fide person'?

Minister : I mean only zamindars and not officious outsiders.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

LATHI CHARGE BY POLICE IN CHAK NO. 254, LYALLPUR DISTRICT.

Mr. Speaker : Has the Honourable Premier been able to collect information in connection with the adjournment motion?

Premier : I have collected all the information which I could collect during the period. I may be permitted to say that the information in possession of the honourable member opposite is not correct.

Mr. Speaker : What is the correct information?

Premier : I will communicate it to the House, if you allow me.

Sardar Hari Singh : That may be given when we are discussing the adjournment motion.

Premier : As I said yesterday, the information is based on incorrect information, as the honourable member himself admitted.

Sardar Hari Singh : No. I did not.

Premier : The allegations or insinuations contained in that adjournment motion have no foundation.

Sardar Hari Singh : In answer to that remark of the Honourable Premier, I beg to say that I have got a written documentary evidence which is more reliable than the information supplied to the Premier by the Deputy Commissioner. I have got this information from the District Congress Committee, Lyallpur.

Mr. Speaker : Sardar Hari Singh has asked for leave to move a motion for adjournment of the business of the House to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely—Lathi charge by the police on unarmed peaceful kisans at Chak No. 254, Ganga Singh Wala, district Lyallpur, on the 15th July in connection with the agitation against reduction in the width of canal outlets, causing injuries to many innocent peasants.

Premier : My information is that there has been no lathi charge and, therefore, I would not be in a position to refute those charges. They can make any charges that they like but I have received definite information that there was no lathi charge in the Lyallpur district.

Dr. Satya Pal : We do not believe it.

Premier : If you like I can give the information which is in my possession, to the House.

Mr. Speaker : I do not think an adjournment motion can be effectively discussed unless the facts, on the basis of which the administrative responsibility of the Government is to be attacked, are correct. So, the Honourable Premier may state the facts he has ascertained.

Sardar Hari Singh : I have got facts in my possession.

Premier : The facts are that an anti-Canal Day was observed in about fifty villages of the Lyallpur district on the 15th July, 1938, when attempts were made to organise a general boycott of canal water as a protest against the remodelling of outlets recently carried out by the Irrigation Department. The boycott was very partial and was confined to the Sikh zamindars of about fifty villages. In the district as a whole there was a strong feeling against the boycott which the people generally considered to be unnecessary as well as futile. To counteract this feeling the Congress and certain so-called socialist workers of the district—I say 'so-called' because they are not real socialists like my honourable friend Sardarohan Singh Josh—conducted an intensive propaganda campaign in several parts of the district. On the day of the boycott—may I, Mr. Speaker, claim your ear because you have to give a decision on the adjournment motion—batches of Congress and socialist workers carrying Congress flags toured the affected area, inducing the people to close the outlets. At some places these workers were noticed both by the canal and civil authorities closing down the outlets against the express wish of the villagers themselves. At Tarkani on the Lower Gugera Branch a definite complaint was made to the Executive Engineer that a strong jatha of Congress and socialist volunteers was forcibly closing down the outlets in the neighbourhood. This jatha made a similar attempt at another point but dispersed on the arrival of the police which had to be despatched to the locality to preserve the peace. In the adjournment motion the allegation is made that the police made a lathi charge on the peasants of Chak No. 254-R. B. on the 15th July, 1938. This allegation is entirely without foundation. No lathi charge in the sense of concerted action by a body of the police against a mob was made at Chak No. 254-R. B. or anywhere else in the district on the 15th July 1938. (Interruptions.) My honourable friends are very impatient. If they will listen to me they will not laugh but will hang their heads in shame.

Dr. Satya Pal : The use of the word 'shame' is unparliamentary or we will call the word 'shame' to the Premier, if he says this any further.

Premier : I am not calling you 'shame'.

Dr. Satya Pal : Yes, you have said so. If it is parliamentary, we will call the Premier to hang his head in shame—

Mr. Speaker : Even if the word 'shame' is not unparliamentary, I think its use in this House is not desirable.

Premier : I would say that they will hang their head in despondency if that will suit them better. (Interruptions.) If my honourable friends would listen to me they would probably feel quite different to what they are at present. Their exuberance will be gone, in any case, if they would listen to me. From enquiries it appears that the Congress and the socialist volunteers posted at and near Chak No. 254-R. B. made an attempt to close the outlets and adopted a truculent attitude when the villagers, who resented interference of the Congress workers, objected to the closing down of the outlets. In the meantime the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Lyallpur, accompanied by the Executive Engineer of the Hafizabad Division reached the spot and made an effort to induce the Congress volunteers to refrain from intimidating the villagers. The volunteers who were about thirty-five in number and two of whom were armed with a spear and an axe, refused to listen to the officers and became extremely aggressive and threatening in their behaviour. The Deputy Superintendent of Police was abused by them in filthy language. The volunteers insisted that they would not desist from closing the outlets with or without the consent of the villagers. In the altercation that followed—I must crave your indulgence because you will have to give a decision—

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : On a point of order. I had no intention to interrupt but I want to know whether the Honourable Premier is in order in making a statement like this at this stage. I think he could have given his reasons for objecting to the adjournment motion in a few words.

Premier : A few words about the salient features ?

Mr. Speaker : He has the right to object and he can support his objection by reasons. Besides, he is stating facts at my request.

Sardar Hari Singh : Will you allow me to read a counter-statement ?

Mr. Speaker : If necessary I will allow the honourable member an opportunity to give his version, and in that case he shall certainly be entitled to make a counter-statement. I asked the Premier to state true facts to enable me to give or withhold my consent to the adjournment motion.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : What I wanted to submit is, whether it is fair to the House that the Premier should be allowed to make a statement on a subject which is the subject matter of an adjournment motion and if you rule, after hearing that statement that—

Mr. Speaker : Order, please. Notice of the adjournment motion was given yesterday when it was taken up. I asked the Premier if he was in possession of facts. He said that he had absolutely no knowledge. Upon this I requested him to ascertain facts, because without knowing facts I cannot decide whether I should give or withhold my consent to the motion and the honourable members cannot effectively dissent and attack the administrative responsibility of the Government. It appears that there are two different sets of facts. One on one side and the other on the other side. The House will hear both parties and then give vote either for one party or the other. I think he has a right to state but if the honourable members of the Opposition do not want facts to be stated, I will request the Premier not to state them further.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : My point is that the Government shall state their case. We have got information and—

Mr. Speaker : I do not think the Honourable Premier is stating the facts in detail.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : He is stating the information that he has got through his officers. We have got information through our friends who were on the spot. It is very difficult for the House to decide—unless both things are stated—whether one is correct or the other is correct. For you to presume that this is correct and then to rule the motion out of order is—

Mr. Speaker : Order, order. Did not the honourable member himself say that such and such a thing was done and so and so was killed ?

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : No, Sir. I did not make any detailed statement about the facts. I said that whatever was stated by my friend Sardar Hari Singh was quite correct. Now I have the detailed information with me.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member gave us some information yesterday.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : That is what was given in the adjournment motion and that is what we received by telegram or telephone. I have now got detailed information with me.

Mr. Speaker : I may have to hear the honourable member before allowing or disallowing the adjournment motion.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : You have to satisfy yourself, before permitting an adjournment motion, whether it is of recent occurrence, whether it is of urgent public importance and whether the administrative responsibility of the Government is there. We bring a charge against the Government that their police beat some people—whether it is correct or not is to be seen after the discussion.

Mr. Speaker : That is quite right ; but yesterday, when the Premier was not in possession of facts, the honourable member himself volunteered to state facts and I allowed him to do so. Why is he objecting to-day to the statement of facts by the Honourable Premier ?

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I do not object to his making a statement. My point is that that statement should not be the criterion for you to decide whether the motion is in order or not.

Mr. Speaker : Please, let him speak.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : May I know whether the motion is in order ?

Mr. Speaker : I have not decided yet. Please, let the Honourable Premier finish his statement.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : May I draw your attention to Standing Order 28 which lays down the procedure to be followed. There is no provision for making such a statement.

Mr. Speaker : Is the honourable member quite sure ?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : With your permission I will read out the Standing Order :—

If the Speaker is of opinion that the matter proposed to be discussed is in order, he shall read the statement to the Assembly and ask whether the member has the leave of the Assembly to move the adjournment. If objection is taken, the Speaker shall request those members who are in favour of leave being granted.....

That is the procedure that has been followed always and now it is a departure from that procedure.

(The Honourable the Premier stood up to speak).

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : The Honourable Premier should only confine himself to where his responsibility is involved.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Certain conditions have to be satisfied as to whether the occurrence is of recent occurrence or not and whether it is of public importance or not, etc.

Mr. Speaker : If the objection taken is reasonable, the motion shall be disallowed. It is my duty, I think, to try to satisfy myself that the facts on which the administrative responsibility of Government is proposed to be attacked are prima facie correct. True facts are not within the personal knowledge of any honourable member.

(Sardar Sampuran Singh stood up.)

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member can only say whether he has a personal knowledge of facts.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : You do not allow me to speak.

Mr. Speaker : Please let the Honourable Premier finish his speech.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : I got up to say that it is within my personal knowledge and you want to stop me.

Mr. Speaker : Please withdraw the remarks that I want to stop you. What I said was "Let the Honourable Premier finish his statement." After the Premier has finished, if any honourable member wishes to state facts from his personal knowledge, he shall be welcome to do so.

Premier : My honourable friend was probably in Simla when this incident took place.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : I have been at Lyallpur since then.

Premier : He will give his statement based on hearsay. But to go on with mine. The volunteers insisted that they would not desist from closing the outlets with or without the consent of the villagers. In the altercation that followed the Deputy Superintendent of Police succeeded in disarming the man with the axe and in doing so he was compelled to use his cane, resulting in very minor injuries to not more than four persons who obstructed the police officer. The man who was armed with the spear escaped and the crowd dispersed. The recovered axe was deposited in the police station the same day. The only police officers who accompanied the Deputy Superintendent of Police were his reader and orderly. Neither of them took any part in dispersing the crowd. The Deputy Commissioner and the Superintendent of Police have visited the spot and they are satisfied that no lathi charge resulting in injuries to "many innocent persons", as alleged in the adjournment motion, was made by the police.

Dr. Satya Pal : There was a lathi charge.

Premier : There was no lathi charge. No formal complaint against the police has been lodged by any of the persons immediately concerned. The Congress leaders of Lyallpur, however, produced two men before the Superintendent of Police, on the 15th July and stated that they had been beaten by the Deputy Superintendent of Police. On examination the two men were found to have minor scratches on the legs.

It is necessary to point out that in organising anti-canal demonstrations the Congress and Socialist workers of the district have acted in a highly objectionable and provocative manner. In the course of the numerous meetings that were held in the district to prepare the peasants for the boycott, several objectionable speeches were made by Congressmen. One of them, speaking at Chak No. 54-B. B. on 26th June, 1938, foully abused the police. Another speaker went out of his way to abuse me roundly.

[Premier.]

Mr. Speaker : This has no bearing on the motion.

Premier : I am coming to that part where the villagers were asked to go away and they did not. That speaker also stated that registered bad characters were being sent out to India by the British Government as Viceroys and Governors. During the demonstrations on the 15th of July, a number of Congress workers are alleged to have made a cut in the Toko distributary near Chak Nos. 913, 922 and 925-J. B. in the jurisdiction of police station Toba Tek Singh. Six of them, including a paid Congress worker, were arrested by the police under sections 147, 480, 379, Indian Penal Code, and sent up for trial. The case is sub-judice. I do not think I need give any more details. My honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, gave us the benefit of some information yesterday which he had about a certain man having been taken to the police station alive and his dead body being brought out from there on a stretcher, later on.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : My information was that the Deputy Superintendent of Police took two people with him and I do not know whether they were in custody or not, but they were taken by him because he wanted them to give false evidence.

Premier : My honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, yesterday in this House stated that two people were taken to the police station but when they came out, only one of them came alive and the dead body of the other came out on a stretcher.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I did not say that.

Premier : It may be different to-day. I hope it is. That is, so far as I recollect, the statement which he made deliberately and he said, in addition to what is being alleged in the adjournment motion, that he had the information that two men went into the police station and only the dead body of one came out on a stretcher. It is a very wild allegation and it is to that that I am referring.

"The son of a sardar of Chak 51-J. B., Police Station Sadr Lyallpur, died suddenly on the 16th July, 1938. His body was sent for post-mortem examination, but no cause of death could be ascertained. His viscera has, however, been sent to the Chemical Examiner for analysis. A magisterial enquiry into his death is in progress. It is believed that the man committed suicide in a fit of temporary insanity, but the motive for the suicide is not yet known. No allegations of violence have been made either by the father of the deceased or his other immediate relations."

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I do not allege it.

Premier : My honourable friend does not allege it now.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I never alleged it yesterday.

Premier : I was referring to the statement made by the honourable member yesterday that two men were taken into the police station alive and when they came out, one of them was alive and the other's body was brought on a stretcher. That is what I am referring to.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : You do not allow members on this side to speak.

Mr. Speaker : I would request the honourable member to withdraw his words.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : If you say that what I said was wrong then I will withdraw.

Mr. Speaker : The charge, the honourable member has made, savours of partiality. So, he should withdraw it at once.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : I withdraw my words.

Premier :

"Some of the Congress workers have, however, mischievously alleged that the deceased committed suicide because he was being forced by the police to give evidence in the case against the persons arrested in Toba Tek Singh for alleged cutting of the canal bank. So far as it is known at present, there is no foundation whatever for this allegation."

That is the information which I have got and I hope that on the basis of that information you would rule that rather wild adjournment motion out of order.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Sir, the Honourable Premier has referred to the statement which I made yesterday and said that it was a wild statement. He presumed that I am going to withdraw a word or a syllable or even a single sentence of it. Therefore, I think I should give a personal explanation to the House, through you.

Mr. Speaker : All the Honourable Premier said was that probably the honourable member, in the light of information which he may have since received, may not now stick to his yesterday's statement.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : He said that my statement was wild and that I made a wrong statement yesterday and that I am going to withdraw it to-day. My submission is, as I said yesterday, two men were brought by the Deputy Superintendent of Police because they refused to give false evidence at his bidding. They were brought with him and in the evening or next day one reached alive and the dead body of the other reached the village. I did never say or allege that the man was killed by the police because I was not sure. But this is a fact that one man did not return alive and it was his dead body that reached the village.

Premier : I am very glad that my honourable friend takes that view now.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : I got up sometime ago to find out the meaning of personal knowledge. Do you expect any member of the House to be an eye-witness to the whole affair or by 'personal knowledge' do you mean the knowledge of a person who went to the spot and made enquiries ?

[S. Sampuran Singh.]

If you consider that 'personal knowledge' means to make enquiry on the spot or from the person who had the knowledge of it, then I have personal knowledge and if you expect us to be present at the spot, then I have no personal knowledge; unless you give your ruling on that point, I have nothing to say.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : The Deputy Commissioner has also no personal knowledge of the affair.

Mr. Speaker : May I ask the House whether the honourable Sardar Hari Singh has the leave of the House to move his motion ?

(As more than the requisite number of members stood up to support the leave being granted, the leave was granted.)

Mr. Speaker : Now the question is when this motion should be taken up.

(After informal discussion.)

Mr. Speaker : The motion will be taken up either to-morrow or the day after, that depends on what progress we make to-day from 11 to 1. The House will now proceed to consider the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill.

THE PUNJAB RESTITUTION OF MORTGAGED LANDS BILL.

Clause 4.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural)
Sir, I beg to move—

That in line 3, for the words "at any time", the words "within six months from the date this Act came into force" be substituted.

My reason for moving this amendment is this. In the clause, as it stands, the provision is like this: "A mortgagor . . . . may at any time present a petition to the Collector praying for restitution of possession of the land mortgaged." Now the words 'at any time' mean that he may move even after 10 years. That surely seems to be very absurd on the face of it. When limitation is fixed almost for every remedy in law why should this be left without any restriction of time? Surely, if a mortgagor is an aggrieved party, he will have no objection to approach the collector at as early a date as possible after this Act has been passed or after this Act comes into force. I have, therefore, proposed that any mortgagor or any interested person who is to be benefited by the provisions of this Bill should be obliged to present a petition to the collector within 6 months after the date when this Act comes into force. Six months surely is not a short time, because people will in all probability come to know within six months time that this Act has been passed and that they have such and such a remedy under this Act and they will then be in a position to present petitions to the collector. There is another difficulty which might arise from leaving these words in the Bill and not fixing any time for the presentation of petitions. You will kindly refer to clause 7

(2) (i), (ii) and (iii) and you will find that the amount of compensation depends upon the time for which a certain mortgage is in existence. For instance, in part (i) you find that the amount of compensation would be 80 times the land revenue assessed on the land at the time when it was mortgaged if the mortgagee has been in possession for a period exceeding 30 years but not exceeding forty years. In (ii) it is said 'fifteen times the land revenue assessed on the land at the time when it was mortgaged if the mortgagee has been in possession for a period exceeding forty years but not exceeding fifty years'. Lastly in part (iii) we find 'five times the land revenue assessed on the land at the time when it was mortgaged if the mortgagee has been in possession for a period exceeding fifty years.' Now, my submission is that if no time limit is fixed there may be a mortgagor, whose land is not very productive, but at the same time he thinks that he can get back that land on payment of 30 times the land revenue if the mortgage has been in existence for over 30 years but not exceeding 40 years. Now, supposing his land has been under mortgage for 39 years and 8 months, if he at once approaches the collector he would have to pay 80 times the land revenue. But if he approaches a few months after, say 9 or 10 months after, the amount of compensation would be automatically halved—from 80 times the jama it would come to 15 times and then in another case if the mortgage has been in existence for 49 years and a few months he will have to pay 15 times the jama. But if he knows that if he waits for 9 or 10 months the compensation would be reduced to one-third, he will certainly wait till that period. Therefore, the mortgagee would suffer. In the first instance he would suffer a cent. per cent. loss. In the second case he would suffer a loss of 200 per cent., because instead of getting Rs. 300 he will be getting only Rs. 100, as the case may be, that is one-third of the compensation in the latter case and only half of the compensation in the former case. That certainly should not be the object of the legislators on this point. Therefore, when they are taking away the lands from the hands of the mortgagees and are setting aside contracts solemnly entered into by the parties after a lapse of 30 or 40 or 50 years and may be even 59 years, it is only reasonable that the amount of hardship should be reduced to the minimum possible and mortgagors should not in any way be induced or tempted to resort to this practice which though it is not positive dishonesty, Government should not encourage. Otherwise Government would be a party to this fraud of a certain kind, if these mortgagees are deprived even of their extremely reduced dues. I hope I have made myself clear to the Honourable Revenue Minister and the Honourable Premier. I am not even sure that they have been paying proper attention to what I said. But it is not my fault if they have not listened or are not in a mood to consider.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in line 3 for the words "at any time" the words "within six months from the date this Act came into force" be substituted.

Minister for Revenue (The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia): My honourable friend wishes to limit the period by which applications have to be made. He has presented one side of the picture. I may be permitted to present the other side of the picture. Supposing there is a person who has been ill for more than six months or is absent from India for six months or he is a minor who cannot take advantage within the period which my honourable friend wishes to fix. Then what will happen? These people would be deprived of the advantages they can derive under this Bill. The second point is that there may be a possibility of a sort of collusion between the mortgagor and the mortgagee. They may come to an agreement. If a mortgage has been running for 40 years, they may come to some arrangement to wait for another 5 years. As I said, if a man is ill of a very serious disease and is not able to take advantage of this Act then the six months may not be enough. What will happen then? (An honourable member: He can apply through an attorney). (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I will tell you when I get my turn to speak). You will tell me and my honourable friend opposite has said 'through an attorney.' But the Act may not provide for any pleaders. The last Act did not provide for a pleader and probably my honourable friends want to bring in a pleader into this Act in this way. (An honourable member: I meant a mukhtar). Then my honourable friend said that within the six months time, the amount may increase or decrease, the compensation that is to be paid. Probably if the time is fixed the compensation may even be increased. It may be either this way or that way. Therefore in these circumstances I think that the proposition of my honourable friend is not suitable and I am not prepared to accept it.

[Minister for Revenue,]

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I have to restrain myself in order to make a very respectful reply to the Honourable Revenue Minister. It is not his fault if he has made the reply that he has made. I wish nobody had prompted him to make this reply (Interruption) or, I would say, advised.

Mr. Speaker: Please do not be personal.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: I did not mean anything disrespectful. They are all supposed to act with the advice of one another, responsibility being joint. The constitution is changed and therefore I did not mean any disrespect when I said that he spoke on the advice of others. I will do the same in similar circumstances. There is no harm in that. No disrespect at all. But coming to the merits of his reply, I would submit this. One of the objections that he urged was that the mortgagor might be ill. Now Sardar Sahib, if he were a lawyer, would have known that there are about 185 or 186 or perhaps more articles in the Limitation Act which prescribe limitations for various remedies at law and the limitation is sometimes 3 months or 6 months or 12 years or even 60 years or a few days in some cases. You will see that the objection that Sardar Sahib has raised could be raised against the whole Limitation Act and if there is any force in his objection, then the Limitation Act should be wiped out, because it is not only the mortgagors under this Act who are likely to fall ill, but others are also liable to fall ill, allowing the limitation to expire. But there are remedies. One was the remedy suggested by my honourable friend, that if he is so unwell he can engage an attorney. The reply that Sardar Sahib gave to this side remark was still more interesting. He said, "We do not know if we are going to allow the appearance of lawyers." But what my honourable friend on this side referred to was not lawyers but attorney and attorney means mukhtar. Any one can be arranged to put in this petition. You are probably going to make rules under this Act under clause 18 (3). Probably you will make a rule that he can send in an application by post or through an attorney or a pleader. There is no reason why even under this Act lawyers should be prevented from representing their clients. Under the Land Alienation Act certainly you have ruled the lawyers out of order. But there seems to be no reason why lawyers should be ruled out under this Act. But if they are to be ruled out still there are other remedies. One man can be appointed as mukhtar for 20 people, if necessary, who are lying ill in a hospital. He can represent the whole ward in a hospital of mortgagors who may unfortunately be lying ill. Then the next objection of Sardar Sahib was still more interesting and that was that a mortgagor may be a minor. Is only a mortgagor going to be a minor or are those people under about 200 articles of the Limitation Act also going to be minors at the time the limitation expires? Sardar Sahib should know that limitation does not run against a minor. That is the law. As long as he is a minor, up to 18 years, it does not run against him. If he has a guardian up to 21 years it does not run against him and after attaining majority he has 3 years at least within which to set the law in motion. So that the only grounds on which my honourable friend has opposed my amendment—he will agree with me now at least—hold no water. He shakes his head. I have no reply to the shaking of his head. I cannot outshake him. That is my difficulty. (Interruption). Yes, I cannot out-vote him. I can shake his arguments, but no arguments that he gave can be called arguments. I am sure he did not follow me. He said that compensation might decrease or increase. I am not talking of decreasing or increasing. What I was talking about is that by lapse of a few months the mortgagee may be deprived of even this meagre compensation which my honourable friend has been pleased to provide in the Bill. I cannot say anything more. It is my misfortune if I cannot convince him.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in line 3 for the words "at any time" the words "within six months from the date this Act came into force" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The next amendment* of Rai Bahadur Mukand Lal Puri is out of order.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, this clause, as I submitted, has fixed no time for putting in applications and my amendment has been rejected by the Government but my submission is this. It is very clear from the attitude of the Honourable Premier and his colleagues that they had in mind the acceptance of the next amendment. They do not disapprove of the principle involved in my amendment. Unfortunately they find that the amendment that follows mine is out of order.

Mr. Speaker : I request the honourable member to speak to the clause and not to the amendment which has been held to be out of order.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I am giving reasons to oppose this clause. I said that they have made a mistake under a misapprehension

*That between the words "at any time" and "present" in line 3, the words "before a suit for redemption is barred" be inserted.

probably and therefore this clause should not be passed, because according to their own views this clause, as it stands, is not perfect and I would request them to have it suspended and to pass over to other clauses and in the meantime to remodel it and have it considered later. If my view about their attitude is not correct and if they think that the clause is perfect, as it stands, then I have nothing further to say.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): Sir, so far as I have followed the discussion of this Bill on the floor of this House, the idea of the Government is to allow restitution of mortgages which were effected sixty years ago, that is, the mortgages commencing with the year 1878. If this is the intention of the legislature, then, I think, that intention is not covered by the clause that is before us, because a mortgage might have been executed in the 16th century and if before the sixty years have expired there has been an admission of the liability by the mortgagee that the mortgage subsists, another period of sixty years is allowed under the Limitation Act and if there have been successive admissions it would be possible to redeem a mortgage of the 16th century now and not only the mortgage effected in 1878. If the intention of the Government is to include all these old mortgages also, there is no difficulty, but if the intention is to include mortgages since 1878 only then that intention has not been carried out.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural): I merely want to say a word with regard to the legal aspect of the question. In clause 2 we have already said 'notwithstanding anything to the contrary.' When we have done that, it can be argued on the basis of clause 2 that notwithstanding the period of 60 years, the right that has been given under this Act is there. There is another clause which deals with subsisting mortgages. I submit there is the difficulty. It can be said that this clause is subject to clause 2. Therefore, I simply make a suggestion to the Honourable Advocate-General whether that difficulty is not possible to arise. Another thing that has been pointed out by my learned friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, is also there and these are the things that are to be considered.

Mr. Speaker: Question is—

That clause 4 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 5.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): I propose that—

For the words "after such enquiries as may be prescribed" in lines 3-4, the words "after such enquiry as is prescribed for trial of suits under the Punjab Tenancy Act" be substituted.

The object of the amendment is quite clear from the words thereof. It is to suggest that the collector should follow the procedure for the trial of suits rather than of enquiries which may be purely dependent upon his discretion. The idea is to limit his discretion by certain rules and the best rules that can be thought of under the circumstances are the rules with which he is familiar and which he follows in the trial of the cases every day.

Mr. Speaker : The question is —

For the words "after such enquiries as may be prescribed" in line 34, the words "after such enquiry as is prescribed for trial of suits under the Punjab Tenancy Act" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 5 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 6.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 6 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 7.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I move—

That in sub-clause (1), line 1, between the words "Collector" and "finds" the words "who for the purposes of this Act, shall act as a Revenue Court" be inserted.

I would not repeat the arguments which have been given in support of amendments of a similar character which were moved in connection with other Bills. The object of this amendment is perfectly clear and that is that the proceedings before the collector may be more regular, may be more thorough, more comprehensive and, therefore, more calculated to do justice. As I said the other day a collector is a very busy officer, he is doing so many duties, he is a collector of revenue, he is the chief magistrate of the district, he is head of the Excise Department, he is the head of the Police Department, the Registrar of the district, he is so many things in one person. He is responsible for the maintenance of law and order in the whole of the district and he is also the president of the municipal committee in some cases and of the district board in most cases and with the passing of these Bills more work has been thrown on his hands. Therefore he will find it more and more difficult to do this work as a collector, but if he has to do this work, then my submission is, let him do this work as a court, so that he will be bound by certain rules of evidence and certain rules of procedure and will be able to do that work more thoroughly. For another reason also I would urge this amendment and that is this, that the civil courts are not to have any hand in the adjudication of these matters between the mortgagors and the mortgagees and, therefore, it is necessary that there should be some resemblance of judicial procedure observed by the people who have to deal with such cases.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in sub-clause (1), line 1, between the words "Collector" and "finds" the words "who for the purposes of this Act, shall act as a Revenue Court" be inserted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : I might point out to my honourable friend that clause 7 must be read with clause 5 where we have already said that on receipt of such petition the collector after such enquiries as may be prescribed shall record an order in writing with reasons stating whether the mortgage in question is one to which this Act applies. He will have to make enquiries and in the rule-making power also we have got it that the Government shall prescribe the manner and method in which the enquiry shall be made. So, I do not think that I can accept this amendment as such as the principle is there already and we will prescribe the manner in which the collector shall make enquiries under the rules.

[Premier.]

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra: Mr. Speaker, the amendment that is being now proposed is of a very harmless character and is very useful for the reason that even in ordinary mutation cases, as you are aware, there are questions which are complicated and intricate. Even in such cases, after summary procedure, matters can be taken to civil courts. In the cases under the Bill intricate questions will certainly arise about the restitution of mortgaged property, such as whether it was a mortgaged property or what kind of mortgage it was—and there are so many other questions—would arise and, therefore, it is necessary that the collector should act as a revenue court, as is provided under section 88 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, because there is the satisfaction that the parties concerned in that case will have the right to produce evidence, to quote law and to prove the bona fides and at the same time ask for compensation in such cases, but if they are deprived even of such an elementary facility, the question would be that the collector in his capacity as a deputy commissioner may do in his discretion whatever he likes and his finding may be altogether arbitrary. Therefore, I submit that this is an amendment which is a healthy one and which will to a great extent prove useful for the persons who are interested and whose rights are going to be affected by this amendment.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker left the chair and Mr. Deputy Speaker occupied it).

Shaikh Karamat Ali (Nankana Sahib, Muhammadan, Bural): I rise to oppose this amendment on the consideration that Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang had been pleased to advance a paradoxical argument to-day on the floor of this House. He has several times conceded that the collector is a responsible official and I believe, that everybody who is here in this House will certainly agree with me when I submit, that one who has been called a responsible officer can ill-afford to behave otherwise than be just and reasonable in arriving at certain decisions on transactions under this Bill. It is supposed by him that he is an over-worked officer. I do not understand this argument. What is the meaning of calling an officer an over-worked officer? So far as certain applications under this Bill are concerned, I will take them as mere additions to the cause list of the deputy commissioner and whenever he is deciding them he will not be obsessed with any domestic duties and there is no reasonable ground to believe that he will not properly attend to the business that is before him. I believe that when those applications made under this particular Act are before him, he would decide them with a clean and free mind as if he has got no other work to attend to. So, under these circumstances, I think that the mere fact that a collector is over-worked as President of the District Board, does not warrant that he would not be in a position to arrive at a just decision or arrive at a true finding. Further, my friend has also raised an objection—not of course on any judicial grounds—that if he were to act as a court he would decide better than when he acts as a revenue officer. Even there I disagree. If the collector has been considered to be in one way permanently associated with a particular form of work, I should say that he would carry that permanent stamp of character even in the decision of cases when he is deciding as a court. That would not certainly alter the position of the collector. Therefore, I oppose this amendment. (Loud applause).

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : After hearing the arguments of my learned friend one would be led to think that the civil courts exist in this country on mere sufferance. There is no matter which should be left to the decision of the civil courts. Whatever view might be held as to the amendments of the Land Alienation Act where the collector acts in an executive capacity or whatever view might be held with respect to the registration and licensing of money-lenders where the collector may again have to perform an executive function, there should be no two opinions as to the proper forum for the decision of matters which we are now considering. My learned friend would concede that the decision of a dispute between a mortgagor and a mortgagee is a matter properly for the civil courts. Under this Act he will have to do the accounts-taking between a mortgagor and a mortgagee.

Shaikh Karamat Ali : On a point of order. My honourable friend is discussing the situation here not from the point of view of the amendment put forward but how the civil court could decide. I think he should confine his argument to the amendment that is before the House.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : He is simply developing an argument and he is in order. (Hear, hear).

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Those of us who have to do with cases of this type know very well what a difficult matter it is even for the best of the civil judges to arrive at a correct decision in such complicated matters. Not only is this account-taking to be done but he has also to decide whether a mortgage subsists—a matter which is very difficult. Ordinarily, these matters should have been left to the civil courts but if the civil courts are for some reason or other under a cloud—(Premier : No.) If they are not under a cloud, what do the civil courts exist for except for deciding matters of this type? What is the underlying idea in ousting their jurisdiction in matters which are properly within their jurisdiction? But I was submitting that whatever be the policy of the legislature into which it is hardly time to enter, whatever may be the policy as to why these civil courts are being ousted, the prayer is that whatever officer decides that matter, he should decide it as a court, i.e., he should act as if he was discharging judicial functions. I do hope that if a Government wishes to entrust any officer with the decision of any matter it will insist upon his possessing the requisite amount of knowledge and ability to discharge those duties satisfactorily. Therefore, that is a matter for the Government. I take it that the Government will only entrust the decision of these complicated matters to such collectors of whom they can say that they would be able to understand the technicalities and the intricacies of the mortgage law. That is a matter for the Government.

[R. B. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

All that I want to see laid down is that that officer in arriving at a decision should follow the forms of procedure which are laid down for courts and I ask my learned friend, in fact I am surprised at the argument of the honourable member from Sheikhpura, if he would advocate the abolition of procedure of courts in the decision of such cases, I should like him to say for what cases he would like that procedure to be followed.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I have still to reply.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Amendment Nos. 2 to 8 are in a way similar to amendment No. 1. If the honourable members, in whose names these amendments stand, want to speak, they may speak on this amendment and then all these amendments, if necessary, will be put to vote later—the principle involved being the same. In that way we will be able to save some time.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : You have put them on their guard and given them a warning.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Sir, the amendment of which I have given notice relates to line 5 of sub-clause (1) and it says that after the collector is satisfied that the mortgage is such to which this Act applies, he shall proceed further in the matter. What I say is that before he gives his finding he should afford the parties concerned the fullest opportunity for producing evidence. It will be admitted that the task to be entrusted to the collector will be of an important nature. He will have to apply the best of his judicial talents in determining the matters before him. When that is so and when there are parties more than one, who will be affected by his decision, it will be right that these parties are given an opportunity of placing their case as fully as possible before the collector; and not only that but the collector should be bound to record evidence, because you will agree that this is not a proceeding of a summary nature. We are taking these powers away from the civil courts and placing them in the hands of collectors on the ground that the civil courts delay matters or that it is more desirable to entrust these powers to collectors. But the collector's enquiry should not be of a cursory nature: we expect that the collector will make as full an enquiry as possible into the facts of the case before him and for these reasons we have given notice of this amendment. I hope Government will accept this amendment unless this will be thrown out on the score that this amendment has been moved by the Congress party.

Lala Duni Chand : Sir, up to this time the boast of the Government has been that nobody should be punished except under the law. It has been the boast of the Government that no right should be taken away except by conforming to the form of procedure. There is the Civil Procedure Code and the essence of this code is that before any right is given to anybody or before any right is taken away from anybody, a certain procedure must be complied with. What is the position now? Good-bye is being said to all forms of procedure. There is the amendment of Mr. Puri. He merely says that the procedure prescribed for suits under the Tenancy Act should be adopted in the proceedings under this Act. There is the amendment of my friend Mr. Sachar. He says if you are not going to accept the amendment it must be the duty of the collector that before he extinguishes the mortgage and before deciding a case under this Act he should hold some sort of enquiry and should record the evidence. That amendment is to be rejected summarily. I want to know from the Government whether they have any respect for the law, for the spirit of law. It is out-heroding Herod. This Government is making an improvement on the previous Government.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Please speak to the motion.

Lala Duni Chand : I am giving reasons why this amendment should be accepted and certain procedure should be laid down. These powers are being given to the executive Government. The executive Government shall make some rules. I say when you are dealing with a question of such momentous consequence it is not fair to those who are affected by the decision of the question that at least some right should be given that they should produce evidence and should have the satisfaction of placing their case before the collector exercising the powers of a revenue court. We are simply wondering to what limits we are going. I know it is hoping against hope. What we say is and I would invite the attention of the Government that they may go on doing this for 3 years, 6 years or even ten years but the day of reckoning is bound to come, the nemesis is bound to come.

Premier : Sir, you will not expect me to attempt to answer the rather irrelevant speech made by my friend who accused us of out-heroding Herod. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Are you replying?) I have not spoken yet. Let me point out that we are doing nothing more or nothing less than what we have already done in the case of several important enactments.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : On a point of order. I am afraid the Honourable the Premier has spoken already. The Chair ruled that these amendments should be put together.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, the only reason why I have got up to reply is to say a few words with respect to the arguments, if they can be called by that name, advanced by my honourable friend, Shaikh Karamat Ali. He accused me of having urged paradoxical arguments. What was the paradox? He said that on some occasion, which I cannot recall, I said that the collector is a responsible officer. If I said it before I was perfectly right and if I did not say before I say it now that the collector is a responsible officer, a very responsible officer, a most responsible officer. What I want by this amendment is to make him all the more responsible (hear, hear). No one will deny, even Shaikh Sahib will not deny, that when an officer sits as an executive officer he acts in a different manner from that in which he would act if he was sitting as a court. Because, then he is bound by certain rules of evidence and procedure and therefore his consciousness of responsibility is much greater than it is when he is acting in his executive capacity. I have not been able to discover any paradox in the argument which I have submitted. Even a patwari is a responsible officer, a very responsible officer. Once he lays the foundation of claims to lands, sometimes it is impossible to set them aside even by the Privy Council. All the higher officers act upon what the patwari has entered in the revenue records after they have been duly checked by higher authorities. Therefore, a patwari is also a very responsible officer. Would my honourable friend then entrust the decision of those cases to a patwari or to a kharango? Certainly not. The difference between a collector and a patwari, so far as the executive capacity is concerned, is one of degree and not of kind. Therefore, when I suggest that the collector should be made to sit as a court, I do not mean any discourtesy to the collectors. In fact, whenever I have spoken against collectors acting in their executive capacity, I have always been careful to pay compliments to them, to call them responsible officers, able and competent officers and possessed of all sorts of virtues. But I would not allow even a High Court judge to dispose of cases in a summary way. If the cases involve the question of title and rights to property worth thousands and lakhs, I would certainly ask even the High Court judges to act in a judicial capacity and not in an executive capacity. That is so far as the paradox is concerned.

Then, Sir, he said that the collector would be always responsible when he was disposing of those cases. No other calls or distractions would take him away from the decision of those cases. When he is acting as an executive officer, he has so many other duties to attend to and he will be exposed to the temptation of going through the work that is in hand as expeditiously and summarily as possible. What my contention aims at is that that temptation of disposing of cases in a summary manner should not be placed in his way. Expeditiousness is good, but if a judge sits down and says, 'I must finish these 12 cases to-day', then he is liable to do injustice because then he will not be able to pay the same attention as if he was not weighed by this feeling that he has to dispose of so many cases a day. Then the judge ceases to be a judge and becomes a contractor. The work done on a contract is never as good as the work done amasi. I am only giving an illustration. I do not mean that any collector or any other officer takes up the work exactly in that spirit of contract at all. Certainly not. I do not mean that. I am only comparing the same gentleman sitting as an executive officer with the same gentleman sitting as a court. It cannot be denied by any reasonable person, who is at all conversant with the procedure in courts, that a person sitting in a court is likely to do more justice and to act more judiciously than if he was sitting as an executive officer.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The question is that—

In sub-clause (1), line 1, between the words "Collector" and "finds" the words "who for the purpose of this Act, shall act as a Revenue Court" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : If any of the honourable members, in whose names amendments Nos. 2 to 8 stand, wants to move his amendment he may do so. It will be put to the vote of the House, but the mover shall not be allowed to make a speech.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar (North-Western Towns, General, Urban) : I beg to move that—

In sub-clause (1), line 5, between the words "finds" and "that," the following be inserted:—

"after making such enquiries as may be prescribed, from the parties concerned and recording evidence."

The motion was lost.

Lala Bhim Sen Saehar (North-Western Towns, General, Urban): Sir, I beg to move that—

In sub-clause (1), line 7, between the words "exceed" and "the" the word "double" be inserted.

It is not necessary for me to make a long speech in support of my amendment. It is very obvious to fix the criterion of double the amount.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved is that—

In sub-clause (1), line 7, between the words "exceed" and "the" the word "double" be inserted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, you must have noticed that we have, in the clause as drafted and approved by the select committee, included the words "equal or exceed", which means that we have strictly adhered to the spirit of the rule of damdupat. My honourable friend now wants something more than that and I am afraid he has not adduced any logical reasons for fixing that amount. You might as well say, treble, 4 times or 6 times. We have gone on a definite principle, that is, the spirit underlying the principle of damdupat and, therefore, any other figure would not be logical. It may be satisfactory from the point of view of my honourable friend or those of his view of thinking, but it would not be logical.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural): Sir, I will make only one or two observations. Whatever the scale of compensation you may fix, it may be five times the land revenue, ten times the land revenue or fifteen times the land revenue, you cannot call it a compensation. It is nothing as compared with the market value of the mortgaged land; it is mere camouflage. (Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmiani: What amendment is the honourable member discussing?) The amendment moved by my honourable friend, Lala Bhim Sen Saehar. If Malik Barkat Ali were here I wanted to put him a question as he is an expert lawyer; whether 15 times or 30 times the land revenue is only an artificial value for determining the jurisdiction. Thirty times the land revenue by no means represents the market value of the land. It really means that so much is fixed for the purposes of jurisdiction value or court fees value.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: These details are not relevant.

Lala Duni Chand: Sir, I am trying to show that what the Government has fixed as compensation is nothing. Am I not within the rules of relevancy? Any lawyer will tell us that it has been laid down by a number of rulings of the High Court that the market value of land in the Punjab is two hundred times or four hundred times the land revenue. Supposing there is a mortgage of five hundred bighas of land say for Rs. 5,000, five times the land revenue may be only Rs. 50. Will this sum be a measure of compensation? I have no objection to having no compensation at all, but it should not be proclaimed before the world that we are giving compensation. This is no compensation. For these reasons, I strongly support the amendment now before the House.

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghasanfar Ali Khan): This amendment relates to the compensation to be determined by the collector to the mortgagee when ordering the restoration of the land to the mortgagor. My honourable friend, Lala Duni Chand, has tried to prove that the Government are merely, to use his own words, camouflaging and that they are not giving any compensation. With your permission, Sir, I will quote facts and figures and will leave it to the honourable member to judge for himself whether his arguments are fallacious or not. I will show by these figures that the mortgagees have derived the benefits more than 10 times the amount originally advanced. Supposing we take the year 1935. The total area under mortgage is 5,048,808 acres. This area is assessed to a land revenue of Rs. 59,70,339. Now in accordance with the speech of the Honourable Premier made the other day, it was stated that while assessing the revenue the Government assessed revenue at the rate of one-fourth of the produce. Therefore, if my honourable friend will multiply this figure of Rs. 59,70,339 by four and if we take it that the average period under which this land remained under mortgage is 50 years, he will find the average benefit derived by the mortgagee. I am taking the figure 50 years, because this Bill relates to the mortgages of lands as back as 1878 and if we count up to 1938, it will be about 60 years. But on the other hand if we take another piece of land which was mortgaged in 1900, that is a few months before the Land Alienation Act came into force, the period will be 40 years. Therefore I have taken the average, i.e., 50 years. Now, if you multiply the figure which I have already given, namely, Rs. 59,70,339 by four and take into consideration the period for which the mortgagee held that land in his possession, we find that the average benefit which he has derived per acre comes to about Rs. 189. It is Rs. 284 per acre maximum in the case of land mortgaged for 60 years and Rs. 189 is the minimum. Therefore, the average comes to Rs. 236 per acre. But if you observe the figures given in the revenue reports you will be pleased to notice that the average price of land per acre is Rs. 60. I am not taking into consideration the question whether the mortgagor has been paying interest. Suppose a man has mortgaged his land for cash payment. The mortgagee would still have derived four times the amount which he originally advanced.

Lala Duni Chand : Then, is it the contention of the honourable member that because the mortgagee has received three or four times the value of the money he advanced, therefore, he should be entitled to no more compensation? If so, I have no quarrel with him.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : That is exactly my position. If the mortgagee has received more than twice the amount he is not entitled to anything more. On the other hand, if he has received less than twice the amount, then we have proposed a scale of compensation. I personally consider that there will not be any case where a mortgagee has not derived more than four times the benefit. Therefore this section will not be very much operative except of course in certain very, very rare cases where land has not been in his possession for certain reasons beyond his control. I do not like to tire the House by quoting figures for various years. As a matter of fact, the figures I have quoted will satisfy my honourable friend.

There is a great difference between the amendment moved by me and the one moved by Mr. Bhim Sen Sachar. The difference is this; when my amendment definitely says twice the amount originally advanced, his amendment is vague and ambiguous. If you read the original clause you will find that the intention is that if the man has derived benefit more than twice the amount originally advanced he should not be entitled to any compensation. It is merely with the object of making the clause more clear that I have thought it necessary to give notice of my amendment and I hope it will be accepted unanimously.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : The amendment of Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan is practically the same as the one moved by Lala Bhim Sen Sachar. But there is another amendment in the name of Mir Maqbool Mahmood and I do not know whether he intends to move it, but I think it is a bit more clearly worded than either of these two amendments. In any case I oppose both the amendments now before the House. My reasons are these. It has been assumed, and this is what I gather from the speech of the Honourable Premier that by introducing these amendments they are carrying out the principle of damdapat. I have no quarrel about the expression damdapat; ancient law gives certainly prescribed this limit. But what is the interpretation of this expression? At the time when this principle was laid down there was no law of limitation. So far as my knowledge goes, Manu Smriti or any other Smriti which may be quoted in support of this principle does not lay down any law as to limitation. If there was any gentleman here of about a hundred years of age, he would support me when I say that until the British people came to this country there was no such system of law known as the law of limitation as has been introduced into this country by the Limitation Act. What did the people do before this law of limitation came into force? No one ever denied his liability. There were no legal quibbles and there were no laws which encouraged debtors to deny their liabilities. In fact it was considered as one of the greatest sins to deny one's debt, or to refuse to pay back what one had borrowed from one's neighbour. It was also considered a great shame in society, as it was then constituted, to deny one's liability for debt. Therefore, debtors always were ready to pay their debts if they could. If you talk to very very old people they would tell you that no one showed any inclination to be dishonest or any inclination to deny his liability. What used to happen was that the money-lender would go to the house of the debtor and sit dharna at his house and would not leave the house until the debt was paid provided the borrower could pay. Not only that. It was a well recognised convention which was permitted by society as constituted in those days for a creditor to catch hold of the debtor if he turned dishonest and to bring him to his own house or to his shop and put his legs in stocks. This practice as called kath marna. The debtor was chained to the stocks, a contrivance made of wood with holes in it in which the legs of the debtor were put and screwed and he was thus detained until he agreed to pay his debt or some relations of his came and paid the debt due from him. This was recognised by the society of those days. Then came the law of limitation. In those old circumstances the principle of damdapat might have been in force. But that did not mean that a debtor could evade his liability for an indefinite period of time or a creditor kept quiet for 50 years or 60 years. Probably there was no such system of mortgages as prevails in these days and people lent only to those in whose honour they trusted and people who borrowed kept their honour and paid their due debts so that if it was a matter of three or 4 years or 5 years or on account of bad seasons even six or seven years, no creditor was allowed by custom or under the injunction of Shastras more than double of what he advanced. But is there any authority in any of the Smritis or ancient laws which deserve any respect that if a debtor refuses to pay his debt for 50 years, provided it could be kept alive by some device, the creditor is not authorised to recover more than double the amount which he had advanced? My submission is that there is no such provision. Even under the Relief of Indebtedness Act which the Punjab Government passed a short time ago what was provided for was this, that the interest was restricted to a certain rate and when the debt and interest were added a new starting point was fixed and after that date it has been provided—that the creditor would not be allowed to recover more than double the amount standing on that date. Let me make it clear by giving an example. Supposing in 1930 I advanced Rs. 1,000 to some one at 10 per cent. interest and on the 1st of January, 1935, say, when the Act came into force that debt stood at Rs. 1,500. Now that Rs. 1,500 would be the starting point and even if my debt after that date stands out for ten years I shall not be entitled to recover more than Rs. 3,200, not that I shall not be entitled to recover more than 1,000 plus 1,000 or Rs. 2,000. That is not the law as passed by the Punjab Legislative Council only about 9 or 2½ years ago. The starting point was fixed. Now the Honourable Premier says, it does not matter if the limitation for the redemption of mortgages is 60 years. If a loan was advanced say in 1878 and the redemption takes place in 1938, the mortgagee is not entitled to recover more than twice the amount advanced in 1878. This is the proposition which is now being urged. If he advanced Rs. 100 in 1878, he is not allowed to recover more than Rs. 200 in 1938. This is the position. I will just present to you the other side of the picture. Supposing the mortgagee who had Rs. 100 in 1878 had not invested it in mortgage but had invested it in some other way or say in Government promissory notes at 5 per cent. even. (Premier: Three per cent.) But even then my submission is that he would be entitled to interest and compound interest on the investment that he has made. I would ask the Honourable Premier who said 'at 3 per cent.', is he not aware that people with whom we are dealing are not in the position of the Government of India or the British Government? The security of the gentlemen, the mortgagees we are discussing today has no comparison whatsoever with the security of a stable and powerful empire like the British Indian Empire or the British Government in Great Britain. It is, therefore, entirely out of question to institute a comparison between these original mortgagors and the original mortgagees and the British Government and people who invest in British or British Indian securities. Let us for a moment think what the reasonable rate of interest in those days was. My honourable friend would not deny that 12 per cent. was the ordinary rate at which the ordinary zamindars borrowed money. Even their sabukars could not borrow at less than 12 per cent. Until recently, 30 or 25 years ago I can quote hundreds of instances where the sabukars have been borrowing at 12 per cent. and advancing to the agriculturists at 18 or 20 or 24 per cent. (Interruption). Even Government was borrowing at a much higher rate than 2 per cent. Even the Punjab Government borrowed, as my honourable friend says, at 5½ per cent. I will not take either 24 or 12:

per cent. on the one side or 8 or 6 per cent. on the other. It would be unfair to take 8 or 6 per cent. and it may be considered equally unfair to take 24 per cent. But I ask my honourable friends whether it would be considered unconscionable or extortionate to charge 10 per cent. even in these days and can they say that a rate of 10 per cent. interest was extortionate or unconscionable 60 years ago when these mortgages or some of them were actually executed. I would take 10 per cent. and I will show what this mortgagee, if instead of having invested his money in that way, had lent it out at 10 per cent. would have got in 1938. It is a very simple matter and this could be easily calculated. At 10 per cent. a sum of Rs. 100 would in—

	Rs.
7 years amount to	200
14        "	400
21        "	600
28        "	1,600
35        "	3,200
42        "	6,400
49        "	12,800
56        "	25,600

I shall stop there. Rs. 25,600, it looks horrifying.

But the rate of ten per cent. was charged by the hypothetical investor, not from an agriculturist but from a sahukar who was borrowing in order to advance to others and not only to advance it to others but even for celebrating his daughter's marriage or his son's marriage or for meeting such other expenses. I ask these gentlemen even now, let them go to the countryside and ask the country sahukars at what rate of interest they borrow, so that they may know that it is not only the agriculturists who pay Rs. 25,600 after 56 years, but it is the sahukar also who would have to pay Rs. 25,600 for one hundred rupees which he borrowed in 1878. It looks very alarming, but you should remember that during these 56 years—the original borrower married, he produced sons, after that he had grandsons and that one man has grown probably into a big family since he borrowed one hundred rupees which probably he spent on marriage at that time (laughter). This is only by the way. They considered the multiplication of the money during 56 years, but they did not consider the multiplication in which they have been themselves engaged during the last 56 years. This is the position, so that it is not a question of being horrified at one hundred rupees becoming Rs. 25,600. I am not going to molest any member of this House in Rs. 25,600, I have given this only as a mathematical calculation. For what purpose? Only to show that a person who invested his one hundred rupees in mortgage in 1878 even if the benefit that he has received is four times the original principal consideration of the mortgage, he should not be considered a tyrant, he should not be considered a rapacious money-lender, and he should not be considered a man who can be robbed with impunity by paying him Rs. 200 at the end of 60 years or so. Now, I come to what he might have been receiving during these 56 years. How much has he received? Now, the calculation which was urged before the House by Raja Ghasanfar Ali was, to use a very respectful word, not quite sound. It was full of—well—it contained a fallacy.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : Just like a zamindar.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Our Speaker is a zamindar but he is a very good mathematician. So I do not think zamindars do not understand arithmetic. They are very clever now. Some of the zamindars are more clever than the much maligned money-lender and can refer you to the Judges of the High Court, Judges like the late Sir Henry Rattigan and others who have said, it is a myth to say—and they said it probably 20 years ago—it is a myth to say that the agriculturist of the Punjab is a simpleton and helpless fellow who does not understand his own interest. This is what the High Court judges, impartial European judges, have pronounced about the so-called simplicity and helplessness of the zamindars. But that was a parenthesis.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : This is not relevant to the motion.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : So far as that was concerned, yes, it was in a way irrelevant, though I could justify it, but I am not at present joining issues with you in this connection. So far as the calculation that the hon'ble member presented to us goes it is this. He says the total area of land under mortgage in 1935 was 5,048,808 acres. I believe that is the figure he gave, and the land revenue payable on this is Rs. 59,70,999, if I could follow his figure correctly, and upon this he builds an argument. He says this revenue represents only one-fourth of the assets—he did not use the word net assets—but I believe he meant net assets—one-fourth of the net assets; therefore, it means that the persons who were assessed to this amount of land revenue must have collected assets worth four times this figure of land revenue. Does he himself understand it?

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : Yes. The Honourable Minister for Revenue says it is 16 times.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : This was his calculation. Now the first flaw in the argument is this. When we are dealing with land under mortgage to the extent of 5,048,808 acres we assume, or rather he assumes that all this land was probably in the possession of one man, or that the conditions of the various people who held this land on mortgage were exactly identical. This is the first flaw, as this is not the case.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : No. I do not assume that.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : He says, he does not assume that. If so, then there is no force in his argument. It may be that some people out of them might have made ten times of what they spent, it may be that some people have not recovered the principal mortgage money which they advanced.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : I agree.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : My honourable friend agrees. My submission is that to apply a formula indiscriminately to a whole class of people without taking into consideration the rights or wrongs of the individual cases is following a wrong principle, because by applying this one common formula to thousands of mortgagees, their number must be thousands, you might be doing a great injustice in some cases and you might be doing an undeserved favour to others. Therefore, I submit that this is a faulty way of reasoning, and should not have been adopted for the purposes of this clause.

Then, secondly, the hon'ble member forgets that when these calculations are made, many expenses are left out. I am not sure and I would stand corrected if I am wrong. If there is a family of agriculturists, say a father, a mother, daughters and sons. They are all working. If they have half a dozen bullocks they are all working. The lady of the house, the chauth-rani gets up in the morning. She grinds the corn, I am talking of poor people and not of big zamindars, she grinds the corn, then if they are fortunate enough to have a cow or buffalo, she churns the milk. All this is done before the sun rises whether it is winter or summer. Then she cleanses the utensils of the House and plasters the chaukas—and other parts of the House. Then she takes a little bread left over from last night bas roti or cooks fresh bread and when this is done, she goes with a dohari or an earthen pot full of whey and with a few loaves of bread on her head to the farm which may be at a distance of a mile or even more. There she feeds her husband and sons or brothers who might be working there and who may have probably been working since midnight ploughing the fields. They take their breakfast there. She does not waste her time there. She goes and picks up fuel from here and there to bring home. Not only that. If the crop is in ear, she plucks the ears of wheat or barley, as the case may be, because she has no store of flour in the House. She brings them to the House, then she beats them into corn to prepare the flour for the next day or for other meals of the day with the fuel which she has brought from the field. All that work goes towards making the assets of an agriculturist. Do you take that into calculation? (A voice: Never.) You never take that into calculation. Then the labour of the father of the family. I could explain his condition in words which would bring tears into your eyes and into my eyes. You know because you are a Jat yourself. You may be rich but you may have poor neighbours and relations and you know the life that they lead. We are tired of working six hours here. They work eighteen hours a day and then they get a poor ration of bread not with butter. They would be lucky if they get a little lassi and salt with their bread. Do you include that labour and labour of the brothers and sons and daughters into the calculations that you make and of the bullocks as well? You do not. Coming now to the application of these calculations. The income cannot be counted on this estimate. You should add that labour also. If the mortgagee is in possession he puts in that labour himself if he is an agriculturist, because you are taking them also into consideration now. You are not making any allowance for that labour. If he is not an agriculturist himself and keeps that land khud kashi, he employs labourers whom he has to pay in cash or in kind out of the produce of the land. If you take all that into consideration, the whole of your calculation falls to the ground and you cannot say that this income has been four times or ten times or fifty times of what he has received. If you have to institute a comparison do institute it on the lines that I have suggested. Calculate even at 6 per cent. This is a rate of interest at which many of us will consider themselves lucky if they could get accommodation. If he would calculate even at 6 per cent.—the rate at which big empires sometimes borrow—even then a hundred rupees would come to a lot. It may not be 25 thousands, it may be much less, you can calculate in two minutes. In twelve years a hundred rupees would become two hundred ordinarily. In 24 years it will become four hundred. In 36 years it will become eight hundred and in forty-eight years it will become sixteen hundred and in sixty years it will become thirty-two hundred rupees. That one hundred rupees in sixty years, if I am not mistaken, would at least become several thousand rupees. Can you say that 6 per cent. is an extortionate rate of interest? Certainly not. How many zamindars are here in this House, which is full of big zamindars, who can borrow even at six per cent.? I would not go into people's private affairs but I can state without any fear of contradiction that not 5 per cent. of the people present in this House can do so.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Not one per cent.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I would say not more than 5 per cent. of people present here including the Ministers themselves--I may make bold to say -- would be able to borrow at less than 6 per cent. So, if by investing one hundred rupees in 1878 at such a low rate of interest as six per cent., the investor would get Rs. 3,900, i.e. 39 times of what he invested, is there any justification now to restrict him to two hundred rupees in place of one hundred rupees which he advanced in 1878? (Interruption.) Even if he had invested in Government securities, let us say at 5 per cent., you can calculate it would even then come to about two thousand rupees. Even at 3 per cent. it would be much more than the Honourable Premier is now proposing to give to the mortgagee who invested his money in 1878. My submission, therefore, is that my honourable friend's argument and the proposition advanced by the Premier are not at all sound and do not meet the justice of the case.

The principle of dandapat, therefore, does not come into play so far as this case is concerned. You are probably aware that in the Bill, as it stands, they did not make any provision even for this amount -- twice the amount. One might at the first view feel a certain amount of satisfaction that good sense was dawning upon some of the members of the Ministry. The proposition they had originally published in the Bill appeared so atrocious and monstrous... (Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : This is worse than the original Bill), that double the amount might on a superficial view look satisfactory but then I come to the other side of the picture. It may be that a collector might have arrived at a higher figure than twice the amount under the Bill as it stood and it may with this amendment work a greater hardship on the mortgagee than the Bill as it stood might have done because the collector might calculate the amount due by taking into consideration a reasonable rate of interest. No judge, whether he sits as an executive officer or as a court, can ignore the broad principles of equity which must be recognised universally. You know that if I borrow money, and there is no rate of interest even prescribed in some cases, interest may be awarded not on the basis of the contract but by way of damages or compensation. You must be familiar with such cases where interest is awarded even when there is no contract to pay interest because every reasonable person thinks that if A uses B's money for some time he ought to compensate him in one way or another. I do not mean any disrespect and I would like to be understood in the spirit in which I am speaking, even some of the most pious people who are forbidden to charge interest, charge it in one form or another. They do not call it interest but they call it munafa. They give some money on loan to a shop-keeper and supposing the shop-keeper makes some profit they would, without being partners in the legal and ordinary sense of the term, share in the profits, but they would not share in the losses if the business ends in a loss. So that even those pious and very religious people are not afraid of receiving some compensation for the use of their money by the borrower. Therefore, a collector, if he acts reasonably and justly, may make some allowance for interest at a reasonable rate when he is calculating the amount which must be awarded to the mortgagee. When he is calculating the amount of benefit he must not only take into consideration the principal but also the interest which he might consider reasonable; and therefore the amount of benefit received may in this case be higher than what is proposed in this amendment. From whatever point of view you may look at the amendment, Sir, it does not seem reasonable or just. I would therefore oppose it.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta (South-Eastern Towns, General, Urban) : Before I proceed I would like to know from the Honourable the Revenue Minister who has been fathering this Bill rather half-heartedly as to what is meant by sub-clause (1) of clause 7. I think there is some ambiguity about it. The way in which my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand, has interpreted it, is not, what I think, the interpretation that should be placed on this sub-clause. I would therefore like to know from the Honourable the Revenue Minister as to what he means by the words "equal or exceed the amount due under the mortgage." The amendment proposed by my friend, Raja Ghazanfar Ali, to my mind, reduces the amount that should go to the mortgagee more than this clause as it stands does. I would like to have an interpretation of my honourable friend, the Revenue Minister, so that I may proceed with it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : It is for the honourable member to interpret it in a reasonable way.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I thought it would be helping me.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member may speak to the motion, if he likes.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I think, I am perfectly within my rights to ask for a correct interpretation. Well, Sir, I beg to support the amendment that has been moved by my friend Lala Bhim Sen, and in doing so I would submit that it is wrong to interpret the principle of dandhapat as meaning that the interest should not exceed . . . . .

Mr. Deputy Speaker : This argument of the honourable member has already been advanced.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I do not think that it has : there is some difference in what I am saying.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, may I ask which amendment of Lala Bhim Sen is before the House because it appears from the motion of Lala Deshbandhu Gupta that he is not supporting amendment No. 14.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Amendment No. 14 is before the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Then it is double the amount.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I think there is some confusion and the Minister should not talk with reserve. If the clause means that the amount due under the mortgage means the principal as well as the interest that should accrue on a certain date on that capital, that is, I think, the reasonable interpretation which should be placed on this sub-clause and if it means that I think the effect of the amendment moved by Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan would be probably to reduce the amount which according to this clause should accrue to the mortgagee, and the amendment proposed by Lala Bhim Sen is that the amount due should be taken into consideration by calculating the benefit which accrues to the mortgagee. With these words I support the amendment.

Malik Barkat Ali : I am really surprised at the amendment that has been tabled on behalf of the Congress Party, because it appears to me that in the good name of the Congress an amendment like that could never have emanated from this quarter. What is the amendment? The clause as it stands in the Bill is as follows :—

If the Collector finds that the mortgage is one to which this Act applies, he shall, notwithstanding anything contained in any other enactment for the time being in force, in cases where he finds that the value of the benefits enjoyed by the mortgagee, while in possession, equal or exceed the amount due under the mortgage—

According to the amendment proposed, the mortgagee on the date when the collector takes account is entitled to twice the amount due under the mortgage. Under the terms of the mortgage the mortgagee is entitled to the principal amount plus all the interest that has accumulated and nothing beyond that can be claimed by him from the mortgagor; and yet my learned friend who has tabled this amendment wants the mortgagor to pay not this maximum only but double this maximum. On what authority, and under what law and according to what rules of morality do my learned friends impose upon the mortgagor the obligation or penalty of double the maximum to which under the terms of the contract he is liable. When the mortgagor is not liable to pay anything more than the principal plus the interest that has accumulated, and due at the time when the collector takes account, do you want to penalise this poor mortgagor, who has my sympathy, who has the sympathy of this House if this Bill is passed and the sympathy of the Government which has tabled this Bill? You are penalising the mortgagor by compelling him to pay double the amount of what he is liable under the terms of the mortgage. I hope my friends opposite are following me and they will realise that it was perhaps in an unthinking moment that this amendment was tabled by them. If, however, it was not tabled in an unthinking moment and if, as Lala Deshbandhu Gupta has said the reasonable interpretation of the words "the amount due under the mortgage" means the principal plus the interest due on the date of account—that is the maximum liability of the mortgagor,—how can you double this liability? This is my respectful submission to those friends, Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava, Munshi Hari Lal, Sardar Sohan Singh Josh, the friend of the poor, Mr. Dev Raj Sethi, to whom this remark equally applies, and Lala Deshbandhu Gupta....

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member is not speaking to the motion.

Malik Barkat Ali : My respectful submission is that I oppose the amendment of the Congress on the very obvious ground that the obligation of the mortgagor cannot exceed the obligation imposed on him under the terms of the mortgage contract. How is it open to anybody to double that obligation? Is it not penalising the poor mortgagor? I oppose the amendment of the Congress but support the amendment of Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan, because one can understand the words twice the principal sum originally advanced as the maximum of the amount which is due to the mortgagee but it is difficult to understand "twice the amount due under the mortgage" as a measure of the legal obligation of the mortgagor.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural): Sir, I cannot understand the theory underlying twice the amount of what was originally due as principal. This is a kind of take ser bhaj take ser khaja. That is how you fix the amount, irrespective of the number of years that a mortgage may have been in existence, irrespective of the number of years that the money may have been outstanding. You give him twice the amount if the mortgage has been outstanding for 40 years. You give him twice the amount if the mortgage has been outstanding for 100 years. The amount due on a mortgage necessarily depends upon the time for which a mortgagor, a borrower, has had the use of his money. The rule of damdapat really applies, as those of us who understand it know, to debts which are not renewed after the period of limitation. Therefore, there is no earthly reason why twice the original amount should be given. If I may refer you to another argument you will find that even those persons, who might have bought Government pronotes in 1878 at a very low rate of interest like 8 per cent. would have received about 3 or 4 times the interest. Is it contended that those original Government bonds and promissory notes should now be wiped off? After all what is a mortgage? A mortgage is a loan secured by the security of immoveable property. Anyone who wishes to make good investment considers the mortgage of immoveable property as the safest investment and if during the course of 40 or 50 years that borrower has had the use of money and supposing more than the principal has been paid in interest, is there anything improper in it, is there anything inequitable in it? If you wish to interfere with the mortgages which are inequitable and unjust and whose terms are hard, you are at liberty to do so. In fact this legislature has already interfered with those mortgages by the amendment of the Usurious Loans Act. According to the amendment of the Usurious Loans Act, in 1934 in the Punjab, and which was given a retrospective effect no more than 9 per cent. interest can be allowed on mortgages, so that if according to the terms of the mortgage a higher rate of interest was fixed, that higher rate of interest, according to the law now in force, will have to be scaled down. If you think that the rate of interest is higher than the present temper of the House is, reduce it to 6 per cent or 7 per cent. Allow the mortgagees that rate, and deduct from the amount due, the benefit that he has derived and give the balance to him.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar: Sir, there are just a few words I want to address, through you, to the Honourable Premier. The honourable Malik Barkat Ali has pointed out his objection to the amendment that has been moved by me. There is another amendment that has been moved by Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan. I have no hesitation in frankly admitting that neither my amendment nor the amendment of Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan is properly conceived. I have not the slightest hesitation in admitting this. There has arisen a confusion in the wording of the clause itself and in the wording of the amendments, as given notice of by me and by Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan. The Honourable Premier takes his stand on the law of dandupat, if I understand him correctly. We are told now to make a mental adjustment and to conform ourselves in our conduct and commercial dealings to the rule of dandupat. I shall request Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan to say whether he has conceived his amendment on the strength of the rule of dandupat as understood by him and as adumbrated by the Honourable Premier. If I am correct in my assumption, then I shall make bold to say that the Honourable Premier has quite wrongly understood the rule of dandupat as it stands. The rule of dandupat could not be as unreasonable as the interpretation of my friend Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan or of the Honourable Premier would make it appear. The rule of dandupat says that at the time of recovery the amount of interest cannot exceed the amount of principal. Sir, a man advances Rs. 1,000 and that amount remains in the hands of the debtor, say, for 10 years. The debtor pays the interest on that amount for 10 years when a suit for recovery of the amount is brought in a court of law by the creditor. Now, suppose the interest due at that time exceeds Rs. 1,000 the creditor cannot under the rule of dandupat be given more than Rs. 1,000 in the shape of interest, but the amount that has been realised by the creditor before filing of the suit is not to be taken into calculation and is not to be deducted at the time of determining the amount that is due to the creditor. I hold that distinguished authority of Mulla's Principles of Hindu Law, in my hand. If the learned Advocate-General were here, I would have made a present of this to him. On page 616 of the Principles of Hindu Law, 8th Edition, 1936, it is said thus :—

The rule of dandupat is a branch of the Hindu Law of Debts. According to this rule, the amount of interest recoverable at any time cannot exceed the principal.

There is also an illustration, and it is as follows :—

A lends Rs. 1,000 to B at interest at 15 per cent. per annum. A allows the interest to run into arrears until it amounts to Rs. 1,200, that is, until it exceeds the principal (Rs. 1,000). A then sues B to recover Rs. 2,200 that is Rs. 1,000 for principal and Rs. 1,200 for interest. A is not entitled to more than Rs. 1,000 for interest, as that is the amount of the principal. But if B pays A Rs. 400 for interest before suit, and A then sues B to recover Rs. 1,800, that is, Rs. 1,000 for principal and Rs. 800 for interest, A is entitled to Rs. 800 for interest, for it does not exceed the principal Rs. 1,000, though he will thereby be getting Rs. 1,200 in all for interest. The reason is that the payment of Rs. 400 and the payment of Rs. 800 would be payments at different times, and all that the rule of dandupat says is that a creditor is not entitled at any one time to recover interest exceeding the amount of the principal. The rule of dandupat does not say that a creditor shall not in any case be entitled to interest exceeding the principal. The result is that part payments of interest made before suit cannot be added to the amount of interest claimed in the suit so as to attract the application of the rule of dandupat.

S. P. M.

Premier : That goes against you.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : We have been told in this House that the reason for this limit which is being placed is that according to the rules of dandupat if a man has enjoyed double the benefit of the original amount....

Premier : That is not Raja Ghazanfar Ali's amendment.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : That is the amendment as I read it. It says 'the principal sum originally advanced'.

Premier : That is principal plus interest. If you take an advance of Re. 1 and pay Rs. 2, you pay the principal and the equivalent amount of interest.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : What I mean to say is that a man who has advanced 100 rupees, can according to the rule of damdapat recover up to 100 rupees in the shape of interest even if he has realized interest exceeding 100 rupees before he came to a court of law. I do not see why we should not modify our notions of benefit that we have to get in such transactions. Times do require that we bring about a change in our outlook. We will have to see that those who are possessed of more than what is necessary in our society willingly give to those who stand in better need of it. We have to move with the times; we have got to hear the voice of the masses outside, as the Honourable Premier has always been pleased to say.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member is irrelevant.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : I am trying to show that we will have to abide by that social change which cries aloud and those who will hear that call will have to suffer the consequences. Therefore it is necessary that we adjust ourselves to the changed circumstances. But while doing so, we have got to take our stand on principles which are sound and safe. (Premier : Hear, hear.) The Honourable Premier has taken his stand on the very holy doctrine of damdapat.

Premier : Holy and hallowed.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Hallowed, yes, because it has been adopted by my friend. But the pity is that he is not applying this principle in the sense in which it should have been applied. Personally I admit that so far as this provision goes, we are all very badly placed. If we want to give relief to those to whom relief is due we should adopt measures which actually do give relief to the poor. My submission is that it is not too late for the Government even now to consider and see the just application of the principle of damdapat. As I have said before, I am personally in a very bad fix. If I do not press my amendment, I will expect Raja Ghazanfar Ali also not to come forward with his amendment. In the light of the remarks that I have made, I leave it to the Honourable Premier to take a dispassionate view of the whole thing.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Shall I put the motion of the honourable member to the vote of the House?

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : No, Sir. I beg leave to withdraw my motion.

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan) : I beg to move—

(i) That in line 7 of sub-clause (1), between the words "exceed" and "the", the word "twice" be inserted.

(ii) That for the word "due" the words "of the principal sum originally advanced" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Premier : Before you put the clause to vote I may be permitted to say a few words. Lala Bhim Sen Sachar in his first amendment wanted that enquiries must be made from the parties concerned. That does not appeal to me for this reason that he deliberately wants to restrict the discretion of the collector. Why should he confine his enquiries to the parties concerned? He should, if necessary, go outside the parties and make necessary enquiries or take evidence. I was going to point out to him that there is a provision in clause 13 which will come up later where it has been laid down that Government will define the procedure and I can assure the honourable member that the procedure we lay down will not be restrictive as suggested in his amendment. We will give him instructions that he should make enquiries, if need be, beyond the parties and satisfy himself before coming to a decision. The procedure will be laid down under clause 13. Therefore I do not think this amendment is necessary. As a matter of fact it goes against the interest of the parties concerned.

With regard to the amendment which has been under discussion, my friend Lala Bhim Sen Sachar apparently has become wiser or somebody cited to him Mulla's interpretation.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : Why do you not give me credit?

Premier : Very well, he may have the credit if he wants it. My friend Dr. Gokul Chand Narang says, "Why adopt the principle of damdapat?" It is not adopting the principle of damdapat. What we actually have done is to take the principle of damdapat as a criterion on which to base this assessment of compensation to be paid to the mortgagees.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : You take the name simply to deceive the people.

Premier : No. It is taken only as a criterion. My honourable friend, if he will remember what I said yesterday, and I quoted figures which could not be challenged, that in practically all these cases, barring certain exceptions which I will mention, the mortgagees must have benefited to the extent of anything like 480 to 700 per cent. That is not the principle of damdapat. We have merely laid down a criterion that where they have gone beyond that limit the release of the land must be automatic. That is not the principle of damdapat at all. (Interruption). I will study Mulla when I have a little leisure. I tried to explain to my honourable friend that we have merely taken the principle of damdapat as a criterion on which to base the assessment on which the mortgagee should be recompensed. That is all. As I said, in several cases you will probably find that the mortgagee has already benefited to the extent of anything ranging between 480 and 700 per cent. There may be exceptional cases as my friend Dr. Narang pointed out and I believe in one of his amendments he has indicated that where it is beyond the control of the mortgagee, either due to river action by which the lands might have been washed away or due to waterlogging or some other cause beyond his control he could not get any return from his land, he will be able to go to the collector and prove that even though the land has been in his possession for forty years he has not been able to take double the amount advanced as benefit from the land. In such a case the collector will go into the question and if he finds that the mortgagee has made out a case he will award due recompense. It is in order to provide a limit so that the mortgagee may not be put to unnecessary loss that we have provided this clause. But I am sure that such cases are not likely to be more than 10 per cent. In such cases where there is real hardship we have laid down a limit. It is obvious that there should be a limit to the amount of compensation and it is for that reason that we have taken this principle of dāmdūpat as a criterion. Otherwise the scale further down makes it quite clear and gives the collector direction as to how he should assess the benefit where the amount fixed in sub-clause 7 (1) has not been exceeded. So, I do not think my honourable friend's argument will hold ground now that I have explained the other side of the picture. The illustration which Dr. Narang cited with regard to the Government securities overlooked one very obvious factor. It is this. In 1875 some people got Government securities at Rs. 100 face value or at par. My friend knows that in spite of the fact that the credit of the British Government and of the Government of India or for that matter of the Provincial Government is very high and it is considered as a gilt-edged security, even these securities dropped down in value to Rs. 60.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Then are you creating war conditions in peace time ?

Premier : No. I am merely pointing out that there is a danger of the capital value of these securities falling. But here in the present case there is no such danger. The mortgagee has got the land. The mortgagee has advanced only about one quarter of the value of the land, therefore he is quite safe. My honourable friend no doubt remembers the well-known adage that 'a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.' Here it is not only one bird, but practically a whole parcel of land in his possession. Therefore the analogy cited by my friend does not hold good. (An honourable member : The mortgagee's right can depreciate). That is why we have provided for compensation.

My friend, Dr. Narang, cited an instance where a person advanced Rs. 100 and by collecting compound interest after a certain number of years he would get Rs. 25,000. I know of an actual instance in my own district where a pro-note for a sum of Rs. 5,000 within a short time amounted to Rs. 5½ lakhs and the court decreed that amount. Even if he sold his property it would not fetch such an amount. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Did he approach you for this Bill?) Unfortunately that mortgage which was in favour of a non-agriculturist was transferred to an agriculturist and it is that agriculturist who is going to suffer. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : He knows how to look after himself). The point which I wanted to make was that it is such instances that make it necessary for the Government to enact such laws, to protect those people who are duped. Our predecessors have been forced, on account of such circumstances, to enact the Land Alienation Act and similar laws.

Now, my honourable friend, Lala Bhim Sen Sackar, suddenly found that dāmdūpat should not be the principle which should be accepted even by him or his party. As I have explained, we have not taken the principle of dāmdūpat as such. We have merely taken it as a criterion to give an indication to the collector. My honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand

[Premier.]

Narang said that in the 1935 Act we had adopted a different calculation and that we have tried to smuggle a different principle in this Bill. I have already said that we do not want to smuggle any principle. We have brought it boldly and without any kind of duplicity. Here you say it was not the principle of damdapat which is concerned. But I may draw the attention of my honourable friends to what Madras has done. I will read out two sections from the Madras Act, VI of 1938. There the principle of damdapat has not only been accepted but it has been given retrospective effect without any limit. Here are the two sections. One section says :

Where an agriculturist has paid to any creditor twice the amount of the principal whether by way of principal or interest or both, such debt including the principal shall be deemed to be wholly discharged.

Retrospective effect with vengeance. The next section says :

Where the sum repaid by way of principal or interest or both falls short of twice the amount of principal...

the very thing that is now incorporated in this amendment-- such amount only as would make up this shortage or the principal amount or such portion of the principal amount as is outstanding whichever is smaller shall be repayable.

(An honourable member : Please read the sections well). I have read them. It shall be deemed to have been wholly discharged. (An honourable member : That is due). My honourable friend will benefit by studying it later on. I hope that if my honourable friend will now read what Madras has done he will change the view he has expressed--I do not know whether it is on his own behalf or on behalf of his party--and I hope they will not accept that point, because I am certain that the principle which my honourable friend has put forward and which was to some extent visible in his amendment would be this. If a man has borrowed Rs. 100 and that amount has grown according to my honourable friend to Rs. 25,000, my honourable friend Lala Bhim Sen Sachar would want the mortgagor to pay at least Rs. 50,000, double the amount accumulated on that day. (Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : That amendment has been withdrawn.) But that is what my honourable friend has been arguing. Is that the view which the Congress has been taking about the wiping of debts? (Honourable members : No, no). I have quoted Madras and there the Congress has taken the position which I have taken in this Act. (An honourable member : Is it propaganda?) In view of what I have said I do not think it necessary to add anything further and I hope that the House will accept this clause without a division.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Question is--

That sub-clause (1) of clause 7 as amended stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : Before Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang is allowed to move his next amendment, I wish to raise a point of order. We have already adopted Raja Ghazanfar Ali's amendment to substitute the words 'of the principal sum originally advanced' in place of the word 'due.' That being so, the next amendment proposed by Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang which says that in calculating the amount due under the mortgage, is not in order for, there are no such words as amount due left in the clause as amended.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : If you will permit me, I will submit that Mir Maqbool Mahmood is not at all right in the argument which he has advanced. My amendment really affects the following words in the clause which has been passed, the words—

In cases where he finds that the value of the benefits enjoyed.

The amendment that I propose will affect the calculation of the benefits enjoyed by the mortgagee. That is the point that may be accepted on principle. What has been passed is passed but the question is how he is to determine whether the benefit received is equal to or exceeds twice the original amount advanced. I move—

That at the end of sub-clause (1) the following proviso be added :—

- (i) Provided that in calculating the amount due under the mortgage the Collector shall add to the principal mortgage money compound interest with yearly rests at the rate of nine per cent. per annum and if the rate provided in the mortgage deed is less than nine per cent. per annum, at that rate.
- (ii) Provided that if the land comprised in the mortgage exceeds 25 acres or the mortgagor or his successor in interest is a person assessed to more than Rs. 100 as land revenue inclusive of local rates and other cesses, the petition shall be dismissed.

The motion was lost.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I move—

That the following be added at the end of sub-clause (1) :—

In computing the amount due under the mortgage, where no rate of interest is specified in the mortgage deed except that profits are stipulated in lieu of interest, interest at the rates provided for in the Unsecured Loans Act as amended by the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act will be allowed for the period for which deduction is made on account of profit.

The motion was lost.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (2), line 2, for the word "considers" the word "finds" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : I beg to move—

In lines 2—4, for the words "after taking————", sub-section (1)" the following be substituted :—

The value of the benefits enjoyed by the mortgagee while in possession is less than twice the amount of the principal sum originally advanced and

Sir, I need not make a long speech in favour of the amendment which I have moved just now. The fact of the matter is that the section which is now before the House has got some defects in drafting, and it is with a view to remove those defects that I have moved this amendment. It was prescribed in the clause that the benefits accruing to the mortgagee in possession would be so much, but in point of fact when we look back to the relevant clause we find no mention of the benefits there. It was, therefore, necessary to rectify this mistake.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : How will it read ?

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : If this amendment is accepted by the House, the clause will read as follows :—

If in cases to which this Act applies, the collector finds that the value of the benefits enjoyed by the mortgagee while in possession is less than twice the principal sum originally advanced—

So on and so forth.

Sir, the effect of this amendment would be that if a mortgagee has not enjoyed benefits equal to double the amount of the principal sum, then he will be compensated according to terms laid down in the succeeding lines of the clause. If, on the other hand, the mortgagee in possession has enjoyed the benefits which equal in value twice the principal sum, then it will not be necessary to compensate him in accordance with the succeeding conditions. In fact this thing is so clear that we need not labour the point any longer and I commend this amendment to the notice of the House. But before I resume my seat, allow me, Sir, to reply to the objections that my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, has levelled against the Government in this connection, in his amusing speech:

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Is the honourable member in order in discussing a clause that has already been considered and adopted ?

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : I will omit the name of the honourable member in my speech and proceed on with the argument. It has been argued that if a debtor owed Rs. 100 to a creditor some 60 years ago, then it would amount to Rs. 25 lakhs during this period of 40 years. I may submit that it has been argued by my honourable friends on the opposite side that if Rs. 100 were lent on interest 60 years ago then in the course of those 60 years this sum would amount to Rs. 25,000. Further, Sir, my honourable friends Lala Bhim Sen Sacher and Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, have taken it for granted that when the lands were mortgaged, they were mortgaged in return for cash sums. Again they have also taken it for granted that if 100 years ago anybody lent Rs. 100 to a zamindar, then in the course of 60 years, i.e., in 1880 it became Rs. 25,000.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I object to this because the honourable member is replying to a debate which took place on an amendment which was passed sometime ago. He could have got up and replied because he was the mover of that motion. He is entirely out of order now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The honourable member should speak to the motion.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : I will not discuss or say anything about the personality of Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang. I may submit that the reason for giving this compensation is that the Government have satisfied themselves that these lands were mortgaged in lieu of cash money. In this connection I may submit that if 100 years ago Rs. 100 were lent by a sahukar to a zamindar, that sum of Rs. 100 according to the calculation of my friends opposite became Rs. 25,000 in 1880. Now, when that small sum of Rs. 100 became Rs. 25,000 in the course of 60 years, then the alexer bania asked the poor agriculturist to mutate that mortgaged land to him for all times. Now, Sir, consider this fact for a while, that if 60 years ago anybody has realized more than double the amount of his principal, does it not seem justifiable that the poor land owner should get his land back mortgaged many years ago ? I do not see any reason why my friends should be so very greedy as to earn more than double the amount of money originally advanced as a loan. It was for these reasons that the Government have brought forward this Bill. The real object of this Bill is that the lands of those poor people which are in possession of others since very long should be restored to them. May I question my friends opposite whether these poor creatures are entitled to get back their lands or not? This is the main reason for bringing forward this Bill. I am of the opinion that it was the duty of the honourable members opposite to congratulate the Government that they have introduced such Bills the object of which is to give relief to the poor and down-trodden zamindars of the Punjab. But instead of doing that they are blaming Government for introducing such Bills. I am confident that if anything can be done for the poor agriculturists, that can be done only by such Bills as these. I even make bold to say that our Government have brought forward such Bills on which even the Congress can very well take pride.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in lines 2—4, for the words " after taking——, sub-section (1) " the following be substituted :—

the value of the benefits enjoyed by the mortgagee while in possession is less than twice the amount of the principal sum originally advanced and

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : Sir, in order to understand the amendment, I think we should try to see how the clause would read if these words are incorporated in the clause as proposed. It would read thus—

(2) If in cases to which this Act applies, the Collector finds that the value of the benefits enjoyed by the mortgagee while in possession is less than twice the amount of the principal sum originally advanced and some payment is still due—

That is how it would read. The rest of the clause stands as it is and then this compensation is to be awarded. My submission is that the amendment if accepted would lay down a most arbitrary principle. As it is a complicated matter, I would like to give an instance to make it clear. Supposing a man got a mortgage on one hundred rupees and it is found in 1939 that he has received only Rs. 50 as benefit. His land might have been unproductive or there may be other reasons. He gets only 50 rupees. In another case it is found that in 1939 the benefit amounts to 199 rupees. What does the Government provide? It says, give thirty times jama to the first man and also thirty times jama to the other man. (Premier : Not exceeding thirty times.) Either I do not understand or these honourable members of the Government do not understand. Sub-clause (1) means that if the benefit received either equals or exceeds twice the amount of the original mortgage money the mortgagee might be dispossessed and the mortgagor might be put in possession. Where there is a payment due and the benefit received is less than rupees two hundred in the instances that I have quoted, then the rest of the clause follows and the whole position is made absurd. (Premier : It is not.) I hope you will try to follow the case I shall now put to make it more clear. There is a mortgage of ten thousand rupees and it is found that in one case a mortgagee has received a benefit the value of which is only two thousand rupees. It may happen that the land might not have been productive and in the other case it is found that the benefit received by the mortgagee is nineteen thousand rupees. Some payment is still due in both the cases. In one case one thousand rupees is due and in the other case eighteen thousand rupees would have been due according to that calculation, but what is the operative clause now after this amendment? Kindly read that. It is—

..... some payment is still due to the mortgagee according to the terms of the mortgage, the Collector, shall, by order in writing and notwithstanding anything contained in any other enactment for the time being in force direct that the land be restored to the mortgagor and he be put into possession subject, however, to the payment of compensation by the mortgagor to the mortgagee at rates not exceeding the following scale:—

And then follows the scale. Thirty times is the limit in both cases. Is it just? I deliberately want to cut short my arguments here. I have said what I wanted to say: it is for Government to understand it or not to understand it.

Raj Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, the Assembly has now finally decided that the lands mortgaged before 1901 be restituted and now the question arises what compensation should be paid to the mortgagees. It has been proposed in the Bill that if the mortgagees have, during the time that the lands mortgaged have remained in their possession, received benefits from such lands to the extent of double the amount originally advanced, they should be dispossessed of such lands without any compensation being paid to them. Now, I ask whether there is any plot of agricultural land, unless of course it is waterlogged or barren, which could not have yielded benefits to the mortgagees to the extent of double the amount originally advanced to the mortgagors and if there is no such land in the Punjab, then why not say straightaway that all lands mortgaged before 1901 will have to be restored to the mortgagors without any compensation. Why then encumber the Bill with the addition of so many superfluous words? I think the Punjab Government is unabashedly passing such measures which will permit one class of people to be looted to pamper another class of people. I cannot help saying that this sort of loot has never before been permitted by any Government in the Punjab and it is my prayer that this kind of loot may not be permitted by any Government in future.

Another submission that I want to make is that some provision should be made to enable the people to carry on their business. To make my point clear I may be permitted to say that as there are persons who must borrow, there are persons who must lend and invest their money, if not for themselves, for making a provision for their children. There is no doubt that there are a number of ways in which a person can invest his money. I know that that money can be deposited in a bank, with a sahukar or it can be invested in Government securities. But it is also a fact that a person, while investing his money, has to see which is the safest investment. About banks our people are usually very nervous lest any of them should fail and it may also happen, as it happens every day, that the sahukar may fail or may turn out to be dishonest. Government securities do not give good return and it is a matter of common knowledge that land is considered to be the safest security and the safest investment all over the world. I need not repeat that the first mortgage of immovable property is considered the safest investment in the whole civilised world.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : On a point of order, Sir. I am very sorry to have to interrupt the honourable member. The House has already decided that in case where the benefit exceeds twice the original amount lent, the land shall be restored without compensation and the only thing under consideration is that in case the benefit enjoyed does not exceed twice the original amount, what should be the basis in principle on which compensation should be paid.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Yes, that is exactly the matter that I am discussing. What I really want to urge is, what is contained in detail in my amendment standing as No. 31 in the list of amendments and it is as follows :—

That in sub-clause (2), the part, occurring after the words " following scale in line 13," be deleted and the following be substituted in its place :—

- (i) on payment of the amount which he finds due, or
- (ii) on payment of three-fourths of the sum which the Collector finds due, or
- (iii) on payment of the sum which the Collector finds reasonable. The Collector shall be deemed to be acting judicially in determining reasonable amount under this Act.

Now this is what I want. I have left the choice to the Government knowing full well that I must submit to the fate of the vanquished. I will illustrate my point by an example. Supposing a person has invested a sum of Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 15,000 without any dishonest intention and in a perfectly honest manner and has taken on mortgage the land of a zamindar say about 8 or 10 bighas in area in lieu of that money, with the stipulation that no interest will be charged for that loan, but that the produce of the land will be taken by him. You know, Sir, that such usufructuary mortgages have taken place and do take place every day and this must also be known to you that the usufruct or the profits from lands mortgaged do not exceed the interest at the rate of three or four per cent. per annum. Now this is a rate of interest that is most reasonable and equitable and I am sure that no reasonable person will question that statement. But in spite of that my friends on the Government benches are never tired of repeating on every occasion that the money-lenders are tyrants and blood-suckers and that the debtors or zamindars are tyrannised and fleeced. I wonder on what grounds they justify such remarks. But that is only by the way. My submission is why on earth you should treat such a mortgagee, who has taken on mortgage the land of a zamindar on such reasonable and equitable terms and without any bad intention or motive, as if he had been sucking the blood of the poor zamindars. I fail to understand why you should proceed on that assumption. In my amendment which I have read to the House I have asked that a collector may be empowered to look at the terms of a mortgage and he may also be empowered to allow, I do not say 18 per cent. or even 12 per cent. rate of interest on the sum advanced, but only 6 per cent. which is and which must be admitted to be a most reasonable rate and which is much less than the rate allowed according to the Usurious Loans Act. That would be a reasonable attitude. But it is a pity that even this power is not being given to the collectors. On the other hand, it is being provided that all mortgagees, howsoever honest and fair and equitable they might be to the mortgagor, must be made to restore the lands without any compensation and without any discrimination. This I must repeat is most unfair and this is why I consider this to be the most objectionable of all Bills introduced and passed in this session of the Assembly.

[R. B. Mr. Mokand Lal Puri.]

Here I would like to address an appeal to the Government benches. The traditions of the province are based on justice and fair play and it is up to them to maintain those traditions. They should not act in a manner which may encourage any party, that may be in power, to tyrannise over any other party in the province. The request that I have made in my amendment is quite simple and most reasonable. I ask, why is it that a mortgagee, who has been very fairly dealing with the debtor, should be treated as if he has been acting dishonestly? Why is it that he should not be paid what is due to him under the contract which the most careful and exacting scrutiny may regard to be not only above board but very fair and equitable? Let the collectors see and go into all such contracts and find out what is due to a mortgagee and what they find due to such mortgagees should be allowed to be paid to them. I have also given this choice that if that may not meet with the wishes of the Government, only 75 per cent. of what has been found due by a collector may be paid to the mortgagees and I have also put forward another alternative that only that much may be paid to the mortgagees which is found by a collector to be reasonable. But, if any of these alternatives is not acceptable to the Government, I must say that the Government has adopted an attitude which does not savour of justice and equity.

Chaudhri Ali Akbar (Gurdaspur East, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu):

Sir, it has been a matter of surprise for me that so many able lawyers do not know even this as to how much income a particular piece of land yields normally in 20 years. If they had known it, they would not have asked for compensation. It is a well known fact that after the enforcement of the Land Alienation Act no land can remain mortgaged for over 20 years. After the lapse of this time the land is restored as a matter of course to its owner. It is assumed, and not wrongly too, that the land has repaid more than what was due to the mortgagee. Under these circumstances, there seems to be no earthly reason why a mortgagee should be given compensation if he has benefited from the produce of land for a period of forty years. This is why the collector has been empowered to order that the lands be restored without any compensation to the mortgagors, if he is satisfied that the mortgagees have benefited from their produce for over forty years. I, for one, do not see any inequity in this provision. Nor can I appreciate the attitude of my honourable friends opposite who go on moving amendment after amendment in order either to prolong the discussion of this Bill to six months or to defeat its very object. Our friends are trying to mock at us by saying that we are perturbed to find that our tarras are fast disappearing. We can very well retort by saying that they should take care of their sarees. Everybody knows that a lost tarra may be regained for two annas but a saree, if lost, cannot be replaced for less than two hundred rupees (Laughter). Moreover, it is idle for my honourable friends to find fault with our Premier for having introduced these agrarian measures. They will not find the Honourable Premier's equal in their ranks. If they think, they have anybody in their ranks who can equal the Premier's ability and integrity, we should like to know who he is (cheers and laughter). With these words, I oppose the amendment.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, I think there is hardly any necessity for me to reply to the arguments of my honourable friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, after the impassioned speech of Chaudhri Ali Akbar (Laughter). There seems to be a strange division of labour between Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang and Bai Bahadur Mr. Puri as when one is present in the House the other is not here. In these circumstances, I have to repeat to one what I have already explained to the other. It is really very unfortunate that a learned lawyer of Dr. Sir Narang's calibre should have said that this clause is defective. I have to point out as a layman to him that so long as the mortgagee is not in possession of the land, the collector will have no jurisdiction over the case. We have, therefore, limited the operation of the clause. I shall give you an instance. Suppose a land was mortgaged in 1876 but was washed away by river action or rendered uncultivable by some other natural calamity so much so that the mortgagee had no opportunity of benefiting from the transaction so far. We have provided for compensation to such a mortgagee. You see, we are not unjust. We will not injure anybody's legitimate interests nor will we overlook them. But still I feel that no less than ninety per cent. of mortgagees have already benefited to the extent of 400 to 700 per cent. from their transactions. In their cases we have empowered the collector to write off the mortgages and restore the lands to their owners.

Then, we have provided for a compensation up to thirty times the amount of land revenue, assessed on the land at the time when it was mortgaged. This is the provision which my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang has been pleased to call "egregious." I, personally, see no inequity in it. Then the learned Doctor Sahib has remarked that the condition of "while in possession" will make the evasion of the Act possible. With due deference to his legal acumen, I think he is not right. The provision which we have made is just and fair and nobody will unnecessarily suffer on its account. I do not propose to make a lengthy speech on this subject. The House has already accepted the principle enunciated in clause 7 (1) and there is no going back on it. We have provided for compensation with the limitations imposed by this clause.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.)

Mr. Speaker: Some honourable members have approached me with the suggestion that the House should not meet to-morrow. May I ask the Honourable Premier as to what he thinks of the progress we have made to-day?

Premier: I submit, Sir, that the progress which we have made is very satisfactory and we will be finishing this Bill to-night. We may, if necessary, sit a little longer. Since this is the position, I suggest we sit to-morrow and finish the whole business the day after.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: It is no doubt your privilege to fix the sittings of the House in consultation with the Leader of the House and I also know that whenever I put forth our case we are never accommodated. But I may point out that from the date we have been discussing this question of the sittings of the House the Honourable Premier has been pleased to say that if we are prepared to finish on Friday, we can sit on Thursday and Friday and we can have an off-day to-morrow. We are now asked to sit to-morrow and on Thursday to consider the report of the select committee. We are not given even 24 hours to go through the report of the committee or to hold party meetings to discuss the provisions of the Bill. We have already been over-worked. It is not only that we are overworked, but the reporters and the other establishment of the office have been very hard worked working from 10 A. M. to 9 o'clock in the night. It is highly desirable that they also should have rest. For these reasons it is necessary that we should have an off-day to-morrow. That is all that I have got to say in the matter. If you think that my request is reasonable you may be pleased to concede it.

Premier : If my honourable friend wants to-morrow to be an off-day because he wants to hold his party meeting in connection with this Bill I shall readily concede his request provided he gives an assurance that the whole business will be finished by Friday. Because I felt that the business could be finished in two days, I thought we might sit to-morrow and the day after and finish the business. If the honourable member has got special reasons to have to-morrow an off-day to consider the report of the select committee, I am prepared to accommodate him. But he must give an undertaking that we will finish the business on Friday. If he is prepared to give that undertaking, by all means the Assembly can have an off-day to-morrow.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : The Honourable Premier used the argument that because we have to finish in two days therefore we may sit on Wednesday and Thursday and finish the business. Now, he says that if I promised to finish in two days, that is by Friday, he is prepared to have an off-day to-morrow. I do not understand how the argument can be used both ways.

Mr. Speaker : I rely upon the good sense of honourable members to finish the work on Friday. So, to-morrow will be an off-day. (Cheers).

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : I beg to move—

That at the end the following exceptions be added :—

Exception I.—The Collector shall in proceedings under this section consider the general financial position of the mortgagor and if he finds that the mortgage in question is the only or main source of livelihood of the mortgagor, who is incapable for reasons of age or sex or for other sufficient reasons of earning his or her livelihood otherwise, the Collector shall refuse to take action under this section.

Exception II.—No action under the Act shall be taken by the Collector under this Act where the mortgagor is a tenant or happens to be a smaller landholder than the mortgagor.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : On a point of order. I submit that the amendment of my honourable friend, Lala Bhim Sen Sachar, is out of order. He wishes through his amendment now to make exceptions to clause 2 which has already been passed. This amendment should have been moved as an exception to clause 2. In clause 2 we have already decided that this Act shall apply to any subsisting mortgages made prior to 8th June 1901. That having been done, the clause which my honourable friend now wishes to introduce goes counter to clause 2 as already passed and therefore, it is out of order.

Lala Bhira Sen Sachar : This is a clause dealing with compensation and the collector when he deals with that question will have to determine the extent of the benefit that is derived. I do not think my amendment is out of order.

Mr. Speaker : The amendment is inconsistent with what the House has already passed. The exception should have been moved when the original clause was discussed so the amendment is out of order now.

The question is—

- (b) In lines 2—4, for the words "after taking—————, sub-section (1)" the following be substituted :—
'the value of the benefits enjoyed by the mortgagee while in possession is less than twice the amount of the principal sum originally advanced and.'

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I move—

That before the Explanation the following proviso be added :—

Provided that where the consideration for the mortgage was paid in cash each compensation shall be equal to the amount found due under sub-clause (1).

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That sub-clause (2) of clause 7 as amended stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I beg to move—

That to the Explanation the following be added :—

excluding the period during which owing to river action or for any other reason beyond the mortgagee's control he remained out of possession.

Mr. Speaker : Certain amendments of which notice had been received and which are on the agenda, amendments 19 to 44 in this case, were declared from the chair as having the same underlying principle and it was stated that they would all be discussed together but put to the vote of the House, if necessary, separately. The honourable member has moved the amendment and I will put it to the vote of the House. He cannot discuss it.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : My amendment is an independent amendment and it has nothing to do with the amendments that have gone before. In fact you put the clause without the Explanation and this is the first time that you have put the Explanation. This therefore is the time for me to move an amendment to the Explanation. No doubt, you may have said that all these amendments must be discussed together, but with due respect I submit that you overlooked the fact that my amendment stands by itself.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member may be quite right there.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : If you overlooked that fact then I think you are not bound to rule it out of order.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : On a point of order. You did not overlook the point, Sir, because in the amendment of Raja Ghazanfar Ali, the benefits are to be calculated only for the period when the mortgagee is in possession.

[Mir Maqbool Mahmood.]

and my honourable friend wants a certain period not to be calculated when he was not in possession. Therefore, you are perfectly in order in taking all these amendments together.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : On a point of order. The question is that there are more amendments than one before the House. You adopted the procedure that these amendments would be discussed together and put to the vote of the House separately. The movers of the various amendments will have the right to move them. Now, the mover of an amendment has also a right to reply to the debate. I do not know why the mover should not have his right of reply. It is merely for the sake of convenience that they are discussed together, but the right of the mover to reply is always there.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Norung : In reply to the point of order raised by Mir Maqbool Mahmood I may be permitted to say that Raja Ghazanfar Ali's amendment does not in any way conflict with my amendment, because the words used in his amendment are 'while in possession.' A person is in possession of land whether the land is under water or river. He is in constructive possession if not in physical possession, though probably he is even in physical possession as he can plant something there. What I am saying is that though the land is in his possession, while he has not derived any profit from it being under river, that time should be deducted.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : But then he does not derive any benefit.

Mr. Speaker : In connection with the point of order raised by Lala Bhim Sen Sachar, I will read out to the House the practice in the House of Commons. Campion says—

"When the question is proposed on an amendment, the debate should be strictly relevant to that amendment and not relate to other amendments, but the chairman sometimes for convenience allows debate to range over several amendments which raise different aspects of the question raised by the amendment actually under consideration, on the understanding usually that when these later amendments are called, they may be divided on if desired, but not discussed." (Page 101).

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Does that lay down that there will be no right of reply?

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That to the Explanation the following be added:—

'excluding the period during which owing to river action or for any other reason beyond the mortgagee's control he remained out of possession.'

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That the Explanation stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 7 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

New Clause (7-A).

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I beg to move—

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : On a point of order. The honourable member's amendment is covered by amendment No. 44 in the new explanation proposed to part (f). You will find it on page 9 of the second revised list of amendments.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : You will find that several amendments were allowed to be discussed in one lot relating to the amount which a mortgagor had to pay before restitution with respect to the principal amount advanced and if in one of these amendments some compensation for improvements is also mentioned, certainly that is not the reason why my substantial amendment should be disallowed.

Mr. Speaker : Has compensation for improvements not been provided for anywhere in the Bill?

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : No, nowhere, and I want a new clause to be added.

I beg to move—

“ That the following be added as clause 7-A after clause 7 :—

In cases where any additions, improvements, or structures or planting of trees, etc., which have enhanced the value of the land, have been effected by the mortgagor, the Collector shall assess the market value of the same and shall grant the same, in addition to the compensation mentioned in section 7.”

Mr. Speaker : Will the honourable member ask for leave to move the new clause? If the House allows him to move the clause, then he may stand up and propose that it may be considered. If the House agrees to consider it, then it will be taken into consideration.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I beg to ask for leave of the House to permit me to move this new clause 7-A. In the original Bill and in the Bill that has emerged from the select committee, no provision has been made on this subject which is a necessary part of any mortgage transaction. I am leaving out part (2) for the present. I am confining my amendment to part (3) in the first instance. So, I ask leave of the House on that ground. You will notice that a mortgagor is in possession of the property legally and properly and not on any grounds which are even remotely a contravention of law. He is in legal possession of the property and according to the law of mortgage he is entitled to be reimbursed for necessary improvements. It may be that the mortgage deed which exists in his favour definitely allows him to effect improvements, or definitely enjoins upon him to make improvements.

Mr. Speaker : The question of leave to move the new clause is before the House. If the House allows the honourable member to move the clause, he may make a speech on it.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I would place my case before the House as briefly as possible.

Mr. Speaker : A new clause is just like a Bill. It has to pass through all those stages through which a Bill has generally to pass. As the honourable member can, at this stage make a speech in the case of a Bill, he can make a brief speech in support of his new clause.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : On a point of order. It has not so far been opposed.

Mr. Speaker : I have not yet put it to the House.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I was pointing out that every mortgagee is entitled to make necessary improvements and then I submitted that a mortgagee may have been authorized to make improvements and the improvements may have considerably enhanced the value of the property. There is absolutely no equity why a mortgagee should not get value of the improvement which might have increased the value of the property to two hundred times its original value and, therefore, it is necessary that this legislature before it deprives him of the improvements which he has made under the authority of the mortgage deed, should allow some compensation to him. Therefore, it is a case of omission by the original framers of the Bill and by the select committee and, therefore, I ask the leave of the House to allow me to move this new clause.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member has sought leave to move the following clause as clause 7-A—

" (f) In cases where any additions, improvements, or structures or planting of trees, etc., which have enhanced the value of the land, have been effected by the mortgagee, the Collector shall assess the market value of the same and shall grant the same, in addition to the compensation mentioned in section 7.

The question is that leave sought by the honourable member may be given.

Clause 8.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 8 stand part of the Bill.

Y. P. M.

The motion was carried.

Clause 9.

Tikka Jagjit Singh Bedi (Montgomery East, Sikh, Rural) : I beg to move—

That in line 2, between the word "may" and "after" the word "not" be inserted;

that in line 5 between the words "mortgagor" and "in" the words "unless the appeal is decided, or the time for filing an appeal has lapsed" be inserted.

Sir, my amendment is a very simple one. It only means that the collector when passing an order may not at the same time pass an order of ejectment. Section 9 reads as follows—

The Collector may after declaring the rights of the mortgagee extinguished, eject the mortgagee and order delivery of possession of the mortgaged land to the mortgagor. In case of resistance, the Collector may exercise all the powers conferred on a civil court by rules 97 and 98 of Order XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[Tikka Jagjit Singh Bedi.]

If my amendment is accepted it will only mean that the order of ejectment will only be passed after the time of appeal. If that would not be so, then there may be chaos. A collector may pass an order and then it is quite possible the appeal may be accepted. You know it is very difficult to take possession of mortgaged land and once possession is taken it will be still more difficult to give possession back in case the appeal is accepted. I therefore submit that my amendment may be accepted. It is a very simple one but a most important one.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration. Amendment moved is—

That in line 2, between the words "may" and "after" the word "not" be inserted;

that in line 5, between the words "mortgagor" and "in" the words "unless the appeal is decided, or the time for filing an appeal has lapsed" be inserted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, I support the amendment. It is very reasonable.

Mr. Speaker : I will put the amendments separately to vote. The question is that—

In line 2 between the words "may" and "after," the word "not" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

In line 5, between the words "mortgagor" and "in" the words "unless the appeal is decided, or the time for filing an appeal has lapsed" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Clause 9 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 10.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

The first 3 lines of clause 10, stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, I beg to move that—

In lines 4—13, for the words "(a) to the . . . . . final," the words "to the District Judge having jurisdiction in the District who shall hear the appeal as a civil appeal" be substituted.

Sir, if my amendment is accepted, the whole clause after the words which have been passed will disappear, and it will be both in interest of equity and justice. There are certain provisions in the Land Revenue Act where the collector decides the cases as a sort of civil court, i.e., as a district judge of the olden type. What I propose is this that after the collector has decided a case, an appeal should go to the district judge and he should hear it as a civil appeal, so that the executive and judiciary may be combined, for the combination of which the Honourable Premier has been going to England for an illustration.

Mr. Speaker : The amendment moved is that—

In lines 4—13, for the words “(a) to the.....final,” the words “to the District Judge having jurisdiction in the District who shall hear the appeal as a civil appeal” be substituted.

The question is that—

The existing parts (a) and (b) of the clause stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Proviso (i) stand part of the clause.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Proviso (ii) stand part of the clause.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Clause 10 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 11.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : I beg to move—

(i) That in sub-clause (i), line 4, for the words “as follows” the words “sixty days” be substituted.

(ii) That parts (a) and (b) be omitted.

This clause deals with the period of limitation for an appeal under the last foregoing section. I want that the period of limitation shall run from the date of the order appealed against and shall be sixty days.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

(i) That in sub-clause (i), line 4, for the words “as follows” the words “sixty days” be substituted.

(ii) That parts (a) and (b) be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Chaudhri Muhammad Hussain (Gujranwala East, Muhammadan, Rural) : I beg to move—

That at the end the following sub-clause be added :—

(iii) The provisions of section 5 of the Limitation Act shall apply to all appeals under this Act.

(Urdu) : I do not wish to make a long speech in support of this amendment but I may submit that it is provided in section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act—

“ Any appeal or application for review of judgment or for leave to appeal or any other application to which this section may be made applicable (by or under any enactment) for the time being in force may be admitted after the period of limitation prescribed therefor, when the appellant or application satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal or making the application within that period.”

In view of providing this facility to appellants I have moved this amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That at the end the following sub-clause be added :—

" (iii) The provisions of section 5 of the Limitation Act shall apply to all appeals under this Act."

Minister for Revenue : I accept the amendment.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That at the end the following sub-clause be added :—

" (iii) The provisions of section 5 of the Limitation Act shall apply to all appeals under this Act."

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 11, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 12.

Mr. Speaker : Clause 12.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, I want to move my amendment—

That the following be substituted for the present clause :—

" Any party aggrieved by an order made by the Collector may institute a suit to establish his rights in respect of the mortgage, but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive."

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member's amendment is out of order, because it destroys the intention of the clause.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I want to oppose the clause as a whole.

Mr. Speaker : Very well.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Rawalpindi Division, General, Rural) : I consider Sir, if you have this clause as it stands, you are practically having confiscations without even the forms of law being observed which are sometimes used to conceal the real intention of the legislation.

Premier : We do not believe in concealing our intention.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am very glad to know that. My contention is that you must subject the judgment of the collector to the scrutiny of a civil court or some impartial tribunal. You profess that you do not want to conceal the real intention of the law, but that is precisely what you are doing. Instead of allowing a judgment or order or an order of your subordinate official to be put to test by a decision of a civil court, you are doing nothing but concealing facts, if you prevent scrutiny of the orders of your subordinate officers. There is a similar enactment in force in the Punjab already which was passed in the year 1918, I mean the Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act, which was recently amended in the year 1934 as a part of the Relief of Indebtedness Act. In that Act a provision is made to the effect that any aggrieved party by an order made by the collector may institute a civil suit to establish his rights in respect of the mortgage. The amendment which I wanted to move and which has been ruled out of order on the ground that it is a direct negation of the clause was an exact copy of a section of the Redemption of Mortgages Act. Only a few years ago the Punjab Government thought that the decisions of executive officers should be subject to the result of an adjudication of a civil court. May I ask what has happened in these few years that a provision which found a place on the statute in the year 1934 has been brushed aside by this Bill ?

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I do not think it is necessary to make any elaborate speech. We have discussed this principle ad nauseum not only in this Bill but in other Bills as well. I have on several occasions repeatedly explained to my honourable friend who has moved this amendment that our object is to bring all these legislative measures on a par with the Land Alienation Act. The procedure which is adopted in that Act and which is in vogue in this province for the last 30 years has been found to be so sound that we have not come across any instance where a legitimate complaint might have been made. Therefore to simplify matters and to avoid duplication we have decided that in this Act also we should follow the same procedure which we have been following in the Punjab Alienation of Land Act.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 12 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 13.

Sardar Hari Singh (Kangra and Northern Hoshiarpur, Sikh, Rural) : I move—

That in sub-clause (1) line 3, between the words "publication" and "make," the following be inserted :—

"Subject to the approval of the Assembly."

The motion was lost.

Parliamentary Secretary (Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan) : I move—

That in line 1 of sub-clause (2) (c) the words "and principles" be deleted.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in line 1 of sub-clause (2) (c) the words "and principles" be deleted.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I know the reasons why the honourable member is moving this amendment? These words were added in the select committee, and if he now wants to delete them again, he should take the House into his confidence.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : In the original Bill as it went to the select committee these words were not there. These words were introduced by the select committee because at that time the scale of compensation was not defined. But the House having accepted the previous amendment that when the benefits are equal to twice the original sum advanced no more compensation is liable to be paid and the collector has just to follow the procedure which the Government prescribes from time to time, it is considered that the word 'principles' is unnecessary. That is why I move this amendment.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : I think that this amendment will take away a certain discretion left with the Government to lay down the guidance to the collector and I think it would be advisable to leave the clause as it is and I suggest that my honourable friend need not press this amendment.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : I beg leave to withdraw the amendment.

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 18 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, what about my amendment, that the provisions of this Act shall not apply to mortgagors who are members of the Legislative Assembly?

Mr. Speaker : But we have finished clause 11.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : You said that new clauses could be considered at the end and if you did not call upon me I could not interrupt the business of the House. I was not called upon to move it.

Mr. Speaker : Assuming that the honourable member is right in what he says when other new clauses, subsequent to the clause in question, were taken up, the honourable member did not move his.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : There is no other clause on which I could have moved this amendment. But we want to save ourselves from the accusation which is being levelled against us that we are enacting this legislation in order to protect ourselves or to grab other people's property. I want to save myself of that accusation.

Mr. Speaker : It is purely in a spirit of mockery that this new clause is intended to be moved. On that ground also I disallow it.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It is not.

Mr. Speaker : That is my opinion.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I would like to protest against that remark. I never intended it in that spirit. I must seriously protest against that remark with due respect.

Mr. Speaker : I have ruled that the amendment is out of order. So any further protest cannot be allowed.

The honourable member is not in order in saying that he protests strongly against my ruling.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Not against your ruling, but against the remark that I am moving this in a spirit of mockery. I bow to your ruling that it is out of order.

Mr. Speaker : It would have been enough if he had said that he did not move it in a spirit of mockery. But the tone and the way in which he spoke are objectionable.

Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am very sorry if my tone had offended you. But you should understand the spirit which prompts those members who are taking part in the proceedings of the House.

Premier : The amendment is an affront to this House, if it is not in a spirit of mockery.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : We may mean one thing, but we may not be able to express our meaning in a language which is foreign to us. That does not mean that we move our amendments in a spirit of mockery or affront.

Mr. Speaker : The matter is finished and closed.

Clause 3.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : I propose to move my amendment to clause 3 the consideration of which was postponed the other day. I beg to move—

That the following new sub-clause be added :—

"(4) 'Mortgagor' or 'mortgagee' respectively shall include the assignee and the representative-in-interest of such mortgagor or mortgagee as the case may be."

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That the following new sub-clause be added :—

"(4) 'Mortgagor' or 'mortgagee' respectively shall include the assignee and the representative-in-interest of such mortgagor or mortgagee as the case may be."

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I should like to say one word in connection with this amendment, not with respect to its merit. Yesterday we understood that the Government was prepared to accept a modified amendment. A draft was submitted to the Honourable Premier. The gentleman who took it to the Honourable Premier told me that it was acceptable to him. It is extremely disappointing that after a great deal of discussion and show of inclination in favour of our amendment, the Government which is in this matter represented by Mir Maqbool Mahmood, should still stick to its original draft of the amendment.

Premier : I am afraid there is some misunderstanding. What I suggested yesterday was that I would be prepared to consider a modified draft if my honourable friend would send me one. He sent a message through Sardar Ajit Singh I think. I suggested to him that he should give it to me this morning so that we might consider it. Probably he forgot to give it to me to-day. As for the amendment sent by Dr. Narang I must submit that it is not acceptable. As an acceptable modified amendment is not forthcoming now, I propose that we may now proceed with the amendment before the House. If necessary I shall bring in an amendment later.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Do I understand that the Honourable Premier will bring in a new Bill?

Premier : Yes, if experience of the working of this Bill suggests that it is necessary to amend it.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : By that time the mischief will have been done.

Lala Duni Chand : The Honourable Premier was pleased to say that he was prepared to exclude a stranger from the benefit of this measure, but if the assignment is in favour of the heirs, of course the clause will hold good.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I submitted a draft amendment. What happened to that? Is it not acceptable?

Premier : No, it is not acceptable.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the following new sub-clause be added :—

" (4) 'Mortgagor' or 'mortgagee' respectively shall include the assignee and the representative-in-interest of such mortgagor or mortgagee as the case may be. "

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 3 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

---

Long Title.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : I beg to move—

That in line 1, for the words " A Bill " the words " An Act " be substituted.

The motion was carried.

2nd.-Lieut. Bhai Fateh Jang Singh : I beg to move—

That in lines 3—7, the words " by a member, . . . . . same group " be deleted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the long title as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

---

Preamble.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the Preamble be the Preamble of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

---

Clause I.

Chaudhri Muhammad Husain : I beg to move—

That the following new sub-clause be added :—

" It shall come into force on such date as the provincial Government may by notification direct. "

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That clause 1 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The Bill will now be referred to a drafting committee consisting of—

The Honourable Minister for Revenue ;

The Advocate-General ; and

to examine and suggest what amendments of a formal or consequential character should be made in the Bill as a matter of drafting. The report is to be submitted on Thursday, 21st July 1938.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

LETHI CHARGE IN CHAK No. 254, LYALLPUR DISTRICT.

Sardar Hari Singh (Kangra and Northern Hoshiarpur, Sikh, Rural) :
Sir, I move—

That the Assembly do now adjourn.

While I rise to move this adjournment motion I do so with a little bit of diffidence not because the case which I am to place before the House is weak, but because, Mr. Speaker, it has been the habit of our popular Government—the so-called popular Government—to defend in season and out of season the most indefensible and horrible actions of the police and other officials in the countryside. That attitude of the Government has encouraged the police and other officials to commit further excesses on the innocent people of the countryside of the Punjab. I can quote instances time permitting, but instances of that type will be coming before the House very soon in another connection also.

Before I say anything on the incident of the 15th July which is the subject-matter of the motion now before us, I think I should describe the setting in which this incident took place, because it would be hard for the House and for you, Sir, to appreciate the horrible nature of this incident otherwise. You are aware and all the honourable members of the House are aware that in Lyallpur district there has been going on for many weeks an agitation against the reduction in the width of canal outlets. The kisans of that district resented it and in sympathy with them there has been resentment throughout the province against this action of the Canal authorities in decreasing the supply of water in certain villages. Public meetings attended by thousands of people have been held. On the 10th of July there was a mammoth demonstration at Lyallpur in which 40 or 50 thousand kisans participated as a protest against the action of the Government in not meeting and redressing the genuine grievances of the kisans. After that demonstration there was a news which we read in the papers that negotiations had been opened between the Canal authorities and the kisans. After that we heard that those negotiations had succeeded and a settlement had been arrived at. On the very next day we read a contradiction and came to know that the negotiations had failed and that the Government was not going to accept the demands of the kisans. Since then the Government has issued a miserable and insulting communiqué. Otherwis it has been sitting tight in dignified indifference and masterly inactivity. The Government has approached the problem in a most autocratic way and has made no democratic gesture.

Now coming to the incident of the 15th July which is the subject-matter of this motion, I have got some telegrams and certain communications with me stating that certain people were lathi-charged and mal-treated by the police officials. I will read certain relevant extracts from a communication which I think is also in the hands of the Honourable Premier and in your hands too. On the 15th of July under the instructions of the District Congress Committee, the kisans of Lyallpur district observed Anti-Canal Day and refused to take the supply of water from the canals. The mogas were closed. It was a very successful demonstration of protest. The police officials and the district authorities could not tolerate the success of this demonstration. This is what the General Secretary of the District Congress Committee writes:—

About 75 per cent. of the kisans of the district did not take canal water that day. This upset and perturbed the officials. The Superintendent of Police, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Canal Officials, Revenue Assistant, lambardars and zaidars rushed from one place to the other with a view to restraining the kisans not to resort to this course, but their efforts proved abortive. Mr. Beatty, a Deputy Superintendent of Police.....

I wonder if this is the same Beatty of the Guru Ka Bagh fame. (An honourable member : His brother) I am told he is the brother of that famous man, or I should think he is a re-incarnation of Mr. Beatty of the Guru Ka Bagh fame. The General Secretary of the Congress Committee, Lyallpur, goes on—

Mr. Beatty, a D. S. P., got much annoyed and went desperate.

I should say he ran amock. (Laughter from the Ministerial benches). My honourable friends over there laugh; they ought to be ashamed.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member should withdraw that remark.

Sardar Hari Singh : I withdraw most willingly, but they should also behave like gentlemen.

Maulvi Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din : Is it parliamentary to say that they should behave like gentlemen?

Mr. Speaker : It is not dignified to use such terms in the sense in which they have been used by the honourable member.

Sardar Hari Singh : I withdraw. The report says—

Subsequent enquiries confirm that whenever he went he showered filthy abuses on the kisans. At Gungasinghwa he abused the kisans and resorted to lathi charge resulting in injuries to 8 persons. Sardar Ganga Singh of Chak No. 268-R. B. (Gungasinghwa) was assaulted, abused and his beard was shaken while both Mr. Jones, Executive Engineer, and Sardar Ram Singh, Deputy Collector, Irrigation, were present there. At Chak No. 304-R. B., he threatened to fire displaying pistol in his hands and showered most filthy language.

The villagers showed exceptional restraint in the face of this provocation. Further on you will be pained to learn that as a result of police violence one Kala Singh who was compelled to give evidence in a certain case committed suicide because he could not tolerate the police violence any longer. That was on the 16th July. "It is apparent" says the report "that he could not withstand the threat and danger of further violence." My honourable friend Mr. Dev Raj Sethi who has been to Lyallpur has got in his possession documentary evidence to corroborate the story which I have placed before the House. A report from Toba Tek Singh shows that in connection with this strike six persons have been arrested in Chak No. 818, 821 in Toba Tek Singh tahsil. That is the story which forms the subject-matter of this adjournment motion.

Now, who are the people who have been thus mal-treated, harshly treated, beaten and whose beards have even been pulled and one of whom died as a result of police ill-treatment? These are the descendants of those people whose enterprising and adventurous spirit made them colonise the area and convert the arid deserts of Lyallpur into a smiling garden. Little did those pioneers of colonisation know at that time that at some future date the so-called popular Ministry, an ungrateful Government would so mal-treat their descendants. While I am giving an account of the harsh treatment by the police and the deaths due thereby, the occupants of Treasury benches are sitting there smiling and laughing and showing absolute indifference to the miseries and woes of the peasantry of this province. That shows their sympathy for the voters who have sent them to this House. I have here got a telegram which also bears out the story which has been described in this letter. The telegram is from Mr. Chint Ram Thapar which says—

Re. yesterday Moga agitation police and local officials tried to terrorize people most villages threats and pistols shown abuses freely showered people exhibited commendable patience six persons arrested Toba Tek Singh.

Another telegram from Lyallpur to the Leader of the Opposition says—

Continuation letter Beaty, D. S. P. view extract false evidence against kisans Sidhwan who abused him summoned 16th Kala Singh, son Gurdit Singh, zaidar, others committed violence on Kala Singh asks him cease again Kala Singh apprehending further violence took poison died stop officials rush getting false statement police responsible death.

These are the facts which have impelled me to move the adjournment motion.

Mr. Speaker : Motion moved—

That the Assembly do now adjourn.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): Our position on this adjournment motion is clear. We do not stand committed to any official version of the story, nor are we here to condone any proved excesses.

[Mir Maqbool Mahmood.]

of our officers. It is our primary duty to see that legitimate public rights and interests are protected. But it is equally our duty to see that officers who are really servants of the public are not unduly harassed or unfairly abused in the discharge of their duty. Therefore when such serious facts are alleged in an adjournment motion as 'Lathi charge on peaceful and law-abiding citizens' and 'injuries to many innocent persons' and 'deaths due to police harassment,' it is our duty to see that these matters are enquired into and the culprits properly dealt with. (Hear, hear). I can assure my friend opposite that we have made the fullest possible enquiries into all these allegations. If as a result of the inquiry we had found any of the statements made by my honourable friend true we would have taken deterrent action. Sir, it is unfortunately a curse of our country, and may be in others also, that in matters of this nature interested parties are apt to exaggerate matters. (Hear, hear). If my honourable friend Sardar Hari Singh had been an independent eye-witness to the incidents which he has stated, I can assure him that our attitude on this motion would have been very different. But what are the facts? The facts as reported to us not by Mr. Beatty but by the Deputy Commissioner and the Superintendent of Police and as a result of magisterial inquest are these. It appears that the 15th July had been fixed as the Anti-Canal Day against the re-modelling of the outlets of canals in Lyallpur. Now that agitation was not direct action launched against any bad law nor was it an active or passive resistance against any unjustified abusus of any officer. It was an agitation against remodelling of outlets. What is this remodelling? The Honourable Revenue Minister made it clear that at the tails of certain distributaries many villages do not get their due 'haq' because certain villages towards the head utilize more than their due share and the Government as the custodian of public waters and public rights is bound to see that every one gets his due share of water. Not only that. In a very clear and unmistakeable communiqué the Honourable Revenue Minister made it known that if a single cultivator can prove that he gets an iota of water less than is due to him, Government will see that the cultivator gets his full share. Where then does this water go which the remodelling saves? It does not go to the Honourable Revenue Minister. It goes to persons, who are at the tail end and who are entitled to get that water. Therefore it seems to me that a Government like the present one which is pledged to look after the interests of the public and primarily of the zamindars, will not be entitled to sit here even for a single moment if it ignores a single legitimate grievance of the zamindar community. Therefore to my mind all such agitations as has been created in Lyallpur seems either due to exploitation of innocent people or the mischief of interested persons.

With that premises let me now come to the facts as reported. On the 15th July this canal demonstration started. Our information is that in spite of much mischievous propaganda there was not very large response from the people of that area. Luckily for us, the zamindars of the Punjab are beginning to see that if any statement is made against their own Government they must first ascertain facts and analyse it before they accept such a statement. So, only in a few villages certain sections of the people played in to the agitation. We are informed that a jatha of this so-called peaceful volunteers, these illustrious lovers of peace and good-will, finding that in certain places the villagers were not closing the outlets in accordance with their wishes, closed the outlets themselves by force. Not only that. We have it on the authority of an independent executive engineer and others that these people insisted on closing the outlets even against the representations of the local residents. It was at that time that the Deputy Superintendent of Police and the Sub-Divisional Officer happened to reach the spot. They told these volunteers, "You can carry on your work according to your lights, but you have no right to force the peaceful citizens to close their outlets." In return for this the peaceful volunteers levelled foul abuses against the Deputy Superintendent of Police who was doing his duty. The local Congress leaders called on the Superintendent of Police the same evening and said to him "We are sorry that abuses were showered". So the abuse is not denied. It was only after that that we understand that Mr. Beaty used his cane against some of these volunteers. I may inform the House that two of these people were armed with a chhari and an axe. When these peaceful volunteers attempted to close the outlets which the villagers did not want them to close and Mr. Beaty prevented them from closing the outlets, he was abused and in the altercation which followed he had to use his cane. What was the result? The axe was taken away and the other fellow who had the chhari ran away and disappeared. My friend, the mover of the adjournment motion, says that many innocent persons were injured. Were they medically examined and have they got the certificate of any doctor? No. When these persons were brought to the Superintendent of Police by the local Congress leaders only four of them were found to have minor scratches on their legs. This is all the serious injury of the innocent people. I ask my honourable friend if it is true that they had serious injuries, was a single complaint lodged in the courts? If there be any evidence in support of my friend's statement I expect him to produce it. In the absence of such proof we are forced to treat the story of these innocent persons receiving serious injuries as a myth. I can only say that my honourable and industrious friend Sardar Hari Singh has been either misled or misinformed.

With regard to the death of the zaildar's son, I submit that a serious statement of that nature should not have been made here without full possession and disclosure of facts. We have had a magisterial inquest made into this matter forthwith and our information is that no harassment or violence by the police is alleged or proved. The other day the Leader of the Opposition stated, I speak subject to correction, that two persons were taken to the thana and there in the thana one of them died. Our information is that that man who died, the zaildar's son, was in his village where he got ill or took poison and was brought for medical treatment and he died on the way, that is about seven miles from the thana. Therefore it was not fair to make an allegation of this nature on the floor of the House.

Sardar Hari Singh stated that six persons were arrested in connection with this affair. I am precluded from going into the details of that case which is sub judice. But I may tell him that it is not in connection with this affair that they have been arrested. The cases have been registered against them under sections 147 and 379 for actually having meddled with the distributary and in the garb of peaceful demonstration of having taken law into their own hands.

In conclusion, let me state in connection with this canal agitation that it is our duty to see that every zamindar gets his rightful share of water. It is also our duty to see that no red-tapism nor terrorism of officials should thwart us from doing our duty. It is our duty to see that no innocent person is unduly or harshly treated by any official. At the same time it is our duty to see that no threats of violence or peaceful or violent agitation worked or engineered by interested persons may deflect us from our duty to the public and to the rights of the public which we are charged here to protect. I would submit that if any cultivator is wronged in the matter of the supply of canal water he must at once go to the local officers and get things righted. Failing that he should make a representation to the Government which is always ready and willing to receive legitimate complaints and to attend to them forthwith.

Dr. Satya Pal (Sialkot-Amritsar, General, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I have stood up to lend my support to the motion moved by my learned friend Sardar Hari Singh. The account of the events which has been received by us from our local Congress Committee shows that the police ruthlessly beat and insulted the demonstrators who were assembled peacefully to protest against the action of Government. It has been said just now that the people were carrying axes and spears. But will the Government state if any of their men was wounded with spears or axes? Did Mr. Beatty receive any wound? Do not my honourable friends on the Government benches know even this much that villagers are in the habit of carrying axes with them? They go about with them in their usual way to fairs and other gathering places. But on the other hand the policemen were there with their pistols. May I know why you had provided them with pistols?

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq: To scratch their heads with.

Dr. Satya Pal: Then, it has been said that all this agitation had been engineered by interested people. I say, if the agitation is an engineered one and not a real one, why is the Government perturbed over it?

Premier: We are not perturbed.

Dr. Satya Pal: Will you ask the Honourable Premier to be silent. Sir? If you do not silence him we will make him silent.

The Government have admitted themselves that as many as 75 per cent. of outlets have been closed and the agitation extends to fifty villages. Now, can they say in the face of this statement of their own that the agitation is merely the creation of the brain of the Congress and has no substance in fact? This is a patent fact, Sir, that no agitation can be started if there are no genuine grievances at its bottom. An agitation cannot be solely engineered by outsiders. Outsiders can only help the agitators in the matter of organisation. Can you imagine for a single minute that kisans will close down their outlets and let their crops wither away and let their children starve for the mere fun of it? They have certainly their grievances and it is those grievances which are responsible for this agitation. Moreover, the Congress joined in the agitation after it had actually lasted for some months. We joined this agitation as we felt that the villagers could not make themselves heard on account of their ignorance. And then it is our policy to take up the cause of the oppressed. We saw that the poor kisans were being oppressed and we joined the agitation to carry it on in an organised and peaceful manner.

The Honourable the Revenue Minister was pleased to observe the other day that the Government was responsible for giving water at the tail as much as anywhere else. But does he not know that the people at the middle are starving? They do not get any water. Is he not equally responsible for giving water to those people whose lands are at the middle and not at the tail? It was for the Department concerned to make such a provision from the very beginning that no part is left without water. But they seem to have done nothing of the kind.

Then, it has been said that the Congress wishes to exploit the situation for its own purpose. You had better ask us as to who was exploiting the state of affairs in the country. It is the Government itself. They are holding out the threat everywhere that if the agitation is not stopped, the outlets will be closed for ever. They little know perhaps that if this state of affairs is allowed to continue for any length of time, their Ministry will come to an end never to be revived again.

Then, Sir, the threat is being held out to us that if we oppose the Bills proposed by the Government we will die a political death. But how is the Government concerned with our death or life? They should have attended to their own business.

Premier : That is the real thing which troubles them.

Dr. Satya Pal : Everybody knows with what a show of sympathy these people approached the kisan for his vote. But now that they have been returned to power by the strength of his vote, they are out to deprive the self-same kisan of his loaf of bread. Does not the kisan deserve any consideration at the hands of the Government, Sir?

It has been also said that no lathi charge was made. Mr. Beatty only used his walking stick. The truth is simply this. It is we on whom lathi blows are rained. It is they who inflict lathi blows. It is, therefore, we who can tell you how much pain was caused by their lathi blows. They do not know what a lathi blow means. They would say, "It is a mild lathi charge," or "it was inflicted with a walking stick." But we know to our grief that it was the mild blow of a walking stick which took the life of Tala Lajpat Rai. Sir, the story of the police tyrannies is worth hearing from our lips. It is we who have to bear the brunt of the police wrath. We are beaten; our houses are searched. We are subjected to insults everywhere. Our respected leaders are put to the greatest humiliation. In the present case beards of venerable Sardars were pulled. Did your Mr. Beatty imagine that a beard too was likely to be used against him as a weapon?

Premier : A vicious lie.

Dr. Satya Pal : The Honourable Premier is inclined to believe the story of the policemen and that of his Deputy Commissioner. But we have got to believe the version of those people who have made sacrifices to our knowledge. They are such people who will stick to their word at the cost of their life. They do not tell lies. They are not like your informers.

(Dr. Satya Pal.)

who would serve the time. To-day they are with you. To-morrow they will be with the Government of the time. Now, when they see that the Government is opposed to the Congress they are cruel and disrespectful to the Congressmen. In the United Provinces where the Congress is the Government, they are at the beck and call of the Congress. So, you cannot rely on such people. If you do, you are sadly mistaken.

Whenever we bring forward a complaint the Government should think that there must have been certainly some cause for that complaint. But the Government does not seem to give credence to what is said by us. However, whenever my friend, Sardar Sohan Singh Josh, says something he is asked by the Honourable Premier to cross the floor.

Premier : I am sure members opposite will cross the floor some day.

Dr. Satya Pal : Yes, they will go over to that side but then you will not be there. It was said the other day, Sir, "our shoulders are broad and strong." Yes, they are strong enough to carry the litter of imperialism. We have never seen these broad and strong shoulders being used in the service of the country. Another worthy on those benches, Sir Chhotu Ram, said he would like to be a Hitler. But people like him are never destined to assume such positions as Hitler holds. It is people like Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru who deserve to be given such powers. They do not bow before imperialism. On the other hand, people like Lord Litchgow request them to hear their views. It is such people who may be called the tongue of the people. They are not the mouth-pieces of the dominant power. They are really the wall-wishers of the people. They do not merely express their sympathy at the time of asking for the people's vote only to forget all about this sympathy after they have got it.

Khan Bahadur Chandhri Riasat Ali (Hafizabad, Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I was not here at the time when the motion was moved, but from what little I have heard, I think no serious case has been made out. The question of remodelling of these outlets has been the subject of discussion before this Honourable House twice or thrice before. At the time when there was a resolution for the amendment of the Canal Drainage Act, even then detailed suggestions were made on the floor of the House as to what should be done in the matter of remodelling of the outlets. As has been argued by my colleague, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, it is a very delicate question and those people whose rights are snatched away simply to give to those gentlemen, who have no rights whatsoever must complain and this is the fundamental basis of this question. We must not forget that it is the duty of the State to see that every drop of water which is reserved for the agriculturist must reach the tail. This is the fundamental principle. It has been made clear by the Government very often and in a recent communiqué also it has been made clear that it was in the interest of those people who were at the tail of a certain minor and were getting less water, that this remodelling had taken place. The first question which I would raise in this connection is the propriety of this method of agitation. If certain people find that they do not receive water according to their right, it is the primary duty of those people to approach the authorities by lawful means and not to have recourse to unlawful means. This is the sole question for decision in this House, one way or the other, so far as this motion is concerned. Supposing there are some people in the village who have real grievances that they are not getting water according to their haq. A set of other people get up in the village and they simply exploit those simple and ignorant masses and they lead them to certain actions which are not legal and lawful. People cannot afford in these days, when the prices of agricultural products have fallen down, that they should of their own accord deny to themselves their only means of livelihood. In chaks of Montgomery and Lyallpur districts, where there are no wells and other means of irrigation, the only source for these people to irrigate their lands is the canal water with the help of which they can make both ends meet. If there are other people who stand in their way and who, in order to make their own propaganda, stop the outlets without their consultation, it is these people who are to blame because they are not following the right lines by which they can get their haq, i.e., according to the principles laid down by the Government. These people are always after finding fresh fields and pastures new, as it is called all over the province, especially in rural areas, to make it a scene of their activity. These troubles, as you will see in the papers of to-day, are happening daily and it is given therein that there has been a peasant demonstration in Amritsar. (Voices: Is he relevant?) I am discussing the means which they are adopting, the incident of Amritsar, without going into details. (Voices: Is he relevant?)

Mr. Speaker : I think he is.

Khan Bahadur Chaudhri Riasat Ali : To make these things a basis for an adjournment motion is also a grievance so far as I am concerned, because if those people were really injured, as it is said on the floor of this House, if there was high-handedness on the part of the Government, it was the duty of those people and my friends sitting opposite to have confidence in Government.

Dr. Satya Pal : In this Government ?

Khan Bahadur Chaudhri Riasat Ali : If after that their grievances were not satisfied it was then and then alone that they would have been justified to discuss these things in an adjournment motion. (Sardar Hari Singh: In the next session?) So far as the question of the death of the zaildar's son is concerned, sufficient light has been thrown upon that also by my honourable friend but I have not heard it said in the arguments advanced, that the zaildar proceeded to the Superintendent of Police or the Deputy Commissioner, or any case has been registered so far as that death is concerned. The man was away from the scene and under these circumstances it is another grievance which has been raised without any rhyme or reason. Another thing which I would submit is that my honourable friend, the Doctor has said that no injuries had been caused by kulhari, balam or chhavi. My honourable friend forgets that there are certain legal presumptions which allow when a certain mob is armed with a particular form of arms. The mere possession of these arms in certain cases is an offence under the Arms Act. So the question whether they were used or whether some injuries were inflicted or not by means of those weapons is not of material importance. The mere fact that so many people collected there, took the law in their own hands, were going against the law of the land, and were armed with dangerous weapons, was sufficient to give presumption to the authorities at the spot that there was a danger of the breach of the peace and it is the primary duty of any Government to maintain public peace and tranquillity at any cost. We have only to see whether more force has been used than was necessary at the time and under the circumstances to maintain the peace and tranquillity of the province.

Lala Doshbandhu Gupta : The honourable member has just made a reference that under the Arms Act it was necessary that notice should have been taken of kulhari. I want to know whether any licence is necessary for the possession of a kulhari.

Khan Bahadur Chaudhri Riasat Ali : I am not talking of kulhari. I am talking of spears and other arms. There is a legal presumption, when these people are in a mob and there is danger of breach of peace, that there is fear of further trouble. It is, therefore, their primary duty under the circumstances explained, to see that peace and tranquillity is maintained. The facts given on the floor of this House show that they did not go beyond their legal means and they did not take a single step forward and did not use any force which was greater in measure than was necessary for the prevention of further trouble. Another thing which has been mentioned by the Doctor is that unless there is some sort of trouble or grievance, there cannot be any agitation. There is a proverb that there is always some truth at the bottom of any agitation. Of course great events always have small beginnings and it is for us to measure whether that misfortune or whether that trouble, to a particular section of the population of the province, has made a fresh field of activity or propaganda for another mischievous development. Therefore, it is the duty of the Government to nip the evil in the bud and to see that no conflagration or disturbance of the peace spreads over the illiterate and ignorant masses. They are simple people and in certain cases they do not know even the document which they, by propaganda or by instigation, are required to sign. What I want to emphasise is that it is the genuine right of every citizen to claim his own hak but he should do that by lawful means and not by illegal methods, as was done in this particular case. We have also seen in these allegations that in certain cases there are people who are instigated to work against their will. I want to emphasise that people by certain sorts of things—right or wrong—are driven to take certain steps which, left to themselves, they will never take and if once such instigations and such troubles take place and they are not checked by the authorities at the time when they start, then there is every danger that there will be no end to this mass agitation. With these words I oppose the motion.

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi (Lyallpur and Jhang, General, Urban) (Urdu): Mr. Speaker, as my honourable friend, Sardar Hari Singh was stating facts relating to the unfortunate incident about which this adjournment motion has been moved, the Honourable Premier remarked very slightly that the statement by the Leader of the Opposition about the death of Kala Singh was a wild allegation. Now another honourable member of the Ministerial party, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, has re-echoed his master's voice faithfully and declared that this statement is nothing more than a myth. Let me hasten to inform these honourable gentlemen that truth is sometimes stranger than fiction. They should have the courage to face facts and not deny them straight off. We have no mind to waste the precious time of the House in narrating myths. On the other hand, we possess true facts of the matter and I am going to mention these on the floor of this House. I started for Lyallpur the day before yesterday and reached there at 10 o'clock the next morning. I then proceeded towards the chak to which the deceased Kala Singh belonged. This Kala Singh was the son of the Zaildar of Chak No. 51. I held an inquiry into this incident in the presence of the Zaildar and Sardar Bishan Singh, the uncle of the deceased, and a large number of Sikh gentlemen who had gathered there in a condolence meeting. I tried to elicit the relevant information and was anxious to obtain true facts of the matter. Now I want to place all these facts that I was able to collect there before this august House. In this connection, I may also mention that I interviewed the Deputy Commissioner of Lyallpur, Mr. Shrinagesh, in order to know the official version of the case and hence I can claim to be in possession of the true facts concerning the incident. I have honestly and impartially collected information and am prepared to lay it before the House, with your permission.

It appears from these facts that Mr. Beaty, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, arrived in Chak No. 51 at about 4 p. m., where a man was deputed to keep watch so that none should close the outlet. Mr. Beaty had a pistol in one hand and a stick in the other. He asked the watchman as to who had closed the outlet of Chak No. 50. Then the Deputy Superintendent came by Kala Singh a boy of 27 years with a little education. Of course he knew how to sign in English. He was the son of the local Zaildar, Gurdit Singh. Mr. Beaty took with him Fauja Singh, the Lambardar of Chak No. 50, and Ujagar Singh, the Sufedposh of Chak No. 49, and got Kala Singh under his custody, and coerced him to give false evidence, and to depose that such and such men had closed the outlet. Here, Mr. Speaker, I should be excused, because I cannot describe what happened at night and what tortures were inflicted on the person of these men. It is beyond my knowledge and power to describe what dreadful treatment was meted out to Kala Singh or in what manner he was intimidated by Mr. Beaty when he was taken to the Sadar Police Station of Lyallpur. At about 12 o'clock the next day, i.e., the 16th July, Sardar Gurdit Singh, father of the deceased, was waiting in the compound of Lyallpur tahsil. Kala Singh reached there in a bewildered condition and on repeated enquiries from his father said, "O father, the police forced me to give false evidence but I refused to do so." Sardar Gurdit Singh finding that the boy's tongue quivered and his face was pale, took him to his village which was about 9 miles distant from Lyallpur. Finding him in a precarious state of health, Dr. Fauja Singh was summoned, who reached there at about 5 p. m. Finding the patient in a hopeless condition the Doctor decided to take him back to Lyallpur for treatment. But my honourable friends opposite depose that Kala Singh was ill at his own house; if so, how did he get hurt by the police at a distance of 7 miles from his home? I may inform them that Kala Singh was taken through Narwala at about 6 o'clock in the evening on the 16th when he died on the way. Still my honourable friends opposite say this is a myth and a wild statement. I wonder how they can say so under the very shadow of this grim tragedy. I wish to place before them the very words which the deceased wrote in his letter, dated the 16th July, 1938, as is clear from the postal seal on it. The deceased must have written this letter in a moment of extreme anxiety and almost in the agony of death. It runs as follows:—

اور میں نے ایک سو روپیہ گلچندر سنگھ سے لپٹا ہے اور ۵۰ روپیہ
لیومن سنگھ نے۔ مگر میں اس لئے مرقا ہوں کہ صاحب مجھکو بلا رہا ہے۔

Sir, I wish you could grant me some more time so that I could place all the relevant facts before this House. The Honourable Premier was pleased to remark yesterday that we were making wild allegations. But here I am quoting the very chapter and verse of the matter. How can any one deny these hard facts?

Sir, I may submit that this letter is the last and conclusive evidence that was given by the dying Kala Singh and it also gives a pen picture of the torture to which he was made a victim. Can we not say that Mr. Beaty is a worse criminal than General Dyer? In this connection I may submit that just as the people of Amritsar died by the bullets of General Dyer, Kala Singh was so much terrified by Mr. Beaty that he preferred to commit suicide and thereby avoid dying the death of a dog. The report of the Chemical Examiner is awaited, but it was the opinion of Dr. Fauja Singh that Kala Singh had taken arsenic. It is quite apparent from his letter that he had taken poison in order to commit suicide, and he did this only when the tortures of police became intolerable to him. These are the real facts which have been termed as wild allegations by my friends opposite.

Again, my honourable friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood has stated in the course of his speech that the Government would carefully go into the matter and would take necessary action. I may submit that if the Government do not take suitable action, then I assure them that the death of Kala Singh would prove the last nail in the coffin of Unionist Government. I have already submitted the evidence of the deceased which goes to show that all things did not take place unprovoked. In this connection I may submit that the beard of Sardar Ganga Singh was pulled by Mr. Beatty and I ask the Honourable Revenue Minister who is at this time not in the House, what is the significance of pulling the beard of a Sikh Sardar? I ask his Parliamentary Secretary, Sardar Ujjal Singh to make a note of the circumstances under which Mr. Beatty pulled the beard of Sardar Ganga Singh. May I know whether the Government officials are entitled to pull the beards of Sikhs even under provocation?

Premier : May I request the honourable member to put down the documents, he has read on the table of the House?

Mr. Speaker : I request the honourable member to place those documents on the table of the House.

Mr. Dev Raj Sethi : I will certainly place them on the table of the House. I was drawing the attention of Sardar Ujjal Singh whether under any provoked circumstances any Government official is entitled to pull the beard of a Sikh gentleman? The evidence that has been given by Sardar Ganga Singh can be duly substantiated and in order to satisfy the Government I will place all the relevant documents on the table of the House. I may also submit that Sardar Ganga Singh was standing on the 5th mile of the road when Mr. Beatty came to him and pulled his beard. To me it seems that his only fault was that he was wearing a black turban and Mr. Beatty concluded from his turban that he being an Akali and a Congressman was the originator of the whole trouble. These are the real facts which no one can deny.

Then as regards woga bonds, I may submit that the people of 319 villages closed their outlets. This information has been obtained from the office of the District Congress Committee. Then, Sir, the Honourable Premier has charged the Congress that one of their employees went to the canal bank and made a cut there. I may submit that there are only two employees of the Congress there. One of them is Durga Dass and the second is Natha Singh. Both of them were present in the office of the District Congress Committee on that day, i.e., on the 15th. I challenge this statement and I would request my honourable friends opposite to substantiate this charge.

Mr. Speaker : I request the honourable member to sign those documents before placing them on the table<sup>1</sup> of the House.

Parliamentary Secretary (Sardar Bahadur Sardar Ujjal Singh) : Sir, there is no one in the House who has not his full sympathy with those poor and misguided zamindars who are inviting sufferings on themselves in the Lyallpur district. The question that is to be decided is whether the Government is to be blamed for all that agitation that is going on or whether there are some interested persons who are instigating those zamindars and putting them into unnecessary trouble. My honourable friend Dr. Satya Pal said that the Government is standing in the way of just and legitimate rights of the people of that Wazir by refusing them their haq supply of water. On the other hand, Doctor Sahib ought to realise that by not yielding to the unreasonable demands of the few, the Government is protecting the legitimate interest of the majority of zamindars and the majority of irrigators. (Hear, hear from the Treasury benches.) The question of remodelling of outlets is not peculiar to Lyallpur district or to those two minors on which this agitation has been started. This remodelling of outlets goes on practically everywhere on every canal where there is a necessity and where the authorities find that people are not getting their haq supply of water. It often happens that due to silting up or to some defect in channels, people at the tail are not able to get their authorized supply of water and the authorities are compelled to remodel outlets, so that there should be an equitable and just distribution of water-supply. It is for these reasons that the canal authorities on those two minors resorted to remodel outlets.

<sup>1</sup>For one of the documents laid on the table, vide page 1585 infra.

I happened to visit Lyallpur on the 28th of May when those zamindars had closed their outlets. I had a long talk with them and then I took 4 or 5 of them to the Executive Engineer of the taqa. After long discussions with the Executive Engineer I assured the zamindars, as also did the Executive Engineer, that if they found that they were getting even a pie less than their haq of water supply out of 16 annas, they could close their outlets by all means. If, on the other hand, they got their full measure of authorized supply they should not stand in the way of the authorities and should not unnecessarily invite trouble on themselves. (Hear, hear.) After long discussion with the Executive Engineer I was left with the impression that the zamindars were satisfied with the assurance given by the Executive Engineer. They left the place with the remarks that after consulting their friends they would open the outlets and would see that the agitation came to an end. Unfortunately, I am not aware what happened afterwards; I was told that I would hear about it in a day or two. The Executive Engineer assured them that the Government was determined to give equitable distribution of water supply, i.e., 1 cusec for every 264 acres, and that he would be on the spot to see that they were getting their due share, or even slightly more. Instead of hearing about the settlement, a day or two later, as I was led to expect, I came to know that the agitation was going on stronger every day. I do not wish to apportion blame on any party or organization, but I am sure that left to themselves, the zamindars would have come to a settlement with the authorities. (Hear, hear.) A few days after that, as my honourable friends are aware, we heard that a settlement was almost arrived at and then something happened. I do not wish to use any strong words, but I must sound a note of warning. The canal system in the Punjab is a system of which we take a genuine pride. Honourable members should realise that those who are agitating or instigating or supporting such agitation, are playing a dangerous game. Once this question of inequitable distribution starts and once the Government yields to that pressure, our whole canal system will break down. (Hear, hear.) It is for this reason that I want this to be fully realised that this is a dangerous game and it should not be played with a light heart. With regard to what happened afterwards, my friend, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, has already placed some facts before the House.

I want to say a word about the document that my honourable friend, Mr. Sethi, read out to the House and placed on the table. I am really surprised that this document was not placed before any magisterial inquest. It is rather strange that such a document should be in the first place placed on the table of the House. Anyhow, the matter will be thoroughly investigated, but I may assure my honourable friends that the Government is not prepared to shelter any guilty officer and if any officer is found to be guilty Government will take strong action against him. (A voice: Question.) On the other hand, it is also the duty of the Government to see that peaceful citizens are not intimidated and that Government officers are not abused in the discharge of their public duties. With these words I oppose the motion.

Sardar Sampuran Singh (Lyallpur West, Sikh, Rural) : I rise not to oppose any pious wish expressed by the members on that side of the House, nor have I to say anything against the virtues of the Irrigation Department, so far as the benefits of the supply of canal water to the province are concerned. I am afraid this was no occasion even to mention these things and get applause from the House because who denies this fact that the Irrigation Department is doing a great service to the province? Our object in moving this motion is to show in what an inequitable and unjust way this department is, in the name of remodelling, causing hardship to the zamindars. I would accept that remodelling is in certain cases absolutely necessary; it is not our object in moving this motion that you should stop remodelling altogether. Our object is 'do not reduce the supply of water'. People who deal with this subject on the Government side fully understand what I mean to say. If you will bear me through, you will understand, Sir, what I am saying. My object is that remodelling is sometimes necessary when silt collects, but in the name of remodelling the supply of water is reduced more than is necessary. The Government not only here in this House, but outside stated once and again that they are not reducing water supply. But we zamindars who actually irrigate our fields find that quite the reverse is the case in practice, not only now but this has been the state of affairs for the last 20 years. Moreover, Sir, you are aware that the settlement operations in Lyallpur district were finished only recently and they have continued for over two years. These beds were even then under silt. Why did not this responsible Government of the Punjab touch those outlets during that time? They continued giving water to the people. Why? Because they wanted to assess those lands and since the assessment is complete they have reduced the supply of water. That is almost dishonest on the part of the department. Moreover, I want to put one question to the Government: 'Is it not a fact that the zamindar who used to water 250 acres with one cusec of water has now to water 264 acres with the same quantity of water?' In this connection I would say that the local authorities realised the trouble of the people and the justness of their claims. They accordingly entered into a compromise with those people. They agreed to give them 1.25 cusecs for all the nine villages. The compromise was entered into in my presence and actually the Executive Engineer and the Sub-Divisional Officer took me with them to the spot to persuade the people to open their outlets and in my presence they promised to give them 1.25 cusecs. But on the very day I arrived at Simla I received a telegram from Lyallpur that on instruction from Simla that promise was broken. The responsibility is directly of the Government and not even of the subordinate officials.

This death of Kala Singh is an unfortunate affair. I knew him personally and I know his father too and his uncle Bishen Singh. They are the most loyal people as the term is generally understood by the British Government. The father is a zaildar and I have known them for the past ten or fifteen years. I know how faithful and loyal they were not only to the Government but also to the local officials. He was so loyal that he would not even have the courage to give evidence against the Government even though the case of the Government might not be true. It is really extraordinary that he should have met his death in such tragic circumstances.

It has been said, why have not these documents referred to by the honourable member been put before the police for investigation and necessary action? Do you want me to answer that question? Do you not know how the police is terrorizing the people? Does the Government not know how documents are forged by the police, how evidence is manufactured where the Government officials are concerned? If it does not know, then surely it is closing its eyes to facts. It is deceiving itself and is trying to deceive every one of us. They should keep their eyes open and see how their Government is being carried on by its subordinates in the countryside. (Hear, hear.)

It was alleged by the Government that these people carried chhavis. I have made enquiries from disinterested people. I called upon the people at Lahore only yesterday who were disinterested and simple zamindars. They told me that nobody was carrying chhavis. Certainly they had certain tools which they used only recently to close the outlets. Again it is totally wrong that only about 50 villages closed the outlets. My information is that about 60 per cent of the villages closed the outlets and applications from 500 villages out of the 1,300 villages actually reached the Canal Department giving information to them that on such and such a date the Government should make arrangements to use their water elsewhere, because they were going to close their outlets. About 300 letters were delivered to the Canal Office through the Congress Committee, Lyallpur, to the same effect. In the end I would request the Government that it should save us from this terrorism. The so-called prestige and fear of Government and fear of the officials should go away from the province. Otherwise in the long run it will be found that not a single person in the country will remain with the Government. It should realize that people suffer heavily and every child in the country is convinced of the tyranny of the police. I would press very hard upon the Government for its own sake that if it wants to continue in office it should keep open its eyes to the faults of their subordinates.

An honourable member : The question may now be put.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Sardar Hari Singh : After the discussion that has taken place re the tyranny to the people involving the death of a person, I should have thought that the Honourable Premier, like a true democrat that he claims to be, would have got up and said, 'Well, gentlemen, the position is that you have got certain information gleaned from sources which you consider reliable. I have got certain information from my district authorities. These two sets of information are in conflict with each other. So, let us strike an issue. I shall welcome an independent enquiry in which I shall associate members on both sides of the House and if as a result of enquiry by that independent committee it is found that the police officials are guilty of the offences brought against them I shall mete out deterrent punishment to the guilty'. If he had said that, it would have been characteristic of a democrat. Instead of doing that he puts up apologists on his side who say, 'What right have you to question the honesty of the police or their conduct and purity? Our police is totally blameless.' (Interruption). In effect this is what they said. This is how the Government tries to convince the Opposition that it is carrying on the Government of the province for the good of its people. How then can it expect the Opposition to place confidence in it? How can the Opposition co-operate with it? A very prominent public man of the neighbouring province who also happens to be a Minister saw the Chief Justice of the Lahore High Court and during the talk the Chief Justice told him that the Punjab Police was the worst on the face of India.

Premier : I question the statement. It is very unfair to bring in the Chief Justice in this discussion. I am almost certain that he did not say anything of the kind.

Mr. Speaker : I have ruled more than once that honourable members should not refer in their speeches to conversations of which no record is made or kept, inasmuch as the correctness of such references is generally questioned and this often results in unpleasantness.

Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam : Even if the honourable member assumes responsibility for the correctness of his statement?

Mr. Speaker : Yes. Even then such references should be avoided.

Sardar Hari Singh : Very well, Sir. What about the strictures passed in several judgments of the High Court against the conduct of the police? Again, has it not been brought to the notice of the Government that in many judgments of sessions judges of the Punjab strictures of a very strong character have been passed on the honesty and conduct of the police in this province? Have we not brought them to his notice? What has he done in those cases? He says, 'Bring to our notice specific cases of police misconduct and we shall take necessary action.' We have placed before him during this year a catalogue, a very long catalogue, of police excesses, their malpractices and their misconduct in the various districts of the province. What has he done? Let him get up and say that he has done such and such a thing to put an end to such acts of the police. On the other hand, in the well-known Kiroo Murder case he only tried to whitewash the strictures passed by the High Court.

Premier : Question. The honourable member is making an aspersion against a judicial officer.

Sardar Hari Singh : I have to bring to your notice how that kind of defence of the police officers by the Government emboldens them to perpetrate further excesses.

Mr. Speaker : That matter is not before the House.

Sardar Hari Singh : I am giving one particular instance to show how the defence by the Government of police excesses encourages them to perpetrate further excesses. I am referring to the case of the Hariana police. I moved adjournment of the House to discuss the death of Dalipa. The Government defended the indefensible conduct of the police. This emboldened the police with the result that now we hear of the suspension of a sub-inspector of police in connection with physical torture of a suspect. The Government in its pur-blindness excuses itself by saying that interested parties are at work. Let me tell them that they are interested and we too are interested, every one of us is interested. They are interested in drawing high salaries and in perpetuating the exploitation of the masses of this province. (Hear, hear.) We are interested in ending the exploitation. Therefore, slogans like this that interested parties are at work only create trouble and do not serve any purpose. The Government's contention that they have to consider the interests of the people at the tail of the distributaries is pure bunkum. The Government does not want to face the issues straight. If there is an iota of humanity, an iota of justice, an iota of manliness left in this Government, it should hold an independent and impartial enquiry in which the members of the various sections of this House should be associated. We are prepared to accept the findings of that committee.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : The time at my disposal is very short and I am afraid I may not be able to meet all the various allegations made, some of them plausible and others even on the face of them wholly untenable. The genesis of this case has been to some extent explained by my friend, Sardar Ujjal Singh and I might just supplement what he said by saying that the decision to remodel these distributaries was taken at a meeting of the advisory committee at which representatives of the affected villages were present and agreed to the proposal. Before I proceed any further I might point out that my honourable friend in his vehemence and in trying to be impressive and eloquent—and he thinks that eloquence consists in shouting epithets at other people—said that the Irrigation officers in his presence promised 2·25 cusecs of water. I trust he will forgive me for reminding him of the Persian proverb about a short memory. He has probably forgotten that we were giving only 1·25 cusecs before this remodelling took place. But he asserted several times that in his presence the authorities promised to give 2·25 cusecs. That is the kind of information by which he wishes to impress the House.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : I am sorry for the mistake. I meant 1·25.

Premier : My honourable friend concedes that he has committed a mistake. So, I will not stress that point further.

I believe, if I have time, other members would be similarly forced to admit their mistakes by the time I have finished except, perhaps my honourable friend, Dr. Satya Pal. My honourable friends opposite are fully aware of the attitude of the Government with regard to this trouble on the Janewala distributary.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : Are you willing to give 1.25%?

Mr. Speaker : Please do not interrupt the Honourable Premier.

Premier : Now, before I explain the attitude of the Government, let me very briefly refer to another aspect of this question, which my honourable friends have not mentioned. One of the allegations which has come to my knowledge is this. It is said that a subordinate in the Canal Department himself encouraged agitation because some relations of his have land on this distributary. It is alleged that it was he who originally put up people to stage a mild demonstration against the local Canal Department officers so that the distributary may not be remodelled. That gentleman has a friend in the office of the Superintending Engineer who, I am told, has been providing the agitators with distorted figures and wrong data to keep up the agitation.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : I had no connection with anybody and I did not receive any information from any one.

Mr. Speaker : Please do not interrupt.

Premier : I still suspect that the original trouble started because of the machinations of these two Canal subordinates and I have asked the Chief Engineer concerned to make a sifting enquiry into the matter to find out whether they were really responsible for this trouble or not. But what happened afterwards? My honourable friends opposite including my friend Sardar Sampuran Singh left out this very important feature of the present agitation. He and others are reported to have said that it was a good opportunity to embarrass the Government. Any stick according to them is good enough to beat the Government with; any device to make propaganda against Government is good enough.

Sardar Sampuran Singh : Is not that attributing motives?

Mr. Speaker : No insinuations, please.

Premier : I was pointing out that some interested persons took up this agitation with a view to embarrass the Government and not in any way to help the people of the Janewala distributary; and one of those interested persons, I would not name him, but I believe my friend, Sardar Sampuran Singh and others opposite will not find it difficult to place him—on one occasion actually made a remark that they had laddus in both hands; if Government gives way, they would say that they had beaten the Government, and if Government does not give way, then they would have a good weapon which they could use to continue this agitation against Government.

(Interruptions).

Mr. Speaker : Please do not be personal and avoid such remarks.

Premier : The remarks have gone home. (Interruptions.) If my honourable friends must interrupt me, I had better discontinue my speech.

(Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam stood up to make a remark.)

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member should not make any remarks without the Chair's permission.

Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam : If you say so, I will sit down.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I rise to a point of order. Under the Parliamentary Practice it is the disorderly interruptions that are not allowed and that also is left to the Chair. It does not mean that we cannot reply to whatever the member in possession of the House says.

Mr. Speaker : Not by remarks or interruptions. Honourable members may wait for their turn to make corrections and personal explanations.

(Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam again stood up.)

Mr. Speaker : Why has the honourable member stood up again ?

Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam : I am going to explain my conduct to the Chair.

Mr. Speaker : But he cannot do so unless I permit him.

Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam : Then I ask your permission.

Mr. Speaker : I refuse to give permission at this stage.

Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam : If you refuse it I sit down.

Mr. Speaker : No further interruptions, please.

(Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam again stood up.)

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member has again disobeyed me. This is the second or the third time that he has done so, but I will give him another and the last chance.

Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam : I have not disobeyed your order.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member has again got up. He knows that the Honourable Premier is in possession of the House. I direct him to leave the House.

Premier : Now, Sir, I was trying to explain the attitude of certain interested persons who started the agitation. My honourable friend, the last speaker, wrote to me several weeks ago saying that there was trouble on the Janewala distributary and inquired if I could help by giving instructions to the officials concerned to meet the demands of those people. I wrote back to him at once saying that so far as the Government was concerned it was its bounden duty to see that every person got his permissible supply of water and haq and if Government or the officials at the spot received any complaint that these people were not receiving their haq, the complaints would be looked into at once. I also made it clear that it was impossible for Government to give more water to some people at the expense of others at the tail who may be aggrieved. I never received any communication after that, and was under the impression that my reply, since it was clear and fair had ended the whole affair. I concluded that if they had any genuine hardship they would have gone to the local officers, as suggested by me to get their grievances redressed. Government subsequently issued a communiqué stating that if there were any genuine grievances an officer would be deputed at once to check the outlets and if any outlet was drawing less than its permissible haq, the defect would be rectified at once and the complaint removed. This is what the Government did. Subsequently both the Executive Engineer and the Superintending Engineer also gave similar assurances directly and through my honourable friend, Sardar Ujjal Singh. But their friends, perhaps, thought that if the grievances were removed there would be no ground or scope left for any further agitation. This is, I am told, the reason why the mischief was kept alive; and then there was of course the bye-election.

Sardar Sampuran Singh: I again rise on a point of order. The Honourable Premier is again attributing motives.

Mr. Speaker: Such things, unless they are meant to attack the honourable members of the House, can be said in speeches.

Premier: Subsequently, as I was submitting, came the bye-election and it is alleged that some interested persons further fanned the agitation with a view to vote-catching. I have very little time at my disposal, and, therefore, I cannot go into details but you are aware that a demonstration was staged in June last. The demonstration was quite peaceful and the local officers were willing and prepared to meet selected representatives. They repeated the assurance and informed them that they would be prepared to redress the legitimate grievances, if any, of the people concerned, and that an officer would be deputed to put things right, if the outlets were found to be drawing less than their legitimate share. But a settlement did not suit their so-called friends who started going round and creating agitation farther afield. At first they fixed the 4th of July for another demonstration, but they found that all people were not such fools as to be easily duped by them. Their attempt failed and they had to postpone the demonstration to the 15th. What happened then was described briefly in the statement that I made yesterday in the House. My friends opposite have tried to question some statements of facts which I made. I can give you at least two definite instances where shareholders definitely protested against their outlets being closed forcibly. One Kartar Singh, Jathedar, closed an outlet at 7 A.M. on 15th July, 1938, but it was re-opened by Kartar Singh, Lambardar, soon after. I understand attempts were made to close it again under threats and coercion. This outlet irrigates Chak Kotli Bajwa. Then the Mahal Jam Minor was cut just below the head on the right side by three persons, all jathedars, and their four companions with a view to cut off supply to its tail outlets which the zamindars concerned refused to close. The culprits were caught red-handed, and arrested by the police there and then. This is the truth about the 'peaceful' demonstration which my honourable friends opposite have tried to depict as an innocent and harmless demonstration.

My honourable friend, Sardar Hari Singh, said that this is a democratic Government and it has taken no steps so far to redress those grievances. I have already stated that Government has repeatedly given an assurance to these people that their grievances would be redressed. A democratic Government cannot under pressure of a wholly unjustified and spurious agitation, deprive a large majority of irrigators at the tail of the distributary for the sake of a few misguided people who demand more water than their haq of their legitimate share of water. One of my honourable friends said that 75 per cent of people did not take water on the 15th. Let me correct him. Only about three hundred outlets were involved and out of these three hundred a large number were forcibly closed under threats and coercion.

With regard to the case in which Kala Singh is alleged to have been maltreated by the police, I need say no more than this that the matter is being enquired into by a magistrate. A magisterial enquiry was ordered at once and I wish my honourable friend, instead of showing these letters here in this House, had produced them before the magistrate when he was making the inquest. I do not want to say anything with regard to their genuineness or otherwise here because it might be that they will be useful in our enquiry, to which I will refer later. I am astonished, however, to see that these letters were posted at Lyallpur on 16th July at 1 o'clock and in another letter of his father, it is said, "My son came at 12 o'clock on the 15th". So it means that the letter was posted after the deceased Kala Singh had seen his father. It is merely a sort of deduction. I cannot see any reason for his posting this letter after meeting his father because he had, soon after on that date.....(interruption). Sir, I have got no time and I want to finish. I hope that these letters will be carefully preserved. I can assure my honourable friends that so far as this case is concerned the viscera of the deceased has been sent to the Chemical Examiner for examination. There are two allegations. One is that he was maltreated by the police and died, as a result of police torture. The other is that he poisoned himself out of fright of police persecution. We have sent his viscera to the Chemical Examiner, and a thorough enquiry will be made into this case and if, as a result of that enquiry, it is proved that any police officer or policeman was responsible for maltreating him, as alleged, you may rest assured that he will be given very drastic punishment. (Loud cheers.)

My honourable friend enquired as to what has the Government been doing with regard to the various allegations made by courts or strictures passed by courts in such matters in the past. I can assure my honourable friend that there is not a single case in which enquiry was not held and in several cases judicial enquiries were held merely to see whether policemen were culprits or not. Wherever it is found that they are the culprits, they have been or would be dismissed summarily or very drastic punishment will be given to them. I may assure my honourable friends that so far as I am concerned, if any police officer is found to have done deliberate injustice to any of our fellow-citizens of the province, and if it is proved, Government will come down upon him most heavily and award most drastic punishment. (Loud cheers.) At the same time it is not possible for me to take any action on bare allegations which, I am sorry to say, I sometimes suspect because of their hearsay character, but I can assure my honourable friends that, so far as this case is concerned, a sifting and thorough enquiry will be made (hear, hear) and Government will take suitable action as a result of these enquiries. I must still call the first statement of honourable Leader of the Opposition as wild because Lala Achint Ram Thapar has also sent me a copy of the letter which he has sent him. The letter is dated the 8th and this also more or less gives a gist of what my honourable friend said and which he later withdrew. I am glad that he retracted. It is not necessary for us, however, to come to any final conclusion at this stage unless a thorough enquiry has been made.

Mr. Speaker: The question is—

POINT OF ORDER RE' INTERRUPTIONS.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Sir I rise to a point of order. Rule-157 of the House of Commons runs thus :—

"A member whilst present in the House during the debate—

- (i) must keep his place ;
- (ii) must enter and leave the House with decorum ;
- (iii) must not cross the House irregularly ;
- (iv) must not read any book, newspaper, or letter except in connection with the business of the debate ;
- (v) must maintain silence ;
- (vi) must not interrupt any member while speaking by disorderly expression or noises or in any other disorderly manner."

Now, Sir, I would refer you to May, page 334, in which it is said :—

"..... And the resolution of the house, 1693, enjoins that Mr. Speaker do call upon the member, by name, making such disturbance ; and that every such person shall incur the displeasure and censure of the house."

That was in 1693. Further on it says :—

"This rule is too often disregarded..... There are words of interruption which, if used in moderation, are not unparliamentary ; but when frequent and loud, cause serious disorder ; such as the cries of "question", "order, order", "hear, hear," or "divide, divide", which have been sanctioned by long parliamentary usage in both houses. When intended to denote approbation of the sentiments expressed and not uttered in the end of a sentence, the cry of "hear, hear" offers no interruption to the speech. ...."

Sir, if you go on further you will find that it is only disorderly interruption which is not allowed. But it does not mean that if a member, while sitting, just puts a question or just makes a remark, which is not disorderly, and he does not interrupt the honourable member in possession of the House, then it is not disorderly interruption. Now, in the note under that rule, it is said :—

"It is of course for the Speaker or Chairman to interpret and apply this rule. Much will depend on the character, object, degree, and duration of the interruption."

Sir, besides this, I beg to submit that you have been permitting some interruptions of some kind, for example, even to-day, when Sardar Sampuran Singh raised a point of order, saying that the Honourable Premier, who was in possession of the House, made certain remarks imputing motives, the Honourable Premier said that he never said so. The Honourable Premier replied to the objection raised by Sardar Sampuran Singh, without his having finished the sentence and that amounted to interruption. I do admit that you, as the custodian of the rights of this House, have got every power, as the House has got and it has delegated to you, to declare whether such an interruption is disorderly or not. But, Sir, my submission is, that it is not a question that if the interruption is not disorderly, then it is also not permitted. But at times, I may submit, your rulings have been that you have been allowing even casual remarks either from one side or the other when a member is speaking. I may remind you that you privately once advised me that a speech of the front benchers, specially of Ministers should not be interrupted and you said that it was the convention in the Parliament. But, Sir, I understand that that convention is also there that it is not that the front benchers on one side should not interrupt another front benchers, but more so the Ministerial side should not interrupt when any back benchers or the front benchers is in possession of the House. You will find that that convention is not yet established in this House. It may be a convention in the Parliament, but this convention is not yet established in this House. Therefore, I want your considered ruling whether any member has got a right to interrupt a speaker, though not in a disorderly manner.

Mr. Speaker : The word "interruption" is nowhere defined, and has to be interpreted according to the facts and circumstances of each case. According to Parliamentary Practice, relied upon by the honourable member, every member is expected to remain silent during debate. This clearly means that he is obliged not to interrupt. Again, in Parliament, to disregard the authority of the Chair is considered grossly disorderly conduct. The honourable member has quoted from a number of works on Parliamentary Practice. May I refer him to and quote our own Rules? Rule 28 runs as follows :—

"The Speaker shall preserve order and have all powers necessary for the purpose of enforcing his decision on all points of order."

I think the powers given by this rule are very wide. The rule further lays down :—

"He may direct any member whose conduct is, in his opinion, grossly disorderly to withdraw immediately from the Assembly....."

I hope this rule will convince the honourable member as to the wide power of the Speaker. Now the question is whether in any particular case, I have misused my powers, or have misread or misapplied the rule. Dr. Muhammad Alam, an old friend of mine.....

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : My point of order is that I want to know whether an interruption of an orderly kind is permitted or not?

Mr. Speaker : Interruptions of no kind are admissible in the House of Commons. I may tell my honourable friend, that when the Premier is addressing the House of Commons, every interruption, however trivial it may be, is considered disorderly.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Sir, my point of order was to know whether interruptions, orderly interruptions, are permitted.

Mr. Speaker : Yes and I have always allowed such interruptions. But there is a distinction between an 'interruption' and an 'obstruction'.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Am I correct if I understand that orderly interruptions are permitted but not when the Honourable Premier is speaking?

Mr. Speaker : I think the Honourable Premier will not mind reasonable interruptions.

Premier : Certainly, I will not mind them, provided they are—

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I do not stand to question your rulings, Sir. But when you declare a member to be out of order and call him to order, is he justified in rising up and explaining his position, I mean without any disrespect to you?

Mr. Speaker : Once I give my ruling it should not be criticised. I asked the honourable member (Dr. Muhammad Alam) to resume his seat half a dozen times and every time he got up and wished to make some remarks or start a speech.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : I do admit, Sir, that if a member has to make a speech he must seek your permission, but when you call a member to order and he wants to explain his position and gets up then he is not disorderly.

Mr. Speaker : It is not the privilege of an honourable member to get up, begin to speak and say anything he may wish to say. I have already stated that a disregard of the order of the Chair is a grossly disorderly conduct.

Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam : On a point of order, Sir. You referred to me calling me your old friend—

Mr. Speaker : That is no point of order.

Dr. Shaikh Muhammad Alam : On a point of personal explanation.

Mr. Speaker : No personal explanation is called for.

PRIVILEGE.

PUBLICATION IN PRESS OF IN CAMERA PROCEEDINGS.

Khan Bahadur Chaudhri Riasat Ali : Sir, I have to raise a point of privilege of the House. On Tuesday last at the close of the proceedings you were pleased to order the press gallery and the visitors' galleries to be cleared and you were pleased to take the House into your confidence and held an in camera conference to discuss certain things which had happened that day. I notice in to-day's issue of the Tribune that some reference has been made to what happened in the House at that time. There was nobody to report but still the thing appears in the Press. It is a matter of privilege of the House and as the Press had no right to report a thing which was confidential, I think, it is a breach of the privilege of the House. If that is so, I suggest, that action should be taken against the paper concerned or against the person who divulged the secret to the representative of the Press.

Mr. Speaker : I will give my ruling on that point after consulting the Honourable Premier and the Leader of the Opposition.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

LATHI CHARGE AT AMRITSAR.

Sardar Harjab Singh (Hoshiarpur-South, Sikh, Rural) : Sir, I beg to ask for leave to move the adjournment of the business of the House to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the lathi charge by the police on unarmed peaceful demonstrators at Amritsar on 20th July, in connection with the protest against the reduction in the width of canal outlets on certain distributaries and proposals to enhance the land revenue assessment in the district of Amritsar.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member asks for leave to move the adjournment of the business of the House to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the lathi charge by the police on unarmed peaceful demonstrators at Amritsar on 20th July, in connection with the protest against the reduction in the width of canal outlets on certain distributaries and proposals to enhance the land revenue assessment in the district of Amritsar.

Premier : Sir, I have no objection to the motion being discussed in the House. You might fix the time for the purpose.

After some consultation, the House agreed to take up the motion at the close of the business for the day.

THE PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND (THIRD AMENDMENT) BILL.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill as reported on by the Select Committee be taken into consideration.

Mr. Speaker : Motion moved is—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill as reported on by the Select Committee be taken into consideration.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : Sir, I got the report by post yesterday at half past five. I mean the postal stamp bears the hour 5-30 P.M., and I actually received it at half past eight. The Bill, as it has emerged from the select committee, is very substantially changed although the honourable gentlemen who constituted the committee say that there has been no substantial change in the Bill and therefore it does not require reprinting. My submission is that there have been considerable changes and very little time is given to us. In less than 24 hours it is sought to be presented, considered and passed, while it is entirely against rules. I do not know if any honourable members have sent in any amendment after the select committee's report was received. (Premier :

[Dr. Sir. Gokul Chand Narang]

They have). The amendments, I understand, are now being circulated here. We have not received them and now the Honourable Premier would get up and say, "let clause so and so be passed" and there would be an end of the matter, before we know where we stand and what this Bill really means. I would therefore suggest that the consideration of the Bill be postponed for seven days, but as that is not practicable it may be postponed sine die and may be considered in the next session. No one is going to lose anything by its postponement.

Premier : May I reply to my honourable friend's objection? He says that the Bill has been substantially altered. On the other hand it has been substantially curtailed and the committee has not in any way affected the basic principles of the Bill or its basic provisions. If my honourable friend reads the select committee's report he will find that we have cut out many redundant phrases and in one or two places we have made certain additions which do not in any way affect the principle of the Bill but only clarify the position or the intention of the framers of the Bill.

So far as the question of amendments is concerned we have received notice of amendments from some members on this Bill, as it has emerged from the select committee, and the amendments which my honourable friend sent in prior to its being referred to the select committee were considered by that committee. You are aware that the select committee was representative of all sections of this House and we came almost to a unanimous conclusion with regard to the changes to be made in the Bill. In the circumstances it would be hardly necessary to shelve the Bill as my honourable friend desires on the ground he has put forward. His suggestion to shelve it sine die probably means that he wants not only this Bill but the other Bill also to be shelved, because I have given an undertaking in this House that both these Bills will come into force together and I think it will be unfair to this House and to the province if these Bills are shelved.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : My honourable friend the other day said that the report of the select committee was unanimous and he has repeated it to-day. I challenged that statement at that time. We find that his statement is incorrect because we find a note of dissent.

Mr. Speaker : I have no objection to take up the Bill after the other Bill on the agenda is disposed of.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : My honourable friend might have come to some agreement with the Honourable Premier. (An honourable member : No agreement.) I am not accusing him. There is nothing wrong in coming to an agreement with the Honourable Premier. It is not a sin. I would be very glad to come to an agreement with him on the points that I want in this Bill. But the point is this. It would not make any difference to the members, so far as their study of this Bill and the sending in of amendments are concerned, if it is postponed till after the other Bill is disposed of, because we shall be busy here the whole day and the Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of the House want to keep us here till 12 in the night. So, if you are going to exercise your power under the rules, I think, it will be better if we take up this Bill to-morrow, because then it will give us some time at least.

Premier : You have already made it clear that we agreed to the motion for reference to the select committee on the understanding that thereafter no technical objection would be raised. Several honourable members had sent in amendments even before the motion for the select committee was accepted. I will again repeat what I said, that in the select committee we came to a unanimous decision. The minute of dissent to which my honourable friend refers, that is, the minute of dissent of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, is not really a minute of dissent and it does not in any way affect the provisions of the Bill. He has appended it merely to emphasise certain points which he put before the committee and which were in most cases incorporated in the Bill. His main point is a hypothetical one. He says that agriculturist money-lenders have not been put on the same footing as non-agriculturist money-lenders and he has tried to elaborate that point.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : He has suggested the addition of a proviso.

Premier : He did not press it in the select committee. He said, ' I will write a minute of dissent ' and he has done so. The provisions in the Bill more or less incorporate the amendments given notice of by various sections of the House.

Mr. Speaker : We will take up this Bill later.

THE PUNJAB RESTITUTION OF MORTGAGED LANDS BILL.

Minister for Revenue (The Honourable Dr. Sir Sundar Singh Majithia) : Sir, I beg to present the report of the drafting committee on the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the amendments suggested by the drafting committee be adopted.

The motion was carried.

Minister for Revenue : I beg to move—

That the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill be passed.

In doing so I wish to point out two or three things. The object of this Bill is that the mortgage having run for a very long time and the mortgagees having derived benefit from them, they should return the same to the original mortgagors. Under the Land Alienation Act where there is a usufructuary mortgage the land goes back to the mortgagor after 20 years, in this case also as they have enjoyed the benefit for such a long time they should return the land to the people who mortgaged it. That is the first thing. The second is that the collector is to decide the question of compensation that may be due to the persons from whom

(1) In line 3 of clause 9 for the word "delivered" the word "delivery" should be substituted.

(2) (a) In sub-clause (a) of clause 10 the words "when the order is made by the Collector" should be deleted.

(b) In sub-clause (b) for the words "when the order is made by a Commissioner" the words "from an order made on appeal by the Commissioner" should be substituted.

(3) For the word "the" in the third line of clause 12 the word "a" should be substituted.

(4) (a) For the word "purposes" appearing partly in the third and partly in the fourth lines of clause 13 the word "purpose" should be substituted.

[Minister for Revenue]

the land is going to be taken away and for this purpose provisions have been made in the Bill. The third thing is that we are barring the jurisdiction of civil courts. The select committee and this House have tried to improve the Bill in many ways and have removed many defects.

No doubt agitation has been going on in the press and on the platform. The same was the case when the Land Alienation Act was passed. We have to see what the effect of this measure that we are passing now would be. After the Bill has worked out for about a few years, we will be in a better position to know if there are any defects or shortcomings in the Bill which might be removed. The Assembly is competent to do that. This is all that I have to say in this matter and I will take no more time of the House in making a long speech.

Mr. Speaker : Motion moved is—

That the Punjab Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill be passed.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : Sir, I am constrained to say a few words in opposing the motion that the Honourable Minister-in-charge of the Bill has moved. My first reason for opposing the motion is that the Bill is based on no principle whatsoever. I have touched the various points arising in the Bill in connection with the amendments which have been moved by various members including myself and I would not repeat them, but every fair-minded person would agree with me that the Bill is nothing but an attempt at usurpation and expropriation. Even the fixing of the date, 8th of June, 1901, before which all mortgages are to be redeemed involves no principle whatsoever. During the long speeches made by the Honourable Premier and his lieutenants, not a word was said, not a word that could carry conviction was said by anyone why 8th June, 1901, should be considered a sacred date. To-day the Minister-in-charge of the Bill, who probably never spoke on the merits of the Bill said we want these mortgages to be redeemed because we consider that up to the sacred date of the 8th of June, 1901, the mortgagees have derived sufficient benefit from these mortgages and as they have enjoyed the fruits of the land for so many years, they should now be asked to part with these lands and return them to the original mortgagors. I need hardly say that these arguments of my Honourable friend carry no conviction whatsoever. If people who secured these mortgages before 1901 and those people may include those who had these mortgages executed in their favour only a year or so before 1901, if they can be considered to have enjoyed the fruits of the land, why cannot those favoured people who might have got these mortgages executed in their favour on the 2nd or 3rd day

- (b) For the word " may " appearing in the third line of sub-clause (2) of clause 13 the word " shall " should be substituted, and the words " all or any of " appearing in the 4th line of this sub-clause should be deleted.
- (c) The word " for regulating the assessment of " appearing in sub-paragraph (b) of sub-clause (2) of clause 13 should be deleted and the word " assess " should be substituted therefor.
- (d) For the word " the " appearing in the second line of sub-paragraph (d) of sub-clause (2) of clause 13, the word " this " should be substituted.
- (e) For the word " the " appearing in the last line of sub-paragraph (e) of sub-clause (2) of clause 13 the word " this " should be substituted.

after the 8th June, 1901, be not considered to have enjoyed lands sufficiently to return them to the mortgagors? This is such an obvious fallacy in the position taken up by the Government that they have really no reply to it. Then, if to-day mortgages which might have been in existence for the last 50 years or so or even more can be set aside, and people who invested money in them can be deprived of the fruits of their mortgages, is there any guarantee that to-morrow some more socialistic minded Minister would not arise and say that all lands which changed hands during the last 50 or 60 years whether from agriculturists to non-agriculturists or from non-agriculturists to agriculturists or whatever the case may be should be restored? Restoring status quo after 60 years as provided for in this Bill is absolutely unique in the history of legislation so far as my humble and limited knowledge goes, and the Honourable Premier has not been able to point out a single instance where mortgages of this description have been by legislation redeemed and the mortgagees have been deprived of their property. If they can be deprived of their mortgages, they can certainly be deprived of their free-hold rights also on properties which they acquired by purchase and to which, as they fondly imagined, their titles have become matured. I warn and I did warn the honourable members of the Government the other day that this is a step which is calculated to destroy the confidence of the people in the present Government and they may take it from me that 50 per cent. of the population of this province has already lost its confidence in this Ministry. They may please a number of mortgagors to whom the land is to be restored, but there are at least 50 per cent. of the people who look on these gentlemen as usurpers, as people who are out to confiscate people's property without any rhyme or reason, who being in a position in which a fortuitous concurrence of circumstances has placed them are acting like free booters because they think that they have nobody to fear and therefore they can carry out whatever they like, because they have been placed in a position of power. This is the analysis of the step that the Government has taken by means of this Bill. Then again this Bill is defective on another ground that it makes absolutely no distinction between the rich and the poor. The mortgagees might be poorer than the mortgagors and yet in this law the poor mortgagee whether he is a poor man or a poor clerk or a retired soldier whom the Honourable Premier referred to, might have acquired this land out of his petty savings after 25 years or 30 years' service and retired after arduous work either at the desk or in the battle-field, he is being deprived of his little saving which he had put in the land to favour a person who may be a hundred times richer than the mortgagee. This is the justice that they are perpetrating by means of this Bill. It will certainly ruin many poor people, many poor widows, and many helpless orphans whose only subsistence might be the income from those mortgaged lands. As I hinted on a previous occasion, they are placing the secured creditors in a worse position than an unsecured creditor. Not a word has so far been said by any of these gentlemen on this point and I feel that they have absolutely no reply to it. (Premier : What?) That by means of this Bill the Government is placing secured creditors in a much worse position than unsecured creditors. Even in the most stringent debt legislation that this Government has passed during the last few years, what has been done is that the debts might be scaled down but there is no provision in any of those Acts that the debts should be wiped out clean on the ground that they have been in existence for a particular number of years. So the unsecured creditor to-day in this enlightened or benighted province of the Punjab stands in a much safer position than that foolish individual who invested his money in land and cajoled himself with the idea that thenceforward he will be a secured creditor. All that they have done with respect to the unsecured creditor is that they have fixed a special rate of interest beyond which he cannot charge. They have provided that after a certain date he will not be entitled to more than double the amount originally advanced by him but beyond that they have not gone, while this secured creditor is being deprived of all that he possessed on no compensation or on a compensation which may amount to absolutely nothing. Then, you will see that in the amended Bill they have provided that if a mortgagee has enjoyed a benefit which equals or exceeds twice the amount of the money originally advanced by him, he will not be entitled to any compensation whatsoever. He will simply be taken by the ear and kicked off the land which he occupied for the last fifty or sixty years and that land will be made over to the original mortgagor. I wonder if these gentlemen have ever considered what it may mean, what by an arithmetical calculation it comes to. Supposing a man got a mortgage for a hundred rupees sixty years ago. After sixty years, now that he is being expropriated, he will be paid two hundred rupees if he has derived no benefit at all. If it is found that he has received benefit which equals to two hundred rupees, he will get nothing. What does it mean? Let us put it in arithmetical language. What it may mean is that during sixty years he received one hundred rupees as interest on his one hundred rupees. In other words, the rate of interest which is now sought to be awarded to him is  $100/60$  which comes to, if I am not mistaken, Re. 1-10-8 or roughly speaking Re. 1-8-0. Do they consider this compensation adequate, reasonable and just before they turn out a mortgagee from the land which he has occupied for sixty years or so? I challenge any of these gentlemen to question the accuracy of this part of my argument that the rate of interest that the mortgagee, if he is not given anything after sixty years on the ground that he has received a benefit which equals twice the amount of the original mortgage money, received comes to about Re. 1-8-0 per cent. per annum simple interest (not compound interest). I do not see one individual here who can ever dream of raising money in the market at Re. 1-8-0 per cent. If that mortgagee had deposited his money in Government securities, he would have got at least 3 per cent. and that 3 per cent. would have been compound interest in a way because he would have received his interest every six months and might have invested it somewhere else. So these mortgagors who mortgage their lands to mortgagees because they otherwise could not either raise any money at all or could not pay their debts, are being placed in a position many times better than even the position of the Government or the position of the Imperial Bank. Until lately the Imperial Bank has been paying 3 per cent. and sometimes more than 3 per cent. Even the Bank of England rate is sometimes more than 3 per cent. and now when the money is so cheap in the market because there are no industries going and there are no avenues of investment, even in these days the Imperial Bank will pay more on larger sums than what these gentlemen are offering to the mortgagees—Re. 1-8-0 per cent. per annum simple interest. Is this the justice that they are going to do in this province? Was it for this that they were raised to the position that they occupy now? Do they consider that none but the agriculturists, that none but the borrowers, deserve any consideration and the creditors are all like sheep and goats which might be butchered and slaughtered at any time it pleases these gentlemen to do so?

Take some other provisions. I am again not sure at all if the Honourable Minister-in-charge fully realized the effect of the amendment moved by the honourable Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan when he introduced certain words before the words "when some payment is due". Supposing there is a case in which the benefit received by a mortgagee does not come to double the amount originally advanced by him. Then the provisions regarding compensation, as laid down in clause 6, would apply. What are those provisions? The provisions are that if the land has been under mortgage for so many years then 30 per cent., if for so many years then 15 per cent., and if for so many years then 5 per cent., if some payment is due. You will see that the compensation to be awarded is not to be determined by the amount that may be due even according to the provisions of their own Bill. The compensation is being fixed on the basis of the duration of the mortgage and even blind people can see that this is a most—well, I was going to use the word which they might not like—senseless method of compensation to be awarded to the mortgagees. Even those who know any arithmetic, those who have even acted as umpires in children's play, would understand that this is not an equitable or accurate method of the distribution of compensation. A man who invested one hundred rupees might have received ten rupees as benefit and ninety rupees may be due to him. Another man might have received 99 rupees and one rupee is due to him but the former will not get more than this amount. I am sure, they never realised that this was going to be the consequence of the clause as it has been drafted. Even now let them join heads together and convince me that I am mistaken in the conclusion which I have drawn from the clause as it is worked. Then, Sir, the basis itself that such and such multiple of the land revenue which was assessed on the land at the time the mortgage was executed, is illusory, and they cannot deny that at the time of many mortgages the land involved in the mortgage was not assessed to land revenue at all. What are they going to do in such cases where a collector finds that the benefit received is not equal to or more than twice the amount originally involved? Did they realise it? I am sure it never occurred to them: they never took that contingently into consideration at all and now as they say in Urdu they are engaged in "بانی" "بانی". That is the only remedy after all the clauses of the Bill have been passed. They will realise when the Act comes into force and the poor collector is handed over this precious law to carry out: then they will realise. The Honourable the Revenue Minister was pleased to say: "Let us pass this to-day. After two years if we find that it does not work well, then we shall amend the Act." That is what the Honourable the Revenue Minister was pleased to say a few minutes ago. What reply shall I give to such a remark? What can one say even with the utmost possible respect to an argument like this which has been advanced, when the victims have been butchered and their bones scattered to all the four winds, when their blood has flowed into the ditches, then my honourable friend would think that there should be a medicine to remedy the evil which he is deliberately perpetrating; and if he is not perpetrating deliberately, then he is committing a much greater offence than I could have accused him of. That is the position. What shall we do with your amendments after two years; people may rush to the collector in various districts to have their lands redeemed? Why should they wait two years particularly after the remark which the Honourable the Minister made? When this remark goes out and mortgagors hear of possible amendments there will be a rush and every one will say "let us get back our land before the expiry of two years." If the Bill is amended and any wrongs rectified, this certainly will not give any consolation or satisfaction to the people who are likely to be affected. Then, Sir, my honourable friend was pleased to say we have improved the Bill and pointed out some improvements. What are those improvements? The only 'improvement' which I can see is that whereas previously only poor barias were dragged into this, now even some of the Jats have also been brought in. You are asking those who hold no mortgages and not those who hold mortgages. Is it an improvement and is it justice? Injustice is injustice whether it is done to a baria or a Jat. I am out to speak against injustice irrespective of the victim of that injustice: he may be Chhotu Ram or he may be Manohar Lal. When he is subjected to injustice then I am out to condemn it. This is my position. It certainly does not improve the Bill. I do not want again to refer to the story of a hunchbacked woman to whom I referred on a previous occasion. Raja Sahib—he is absent—the Bhola Raja and probably some of my Jat friends are under the impression that before 1901, they held only 5 per cent. of the mortgaged land, and I particularly draw the attention of the Honourable the Development Minister to this. Like some other zamindars he may be under the impression that probably it is only 5 per cent. of the mortgaged lands before 1901 which are held by the zamindars. This is wrong. As was pointed out by Mir Maqbool Mahmood the other day 61 per cent. of the land mortgaged during the five years prior to 1900 were held by zamindars. Therefore, if these zamindars now find that it is these mortgaged lands which will be passing out of their hands, I am sure they would have thought twice before voting for the Bill. If I am wrong I would like to be corrected: I do not claim any immunity from mistake. I am taking Mir Maqbool's own figures and he built a great argument on this point the other day when he referred to the figures in the Punjab Banking Enquiry Committee's report, on page 827, if my memory serves me right. Now I have a great suspicion that these gentlemen were not informed of the true state of affairs and probably they were led into agreement by a wrong representation that it was the baria really who would suffer: a few people would lose 5 per cent. and the baria would lose 95 per cent. Now you cry you are making a sacrifice: but like the saying of a wise man and like the eating of an 'amla' you will realise a little later what it means when mortgaged lands pass out of your hands. I am only pointing out, whether you are prepared to make a sacrifice or not, that it is no improvement upon the Bill, that along with the baria you also butcher the Jat who innocently invested his money in a mortgage knowing that the mortgage would not be set aside, because he paid the money before the Registrar and considered it to be pucca and had been sleeping over it.

3 P.M.

Then, Sir, there is another mischievous omission in the Bill and that is the absence of any provision for compensation. Several amendments were proposed on the point but were rejected. If a person takes land on mortgage one of the conditions in the mortgage may be that he can sink a well, that he can even build buildings to a certain extent and thus much money might have been spent. And now when the mortgage passes out of his hands with interest at Rs. 1-10-8 per annum he gets nothing for these improvements and the mortgagor gets this advantage without having paid a penny. Then we find that the civil courts are absolutely shut out. Those who are afraid of going to courts are the people with a guilty conscience, people who have something to be afraid of and people who are afraid of the light of the day and want to do things in the dark so that the lime light of the courts may not fall on their nefarious doings. It is this class of people who avoid courts. People who are honest are not afraid of courts of law. Here are these gentlemen who shut out the jurisdiction of all civil courts and the Honourable Minister for Revenue takes pride in it. He probably regards it as one of the most glorious features of the Bill that he has placed before the House. This is the measure which these Honourable Ministers want us to pass. In a civilised country, those gentlemen would not have dared to think of such a measure. Unless everything was turned topsyturvy and unless they had Bolshevism spread over the country and unless old institutions, old laws, old customs and old traditions were swept away no one would have thought of bringing forward such a measure if he was in his senses and if he was not drunk with that power which circumstances have placed in his hands. With these words I oppose the motion that the Honourable Minister for Revenue has moved.

Mr. Speaker : If we are able to finish this motion as well as the adjournment motion, the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill will be taken up.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Lahore City, General, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I rise to say something with regard to the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill. I may at once say that the attitude of the Government with regard to this Bill and other Bills brought before the House in this session has been very uncompromising. On every occasion we have brought forward amendments with a view to removing the defects in these Bills, we have been told, not that the defects are not there, but that the attitude of the Congress Party appears to be not to give any help to the poor. It has also been said that these Bills which are intended to render help to the peasants, whose blood has been sucked and who are now mere skeletons have been opposed by the Congress Party in order to favour the money-lenders. These and similar other words have been used to bring a bad name to the Congress and I may say that I could retort by saying much worse words, but it is not in my line. And to be frank I do not feel justified in saying anything of that sort because I feel that that blood runs in my veins which has been produced by the wheat and grain produced and supplied to us by these peasants and that I will be doing great injury to the good name of the peasantry in the province if I say anything of that sort by way of retort. Therefore, I resist that temptation and proceed to examine briefly in what form the present Bill was first introduced and what shape was given to it by the select committee and in what final form it is sought to be passed. But before I begin to discuss these different forms which the Bill has taken at different stages I would like to remind the Unionist Party of the promises which they made when they fought the elections and when they placed a particular programme before the people of the Punjab. I think I will do well if, with your permission Sir, I read the printed manifesto of that Party before the House. The objects as stated in that manifesto of this Party were —

[Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava.]

(a) To develop national self-respect—

- (i) to press for economy at the centre, i.e., the Government of India;
- (ii) to insist on reduction of military expenditure without reducing the Indian element in the Army;
- (iii) to secure release of income-tax for the most pressing needs of the provinces and
- (iv) to insist for a policy regarding customs and duties so as to afford the greatest encouragement to the agricultural producer and the industrialist without injuring the interests of the consumer;
- (b) to encourage independence of thought and freedom of speech and to discourage sacrifice of public interests to personal ends;
- (c) to promote the interests of masses without undue encroachment on the interest of capitalists, big land-holders and monied people;
- (d) to take up economic reconstruction and re-organisation of agricultural and industrial life of the province so as to cope with the problem of unemployment;
- (e) to study and promote the commercial interests of the province;
- (f) to overhaul the educational system in all its branches;
- (g) to stand by the Punjab Alienation of Land Act as a measure for the protection of backward classes;
- (h) to promote industries with special emphasis upon cottage industry in rural areas so as to provide supplementary means of income to rural population;
- (i) to improve methods of marketing, including the reforms of objectionable market usages and practices;
- (j) to effect rural uplift by infusing the real and enlightened spirit in village communities and making every village a unit of true social and national life;
- (k) (i) to secure purity of administration;
- (ii) to distribute fairly and equitably the burden of taxation;
- (iii) to eliminate all excess in the cost of administration so as to provide funds for beneficent activities; and
- (iv) to ensure religious and cultural integrity of each community as the best basis of lasting national unity; denying the claims of any community to dictate to other communities and in the case of conflicts, settling the disputes and differences on the principles of toleration.

These are the objects which the Unionist Party, at the time of elections, said it would make every effort to achieve. Now I shall examine which of these objects these Bills are intended to achieve. I wish I am allowed to say a few words with regard to each of these objects and to show how this Party has gone behind those promises, but I know that I will be ruled out of order and, therefore, I will content myself with saying that none of the objects stated above will be secured by any of these Bills. I put this question to the Ministerial Party and to the sponsors of these Bills to say sincerely whether they really feel that any of their objects will be attained by any of these Bills. I am sure and I can say without waiting for the answer that they feel in their heart of hearts that they are going the wrong way.

In support of my contention I may refer the House to the statement of objects and reasons in which it is said that—

A number of mortgages of land made by members of agricultural tribes before the 8th June, 1901, i.e., the date on which the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, came into force, are still in existence in spite of the fact that the mortgage money has been realised many times over from the profits of the land. The Bill is intended to make provision for the termination of such mortgages, on payment of reasonable compensation, where necessary, and for the restitution of possession of the land mortgaged.

Sir, the object of the Government in moving this Bill was, as is apparent from the statement of object and reasons, not to benefit the poor zamindars but to further exploit the distinction between agriculturists and non-agriculturists. The intention was, however, carefully concealed.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : On a point of order, Sir, I am very reluctant to interrupt the honourable member. We are now discussing the third reading of the Bill. I submit we have to discuss the Bill as it is sought to be passed and not as it was originally introduced.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : It was the Government's intention to benefit the big zamindar irrespective of his vast property, his high position in life and his being a factory owner. This is why the original intention of the Government was not to take away the lands mortgaged before 1901, which were in the possession of big zamindars. I want to point out that a poor non-agriculturist who is a tiller of the soil is far better than a big zamindar who does not till his land with his own hands and gets fat by usurping the poor zamindars' lands. The big zamindar, Sir, is a blood-sucker as out of the money which he makes in several ways he tries to purchase the lands of the poor and thus expropriates them. But the Government wanted to benefit only the capitalists and big land-holders. But they were clever enough to do all this under the cloak of helping the poor and petty agriculturists. Sir, I submitted at the time of reference of this Bill to the select committee that the poor zamindars would not benefit by this Bill even if their lands mortgaged before 1901 were restored to them. I submitted that real good could be done to the zamindar only if facilities were provided to him to raise money in the hour of need. It is possible, nay probable, that a person who has land is more in need of money than anybody else. He wants money to improve his farming. Has the Government made any arrangements to provide him with loans at the time when he requires money? In all civilized countries such an arrangement has been made. Even in our country the Bombay Government has provided for an opportunity for the zamindar to raise loans on reasonable rates of interest. Five or seven crores of rupees have been deposited with the Agricultural Bank to give loans.

Then, if the Government is really desirous of helping the poor zamindars, have they thought of introducing any changes in the system of collecting land revenue? Are they prepared to exempt the same things from attachment if land revenue is to be recovered which are exempt so far as the execution of a civil decree is concerned? It is a well-known fact that since 1929-30, the years of unprecedented economic depression, the zamindar has been continuing in a bad monetary condition. The prices of his agricultural produce are phenomenally low. All the jewellery he had has been sold to meet the Government demands for land revenue and ahiana. Gold worth hundreds of crores of rupees has left the shores of India since the period of depression set in, and all this gold has come out of the zamindars' homes.

Mr. Speaker : The motion is that the Bill be passed. So, its discussion should be restricted to the contents of the Bill.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : Sir, I propose to test the value of this Bill in view of the requirements of the case to which it is intended to be applied. I was talking of the difficulties of the poor zamindars. I was pointing out that this Bill will not solve his difficulties. I was, therefore, not irrelevant. The other point which I wish to urge before this House is this. Has the Government made any provision that the lands redeemed on account of this Bill will not leave the hands of the poor zamindars so that they may not become again destitute? The state of affairs in the country is this that the zamindar is poor and needy. He shall have to raise money for his needs. Are you putting him beyond the range of needs by passing this Bill? Where is the guarantee that he will not part with the land which you are restoring to him to-day? Has the Government made holdings, which can hardly be called "economic holdings" inalienable? If they have not done so, and they have certainly not done so, although the Premier was talking the other day of introducing another useful measure, where is the guarantee that the land now restored to the zamindar will not be again mortgaged, given on long lease for 20 years or even sold? Nobody is going to purchase land from zamindar except agriculturists or money-lenders who have made heaps of money by money-lending. Only these persons would be able to purchase land according to the proposed Bill and so every sale would be made to big zamindars or big money-lenders. It is quite obvious that if this Bill becomes an Act only rural magnates and big land-lords would reap benefit. Sir, what is being done for the good of poor peasantry in the world is this; the minimum price of produce is going to be changed and much is being done for raising the price of produce, so that marketing may be improved by so doing. It is very strange that the Government is trying to stop every kind of fraud but it does not really care to cut off the very root of the disease. It is right to say that peasants lack healthy blood and transfusion of blood is also possible and practicable. But what we really object is that it would not be justifiable to put blood into a zamindar who is already healthy and who has already plenty of blood in his body. Do you know what would be the result? The blood-pressure of that big-bellied zamindar would be thus raised and it would be more dangerous for him. It is very regrettable that those amendments which were submitted at the time of reference of this Bill to the select committee were not accepted at all by the Government. My submission is that real good can be done to the zamindar only if the prices of produce be kept under control by the Government who should be very careful in fixing such prices as may go to benefit the peasantry a lot. This has been done only in one country, i.e., Germany. I read out to you what has been done in that country :—

The land under the Erbhof (Economic) Holdings) shall not be charged, alienated, or subjective to any executive action.

What have our Government done for the poor peasantry? Our Government have introduced this Bill according to which a petty zamindar can neither mortgage nor sell his land to a petty zamindar. If he is willing to do so he shall have to seek the favour of some big zamindar, the sucker of the blood of petty zamindars. I would like to submit that this kind of Bill can be passed by that Government which does not care a twopence for poor zamindars. If we send some useful amendments, everybody is aware how they are treated. Sir, every amendment of ours has been thrown to the wind and every request made by us turned down by the Government. Our one suggestion was that Government may apply this legislation to those mortgages which had been made before 1901. But none paid any heed to our suggestion, and this amendment met with a sad fate. I do not know what figures Raja Sahib wanted from the Government. At the time of introducing this Bill in the House no facts and figures at all were provided by the Government whereas it is very necessary for a responsible Government to take facts and figures into consideration in order to know as to how many people would be benefited and how many would stand to lose. But our Government have not done so.

Premier : We have got figures.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : The Honourable the Premier says that he has got figures.

Premier : Communitywise.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : We do not want communitywise figures. We ask, why did not the Government provide them at the proper time? We want to know how many mortgages were made before 1901.

Sir, let me now present facts and figures which our Premier wants to conceal from the Honourable House. I have got them from Agricultural Statistics issued by the Board of Economic Inquiry. From 1896—1935 the figures available are regarding usufructuary mortgages and the number of mortgages made afterwards is between 1,102,734 and 1,171,750 acres and the excess of land redeemed is 714,437 acres. It is clear from these figures that up to 1926 more lands were mortgaged than actually redeemed. The land mortgaged up to 1926-27 is 1,171,750 acres more land was mortgaged and less was redeemed. Sir, I tell you the excess of land redeemed is 714,437 acres. So the balance is 2,050,097 acres (mortgaged land). During the years 1908—1935 the total price of land held as usufructuary mortgages is Rs. 1,12,50,28,204 and price of land redeemed is Rs. 58,84,83,301 and the price of balance of land mortgaged is Rs. 53,65,44,903. From these figures it can easily be calculated how poor the zamindar is. Sir, these figures are worth consideration. It is obvious from them that poor zamindars could not do anything except give their land on mortgage during the years 1927—30. Under these circumstances I beg to ask the Government whether it does not behove our so-called zamindars Government to extend its helping hand to the poor, down-trodden zamindar. It would have been very fair on the part of the Government if they had decreased the interest taken on those mortgages from the zamindar and helped him in redeeming his land. But our Government is not prepared to do so.

Besides, I would like to mention another point here and it is this. What is the value of the land that was mortgaged between the years 1903 and 1938 and what is the value of the land that has been redeemed during these years? I want to give the relevant figures about this matter.

[Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargana.]

1,125,028,204 acres were mortgaged. The value of the land mortgaged during this period is 98,85,44,908 rupees. Is the Government prepared to extend the operation of this Bill so as to cover these cases of mortgage as well? We want to press this demand simply because if this is accepted the poverty-stricken agriculturists would stand to gain by it. In the present form the Bill is defective as it will only benefit the rich zamindars. The Government can ill-afford to see the big land-lords adversely affected by their laws. In fact they are out to work for the aggrandisement of the rich and not do anything for the amelioration of the condition of the poor. The treasuries of the Government which are filled by that money which the poor agriculturists earn after working extremely hard, cannot spare any amount to be spent for the good of the zamindars. But the Government is always ready to pass such measures as would create bad blood among various classes and would throw dust in the eyes of the innocent people. In fact the masses are being hoodwinked.

During the last Budget session I observed that while the Government easily recovered large amounts of land revenue from the poor tillers of the soil, it did not occur to it that the impoverished agriculturists had to part with their last penny in order to fulfill their obligation. The Government thinks that the people are rich who regularly pay off their dues. Only a poor man who lives a simple life and has nothing to wear but a loin cloth can appreciate the sufferings of the poor and not Sir Sikander Hyat who leads a luxurious life. In spite of all this it is strange that some honourable members in this House have the audacity to cast aspersions on that great man, Mahatma Gandhi who really feels for the poor. What the Congress means to do for the poor is clearly laid down in the manifesto that it has already published. In keeping with that spirit we proposed that those landholders who pay Rs. 800 or more as land revenue should be excluded from the operation of this Bill. But it is a thousand pities that the Government has not been able to accept even this most reasonable proposal. I may make it clear that this amendment was calculated to help the poor and exclude the rich from taking any advantage of it. We had set up the standard of rich and poor zamindars. But the Government, seeing that this amendment was not going to benefit the rich landlords, rejected it because the policy of the Unionists is to sponsor the cause of the big landholders. This used to be the policy of the British Government and now our own Government is also following in their footsteps. It does not intend to help the poor. Had it been favourably disposed towards the poor, it would have readily agreed to this amendment. It could also compensate the poor mortgagors where necessary. But they have given ample proof of their sympathy for the rich and their lack of sympathy for the poor. Again, the Government grants jagirs to the wealthy people. Instead of doing so the Government should grant land to poor agriculturists as there is large area of land with the Government. It is no use granting jagirs to land lords. That land should be given to the poor mortgagor or the poor mortgagee as the case may be by way of compensation. We wanted that this land should be redeemed which bigger zamindars have taken away from the poor agriculturists. We have been, on the other hand accused of having put forward this salutary proposal. That is hardly fair. The Government did not agree to compensate the assignee, either of the mortgagees or of the mortgagor. But hardly had the Government rejected this proposal when it readily agreed to compensate those who had effected any improvement in the land while it was in their possession. May I ask if these transactions were not fraudulent in which the Government has agreed to give compensation to the mortgagees or the middlemen? It must be an equally fraudulent transaction but the only difference seems to be that in this case the agriculturists stand to gain by it. But if an agriculturist sunk a well or arranged for a Jhalow or dug some channel into his land, he must have done so to benefit himself and not to enhance the value of the land. There is no logic or reason in this attitude of the Government that they should compensate one class of people and ignore the claims of those who belong to another.

I wish to bring another point to your notice and that is that in this Bill all the powers have been vested in the executive. I may submit that if they had declared that all the civil courts had become corrupt and that they expected no justice from them and that in spite of the fact that they are working under them, still they had no hope of their betterment, then I would have understood the logic of their argument of vesting all the powers in the executive officials. But, Sir, the case is quite the reverse of it. When any question about the civil courts comes under discussion, the members on the Treasury benches rise up in their seats and defend them like anything. Moreover when any question is raised in regard to their salaries my friends opposite plead vehemently their cause and they ask us that as they have to pay them so much money by way of salaries, therefore, the House should pass their budget and should not decrease anything. The arguments that they submit in their favour are that they have to pay them so much and so they are powerless to reduce the land revenue. But may I question, what is the necessity of civil courts when a deputy commissioner is more than sufficient to carry on the work of the civil courts as well? In this connection I am constrained to remark that all the Bills that have been passed recently give very extensive powers to the deputy commissioners. In fact the deputy commissioners will decide the fates of so many people. We on this side of the House moved an amendment that my friends had given so wide powers to the deputy commissioners, that at least the right of hearing appeals should be given to a judicial officer. But, Sir, our amendment was turned down. May I question my friends opposite whether it is fair and proper for them that they should turn down the just demands of the Opposition? If my friends over there think the judicial officers to be corrupt and bad people, why do they not prevent other people from going into their courts and file suits?

Then, Sir, we suggested that just as a procedure is laid down in the Tenancy Act, in the same way a procedure be laid down under which the deputy commissioners should dispose of their cases. But my friends opposite turned down even this harmless proposal of ours and they could not bring themselves up to accept our suggestion. If they cannot agree to a proposal at least they should make themselves bold enough to agree to this fact that if they think the civil courts to be corrupt they should have the courage to abolish them. But we know that they need the civil courts and the police, due to whose tortures the poor people are even forced to commit suicide, in order to prevent the zamindars from asking their just rights. Therefore, Sir, side by side with the powerful deputy commissioners they want to keep the civil courts as well. If the courts are bad, why does the Government allow people to file their suits in those courts? I request the Government to save those people from those courts as well. If they desire only to save the rural people why should they not save the city people from them? But, Sir, I think that there are other reasons which are dormant in the hearts of my friends opposite. In fact everybody knows how the executive business of the Government is carried on. We all know that when a magistrate goes to hear a case he consults the deputy commissioner and then decides the case in the light of the deputy commissioner's remarks. There is no denying the fact that he always works under the instructions of the deputy commissioner.

Now, Sir, the object of the Government in passing these Bills is to prevent the people from fighting for their rights. I say let them not give these rights to the people but, Sir, they should also save other people from the same things from which they desire to escape. If you allow me, Sir, I would like to say a word to the Honourable Premier. There was a time when the name of Sir Sikander was synonymous with justice, but, Sir, after passing these Bills the Honourable Premier wants to enforce his Sikander-Shahi on the people. I say they are at liberty to carry on their Government in a way that pleases them but at the same time it becomes the duty of the Opposition to move such amendments which are meant for the benefit of the masses. I request the Government that they should do such things which are useful for the zamindars and that they should not try to benefit the big landlords at the cost of the poor. I tell them that to-day they think they are in a majority but they should remember the fact that any government which does not do things for the benefit of the masses, cannot go on for ever. One day it must crash down. A government which does not do things for the benefit of the masses cannot be called a responsible government. Our Government is benefiting the big landlords on the pretext of benefiting the poor. This Bill, I am constrained to remark, is against the programme of the Unionist Party and it is not being passed for the benefit of the small zamindars. We, on this side of the House, have tried to do some good to the poor people. For example, when the Bill was referred to the select committee we proposed that certain amendments should be incorporated in it and in view of those suggestions the Government should see if they can benefit the people or not. But, Sir, it is apparent from the attitude of my friends opposite that they never liked to accept our proposals. They may do so, because to-day we are in a minority still we have at heart the welfare of the masses. We are not such people who in spite of the fact that they are rich people would still try to benefit themselves under the guise of benefiting the masses.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): Sir, at this stage usually the speeches made are of a very brief duration and of a character which is confined more or less to the general principles of the Bill.

My friend the Leader of the Opposition, however, has delivered a long speech and he has gone into details most of which were not at all relevant to the motion before us and some of which savoured of a kind of apology for what he and his party had been doing during the course of the discussion on these Bills. However, I will come to his speech later. Let me first begin with the speech of my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, who started with saying that this Bill was a measure which was nothing less than a measure of usurpation and expropriation. These are the words which he used. But if you remember the days when the Land Alienation Act was passed, we heard identical arguments from the opponents of the Land Alienation Act which was then termed a black Bill, a Bill which was going to suck the blood of the non-agriculturist, which was going to damn the non-agriculturists for ever in this world, a Bill which was to expropriate the poor classes who were not agriculturists.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Quite true.

Premier : Though hartals and demonstrations were not in vogue during those days, they were as much witnessed when the Land Alienation Act was passed by the Imperial Legislative Assembly and we have now also seen during the past three weeks or more meetings either imaginary or real and in bold headlines the press describing these measures as black Bills and giving accounts of hartals and if you allow me to digress just for a moment, I might mention some of the devices which were used in getting the people to shut their shops and declare hartal.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Will you also allow a contradiction of the statements which the Premier is going to make and which are not relevant to the debate but are only a digression. It will create an atmosphere which you will not like, they will not like and we ourselves will not like.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Let the Honourable Premier say what he wants to say and then I shall see.

Premier : I will draw the honourable member's attention to the ruling which has only recently been given by the Chair and I hope that he will observe the propriety of not interrupting me.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I will interrupt the Honourable Premier fifty times if you permit me and if the rules permit me. It is indeed very indecent on his part to say what he has said.

Premier : You were not here when the Speaker gave his ruling.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I have heard him. I was here.

Premier : You have disobeyed the Deputy Speaker then. (Interruptions.)

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Order, please.

Premier : I was merely pointing to the references made by my honourable friend and some members in this House with regard to the agitation, the furor, the uproar in the whole province. That is what I am replying to and I am referring to that furor and uproar and how that furor and uproar was engineered. Let me give you one instance. I saw in one newspaper that in one place a shop-keeper was told that these Bills were meant to stop the daily earnings and daily accounts of every shop-keeper. That was said to some shop-keepers to get them to support the hartal.

[Premier.]

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : Must be a lie.

Premier : It was published in a paper. (Voices : Name the paper.)

Mr. Deputy Speaker : No interruptions, please.

Premier : My honourable friend is likely to feel restive throughout my speech but I cannot help it. I know of cases of one or two shop-keepers in Simla. One of them was told that in future he will not be able to get his money from the military officers if he sells goods on credit. The other shopkeeper was told that a certain big personage was very ill and, therefore, hartal must be observed that day. I do not know whether these reports are correct or not, but I dare say, that some of them are exaggerated but on the other side my point is that the hartals, accounts of which were printed in bold headlines in the papers throughout the province were not of such magnitude and such extent as those papers tried to depict. I admit that the classes who are going to be affected by these measures are naturally feeling restive and feeling a certain amount of anxiety that their days of exploitation are over. I have sympathy with them and I do not grudge them these hartals and boycotts but to say that these hartals extend to 50 per cent. of the population of the province is, I think, a baseless assertion, an assertion which cannot bear scrutiny for a moment. I am certain that it is those forty or fifty thousand people who are going to be affected directly by this legislation, that are described as the majority of the province, and I make bold to say that ninety per cent. of the province will be helped by this measure so as to get them out of the clutches of the people who have exploited the masses for centuries in the past. (Loud applause.) Attempts have been made in the press, and I am sure that they will prove to be futile attempts, to make this question a communal one. Attempts were made to give out that the Governor's special powers with regard to minorities would be invoked and utilised in regard to these measures. It is not for me to say what decision His Excellency the Governor or those higher up might take. I saw the other day a rather cogent article in the "Civil and Military Gazette" by a Punjabi which put forward irrefutable arguments against that attempt to make it a communal question or a question which concerned the minorities. My honourable friends cannot and I challenge them that they cannot gainsay the fact that these Bills affect not only Hindus and Sikhs, but Muslims and every other community in the province, whether it is the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill, whether it is the Money-lenders Bill or whether it is the Alienation of Land (Amendment) Bill. All these Bills will affect every community. It may affect one community more than any other community, but that does not mean that it is a communal measure. It merely means that one community is more or less engaged in a profession in which it preponderates. That happens in every walk of life and in every profession. (Interruptions.)

Mr. Deputy Speaker : I would request the honourable members not to interrupt. If the honourable members have to ask a question, one of them should stand up and ask the question through the chair.

Premier : My honourable friend says that it is not a communal measure but it is a class measure. I should like to have the definition of a class measure before I can answer his question but if by class measure he means that it is going to affect the richer classes among all communities, then I entirely agree with him that it is going to affect adversely some of the richer classes in all communities and not only of one community. If he means that it is going to affect one community or one class at the expense of another, then I am sure that his interpretation is wholly erroneous and based on wholly erroneous ideas. My friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang went on to say, rather one of his arguments in his previous orations was as to why the 8th June had been selected and he asked "was this a sacred and sacrosanct date"? I think my honourable friend was not here when I answered his argument. I did say that 8th June, 1901, was the date on which the Land Alienation Act was enforced in this province and we are now dealing only with those mortgages which were effected prior to 1901. I further submitted on the floor of this House that after 1901 the position had been reversed. It was often a bigger owner who had mortgaged his land to the smaller agriculturists. That was the position and that is why we have at the present moment confined our measure to mortgages which were entered into prior to 1901. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Your authority for this ?) I gave you the figures the other day. I told you that the average area mortgaged is 2½ acres now. My honourable friend also went on to say that if this measure is allowed to be passed to-day, some more socialistically inclined Minister might bring in a law to-morrow which will mean real exploitation of land which has been sold centuries ago. My honourable friend must remember that that thing has happened in several other countries and it is because we do not wish that doctrine to be applied here that we are bringing in these measures as a safety valve rather than those forced measures which will go to the extreme length and hit him harder. (Loud cheers). He has absolutely forgotten that. My honourable friends opposite will probably wish to see here a state of affairs where everybody's land is taken away and put on a nationalistic basis and everybody is compelled to till some land and the income is to go to the exchequer of the Soviet where there would be a small oligarchy with an autocrat. (Interruptions.)

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Is the Honourable Premier referring to Russia ?

Premier : I am referring to the Soviet system. He further went on to say that it was going to affect one particular community and particularly those poor mortgagees who had taken land from mortgagors several years ago and these poor men would be hard hit. That argument was answered several times by me and other speakers in the House. According to my figures these persons have already benefited to the extent of anything from 400 per cent. upwards, but apart from that, as I asserted yesterday, it is my fixed conviction that as a result of this legislation, when it is enforced, you will find that the biggest land lords will be the worst sufferers. That is my fixed conviction but that has not in any way stopped me or made me hesitate in bringing forward this legislation.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Does it mean that the mortgages are held by 86 people or something like that ?

Premier : I cited two instances in this House which were of mortgages held by big land-owners who will suffer to the tune of several lakhs of rupees. My honourable friend went on to give rather a fallacious argument supported by figures which were even more fallacious when he said that if you introduce this system of damdupal, of twice the amount originally advanced, it would work out at  $1/8$  per cent. per annum. That was his calculation. I gave the House exact figures and calculations based on facts and not on theories or imagination as my honourable friend has done. If you take the income from land or the yield from land at an average figure of 8 per cent. per annum and multiply it by 4 because ordinarily money is advanced up to 25 per cent. of the price of land mortgaged, it means 12 per cent. per annum of the money advanced. That calculation showed that the land taken out of the possession of their original owners, would yield to the mortgagees anything from 480 to 700 per cent. in forty years or more. That is the real basis of the calculation and these are the exact figures; it is not  $1/8$  but it is 480 per cent. Naturally that argument does not appeal to my friend. Nevertheless I assert that that argument is correct and is irrefutable.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : May I ask one question ?

Mr. Deputy Speaker : Not unless the Premier gives way.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : If he does not, it means he cannot answer the question.

Premier : No, I do not want to answer any irrelevant question at this stage.

Lala Bhim Sen Sachar : May I draw your attention to Standing Order No. 88 which says that in the course of discussion a member can get up and ask the member in charge any question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : It is not obligatory on the honourable member, who is speaking, to answer that question.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : The question can be put; he may or may not answer it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker : The question can be put only if the honourable member who is speaking is prepared to give way.

Premier : I was submitting that his next argument was: now look at it, what has the House done; what has this majority party done? They have removed the discrimination between the agriculturists and non-agriculturists prior to 1901, and it would mean that they have taken together both the agriculturists and the non-agriculturists. He said that probably by wrongly representing that it is this basis only who would suffer and not the agriculturist, we got our party to agree to this alteration. My honourable friend has a very short memory. He has forgotten that in his first speech he said that he strongly criticised this provision which discriminated between an agriculturist and a non-agriculturist. Now he is eating back his own words, on this very Bill and trying to blame me for removing discrimination. He is well aware that on the first day when this Bill was moved I got up in the House and gave an undertaking that if they wanted discrimination to be removed I would be prepared to remove the discrimination and to see that there was no discrimination prior to 1901 and that was done.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Up to 1938.

Premier : I am advised at present that it is not necessary because there has been no exploitation after that. (Hear, hear.)

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : 'Ghar ki ghar men rahi'.

Premier : Exactly. My friend says 'ghar ki ghar men rahi'. That is the very principle of the Land Alienation Act which he may not like (hear, hear). Then my honourable friend went on to say that civil courts have been barred and shut out and this argument was taken up by my friend, the Leader of the Opposition, also. Naturally I believe both of them feel equally on the point and perhaps several other members on that side too. But what have we actually done, with regard to this particular matter? We have not introduced any innovation and I have laboured this point on the floor of the House practically every day, during the course of the discussion on the Bill. We are doing nothing new at all. My honourable friend is aware that so far as the redemption of mortgages is concerned, power is given to the collector.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : The Honourable Premier goes on making misrepresentations.

Premier : Certainly not. I am not making any misrepresentation. I warned my honourable friends opposite that they would feel restive and would continue to be restive. I do not blame them. I was pointing out that nothing new has been done. There are several important enactments in the province, where all these powers have been entrusted to the collector or the commissioner or the financial commissioner. You take the Land Alienation Act, the most important enactment, where the collector has to adjudicate on matters of great importance and on matters relating to very large amounts financially and yet we have not heard a single complaint during the last 37 years with regard to the working of that Act. Even if occasionally a mistake is made it is either rectified by the commissioner or the financial commissioner. My honourable friend wound up his peroration by saying that my friend, the Honourable the Revenue Minister has said we will amend the Bill if there are any defects or if we find there is any hardship in the working of the Act itself. As a matter of fact he said nothing of the sort. What he said was, later on if there are any defects in the Bill, Government would consider those defects and if necessary bring in an amending measure; for instance, take the Land Alienation Act or other measures recently passed. We have been trying to stop certain loopholes in that enactment. If there are any new loopholes and hardships, naturally Government would be prepared to consider them and if necessary bring in an amending measure. My honourable friend is trying to raise a hue and cry according to the Persian saying آب نه ديدم موزه کشيدم. He went on saying, if you bring in an amending Bill afterwards where is the use? How is it going to help the people when their blood has already flown in ditches? These are the words which he used.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I said 'flowed into the ditches.'

Premier : I thank him for the correction. When blood is flowing in the ditches where would be the use of such an amendment? As I said in the beginning these were exactly identical arguments given by several people when the Land Alienation Act was amended; that is merely repeating history. History repeats itself. Their incarnation is still in the shape of Dr. Gokul

[Premier.]

Chand Narang and it reminds me of the story of a small boy who was beating a bigger boy and at the same time raising the whole street by shouting that the other fellow was beating him. That is the kind of argument my honourable friend opposite has advanced. I do not blame him. The class he represents cannot help it. (Hear, hear.)

Now, I turn to the rather lengthy speech which my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, made. I would not detain the House very long. I will only take a few salient points in his speech and try to meet his arguments, or where those arguments were not based on facts, to repudiate them. He started by reading the creed of my party. I could see that some of his back-benchers were getting uncomfortable about it, when he started reading that creed. I know that it is a sore point with my honourable friends opposite. They know that our creed stands out supreme in this country, (hear, hear) and that it is better than any creed adopted by any of the political parties. He said, "what have the Government done with regard to this rather grandiose scheme to implement this promise?" It is not for me to answer that question. They know it fully well. As a matter of fact—my honourable friends also know fully well what this Government has done during this short period of 18 months. During this period we have, to mention nothing else, brought in these Bills. During this short period we have done what other provinces will not be able to do in a decade. (Hear, hear.) But what we have actually done is well-known to the world and it is well-known to the province. Those people, who had been slumbering and those ignorant masses who had been hoodwinked hitherto, will no longer remain ignorant after this measure comes into force. It may be one of the main reasons why my honourable friend opposite tried to make a wholly irrelevant speech, a speech wholly opposed to the declared attitude of the Congress party. His main point was that in our creed we have said that we would try to help the small man, the small peasant and the small labourer without undue encroachment on the interest of the big capitalist or the big landlord. I ask him, what is wrong with it? Our creed is not expropriation of property of other people. Our creed is to try and raise the status of poor peasants and poor labourers, the down-trodden people, so that they may also walk with their heads erect as respectable people in this province. This is our creed. If we encroach on the interests of big landlords, that encroachment will not be unjust. That is my creed and I stand by it and every single member of my party stands by it. Incidentally, that part of my creed will also answer the question of my friend, Dr. Gokul Chand Narang and it will allay his anxiety with regard to expropriation of land or transfer of land which had been sold long ago. There is a safeguard and there is a guarantee that no such thing will be done by my party as long as we are in power. (Hear, hear.)

My honourable friend later went on to say — and I thought that he was getting beyond the delicate ground consistent with the position of his party — that this measure was not meant to help the poor agriculturists but to retain the distinction between the agriculturists and the non-agriculturists. I daresay that my honourable friend was very near the truth. Originally, the Bill as drafted, had certainly a discrimination between agriculturists and non-agriculturists. That his now been removed. But if my honourable friend wishes to torpedo the Land Alienation Act altogether, then he is living in a fool's paradise. He has strongly stressed the point that he should like to see the discrimination of agriculturists and non-agriculturists set up by the Land Alienation Act totally removed. I am sure that that discrimination can only be removed when the agriculturist is either married or is not alive any longer. The Bill in its original form certainly related to those mortgages, which had been executed by agriculturists in favour of non-agriculturists. But as you are aware, on the very first day, I gave an assurance to the House that if they wanted to remove that discrimination, I would be glad to help them and that I would be prepared to accept an amendment to that effect. You are aware, Sir, that in the Bill as it now stands we have removed that discrimination up to 1901; that is rather an important point on which I have repeatedly laid stress that up to that time, since there was no Land Alienation Act, there was no difference between the agriculturists and non-agriculturists and there is no harm to remove that discrimination now, but incidentally the Bill in its original form was useful in helping us to test the bona fides of those who sit opposite and you know perfectly well that during the course of discussion and voting, how that test was applied and how they came out of it. You are aware, Sir, that several members spoke vehemently against the most important provisions of this Bill and some amendments were moved on which my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, laid so much stress and said, "We had brought in certain amendments to remove that discrimination and to help poor people but they were thrown out by the Government." Let me give you an instance and remind the House of the nature of some of the amendments moved by my honourable friends opposite. One amendment says:—

Provided that nothing in this section shall affect a decree of a civil court passed in a mortgage suit instituted before the commencement of this Act.

There is no date in this Act which bars suits from being instituted. I believe that the object of this amendment is that as soon as this Bill becomes law or sometimes before it actually becomes law, every mortgagee should institute a suit and defeat this Bill. That was the amendment, which according to my honourable friend opposite, was in the interest of poor zamindars and poor labourers and mortgagors. This is the kind of amendments which they moved to help those poor people. (Sardar Hari Singh: Name any amendment.) My honourable friend opposite says, 'Name any of those amendments.' I can assure him that he has not moved any such amendment. I know it perfectly well that he and those of his school of thought, who have got feelings for those poor people, will not move any of those amendments. It is the other members of the Congress party who profess to sympathise with the poor agriculturists, who moved those amendments. Another amendment which was moved says:—

Provided that nothing in this Act shall apply to—

- (a) members of the Punjab Legislative Council or Assembly; and
- (b) any transferee or assignee of a mortgagor;

which inter alia means that no lands should be taken out of the possession of those mortgagees who are members of the Assembly. It is not an amendment tabled by my party but by a member of the great Congress party.

[Premier.]

That was another amendment which was moved very likely with a view to help the poor people. Similarly, if you look through the list of amendments, you will find various amendments which were moved by my honourable friends opposite, who say they wanted to improve the Bill. But there were other amendments which, instead of trying to improve the Bill, wanted to restrict the scope of the Bill or altogether to torpedo it.

Now, Sir, my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition complained that Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath asked for some figures from the Government, but the Government did not supply them to him. I may inform the honourable member that Raja Sahib wanted figures regarding mortgagors and mortgagees communautaire as there are some members in this House who are under the impression that this Bill is going to be applied to one particular community and that it is a communal measure. May I know whether my friend wants similar figures? I hope he unwittingly tried to support that argument. Those figures which Raja Sahib wanted were not easily available as they related to mortgages which were effected prior to 1901, perhaps 30 years beyond that year. I have issued urgent instructions to the deputy commissioners to collect those figures, if possible, and I will supply those figures to Raja Sahib and make a present of those figures to my friend, the Leader of the Opposition also.

My honourable friend also quoted certain figures which related to the years 1896—1901. I believe, he has not seen this report which I have got here and which clearly gives the number of mortgages effected from 1896—1901. During those 5 years there were 235 thousand acres of cultivable land redeemed and 337 thousand acres mortgaged. There will be very few mortgages of any large area still subsisting. However, it is the number of such large mortgages which is of importance and not the actual area involved.

My honourable friend also quoted certain figures which related to 1928 and subsequent years. If he were a zamindar he would have known perfectly well that the slump set in during 1928-29, and the figures for 1928-29 are for that slump period, an unprecedented slump in prices which we had never witnessed before in this country.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.)

If my honourable friend were a zamindar he would have known that during that period the poor zamindar had to mortgage his land or give his land on mustajri to clear his debts. He had nothing else left to him and being a person of honour he did not refuse to discharge his duty. If my honourable friend examines the figures for the years 1932—36, he will find that the number of redemptions is larger than the number of mortgages. Unfortunately, there is again a slump and perhaps that phenomenon may again appear and cause a great deal of anxiety which will be shared by the zamindars and the Government no less than by anybody else.

My honourable friend also brought in several other facts in his speech which are not strictly relevant to the subject under discussion, but as he has mentioned them I will just refer to them. He brought in the question of ratio and railway freight and asked, what has the Government done about them? He must be aware that I cannot do anything about the ratio even if I wanted to, that being a central subject and the railway freights are not controlled by me nor by my colleague, the Minister for Finance, they are controlled by the Railway Board. In spite of that we have passed several resolutions on many occasions just as we passed a resolution and made recommendation to the Government of India strongly pressing it to re-impose the wheat duty. My honourable friend was talking probably merely for the sake of rhetorical effect instead of on any facts and figures based on any real information. He also made a passing reference to the drain of gold from this country to other countries. We know that a huge amount of gold has passed out of our country much to our misfortune, and most of this gold went out of colony areas, areas which during the last war or post-war period amassed large amounts of money and converted into gold. But who is affected thereby? Again the poor zamindar! I know of one instance where a gentleman himself told me that his actual working capital was very small, but the rush for selling gold was so great that he employed several men who had to run between Amritsar and Rawalpindi to borrow more money. He bought gold for 19 rupees and sold for 27 at Amritsar. The poor zamindar has suffered throughout and the middlemen again stand to gain. Some of those middlemen have become millionaires. But I hope that prosperity would return to this country and I will see again zamindars laden with gold.

As a matter of fact the whole trend of the speech of my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition was a homily; a homily preached to this House not with a view to influence this House, but—(interruption). I will not say that, because he is not in the House and if I did so, it will be published in that section of the press which has been throughout opposing these measures. My honourable friend will have the benefit of seeing his arguments printed although they will not appeal to that section of the press itself, but I am sure they will be reproduced with a view to try to vindicate the position of my honourable friends opposite. He could not do anything more at this stage though he tried to do his best when this Bill was being considered and there will be no harm in rehabilitating his position to the rural masses outside whom he has tried to hoodwink.

Mr. Speaker : That expression is objectionable and should not have been used.

Premier : I bow to your ruling, Sir. But whatever my honourable friend might do now he cannot efface the record of the proceedings of this House. The proceedings will be there; they would be public property and every person would be able to read them. Perhaps, the poor peasant outside who is being duped for several years—

An honourable member : Is the Honourable Premier in order when he says that the peasant has been duped?

Mr. Speaker : It does not mean that the peasant has been duped by the honourable member.

Premier : The results of the divisions are there. On this very Bill the first division indicated that those members of the Congress party who had real sympathy with the poor peasant walked with me into the lobby and those who had only lip sympathy were either not in this House or walked in the lobby with the honourable gentleman on my right. The division lists speak eloquently with regard to the help and support which we had from these benches (pointing to the Ministerial benches) and the opposition which we received from those benches (pointing to the Opposition benches). Let me assure my honourable friends opposite that if they think that they will continue to dupe the poor simple zamindar, they are living in a fool's paradise.

I know attempts are being made by interested people outside to rehabilitate the position of certain political parties which has been shaken severely as a result of the present legislation by the Government. But I am sorry to say that the method which they pursue or intend to pursue is not in the interests of themselves or of the community or of the province as a whole. Demonstrations which might lead to trouble and might lead to a breach of the tranquillity and peace of the province will not in the long run help either themselves or anybody else in the province and I appeal to those interested parties outside who are trying to confuse issues or trying to throw dust into the eyes of people by creating trouble in other places merely to rehabilitate the position of their parties which has been shaken to its foundation and which now stands in its nakedness to the bone in the country (applause) not to pursue such methods. I warn them that they are doing the greatest disservice to their country and they would be condemned as enemies of their country. So far as we are concerned, we have no quarrel with them. Let them go on, but in constitutional ways. But if they adopt unconstitutional methods and endanger the peace and tranquillity of the province, whether they belong to this party or the other party, I cannot allow it. But I feel certain, at any rate hope, that it will not be necessary to take any strong measures, because I know that people outside, those poor ignorant masses, who have been so far duped will be able to distinguish between the real gem and the false gem, and that truth cannot long remain hidden. They will know who are their friends and who are their foes.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh (Hoshiarpur West, General, Rural) (Urdu): In spite of the fact that the Opposition honestly wanted to modify this Bill, still the Honourable Premier and his companions rejected all the amendments on the strength of their majority. Although we submitted very good proposals and one of them was that all the kisans who paid Rs. 500 as land revenue should not be allowed to benefit by this Bill, I very regretfully submit that this amendment was also rejected. I may state here for the information of the honourable members that the other day Sardar Kartar Singh moved an amendment to this effect that those zamindars who pay Rs. 500 as land revenue should not be allowed to benefit by the provisions of this Bill. But, Sir, it was also rejected, although everybody is aware of the fact that this amendment was based on the same principle which has been fixed for the land-holders constituencies in the Punjab. But in spite of the fact that all our amendments were rejected, still I have courageously stood up to support this Bill. (Hear, hear.) The fact of the matter is that the present Government has no fears from the Opposition, yet it is doing something for the good of kisans and I, therefore, would not oppose this Bill.

If we reflect on the past we would find that those persons or families who mortgaged their lands some 50 or 60 years ago and have not been able to redeem them by paying up their debts during such a long period, cannot by any stretch of imagination be called rich zamindars. If you permit me, Sir, I would submit that in the year 1912 land was selling very cheap. I perfectly remember the time when the Lyallpur Colony was established, when my grandfather was asked by the Government to take into his possession two villages. But now the conditions are such that the Government are not prepared to allot two squares of land to anybody.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is not speaking to the motion.

Chaudhri Kartar Singh : I have risen to support this Bill. With all the support that I am lending to this Bill, I would like to put a question to the Honourable Premier why he thinks it fit to threaten us again and again. I assure him that he cannot change the policy of the Opposition. He cannot create any differences amongst us. The Congress has a principle before it and it has firmly rooted that principle in our heart. I am definitely of the opinion that that principle would serve as a guiding light and will always keep us on the right path. We want to make it clear to the Unionist Party that they cannot change our policy however hard they may try. We openly declare that this Government is a government of big landholders and they are getting these Bills passed in order to serve their own ends. I may submit that when the Congress Party comes into power in the Punjab, it will take away the lands of the Tiwana and Noon families and will distribute them among the poor tillers of the soil. Then and then only it would take some forward step. I am constrained to remark that the present Government do not pay any heed to the needs of the poor people. It is their duty that instead of taking any care of the big people, who own canals, they should try to pay heed to the waterless districts of Multan and Rawalpindi and also they should gauge the bad condition of the inhabitants residing there. Sir, if you visit the area where the Tiwana canal flows you would find that even its rest-houses are lying empty and all the haga is nothing less than a desert. I would, therefore, request the Government that they should do something for the poor people as well. It is useless to help the big landholders who are already rich people. In the end I make bold to say that I and my party are with the Government, but at the same time it is the duty of the Government to give relief to the poor tillers of the soil as well.

At this stage some members rose in their places to speak and others moved closure.

Mr. Speaker : After the leaders of parties have spoken, the back-benchers are not generally called. The Leader of the Opposition has spoken and the Leader of the House has replied. Besides, I am convinced that if further speeches are allowed, generally they shall be, if not entirely, a repetition of what has already been said.

Lala Duni Chand : According to Parliamentary practice, on the 3rd reading of a Bill the debate is not to be stifled. On my part I want to assure you that we are actuated by the best of motives and it is not our desire to play to the gallery or say things which have already been said. We hope to throw new light on the question before us. We shall be grateful to you if you allow us to continue the debate.

Mr. Speaker : It is not a point of order. I do not want to stifle the voice of the minority. But when I am convinced that nothing new will be said and generally the same arguments shall be repeated, I should save the time of the House. Only one member has spoken on the Government side, whereas three members have spoken on the side of the Opposition.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : The speech of the Honourable Premier was very provocative and calls for reply on certain points and if you give us a chance to do so it would be only fair to the Opposition. The Premier should not have the last word in this case.

Mrs. J. A. Shah Nawaz : On a point of order. In the Central Assembly during the time of Sir Frederick Whyte no replies to amendments were allowed and this practice has been followed by two other Presidents. Only Sir Ibrahim Rahimtullah permitted replies to the amendments proposed. The practice in this House is that replies to amendments are allowed. What is the intention of the third reading of a Bill? Speeches may be allowed on the third reading if replies to amendments in the other cases are not allowed. But when speeches are allowed on amendments, replies are allowed both on behalf of the Government and on behalf of the Opposition and everybody is given a chance of speaking. I cannot understand why members again want to speak or are allowed to make such long speeches on the third reading of the Bill. I want your ruling on that point.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : You have been pleased to say that because the Leader has spoken the back-benchers have no right to speak. Let us understand the point clearly. You called upon the front benchers to speak according to Parliamentary practice and when back-benchers want to speak you say they cannot do so because the leaders have spoken.

Mr. Speaker : Speaking generally, when the leaders of parties have spoken and the Government has replied, the debate should end. If the back-benchers were to speak, their leaders should have waited and allowed them to speak first and then spoken themselves.

Honourable Members : Question may now be put.

Lala Sita Ram : On a point of order. The leader of my party is not here and none has spoken from our group ; so, I may be allowed to speak.

Mr. Speaker : That is not a point of order. The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill be passed.

The motion was carried.

ADJOURNMENT MOTION.

LATHI CHARGE AT AMRITSAR.

Mr. Speaker : The Assembly will now take up the discussion of the adjournment motion.

(Mr. Speaker then left the chair and it was occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker).

Sardar Harjab Singh (Hoshiarpur South, Sikh, Rural) (Punjab):
Sir, I beg to move—

That the Assembly do now adjourn.

Sir, I would like, in the first instance, to give reasons as to why the demonstration in question was staged. You all know that at present land settlement operations are in progress in the Amritsar district. The rural population of that district tried to lay their grievances before the settlement officer concerned. In this connection many public meetings were held and various resolutions were passed by the aggrieved villagers. As a result thereof deputations consisting of prominent zamindars sought interviews with higher authorities but all efforts on the part of the aggrieved kisans proved futile. It was, in fact, the duty of the settlement officer to give a patient hearing and favourable consideration to those complaints.

The second and the immediate cause of the demonstration was that the 50th and the 51st outlets on the Raya distributary have been closed since 1st June. Several representations were made to the canal authorities in the matter and various deputations were sent but nothing came out of them. At last the kisans decided to form a peaceful procession and make it pass through the streets of Amritsar so that the Government may at long last be inclined to pay heed to their grievances. In order to make the procession a complete success the President of the Bandobust Committee was put in charge of its management, and it was announced that every local committee should help in forming such a procession on the 20th instant, so that the kisan's voice might be carried to the ears of the Government.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the chair).

As soon as the Government came to know of it, it promulgated section 144 in Amritsar. But the kisans decided to break the law. I am sure the kisans were quite justified in taking this step. The formation of a procession was the only course left open to the kisans and even that was taken away from them by the promulgation of section 144. Was there any other alternative left to them than that of breaking section 144? Accordingly a jatha consisting of more than 500 men was formed which peacefully marched towards the railway bridge on the 20th instant. At 3-35 P.M. the Deputy Commissioner of Amritsar ordered the police force to resort to lathi charge on the peaceful processionists which continued for 20 or 25 minutes. I do not exaggerate if I say that blood flowed like torrents. Four honourable members of this august House have seen this appalling sight with their own eyes. I am sure that after my speech those eyewitnesses would lay the whole matter before the House. It seems to me that the Government by shedding the blood of innocent persons has wreaked vengeance for some previous misdeeds of the processionists. Last time, in Lahore, certain people formed a procession and marched towards the bungalows of the Honourable Premier in order to lay their grievances before him. As it happened on a day when the Assembly was in session the Government could not take any drastic measure against the processionists. This time, I am sure, the Government has wreaked vengeance for that demonstration. It was all done in a vindictive spirit. The terrifying scene which we beheld yesterday, the 20th instant, on the railway bridge reminded us of the tragic drama which was staged some 20 years ago in the Jallianwala Bagh. Some honourable members have brought with them certain broken pieces of lathis used by the police. I believe they would lay them on the table of the House. These lathis with iron bands around them were broken into pieces by using them on the heads of the poor kisans and not against wooden logs.

The Deputy Commissioner not only ordered the lathi charge but he himself used one and with effective force. The proof of this can easily be obtained by examining the clothes of the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Macdonald as they were besmeared with the blood of poor victims of his caprice. If the Government was bent upon a lathi charge on the peaceful processionists it behoved them to make necessary arrangements for proper medical aid and ambulance cars for the injured persons. I make bold to say that the Government signally failed to do so and has given definite proof of its callousness. The Deputy Commissioner in question has no right to be called a human being. He seemed to be the devil of a man. Only a man entirely deprived of human sympathy can brandish lathis like a devil.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : On a point of order. I do not wish to interrupt my honourable friend who is speaking. I am sure there are many points on which we may be sharing his sentiments; but it is not correct to use the word "devil" for an officer of the Crown who was discharging his duty, unless full facts are placed before us and particularly so when he is not here to defend himself.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member should not use such words. To call a district magistrate "devil" is clearly objectionable.

Sardar Harjab Singh : I only want to acquaint the House with his action which savoured of goondaism. Those who have seen him with their own eyes have formed the same opinion about him.

Sir, Mr. Macdonald, instead of giving orders for admitting the injured persons into hospitals directed the police to convey them to neighbouring villages as far as 10 miles from the city, where there was nobody to attend to them. There is no doubt about the fact that certain people were admitted into the hospitals but their number is quite insignificant as compared with the actual number of the injured. Through you, Sir, I request the Honourable Premier to set right such Englishmen as are notorious for wrong doings. Unless these people are brought to their senses the Government cannot succeed in its mission.

Mr. Speaker : Motion moved—

That the Assembly do now adjourn.

Sardar Sohan Singh Jash (Amritsar North, Sikh, Rural) (Punjabi): Sir, on the 20th instant I started from my village and reached Amritsar. The first thing which I noticed from a poster stuck near the Hall Bazar was that section 144 had been promulgated beyond the railway bridge and not towards the city side. You may be aware that it has been declared by the Settlement Committee and Kissan Committee that the Government officers do not pay heed to their grievances regarding canal outlets. They have, therefore, decided to request their officers concerned by making a peaceful demonstration. This decision was declared many days before the 20th instant. When I reached there, the procession was coming from Jalianwala Bagh towards the city. It was decided by the assembled people that as the Government wanted to suppress their voice and did not want to listen to their grievances, therefore, they were not going to obey their unfair orders and hence they would go to the settlement officers and irrigation officers peacefully to tell their grievances. This was the object of the procession. I was with the procession myself—not as a processionist but as a spectator and besides myself there were three other members of this House, namely, Sardar Partab Singh, Shrimati Raghbir Kaur and Sardar Chanan Singh.

First, I want to submit that the procession was proceeding peacefully through Hall Bazar under the leadership of Jathadar Udham Singh and assistant Jathadar Baba Harnam Singh. When it came near the railway bridge—I think the bridge was say 50 or 60 paces ahead—Mr. Jackson, City Magistrate, came forward and asked the leaders of the procession not to go towards that side and told them that according to the orders of the Deputy Commissioner the procession was not allowed to proceed towards Lahore and Delhi railway lines and could not cross the lines because section 144 was enforced on the other side of the railway lines. Sardar Udham Singh gave him assurance to the effect that they were not going to create any mischief and nothing objectionable would be done. Further on Jathadar Udham Singh said to him, "As no heed has been paid to our grievances and representations made in connection with settlement operation and canal outlets by the Government officials, therefore, we have decided to make a last protest in the shape of this demonstration against this kind of treatment of the Government. We would like to go to the offices of irrigation and settlement officers and express our grievances personally." Sir, this reply was given to the City Magistrate. I was going ahead and the procession was coming behind me. I noticed, when the procession advanced, say 75 paces onward, the order to disperse was given to the processionists. At that time the District Magistrate, Mr. A. Macdonald came to me and said "Have n't you come to your senses yet." I replied to him, "What are you talking. You go to the processionists and talk to them." Sir, I think, he meant to refer to Fatchwal case in which lathi charge was made on zamindars and some labourers were arrested in that connection. His tone was very disgraceful. I feel deep regret in saying that Mr. A. Macdonald has created "martial law atmosphere" in the Amritsar district since he has been posted there. None can go to a Government officer directly to make any kind of grievance whatsoever. I was submitting, that I replied to him that I was there as a spectator and not as a processionist. He then went to Jathadar Sardar Udham Singh who gave him the same reply which was given to Mr. Jackson. I remember, Sardar Udham Singh said to him that it was very unfair on the part of the Government to promulgate section 144 in order to close all doors to the poor zamindars to express their complaints to the officers concerned. What a pity that they were not permitted to represent their grievances to the Government who were closing all avenues to the zamindar. Sardar Udham Singh with these words persisted on taking the procession to the offices of settlement officers and said that he and his people were ready to bear the bullets of the Government on their bosoms and their backs were strong enough to bear the lathis of the police. Further on he said that they were being killed by the harsh measures of the Government and if they waited to make a request to that effect, they were not allowed to do so. Sir, I remember, Sardar Udham Singh again assured Mr. Macdonald that the procession would proceed on very peacefully. After this talk, Mr. Macdonald returned and the procession proceeded on. Section 144 was enforced in the area situated in south of the bridge. Section 144 had not been promulgated in that area of the city to which the procession was proceeding. Suddenly the order was given for lathi charge and lathi blows rained mercilessly on peaceful and unarmed kisans and in a short time nothing was to be seen there except a large number of people who were fainting. Streams of blood were flowing on the ground and large number of wounded people whose clothes were stained and wet with blood were groaning. (A voice: Disgraceful). Sir, it was very difficult for human eyes to see that pitiable scene. The police severely beat the poor peasants and threw them on the bridge. Moreover, the police attacked even those persons who only stood by in the area where entry was prohibited under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code and this place was about 18 or 14 karams distant from the bridge. The pity is that the police made no distinction between those who participated in disobeying section 144 and those who only went there to see what was happening.

At an earlier stage Sardar Partab Singh, Shrimati Raghubir Kaur and myself approached the Deputy Commissioner of Amritsar and put it to him that we were prepared to take the responsibility for maintaining peace and order. We assured him that nothing untoward would happen there at all. We would make the people keep the peace and not disturb the tranquillity in the least. But the District Magistrate who was no less furious than Pharaoh asked us to get backwards and remarked, "These are all bloody city goondas; go and talk in the Assembly. You are talking bloody nonsense." Upon this I said to my honourable friend Sardar Partab Singh that the Magistrate seemed to have lost all sense, therefore, it was advisable for us to get away from the place and let the Magistrate take the responsibility for what happens there on account of his activities. In fact he would be responsible for the demonstrators' actions. At this stage we moved aside and kept watching how the old, the young and the children were subjected to the indiscriminate beating by the police and how the victims lay senseless on the roads. There were seen all around bodies of men lying on the road and besmeared with blood. Sir, here allow me to mention the horrible fact that even women were not spared by the police at the time of their lathi charge. It is really a shameful and cowardly act on the part of the police to attack women. Again, the police committed all sorts of atrocities. They asked a boy who was holding in his hands the Congress flag to throw it away. But the lion-hearted boy did not let the flag go from his hands until he was beaten severely by the police and left senseless on the ground.

Chaudhri Tikka Ram : Was the honourable member himself there ?

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Yes, I was there and saw everything with my own eyes. If any man fell on the ground and rose up again after coming to his senses, the police would again subject him to a severe beating till he fell down senseless and this process was repeated several times.

2nd Lieutenant Bhai Fatch Jang Singh : In the first part of his speech the honourable member admitted that he went away after seeing the Deputy Commissioner, but now he says that he saw everything with his own eyes.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : I never said that I went away from the scene. I remained watching the event.

Mr. Speaker : That is not a point of order.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : Sir, I am sorry that the snapshots that I had taken there have not reached me so far in their developed form. They were expected here by yesterday. We got those snapshots in order to prove that the lathi charge of the police was not mild as the Government or the Honourable Premier, Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan might observe. The feeling had run high among the people as you would now come to know through the newspapers. The papers would describe how the poor agriculturists came to the representatives of the kisan Government to relate the sad tale of their sufferings and how the police subjected them to a severe beating till they lay senseless on the ground. If a few more incidents like this happen in the province, then let us be sure that the kisans themselves will dig the grave of this so-called kisan government. (Hear, hear.)

Sir, I leave it to my honourable friend Sardar Partab Singh to show to you the iron-ends of the 'dangs' that were used by the police in their lathi charge on the kisans. These 'lathis' were broken in the action of beating people and some of the iron-ends of them were taken by us there and then. In this lathi charge the old and the young and the children were all beaten indiscriminately. Even the lookers-on were not spared by the police, although they had taken no part in the demonstration. But the police also subjected them to the lathi charge. An instance will throw a flood of light on this indiscriminate beating by the police. Sardar Atma Singh, son of Thakar Singh, a local detenu, was coming from his village to Amritsar after duly obtaining the leave of the authorities but the police also made him a target of their lathi charge. When I went to visit the injured persons in the Civil Hospital at Amritsar, I was surprised to find the said person there among the injured persons. It may be that the police will now frame a charge of absence from the village against this detenu or will charge him with some other offence. But the fact remains that he had taken leave and had come from the village to Amritsar. The poor fellow was beaten by the police as if he had taken some part in the unlawful assembly. It is now feared that he may be punished for some imaginary offence. There are several other glaring examples of the atrocities that the police committed on the people, but I would not like to waste the time of the House by narrating any more incidents of this kind. Suffice it to add that a jathedar who was quite peaceful was also beaten by the police.

With these words, I support the adjournment motion that is now before the House.

Shrimati Raghbir Kaur (Amritsar, Sikh, Women) (Punjabi): Mr. Speaker, the atrocities committed by the police at Amritsar on the 29th of July were unprecedented. We witnessed streams of blood flowing there. The police beat everybody that came in their way. For instance, we saw one Udham Singh, a Jathedar, lying senseless as a result of the severe beating by the police. Blood was oozing out of the injuries of the persons who had been subjected to the lathi charge. The most objectionable feature of the whole incident is that even responsible officers kicked the people. It was really heart-rending to find that in India in general and in the Punjab in particular, the rulers treat the masses worse than dogs. My heart boils with suppressed fury to note that the honour of the people is outraged in this country with impunity. I would like to sound a note of warning to the Honourable the Premier to beware that this state of affairs will not last for ever. A revolution is sure to take place which will make the Premier realise the dire consequences of the indiscriminate lathi charge on the peaceful citizens and the bloodshed of the innocent subjects.

When I came across an Englishman who was beating the people at Amritsar, I asked him to move aside and I challenged him to subject me if he could dare do so, to the blows which he was aiming at others. I told him that he was beating the inhabitants of the country—the owners of the land—as if they were dogs. I put it to him that if he had the courage he should shoot me dead as I could not tolerate the atrocities he was perpetrating on my fellow-brethren. I really preferred death to this life of slavery.

Now let me address a few words to the Honourable Minister of Revenue Sir Sundar Singh Majithia who begged his community at the time of general elections to vote for him displaying his beard as a sure proof of his being a good Sikh. (Interruption). Sir, I am saying true facts.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable lady member is not in order.

Minister for Revenue : It is totally wrong.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable lady member is irrelevant in bringing the name of Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia.

Shrimati Raghbir Kaur : These are the circumstances that are prevailing in the country. The very people who live upon the labour of the kisans dare to adopt such an arrogant attitude, so much so that they even go the length of kicking the poor zamindars. The capitalists and the rich people who have grown rich by sucking the life blood of the people become so insolent that they kick and beat the sons of the soil. Sir, I have risen to bring these facts to the notice of those who always harp on the theme that they are the well-wishers of the zamindars. My only object is to bring such people to their senses. To-day the Honourable Premier is blind to the facts and he has shut his eyes in the same way as the Tsar of Russia did in his own times. He was also in the habit of declaring that there was no power in the world which could destroy his power. The Russian farmers and the labourers and girls combined together to bring him round to his senses. I may add that a time came when he was struck with a spear and was killed and his children were killed in the same manner in which he was wont to kill the children of others.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan : On a point of order. The honourable lady is not relevant. Is she preaching Bolshevism ?

Mr. Speaker : That is not the motion before the House. Please speak to the lathi charge.

Shrimati Raghbir Kaur : I was submitting that the bare-footed and bareheaded zamindars who were going to lay their case before the authorities were met with maltreatment at the hands of the police. The police made lathi charge over them and beat them so mercilessly that the poor kisans were bathed in streams of blood. In addition to the lathi charge they were badly treated by the officials. The honourable members who are sitting here in this House and who claim to be the well-wishers of the zamindars should see these facts. I have merely risen to bring these facts to their notice. There is no gainsaying the fact that the zamindar Government is treating the kisans very badly. My friends over there claim to be the well-wishers of the zamindars but I may submit that they are merely deceiving the poor kisans that they are doing so much for their welfare. Whatever they are doing is merely a fraud and in fact they are playing tricks upon the poor kisans. I request them to say good-bye to all these things.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable lady member is irrelevant and is using unparliamentary language.

Shrimati Raghbir Kaur : I am bringing to light the clever tricks of the Government.

Dr. Satya Pal : The Honourable Premier was pleased to use the word 'dupa.'

Mr. Speaker : He was also irrelevant.

Dr. Satya Pal : But you never checked him.

Shrimati Raghbir Kaur : I was simply making it clear that the people living beyond the seven seas and who live on the wealth of this land, assume such an attitude that they go the length of kicking the original owners of this country.

Besides, I may submit that the police maltreated the poor kisans. I would quote one or two examples. The pitiable plight of Sardar Harnam Singh is very well known. He was very badly handled by the police. If there is any one who wants to know his bad condition, he should go to his sister and ask her. Again Sardar Bohan Singh, an old man of 70, was rendered senseless by the maltreatment of police. These are only a few cases out of thousands who suffered tortures at the hands of the police. I tell the Honourable Ministers of the province that such kind of tortures should not be perpetrated on the innocent kisans of the country. They call themselves the representatives of the people and such clever tricks do not befit their rank, I request my friends opposite that such kind of zulam should be put an end to.

I am perfectly aware of the fact that when the time of shedding blood for the attainment of complete independence comes, we would be quite prepared to do so. We in fact live and die for the sake of our country. If the Honourable Premier does not know, even after lathi charges, the demands of the public, it would have been better for him to have ordered the setting of machine guns and to have pleased himself by killing our brother zamindars with the bullets of the guns. I may also submit that those days are not far off when the Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram will have to receive lathi blows and I am constrained to remark that those people who handcuffed others, shall have to pay dear price for their acts. Coming again to my subject I would say that complete independence.....

Mr. Speaker : The honourable lady member is repeating her own arguments over and over again.

Shrimati Raghbir Kaur : I may submit that we still remember the old zulams of the Government. The memories of Jallianwala Bagh and Gura-Ka-Bagh are still fresh in our minds. I may submit that we will have to pay a great price for attaining freedom.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable lady member is again repeating her own arguments.

Shrimati Raghbir Kaur : With these words I strongly support the adjournment motion now before the House.

Chaudhri Ghulam Rasool (Sialkot Central, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, there has been so much said by the speaker who has just sat down about freedom. From beginning to the end she has been saying nothing but asking for freedom and I would, therefore, request you to give that freedom to these gentlemen if you have got it with you.

Sardar Chanan Singh (Kasur, Sikh, Rural) (Punjabi) : Sir, the zulam which was perpetrated on the poor processionists is too heart-rending to be described. My honourable friends on the opposite benches could not refrain from laughing at the description of the tragic scene enacted at Amritsar. But I may remind them that their laughter would not last long.

Mr. Speaker : Please speak to the motion.

Sardar Chanan Singh : The Government claims that it is making efforts to ameliorate the condition of the poor zamindars but the fact is that the latter are being forced to hold their peace by making lathi charge upon them. I may submit, in this connection, that the Government cannot succeed in suppressing the agitation by resorting to such inhuman methods. It is a fact that the jatha was proceeding quite peacefully and it was the Deputy Commissioner who took the initiative by beating the unarmed processionists with a hunting crop. May I ask the Government through you, Sir, whether it was an attempt for the betterment of the poor kisans? Can the miserable plight of the poor kisans move the hearts of those who draw fat salaries and while away their time in ease and comfort? I may inform the House that even an old man of 70 like Baba Sohan Singh was not spared by the police. He too was mercilessly beaten by the police and it is a fact that more or less 40 cuts were administered to him. The police not only made lathi charge on the poor unarmed kisans but also forcibly put the injured persons into lorries and conveyed them to places some 7 or 10 miles away from Amritsar. I am sure that such a zulum as perpetrated by the police at Amritsar always results in turning the law-abiding citizens into awe-inspiring dacoits. I may tell the House that such zulum would not go unavenged. The tyrants must fall one day. The Government is under the impression that the poor kisans cannot do any harm, and that its stability is assured, but it should bear in mind that every two days are not alike. I would not like to take further time of the House, but I may tell the House that the zulum perpetrated at Amritsar can better be imagined than described. With these remarks I whole-heartedly support the adjournment motion under discussion.

Sardar Partab Singh (Amritsar South, Sikh, Rural) (Punjab) :
 Sir, I remember Mahatma Gandhi once saying that in reality brave is he who can receive and bear beating unperturbed and without being provoked into violent retaliation and I may confess that at the time when this was said I had my doubts about the wisdom of this saying. But from what I saw with my own eyes at Amritsar at 8-35 p.m. on 20th July, 1938, I was convinced that Mahatmaji was right in making that remark. As an eyewitness I may tell the House that on that day at Amritsar lathis continued to rain on the unarmed and peaceful demonstrators for full 25 minutes together and among those who were charging the demonstrators with lathis were some 15 mounted police officers and about 50 foot constables. The Deputy Commissioner of the district was also there on the spot and he had a cane in his hand which he freely used and with which he beat Jathedar Udham Singh and he had the audacity to strike that Jathedar on his face. Besides these some of the magistrates posted at Amritsar and the Superintendent of Police of the district were also there and each one of them did his worst in beating away the demonstrators. It was truly said by the Mahatmaji that those who give beating particularly to unarmed and peaceful persons are in fact cowards and it was nothing but a cowardly act on the part of the officers at Amritsar to continue to beat the peaceful demonstrators for as long as 25 minutes continuously and all praise is due to those who acting on that golden principle of non-violence, received that beating calmly and without being provoked into violence. To continue the narration of events I may be permitted to say that when this lathi charge began and when those ten or fifteen persons of the demonstrators who were in the front row fell down, the rest of the jatha consisting of about 500 persons sat down on the ground, but even then the police did not spare them and as I have submitted already the persons sitting on the ground were charged with lathi and beaten continuously for about 25 minutes. My friends Mir Maqbool Mahmood has asked me, and I know the spirit in which this question has been put, how many of the demonstrators were killed. For his information I may say that at least 180 persons out of the demonstrators were severely injured and I say at least 180 because it is possible that the number of injured persons may be even more than that. This figure I have taken from the office of the Civil Surgeon at Amritsar which shows that 180 persons did receive injuries and were consequently admitted to the hospital. This is not all. Even those demonstrators who were standing beyond the railway line where orders under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code had not been enforced, did not escape the highhandedness of the police. They were also lathi charged and about 50 among them were seriously injured and about 250 of them received minor injuries. There also the police showed no mercy to the demonstrators and beat the people mercilessly. Out of the 50 persons who had received serious injuries some were thrown into the tongas and were as if deposited in the Jallianwala Bagh. About 15 or 20 of them we have not been able to trace so far and it is yet to be ascertained where they were taken and where they were left.

This is in brief some account of that sorrowful incident at Amritsar. What I cannot resist asking is why it was that a similar order under section 144 was not promulgated at Lyallpur where, as the House is aware, similar agitation was recently started and where a procession was also taken out which passed by the offices of the Deputy Commissioner and the Irrigation Branch. Should I think that this order was considered necessary at Amritsar because the peaceful jatha of the demonstrators had to pass by the bungalow of Sir Sundar Singh Majithia?

Mr. Speaker : Will the honourable member please speak to the motion and not attack the Minister?

Sardar Partab Singh : To take up again the thread of my narration I was submitting that 180 injured persons were admitted to the hospital. To some of these tincture was applied and to others some stimulants were given and when it was found that these medicines had given some relief to the injured persons and had restored them to their senses, they were loaded into lorries and some of them were dropped at a distance of seven miles from Amritsar and some at ten miles and some others even farther away and I may say that I have been told by the lorry-drivers themselves that some of the injured persons were dropped near Majithia, some near Virka, some near Ghawind, some near Jandiala, and others near Basulpur in the Amritsar district and the pity is that these injured persons were not dropped in any of the villages where they could have secured some medical or other help, but were left away from these villages and in the midst of jungles as if to starve to death. It is no wonder that some of them may have died because there are many of them whom we have not been able to trace so far. We have yet to find out where they were dropped and whether they have survived the treatment meted out to them. The version given on behalf of the Government of all that happened at Amritsar is that only four persons received injuries out of which three received serious injuries and were admitted to the hospital. I leave this to the House to judge what an injustice an extreme type of high-handedness and travesty of facts it is to say that after a severe lathi charge continuing for full 25 minutes only four persons were injured.

Let me make it clear to you, Sir, that all this has been done in a vindictive spirit. Chanan Singh was beaten so mercilessly that he became unconscious and while he was being taken to the hospital the Deputy Superintendent of Police ordered his hands to be handcuffed behind his back. On being told that if he wanted to handcuff him at all he should adopt the usual method, he remarked, "He used to report against the police". I ask my honourable friend Mir Maghbool Mahmood, who happens to be his friend, to inquire from him and satisfy himself as to the veracity of the statement made by me.

I make four allegations against the Government. First, that the lathi charge was greatly in excess of what the situation demanded and the police officers personally took part in it. Secondly, that before making the lathi charge no arrangements for rendering medical aid to the injured were made. Thirdly, instead of conveying the injured to the hospital they were taken in motor vans to distant places and were dropped there. Mr. Speaker, it is rank injustice and sheer cruelty on the part of the authorities to leave the injured unattended and to take them to places where there is no one to render medical aid to them. My fourth allegation is that many people, including a peaceful jatha, were beaten in places, where section 144 had not been enforced. If you institute an enquiry into the matter you would come to know the number of persons who were mercilessly beaten by the police. I can give you the names of four persons who were beaten outside the area where section 144 had been promulgated. They are Sant Singh, Sultan Singh, Harnam Singh of Khojkipur and Seva Singh Kirpen Bahadur. Sir, lathi blows were showered on five hundred persons and they took their undeserved punishment in a way which convinced me that the mantle of Government will one day fall on the shoulders of these poor people. They have proved by their self-restraint that only these people and not the big samindars, who come to Simla to waste their time at the Scandal Point are fit to rule over this province.

Sir, you warned my honourable friends who have spoken before me not to use harsh words in respect of the Sikander Government and not to call Mr. Macdonald a "devil", but I am constrained to remark that when he was using his lathi right and left he did not seem human to us and it appeared as if he had been possessed by the Devil who was goading him on to act in the manner he did. He did not behave like an Englishman at all, for an Englishman true to the name could not use such indecent words as "bloody goondas". Mr. Speaker, I remember that once a play by G. B. Shaw was being staged and in it the word "rot" occurred. As soon as the actor uttered the word as many as 50 British play-goers stood up and left the theatre. It is things like these that compel us to say that he is not an Englishman but the Devil incarnate. We have been enjoined by Mahatma Gandhi to remain non-violent, I hope that during his life time at least we will not lift a finger against you even in the face of gravest provocation, but let me tell you that your provocative methods will one day force the people into committing acts of violence. I ask Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and all the Jat members from Ferozepore, Rohtak, Hissar, and other places to enquire from the police whether or not they broke their heavily shod lathis against the heads of jat zamindars. (At this stage the honourable member placed the iron parts of the lathis on the table of the House.) If I were to hurl this iron shoe at you from my seat it would render you unconscious.

Mr. Speaker : Please address the Chair.

Sardar Partab Singh : Mr. Speaker, I cannot use these words against you, as you are not the Minister-in-charge of the Police Department. But I want to bring this fact home to the Government that they cannot terrorise the masses by this show of force. They cannot prevent them from ventilating their grievances and staging demonstrations. A morcha has been set up at Amritsar and it will remain there, no matter what happens. During the Akali movement the Englishman exhausted his stock of lathis against the heads of Akalis, but there never was a dearth of Akali heads. In the same way you too will exhaust yourself by beating the poor kisans. You are not showering the lathi blows on the poor zamindars, you are simply driving nails into the coffin of the Unionist Government.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood) : Sir, before I submit anything about the happenings at Amritsar, I wish to make it clear that if any police officer has pulled anybody's beard, we are not here to condone it.

Sardar Sehan Singh Josh : All crocodile tears.

Parliamentary Secretary : I am not saying this as a mere formality but I say this as a human being who feels for his fellow human beings. Moreover, if any officer has been guilty of trampling over the body of any individual, we do not approve of his action. Furthermore, if anybody has made undesirable attacks on any ladies, we condemn it. I will further submit that it is not at all a pleasant function for any Government, be it our Government or any Congress Government for the matter of that, to take any harsh action against its own people. But we must not forget that it is the primary duty of a Government to maintain law and order. It is not only the duty of the Unionist Government to maintain law and order but even a Congress Government has to do it. And while striving to keep demonstrators under control the authorities have reluctantly to take unpleasant action sometimes."

Let me tell my honourable friends sitting on the opposite benches that if Government does not take strong action necessary to maintain law and order, the result would be very dangerous and harmful to the peace and tranquillity of the province. Supposing to-day some people who may profess non-violence, step out from their houses to attack somebody or to make an assault on somebody's wife or to snatch away a small child from her mother. I would ask my friends opposite whether they would like us to enforce law or not. Now anybody who commits a breach of law is liable to be punished, whosoever he may be. Every government as I have already stated is bound to punish the law breakers. If the Government relaxes in maintaining law and order, my honourable friends sitting on the opposite benches may take it from me that neither their small children, relatives and even wives are safe nor ours. And whatever the motives of law-breakers, even if we may sympathise with their motive, that makes no difference and they stand on the same footing as far as the maintenance of law and order is concerned. Now, Sir, this unpleasant incident has to be considered from two points of view, firstly, whether use of force was justified and secondly, whether more force was used than necessary. It is obvious that, when some people openly come to break the law of the land, whatever their motives, it is the duty of every government to check them and to maintain law and order even if they have to punish their own kith and kin. The action of Government in such cases is like that of a doctor who performs a painful operation against one limb in order to save human life. It is admitted that the processionists wanted to break section 144 intentionally, and Sardar Harjab Singh the mover of this adjournment motion has stated that a meeting was held in Jallianwala Bagh in which it was decided to do so. (Voices: No. He never said so.)

I think if the notes of the honourable mover's speech are consulted you would find that he did make such remarks on the floor of this House. My learned friend Sardar Sohan Singh Josh says that he was there with the procession himself. He would be aware then of the criminal intention of the processionists. It cannot fairly be denied that the procession proceeded with the object of breaking section 144. The honourable members sitting on the opposite benches say that the procession went there to lay their grievances before the settlement officer and the Revenue Minister. Such unreasonable arguments will not stand examination. It is known that on the day of this occurrence the Revenue Minister and the settlement officer were not present in Amritsar, while the Deputy Commissioner himself was present at the bridge and offered — with his usual tact and sympathy — to receive a deputation of 50 persons. The Deputy Commissioner is known to be sympathetic always. Where then was the justification for this demonstration? Why have these innocent persons been unnecessarily dragged in these jathas to break law? Sir, I fully understand the people of Amritsar. I consider them as my kith and kin, and the House is aware that I have never allowed any opportunity slip in placing their troubles and legitimate grievances before the Government. As far as the claims of Amritsaries are concerned I would like to submit that I and my friends Chaudhri Fazal Din and Chaudhri Faqir Hussain have placed the matter before the Government and we got favourable replies from them. Sir, if to-day all avenues be closed of representing people's legitimate grievances by the Government it would be impossible for many of us to sit on these benches and in this respect I would submit that even our Premier — with his genuine love for the zamindars — would be the last person to continue on these benches if the Government closed its doors to the zamindars of the province or condoned its officers doing so. (Hear, hear.)

Sir, you are aware that it has been the declared policy of the Government announced in the shape of a communiqué and also in answers given on the floor of the House, that the Settlement Officer of Amritsar shall receive sympathetically all reasonable and just grievances brought to him by the persons directly concerned and would do his best to remove them. Furthermore it has been announced on behalf of the Government that if any local officer does not listen to our reasonable and bona fide complaints, the doors of the Government are always open to receive such representations be they with regard to the canal outlets or anything else. I fail to understand why, when the Government is so much interested and sympathetic to the people, there should be any need for resort to unconstitutional methods till the Government has been approached and had said 'no'. I know perfectly well that there may be cases where grievances may not be received sympathetically by local officers, canal or settlement or they may be beyond their power to redress. All such matters could always be brought to the Government as we are doing every day and getting redress possible. I would like to ask my honourable friends opposite, is it not their duty in the interest of the peace of the province to instruct people not to go against law and to see that no brother of any sister may suffer, nor wife of any husband may become widow. We are here to redress every reasonable grievance of zamindars and I fully believe that our Government can say so with its head high.

Sardar Partab Singh : Is not demonstration considered a legal remedy in every civilised country ?

Parliamentary Secretary : Yes, peaceful demonstrations but not demonstrations to break law for grievances which do not exist, not demonstrations against law to protest against alleged increase of land revenue which has not increased at all. Under such circumstances it is the foremost duty of the Government to maintain law and order and I regret to note that honourable members of this House should have allowed matters to go so far, on untenable grievances without even once ascertaining from the Government members whether there is any truth in these matters. I am really very sorry to learn that my friend Sardar Chanan Singh also got a blow in that procession and that the police handled him roughly. So far as the blow is concerned I feel it as I had received it myself but nevertheless I would submit, that even if my real brother came to break law he must submit to the consequences of his action but it is not justifiable for any police force to treat even worst culprits by inhuman methods. I repeat that so far as the question of injuries to Sardar Chanan Singh are concerned, I may make it clear in unequivocal terms that I feel it myself and I have every sympathy for him, but at the same time I cannot help observing that even if Sardar Chanan Singh were my brother and he had gone to violate the law of the land I would not be a party to his actions and would condemn his defiance of law.

Let us now, Sir, examine the facts of the case. It is an undeniable fact that when the mob and the jatha reached outside the Hall Bazar, the magistrate on duty told them that section 144 had been promulgated by the District Magistrate and that they should not proceed further. They did not heed this timely warning but persisted in their illegal onward march. We are told that they used filthy slogans and the position was further aggravated when brickbats were thrown at the police.

Sardar Sohan Singh Jash : This is the same old story cooked up.

Parliamentary Secretary : My honourable friend may want me to blink at real facts, as reported to us, but I must tell him that we do not believe in ignoring facts. We are here to face them. According to our information, the furious mob caused injuries to the Deputy Superintendent of Police and hit the Deputy Inspector-General on his belt, not to mention several other police men who were injured during the unlawful activities of the mob. Do my honourable friends opposite want the Government to stand by quietly when law is thus being broken? According to our information twelve persons were injured by the police out of whom only three received serious injuries and were admitted into the civil hospital. I may add that one of them has since been discharged by the hospital authorities. The Government is prepared to consider any reliable evidence to the contrary which my honourable friends opposite may be able to prove in the court supported by medical certificates for the alleged injuries caused to the public by the police.

Sardar Sohan Singh Jash : Set up an independent inquiry and we will bring the facts out.

Parliamentary Secretary : I am surprised to learn from my honourable friend opposite that he is not going to take the matter to court. Only the other day they were clamouring that courts should examine their cases and now when we are prepared to refer this case to a regular court of law they are hesitating. This attitude is wholly unjustified.

Coming to the second charge that the authorities should not have resorted to the use of section 144, even here the Opposition can fare no better. I need not remind them that even in those provinces where the angels of the Congress rule, section 144 has at times to be resorted to. That is unfortunate but inevitable. Let us all join to set up a new tradition of public life under which it may not be necessary.

Khan Sahib Raja Fateh Khan (Rawalpindi, Eastern, Muhammadan-Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, Before I oppose this adjournment motion, I wish to make a submission and it is this. My honourable friends sitting on the opposite benches have stated on the floor of this House that a jatha of kisans was bent upon disobeying the order of the District Magistrate under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code and in their attempt to break the law the members of the jatha were subjected to a lathi charge by the police. I may respectfully submit that those who invite the Government by breaking its law to use the long arm of the law against them should not think that the Government is at fault. In reality, it is the law-breakers themselves who are responsible for setting the machinery of Government into motion. Let them feel sure that if they do not disobey the legal orders of the Government, they would not be dealt with severely. I may address the following Persian couplet to them as it aptly applies to them :—

در بیان کفر دریا تخت بلند کرده— باز می گوئی که دامن تر من هو شیار باش

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is requested to speak to the motion.

Khan Sahib Raja Fatah Khan: Sir, the lawless mob at Amritsar was out to violate the law of the land and if there was any justification for their protesting against some action of the Government the people would have been well advised to follow constitutional methods for ventilating their grievances. It is really too much for anybody to defy the orders of the Government or its representatives. In fact their attempt to carry out a procession in contravention of section 144 was an open challenge to the peace and order of the province. The proper way of getting their grievances redressed would have been other than the one they followed. It amounted to pelting a stone in order to remove a fly sitting on one's own body. Such a stone is sure to hit one's own body. In the same way I may remind my Congress friends that law-breaking always results in such unfortunate use of force by the police. It is the same in the Congress governed provinces. With these words I beg to oppose the adjournment motion.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq (Amritsar City, Muhammadan Urban) (Urdu): Sir, I seek your indulgence to remind my honourable friends who belong to the Congress that the old Imperialism has gone and yielded place to a new order of responsible government. This very order prevails in the six Congress-governed provinces of India (Voices : 7 and not 6). Let it be seven, I do not mind. My argument will be all the more effective for it. In all these Congress provinces like our own the police has to serve the Government of the day. It is wrong to imagine that the police is there to serve the Unionists alone. In fact it is serving the Congress in other provinces as it is serving our own. The only object of the police is to serve the people and not to lord over them. If the police transgresses the limit of law it stands to be censured by every right minded person in the country. In this connection I may inform my Congress friends that whenever a mob indulges in unlawful activities the Government, whether it is a Congress Government or a Unionist Government, has to use the long arm of the law against it. Just see what is happening in Madras. Some people have launched a campaign of civil disobedience against the Government order relating to Hindi and the Government of Madras which is a Congress Government has not hesitated to bring the culprits to book. More than 100 persons have gone to jail in this connection. I fail to understand why it is not a crime for a Congress Government to maintain law and order; and why it is an unpardonable crime for the Unionist Government to do the same when an unlawful assembly challenges to disturb the peace and tranquility of the province.

Mr. Speaker: I request the honourable member to speak to the motion.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq: I am coming to the motion. I for one would never be a party to the police committing any atrocity on the public. I would not like to protect a wrong-doer even if he be the highest police officer. I wish to see the country free. Freedom is our birth-right. But it should not mean that we want disorder and chaos in the country. If a mob is bent on breaking the law of the land it is the bounden duty of every Government worth the name to restore law and order and try to check the lawless mob from spreading trouble. Coming to the particular case of Amritsar, can anybody deny that sect. 144 was enforced in the city and people tried to disobey the order of the District Magistrate? I cannot say whether the order was wholly justified or unjustified but the fact remains that it had been duly passed by the District Magistrate and it was the duty of the public to obey it and if they wanted to protest against it they could follow constitutional methods. It is alleged that the police was armed with lathis and that Mr. Macdonald was aggressive when the mob persisted in breaking the law. It is complained that lathis were freely used by the police. But my honourable friends on the opposite side should know that the crowd should not have crossed the line or tried to cross the prohibited area. I may state for their information that I have also seen many times blood flowing and people fatally wounded on account of firing because the crowd wanted to enter the prohibited area. Governments do use force for enforcing law and order and often they have to resort to firing. Many times I have also witnessed the scene that the police have harshly treated the public because it could no longer bear their bad behaviour. I have also witnessed that the crowd very often becomes aggressive, thereby compelling the police to use force. But now the question here is whether the police used more force and whether it was within the limit or beyond the limit of law. I may submit that nobody can deny that lathis were used for dispersing the crowd. We do admit that the police made a lathi charge. I may also submit that we have not come to this House merely to help the Government so that they should use unnecessary force and kill the innocent citizens. But at the same time I want to make it clear that it is our duty to see in every case whether the force used was within limits or not. Every case is to be judged on its merits. No Government worth the name can go on if we bring in adjournment motions on paltry things. No officer can do his duty efficiently when he knows that after doing his duty he will have to face a vote of censure in the popular House on paltry and flimsy grounds. It is also a fact that when a mob is enraged it can go to any limits. I therefore request my friends opposite that in serious cases like these they should not make haste to move ineffective adjournment motions so that their action should not produce this effect on the police officials that as the Government is out to defend them on each and every occasion so they are at liberty to do anything they like. It is the duty of my friends opposite not to move adjournment motions in the House without ascertaining the real state of affairs and making proper inquiries, and satisfying themselves about the truth and justification of the subject matter. If they are not prepared to do that, then it would be their fault if they would be creating this bad idea in the minds of police officials that the Government is out to defend them on each and every occasion. I may submit that the Government is forced to defend them because my friends always move adjournment motions on each and every occasion and in season and out of season on trivial and flimsy grounds. May I ask my friends on the opposite whether the Government of Sir Sikander can carry on the work of the Government when it has often and anon to face the censure motions? But at the same time I wish to say a few words to my friend Mir Maqbool Mahmood. Let not these defeats of the adjournment motions produce this effect on the minds of the officials that they are at liberty to do anything they like. It is the duty of the Government to hold an impartial inquiry in the present case and if anybody is found guilty he should be severely dealt with regardless of his rank or position.

[Sh. Mohd. Sadiq.]

Besides, Sir, I may submit that we are not prepared to support the Government if they act in a wrong way. We are independent people and we have not sold our conscience. If we find that the Government are not doing their work properly then surely we will not vote with them. Our Party is here to govern justly and our Government has to be just in dealing with the public. So Government should not feel ashamed of holding impartial inquiries and they should not be afraid of anybody. Sometimes false prestige prevents the Government from doing its business. I may submit that this question of prestige should not deter my friends from doing their duty. Even if they find the Inspector-General or Deputy Inspector-General or any other high officer not doing his duty properly, they should at once take necessary action. If they want to have the good will of the masses they should hold an impartial enquiry.

Now I come to the moving of adjournment motions. I may submit that my friends should only move these adjournment motions when they find that they have fully inquired into the matter. Before rushing into an adjournment motion they should hear the verdict of the other side. Otherwise if my friends bring in these adjournment motions too often then this weapon would lose its sting. It is a kind of vote of censure and it should be sparingly used. One should think that one or two adjournment motions would be quite sufficient for one session, but if my friends bring these adjournment motions too often and they are defeated then it would create a very bad effect in the minds of the police and they would begin to think very lightly of these votes of censure. But with all this I would request the Honourable Premier that he should at once hold an independent inquiry so that it should be known who was responsible for all this trouble, and how far the charges made were justified. It is the obvious duty of the Opposition not to press for adjournment if the Honourable Leader of the House promises an inquiry.

Dr. Satya Pal (Sialkot-Amritsar, General, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, it has never occurred to me that the Honourable Premier or the present Ministry would agree to any proposal put forward from this side of the House. This has all along been my conviction that our cry would prove a cry in the wilderness. Whenever we move any adjournment motion we mean simply to let the Government know the real condition of our people and thereby to express our sympathy for the poor people and it has never entered our minds that we are making any request to the Government. I submit that when we bring our request to the Government we will think that we have become incapable of serving the Congress.

I may submit that when we move such adjournment motions our only object is to show the Government in its real colours, and to bring to its notice the acts of officials whom they always shield. My friends on the opposite benches profess to serve the kisans, but when the time of serving comes they act against them and perpetrate cruelties over them. This is the only reason due to which we have moved this adjournment motion, otherwise we know our friends too well.

When to-day I heard the speech of the Honourable the Premier, I was of the opinion that history repeats itself. In 1919 a revolution broke out in the Punjab, as a result of which these people are sitting on the benches over there. They profess that they have come to help the kisans.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member is quite irrelevant. So, I request him to speak to the motion.

Dr. Satya Pal : I am irrelevant only as much as the Honourable Premier was. I was saying that the Honourable Premier's speech to-day reminded me of the speech of Sir Michael O'Dwyer.

Very well, Sir, I will not mention his name. I will only say that such a speech was made in the House to-day which reminded me of what Sir Michael O'Dwyer said in 1919, in a most arrogant manner, that he would let loose the machinery of law on all of us who were then fighting for freedom and opposing the Rowlett Act. To-day also we have been threatened in the same way and in almost the same language. Then our friend Sardar Bahadur Sardar Ujjal Singh was pleased to say—

Mr. Speaker : Sardar Ujjal Singh has made no speech on this motion.

Dr. Satya Pal : I bow to your ruling and I proceed to say that this beating and lathi charge at Amritsar is not an isolated instance of the kind. It is the result of the policy that the Government has thought fit to follow. I feel inclined to say that it is the first of the series of such incidents and we must be prepared for more such incidents to follow.

In the speeches that have been made before I was allowed to speak on the motion, it has been repeatedly stated that some of the members of the Assembly were eye-witnesses to what happened at Amritsar on this occasion and if their evidence, the evidence of the members of the House who are called honourable members, is not to be relied upon, I do not know which type of people should be relied upon. And it goes without saying that a person who has committed an offence will seldom come forward and confess his guilt, but the pity is that those occupying the Government benches are relying on what those who had committed the offence and who have been charged to have given this beating to the innocent people and made lathi charges are being given credit for what they have reported. It is an attitude which I fail to understand.

Now coming to the promulgation of the order under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code and its defiance at Amritsar I may be permitted to say that it is wrong to say that because civil disobedience has been suspended and because the Congress has now taken to constitutional means for redressing the grievances of the masses, the organisers of the demonstration at Amritsar should not have defied that order at Amritsar. For the information of those, who have taken shelter behind the attitude of the Congress at this time, I may say that there is nothing wrong in disobeying such orders which a person or an organisation considers to be against his conscience or against his faith. This right is always open to a man to disobey such orders which go against his conscience even if the Congress has suspended the civil disobedience movement and has taken to constitutional means for achieving the object that it has in view. Leaving it aside whether it was right or wrong for the demonstrators at Amritsar to defy the order of the District Magistrate, I ask why was it at all necessary for the police to resort to lathi charge?

and beating of the demonstrators? It was perfectly open to the Government to move the machinery of law of which so much has been made by the Honourable Premier. The police at Amritsar was perfectly at liberty to arrest those who had disobeyed the orders of the District Magistrate and also to prosecute them. The courts are there and if they had found them guilty of an offence, they would have been punished. Why is it that instead of taking to law and going to courts, the police took to lawlessness? This is our real complaint and I am sure that no satisfactory reply will be coming forth to this complaint of ours from the Government benches. I know that it will be said that the demonstrators attacked the police and threw stones on the officers and thereby provoked the latter to order lathi charge and I say so because I know that on another occasion when Lala Lajpat Rai was given a lathi blow, we ourselves saw the Superintendent of Police and also the Deputy Inspector-General of Police pick up stones and a few pairs of shoes and taking those with them to show the higher authorities that they had been beaten by the mob by those shoes and stones. But such things and such tactics should not deceive an honest man, a man who has made up his mind to do justice to all. Such fair-minded people will naturally ask the officers who want to deceive others whether the latter can show any wound on their cheeks or any other parts of their bodies to prove that they were really beaten or stoned. But I am sure that this question will not be put to the District Magistrate or to the police officers at Amritsar by those who are at present at the helm of affairs. They will only try to prove that we are in the wrong and that nothing undesirable has been done by their officers. What a pity it is that it has been readily believed by the Government that only three persons were seriously injured at Amritsar on this occasion although it is not denied that for full 25 minutes the lathis of the police continued to rain on the demonstrators! How improbable this version is and yet the Honourable Premier and the honourable member Mir Maqbool Mahmood would say that what has been reported to them by those who were involved is nothing but gospel truth.

Before I close I may say, not by way of threat or even warning, that these wrongs are sure to react on those who are allowing them to be perpetrated and I may also say that so far as we are concerned we do not mind them. We rather welcome such mistakes on the part of the Government because we feel sure that the greater the number of mistakes the Government commit, the nearer the goal which we are striving to achieve will be.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I have been wondering whether the incident at Amritsar and the brief discussion we had in this House the day before yesterday in connection with having Wednesday an off-day had any connection. I suspect that the vehemence with which some of my friends wanted Wednesday to be an off-day was to secure an opportunity of going down to Amritsar and come back to this House as eye-witnesses....

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : He is making an insinuation and I repudiate it.

Premier : I am imputing no motives. I am merely pointing out that if Wednesday had not been an off-day my friends would have been here (A voice: We would have gone even then). If they had gone they would not have been able to come back for an adjournment motion, because we would then have finished the business while they were still in Amritsar. That is, however, besides the point. Now there are one or two other things to which I should like to draw your attention and the attention of the House. I have reason to believe that for some time now a section of the political party outside this House have been concerned, and concerned very sorely, over the discomfiture which they have sustained on account of these four Bills, which Government have brought before the House. (A voice: He is imputing motives). I am not imputing motives. It is like 'chor ki darhi wan tinka'. I was saying that they have been at pains to think out some way of trying to demolish the popularity which Government have achieved in the province over these four measures. Some bright people might have devised some plans, one of the plans being that they should make a demonstration in those places where the settlement is going on so as to divert the attention of the people in order to confuse the real issue. You will see that the date of the poster which I am going to read to you is 12th July. On the 12th July a Gurmukhi poster appeared, and the 12th July is very significant because it is during the discussion of the three Bills brought by Government in this House, and my information is that one of the meetings in which this question was considered to which I have referred, was held on the 6th July, and on the 12th July a Gurmukhi poster appeared at Amritsar over the signatures of Thakur Singh and Sardar Partab Singh, M. L. A., President and General Secretary of the Bandobast Committee. It complained that Government was doing nothing for the peasants. These are the words to which I should like to draw the attention of the House. This poster complained that Government was doing nothing for the peasants. My honourable friend very vehemently supported the measures which we brought forward and said "We want to make them more stringent"; but here in this poster it is said—

"That Government was doing nothing for the peasants, that a communiqué issued by the Settlement Officer showed that an addition of four lakhs per annum was to be made to the land revenue of the district, that the outlets of a number of villages round Raya had been reduced and that peasants were groaning under the burden of malba, chankidaza, chahi and local rates. In order to place these grievances before the public, and make them known to Government, the Bandobast Committee had decided to stage a big demonstration on the 20th, and a procession headed by the Congress flag under the leadership of Udhm Singh Nagola would start from Gol Bagh and proceed by the Canal Offices, Settlement Offices, District Courts, etc., and terminate at the Jallianwala Bagh, where there would be a public meeting. A number of prominent Congress leaders including Dr. Gopi Chand, Dr. Kitchlew and Dr. Satya Pal would join in the procession. It was emphasised that great preparations were on foot. Subsequent information showed that the proposal was to hold a demonstration before the bungalows of the Settlement Officer and the Deputy Commissioner".

That was the method by which my honourable friends wanted to bring the grievances of the peasants to the notice of the Government, although three of those eye-witnesses, who have spoken of several other things and made several allegations to-day, are members of this House and constitutional methods are open to them to bring to the notice of the Government the grievances not only of their constituents, but of the peasants throughout the province, and yet they did not take advantage of those methods.

[Premier.]

Let me now state the facts, as reported to us, regarding the unfortunate incident of 20th instant.

"On the 19th instant the District Magistrate issued an order under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, forbidding the members of the Amritsar Bandobast Committee and allied bodies marching in jathas or processions or holding any demonstration in the area within Municipal and Cantonments limits of Amritsar north of the Lahore-Delhi railway line on the ground that such jathas, etc., were likely to cause obstruction and annoyance to the public and the inhabitants of the locality, etc., or a disturbance of the public tranquillity, etc. On the afternoon of the 20th there was a large gathering at Jallianwala Bagh at which Udhana Singh Nagoke called for volunteers and between 255—300 men came forward. These men proceeded to the Hall Gate accompanied by 5 or 6 thousand persons (huzooris). They were there met by the City Magistrate and the Tahsildar, and were given copies of the District Magistrate's order. The Deputy Commissioner arrived shortly afterwards and both he and the City Magistrate tried to dissuade them from attempting to cross the railway bridge into the civil station. The jatha persisted in its determination and advanced. When it got close to the bridge, the authorities again talked to them and told them that if they crossed the bridge, force would have to be used upon them. They still advanced and were again stopped in the middle of the bridge and were given a similar warning. They still persisted and pressed on down the ramp of the bridge on the civil station side. They were then given five minutes in which to disperse. They refused to do so, and the order was given to the police to disperse them by force. The jatha sat down on the ground. The police had therefore to charge them with lathi and to drag and push them back. Meanwhile the mob got upon the railway track, from which they threw brickbats. One of them hit Mr. Scott, D. I. G., fortunately only on the belt."

Dr. Satya Pal : Brickbats always hit them, fortunately, on the belt.

Premier : Yes, but you always try to hit them below the belt.

"The Deputy Superintendent of Police got a cut on the face and the City Magistrate also received an injury. The crowd was finally cleared out of the railway track by the police. The members of the jatha still present were then removed in lorries to hospital, where it was found necessary to detain only three of them.

The number of arrests is six. This morning two of the three men detained in hospital have been discharged."

These are the facts which I have been able to ascertain from local authorities so far. But let me give you a few other facts which might be of interest to the House and to my honourable friends opposite. Now, Sir, the ostensible reason for this demonstration was, as reported to me, that my honourable friend Sardar Partab Singh and others wanted the people to defy section 144, because the Government had decided to raise the land revenue of Amritsar by 4 lakhs per annum. That was one reason given in the meeting at Jallianwala Bagh. (Sardar Partab Singh : That is not correct). That may not be correct. Then somebody else gave that reason. That was the ostensible reason why they wanted to make a demonstration in the Civil Lines. But what are the facts? The facts are well-known to my honourable friends opposite : there is going to be no increase in the assessment, at least for 5 years, beyond the present assessment in Amritsar and no decision has yet been taken as to the assessment thereafter. That undertaking was given in this House by the Honourable Minister for Revenue and yet my honourable friend suppressed those facts and did not convey them to those people. Another ostensible reason for this demonstration was that the settlement officer did not hear the legitimate grievances of the peasants. My honourable friend is perfectly aware and it is quite possible that other friends of his may have seen the settlement officer themselves, and I know it for a fact that the settlement officer has to move from village to village and he gives everybody an opportunity to bring to his notice all legitimate grievances. He had very rightly drawn a line against the people from outside coming in and trying to intervene in the affairs of those peasants. And I endorse his action; moreover, Government has announced already that if the settlement officer cannot or does not remove any legitimate grievances of the public, the doors of the Government are always open to receive and meet bona fide representations.

Let me give you further information. The Deputy Commissioner, when that jatha arrived there, had a talk with that Jatha himself and he offered that he would be prepared to receive a deputation, not of 5, not of 10, and not of 20, but of 50 selected people, and that he would be prepared to hear all the grievances and, if necessary, to convey them to the Government. But naturally they did not accept his offer. Why? Because the object was not to convey to the Government or to the officers concerned, the grievances of those peasants, but to try to confuse the issues and further dupe those persons—for whom they profess sympathy—as the real saviours of the people—and to make out that the Government is trying to bamboozle them. That was the reason which led to their not consulting him or accepting his offer to receive a deputation.

Now, Sir, I am constrained to point out a very unfortunate aspect of this incident. I see that our honourable lady member, Shrimati Raghbir Kaur, has spoken on this motion. I need only say that Shrimati Raghbir Kaur has been making several speeches during the course of this session, particularly with regard to these Bills and everywhere she has been trying her best to confuse the issues by telling the peasants that these Bills are meant for big landlords and not for poor peasants and therefore, the Government does not want to help them. As a matter of fact she put forward a camouflaged version of the Bills before them. The incident, to which I wish to refer, with much regret, is this that there was also a women's jatha, led by Bibi Kartar Kaur and Shrimati Raghbir Kaur, and she, who has been depicting me and my friends here as unscrupulous and pitiless Czars, including my honourable friend opposite, said that—I am rather ashamed even to mention it in this House, but, however, I may confine myself by merely saying that she used filthy and abusive language against the Ministry and against everybody, the local officials and others concerned, and yet my honourable friends opposite have taken objection to the Deputy Commissioner's alleged use of the words "bloody nonsense" or some words to that effect. This is the allegation. I do not say that the words used by the Deputy Commissioner were discreet or correct in form, if he did use them, but let me point out to you what they said about the Deputy Commissioner himself. He after all is a human being and not an angel such as my friend Sardar Bohan Singh Josh would claim to be. This jatha was using filthy language against the Ministry and against my friend Sir Sunder Singh Majithia, and against local officials.

Sardar Bohan Singh Josh: This is all fabricated. I was there myself.

Premier: I am very sorry for the honourable member because if he was in the jatha he would be a member of an unlawful assembly. But if he was there he should have had the courage to be in the front of that jatha.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : I shall be there. I am not afraid of it.

Premier : I was submitting, Sir, that that jatha used filthy language. Among their mild outbursts were expressions such as—

دینی کمشنر کا بیڑا غرق      کپتان کا بیڑا غرق

The procession was accompanied by a corpse of malba. Now I want to ask, had those people no constitutional method to adopt if they wished to bring to the notice of the Government or local officials their grievances? Were all other avenues closed to them except that of marching in a procession before the residence of the Deputy Commissioner or of the Settlement Officer or of Sir Sunder Singh and using foul language and filthy slogans?

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : You are misinformed.

Premier : Only the information of the honourable member is correct; and of all others is wrong! Shall I remind my honourable friend that according to his own version he was also with that jatha and a member of an unlawful assembly?

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : I was a spectator there. (Laughter).

Premier : My honourable friend now confesses that he was only an interested spectator. I am very glad to hear that. I agree that discretion is the better part of valour. I ask my honourable friends, was there any real necessity for a demonstration like this? Could not they come to me or to my friend Sir Sunder Singh or to the official concerned? Has the Government refused to listen to the legitimate grievances of the people in the past?

Many honourable members : Yes.

Premier : No. Government has always been sympathetic towards the legitimate grievances of the public. If they deliberately decided upon a course of action which would bring them into conflict with the law of the land, how can they genuinely blame those people against whom they came into conflict? Those who have duped those poor peasants are most dishonest. (Voices : It is unparliamentary.) (Interruptions.) I am not talking about the honourable members here, but those who misled those poor peasants into forming jathas and making that demonstration were not only dishonest, but it was a criminal action on their part to mislead and dupe innocent people. (Hear, hear.)

So far as the attitude of the police is concerned, I am prepared to say that our Punjab police is second to none in the country. I will not in any way overlook their excesses and shield them. My honourable friends will find that no other province has taken action against the corrupt officials of this department as we have.

In the end I must say that I have made some enquiries and I will make further enquiries into the allegations made to-day and if after making those enquiries I come to the conclusion that there is any truth in those allegations, honourable members may rest assured that I will not desist from punishing those responsible for any excesses (applause).

Sardar Partab Singh : Sir I rise to a point of personal explanation. The first charge levelled against us is that we obtained a holiday on the 16th July simply in order to go over to Amritsar and fan the fire of lawlessness among the people there. That is entirely unfounded. The second is that the poster complained of was published on the 6th of July and nothing was known regarding the Bills then. Thirdly, it is asserted that the Deputy Commissioner was willing to receive a deputation of 50 persons but we refused to send any deputation. The fact is that the Deputy Commissioner was not agreeable to any such reasonable thing. The fourth charge that the jatha carried an effigy of Sir Sundar Singh is altogether false!

Mr. Speaker : That is not a personal explanation.

Sardar Sohan Singh Josh : I wish to offer a personal explanation. The honourable Premier has questioned why I was not present there when the lathi charge took place at Amritsar. I may submit that I was there and if on some future occasion again an opportunity arises I will be present with my brethren and I will very gladly receive the lathi blows of the police.

THE PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND (THIRD AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. Speaker : The Assembly will now take up the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill.

Minister for Revenue (The Honourable Dr. Sir Sunder Singh Majithia) : I beg to move—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill as reported by the select committee be taken into consideration.

The motion was carried.

Clause 2.

Mr. Speaker : The Assembly will now proceed to consider the Bill clause by clause. The question is—

That clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 3.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the first four lines of clause 3 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Pandit Mithi Lal Kalia (Ludhiana and Ferozapore, General, Rural) :
I beg to move—

That in 3-A, lines 8—11, for the words "who being a creditor ..... settlement" the following be substituted.

"who carries on the business of advancing loans and who—

- (a) has in either of the two preceding financial years been assessed to income-tax under the Indian Income-tax Act or under the Income-tax Acts of any Indian State; or
- (b) has within the two immediately preceding years been assessed to professional tax under the Punjab District Board Act; or
- (c) has either during the two immediately preceding years been assessed to house tax under the Punjab Municipal Act or any law governing the Municipal or local bodies in any province in British India or any Indian State, provided that the aggregate annual rental value of such buildings whether let out or in the occupation of the owner is not less than Rs. 400; or
- (d) has been assessed to land revenue exceeding Rs. 300."

It was announced by the Honourable Premier the other day on the floor of this House that he wanted to bring in a measure placing the agriculturist money-lenders on the same footing as the non-agriculturist money-lenders so far as the power of expropriation was concerned. It is in fulfilment of that announcement that this Bill is being rushed through in this session. But I may submit that the provisions of this Bill do not fulfil that promise in entirety. I cannot even say that it is a half-hearted measure.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member will please confine his remarks to the amendment.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : I am confining myself to the amendment. The words of the proposed section only limits the operation, rather restricts the rapacity of the agriculturist money-lenders to a limited period and the provision can very easily be evaded. It is generally recognised that all legislation dealing with money-lending are generally evaded. But so far as the present Bill is concerned it is so full of faults that it is easily possible to evade its provisions. The agriculturist money-lender can evade the provisions of this Bill by waiting for three years or by adopting certain fictitious methods. If the present Government is sincere in what it says and is in a mood to bring the agriculturist money-lenders to the same level as the non-agriculturist money-lenders, then the same measure governing the dealings of the non-agriculturist money-lenders should be brought forward with regard to the dealings of the agriculturist money-lenders. Otherwise it will be only an eye wash and will not serve the purpose in the least. The words of the proposed clause are—

Who being a creditor has advanced to such person any loan, until such loan has been repaid or settled in full by the debtor and a period of three years has elapsed since repayment or settlement.

It comes to this that it is only during the period that there is relation between the debtor and the creditor or three years thereafter that he is protected by law, otherwise he is not protected. But that is not the intention. I ask one question and a most pertinent question too. What is at all the difference in the mind of the legislators between the agriculturist money-lender and the non-agriculturist money-lender? I may here quote the words from Darling's Book "Punjab Peasant in Prosperity and in debt" which is the gospel of the other side and which is quoted very often by the Minister. These are his remarks—"An agriculturist money-lender is the most dangerous and most rapacious" and so far as his dealings with the poor peasant agriculturists are concerned he is a sahukar whose rapacity has been so graphically described by him in an earlier chapter. Therefore it is no use just proposing a Bill of the type before the House which does not in any way remove the apprehensions entertained by Mr. Darling and other authorities. It is for that very reason that I have tried to introduce an amendment so that a person who is doing money-lending and is also an agriculturist should be debarred, if his position is such that he can purchase land, from doing this. At the same time my amendment goes a bit further than the one proposed from the Government benches, because under the amendment which I have proposed, there are two distinct advantages which benefit the zamindars and the peasant. I have excluded persons who are agriculturists and doing money-lending business but are not assessed to income-tax. My amendment is that those agriculturist money-lenders who are not assessed to income-tax or the house-tax which is assessed in municipal towns like Simla and Dalhousie and are not assessed to professional tax and who are also at the same time not assessed to income-tax or people who do not pay land revenue of more than Rs. 300 should be allowed to do money-lending business, but so far as those persons are concerned, who besides doing money-lending business pay income-tax and whose minimum assessable income is Rs. 2,000 and who are assessed to professional tax or house-tax or who pay land revenue exceeding Rs. 300 should be debarred permanently on the same lines as non-agriculturist money-lenders so long as they are in that better position and should be debarred from purchasing land. There is one thing which may be urged from the other side that we want to debar the rich agriculturists who fall within those conditions. But that is not the thing. As a matter of fact I only restrict it to those who do the business of money-lending so that the amendment proposed from this side is much better than the one proposed by Government. It should not be turned down simply because it has been proposed from this side of the House. So far as the points that are incorporated in it are concerned they have been taken from a similar legislation in another province of Madras. In Madras a Bill was moved to provide for the relief of indebtedness of the agriculturists and there they have made no distinction between an agriculturist and a non-agriculturist. It is also proposed here that persons who are agriculturist and who do money-lending should not have the same privilege of acquiring other people's land as ordinary agriculturists. If the object of introducing this amendment of the Land Alienation Act is only to protect the poor peasant of the Punjab from further expropriation at a time when the agriculturist money-lender is more dangerous, then in that case it is high time that the amendment of this nature should be adopted at this time. I have not transgressed the words used by the Premier. Otherwise I had other suggestions as well that provided great restraint on the power of borrowing so far as the peasant was concerned. But I have not placed them before the House because this Bill has been introduced with the definite idea of bringing to the same level the agriculturist as well as the non-agriculturist money-lender.

Mr. Speaker : How many times will the honourable member repeat this point ?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : For these reasons I say that my amendment should be accepted.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in 3-A, lines 8—11, for the words " who being a creditor ..... settlement" the following be substituted :—

"who carries on the business of advancing loans and who—

- (a) has in either of the two preceding financial years been assessed to income-tax under the Indian Income-tax Act or under the Indian Income-tax laws of any Indian State; or
- (b) has within the two immediately preceding years been assessed to professional tax under the Punjab District Board Act; or
- (c) has either during the two immediately preceding years been assessed to house-tax under the Punjab Municipal Act or any law governing the Municipal or local bodies in any province in British India or any Indian State, provided that the aggregate annual rental value of such buildings whether let out or in the occupation of the owner is not less than Rs. 400; or
- (d) has been assessed to land revenue exceeding Rs. 300."

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I must confess that I have not been able to follow either the amendment of my honourable friend or the reasoning which he gave in support of the amendment. I do not follow his object; it must be very subtle and very clever. I am afraid this amendment has nothing to do with this Bill or the objects which we want to achieve. My honourable friend said that we must put the agriculturist money-lender on the same footing as the non-agriculturist money-lender, but where does the Bill say that he shall not be so placed? Under that Act, if he comes within the category of the persons defined in the Money-lenders Bill which has just been passed, he will be a money-lender whether he is an agriculturist or not. The only advantage which the agriculturist money-lender has over a non-agriculturist money-lender, and this is the main reason why we want to cramp his style, if I may use such an expression, is that the agriculturist can buy the land from another agriculturist in lieu of the debt advanced to him. It is that particular operation on the part of the agriculturist money-lender which we want to restrict or stop altogether, and that has been done effectively in this Bill. My honourable friend wants to go further. If he has studied this Bill, as I hope he has, he will find that definitions here are identical with the definitions in the other Bill and therefore we have as a matter of fact at the risk even of repetition included all the various clauses so that there may be no question to-morrow that there has been differential treatment. So far as the question of money-lending is concerned if all the ingredients given in that other Bill are there, an agriculturist will come under the purview of that Bill and he will be a money-lender. But under this Act we go still further. He will not be able to buy from another agriculturist debtor. So long as that man is indebted to the money-lender, he will not be able to purchase his land. Not only that, we go further and say that he will not purchase land from that debtor or his near relation for three years even after the liquidation of the debt so that there is no undue influence of that agriculturist money-lender or the vendor himself if the land changed hands. That is made quite clear and if my honourable friend has read the report of the select committee he will find that we have tried to stop all possible loopholes and to make the provisions water-tight. I do not know what my honourable friend means by the second sub-clause—

[Premier.]

*has within the two immediately preceding years been assessed to professional tax under the Punjab District Board Act, or"

What has that got to do with agricultural money-lender ?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : I will explain.

Premier : He talked of land-revenue exceeding Rs. 300. Does he mean to say that those who are assessed to land-revenue less than Rs. 300 should be excluded from this Bill? Is that his object?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : That is my object.

Premier : That is not the object of the Bill. My honourable friend wants to exclude those money-lenders who are not assessed to Rs. 300 land revenue or professional tax even if they are agriculturists. He says they should be excluded even if they pay thousands in addition as income-tax. (A voice : Yes.) I do not see eye to eye with him. The principle of this Bill is to restrict the agriculturist from purchasing land and my honourable friend wants to make a loophole instead of stopping it. I cannot accept his amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I want to say a few words. I oppose this motion. I think it is absolutely futile and does not meet the object which the Bill has in view. An agriculturist money-lender could drive a coach and four through this amendment and set at nought the whole Bill if this is to form part of the Bill. My honourable friend has taken this from the Madras Bill but he forgets that in Madras there is no Land Alienation Act and there is no distinction between one money-lender and another. I am very sorry to have to oppose Mr. Kalia's amendment but I think that it is wrongly conceived. (Voices : Question be now put.)

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : I want to make a reply.

Mr. Speaker : Does not the honourable member wish to withdraw his amendment ?

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : No, Sir. After incorporating the amendment in the clause it runs like this—“Except with the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner as provided for in this Act no member of an agricultural tribe shall make a permanent alienation of his land to a member of the same tribe or of a tribe in the same group who carries on the business of advancing loans and who—

- (a) has in either of the two preceding financial years been assessed to income-tax under the Indian Income-tax Act or under the Income-tax laws of any Indian State; or
- (b) has within the two immediately preceding years been assessed to professional tax under the Punjab District Board Act; or
- (c) has either during the two immediately preceding years been assessed to house-tax under the Punjab Municipal Act or any law governing the Municipal Act or any law governing the Municipal or local bodies in any province in British India or any Indian State, provided that the aggregate annual rental value of such buildings whether let out or in the occupation of the owner is not less than Rs. 400; or
- (d) has been assessed to land revenue exceeding Rs. 300.”

It is doubted by the other side whether this is in the spirit of the Bill in which it is proposed. I want to make it clear that we have got no objection to an agriculturist money-lender who does not come within the four clauses of the amendment. He may go on carrying on the business of money-lending and may not be brought to the same level as the non-agriculturist money-lender, but so far as an agriculturist money-lender who is either assessed to income tax or not is concerned I have introduced two years for one year. He may be assessed to income-tax and he may not be assessed to income-tax at the time during the year when he wants to purchase certain land and similarly with regard to assessing of professional tax. This tax is levied on a person in addition to his income from land and also on non-agriculturists. I am at present concerned with the professional tax as it is levied on agriculturists and then with regard to the fact that he has been assessed to house property. There are certain persons—agriculturists—who do not pay Rs. 800 as land-revenue but they have considerable property in municipalities like Simla and Dehra Dun. So, my submission is that for these reasons this amendment should be adopted because it gives greater scope.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in 3-A, lines 6—11, for the words “who being a creditor.....settlement” the following be substituted—

“who carries on the business of advancing loans and who—

- (a) has in either of the two preceding financial years been assessed to income-tax under the Indian income-tax Act or under the Indian income-tax laws of any Indian State; or
- (b) has within the two immediately preceding years been assessed to professional tax under the Punjab District Board Act; or
- (c) has either during the two immediately preceding years been assessed to house-tax under the Punjab Municipal Act or any law governing the municipal or local bodies in any province in British India or any Indian State, provided that the aggregate annual rental value of such buildings whether let out or in the occupation of the owner is not less than Rs. 400; or
- (d) has been assessed to land revenue exceeding Rs. 300.”

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : I beg leave to withdraw my amendment.

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : I move—

That in 3-A, line 10, for the word “three” the word “six” be substituted.

[L. Duni Chand.]

The Bill prohibits the alienation of land by a debtor during the period of his indebtedness to his creditor and during the next three years after the repayment or settlement of the debt. That is the position. This shows that the limitation for money claimed is only three years. It appears the Government does not know its own mind. At first five years were given in place of three years. Now three years have been substituted for five years. The Honourable Premier should know that in many cases for recovery of a loan the limitation is six years. Under Article 20 of the Indian Limitation Act the limitation is six years for several kinds of cash loans. The object of the Government appears to be that after the alleged repayment or settlement an opportunity should not be given to a debtor for a period of three years to alienate his land to his creditors. That purpose can be served only if the period of six years is substituted for the period of three years. For instance, if there is not a registered bond the limitation is three years but if the loan has been advanced on a registered bond, any lawyer will tell you that the period is six years under Article 120. Therefore, the object the Government has in view can be served only if the period of six years is substituted for three years, otherwise in some cases the limitation will expire after three years. There will yet remain other cases in which limitation will be six years. If the Government wants to achieve its object it should accept six years, otherwise the Government does not achieve its own object. The point that I have raised through this amendment should, therefore, be accepted.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in 2-A, line 10, for the word "three" the word "six" be substituted.

Premier : The question of limitation is as irrelevant to this amendment as my honourable friend's whole speech was to this clause. But that is not the point. We originally suggested five years because we thought that that would be a long enough period but in the select committee it was thought that it was much too long a period and it should be reduced. My honourable friend was arguing without purpose. If that debt is not settled and if that person goes to a court and gets a decree and that decree is not executed for six years, the debt remains unsettled.

Lala Duni Chand : Then why do you fix three years ?

Premier : It has got nothing to do with the limitation period. It is after that decree has been executed and the money recovered, it is only from that date that the period of three years starts. That means not only six years but nine years and, therefore, my honourable friend need not worry about it. We are not thinking of any limitation.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I support the amendment of Lala Duni Chand though not for the reasons he has given.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in 2-A, line 10, for the word "three" the word "six" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalra : I beg to move—

That in 2-A, line 16, the words "by a debtor" be deleted.

This amendment is in the same spirit and on the same lines as the main amendment. On receiving further instructions I have in this case only to move because further on I will move another amendment.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): After the various amendments already passed by the House my honourable friend's amendment cannot fit in in the clause and should be ruled out.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia: I have got another amendment. I formally move my amendment. In the first place the words are redundant and in the second place we do not want to keep the debtor or the creditor.

Mr. Speaker: The question is—

That in 3-A, line 16, the words "by a debtor" be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia: I beg to move—

That in 3-A, in line 17, for the words "his creditor" the words "the person carrying on the business of advancing loans" be substituted.

I have only to say with regard to this amendment that we want to remove the specific word "creditor". A non-agriculturist money-lender should be on the same lines as an agriculturist money-lender. Therefore we do not at all want the word "creditor." With these words I move the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The question is—

That the word "his" stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker: The next question is—

That the word "creditor" stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural): Sir, I beg to move—

That in 3-A, lines 17—20, for the words "the effect . . . . . section", the words "in order to liquidate his debt in whole or in part" be substituted.

If the Government wants to help the agriculturist debtor even to the smallest extent imaginable, then the Government should accept this amendment. This is the only substantial amendment in order to improve the scope of the Bill. What the Bill proposes is that an agriculturist debtor is not allowed to make any alienation of land to his creditor. This is the only service that Government wants to render to the agriculturist debtor. What does it come to? Besides the creditor there are other one thousand and one persons to whom he can alienate his land without any restriction. After all if there are so many persons to whom he can alienate his land, what help can you give him? He is prevented from alienating his land to a single creditor. The object of my amendment is that if the agriculturist debtor wants to alienate his land to a third person in order to pay his creditor in whole or in part, he should be prevented from doing so because in that case only you do real help to the debtor. He will not be at liberty to make alienation to any agriculturist. I may point out that ordinarily a creditor does not take the land of his own debtor in alienation for the simple reason that under the Customary Law if a creditor takes land in alienation from his debtor, then the onus of proof that there was necessity for this lies on the creditor; but if the lands are alienated to a third person and that person then pays off the creditor on behalf of the debtor, in that case the creditor is safe because under the Customary Law the necessity is presumed and the creditor is safeguarded. What is the use of it? In the first place any creditor would take care not to take any alienation from his debtor because that will not help him. On the other hand, the creditor will say "I do not want to take any transfer of land from you. Alienate the land to a third person and that third person will pay me on your behalf." If you want to extend any help to the debtor, that can be possible only if he is effectively prevented from alienating his land either to his creditor or to any third person. What is this thing which the Government wants to give to the debtor? I submit that is a mere eye-wash. Really it comes to nothing. He is not afforded any kind of protection. As I have submitted, if he has got so many other persons who can purchase and who can take the alienation from him, what protection does the Government give him? At least there should be a large number of persons who should be prevented from taking the advantage of the helpless position of the agriculturist debtor and that agriculturist debtor should not be allowed to alienate his land to that class of persons. It is claimed on behalf of the Government that they are going to confer a great boon upon the agricultural debtor. What is it? If this Bill is not a counter-part of the Restitution of Mortgaged Lands Bill, then what is it? Why has the Government taken the trouble of framing this Bill and putting it before the House? If the Government is really anxious to protect the agriculturist debtor, then the scope of the Bill should be extended. This Bill reminds me of that old story of a man digging a mountain only to find a mouse. The words "hoodwink" and "dupe" have been invariably used. If they hold good anywhere, they hold good in this case. We have to protect the agriculturist debtor, while there is actually no protection. With these words I move my amendment. If the Government sees the force of my arguments, they should have no hesitation in accepting my amendment. If the Government is adamant in not accepting this amendment, then it is nothing but a fraud upon the agriculturist debtor and a fraud upon the agriculturist creditor. Neither the debtor will get anything nor the creditor will lose anything. With these words I move my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Clause under consideration, amendment moved is that—

In 3-A, lines 17—20, for the words "the effect .....section", the words "in order to liquidate his debt in whole or in part" be substituted.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): Sir, I am afraid, my honourable friend, in his love for the agriculturist debtor, has allowed himself to go off the path of sanity and sound logic. With due deference I would request him to read the proviso with the insertion of his words. Now, after incorporating his words, the proviso to this section would read thus—

".....in order to liquidate his debt in whole or in part, he (the Deputy Commissioner) shall, after recording his reasons by order in writing declare the alienation void and shall eject any person in occupation of the land by virtue of such alienation and shall place the alienor in possession thereof."

In other words, under the substantive section, a debtor is debarred from selling his land to his creditor while he owes him a debt, but under the proviso as amended he would be debarred from selling his land even in liquidation of his debt; in other words, it would make it impossible for a debtor to get rid of his debt. That would be the only consequence of my friend's amendment. I am sure that in all seriousness, my honourable friend would not like to move an amendment of this nature.

Secondly, Sir, he forgets that we have in this section used the words "in evasion of the provisions of this section." It is only with regard to a benami transaction which is entered into by a debtor and the benefit of it is given to the creditor in the form of benami that we have placed the agriculturist money-lender in exactly the same position as the non-agriculturist money-lender.

Lala Duni Chand : Sir, I want to let Mir Maqbool Mahmood understand whether he is devoid of sanity or I am devoid of sanity. What is the object of the Government? The object of the Government is not to prevent the debtor from alienating his land. If that is the object, what services are they rendering to the debtor? Whether he alienates his land to the creditor or to a third person is immaterial. Relief can be granted to him only if his land is saved from being alienated. If his land is alienated to A, B or C, what relief does the Government render to the debtor? Is it the object of the Government that he should alienate his land in order to pay his debts to any number of persons and that it should not be alienated to the creditor? Is it not a senseless thing? After all you want to serve the debtor by imposing restrictions on him as to liberty to sell his land. You must give him some relief and that is why I have moved my amendment.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

In 3-A, lines 17—20, for the words "the effect.....section"; the words "in order to liquidate his debt, in whole or in part" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Lala Duni Chand (Ambala and Simla, General, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move that—

In 3-A, lines 22-23, between the words "person" and "in" the word "if" be inserted.

This is really to improve the language of the section. If you will kindly listen to me you will know what it is. If you want to remain in a state of ignorance, do remain in that state by all means. This clause supposes that all the alienations that will be made, will be alienations accompanied by possession. But there may be some which may not be accompanied by possession. It is to be applied to such alienations, if the word "if" between the words "person" and "in" be inserted; otherwise it would mean that alienations that will be made will be accompanied by possession. In this clause a permanent alienation has been defined as including all temporary alienations. If there is a mortgage without possession, then this clause will not apply and in that case it will be impossible for you to grant the relief that you intend to grant to the debtor, and then the operation of this clause will be confined only to those alienations which will be accompanied by possession. It will not apply to any other alienation in which the possession has not been delivered. It is really in order to help and in order to enable you to carry out the object that you have in view, that I move this amendment. It is for you to accept it or not.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration; amendment moved is that—

In 3-A, lines 22-23, between the words "person" and "in" the word "if" be inserted.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan): I beg to submit that if my honourable friend merely wants to clear the position by altering the language, he has probably not noticed the words "in occupation of the land by virtue of such alienation." I am afraid if we put the word 'if' as desired by Laia Duni Chand, it may take away the present meaning which I, and he also, want to be retained in this clause and it might lead to several complications. On the other hand, if it is merely a question of a grammatical precision, then I am prepared to confess that in my case ignorance is probably a bliss.

Mr. Speaker: Question is—

That in 3-A, lines 22-23, between the words "person" and "in" the word "if" be inserted.
The motion was lost.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia (Ludhiana and Ferozepore, General, Rural): I beg to move—

That in 3-A, lines 1-25, for the words "3-A.....in possession thereof", the following be substituted:—

"3-A. Except with the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner provided for in this Act, no member of an agricultural tribe shall make a permanent alienation of his land to a member of the same tribe or of a tribe in the same group, who carries on the business of advancing of loans and who:—

(a) has, in either of the two preceding financial years, been assessed to income-tax, under the Indian Income Tax Act or under Income Tax laws of any Indian states; or

(b) .....

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): On a point of order, Sir, what the honourable member is now proposing has already been turned down. Is not his amendment out of order?

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: May I just say a word? This amendment is practically out of order. It is almost exactly the same which was moved by him in another form.

Mr. Speaker: I hold the amendment of the honourable Pandit Muni Lal Kalia to be out of order.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General Rural): Sir, I beg to move—

That for the proposed section 3-A the following be substituted:—

"3-A. Any creditor who is a member of the notified agricultural tribe shall from the date he is registered as a money-lender under the Punjab Money-lenders Registration Act cease to be a member of a notified agricultural tribe for the purposes of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900 and shall not be treated as a member of a notified agricultural tribe until three years after the removal of his name from the register of money-lenders, provided that if his name is removed for any disability incurred by him under section 6 of the Punjab Money-lenders Registration Act he shall never be treated as a member of a notified agricultural tribe under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act."

Sardar Dasandha Singh (Deputy Speaker): This amendment is obviously beyond the scope of the Bill. The scope of the Bill is a restricted one. Only partial restrictions have been imposed on the capacity of an agriculturist debtor to alienate his property and on the capacity of an agriculturist creditor to have the alienation in his favour from his debtor.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : There is another point and a shorter way to rule this amendment out of order. Sir, you have put line 23 to the House and the House has passed it. Would it be proper for the House to go back on what has already been done? My second objection is that my honourable friend has referred to the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders Act and I submit there is no such Act on the Statute Book so far.

Mr. Speaker : Does not the proposed new clause go beyond the scope of the Bill ?

Premier : It does.

Mr. Speaker : Question is that honourable member be given leave to move this new clause.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : I have two points of order to raise. Firstly the House has decided that the words ' his creditor ' in line 17 stand part of the clause. Now the amendment proposed to this clause will be setting aside the decision already arrived at by the House, because these words ' his creditor ' are sought to be removed.

Mr. Speaker : After the clause is amended, it is open to any member to move that another clause take the place of the amended clause.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : My second point is that in this amendment there is a reference to the Money-lenders' Registration Act. But there is no such Act in existence at present.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Now the points of order have been shelved in favour of the proposition that you have put before the House, namely, that leave may be granted to introduce the new clause.

Premier : No. The point of order is that my honourable friend in his amendment says—

Any creditor who is a member of the notified agricultural tribe shall from the date he is registered as a money-lender under the Punjab Money-lenders' Registration Act cease.....

But there is no such Act as is referred to in the amendment. Therefore the word ' money-lender ' will have to be defined afresh. In fact we ourselves have substituted the word ' creditor ' for ' money-lender ' because the measure in which the expression ' money-lender ' is defined has not yet become an Act. Otherwise it would have been a very simple matter to get this Bill drafted. There would then have been only one clause.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Now three points of order have been raised and I shall reply to every one of them. I am sure you will consider that the point of order raised by the learned Deputy Speaker does not deserve any discussion.

Sardar Dasamudha Singh : I do not press that point of order.

Mr. Speaker : The Bill as originally drafted and published in the Gazette referred to the Registration of Money-lenders Act, which did not and does not exist. The Honourable Premier's attention being invited to this defect he did not introduce that but got another Bill drafted and duly introduced. Under these circumstances I cannot allow an amendment which suffers from the same defect as the original Bill which the Honourable Premier did not introduce.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I shall try to meet that objection. I know that there is no Punjab Registration of Money-lenders Act in existence at present. Nevertheless I sent in this amendment though I must say that it was written in great haste. We are now proceeding in a rush and therefore under a great disadvantage. The Honourable Premier promised on the floor of the House more than once that he would not bring into force the Money-lenders' Registration Act until he had framed a Bill to place the agriculturist money-lenders on the same footing as the non-agriculturist money-lenders. At least I understood him to be earnest and sincere in what he said. I expected that when the Money-lenders' Registration Act came into force this measure also would come into force. If the Premier sticks to his promise and assurance which he gave to this House it would mean that this Bill would follow the Bill which we have recently passed. It was keeping in view the assurance of the Honourable Premier that I brought forward this amendment. Once you concede that the Premier has carried out that assurance it means that the Punjab Registration of Money-lenders Act is there. Then follows this Act. Thereafter any reference in this Bill to the Money-lenders' Registration Act will be perfectly in order. This is my submission with regard to the point of order.

One word more. As I submitted, you have departed from the ordinary rule of 7 days and have allowed the select committee's report to be considered within less than 24 hours of its publication, why, even less, because a part of the select committee's report was handed over to us here only to-day at 2 P.M., so that, you are allowing the consideration of the select committee's report within less than five hours of its publication. I would therefore request that if you find any defect in this amendment you will kindly allow me to amend that amendment and move it again.

Premier : You cannot amend it.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Why not?

Premier : I tried to amend it myself but found it impossible.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I may not use the word 'money-lender.' I may use the word 'creditor.' What I mean to say is this, we should have an amendment which should place the agriculturist money-lender in exactly the same position as a non-agriculturist money-lender qua the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. If you want to have loopholes, if you want to keep the doors open for the agriculturist money-lenders which you keep closed for the non-agriculturist money-lenders, that is quite a different matter. I may submit that when the first Bill was circulated among the honourable members I said it was only a scrap of paper. You would agree with me that it was even worse than what I described it to be. It was no Bill at all and no Government should have allowed it to come out of the Secretariat. However, wisdom dawned upon the Government and you also helped them by pointing out the defects and enabled them to withdraw the Bill. Then they brought forward another. It was also full of defects. I sent in amendments to the Bill as introduced by them a second time, but prudence dictated that the Bill should be referred to a select committee for rectifying the mistakes. It was accordingly sent to a select committee where it was further amended. Even now the Bill as amended by the select committee is full of loopholes and as you are allowing the Government to have its own way so far as time is concerned, I request you to kindly adjourn the House to-day to enable us to bring forward a properly drafted amendment to-morrow. We really have had no time to draft a well-considered amendment. As I already pointed out I got the select committee's report only at 8-30 P.M. yesterday and a part of it only to-day at about 2 P.M. We are not very much interested in the Bill, but we are really interested in seeing that the promise of the Premier is implemented in the right sense. We should not allow a Bill to be passed with all the loopholes in it. I would therefore pray that the House be adjourned till to-morrow. So far as I am concerned I shall give an assurance that the business will be finished to-morrow, before 4 o'clock.

Premier : On a question of fact, what I actually said in this House was that I will not enforce the other Bill if it becomes an Act unless this law also comes into force. That means that this will come on the statute book before the other does. There is no other possibility. This Bill will come into force on the same day as the other. The defect which my honourable friend pointed out and which you, Mr. Speaker, also pointed out appealed to me and it was for that reason that I withdrew the original Bill and brought forward this Bill with an elaborate definition; I have practically reproduced the definitions given in the Bill which we passed a few days ago.

Now, with regard to the point which my honourable friend made that we should place the agriculturist money-lender on the same footing as the non-agriculturist money-lender, I may point out that if he comes under the definition of that Bill he will be on the same footing. The only thing which he could do was to buy land. In this respect we have not only restricted it, but restricted it for a period of three years—

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Have you restricted?

Premier : Yes.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I shall point out the loopholes.

Premier : The honourable member's amendment would mean that the debtor should not sell his land to anybody.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : No, no.

Mr. Speaker : I hold the honourable member's amendment to be out of order.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : If you adjourn the House for half an hour I shall be able to present a properly drafted amendment. Nothing will be lost if you adjourn for half an hour.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That 3-A stand part of the clause.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I am going to oppose the clause.

Premier : Please point out the loopholes.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : It is really very good of the Honourable Premier to have accepted the two amendments of mine so that mortgages are also included in the Bill and an attempt has been made to exclude benami transactions. Still there are several loopholes left in the Bill. All that this clause says is that an agriculturist money-lender shall not be able to take the land of his debtor while the debt is unpaid and three years after the payment of debt in full. On the surface it looks quite all right, but if you analyse it carefully, it really does not meet the object. The difficulty in the way of a money-lender in realising his debt is that he cannot get at the land of the agriculturist debtor and he tries to evade the Land Alienation Act by a device and getting what is called a benami transaction. In this case a provision has been made apparently against benami, but it is of no effect and I shall tell the Honourable Premier why it would not meet his point if he really wants to place the two classes of money-lender on the same level. Suppose I am a zamindar agriculturist money-lender and my friend is also an agriculturist money-lender and suppose my friend over there is an agriculturist debtor and another gentleman is also an agriculturist debtor. We come to an agreement and we say, "All right you take Sardar Kartar Singh who is my debtor and I take Pandit Shri Ram Sharma who is your debtor. I shall take the land of your debtor and you take the land of my debtor, you realise your debt and I realise mine." Now what is the use of this scrap of paper? It is rendered absolutely nugatory. This is obvious, because by this Bill as it stands the debtor only is precluded from giving his land to his creditor, he is not precluded from transferring his land to another zamindar. If there are half a dozen or even three or four agriculturist money-lenders in a village, they can take the whole land belonging to the agriculturist debtors. They can, as I said in connection with the amendment moved by Mr. Kalia, drive a coach and four into this clause of yours and it will be of no avail to you to prevent the land of an agriculturist debtor from passing into the hands of the agriculturist creditor. This is so obvious that I consider it really a waste of time to emphasise it or try to make it any clearer. You will see that according to the speech that the Honourable Premier made the other day, it is not benami if a non-agriculturist persuades an agriculturist to buy the land of an agriculturist debtor and pay his debts. This is all right so far as it goes but the non-agriculturist money-lender has not got any status to return the compliment to the agriculturist middle man.

Premier : I see your point.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : He cannot say to the agriculturist money-lender, you take my debtor's land and I shall take your debtor's land. Therefore he is helpless, he cannot return the favour done to him by an obliging agriculturist money-lender friend. But take the case of agriculturist money-lenders. They have only to arrange among themselves and, as I have said, they can purchase the land belonging to all the agriculturist debtors in the village or even in the neighbourhood. This Bill will, therefore, become utterly useless. I think I cannot say anything in reply because my amendment has gone but I should like to hear with very great interest and attention what the Honourable Premier has got to say about it.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Lahore City, General, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, a new point strikes me and I feel that I must submit it. I fully support what Dr. Narang has stated that two or three persons can purchase land collectively. I wish to make the Honourable Premier understand that if in future an agriculturist happens to go to an agriculturist money-lender for taking money on loan, the agriculturist money-lender would tell him directly, "I cannot lend you money because I am not allowed to do so and as you are also not allowed to mortgage your land to me, we are both helpless. But stay, there is one way left for us. If you are in great need of money you can sell your land to me. The Act says that I cannot make you my debtor by giving you money on loan but I can purchase your land". Does the Honourable Premier know what would be the result? The result would be that even mortgaged lands would be sold to agriculturist money-lenders. In consideration of these facts it is possible, nay probable, that at once sales would begin to be made in large numbers. Zamindars, under the proposed Bill, would have no option except giving away their lands in sale to agriculturist money-lenders. He would have no alternative except this. I am afraid in this way, what the Government wish to decrease would increase.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, the point which has been made by my friend Dr. Gokul Chand appears prima facie to have some force in it and I confess that on a casual reading of the clause on paper the danger does exist; if there is collusion between two money-lenders it is quite possible that they might be able to evade our proviso but so far as bonami transactions are concerned these efforts will be in vain. In practice, however, my honourable friend will agree that the agriculturist money-lender does not operate like the ordinary money-lender. He merely selects a victim and pays him money, and in nine cases out of ten he would not ask any other money-lender to come in because he originally advanced the money only with the object of obtaining his land. But an agriculturist debtor is not likely to be so pliable as to sell his land to someone to whom he owes no money. Anyway if we find that there is substantial evasion of the Bill as suggested by Dr. Sahib I will examine it further and will remove it through further amendment in the next session if need be.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : You can postpone this Bill.

Premier : I am afraid it will not be fair. I have given an undertaking that the other Act will not come into force until this Act is passed and I must abide by my words.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : You can pass and not enforce it.

Premier : Neither will be enforced unless we make rules; I will examine the question and if it is necessary to further avoid this risk we shall devise suitable means. Let the honourable member examine it over night and then we will see to it. I will not make the motion that the third reading be made to-night. We would not be able to consider it fully now. You are tired and I am not feeling particularly fresh, so is the Advocate-General who has been concentrating the whole time even on the smallest amendments, specially the amendments moved by my friend Lala Duni Chand and he was at a loss to find out where they fitted in and what was the meaning. About the point raised by my honourable friend Dr. Gopi Chand I am afraid it stretches the thing too far. It is quite possible that that might be the effect of it, and eventually we may have to amend this Act. As a matter of fact I warned my honourable friends when we were discussing the Benami Bill and the Mortgaged Lands Bill that the agriculturist who mortgages his land with another agriculturist does so because it pays him to do so.

[Premier.]

but then my point was strongly resisted and even resented by my honourable friend and others, because they thought that it would mean that they will have to sell it, if we do not permit the mortgage. That argument was criticised and opposed. I am afraid I cannot accept what my honourable friend now said.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That 3-A stand part of clause 3.

The motion was carried.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I have given notice of a number of amendments to the "Explanation". My submission is that it is extremely unfair on the part of the Government to rush the Bill through like this. My idea was that there were those amendments and mutatis mutandis they would be considered. I move them now.

Mr. Speaker : But the whole Bill has been changed. If the honourable member will refer to the Explanation, he will find that the words—are new. There are two Bills. One relates to non-agriculturists and the other to agriculturists.

"the permanent alienation includes an alienation in any form other than those permitted by section 6 of this Act."

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I may be permitted to say a few words. There is yet a distinction between this Bill and the Bill we have already passed. That Bill dealt with the ordinary money-lender and there may be certain provisions which were harmless there and which are very mischievous here and which would defeat the very object of this Bill. Unless they are prepared to have a Bill which would really implement the Premier's promise his promise will be like the promises made by the witches in Macbeth : you can make promises in so many words but break them in the performance. That is a different thing. I will give you one instance. In the Money-lenders' Bill there was a clause that a loan shall not be treated as a loan, if it is advanced on a negotiable instrument except a promote. It was quite all right there because it was understood that negotiable instruments are used by traders and the Government did not want to hamper their business and, therefore, they exempted such loans from the definition of a loan but now take the case of the present Bill.

Mr. Speaker : I am going to put everything to the House.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Let me finish the sentence that I was going to say, that here, if an agriculturist money-lender is allowed to advance loans on negotiable instruments, he can buy the whole land of the debtor because that will not be a loan according to your definition.

Mr. Speaker : No reasons are required.

Premier : He would be a money-lender under that Act also.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : We take this Bill as it is.

Premier : I merely want to submit one thing through you. So far as that Bill is concerned, it would in any case be applicable to the agriculturist money-lender. We had to put in all these items because we could not see the word "money-lenders" defined differently in the two Bills. Your point is that if he is allowed to use hundis he will be able to buy land from the debtor. He will not be able to do so. If my honourable friend will think it calmly he will find that that point has already been considered.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : The submission that I was going to make was this.

Mr. Speaker : I cannot allow further discussion.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I want to make a request. As my amendments which were sent before the select committee report was presented are out of order—and I believe they are out of order strictly speaking—you would allow me kindly to hand over the amendments to you with respect to the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee.

Mr. Speaker : I shall gladly consider them when received.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Then all those amendments I would like to hand over to you. They may be taken as fresh amendments.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That part (1) of the Explanation stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That part (2) of the Explanation stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia (Ludhiana and Ferozepore, General, Rural) :
I move—

That in sub-clause (3) of the Explanation, line 8, between the words "common" and "grandfather" the word "great" be inserted.

My submission is that it often happens that a son pre-deceases and in that case the grandson is doing the business, and the grandfather can also purchase land when the business is being done by a grandson. So in order that this Bill may be more operative so far as it goes, it should begin from "great-grandfather". So far as this Bill is concerned "common grandfather" means nothing. It means only that grand-uncle can purchase it. In order to put a stop so far as the near relations are concerned, at least addition should be made to the extent of "common great-grandfather".

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in sub-clause (3) of the Explanation, line 8, between the words "common" and "grandfather" the word "great" be inserted.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, I support the amendment. In one of the amendments previously submitted I had suggested that the word "grandfather" should be added. It is not very unusual for a man to have his grandfather alive. I should like to have "grandfather" included and that grandfather would not have descended from the common grandfather of the creditor! The soundness of the amendment is obvious.

Premier : Your amendment was then accepted. You wanted paternal grandfather: we said 'no,' both paternal and maternal grandfather: both here also. We accept your amendment.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I want the addition of "grandfather" to the sons and brothers. That is the point.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in sub-clause (3) of the Explanation, line 6, between the words "common" and "grandfather" the word "great" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : I beg to move—

That in line 6 of sub-clause (3) the word "common" be deleted.

It is only a verbal amendment. If you think over it you will see that the insertion of the word "common" is ludicrous. You wanted to say 'who are descended from the common grandfather.' It is this conception in their mind which is responsible for this confusion here. Do you not see that? The object would be fully served by saying "who are descended from the grandfather of such creditor or debtor as the case may be." So the word "common" may be deleted.

Premier : I accept the amendment.

Mr. Speaker : The question is :—

That in line 6 of sub-clause (3) the word "common" be deleted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That part (3) of the Explanation as amended stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Sir, I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (4), lines 3—5, the words "as defined.....1930" be deleted.

There are so many clauses which are unnecessary and redundant. So far as the term 'loan' is concerned it is only to be restricted to its use as a creditor defined in this Bill is in his relation to debtor.

Premier : May I say a few words? It will save the time of my honourable friend. The word 'interest' has been defined in the Regulation of Accounts Act, 1930.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in sub-clause (4), lines 3—5, the words "as defined.....1930" be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang : Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause (4) of the Explanation between the words 'advance' and 'whether' the words 'made by a member of an agricultural tribe to a member of an agricultural tribe' be inserted.

My reason for submitting this amendment is that the definition would be quite sufficient and absolutely comprehensive and simple. The term 'loan' means an advance made by a member of an agricultural tribe to a member of an agricultural tribe whether secured or unsecured. In this Bill we are dealing with only loans advanced by an agriculturist money-lender to an agriculturist debtor. You will see presently that the whole of this long list, barring one or two clauses is absolutely redundant and unnecessary. I am going to move for the deletion of most of the clauses.

Premier : We discussed this point thread-bare in the committee. I also said that the whole thing was redundant, because that Bill is still a Bill. We have to keep it so that nobody may say to-morrow that it is wrong.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Are you pleasing the fools?

Premier : As a matter of fact I am afraid there are more fools than wise men like you. Fools always make the feast and we eat them.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I hope you have followed me. I do not want to make a speech: the object is obvious.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is—

That in clause (4) of the Explanation, lines 1-2, between the words 'advance' and 'whether' the words 'made by a member of an agricultural tribe to a member of an agricultural tribe' be inserted.

Premier : May I point out to my honourable friend that he must read the definition of 'loan' with the definition of 'credit': both must be read together. It is to circumscribe that definition that we have brought it in: It was necessary? If you will look carefully you will find it.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That in clause (4) of the Explanation, lines 1-2, between the words "advance" and "whether" the words "made by a member of an agricultural tribe to a member of an agricultural tribe" be inserted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That part (4) of the Explanation stand part of the clause.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : There is the amendment—

That in sub-clause (4) of the Explanation the words after the word 'loan' in line 8 to the end be deleted.

You will see that in the last line of sub-clause (4) the words are 'but it shall not include'; then there are items (i), (ii), (iii) and so on. My amendment is that beginning with the words 'but it shall not include' the whole lot may be deleted.

Mr. Speaker : Clause under consideration, amendment moved is that—

After the word "loan" all the remaining portion be deleted.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Sir, my amendment is a bit different one and that is that sub-clauses (iii), (iv), (v) and (vi) be deleted and sub-clauses (i) and (ii) be retained.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member cannot move his amendment but he can discuss it.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : The definition of the word 'loan' in this Bill is only restricted in its relation to the word 'debtor', so that we are not concerned whether that loan is a deposit of money or other property in a Government Post Office Bank, or any other bank, or in a company, or with a co-operative society or with any employer as security from his employees, or is a loan or deposit with any society or association registered under the Societies Registration Act, or is a loan which has been advanced by or to the Central or any Provincial Government. What we are concerned with in this clause is that the term 'loan' should only be restricted to a loan by a creditor as defined in this Act, to a debtor as defined in this Act. So, it becomes almost redundant and unnecessary whether it is by or to a bank, or whether it is a debt by a Provincial Government or a bank or a co-operative society or a company. I think the real object is not being carried out. The definition of the term 'loan' as given here is quite good so far as the registration of money-lenders is concerned.

Premier : The term 'loan' appears not only in the definition of a 'debtor', but if my honourable friend would see explanation (2) he will find that it also appears in the definition of a 'creditor' and, therefore, his object will not be achieved by moving this amendment. We have to deal with a firm carrying on the business of money-lending and that is why we have to define these loans.

Pandit Muni Lal Kalia : Advancing loans in relation to a debtor; otherwise the Central Government is not going to be an agriculturist. My submission is that all these sub-clauses excluding (i) and (vi) are redundant and should not be made part of the Bill.

Premier : As a matter of fact, there seems to be a certain amount of confusion. As I have said the term 'loan' appears in several of these clauses. My honourable friend says, 'Why should you define 'loan', because here it is only the agriculturist money-lender vis a vis his debtor? That is not correct. Take for instance, an agriculturist, who may be a money-lender also, comes and deposits the money in a co-operative society or in a bank. He does nothing else but merely advance money to a co-operative society or a bank. Somebody goes into a court and says that the man has been advancing money on loan. It is for that reason that we have brought it in this Bill, so that he may so deposit money and may not be considered as a money-lender. It is for the simple reason that we want to save a person who merely deposits his money in a co-operative society, from being declared a creditor. Therefore we have to avoid any misunderstanding on that point, because once he is declared a creditor, he will not be able to buy land from his debtor.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Beginning with the last 5 words "but it shall not include" in line 7 of sub-clause (4), right up to the end of the sub-clause all parts from (i) to (vi) be deleted.

Dr. Sir Gukul Chand Narang : You should put one by one. We have to speak on them.

Mr. Speaker : The honourable member himself moved an amendment and I am going to put it to the vote.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

The last 5 words "but it shall not include", in line 7 of sub-clause (4) be omitted and the parts from (i) to (vi) up to the words "promissory note", be deleted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Speaker : The question is that—

Part (v) of the Explanation stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That part (5) of the Explanation stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 3, as amended, stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 4.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 4 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Preamble.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That the Preamble be the Preamble of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Speaker : Question is—

That clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

The Assembly then adjourned till 10-30 a. m. on Friday, 22nd July, 1938.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

8th SESSION OF THE 1st PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Friday, 22nd July 1935.

The Assembly met at the Assembly Chamber, Simla, at 10-30 a.m. of the clock. Mr. Speaker in the chair.

PRIVILEGE—PUBLICATION IN THE PRESS OF IN CAMERA PROCEEDINGS.

Mr. Speaker : Yesterday I promised to give my ruling on a point after consulting the Honourable Premier and the Leader of the Opposition. But I regret to say that I have had no time to consult them and to-day is the last day of the session. So, I have to give my ruling without consulting them.

The following appeared in yesterday's Tribune—

"Heat was generated yesterday in the Chamber over Raja Ghanagar Ali's amendment which was not called because preference was given by the Chair to Mir Maqbool Mahmood's. To-day the misunderstandings that arose between the Speaker, the Premier and Raja Ghanagar Ali Khan yesterday were cleared up in an atmosphere of mutual explanations."

It is a brief news probably based on the guess of the representative of the Tribune. It appears clear that no honourable member reported or communicated to him the detailed proceedings of the House. When the representatives of the press as well as the visitors were requested to leave their galleries, the object clearly was that whatever the House was to consider or discuss was confidential and that the representatives of the press, even if they came to know it, were expected not to publish it. I hope the representatives of the press will keep this in mind and very kindly respect the wishes of the House.

Premier : I think it was a very intelligent surmise to which all intelligent reporters of papers are entitled.

THE PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND (THIRD AMENDMENT) BILL.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill be passed.

Mr. Speaker : Motion moved is—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill as amended be passed.

Dr. Sir Gokal Chand Narang (West Lahore Division, General, Rural) : Sir, it is not with a view to offer definite opposition to the passing of this Bill that I have got up, though technically of course I am opposing it. My opposition to this Bill would be of an entirely different character from the opposition which I, to the best of my power, have been offering to the passing of the other Bills. I welcomed the idea when the Premier announced with a sort of flourish of trumpets that he was going to place the agriculturist money-lender on the same level as a non-agriculturist money-lender and I had expected that he would bring about a measure which would implement his promise. But I am very sorry that I do not find myself able to congratulate him on the production of the Bill for the passing of which he has moved this motion. As I attempted to point out yesterday, in the first instance, the Bill is very ill-considered. It is not properly conceived and with due deference to all the gentlemen who took part in the drafting, it is not as well drafted as one would have wished it to be. Then again, the Bill has been carried through this House by assaults as it were and with a greater rush than we observed in connection even with the other Bills. You would agree with me that this session would remain a most memorable one, among others, for the reason that the Government did not allow any grass to grow under its feet and did not allow any breathing time to the people who were likely to be affected by these Bills. But the haste with which this Bill was rushed through in this House has really no parallel except in the history of emergency measures which governments when faced with severe crisis, have been obliged to adopt.

Coming to the merits of the Bill, you will be pleased to remember that the reason given by the Honourable Premier for this Bill is embodied in the statement of objects and reasons and with your permission I would draw the attention of the House to that statement. It says—

Experience has shown that agriculturist money-lenders can be as rapacious in their methods of compelling their debtors to part with their lands as non-agriculturist money-lenders. This Bill is intended to check the permanent alienation of land to agriculturist money-lenders by their debtors and is a step towards the agriculturist money-lenders being placed for the purposes of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act in the same position as non-agriculturists in the matter of permanent alienation of land under that Act.

Now this statement contains one very important admission and that is that an agriculturist money-lender can be as rapacious as a non-agriculturist money-lender. If I may be permitted to add, an agriculturist money-lender can be and very often is more rapacious than a non-agriculturist money-lender and if any evidence were required on that point I have only to refer you to Mr. Darling's well-known book. The advantage that an agriculturist money-lender has over a non-agriculturist money-lender is that whereas the poor bania has only his baki, the agriculturist money-lender has his physical force behind it to enforce that baki. A baki may be a dangerous weapon as Sardar Sahib the other day pointed out, but when it is backed by lathi it becomes much more dangerous and the baki that the agriculturist money-lender carries with him has this advantage of physical force behind it, and as Mr. Darling has stated, the agriculturist money-lender is much worse than the non-agriculturist money-lender, because whereas the non-agriculturist money-lender has almost to go and beg his debtor for the return of the loan, the agriculturist money-lender knocks him down and compels him to pay back the loan. I believe these are the words used by Mr. Darling in his book. I am only speaking from memory. Having made this admission and having these facts before him, the Honourable Premier should certainly have produced a Bill which would really check the rapacity of the agriculturist money-lender. But what has he produced? He has produced a Bill, which the agriculturist money-lender will not find the slightest difficulty in evading. As I submitted yesterday, it is not necessary that the agriculturist money-lender should try to recover his debt by begging every one of his debtors. He can come to various kinds of arrangements and adopt various devices to grab the land of the debtors when he is bent upon this. The Honourable Premier yesterday recognised the force of my objection to the main clause of the Bill. He said he would reconsider it. I thought he was going to consider it over-night. But probably he had vowed that he would not go to sleep before all the clauses of the Bill had been passed, or would not take his dinner before all the clauses of the Bill had been passed, so that my transitory hope that he would consider it over-night was at once dashed to the ground when he said that he would consider it after it becomes an Act and if any defect is discovered in the actual working of this measure. That is a matter for the future. But let me point out that this Bill which has been passed does not in any way implement the promise made by the Honourable Premier. To the objection I raised yesterday, all that he could say was this, that an agriculturist money-lender has always an eye on a particular plot of land and it is only for the purpose of getting hold of that plot of land that, so to say, he nurses his debtor and he goes on advancing money to him from day to day, from week to week and from month to month, until the debt rises to such a figure that it would amount to the market price of the plot of land on which he has set his heart. This was the argument that he put forward and he concluded from it that an agriculturist money-lender would not resort to the devices to which I had referred, because he would have his mind particularly fixed upon a specific piece of land. Now I ask, if a money-lender has his mind fixed upon one particular plot of land, could it be said that in the whole village or in the whole neighbourhood there is only one plot of land which would attract a particular money-lender? There may be other plots also on which he may have his eyes if he has the means to secure possession of those plots. Then again there may be another equally rapacious agriculturist money-lender who has his eye on another plot of land, so that there is nothing to prevent these two rapacious grabbers from coming to an understanding between themselves and saying, "All right, I want that land and you want this land; this land belongs to my debtor and that land belongs to your debtor; you take my debtor's land and I take your debtor's land," so that the land hunger of both these hungry vultures is satisfied by coming to an agreement with each other. They grab the land of their debtors, of the poor agriculturist debtors, those starving debtors for whom my honourable friend shed so many tears that day and for whose pitiful condition all those honourable members are always shedding tears. I would not describe the nature of the tears—while his land is taken away by these two wily rapacious agriculturist money-lenders. So, Sir, the provision that the Honourable Premier has made in the main clause of the Bill comes absolutely to nothing. He tried to create a barrier between the agriculturist money-lender and his debtor and in that barrier he has kept a big door which will always yield to the slightest pressure and would enable the agriculturist money-lender to go on to the lands of the poor debtor. This is my one objection to the main clause of the Bill.

Then, Sir, and this is a matter which I only touched yesterday and did not discuss, there is a clause in the Bill which exempts loans advanced on the security of negotiable instruments from the definition of loan. If you kindly turn to part (vi) of sub-clause (4) of clause 3, you will see, it says—

An advance made on the basis of a negotiable instrument as defined in the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, other than a promissory note.

Now you know these negotiable instruments have been defined in the Negotiable Instruments Act, section 13. A negotiable instrument means a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque payable either to order or to bearer. Then the explanations follow, explaining the position of each class of these negotiable instruments. Now they have exempted from the definition of loan all negotiable instruments except a promissory note. No doubt a promissory note is very easy to execute on one anna stamp or at the most on a four-anna stamp for any amount and it is probably for this reason that they excepted it, so that the agriculturist money-lender or any other money-lender cannot have so much facility in getting securities executed by his debtors. But what is after all the obstacle in the way of an agriculturist money-lender if he wanted to defy the whole of this Act when it becomes an Act? It would only mean that he would have to pay in the first instance to his debtor one anna and six pies for every hundred rupees for which he would get a bill of exchange executed by his debtor. That I believe is the stamp duty for a hundi—I am subject to correction—if it is a darsani hundi or a demand bill. If it is for longer period the stamp duty differs. After all nothing would prevent a dishonest agriculturist money-lender—I am adopting the definition of the Honourable Premier that any person who circumvents an Act is dishonest—from getting his debtor to execute a hundi in his favour. He gets at once out of the clutches of this law. Yesterday when I made a reference to it, there was a little cross talk between the Honourable Premier and myself and he said 'no, that would not be the case.' Of course I would hear with great interest what he has to say on this point, but as I would not have any other chance, I would like to make my point clear to him to enable him thereby to make a satisfactory reply. Now you see the definition of 'creditor' in clause 3 is—"who being a creditor has advanced to such person any loan until such loan has been repaid".

The word used in the operative clause of this Bill is 'loan' and 'loan' has been defined in one of the sub-clauses, i.e., clause (4) of the Explanation. A creditor will not be a creditor unless he advances a loan; if he advances no loan he would not be a creditor and he would not be affected by the provisions of this Bill at all. That is absolutely clear. Even if a loan is not a loan, he will not be a creditor and therefore he will not be affected by the provisions of this Bill. Now a loan advanced on a negotiable instrument except a promissory note will not be a loan and therefore a creditor who makes an advance on a negotiable instrument will not be a creditor and therefore he will not be covered by the provisions of this Bill.

Malik Barkat Ali : The same applies to a non-agriculturist.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I would request the honourable member to read the Bill first. A creditor is referred to in clause 3 as a person who advances a loan. If he does not advance a loan he is not a creditor and he is not covered by this. Then if a creditor makes an advance which does not come within the definition of a loan, he is not a creditor and therefore clause 3 would not apply to him. Now looking at the definition of loan we find that advances made on negotiable instruments are exempted from the definition of loan and, therefore, an agriculturist creditor who makes an advance on the security of a negotiable instrument will not be a creditor and, therefore, he will not be in any way affected by the provisions of this Bill. If my argument is correct—and I would like to see any one of these gentlemen point out if I have made any mistake, I shall gratefully acknowledge my mistake if I have made one—if my argument is correct then it means the whole of the Bill is a wash-out. It might be said that the same definition has been given in the Money-lenders Registration Bill or in the Regulation of Accounts Act. There is a great difference between the Bill under consideration and the other two pieces of legislation. There the question of a money-lender grabbing at the land of a debtor does not arise, because he is prevented from getting at the land of his debtor by the Land Alienation Act and therefore this definition does not affect the provisions of the Land Alienation Act at all. Therefore, in those Acts this provision was made simply in the interest of business people so that the business of traders and bankers and people who were otherwise engaged in monetary transactions should not be hampered. That was the only object of retaining this clause there, but if you retain this clause in the present Bill, it means that you enable the agriculturist money-lender to get out of the definition of creditor and therefore get out of this Bill. If this Bill is going to be passed, perhaps, it would have been better, if I had not mentioned this, because many dishonest creditors would begin to take advantage of my suggestion, unless I am proved to be wrong. But I am submitting this argument so that the Honourable Premier may once more consider it before this Bill is passed by this House or before he presses the Governor to give his assent to it. As it is, it is an absolutely useless piece of paper which has been placed before this House, while the object is to prevent an agriculturist money-lender from taking hold of an agriculturist debtor's land. If the object is only to throw dust in our eyes, if the object is only to create a false impression, if the object is only to proclaim camouflaged anxiety of the Premier, to place agriculturists and non-agriculturists on the same level, it is a different thing, but if he is absolutely sincere and absolutely honest and earnest in placing the agriculturist money-lender on the same footing as the non-agriculturist money-lender, then, my submission is that he has miserably failed in carrying out his object. It may not be his fault at all, he might have thought honestly and sincerely that this would meet the needs of the case, but I assure him that this Bill, as drafted and passed by this House, does not meet the requirements of the case. I would leave it there and if the Honourable Premier wishes to say anything in reply to this part of my argument, I shall request some friend to make a reply to him, if he is given a chance, because I would not get any chance. Apart from these two points, you will find that the Bill, as it is, is very badly drafted and I shall give you one or two instances. I hope I am not treading on anybody's toes, particularly when I make this remark. Just see, the object of the Bill is to prevent an agriculturist money-lender from taking the land of his agriculturist debtor, but what do we find here? Take for instance sub-clause (4) of clause 3. When exempting certain loans they say, 'a loan to or by or a deposit with any society.' What is the meaning of the words 'or by'? What is the necessity—I would ask the learned Advocate General to listen to me, if he had any hand in the drafting [Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang.] of the sub-clause—what is the purpose of these words in part 3 of sub-clause (4) 'a loan to or by any society or association registered under the Societies Registration Act'? That, a loan advanced by society registered under the Societies Registration Act will not be a loan. What is the necessity of this? One might have said a loan advanced by an African in Honolulu will not be a loan. What is the point in it? This is absolute surplusage. Then again you will see in part 4 a loan advanced by or to the Central Government or Provincial Government. What was the necessity of saying a loan advanced by a Provincial Government shall not be treated as a loan? Is the Provincial Government an agriculturist? I did not know till now that the Provincial Government is to be treated as a jat—of course in essence it is—but I did not know whether in the eyes of the law, so far as the provisions of the Land Alienation Act are concerned, the Provincial Government is to be treated as a member of a notified agricultural tribe so that a loan given by the Provincial Government shall not be treated as a loan.

Premier : I will tell you.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I shall be grateful if you can find some meaning in this. There are interspersed in the body of this Bill, expressions like this which make the whole thing so far as this Bill is concerned meaningless.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker left the Chair and it was occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker.)

If you look at part (vi) you will find that it runs thus—

"(vi) a loan advanced by a trader to a trader, in the regular course of business, in accordance with trade usages."

This also seems to be somewhat out of place. We are dealing with agriculturist money-lenders as such. Do we understand that an agriculturist is also to be treated as a trader and if as a trader he advances a loan in the ordinary course of business then he would be exempt? This may nullify the effect of the Bill. A Jat, a rapacious blood sucking money-lending Jat. (laughter) I am only using the words which have been so often used in this House with respect to money-lenders (laughter)—and I know on good authority that when an agriculturist becomes a money-lender, he is a greater blood-sucker than the greatest blood-sucking bania. That is quite true. A Chhotu Ram money-lender will certainly be worse than a Manohar Lal money-lender. I have no doubt about it, because while poor Manohar Lal money-lender will only use his entreaties چودھری جی کچھ نہ دے دو "Chaudhri Ji kuchh de deyo," Chhotu Ram money-lender will also use his lathi and will say "Look here, راکھ اٹھے "Rakh ehthe," otherwise down you go." This is the difference between an agriculturist money-lender and a non-agriculturist money-lender. Amongst other provisions which have kept a loophole for this rapacious money-lending agriculturist is this clause (vi). He opens a shop, he is a money-lending man, he holds land and he also starts a shop of some kind and through that shop he begins to make advances to trading jats and there are many who are trading and in this way, so far as the agriculturists are concerned, he gets at their neck by these means. I have already referred to part (iii) and I would not repeat it. It relates to negotiable instruments. I would, therefore, submit that the Bill as conceived and drafted is full of defects. They may or may not have any meaning. They may be surplusages put by way of excessive caution so that some defect in future might not be discovered. I would not lay much emphasis on that but the main clause in the Bill, particularly clause 8 and this part (iii) leave two big doors open to the agriculturist money-lender to do whatever he likes and he can entirely ignore this Bill when it becomes law and can carry on his depredations without any let or hindrance as he is doing at the present moment. With these words I resume my seat.

Parliamentary Secretary (Mir Maqbool Mahmood): Sir, my friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang has, as usual, delivered a very able speech but he will forgive me if I try to expose the fallacy of the arguments which he advanced to-day. To begin with he invited the attention of the Honourable Premier to the undertaking that he would place the agriculturist money-lenders on the same basis as the non-agriculturist money-lenders. On this point let me first remind my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang of his words addressed to Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath in the beginning of the discussion of these Bills. He then said—

Who has asked the Premier to place the agriculturists money-lenders on the same basis as the non-agriculturists; Bhola Raja has been misled; if he had come to me, I would have said, "Don't ask for this".

I am glad that on his own remarks to-day my friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang has been converted to the view of my friend, the Raja Sahib.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: On a point of order. The honourable member has referred to my remarks which were made in connection with another Bill and not in connection with this Bill. So far as that Bill is concerned, my position is now exactly the same.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Honourable member is perfectly in order. He is simply reminding the honourable member of what he had said.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood: I repeat with emphasis that my honourable friend opposite then made a definite statement that the Bhola Raja Sahib and the Khatri deputation which had asked for this had been misled. I am afraid the Bhola Narang to-day is bracketted with Bhola Raja.
(laughter).

Great stress has been laid on the undertaking which the Honourable Premier gave to the Khatri deputation. I wish to make the position clear and invite the attention of the House to the exact words used by the Honourable Premier on that occasion. He promised most sympathetic consideration of the suggestion that—

"With regard to money-lending legislation the agriculturist money-lenders may be placed in the same position as the non-agriculturist money-lenders."

I submit that he has not only given most sympathetic consideration to that request of the Khatri deputation, but he has actually in the Registration of Money-lenders Act placed the agriculturist money-lender on a par with the non-agriculturist money-lender for the purposes of money-lending legislation. What is more, he has gone a step further with regard to the Land Alienation Act and I would try to show that he has placed the agriculturist money-lender in certain matters even in a worse position than the non-agriculturist money-lender. In this connection I beg to invite your attention to two definite propositions. Firstly, my friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang will find that for the purposes of this Bill if an agriculturist money-lender dies, his successors who only wish to wind up his business and do not advance any fresh loans are not exempt from the definition of money-lender, while under the Registration of Money-lenders Act if a non-agriculturist money-lender dies and his successors wish to wind up his business, and do not advance any fresh loans, they are exempt from the definition of money-lenders. Secondly, my friend, Doctor Sahib will find that under the Registration of Money-lenders Act, a money-lender is exempt in certain cases to assign loans, one or two loans, to his near relations. In the case of an agriculturist money-lender, for the purpose of buying land from his debtor, no such exemption is permitted. Thirdly, in the case of agriculturist money-lenders, even if he ceases to be a money-lender for the particular debtor, he is not permitted to buy his land till a period of three years has passed after the settlement or payment of his loans.

My honourable friend, Dr. Narang further tried to show that there is a very big loophole in this Bill. He said there may be two agriculturist money-lenders A and B in the same village. A has to take certain loans from C and B has to take certain loans from D. They will come to a mutual arrangement that C sells his land to B and D sells his land to A. On the face of it, in theory as a mathematical proposition, it certainly is possible. But I remind my honourable friend of the days when he lived in villages of which he paraded so much the other day in this House that these things are not possible in the rural village community to-day and that an agriculturist is attached to his land more than perhaps to any other thing and he is not likely to part with his land in favour of a person towards whom he is not in a position of undue influence. Moreover, according to Doctor Sahib's statement, it has to be assumed that the debt due to A is exactly of the same amount as the land which C has mortgaged to another money-lender. He assumes that the value of land is the same: and he assumes that the quality of land is the same. He further wrongly assumes that an agriculturist debtor will be prepared to sell his land to one Duni Chand, a money-lender in the village, simply because he is under the influence of one Dr. Narang to whom he owes a debt. I submit that the actual experience of the villages is that only the silver bullet of the money-lender from whom an agriculturist debtor has taken a loan and needs a fresh loan that he can be persuaded to part with his land. If he does not owe money to C I would like to see how by undue influence of B, he can be made to mortgage his land to another money-lender. But supposing we find that these loopholes are being exploited, that the theoretical proposition of my friend opposite takes currency in the province, then these Bills are not the last word, and he may rest assured that, wherever it is necessary, Government will come forward with an amending legislation and put things right.

Lala Duni Chand : Is there anything in the Bill to prevent a debtor from alienating his land to all sorts of persons other than his creditor in order to pay him off ?

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : There is nothing to that effect in the Bill. My honourable friend sought to move amendments which would make it impossible for a debtor to sell his land to anybody even to pay off his debts. The Punjab Government is not so solicitous of the debtor as my honourable friend is who wants to make it impossible for the debtor to get out of his debt. So we could not accept his amendment.

Lala Duni Chand : Then it is useless.

Mir Maqbool Mahmood : My honourable friend says, then it is useless. It may be worse from his point of view, but we know what we are doing and for what purpose we are doing it.

The next point which Dr. Narang raised was with regard to the definition of loan. He said every money-lender will start advancing loans on hundis and thereby evade the provisions of this Bill. Now, with the analytic mind of my friend, it should not be necessary for me to point out to him that we have taken the definition of loan from the Money-lenders Registration Act. When we were considering this definition under that Act it was my friend, the Doctor who was anxious that we should leave bigger loopholes so that non-agriculturist money-lenders may be able to evade it but to-day with a great love of the agriculturist debtor he jumps up to say that the loopholes should be plugged. But let me invite his attention to one point which he has ignored. In the first instance he will find that hundis are regulated by certain trade usage and according to the accepted trade usage he will find that ordinarily if a person who is a debtor does not respect his hundi on the day when it is presented to him he is debarred by the custom of trade to be given any further hundi. So, even for the sake of argument if a creditor accepts a hundi, assuming that, it could be payable not in three months or six months but in three years, and the hundi is presented to the debtor and he fails to meet it, then my friend, Doctor Gokul Chand Narang knows that it will not be possible for the creditor to issue any other hundi in favour of that debtor. Therefore that argument of his will not create any serious loopholes. Secondly, he will find that even in practice that has not been proved to be so. He will remember that in 1930 when the Regulation of Accounts Bill was passed we adopted the definition of loan exactly as is provided here. If it were possible by the issue of hundis for money-lenders to evade that Act, surely up till now the number of hundis in the rural areas would have increased and the provisions of the Regulation of Accounts Act would have been evaded; but he will find that it has not been so for the obvious reason that the conservative instinct of the debtors and the technique of the system of hundis will not make it possible for hundis to be generally adopted in rural loan transactions. Here again if the Government finds that there are any evasions of this Bill by the agriculturist or by the non-agriculturist money-lenders, it will come forward with a suitable amending legislation. Then he asked why we are putting certain redundant clauses in the exceptions to the definition of loan. He said, why should loans by Provincial Government be exempt from the definition of loan and why should loan by a trader to a trader be exempt? Here again let me invite his attention to the fact that we originally devised the definition of loan for the purpose of Money-lenders Registration Act. Under that Act, as it is worded, the first thing which a court will have to decide is whether a person is or is not a money-lender within the provision of the Bill, and for that it will have to ascertain what is the volume, the system and the continuity of the loan transactions which the money-lender has advanced. When coming to that decision they will have, according to the provisions of that Bill to exclude certain loans, which have been exempted from the definition of loan, and when these loans are exempted the rest will be the loan transactions on the basis of which the court will have to give a finding whether he is carrying on the business of money-lending or not. That is my first submission.

Dr. Sir Gukul Chand Narang: What is the necessity of exempting loans?

Mir Maqbool Mahmood: When we drafted the Regulation of Accounts Act, 1930 I had the privilege of moving that Bill in its original form and in the select committee a point was raised that the Punjab Government advances so many loans in the form of agricultural loans, taccavi loans, etc., they must also send six-monthly statements because they are carrying on the business of advancing loans. It was on account of this technical objection, lest any sub-judge might stretch the Bill and give such a ruling that it was decided to exclude such transactions from the definition of loan.

I was submitting that for the purposes of Money-lenders Registration Bill, we have adopted the definition of 'loan' with certain exemptions. If we do not have the same exemptions here, it would mean that a man may be a creditor within the definition of this Act, who is not a money-lender within the definition of that Act. Therefore, we have made the position clear that this Bill will apply only to a money-lender, who is carrying on the business of advancing loans—for which the agriculturists and the non-agriculturists must be placed at par. Those who are agriculturists and who are money-lenders within the definition of the Money-lenders Registration Act, should be generally creditors within the definitions of this Act. Therefore, in order to keep that uniformity of policy, we had to incorporate many clauses from that Bill into this Bill, so that there may be a uniform definition. My honourable friend, in this connection also raised a point that if a loan advanced by a trader to a trader is exempt, the agriculturist money-lender will be able to escape. I may remind him again that it was he who moved an amendment in the other Bill that a loan by a trader to a trader should be exempt. He said that a loan by a trader in the course of business and in accordance with trade usage was not enough and that every loan by a trader to a trader should be exempted. I ask him, where has his sympathy for traders gone now that we are dealing with the agriculturist trader? In fairness it is not only the non-agriculturist trader who is to be exempted, but even an agriculturist trader, who in the course of his ordinary business and in accordance with trade usage, advances loan to another trader. That is what we have done. If my honourable friend will look to the later clause, he will find that the word "trader" is defined according to section 2 of the Punjab Regulation of Accounts Act. In that clause, persons, who merely sell their own agricultural produce, are excluded. This exemption under reference will only apply to those cases where bona fide trade transaction has been entered in accordance with trade usage.

One word more and I have done. This session, as my honourable friend, Dr. Narang, rightly pointed out, has been a memorable session and I think that in the history of legislation in the Punjab and outside, this session.

will rank as a great constructive contribution to the improvement of agricultural and economic conditions in India. (Hear, hear from the Treasury benches.) (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Question.) When the history of these Bills comes to be written, there is one side of the problem, which the historians perhaps will not know, and it is this that the primary credit for all this work goes to that thin figure, the Honourable the Leader of the House (Hear, hear) who despite bad health sat day and night, and from morning till evening and devoted himself with zeal and industry and tact which would be an inspiration, not only to this generation, but to the coming generations of Punjabis. Despite uncharitable insinuations and obvious difficulties, he stuck to his guns and proved what a patriotic Punjabi ought to do and can do for his countrymen. (Cheers.)

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava (Lahore City, General, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, I feel that whatever I have to say as regards this Bill would be useless and particularly it would produce no effect on this occasion, because the Government by passing this Bill have proved that like Shylock, the Jew they would like to have their pound of flesh. Sometime ago the Honourable Premier agreed that the agriculturist money-lender was worse than Shylock, the Jew. He has stated in the course of his speech that the agriculturist money-lender was worse than the non-agriculturist money-lender and therefore we expected that the Government would not be satisfied with less than having their share of the pound of flesh. In spite of all this I would like to say a few words as regards this Bill.

As far as the text of the Bill and its interpretation is concerned, I have to say nothing about it, because it is the work of the lawyer who would have to see how this Bill could be interpreted. Fortunately I am not a lawyer.

Minister for Development: Fortunately?

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava: The Honourable Chaudhri Sir Chhotu Ram inquires whether I am fortunately not a lawyer. I repeat it that fortunately I am not a lawyer. The Honourable Minister is a great friend of agriculturists but this sympathy becomes dubious, because he is a lawyer.

Sir, I wish to consider whether the Bill which is before you and which is going to become a law serves our object or not. The Honourable Premier agreed that the agriculturist money-lender is more dangerous for the zamindar than the non-agriculturist money-lender and said that he would bring forward a Bill by which he would place the agriculturist money-lender on the same footing as the non-agriculturist money-lender. When is a money-lender dangerous for the zamindar? He is dangerous at that time when he tries to usurp the property of a zamindar by fraudulent methods. If any money-lender, whether he is an agriculturist or a non-agriculturist lends a small sum of money at a reasonable rate of interest or without interest to a zamindar, it means that he is helping him. I think no zamindar worth the name can go against such a money-lender nor is there any such zamindar who is against such a money-lender. When any money-lender, whether he is an agriculturist or a non-agriculturist wants to take his pound of flesh then and then only he is dangerous. Now an agriculturist money-lender becomes more dangerous than the non-agriculturist money-lender, because he can buy the lands of a zamindar. I am of the opinion that the Honourable

[Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava.]

Premier has moved this Bill with a view to prevent the agriculturist money-lender from buying the lands of agriculturists. But, as I submitted yesterday, he has only tried to prevent the agriculturist money-lender from buying the lands of his debtor zamindars for only three years, but he has not prevented him from buying the lands of other poor agriculturists.

I may draw the attention of the Government to another drawback in the Bill. I am afraid that this Bill will lead to increase in sales of land by the agriculturists. As no provision has been made to prevent an agriculturist money-lender from purchasing the lands of his poor brethren, the result of this Bill would be that the poor agriculturists will be obliged to sell their lands piece by piece till they are entirely expropriated. If the Honourable Premier really wanted to protect the poor agriculturists, the proper course would have been to treat agriculturist money-lenders in the same way as the non-agriculturist money-lenders have been treated. He should have made such a provision in the Bill as would have made it impossible for the agriculturist money-lenders to purchase any land from the poor agriculturists. In that case the promise made by the Honourable Premier would have been implemented and also some good might have been done to the poor peasants in whose name and for whose sake these Bills are professed to have been passed. But it is a pity that the Honourable Premier is not in a mood to listen to these wiser counsels. To all these objections he has only thought fit to say this much that if after the enforcement of these Bills, it is found that some improvements are necessary, he would see that those improvements are made. But perhaps he has not realised that during the time this experience continues, many persons will have been ruined and the interests of so many will have been sacrificed at the altar of that experience. As a scientist, I know that one who is being experimented upon has many a time to sacrifice himself. Why is it that he does not now remove those defects which we have pointed out? Why should he wait till he finds that a number of persons have suffered by these Bills? We know that power is behind him at present and the majority of the members are prepared to vote with him and we are at present helpless and cannot compel him to see eye to eye with us and, therefore, we cannot but leave it to him to do what he desires. We felt that it was our duty to point out where the defects lay in these measures and we are satisfied that we have done our duty.

Now I proceed to say something with regard to the definition of loan in this Bill. I know that I am not a lawyer and that I should leave the intricate problems of law to be solved by my lawyer friends. But the definition of loans as given in this Bill appears even to a layman like myself to be full of defects. It will be agreed that this Bill has nothing to do with non-agriculturist money-lenders and that it is only meant to deal with such loans only which an agriculturist money-lender will advance to an agriculturist debtor. Therefore, some such words should have been added in this definition as concerned a loan advanced by an agriculturist to an agriculturist. The definition of creditor as given in the Regulation of Accounts Act or the Registration of Money-lenders Bill may be quite all-right so far as those measures are concerned, but that definition does not fit here and will certainly defeat the object with which apparently this Bill has been introduced. I will illustrate my point by an example. Supposing, I am an agriculturist and also do money-lending and I do not advance loans to any person in the village in which I live. Instead of that I advance loans to persons outside that village. Now so far as the persons in the village in which I live and in which I do not do money-lending are concerned they will not be safe from me and in a way the provisions of this Bill will not in any way restrict me from purchasing the lands of the agriculturists in my own village. It is why I say that the definitions of loan and creditor as we find in this Bill appear, even to a person like myself, who is a layman and does not understand much of the intricacies of law, to be full of defects. These defects ought to have been removed before insisting on the passage of this measure.

One thing more. I need not remind my honourable friends opposite that it is the duty of every government to gauge rightly and in a dispassionate manner the conditions of the people and pass measures which should help to improve the lot of poor agriculturists and poor traders. I cannot also help pointing out that these measures on which the Government is taking so much pride and which have been passed in hot haste will not go even half the way to help the poor agriculturists, what to say of other classes of people. The Government has not handled the situation in a befitting manner and I may sound a note of warning to it that these Bills, instead of doing any good, are sure to make the situation worse. The manner in which the Government is handling the situation is such as may lead to a serious agitation which will be very difficult for the Government to control.

Malik Barkat Ali (Eastern Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): Sir, as I look at this Bill it appears to me that it is more in the nature of a sop to Cerberus. While I wish all God-speed to the Honourable Premier in his great experiment with the Land Alienation Act, I should not like to conceal from him my personal doubts as to the real necessity for this Bill. It will be remembered that when the Land Alienation Act drew a distinction between statutory or notified agriculturists and non-agriculturists, this distinction had nothing to do with the money-lending activities of the one or the non-money-lending activities of the other class. The sole reason for this distinction was the actual tillage of land, land being the very centre and pivot round which the entire economic life of the agricultural classes revolved and not the fact that they had nothing to do with money-lending. A money-lender was excluded from the roll or list of statutory agriculturists not because he was a money-lender but because he had absolutely nothing to do with the actual tilling and cultivation of the soil. That being so, it cannot be made a matter of complaint by anybody that a money-lender has not been fairly treated in the matter of exclusion from the notified agricultural tribes. I am fully aware that on the floor of this House the Honourable Premier in the name of the majority of the House gave a certain pledge and I desire to congratulate him on the meticulous care with which he has honoured that pledge. It has been said that this Bill in regard to many of its clauses is more in the nature of a wash-out. I respectfully submit that this criticism is not fair. My learned friend, Dr. Gokul Chand Narang probably as a result of that idea poured a good deal of ridicule on this Bill. He could not understand why sub-clauses (2) to (6) have been incorporated in clause 8 of the Bill, his argument being that these clauses had absolutely nothing to do with the loan made by a statutory agriculturist to a non-agriculturist. It appears to me that my learned friend has not really carefully studied the provisions of this Bill. I draw his attention to the definition of the term "creditor." Creditor for the purposes of this Bill is not a man who has made one advance or two advances or several advances to a member of an agriculturist tribe, but a regular money-lender, the definition of creditor for the purposes of this Bill being exactly the same as that of money-lender in the Money-lenders Act. I believe the select committee took the precaution of incorporating the entire definition of the word "loan" as given in the Money-lenders Bill in the present Bill also so that it may not be said that a distinction, a carefully prepared distinction, was drawn between the definition of "loan" for the purposes of this Bill and for the purposes of the Money-lenders Bill.

(At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.)

The test of a creditor for the purposes of this Bill—I read out the definition of creditor to my learned friend—the test is "a person or a firm carrying on the business of advancing loans," exactly the definition of a money-lender as given in the Money-lenders Act. Therefore, if that is the test, if the test is not an advance by an agriculturist to another agriculturist but the test of a creditor for the purposes of this Bill is his business of advancing loans, then my learned friend would agree with me that the definition of loan as given in the entire body of this clause has got to be there. You have to decide first whether a particular advancer is a money-lender or not before you impose upon him the disabilities of this Bill. Now my learned friend, the Leader of the Opposition, recognised the validity of this contention. He said that the select committee and the Honourable Premier were perfectly right—he is not a lawyer—in giving in the sub-clauses the definition of loan as given in the Money-lenders Act. But he advanced another kind of criticism. His criticism was that this Bill should have nothing to do with the agriculturist money-lenders. This Bill, as he understood from the pledge of the Honourable Premier, was intended to regulate the relations between an agriculturist who happens to advance a loan and his brother agriculturist to whom the loan is advanced. That seemed to be his argument. I respectfully submit that he has entirely misconceived and misapprehended the pledge of the Premier. The Premier, as he explained rightly to the House, wanted to meet the case of an agriculturist money-lender. He could not and he never gave this House to understand that he wanted to curtail the credit of the agriculturist to this extent that no agriculturist brother would on an isolated occasion or on other occasions, without being a regular money-lender, advance money to him under the fear and on account of the penalty that with the advance of that money he would stand deprived of the privileges of a statutory agriculturist and that he would not be able to purchase his land during the period of the indebtedness or for three years after that. That was never the intention behind this Bill. I, therefore, submit that this kind of criticism advanced by the honourable Leader of the Opposition is merely a criticism which is neither fair nor justified nor is it warranted in the light of the statements that have been made to this House by the Honourable Premier as regards the scope of this Bill. It was pointed out with particular reference to sub-clause (2a) of this clause that an opportunity would be left to money-lending agriculturists to circumvent the provisions of this Bill. Now my learned friend, Dr. Sir Narang, would agree with me that if the creditor is to be a money-lender for all purposes, then this clause would have to be there and when my learned friend seems to argue that this clause would really give an opportunity to an agriculturist money-lender to circumvent the provisions of this Bill, he forgets another important principle, viz., that for purposes of negotiability, for purposes of the Negotiable Instruments Act, this Bill or any other Bill cannot impinge on that fundamental principle of the Negotiable Instruments Act, namely that all negotiable instruments are in the nature of current coin. He will agree with me that a proviso has been excepted in this clause. But so far as other negotiable instruments are concerned, supposing an agriculturist money-lender were to deal with hundis or cheques, then my learned friend would agree with me that he should not come under the provisions of this Bill. (Interruption.) You forget that he has to be first a money-lender before he can come under the provisions of this Bill and I ask you whether he seriously means that before an agriculturist can be treated a money-lender this clause should not apply to him when it applies to a non-agriculturist money-lender. I therefore submit that the criticism which my honourable friend has offered with regard to this clause is really based on an incomplete understanding of the scope and the purpose of this Bill. As I have already said, the scope and purpose of the Bill is merely to bring in an agriculturist money-lender under a certain disability and that disability stands fully carried out in the provisions of this Bill. I do not propose to take up any further time of this House. I believe that the Bill certainly fulfills the tests and requirements of the pledge of the Honourable Premier and I wish him all God-speed in this Bill.

Lala Dushbandhu Gupta (South-Eastern Towns, General, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, I do not propose to make a lengthy speech on this Bill and I shall only take a few minutes. You will be pleased to recall that the Honourable Premier said in his speech yesterday that blood was thicker than water. None of us had any opportunity to reply to that speech, but in criticising this Bill you will permit me to say that Government have shown special bias in favour of the statutory agriculturists, and thus have proved the truth of the statement made by the Premier yesterday. It is evident that the Government has been forced, as it were, to bring forward this Bill. During the last few days since this Bill has been on the anvil of this House, the fact that the Government was compelled to bring forward this measure, has been only too prominent. Various provisions of this legislation are eloquent proof of the fact that it is just an eye-wash for the non-agriculturists. The Honourable Premier has admitted that an agriculturist money-lender is more dangerous for the poor debtor than a non-agriculturist money-lender. But still he has thought it fit to maintain invidious distinction between agriculturist and non-agriculturist money-lenders. I know that the Honourable Premier could not go further as he has got to please and placate a strange lot of people; I sympathise with him. But in spite of all that, I should have liked him to do away with all distinctions between money-lenders, irrespective of their being agriculturists or non-agriculturists, because after all they are all in the same boat.

Premier : We have already done away with all such distinctions.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : He says that he has done away with them. This is answering just like the British bureaucrat. Whenever we complain that the new constitution has not given us sufficient power to work for the good of the people, they say that they have already given us sufficient power, although the fact remains, and my honourable friends on the opposite benches know it too well, that no real power worth the name has been given to us. But let me cut short. There is a very able lawyer fortunately sitting on the Treasury benches. He is the most competent person on the Government side to express an opinion on this subject. I am referring to Mr. Manohar Lal. I should like to hear him on this subject. I want him to give his candid opinion and say whether he also believes that the present Bill will suffice to meet the requirements of the case and fulfil the purpose for which it is intended. He knows the difficulties of the agriculturists as well as those of the money-lenders. Let him say that he is in perfect agreement with the measure.

Chandhri Kartar Singh : They have joint responsibility.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : This is the last day of the present session and on all the important Bills he has kept silent. I should like to hear his candid opinion at least on this Bill. I am sure if he has courage enough to express his frank opinion he will be in perfect agreement with my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition. Mian Abdul Haye, too, has my sympathy. He is a capable lawyer; but he seems to be a misfit in the present Ministry. If he applies his legal mind to the matter, now before the House, he will agree with me that this Bill as it stands will not achieve the object for which it is primarily intended.

To-day, being the last day of the session, Mir Maqbool Mahmood has waxed eloquent in praise of the Honourable Premier. I can well appreciate his motive in doing so. I also realise his limitations. I do not wish to take away anything from the praises he has showered on the Premier. But I would like him to remember that in this manner one cannot conceal home-truths from the watchful eyes of the people of the province. Sir, you are a poet yourself and I think you will appreciate, if I describe the Unionist Government through a couplet written by a well-known poet of the Punjab, namely Hafez, Jallunduri. He says:—

 بوا جزا ہو تمام چہرے اگر کوئی ہے نقیب کو دے

The Punjab Government claim to be the true friends of the poor zamindars and it has been stated by the Honourable Premier himself that his Government want to benefit poor zamindars. But actions talk louder than words.

Begum Rashida Latif Baji : On a point of order, Sir. May, I ask the honourable member to whom he refers by saying taking off the veil from the face? There is nobody except myself whose face is covered with a veil. (Laughter.)

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : I assure the honourable lady member that I meant that veil which the Government have put on themselves for concealing their intentions from us. Sir, I was submitting that this Bill has passed through the different stages and is now about to be adopted finally. This stage is like the last verse of an ode after which an ode is considered to be complete. Any attempt to get it modified at this stage is not likely to succeed. I would therefore confine myself to making a request to the Treasury benches and that is this, that for goodness sake let them not take advantage of the name of the poor peasantry in connection with this Bill. So long as all the tillers of the soil are not regarded as agriculturists by the Government and the poor zamindars are not treated differently from the big zamindars, no real good can possibly be done to the peasants of the province. If the Honourable Premier is not prepared to do away with the distinction which this Bill makes between an agriculturist and a non-agriculturist money-lender he and his colleagues cannot take the credit of having treated the two money-lending classes alike and they cannot make us believe that.

Honourable members : Question may now be put.

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Premier (The Honourable Major Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan) : Sir, I do not propose, nor is it necessary for me, to make a lengthy speech, at this stage, because, after all, this Bill, in spite of its alleged flaws, real or imaginary, is not a very complicated measure. It is a very simple measure and as I have said before it is a measure which was brought in deference to the wishes of some honourable members in this House and in pursuance of an undertaking given by me. My honourable friend, Dr. Sir. Gokul Chand Nurang, said that in spite of this measure or other enactments the agriculturist money-lender will still have an advantage over his non-agriculturist confrere, because he has got the lathi and the physical force behind him which the other has not got. But I need not remind him, because he has got the experience of his own province that if he were to divulge some of the secrets with regard to non-agriculturist money-lender as one honourable member tried to do here, he would endorse the view held by some of us that in the case of some non-agriculturist money-lenders they have got in the shape of batis lethal weapons more dangerous than the physical force of the other money-lenders. I hope such cases are very few and as a result of the enactments which we have passed during this session, the class of objectionable money-lenders, both among agriculturists and non-agriculturists, will disappear and we will find a healthy body, a clean body, a body which would be a source of strength and if I may use that simile, provide healthy blood in the economic system of this province. (Hear, hear.)

My honourable friend, Dr. Gokul Chand made several criticisms with regard to the provisions of this Bill and one of the criticisms which has been made at least by two members—Dr. Sir Gokul Chand and the last speaker, Mr. Deshbandhu Gupta—tried to show that this Bill did not go far enough and did not place the agriculturist money-lender on the same footing as the non-agriculturist money-lender.

[Premier,]

I have tried to explain to my honourable friends that so far as the business of money-lending is concerned every money-lender whether he is an agriculturist or a non-agriculturist will come under the provisions of the Money-lenders Registration Act. This present Bill is merely a supplementary measure. It is a supplementary measure and it does not in any way place an agriculturist money-lender in a better position. As a matter of fact it places him in a worse position in one respect as compared with the other of his conferees for the simple reason that he will not be able to buy land for at least three years after settlement of his debts with his debtor, even if he gives up the business of money-lending. In that particular respect you will agree with me that he will be placed in a more disadvantageous position as compared with the non-agriculturist money-lender.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : A non-agriculturist money-lender cannot buy land at all.

Premier : He cannot buy not because he is a money-lender but because he is a non-agriculturist. Here we are pillorying the agriculturist money-lender to an extent to which he would not be pilloried if he were not a money-lender. My honourable friend Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang referred to the various clauses of the Bill which he thought were redundant especially with regard to the definition of loan and explanations. I tried to explain yesterday that we have translated the definition in the Money-lenders Bill bodily in this Bill so as to avoid the criticism that we have made any discrimination or were trying to place one money-lender in a better position than the other. I agree that there are one or two items in that explanation which can well be left out of the Bill without doing any damage to the object which we have in view but their inclusion in the Bill does no harm whatever. They might be redundant, but that does no harm and our main object was, as my honourable friend, Dr. Sir Gokul Chand himself pointed out, to be cautious in the extreme so as not to expose ourselves to any criticism of this kind. Moreover it would lead to obvious complications if the terms, money-lender and creditor, were defined differently in the two Bills. With regard to Negotiable Instruments Act, there again my honourable friend will agree with me that it would have been unfair to place the agriculturist money-lender in a worse position as compared with the other money-lender. Why we are excluding negotiable instrument from the other Act is for the simple reason that a genuine trader or a genuine trading transaction should not be in any way affected and here also you will concede that there are some agriculturists who are genuine traders and we do not want in any way to affect their business. Our reason for doing this is that a hundi or other negotiable instrument is not such as can really draw any victim into the spider's web to the extent that an ordinary promote or a bahi can. Because after all a hundi is for a small period and my honourable friend is also aware, it is normally a two-named paper and not a single name paper, because if you cannot realise the money from the person named then you can obtain it from the other.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : It can be drawn on one's own self.

Premier : Normally a hundi is a two-named paper. I believe that these fears will not turn out to be true and will prove absolutely baseless.

Evasion there may be of the provisions of this Bill. As a matter of fact no enactment has hitherto been devised by human agency which is impregnable. My honourable friend is a lawyer and he knows that one can always pick holes in any law however well-conceived it may be and I am afraid that the legislation which we have passed during this session may be open to same tricks from people who want to evade it.

Lala Duni Chand : But there ought to be some substance.

Premier : A clever lawyer like my honourable friend will always be able to find some loophole to slip out even if there is none (laughter). But as I submitted this Bill may probably be evaded and not only this but all other measures passed are liable to evasion. But if they are liable to evasion, I am sure my honourable friend will agree that I am and my friends on this side will always be on the look out and if there are any evasions let him rest assured that we will readily apply all necessary remedies to them.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : I can see that.

Premier : My honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, pointed out the occasions when a money-lender becomes dangerous. There I entirely agree with him, but I think that he was not fully comprehensive or exhaustive and we could add several other things to his list which make the money-lender dangerous. For instance, high and unconscionable rate of interest, getting thumb marks on blank bahi leaves, and getting double the amount originally advanced entered in the bahi, make him still more dangerous. This is a fraud which, I am afraid, will be resorted to by dishonest money-lenders in spite of our legislation and we have to see how we can stop it. Then he said there is the danger that the land instead of being mortgaged will be sold. I think this fear will prove to be baseless. As I tried to explain during the passage of the Restitution of Mortgaged Land Bills, since 1901 the mortgages made by agriculturists to other agriculturists were largely made because it suited the agriculturists to mortgage lands with another agriculturist, otherwise he could have gladly mortgaged with a non-agriculturist. It is possible that some people might in extreme cases where they cannot go to anybody else be forced to sell their lands, but we are only stopping him from selling his land to a creditor. He can go to another agriculturist and mortgage with him and as my honourable friend is aware an agriculturist is loathe to part with his land and it his only in extreme case of necessity where he cannot help that he sells his land and I hope that after this Bill, he would find occasions for such transfer even more remote and less frequent in consequence of what we have been able to do in this matter. My friend, Malik Barkat Ali has very eloquently and ably met some of the legal arguments advanced by the other side, but he has also doubted the necessity of this measure. As a matter of fact I do not blame him for holding that view, because I know that several friends here and outside have like-wise felt in this matter. They think that it may be a beginning of a sort of process which would eventually remove that discrimination which the Land Alienation Act brought about, but let me assure him, that there is no real reason to think so. As a matter of fact it is going to strengthen the position of the agriculturist community, because they must be themselves honestly feeling that these parasites among the agriculturists who are trying to take advantage of the Land Alienation Act for the purposes of depriving the smaller fry of their land are not a source of strength but of weakness to the agricultural community. (Hear, hear.) I can assure my honourable friends that, as a result of this Bill you will probably find that if there are any such parasites, they will think twice before entering into an unfair transaction with an agriculturist. I might at the same time qualify my statement by saying what I have said on the floor of this House on previous occasions that our enquiry in three typical districts where you find big land-lords, i.e., Jhang, Shahpur and Multan, has shown that it is not the bigger fish which is swallowing the smaller fish. As a matter of fact, so far as the sale of land was concerned, there were comparatively more of bigger land-holders who sold their land to comparatively small land-holders than vice versa. If that is the position throughout the province we need fear nothing, but if unfortunately some of these agriculturist money-lenders do try to upset the equilibrium between the smaller and bigger cultivators, then it would be real danger to the province and to the community whose viewpoint my honourable friend sought to represent.

[Premier]

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Which community?

Premier: Agricultural community.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: Malik Sahib is not an agriculturist. He belongs to my community.

Premier: All honour to him for honestly supporting a measure which he considers is in the interest of the province.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang: He was not supporting. He was opposing it.

Premier: My honourable friend, Lala Deshbandhu Gupta, tried without any hope to convince the House that this Bill was not a fair measure and did not go sufficiently far to redeem my pledge to this House. I have already answered that question but during the course of his very eloquent speech—it is a treat to hear him speak in Urdu as he comes from Delhi—he quoted a couplet from Hafeez which was objected to by my honourable friend the member from Lahore, but he went on to say that it was the Government's inequity which had forced my friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri to think of going to the other side. It is not any injustice or inequity on the part of the Government. As I said yesterday, blood is always thicker than water and the community interest and class instinct are naturally stronger sometimes than political loyalties and no wonder my friend, Lala Deshbandhu Gupta, had an attraction for him which he could not resist and he wants to go to that side, but I am afraid he has not actually gone into that den opposite because he is afraid that in spite of Lala Deshbandhu Gupta, Lala Bhim Sen Sachar and Lala Duni Chand there are still a number of agriculturist "parasites" there—to use his terminology—like my friends Sardar Hari Singh, Kartar Singh, Sohan Singh and others—who might eat into his very vitals and, therefore, he has adopted the safer course and has gone to Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang where the two musketeers could be together. (Interruption.) If my honourable friend thinks that Mr. Puri's going to the other side is a victory for them, then I wish them every success and wish them every happiness. The other day a word was whispered into my ear that my honourable friends in spite of devoting their time on these Bills, as they should have done being the friends of the zamindars, some of them have been trying to flirt with certain members on this side and they went to the extent of bribing them that all the offices can be taken over by those gentlemen who drift away from my side. I understand that all the 22 or 23 offices were promised to be given to them so long as they kept the Congress on these benches and kept the Congress programme before them.

Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Whose attempts ?

Premier : Of some people who are making those attempts.

Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava : So far as we are concerned, there is no truth about it.

Premier : I am not talking about Dr. Gopi Chand Bhargava because I know that he is a gentleman of principles and he stands at a much higher level than that. I know perfectly well that some people have been trying to flirt with them on the off-chance that there might be a landslide from this side and they have gone to the extent of bribing them by saying, "You have the 22 or 23 offices and you should keep up our programme like the Sindh people have done" and I can assure them (Voices : Nice propaganda) as I assured them the other day on the floor of this House that they can do their worst but God willing they will not be able to bribe away my friends here who represent the poor zamindars. I am not here because of any personal advantage or because of any class or communal advantage.

Mr. Speaker : I request the Honourable Leader of the House not to be irrelevant.

Premier : The Leader of the Opposition said that it was on account of my taqat that I was going to get through these measures. I am replying to that remark of his. I am here merely at the behest of the majority of the province and I would stay here so long as the majority of the province is behind me. The moment it is not behind me, my honourable friends opposite will be in our place and I would be there. (Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang : Will you become a Congressman ?) Not a Punjabi Congressman. If I had been in the United Provinces or Madras I may have been tempted to become one. (Voices : We know it.) My honourable friend, Lala Deshbandhu Gupta, attempted a fling on my colleague, the Finance Minister. His observations were not in any way disparaging but even so it was an effort to score a point, and meant to show that Mr. Manohar Lal probably does not believe in these economic measures. I may remind my honourable friends that Mr. Manohar Lal— (Voices : Let Mr. Manohar Lal speak himself.) There is no dissension among the Ministers here as you may find in Ministries in other provinces. We speak with one voice. I speak for all my colleagues. You can take it from me that so far as Mr. Manohar Lal is concerned, even when he was just an ordinary member like any other member here in the old Council and not in the Cabinet, and the Relief of Indebtedness Bill was brought before the House, he made a speech which would be a standing testimony to his ability as a great economist and friend of the masses. (Loud cheers.) He supported it not because it was a communal measure, but because he knew perfectly well that it was an economic measure in the interest of the province as a whole, and he had no hesitation in rising above his surroundings, and expressing boldly thoughts in the larger interest of the province and for the sake of the province. (Loud cheers.)

[Premier]

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta : You have taken away that speech from him.

Premier : No, I have not taken that speech. (Interruption.) I do not think it is necessary for me to detain the House any longer except, with your permission, in the end to thank you for the indulgence you have shown because we have had a very strenuous session and we have been sitting for long hours and in spite of your health and your age you have been pleased to sit with us day after day for at least seven hours a day, and I hope that you will forgive me and I also hope that my honourable friends opposite will forgive me as I have been the cause of their sitting for such long hours during this very strenuous session. I know the strain has been very great on my honourable friends in all sections of this House, and my only excuse, if I may put it that way, is this that in the interest of the province—in spite of the fact that some of us may differ in our views—these measures were necessary and we should, when we go out, have the consolation of knowing that we have done our best and we have done a good session's work, a work which I might say would be monumental in the history of this province and would redound to the credit of this House. I wish to thank all of my friends who do not feel like me, particularly my friends who have been dubbed the three musketeers, i.e., Dr. Sir Gokul Chand Narang, Rai Bahadur Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and Munshi Hari Lal, who is not here. I particularly wish to thank them because even their criticism has been of the greatest help to me. I am grateful to them also in spite of the fact that we have differed on principle and in details, but I owe them a great deal for the improvement in this Bill. I can assure them that these Bills when they come into force might look unpalatable to them but I might liken them to bitter medicine which is bitter to the taste and after you have taken, it is good for the body and the system. I hope this Bill will not only prove of immense benefit to the poorer classes for whom it is meant but will also in due time bring about that amity and good-will to which we all look forward. (Applause.)

Mr. Speaker : The question is—

That the Punjab Alienation of Land (Third Amendment) Bill as amended be passed.

The motion was carried.

Premier : I hope you will also allow me to say a word more that is you may be pleased to convey our grateful thanks to the Honourable the Speaker of the Central Legislative Assembly for allowing us the use of this Chamber and also to the Secretary of the Legislative Assembly for the facilities and conveniences provided for us. We are all grateful to them and we hope you will convey our thanks to them for their kindness and courtesy.

The Assembly then adjourned sine die.
