PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Tuesday, 26th June 1934.

The Council met at the Legislative Assembly Chamber, Simla, at 9-30 A.M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

OATH OF OFFICE.

The following members were sworn in :—

Mr. A. Murphy (Chief Engineer).

Mr. A. D. Grindal (Finance Secretary).

Mr. A. V. Askwith (Secretary, Transferred Departments).

Chaudhri Umar Hayat (Gujrat West Muhammadan, Rural).

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Secretary, Legislative Department).

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan (Reforms Commissioner and Joint Secretary, Transferred Departments).

Mr. F. B. Wace (Registrar, Co-operative Societies).

REFERENCE TO LATE MR. OWEN ROBERTS.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving (Revenue Member): Sir, since this House last assembled it has suffered an irreparable loss in the lamented death of our colleague and friend Mr. Owen Roberts—and not this House alone, but the whole Punjab mourns with us.

Mr. Owen Roberts' connection with public life in the Punjab extends for over 30 years. He was a nominated member of the Lahore Municipal Committee from before the days of unofficial presidents and held successively the important offices of Chairman of the Finance Sub-Committee and Junior and Senior Vice-President. Outside the Committee his public activities were many and all characterised with the single-hearted devotion to the public good which has always been his singular merit. He performed with conscientious care the duties of Visitor of the Central Jail and Member of the Committee of the Mental Hospital. He was the first President of the Automobile Association of Northern India. He was an active member of the Northern India Chamber of Commerce and Chairman of the European Association, and above all he was a wise counsellor and a generous benefactor to those in trouble, one to whom the unfortunate could come with their trouble and to whom the distressed might prefer their suit.

But I should more particularly recall his services as a member of this House, fresh as they are in the minds of those to whom I speak. He has sat in every Council of this House since its inception, and has served it in more ways than I have time to mention. In the hard work of the Committees of this House he was always punctual in his presence, courteous and conciliatory in demeanour and wise in judgment. I may perhaps particularly call to mind his services on the Provincial committees in connection with the Simon and Lothian Commissions. On the floor of the House he took the great and courageous step of identifying himself with the political life of the country. Ripe in judgment, ready in debate and prudent in counsel, he earned the respect of all parties in the House, and in no less a degree that of the Government who find the loss of his advice, particularly in the matter of the great industry of the Punjab, well nigh irreparable. And let me add that he came down to this House in the clutches of his mortal sickness because he felt that this House had need of him and died a martyr to duty. And we have lost a friend of singular personal charm, the charm that comes of unaffected simplicity. The House is the emptier for his presence. The influence of such men and their example is not wasted, it endures. Whatever we have loved in him, whatever we have admired, remains and will remain.

In expressing our sense of loss let us not forget the deeper loss of those near and dear to him and let us let them know that we share their sorrow. Sir, I move—

That this House records with the deepest regret its sense of the great loss sustained by it in the death of its late member, Mr. Owen Roberts, and desires that the expression of its sincere condolence be conveyed to Mrs. Owen Roberts and the other members of his family.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi (Shahpur West, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): I whole-heartedly associate myself with the remarks made by the Honourable Sir Miles Irving. Mr. Owen Roberts was a zealous member of our party. In fact his death has caused irreparable loss to this House in general and to our party in particular. I hope the House will unanimously support the motion now before us, and a message of condolence will be sent to the members of the bereaved family.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General): Sir, I wish to associate myself whole-heartedly with what has been said by Sir Miles Irving and I support the motion that is before the House. I can claim to have enjoyed the friendship of Mr. Owen Roberts for a number of years ever since I became a member of this Council and I found that his activities were all very much to be admired by us and I appreciated them. I sympathise with the survivors, and I am very sorry for the loss that the Council has sustained by his death.

Sardar Sahib Sardar Ujjal Singh (Sikh, Urban): I rise to associate myself on behalf of the Sikh Party with the expression of sorrow and grief and the conveyance of sympathy to Mrs. Owen Roberts. Mr. Owen Roberts was a business man of an outstanding ability and we in the Council had always valued his opinions and views. I remember the valuable work done by him as a member of the Provincial Reforms Committee and whoever had the opportunity of working with him on any committee would certainly bear testimony to the good work done by Mr. Owen Roberts.

Mr. E. Mayadas (Nominated, non-official): Sir, I also rise to associate myself with the remarks that have been made by the honourable members.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh (Minister for Agriculture): I wish to associate myself with the Leader of the House. Mr. Owen Roberts rendered services to the province both in his private and public life which cannot be forgotten. He was a source of strength in this House. I remember seeing him just a week before I came to Simla and I had a talk with him for about half an hour. Even then when lying on a sick bed he talked of the coming reforms, the problem of rural indebtedness, the question of municipal reforms; all these things were dear to his heart. In him the House has lost a member whose services to the province were great and whose place it is difficult to fill. I wish to associate myself with all that the Leader of the House has said about him and I wish to convey to his wife and his survivors our heartfelt sympathy.

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerji (Punjab Chamber of Commerce and Trades Association, (Commerce): Sir, on behalf of the commercial community of the Punjab, I desire to associate myself with what has fallen from the mouths of the various members of this House. Although Mr. Owen Roberts represented the European community, every member of this House is aware with what respect his views on commercial subjects were listened to by this House. I was quite safe in his presence in this House, for in all commercial matters Mr. Owen Roberts took a sound view. With these few words I support the motion before this House.

Mr. President: Honourable members, I endorse every word that has been said by the various speakers representing different communities, and parties. Is it your wish that a message of condolence and sympathy be sent to the members of the bereaved family?

The House assented.

(d) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative and the latter in the negative.

(e) Usually the assessors in the Hissar division are divided communally in their verdict in all cases in which any communal point of a view can possibly be taken. In view of this the District Judge ordered that so far as possible an equal number of assessors should be present from both communities in all cases in which any communal question could possibly arise. In order to save the trouble of inquiring into the facts of every sessions case to discover if a communal question could arise in it or not, the District Judge's office started summoning four assessors from each community in every case. The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes. There is one officiating in the Punjab Educational Service (Class II) Womens' Branch. It may, however, be pointed out that selection for direct recruitment to the Punjab Educational Service (Class II) is made by a Selection Board consisting of the Director of Public Instruction and four non-official members of this honourable House.

(b) Yes.

(c) The applications of candidates were considered by the Board of Selection who presumably considered no Sikh candidate good enough for recruitment.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, BURYA.

3248. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

(a) how long the Municipal Committee of Burya, district Ambala, has been under suspension and how long it is likely to be so ;

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

- (c) whether the same grounds exist even now ;
- (d) if so, what action Government proposes to take to ameliorate the administration of the town ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand, Narang : (a) The Municipal Committee of Buria was superseded on August 21st, 1933. The question of its reconstitution will be taken up as soon as its finances improve.

(b) The reasons for superseding the Committee are given in a press communiqué (copy laid on the table) which was published at the time.

(c) Yes.

(d) The Tahsildar of Jagadhri was appointed administrator of the municipality, with a view to his effecting improvements in the administration.

PRESS COMMUNIQUE.

Buria is Small Town in the Jagadhri tahsil of the Ambala district. It used to be a flourishing town when there was no railway, but since the establishment of a railway station at Abdulla-pur about four miles away, the town has steadily decreased in population owing to the diversion of trade to that place ; and now, owing to the ruinous state of the town, it is difficult to command all the entrances and prevent constant evasion of octroi. In addition to this, the Municipal Committee has been mismanaging its affairs, is heavily in debt, and has been unable to hold general elections since 1925. Government has, therefore, been constrained to supersede the Committee and to appoint the Tahsildar of Jagadhri to administer its affairs.

VERNACULAR LOWER MIDDLE SCHOOL, BURYA.

3249. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that there was a vernacular lower middle school in Buria, district Ambala ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that this school has been proposed to be abolished ;
- (c) if so, the reasons for taking the extraordinary step ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that Free Primary Compulsory Education Act has been long applied to Buria town ;
- (e) if so, whether the Government proposes to give effect to its provisions in the absence of any school within the town ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that Buria is quite an important old town having a population of about 11,000 people and a municipal committee ; if so, why no school should be maintained there ;
- (g) whether it is a fact that the inhabitants of Buria have addressed memorials to the Deputy Commissioner, Ambala, and Inspectors of Schools, Ambala division, requesting that the school be continued as before ;
- (h) what action Government proposes to take on this memorial ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) The District Board, Ambala, decided to close down the Lower Middle School at Buria because it was situated within the municipal limits of Buria and outside the district board area. Although it is legally possible for a district board to run a school outside its area, yet the responsibility of keeping this school alive rests heavily on the local leaders concerned. The two local bodies concerned should with the help of the Deputy Commissioner and the Commissioner come to an amicable settlement.

(d) The introduction of compulsion was sanctioned by Government but it was not actually introduced by the Municipal Committee, Buria, on account of paucity of funds.

(e) Does not arise.

(f) Yes. Buria is a town. As it had a municipal committee which is now suspended it was previously the duty of the committee to maintain a school there.

(g) Yes. Two representations from the public of Buria were addressed to the Chairman, District Board, Ambala, and the District Inspector of Schools, Ambala. The public should press the local authorities for the attainment of the object.

(h) The representations are to be considered by the District Board, the authority maintaining the institution at Buria. Government cannot compel a district board to act against the provisions of the District Board Act.

- (c) whether it is a fact that in his application the said Munshi Ram stated that he was undertaking this journey for commercial purposes ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that he has been refused a passport ;
- (e) if so, on what grounds ;
- (f) whether he will lay a copy of the order of Deputy Commissioner on the table ;
- (g) whether Government is prepared to reconsider its decision on any condition ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) to (d) Yes.

(e) In view of his past record Government does not consider him entitled to the privilege of a passport.

(f) and (g) The Deputy Commissioner passed no order and the passport was refused by Government.

3251. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

- (a) whether the clerks' quarters at Ellerslie, Simla East, are meant for junior clerks only ;
- (b) whether the said quarters are in some cases allotted to highly paid clerks and that the claims of the low paid clerks are often ignored ; if so, how many such cases have occurred in the Civil, Irrigation and Roads and Buildings Secretariat offices during the past two years ;
- (c) if the answers to (a) and (b) above be in the affirmative, whether Government proposes in future to give preference to the low paid clerks in the allotment of the said quarters ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) No.

(b) No.

(c) Does not arise.

DISTRICT BOARD ENGINEER, LYALLPUR.

3252. Maulvi Mazhar Ali Azhar : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the District Board, Lyallpur, has very recently curtailed its benevolent activities on account of financial deficiency ;
- (b) whether the present grade of the District Board Engineer, Lyallpur, is from Rs. 400 to 600 ;
- (c) whether it has been brought to the notice of the Government that the Deputy Commissioner, Lyallpur, who is a president of the District Board also has expressed his willingness to appoint a European engineer on Rs. 700 to 1,000 grade ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the Deputy Commissioner of Lyallpur called a special meeting of the Finance Committee to sanction this grade of Rs. 700 to Rs. 1,000 so that the European engineer be provided for ;
- (e) whether it has been brought to the notice of the Government that there was a Muhammadan candidate named Mian Karam Din, who has far higher academic qualifications and has more practical experience than the European who is being provided for ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that the said Mian Karam Din expresses willingness to be appointed on Rs. 400 to 600 grade ;
- (g) if so, whether the Government enquired from the District Board why they are depriving a highly qualified Indian, who has higher qualifications and is willing to accept lower pay, as compared with the European candidate ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes.

(b) The pay scale of the present District Engineer is Rs. 400—25—600.

(c) The post was advertised in the press. Out of the candidates who applied, the Deputy Commissioner as Chairman of the Board and the two Vice-Chairmen jointly recommended to the Board the appointment of Mr. H. G. Milchem on pay of Rs. 700 per mensem, in the grade of

Rs. 500—50—750. Consideration of the proposal has been postponed pending final orders on the case of the present District Engineer, against whom departmental proceedings are being taken.

(d) No.

(e) Mian Karam Din Bhomeroy is another of the candidates whose case was for the consideration of the Board. Both Mr. Milchem and Mian Karam Din are reported to possess the requisite qualifications for the appointment. Mian Karam Din's academic qualifications are perhaps superior; his practical experience appears to be less than that of Mr. Milchem.

(f) His application is silent on this point. No pay was shown in the advertisement.

(g) Does not arise.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Is it a fact that the pay of the European engineer who has now been appointed was reduced to Rs. 250 by the Multan District Board?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I require notice of the question.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Before appointing the European engineer did the Honourable Minister see his previous record of work?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I appointed no one, nor can I appoint any.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Did the District Board that appointed him see to his qualifications?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I do not know. That is not my business.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Minister please say whether the Engineer is related to the Deputy Commissioner, Lyallpur?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I do not know.

- (ii) whether the Government intends to extend concessions of the nature that were extended to 1925, 1927 and 1928 purchasers to those of 1931 also, especially in view of the fact that as far as the quality of land and canal supply and market prices are concerned, 1931 purchasers are the hardest hit and they have already paid per acre more than the purchasers of 1925 who got the largest concessions ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (i) to (ii). The information required has been supplied in reply to question No. 3043¹ starred, asked by Pir Akbar Ali in the last session of the Council. The 1931 auction purchasers are now eligible for the concessions announced for auction purchasers in all colonies in Punjab Government letter No. 1589-C., dated 2nd May 1934.

MUNICIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICERS.

*3287. ✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

- (a) the names of municipalities where friction between the executive officer on the one hand and the president, vice-president or members on the other has already occurred ;
- (b) the number of instances in which executive officers originally appointed have been recalled or transferred or discharged ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) The word " friction " used in the present question is a somewhat indefinite term. There have been occasions in some municipalities where differences of opinion have occurred between executive officers and elected office bearers or members, but there have been no cases in which Government have been constrained to take notice of such disagreements except Sialkot and Multan.

(b) (i) The official originally appointed as executive officer in the Sialkot Municipality was permitted to resign in November 1933.

(ii) The original executive officer in the Rupar Municipality left that office in August 1933 on his appointment in a similar capacity at Kasur.

DISTRICT BOARD, ROHTAK.

*3288. ✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that a sum of Rs. 4,000 or 5,000 was contributed by the District Board of Rohtak for the construction of a bridge over the railway line in the station yard at Rohtak ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that a sum of Rs. 3,000 or 4,000 was contributed by the District Board of Rohtak for the purchase of a motor lorry to be used to convey girls to and from the girls school situated within the municipal limits of Rohtak ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that about Rs. 3,000 was spent by the district board of Rohtak for the erection of a pavilion meant for use on rent by a club to which gazetted officers and a few favoured non-officials alone are admitted ;
- (d) the dates on which the items of expenditure referred to in (a), (b) and (c) were sanctioned ;
- (e) whether on the dates referred to in (d) the district board has an official chairman ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes. The sum in question was Rs. 4,000.

(b) Rs. 2,000 were given by the Board for the purchase of a lorry in the interest of the girls of the neighbouring villages.

(c) The question doubtless refers to the construction of a pavilion in the Queen's Gardens, on which the Board spent a sum of Rs. 2,960. The Club which uses the pavilion has as its members both gazetted officers and non-official gentlemen of similar status, the election of membership being by ballot. Rent is charged by the Board from the Club for the use of the pavilion.

[The Hon. Dr. Gokul Chand Narang.]

(d) the dates are as under :—

- (a) 25-5-1928 ;
- (b) 21-8-1931 ; and
- (c) 28-2-1928.

(e) Yes.

KHARIF CROPS.

*3289. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : With reference to question No. 2922¹ asked on the 5th March, 1934, and the answer thereto, will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state whether Government has any objection to placing on the table of the House a copy of the instructions issued for the use of tahsildars and revenue assistants ; if it has, what are the grounds of that objection ; if it has not, whether it will comply with the suggestion ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : A copy of the instructions is laid on the table.

INSTRUCTIONS.

In view of widespread and exceptional nature of calamity and general losses suffered by people in Rohtak, Gurgaon and Karnal Government has sanctioned the following special scale of remissions of land revenue in these districts :—

Where crop is less than eight annas total remission, where crop is greater than eight annas but less than twelve annas one half remission, where crop is more than twelve annas no remission. In order to give opportunity to people to recover, even where land revenue is payable under above proposal Collector should be given discretion to suspend it if he is satisfied that this is desirable having regard to general condition of revenue payers.

As regards abiana Government has sanctioned total remissions on jowar, bajra, moth and fodder crops but levies abiana on sugarcane, rice and cotton with same scale remissions as for land revenue.

Please refer to my memorandum of 10th October, 1933, on the subject of remission in Rohtak, Gurgaon and Karnal. Village statements for these remissions will be prepared in the usual form A on account of losses due to ordinary calamity given in paragraph 10 of Standing Order No. 30, the principal information required being that given in column 5, in which acres of crops harvested and crops failed should be given :—

- (a) for the valuable crops, sugarcane, cotton and rice and any other special valuable crop ; and
- (b) for the less valuable crops, such as jowar and bajra. In considering whether the standard of eight annas or twelve annas has been attained special regard should be paid to the valuable crops and these should not be regarded as equal, acre for acre, to the less valuable crops, that is to say, even if the whole acreage of all crops shows less than eight annas failed, total remission will be given if the failure of the valuable crops justifies it and conversely total remission need not be given if there is a failure over all crops of eight annas and a large proportion of the valuable crops has been matured. The decision as to remissions in each case will be made by the Commissioner who will report the results as a whole by district to the Financial Commissioner, without the village statements, for formal sanction.

2. It is necessary to guard against the usual practice by which when a field of jowar is sown and the whole of the seed is lost, but the stalks remain, the field is shown as chari without kharaba. After making proper allowance for the loss of the seed and for the fact that jowar is not sown so thickly as chari such a field should be given not less than half the kharaba, apart from any allowance made to the inferior quality of the fodder.

3. It must not be assumed that when a field of bajra or jowar has been cut before the girdawari it is all matured. The condition of the crop can be estimated partly by examining the stalks of cut crops on the spot and partly by estimating the quality of crops in adjoining fields.

4. Particular care will have to be paid to the girdawari of cotton.

5. As regards the remission of abiana on the Western Jamna I have ascertained that this will be automatic on jowar, bajra, moh and fodder crops but it will be levied on sugarcane, rice and cotton with the same scale of remission as for land revenue by field to field kharaba.

Copy of a circular memorandum No. 678, dated 8rd November, 1938, from the Commissioner, Ambala division, to the Deputy Commissioners, Karnal, Gurgaon and Rohtak.

It appears to me to be necessary, though it is somewhat late, to point out that officers supervising the girdawari should not let their minds be influenced by any idea of the subsequent remissions. With regard to the girdawari the first and foremost duty is to see that the record is correctly prepared and it follows that no body is justified in arriving at his conclusion with regard to kharaba if he has in mind all the time the effect that the recording of the kharaba will have on the subsequent remissions.

When village statements in the usual form A are prepared special care has to be taken that the figures relating to kharaba are not mis-interpreted. In the first place the kharif crop always has a fairly large kharaba and allowance should be made for the normal kharaba. Secondly the more valuable crops such as cotton and sugarcane should from the rental point of view be regarded as very nearly three times the less valuable crops such as jowar. If, for instance, a village has 100 acres matured cotton and 200 acres of jowar it may roughly be estimated that it has really nearly 500 acres of jowar. As the kharaba is likely to be mostly in jowar, bajra and other such crops the kharaba and the matured acreage should be reduced to the same denomination as shown below :—

	Acres.
Cotton area failed	10
Jowar, bajra, etc., area failed	70

This is roughly equivalent to 10×3 , i.e., 30 + 70 i.e., 100 acres in all. If the matured figures given above are now compared with the failed figures we find that in this particular village 500 acres of jowar are matured and only 100 acres have failed. Making allowance for normal kharif crop it is obvious that the crop in the village is certainly above 12 annas in this particular case. This instance only is a very rough guide and must not be followed slavishly. It is possible that in some places the rough rental value of an acre of cotton may be equal only to the rental value of two acres of jowar instead of three acres of jowar. Similarly the rough rental value of sugarcane may be four or five times the rough rental value of an acre of jowar. The word rental value is used here intentionally and no reference is made to prices because the landlord pays his revenue out of rent that he receives. It is desirable not to mix up this question with the question of current prices. Low prices are a separate factor altogether.

It is possible that in some villages the area matured even in the present kharif may be roughly equivalent to the settlement cropping on which the permanent fixed assessment was based and yet there may be a very heavy kharaba. As for instance if the settlement cropping for a village is 50 acres of jowar, bajra, etc., and we now also have 30 acres matured of cotton, 50 acres matured nearly of sugarcane and 300 acres of jowar, bajra, etc., but in addition a failure of 30 acres of cotton, 30 acres of sugarcane and 200 acres of jowar, bajra, etc., we cannot refuse to consider the question of remissions merely because the matured area is nearly equal to the settlement cropped area on which the assessment was based. Where kharaba is large because the sowings were abnormally extensive some consideration has to be paid to the heavy losses of seed and labour which the failure of each area entails.

The above instructions are given only for the use of tahsildars and the revenue assistant when recording their notes on Form A and should not be communicated to patwaris. It should be clearly understood that these instructions are for this particular year only merely to guide people towards their arriving at a fair estimate of the condition in a village. It has got nothing to do with the field to field recording of crops matured and failed.

KHARABA.

✓3290. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : With reference to question No. 2928¹ asked on the 5th March, 1934, and the answer thereto, will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly place on the table of the

[R. B. Oh. Chhotu Ram.]

House a copy of the instructions issued by the Commissioner to revenue officers in the Rohtak district as also a statement showing the amount of land revenue (a) suspended and (b) remitted during the three preceding harvests the average of the kharaba of which was directed to be taken as an indication of "what is usual" together with a similar statement for any three consecutive harvests during which remissions and suspensions of a similar character were allowed within living memory?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : For the instructions issued by the Commissioner, the attention of the honourable member is invited to the answer given to starred Council question No. 8289.¹

The following amounts were suspended and remitted during the three preceding harvests —

Harvest.	Suspended.	Remitted out of Suspended revenue.
	Rs.	Rs.
Kharif 1932	73,093	2,85,070
Kharif 1931	83,282
Kharif 1930	78,024	67,092

Suspensions and remissions on such a liberal scale were never before given during the last eight years and Government consider that an examination of the figures beyond this period would entail an amount of labour not commensurate with the result to be gained.

✓ GRANT TO DISTRICT BOARD, ROHTAK TOWARDS FLOOD DAMAGE.

SUSPENSION OF LAND REVENUE IN ROHTAK DISTRICT.

✓ 3292. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : With reference to question No. 2698¹ asked on the 20th February, 1934, and the answer thereto, will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state—

- (a) how the total amount under suspension was ascertained or calculated ;
- (b) whether it is not a fact that in calculating the total amount under suspension the amount under suspension in individual villages was gone into and totalled up ;
- (c) if the suggestion contained in (b) is correct what extra work is involved in the preparation of a list of those villages ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) The total amount under suspension was ascertained from the hal tauzi of the Rohtak district for the month of August, 1933.

- (b) Yes.
- (c) The extra work involved would consist in a scrutiny de novo of all the village statements of the district.

SUSPENSION OF LAND REVENUE.

✓*3293. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state in respect of Rohtak, Hissar, Gurgaon and Karnal districts separately—

- (a) the amount of land revenue which at the end of January, 1934, had been under suspension for more than (i) three harvests, (ii) four harvests, (iii) five harvests, and (iv) six harvests, and not remitted ;
- (b) whether any portion of the amount referred to in (a) has been remitted since the end of January last ; and, if so, how much ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : A statement giving the required information is laid on the table.

Suspension of Land Revenue.

SUSPENSION OF LAND REVENUE.

✓*3294. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state whether there is any limit of time after which suspended land revenue will be regarded as remitted automatically ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : No. The rules for the remission of suspended land revenue are to be found in Land Administration Manual, paragraph 576.

✓ SUSPENSION OF LAND REVENUE IN HISSAR DISTRICT.

*3295. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state in respect of the Hissar district the longest period during which the land revenue of an estate has remained under suspension without being remitted ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : The longest period during which the land revenue of any estate now under suspension has remained under suspension without being remitted relates to rabi 1932.

✓ INSPECTION FEE OF PATWARIS' RECORDS.

*3296. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state whether the abolition of the inspection fee of patwaris' records has been given effect to ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : No. The question is under the consideration of Government.

✓ MALIKANA.

*3297. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state whether or not the practice of charging malikana at the rate of Rs. 3 per acre on all allotted area in certain portions of the Lyallpur district has now been replaced by the practice of charging malikana at lower rates on matured area only ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : Malikana at Rs. 3 per acre allotted is charged on civil non-official reward grants, including village headmen in reward grants chaks, in the Pir Mahal and Khikhi Extensions of the Lower Chenab Canal, Lyallpur district.

On account of present low prices of agricultural produce, Government have decided to charge malikana at this rate on matured area during the rabi and kharif harvests of 1934.

✓ FLOOD RELIEF.

*3298. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state separately for each of the four districts of Rohtak, Hissar, Gurgaon and Karnal—

- (a) the total amount of relief given by or through Government in the form of (i) gratuitous relief, (ii) remission of revenue (iii) suspension of revenue, (iv) remission of abiana and (v) taqavi to mitigate the hardship caused by the floods of 1933 ;

- (b) the amount of suspended revenue which Government proposes to collect during rabi 1934 ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : A statement is laid on the table.

District.	(a)					(b)
	(i)	(ii)	(iii)	(iv)	(v)

Hissar	The heavy rains that caused floods in the neighbouring districts during autumn 1933 did comparatively small damage in the Hissar district. No gratuitous relief was, therefore, given. Remissions and suspensions of land revenue were allowed and taqavi was granted under the ordinary rules, but it is not possible to state what proportion of this relief related to the few villages that suffered from floods.			46,521	..	2,02,727
Gurgaon	47,267	7,87,586	22,149	28,723	4,60,000	7,217

TAQAVI IN SONEPAT.

3299. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state the number of wells constructed with the help of taqavi money in Sonapat tahsil of Rohtak which have been destroyed by the floods of 1933 ; and whether Government intends to write off the taqavi loans incurred for these wells ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : No wells constructed with the aid of taqavi were destroyed by the floods of 1933. The question of remission of the taqavi loans does not, therefore, arise.

GOHANA HOSPITAL.

3300. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education kindly state—

- whether the Municipal Committee of Gohana was unable to maintain its hospital ;
- whether this hospital was taken over temporarily by the District Board of Rohtak ;
- whether the District Board of Rohtak has passed a resolution that it is no longer willing or able to maintain this hospital ;
- when Government intends to provincialise this hospital ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) Government has not yet received a copy of any such resolution.

(d) There are no prospects of the early provincialization of this hospital, financial stringency having necessitated the suspension for the time being of the provincialization programme.

GRANTS-IN-AID.

3301. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education kindly state—

(a) the total number of private schools which are in receipt of a Government grant-in-aid ;

(b) the total number of anglo-vernacular middle and high schools maintained by local bodies ;

(c) the number of the schools referred to in (b) which are on the grant-in-aid list ;

(d) the number of schools of the type mentioned in (b) maintained by the District Board of Rohtak ;

(e) whether the schools mentioned in (d) are in receipt of a grant ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : The honourable member is referred to the printed statement of grants sanctioned from provincial revenues for the privately managed and board anglo-vernacular secondary schools in the Punjab during 1928-29 to 1932-33 which has been supplied to him and the annual list of secondary schools (Indian) recognized by the Education Department, a copy of which is placed in the Council Library. It may, however, be added for the honourable member's information that no new school has been brought on the grant-in-aid list since 1930.

REMISSIONS.

3302. Sardar Bishan Singh : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

(a) whether it is a fact that a uniform water rate is being charged for wheat, barley and javi ;

(b) whether Government has given a remission of Re. 1 per acre for wheat only ;

(c) whether the water rate is usually assessed on the market value of the crop and the amount of watering necessary to mature it ;

(d) if so, whether Government has taken into consideration the fact that as crops barley and javi are inferior to wheat, fetch lower prices and take comparatively fewer waterings to mature ;

(e) whether after the new abiana remission sanctioned for wheat, a higher water rate is now being charged for barley and javi ;

(f) what action the Government proposes to rectify this mistake ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) Yes. The same occupiers' rate was charged for wheat, barley and oats on the same canal before the recent reduction in occupiers' rates for certain crops.

(b) The reduction in occupiers' rate for wheat sanctioned recently is as below :—

				Rs.	A.	P.
(1) Perennial	1	0	0
(2) Kharif channels	0	12	0
(3) Non-perennial	0	4	0

(c) No. These are not the only factors taken into account when fixing occupiers' rates.

(d) Does not arise.

(e) Yes.

(f) Wheat was specially selected for reduction in abiana in order to benefit the largest number of cultivators.

MUSLIM STUDENTS IN CENTRAL MODEL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3303. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state if it is a fact that the number of Muslim students in the Central Model School, Lahore, is proportionately low ; if so, whether Government propose to take steps for facilitating the admission of Muslim students to that school ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : No. Muslim students form about 46 per cent. of the total enrolment of the school.

PRIVATE TUITIONS.

3304. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state the rules, if any, under which teachers in Government schools may engage in giving private tuitions—

(a) to the students of their own classes ;

(b) to the students of their own schools ;

(c) to the students of other schools or to private students ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : A copy of Punjab Government (Ministry of Education) C. M. letter No. 5426-E., dated the 16th April, 1923, giving the requisite information is laid on the table.

Copy of Punjab Government (Ministry of Education) C. M. No. 5426-E., dated the 16th April, 1923, from the Under-Secretary to Government Punjab, to all Inspectors, Inspectresses and Heads of Government Educational Institutions in the Punjab.

I AM to refer you to Mr. Bell's circular No. 27-G-1739-G, dated September 8th, 1906, on the subject of private tuition in Government institutions by Government servants. In that circular it was laid down that applications for sanction to the giving of private tuition should be forwarded to the Head of the Department for disposal.

2. In No. 163 of the Handbook of Circulars it was later stated that applications regarding fees up to the limit of Rs. 100 should be disposed of by Inspectors.

3. The Punjab Government (Ministry of Education) has now decided to delegate to Inspectors of Schools the powers of the Head of the Department under No. 11 (b) of the delegations under Fundamental Rule No. 8, notified in Finance Department, No. 12528, dated 11th April, 1922, viz., to sanction acceptance of fees for private tuition not exceeding Rs. 200.

4. It is felt that the giving of private tuition has been extended to indefensible limits. As a general practice, the giving of such tuition by a teacher to a boy in his own class is most undesirable (for the assistance required to bring a backward pupil up to the level of his class fellows is the ordinary function of the teacher) and only in very special cases is private tuition by a teacher to a boy in another class or another school permissible.

5. It is, therefore, necessary to supervise much more closely than at present the giving of private tuition. The procedure in Government and Board schools in this regard shall in future be as follows :—

- (a) Every request for private tuition must take the form of a written application from the parent or guardian of the pupil concerned, stating clearly the reasons why private tuition is necessary. This application shall be made to the head master of the school which the pupil is attending.
- (b) On receipt of this application the head master will first decide in the light of what is stated in paragraph 4 above whether private tuition is, or is not necessary.
- (c) If tuition is considered necessary the head master will certify accordingly and the question of the teacher to be employed will be settled between the head master and the parent or guardian. Should a teacher from another school be proposed, the head master will communicate with the head master of the school in which such teacher is employed and secure his assent to the arrangements proposed. In any case permission for private tuition must be obtained from the head master both of the institution in which the pupil is studying and that in which the proposed tutor is employed. The forms will fix the time to be devoted to private tuition bearing in mind the age of the pupil and the latter the amount of remuneration to be paid bearing in mind the school duties of the teacher and the time to be devoted to the work.
- (d) On completion of these preliminaries the application with full details will be sent to the Inspector, with whom the decision shall rest, and the private tuition applied for shall on no account be undertaken until the Inspector's sanction has been received.

6. It is difficult to lay down any rigid rule regarding the rate of remuneration. The best course will be for Inspectors to use their judgment in this respect. The head master of each institution will keep a register of private tuitions; which register should be carefully scrutinised at the time of each inspection. On the 1st May of each year, a complete list of all tuitions undertaken during the previous school year should be forwarded to the Department of Education. Ordinarily, a teacher should not undertake more than one such tuition at a time, and in any case the time he can devote to this work will be limited by considerations regarding the nature and responsibility of his ordinary duties.

7. It should be clearly borne in mind that if a teacher undertakes private tuition without permission, he has committed a very serious offence. Inspectors are requested to forward all such cases to the Department. The punishment for the first offence will be the withholding of an increment or increments and loss of seniority for the teacher concerned; and, in the case of a repetition of the offence dismissal.

8. It is believed that the managing authorities of aided institutions are anxious to co-operate in this effort to eradicate the abuse of the system of private tuition, and it is, therefore, hoped that such institutions will be able to accept the spirit of the above instructions so that uniformity of practice may be observed in all schools in the province.

UNAUTHORISED PRIVATE TUITIONS, BY TEACHERS OF CENTRAL MODEL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3305. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

(a) if it is a fact that certain teachers of the Central Model School give unauthorized private tuitions; (b) if so, whether Government propose to take any action in the matter?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Government are not aware of such unauthorised tuitions, if any.

(b) Cannot arise unless some definite case is reported to Government.

HEAD MASTER, CENTRAL MODEL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3306. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state the academical qualifications of the present Head Master of the Central Model School ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : The present Head Master of the Central Model School, Lahore, is B.A., S.A.-V., B.T.

HEAD MASTER, CENTRAL MODEL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3307. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state since when the present Head Master of the Central Model School has been in the school, either—

- (a) as a master, or
- (b) as a second master, or
- (c) as head master ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) He has not worked as master.

(b) He has worked as second master from 25th April 1922, to 31st December 1929.

(c) He has been working as officiating head master since the 1st January 1930.

It may be added for the honourable member's information that the retention of a suitable head master in one school for as many years as possible is in accordance with the principles of educational administration and is the practice in England and elsewhere.

MUSLIM HEAD MASTER FOR CENTRAL MODEL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3308. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : (i) Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state if it is a fact —

- (a) that the Central Model School is the only Government High School in Lahore, and
- (b) that no Muslim has ever been appointed as head master of the school.

(ii) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, does Government propose to appoint a Muslim head master in the school ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (i) (a) Yes, for boys.

(b) No.

(ii) This question cannot arise until the retirement or transfer of the present Head Master whose work is very satisfactory.

CENTRAL MODEL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3309. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please lay a statement on the table showing the duration or employment in the Central Model School, Lahore, of the teachers and masters at present on its staff ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon: The statement giving the requisite information is placed on the table.

It may, however, be added for the honourable member's information that it is a distinct educational advantage if a school has a permanent un-changing staff of teachers.

- (a) that the Head Master of the Central Model School, Lahore, has as many as four cattle, two of which belong to his brother residing in Amritsar, and that these cattle roam about in school compound and graze on school lawn ;

[Mr. Muhammad Din Malak.]

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3314. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : With reference to answer to part (iii) of starred question 1904¹ that craft education in Government Technical School, Lahore, was not proposed to be abolished; and the answer to part (c) of the same question that " Muslims have had quite a large proportion on the staff of this school and it is not understood what further assurance is required " will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

(i) if it is a fact—

(a) that carpentry in primary classes has since been abolished;

(b) that drawing in primary classes has since been abolished ;

(c) that the craft of padding taught in the senior classes has since been abolished ;

(d) that the craft of polishing has since been abolished ;

(e) that the craft of smithy has since been abolished ;

(f) that drawing taught in senior classes has since been abolished

(g) that carpentry taught in the senior classes has since been abolished, and

(h) that the few crafts still taught are about to be abolished ;

(ii) if the replies to the above be in the affirmative, why the assurances given in November, 1932, were not kept ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (i) (a) and (b) The answer is in the negative. The primary classes to which he refers, were abolished prior to, and not after, the reply given to his Council question No. 1904.¹ The Director of Industries had, however, already addressed the Inspector of Schools, Lahore, with a view to the admission of the primary class boys in the schools of the Education Department.

(c) Padding was never taught as a separate craft in the school. It was only a branch of furniture making and that branch has been abolished.

(d) No. Polishing is still done as a branch of furniture making.

(e) No.

(f) No.

(g) No.

(h) No. Government has under consideration the issue of a statement which will make its policy in this matter clear.

(ii) Does not arise.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : May I know the date on which carpentry classes were abolished ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The honourable member probably has not quite grasped the import of his own question and of my answer. The question was whether the drawing classes and carpentry classes were abolished after he put his question No. 1904.¹ The primary classes were abolished before that question was put and therefore there was no question of abolishing the drawing classes and carpentry classes since his question was put.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : That is why I have put this supplementary question to prove that these classes had not been abolished then.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Then you know more than the Director knows of the Department. The primary classes were abolished in October 1931 and the honourable member's question 1904¹ was probably put in November 1932.

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3315. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state the number of students, community-wise, in the Government Technical School, Lahore—

(a) in the primary section of the school—

(i) up to the end of 1931 ;

(ii) up to the end of 1932 ;

(iii) up to the end of 1933 ;

(iv) up to the 1st April, 1934.

(b) in the middle section of the school—

(i) up to the end of 1931 ;

(ii) up to the end of 1932 ;

(iii) up to the end of 1933 ;

(iv) up to 1st April, 1934 ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang :

	Hindus.	Muslims.	Sikhs.	Christians.	Total.
--	---------	----------	--------	-------------	--------

(a) PRIMARY DEPARTMENT.

(i) Up to the end of 1931	..	15	192	12	2	221
---------------------------	----	----	-----	----	---	-----

The Primary Department ceased to exist after 1931.

(b) MIDDLE DEPARTMENT.

(i) Up to the end of 1931	..	40	322	31	2	395
(ii) Up to the end of 1932	..	43	319	28	3	393
(iii) Up to the end of 1933	..	22	196	13	1	232
(iv) Up to 1st April 1934	..	9	153	4	3	169

The decrease in the number of boys in the Middle Department after 1932 arises from the fact that on the introduction of the new scheme of studies fresh admissions to the then existing classes were stopped, the boys already, on the rolls being however allowed to complete their course of study. The admissions to the new classes have been considerably restricted in order to permit of the individual attention necessary if the best results are to be obtained from the revised curriculum and also because the existing equipment and accommodation impose limits on the number of boys who can be efficiently trained.

(a) on the 31st December, 1932 ;

(b) on the 31st December, 1933 ;

(c) on the 1st April, 1934 ?

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3317. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : The reply to part (b) of starred question 1904¹ was that "The students at present on the rolls of the school will not be discharged," but more or less 200 students belonging to the primary section of the school alone were in fact discharged. That being so, will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) how Government reconcile their assurance referred to above with the actual state of affairs ;
- (b) whether in spite of the declared policy of the Government the Director of Industries had of his own accord discharged so many students at once ;
- (c) the total number of students so discharged ;
- (d) how many of the students so discharged were Muslims, Hindus and Sikhs ;
- (e) the exact date on which these students were discharged ;
- (f) whether the Department of Industries had arranged with any other educational institution for the admission of the discharged students ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) There is no conflict between the answer given to part (b) of Council question No. 1904¹ and the actual state of affairs in the Government Technical School, Lahore. In this connection the honourable member's attention is invited to the answer given to his question No. 3314².

(b) No. The implication is quite unjustified and the Director of Industries has faithfully carried out the policy of Government.

(c) None.

(d), (e) and (f) Do not arise.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : If these classes had already been abolished why then was the assurance given by the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government in reply to my question No. 1904¹ that no student on the rolls of the Technical School would be discharged ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : "No student then on the rolls of the school would be discharged". These were my words and none of them has been discharged. The honourable member should read his question and our answer again.

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3319. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state the names and designations of such of the discharged members of the staff of the Government Technical School, Lahore, as have since been absorbed by the Department of Industries together with the names of the institutions where they have been absorbed ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (1) Bhai Chanda Singh, Carpenter Master, transferred to Government Industrial School, Ludhiana.

(2) M. Muhammad Hussain, Padding Instructor, on his discharge from the Government Technical School, Lahore, was asked to work on daily wages in the Government Wood Working Institute, Jullundur, but has not joined there so far. His name has also been brought to the notice of the Principal, Mayo School of Arts, Lahore and his services will be requisitioned by him whenever there is work for him either in the Mayo School of Arts or in the Arts and Crafts Depot, Lahore.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : What salary was being drawn by Muhammad Hussain and what was the amount of the daily wages offered to him?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I have no information and if the honourable member gives notice I shall certainly give him the required information.

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3320. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state as to whether it is proposed to absorb all the men since retrenched from the Government Technical School, Lahore, or who may in the immediate future be thrown out of employment as a result of the change in the Government policy with regard to the curriculum of the school; if not, why not?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Efforts are being made to secure for these men suitable employment in the Department of Education, elsewhere in the Department of Industries, or in schools under local bodies but it may not be practicable to secure employment for every one of them.

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3321. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) the names ;
- (b) the designations ;
- (c) the date of appointment ;
- (d) the starting and grade pay of the men who have been appointed for the new toy-making, die-making and electro-mechanic class or classes in the Government Technical School, Lahore ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : There is no separate die-making department in the Government Technical School, Lahore. The subject of die-making is, however, taught in both the major departments of the school, viz. :—

- (a) Electro Mechanics.

[The Hon. Dr. Gokul Chand Narang.]

(b) Toy making (or more properly sheet metal working by die press methods).

(c) and (d) The details of the various appointments attached to each department are given below :—

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3322. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- with reference to Government Technical School, Lahore, the total expenditure entailed up to date for starting a toy-making class ;
- the number of students admitted to the toy-making class ;
- the toy-making class or classes, if any, since started ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Rs. 736-9-0.

(b) and (c) Government regret that owing to circumstances as to which they have not yet received complete information, the toy-making class has not yet been opened. Further enquiries are being made, and the future of the class is separately under the consideration of the Industries Department.

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3323. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) if it is a fact that although staff for the new toy-making and die-making classes in the Government Technical School, Lahore, was engaged as far back as October, November and December, 1938, nobody has yet joined these classes and the money hitherto spent has been a net loss to the provincial revenues ;
- (b) if the reply to the above be in the affirmative, whether Government intends to give up the idea of starting these classes seeing that toy-making is not popular with the public ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) The honourable member's attention is invited to the reply to starred Council question 3322. The only staff engaged for these classes is a toy-designer who since his appointment in November last has been usefully engaged on technical drawings and other work preliminary to the opening of the toy-making department.

(b) Government are impressed with the desirability and possibilities of development in the toy-making industry, but will further consider the question of the future of the toy-making class on receipt of fuller information as to the reasons which have hitherto precluded its opening. From information received by Government it appears that the reasons why this class has not yet been opened is not the alleged unpopularity of the scheme. The case is under investigation.

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3324. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state as to who was responsible for retrenching the existing curriculum and for introducing toy-making classes in the Government Technical School, Lahore ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The changes in the curriculum of studies of the Government Technical School, Lahore, have been made by Government in the Industries Department in pursuance of the policy of converting industrial schools which, till recently, were giving training only in ordinary carpentry and smithy, into trade schools with a view to giving training in the production of articles of daily utility for which no facilities were found to exist in the Punjab.

RAM GOPAL, TEACHER, GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3325. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) the academical or technical qualifications of Mr. Ram Gopal, teacher ;
- (b) the salary and the date on which he has been appointed in Government Technical School, Lahore ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that he is an untrained graduate ;
- (d) if so, why he was engaged on such high rate of salary ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Lala Ram Gopal, possesses the F. Sc., certificate and B.A. degree, he is a certificated mechanical draftsman and has served an apprenticeship in an electrical firm.

(b) He was appointed on 12th May 1933 at Rs. 100 per month (less 15 per cent. and 5 per cent. cuts) in grade Rs. 100—5—150.

(c) and (d) In view of the reply to (a), these do not arise.

The honourable member probably had in mind pedagogic qualifications like the B. T. degree. If so, he will kindly note that such a degree or diploma is not required and would be practically of no use for the kind of teaching Ram Gopal is carrying on.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : No. I wanted to know his technical qualifications.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I have given them in my answer.

GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, LAHORE.

3326. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) whether Sardar Bhagwan Singh and Chaudhri Sardar Khan, English masters and Chaudhri Sant Ram and Lala Hans Raj and Uttam Chand, etc., Urdu masters, have been retrenched ;
- (b) whether the teachers named in (a) were senior to Mr. Ram Gopal ;
- (c) if answer to (b) be in the affirmative, why Mr. Ram Gopal was not brought under retrenchment ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) Does not arise.

QUALIFICATIONS OF THE DIRECTOR OF INDUSTRIES.

3327. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : With reference to reply to starred question 1708 (a),¹ wherein the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government had stated that, "There are no qualifications anywhere laid down for the Director of Industries," and the reply to starred question 2374, wherein the Honourable Minister, when he was referred to paragraph 311 of the Industrial Commission report, 1916-18, stated that his attention had not been drawn to it until the 8th March, 1933, i.e., until the notice of the latter question had reached him, will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state as to why no action has since been taken to give effect to the recommendations of the Industrial Commission?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The reply to starred Council question No. 2374 of March, 1933, was intended to signify that Government were satisfied that the present Director of Industries was suitably qualified to discharge the duties of his post. No further action was, therefore, considered necessary.

Mr. Labh Singh : With reference to question No. 3327 and the questions before and after that, may I, without being personal, ask a supplementary question? I wish to know whether the honourable member has a relation of his serving in the office of the Director of Industries. If so, is it a fact that disciplinary action was taken against him only recently and also if it is a fact that after this disciplinary action it was that the honourable member has considered it proper to direct this fusillade of interpellations against the Director of Industries.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Has the honourable member raised a point of order against my questions?

Mr. Labh Singh : No. I have asked a supplementary question.

Mr. President : If the honourable member asks every question separately, the Chair will be able to decide its admissibility.

Mr. Labh Singh : Is it a fact that honourable member has got a relation of his. (The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : which member?) The honourable member who is putting the question.

Mian Nurullah : May I enquire from which answer this supplementary question arises?

Mr. Labh Singh : From questions Nos. 3327, 3328 and the questions before and after them.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : The honourable member cannot bring in other questions than the one just now answered.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : According to the information supplied to me the answer is in the affirmative.

Mr. President : If the object of the honourable member is to raise a charge of personal character against a member of this House he cannot do so indirectly by asking supplementary questions. For that purpose he must move a direct and a substantive motion.

Mr. Labh Singh : No. That was not at all my object.

Mr. President : The honourable member may ascertain facts from the Minister concerned. But the object of his questions should not be to discredit the honourable member for Lahore or to question his motives.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : You have said just now that 'unless the honourable member, Mr. Labh Singh, repeats his questions and in separate parts, you will not be able to give a ruling whether the questions are allowed or not. But before you said anything the answer was given by the Honourable Minister. Will you kindly rule that that answer should be deleted from the report?

Mr. President : That appears to be a harmless question and its answer also appears to be harmless.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : You will warn the Minister that in future he shall not answer any question before you give your ruling on it. If the question is allowed by you then he is welcome to answer it.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : May I draw your attention to Article 40 of our Business Manual which says :—

Questions shall be put and answers given in such manner as the President may, in his discretion, determine

You have not determined whether even this question is permissible or not. Before that the Honourable Minister has been pleased to stand up and answer the question.

There is another point of order. According to Article 42 of our Business Manual "any member may put a supplementary question for the purpose of further elucidating any matter of fact regarding which an answer has been given: provided that the President shall disallow any supplementary question if, in his opinion, it infringes the rules as to the subject matter of questions or the standing orders." The objection has been raised but in spite of that objection and without hearing your ruling the question was put by the honourable member opposite, Mr. Labh Singh, and it was answered by the Honourable Minister. I propose that such questions should not be put without your permission.

Mr. President : That is all right for the future but what about the question which has been answered ?

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : The question and the answer should be deleted.

Not only this. Our objection is not confined to this point. We say that there is a conspiracy between the honourable member putting the question and the Honourable Minister answering it.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : It is a lie.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Lie is an unparliamentary word. It has never been used in this House ever since its inception. Will you kindly order that that word should be withdrawn ?

Mr. President : There was no justification for heat. The matter was a simple one. A question was read out. I remarked that if each part of the question was separately put I will be able to decide its admissibility. But the Honourable Minister answered the first part before I gave any decision.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I waited for some time after the question was put.

Mr. President : When the Honourable Chaudhri Afzal Haq got up to state his point of view in his heat he talked of a conspiracy. That was objectionable. He ought not to have attributed motives to any member of this House. It was equally objectionable on the part of the Honourable Minister to use the unparliamentary expression he has used. Will the Honourable Chaudhri Afzal Haq first withdraw his remark about the alleged conspiracy? When he has withdrawn I will ask the Honourable Minister to withdraw his expression.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Before I withdraw—

Mr. President : No arguments please.

Mr. Manohar Lal : Conspiracy is a stronger word than a "lie".

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : I withdraw it.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I also withdraw.

Mr. President : As to whether the question and its answer should be expunged, I think the question was put and answered before its admissibility was decided. Let us first decide whether the question was harmless. If the question was harmless and its answer also was harmless they need not be expunged.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : You said that they were harmless.

Mr. President : Yes. If the question and its answer are not objectionable, the question of their deletion does not arise. But if they are objectionable they shall be expunged if the House so desires.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : They are objectionable, but you did not invite opinions of members on that point.

Mr. Labh Singh : May I explain? I have certainly no intention to call in question the motives of the honourable member. But certainly I have a right to determine for myself as to what question I shall pay my attention, on what matters I shall spend my time. If by asking this question I get the matter further elucidated and I find that these questions have been prompted by a disgruntled subordinate of an office, I would simply ignore them and would not spend any time on either reading the questions, listening to the answers and the supplementary questions. My intention is to save my time and save the time of the House.

Mr. President : The object of the honourable member was laudable no doubt. But I wish him to refer to Article 42 of our Business Manual: It runs as follows:—

"Any member may put a supplementary question for the purpose of elucidating any matter of fact regarding which an answer has been given."

Now the question is which matters of fact mentioned in the answer require to be elucidated by supplementary questions?

Mr. Labh Singh : I would like to treat all these questions as a whole.

Mr. President : No. The honourable member cannot be allowed to do that.

Mr. Labh Singh : I ask your permission to ask the supplementary question with respect to question no. 3328 and the questions antecedent to and following it.

Mr. President : If any facts are mentioned in the Honourable Minister's answer to Mr. Malak's question and those facts require elucidation, the honourable member may put supplementary questions but not otherwise.

Mr. Labh Singh : You may listen to my question and then give your ruling as you think it. My second question consists of two parts. First is it a fact that disciplinary action was taken against—

Mr. President : These are not supplementary questions.

Mr. Labh Singh : That is for the Chair to decide after I have put the questions.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : On a point of order. I think the honourable member from Gujranwala is trying to usurp the function of the Chair. It is for the Chair to admit or not to admit a question. The honourable member is simply attacking the nature of the questions.

Mr. President : I think it is the honourable member's privilege to put his point before the Chair for decision.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Moreover, the honourable member cannot frame a supplementary question on a string of questions. A supplementary question should only relate to the question last put. The honourable member's question refers to many of the questions which preceded the last questioner. He used the words "a fusillade of questions." I object to the expression. That shows the honourable member's own mentality.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I request that the matter be now dropped. It has been sufficiently discussed and I request my honourable friend, Mr. Labh Singh, to treat the matter as closed.

Mr. President : Not more than one member should speak at the same time. In my opinion the questions of the honourable member from Gujranwala do not arise from the Honourable Minister's answers. They may be asked as independent questions. But I may point out that no question can be asked which reflects on the character or conduct of a member, whose conduct can be dealt with only on a substantive motion.

Mr. Labh Singh : I bow to your decision. I will ask them as independent questions.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The Commissioner, Lahore division, has been instructed to inform the committee :—

- (a) that in granting licences it should in future insert a clause prohibiting the levy by the licensees of any fee in kind, or of any fee in cash other than the Ahrat fee established by custom ; which must not exceed one anna per rupee in all, whether paid by the buyer or the seller or in part by both ;
- (b) that in auctioning the vegetable market the committee must in future definitely reserve the right to license other premises in addition to the main market ; and that it should actually license at least two or three other premises, if licensees come forward. In regard to current the municipal committee is being advised to warn the licensee, who is reported to have infringed the conditions of his license, that the committee reserves its right to license other premises, provided this can be arranged without the committee losing in the transaction ;
- (c) that as the present licensee has failed to pay the lease money within the prescribed date, he should be offered the option of a cancellation of a lease or an addition in the agreement of a clause prohibiting the levy of the commission in kind ; and
- (d) that meanwhile the committee should proceed to the framing of bye-laws under sub-clause (ii) of a clause (e) of section 188 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911.

3332. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state if in view of the continued financial depression, Government intend—

- (b) to put them all on the list of recessing officers ; and, if not, why not ; or
- (c) to put at least two of them on the list of recessing officers ; and, if not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) (b) and (c) No.

UNAUTHORIZED IRRIGATION.

3333. Mian Nurullah : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether canal overseers and zilladars are authorized to record statements of persons concerned in cases of unauthorized irrigation, waste of water and of offences committed against the Canal Act ;
- (b) whether any person who refuses to make a statement before (i) a zilladar, (ii) a canal overseer, is punishable under any law ;
- (c) whether any person who makes a statement before (i) a zilladar or (ii) a canal overseer but refuses to put his thumb-impression or refuses to sign that statement made by him is punishable under any law ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) Zilladars acting under the control of the Sub-Divisional Officer are often required to carry out preliminary investigation into offences committed against the Canal Act, in particular into tawan cases. Canal overseers acting under the same control are often required to investigate cases of damage to canal works and plantations, but are not allowed to investigate tawan cases.

(b) Both the zilladars and canal overseers are public servants ; public servants in certain circumstances can require persons to answer questions. I invite the attention of the honourable member to section 179, I. P. C.

(c) I invite the attention of the honourable member to section 180, I. P. C. With reference to both this and the previous part of the question Government thinks it against the public interest to give an opinion on questions of law with which the Courts might not agree.

If the honourable member has information of any cases in which a zilladar or a canal overseer has abused his legal powers I request that he will communicate the facts to Government.

- (c) if so, why canal overseers are engaged on this work and whether the Government is prepared to issue instructions to the local officers not to employ canal overseers on investigation work ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) Canal overseers are not authorized to investigate cases of unauthorized irrigation, or waste of water, but can investigate such offences as cutting canal banks or causing obstructions to the flow of water in any channel under their control.

(b) Yes.

(c) In view of (a) does not arise.

- (b) whether Government is aware that since the promulgation of the above policy, the Chief Engineer (North) has revised the formula of extra grant of water for fruit gardens which has had the effect of reducing water-supply from three times to twice the normal without correspondingly reducing the rate of abiana on gardens ;

- (b) the total value of the alleged consideration received by such widows each year and in each district ;

TREASURE TROVE.

850. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

- (a) the value of the property recovered as treasure trove since 1921 each year in each of the districts of Punjab ;

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) This information is being collected from districts and will be communicated subsequently.

(b) Government have no reason to believe that there have been any valuable discoveries of treasure trove in recent years which have not been reported.

The remaining vacancies were filled by the transfer of spare teachers. For the honourable member's information it is further added that with the exception of four appointments these vacancies were filled on the recommendation of the inspectors concerned. It will, perhaps further interest the honourable member to know that his community is still over-represented in the college, the number and proportion of the various communities among professors and lecturers in the college being :—

Hindus.	Muhammadans.	Sikh.
10	8 (including Principal)	1

Does the honourable member wish that posts and transfers in Government colleges should be arranged on communal basis? If so, it may be pointed out that his own community will suffer. Moreover Government cannot, for administrative reasons, accept the position contemplated by the honourable member.

858. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- the number of vacancies that arose amongst stenographers of the departments under his control;

860. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether the post of the divisional auditor was created for Rawalpindi division ;
- (b) whether the Accountant-General, Punjab, was asked to recommend a man fit for the job ;
- (c) whether the Accountant-General, Punjab, recommended one Lala Ishar Das for the appointment ;
- (d) if so, the qualifications and the period of service of Lala Ishar Das ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that the recommendations of the Accountant-General were not accepted ;
- (f) if so, the reasons ;
- (g) whether it is a fact that a Muhammadan with no experience of auditorship was selected ;
- (h) if so, his educational qualifications ;
- (i) what pay he was drawing there and what pay was given to him as divisional auditor ;
- (j) whether it is a fact that he belongs to Shahpur district ;
- (k) if so, to which tahsil and village ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes ; but subsequently he recommended one M. Anwar Hussain, a clerk of his office. He also considered M. Ijaz Nabi Khan, a clerk of the Currency Office, fit for the post.

(d) (i) M.A. (Hons.) of the Edinburgh University, B.Sc. (Punjab), (ii) about nine years.

(e) No. M. Ijaz Nabi Khan who had rendered more than twelve years' service in various Government offices and was also considered by the Accountant-General, Punjab, fit for the post, was selected.

(f) Does not arise.

(g) No. The man was selected because of his experience as auditor and the important war services of his family.

(h) Second division matriculate.

(i) Before appointment as auditor in the Education Department, Punjab, he was in receipt of Rs. 88 per mensem. He was granted Rs. 85 per mensem on appointment as auditor.

(j) Yes. But does the honourable member wish to suggest that Shahpur is outside Punjab or that no one belonging to the district to which a Minister belongs should receive employments in any of the departments in charge of that Minister?

(k) Village Ukhli-Mohla, tahsil Khushab.

It may also interest the honourable member to know that at present there are five auditors in the Education Department—Hindus two, Muslims two, others one. It is advisable that Government should have auditors who belong to different communities.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT RE OCCUPIERS' RATE ON FODDER.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah (Lahore, Muhammadan, Rural).—

I beg to move for leave to move the adjournment of the business of the Council for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, i.e., to disapprove the action of Government in enhancing the occupiers' rate on fodder throughout the province.

Mr. President : I have received the following written statement from Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah :—

I beg to move for leave to move the adjournment of the business of the Council for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, i.e., to disapprove the action of Government in enhancing the occupiers' rate on fodder throughout the province.

Has the honourable member got the leave of the House ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving (Revenue Member) : Government will raise no objection to this adjournment. The question of the appropriate time will perhaps be for your consideration.

Mr. President : What time does the Honourable Leader of the House suggest ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : Government is really in the hands of the House. If the House would prefer to take this time out of the time allotted for the Relief of Indebtedness Bill, Government will raise no objection.

Mr. President : The matter can be discussed either to-day or to-morrow ; it cannot be put off till the 28th.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : The only wish I would express on behalf of Government is that it should not be discussed to-day in order to enable us to have the information collected.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : I suggest that the motion be discussed from 3 to 5 p.m. to-morrow.

Mr. President : Is this suggestion acceptable to the honourable members ?

No objection being raised, the President fixed 3 to 5 p. m., on 27th June 1934 for the discussion of the motion.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, I move—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill be referred to a select committee consisting of the following :—

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram,
Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah,
Khan Bahadur Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi,
Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath,
Mr. Manohar Lal,
Sardar Bishan Singh,
Pir Akbar Ali,
The Honourable Sir Miles Irving,
Mr. J. D. Anderson,
Nominee of the Honourable President,
The mover.

Sir, at the last session of the Council it was decided that this Bill should be circulated for opinion. This has been done very effectively and the Bill has been discussed threadbare in the press, on public platforms and in letters of which no less than three good volumes have been distributed to members, and I have no doubt that it will still provide a feast of oratory for the next three or four days. As was to be expected the critics of the Bill fall into two main categories—the agriculturist debtor and the money-lending creditor. But some officials have also taken a hand in the game and one of the severest critics of the Bill is an official, the present District and Sessions Judge of Ambala who has described the establishment of the proposed conciliation board as a pompous utility, and he has been equally severe in his criticism of other parts of the Bill. That is his opinion. I think members of this House will remember that the attitude of the High Court Judges is not one of wholesale condemnation. So far as I can judge the zamindar debtors and their friends would like to see this Bill become law but only after drastic amendment. They regard it as a poor affair, a thing of milk and water without any real power to relieve agriculturists of their debt. They would like something with far more body in it, something like a complete cleaning of the slate. If I remember rightly, two or three years ago in one country in Europe whose circumstances are extraordinarily like those of the Punjab—I refer to Roumania where the main industry of the country is agriculture—in Roumania they did try this experiment of cleaning the slate and the result was a fresh start for the agriculturist on the road to bankruptcy. Within two years, if I remember rightly, the condition of the zamindars of Roumania was as bad as it was before they tried this experiment of wiping the slate clean, and if we try the same thing in the Punjab, I have no doubt whatever that we will come to the same result. There is another European country where agriculture is the premier occupation, that is, Yugo-Slavia. I have here the issue of "the Economist" of September, 1933, from which it appears that owing to agricultural despression the purchasing power of the peasant of Yugo-Slavia was all but lost, that he was unable to buy and the trader was unable to sell and so on, on which the Government of that country had to declare a semi-moratorium for the zamindar class. First of all they had to step in and reduce the rate of interest. It had often exceeded 24 per cent. Government first reduced the maximum rate of interest. Then the peasant became a little bit better off, but this improvement was counter-balanced by another factor. The semi-moratorium soon hit the little shopkeeper, he passed it on to the big trader, the big trader passed it to the banks and the result was a financial crisis in that country.

There is another country—a country of which the ruler is probably one of the most powerful men in the world except perhaps the Punjab tahsildar—I refer to the President of the United States. Recently I think we have seen a statement in "the Statesman" that the attempt made in the United States to fix prices had failed. I quote these three instances to show that any interference with economic laws is almost as difficult and dangerous as any interference with the laws of nature. You simply cannot do it without risking a very serious catastrophe afterwards. It reminds me of a story of a small place, Shekbadin, which about thirty or forty years ago, became a popular hill station. There were many bungalows built there but the trouble was with the water supply which depended upon a single spring. The visitors got hold of a clever engineer and said: look here, will you see what you can do to improve the water supply of this town. The clever engineer went down and treated the spring with gun-cotton, but after the explosion the spring had disappeared. That is very likely what will happen if we try any heroic measures as a cure for our present economic depression. We will find that the spring of credit has disappeared and the latter state of the zamindar will be worse than the first.

I think our zamindar critics who will no doubt be pretty severe upon us might keep one fact in mind. It is this, that they already enjoy an extraordinary degree of protection in the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. There are very few peasants indeed who enjoy a privilege such as this which not only puts a reasonable limit upon their credit and so prevents them from accumulating excessive debt but also prevents their property from sale in execution of a decree.

While it appears to be the view of the agriculturist debtors and their friends that this Bill is an anæmic affair and does not go nearly far enough, money-lenders, on the other hand, think that it goes very much too far, and that there is hardly a word in their vocabulary strong enough to describe its wickedness. They regard it as undermining the sacredness of contract and a total negation of justice. I think that if they pause to consider for a moment or two the circumstances in which this measure has been brought in, they will be convinced that there is a good deal more to be said for it.

[The Hon. Mr. D. J. Boyd.]

than to call it wholesale robbery. In the present position we have a practical moratorium. We all know that the money-lender is finding it very difficult to recover his debts. He can recover very little because the zamindar unfortunately has very little to pay with and the business of financing agriculture has come more or less to a standstill. If this Bill operates to bring debtor and creditor together and to make possible a reasonable composition of debts, then we may hope that confidence will revive, that the business of financing agriculture will commence again, that some beginning will be made with the process of repayment and that the business of both the agriculturist and the money-lender will revive to the mutual advantage of both. I do not think that the Bill is going to be an unmixed evil for the money-lenders, and I urge members to look upon it in this light.

One thing has struck me in reading the opinions that have been sent to us about this Bill and that is that one might infer that there is an irreconcilable antagonism between the agriculturist and the money-lender. I think that that is a most unfortunate impression and I hope that nothing will be said in the debate to embitter the feelings between these two parties. (Hear, hear). The truth seems to me to be this—I speak of the villages. The truth is that the money-lender is necessary for the agriculturist and the agriculturist is necessary for the money-lender. They depend upon each other for their prosperity. The prosperity of the one is reflected in the prosperity of the other. Their interests are to a great extent identical. My experience also is that in a great majority of cases in the villages their relations are distinctly amicable. The money-lender shows consideration for his client and the zamindar honestly pays when he can. But the present position is by no means a normal one and the Government has been compelled to bring in this measure partly to meet the present abnormal position and partly because it is true that some money-lenders are rapacious and therefore we must do what we can to see that interest is fixed at fair rates, and that swollen claims are not admitted by the courts.

There are only one or two details that I would like to mention so that the House may understand the attitude of Government towards this Bill. The general attitude of Government may, I think, be said to be that Government are quite prepared to consider any proposal coming within the scope of the Bill which will be a helpful contribution towards the solution of the problem. They have no doubt that the questions raised will be discussed and examined in the select committee and any proposal made by that committee will certainly receive most careful consideration of Government. We are not wedded to the particular terms of the Bill and we will be very glad to consider any reasonable amendments that are proposed. This is true with regard to the Bill generally. It is also true with regard to the various parts of the Bill. In the matter of fixing the maximum rates of interest, the attitude of Government is that they are not committed one way or another to the rates included in the Bill. They are prepared to consider all reasonable arguments for raising or lowering the maximum, and if the select committee makes any recommendation in this respect, they will certainly give close consideration to it. So also with regard to the conciliation boards. Government themselves do not regard this as a solution of the problem. They are frankly not able to form an estimate of the benefits that may result from them. They consider that they may provide a possible means of relieving the problem in some districts. If, however, the Council considers that they will not serve any useful purpose, Government will not regard them as an absolutely essential part of the measure.

There is one other matter which I have noticed urged fairly prominently in the criticisms that have been passed upon the Bill and it is this: A suggestion has been made that the conciliation boards may be turned into insolvency courts, that they may take a census of the debts of the zamindar debtor and also his assets and distribute the assets rateably, always with reference to the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. This is a suggestion which the Council may care to consider. Government has got an open mind in this matter as in all others and will consider any suggestions that are made in respect to this point very carefully. (Hear, hear).

Mr. President: Motion moved—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill be referred to a select committee consisting of the following:—

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram,
Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah,
Khan Bahadur Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi,
Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath,
Mr. Manohar Lal,
Sardar Bishan Singh,
Pir Akbar Ali,
The Honourable Sir Miles Irving,
Mr. J. D. Anderson,
Nominee of the Honourable President,
The mover.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak (Lahore City, Muhammadan, Urban):
Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st March, 1935.

Mr. President: The honourable member's amending motion is out of order, inasmuch as, after a Bill has been circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon, on a motion under Article 81 or paragraph 2 of Article 83 and opinions are received thereon, the procedure to be followed is that laid down in paragraph 3 of Article 83 and not that laid down in paragraph 2 of that Article. Similarly, after the presentation of the final report of a select committee on a Bill, the procedure laid down in Article 89 is to be followed. I hold, therefore, that the honourable member's amendment is out of order, inasmuch as, it is inconsistent with the procedure laid down in paragraph 3 of Article 83.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Is there anything in paragraph (3) of Article 83 which prohibits a member moving the amendment? What Article 83 (3) says is that the member in charge of a Bill can drop it if he so likes and if he does not like to do so, he can only move that the Bill be referred to a select committee.

Mr. President: Under what rule or standing order can he move his amendment?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Under part (b) of Article 83 (2).

Mr. President : But that provision relates to an earlier stage and is no longer applicable. So, the honourable member can oppose the motion, but he cannot move an amendment.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : While I bow to your ruling I may point out that paragraph (3) of Article 83 only restricts the honourable mover's discretion. He can do nothing else except to move that the Bill be referred to a select committee. He cannot ask for the circulation of the Bill nor can he move for its consideration. I think under paragraph (b) of Article 83 the rights of other members are not fettered.

Mr. President : How does that right arise? It is expressly stated in paragraph (2) of Article 83 that if the member in charge moves such and such a motion, any other member may move such and such an amendment. In other words, certain amendments are expressly provided for. But where it has not been expressly provided for, as in the present case, how can it be presumed, that the honourable member has a right to move the amendment?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : In Article 82 (1) it is said—

“.....No motion that a Bill be referred to a select committee or be circulated or be recirculated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon.....”

What is the meaning to be attached to the word “re-circulated” if your view is correct?

Mr. President : The honourable member will please refer to Article 89. Article 82 governs not only Article 83 but all articles relating to Bills.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : To the extent the Bill before the House professes to help the zamindars not only the zamindar members of the House but also one could affirm on the warrant of past experience that the House as a whole must be in entire sympathy with it. That of all the classes the zamindar class has suffered and continue to suffer most terribly from the effects of the world depression may not be denied. Nor can it be denied that in a country where more than 75 per cent. of the population live on land the poverty or the affluence of the zamindar is bound to react on its economic equilibrium. In India generally and in the Punjab particularly, the condition of the zamindar may be taken to furnish the economic barometer of the province: If the zamindar is solvent, the province is solvent, if the zamindar is insolvent, the province itself must be insolvent. It follows then that by helping the Punjab zamindar you are virtually helping the whole province, and therefore nobody in his senses will or can oppose the Bill. But, then, the question is whether the passing of this Bill will achieve the object it professes to have in view. Since 1884 off and on Government have been showing an interest in this direction. The Agricultural Debt Act, the Land Alienation Act, the Co-operative Societies Act and the Money-lenders' Account Regulating Act are instances in point. But has any of these Acts singly or all of them collectively effected any tangible improvement in the condition of the zamindars? The reply must necessarily be in the negative, and this was so evidently because neither the diagnosis of the disease was correct nor the remedy devised and applied was correct. Again since Kharif, 1930, Government have, in one shape or another, remitted about 6,13 lakhs of rupees. Have all these remissions brought any relief to the zamindar? I am afraid the reply again must be in the negative. For one thing the distribution of these remissions had been carried out in a most haphazard manner. The chief beneficiaries were the big and influential zamindars and what little was suffered to go to the holders of small tenements never reached them: it was more often than not pocketed by the petty district officials, for whom it was easy enough to obtain thumb impressions in acknowledgment of receipt by them of their shares of the governmental dole. These remissions would have served some purpose if they had been to reducing the zamindars' debt. The Bill before the House does not pretend to touch even the uttermost fringe of past debts which at the most conservative estimate must amount to about 1,90 crores of rupees and therefore, it does not envisage zamindars' return to solvent conditions. Roughly, the chief benefits it claims to confer or aims to confer are suspension of the accrual of interest in some cases, curtailment of the rate of interest in a few others and refusal to award decrees for more than double the amount of the debt.

The total amount of annual interest on the zamindar's debt alone must be somewhere in the neighbourhood of 80 crores of rupees. While it is impossible for the zamindar to pay this huge amount, it is equally impossible for the money-lender to forego his claims either voluntarily or through legislation. So long as the millstone of this huge debt remains tied round the neck of the zamindar, there is no hope of his salvation. The very idea, the very thought, that howsoever much he may economise, he cannot discharge his liabilities, makes him desperate. His present dare-devil attitude, his want of prudence, his want of frugality may all be traced to this poignant realisation on his part. The causes responsible for zamindar's indebtedness are manifold, which however need not be gone into at this moment. The aggravations of his present plight are mainly due to the reactions of the exchange, to the questionable handling of funds by the great banking houses, to a fictitious rise in the value of the money and the consequent heavy fall in prices of agricultural produce. The provincial Government may not be competent to tackle some of these causes, such as linking of the rupee to the sterling or the financial dealings of the banking world. But what it may comparatively easily do is that it can create a sort of sinking fund called the Rural Debt Settlement Fund to which may be appropriated, firstly the savings resulting from a drastic curtailment of the expenditure of the Government and secondly the savings of the indebted zamindars themselves and this sinking fund might be used for wiping off the debt. As regards the first kind of savings I would suggest the following retrenchments:—By reducing two of the three chief engineers you can save Rs. 5,02,200 from the open canals and Rs. 1,00,940 from the Sutlej Valley. By retrenching the cadre of superintending engineers you can save Rs. 5,11,000 from open canals and Rs. 9,400 from the Sutlej Valley. If you reduce one of the Financial Commissioners you will save Rs. 1,71,850 while by retrenching the cadre of commissioners you can save Rs. 8,78,000. The Inspector-General of Prisons might be retrenched and his supervisory functions handed over to the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals and this will give you a saving of Rs. 1,10,100. The posts of Director of Industries and the Director of Land Records might be abolished which would give you a saving of Rs. 75,700 and Rs. 68,600, respectively. The total savings resulting from these suggestions, if carried out, would amount to Rs. 20,17,790; and if the salaries generally are reduced to pre-war level, substantial reductions are made in certain other departments such as the Forest Department, real retrenchments made in the number of officers and staff who at present accompany the Government to Simla and lastly if the newly created department of Rural Uplift is abolished another sum of Rs. 10 lakhs may be easily managed. This will give you a grand total of Rs. 30 lakhs a year. As regards the second kind of savings, I would suggest that zamindara boards may be appointed at convenient centres throughout the province. Such boards already exist in other agrarian countries for instance, Africa, Canada, Australia, America and other countries. These boards might be vested with the power to control the expenditure of the indebted zamindars, to eliminate the possibility of their contracting any fresh debts particularly unproductive debts, and after seeing to their day to day wants and seasonal requirements to transfer to the Rural Debt Relief Settlement Fund their surplus savings. In a few years time, I do not see why it should take more than ten years, a fairly large sum will have become available, as a result of the yearly accumulations made up of the joint savings of the Government and the debtor zamindars. A special committee may then be improvised composed of officials, representatives of the zamindars and the representatives of the money-lenders to effect an equitable settlement. This done, the Government can cease to contribute towards the Rural Debt Settlement Fund though the Fund itself might continue until the Government are either wholly or partially reimbursed by the debtor zamindars. When the Government have shown their solicitude for the welfare of the zamindars in a practical manner like this it would be time for them to ask the money-lenders to forego a portion of their claims. Unless and until there is not only a likelihood but almost a certainty of the money-lenders realizing his dues you cannot expect him to make any appreciable reduction in his claims. Open to him the prospects of speedy payment in hard cash and you will find him and his business instinct willing to accept any scheme of reasonable settlement even though he gets something between four to eight annas in the rupee. By evolving a scheme like this you can effectively help the zamindar not only with respect to their past debts, but also with regard to his future. Having once become accustomed to carry on with reduced establishment you may continue to stick to it even after you have ceased to pool anything in the Rural Debt Settlement Fund, and this will enable you to make a corresponding decrease in the land revenue assessment without having recourse to any fresh taxation. These are not times for half measures or timid measures. The Government must face the situation boldly and conscientiously. A feeling is already abroad that the underlying object of this Bill is just to ensure that the money-lender does not harass and embarrass the zamindar to the limit that the latter is rendered incapable of meeting the land revenue demands. It is said that in promoting this Bill Government are not concerned with promoting the welfare of the zamindars but that they are concerned with promoting their own interests and that it is a misnomer to call it the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill, it would be more appropriate to call it the Land Revenue Recovery Facilitating Bill. As to how much retrenchment can be made without sacrificing the efficiency of the administration it will of course be for the Government to determine. Some of the items suggested by me might be con-considered impracticable but I venture to submit that a majority of them could be given effect to. It has been claimed for the Government that they have made drastic retrenchments in recent years but from the non-official point of view not only these retrenchments were not drastic, they were not even adequate. The fact, however, that at long last it was found possible to make these retrenchments, without impairing the efficiency of the administration, shows only too plainly that for years there had existed room for these retrenchments and yet the Government had culpably failed to carry them out until the province had been actually overtaken by a crisis. However, it may be, if the Government's professions of sympathy with the zamindars, have their origin in something better than mere crocodile tears they can surely find out ways and means to help them in a substantial manner and the best of all manners is to bring down their expenditure and make the resultant savings available for the benefit of the zamindars. The Sutlej Valley Project has long been finished and the so-called agreement with the Bikaner and Bahawalpur Durbars to keep a separate Chief Engineer to look after that project stands fulfilled.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Is the honourable member discussing the principles of the Bill to which the discussion must be confined?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Certainly he is suggesting an alternative remedy.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Yes, this is the only occasion when I can discuss these things. Now, Sir, this alleged agreement between the Bikaner and the Bahawalpur Durbars stands fulfilled, an agreement which has time and again been flaunted across the floor of the House by the Honourable Revenue Member. But has it ever occurred to the Government to pause for a moment and consider whether they were justified in keeping on the third chief engineer? No new constructions are at present going on and there is no earthly reason whatever for keeping the full complement of three chief engineers intact. Further whatever justification originally there might have been for creating the post of Financial Commissioner, Development, there are no new colonies in the course of development now nor is there any new canal system in hand to develop a new colony, and yet he is still there and nobody dare touch him. Then again, it is for the Punjab Government to consider as to why they cannot follow in the footsteps of the Government of Bombay who in the interests of economy have dispensed with the conveniences and the comforts afforded by the hot weather moves to Mahabaleshwar. The least you can do is to make a drastic curtailment in the number of recessing officers and required officers who at present accompany the Governor to Simla. If the Government must spend the summer at Simla, in the interests of economy, in the interests of the poor zamindars particularly and the rate-payers generally they should stop the practice of allowing all the heads of departments to accompany them. They should confine this privilege to the principal Secretaries of the Civil Secretariat. As it is, this privilege has come to be regarded as a legitimate perquisite for all the heads of the various departments. It is in view of these considerations that I ask the House to throw out this Bill. It is because I honestly feel that the Bill as it now stands framed cannot, does not, and will not bring any real relief to the zamindars, it is because it is my honest conviction that this Bill needlessly creates and mischievously aggravates class hatred that I oppose it. It will be more waste of time and expenditure to proceed with it any further.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala Division, North East, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I rise to support the motion under discussion moved so ably by the Honourable Finance Member this morning. There is no gain-saying the fact that the condition of zamindars is sinking and the zamindar is being drowned every minute. Do you think that legislation brought to save a man from sinking in the sea is a class measure? Do you think that any attempt made to save the zamindars from the clutches of poverty from which he himself can never come out, is a class measure, a measure showing favour to a particular class? I do not think any civilized Government in the whole of the world can ever lose sight of the fact that unless you save the peasantry, the back-bone of the Government, neither the Government nor the general public can exist. Those members who are interested in the welfare of the zamindars and those members who are pro-money-lenders and are interested in the welfare of the money-lenders, if all of them do not join to promote measures that can save zamindars, then I say that destruction is quite in sight and they will regret. On other occasions all our friends of non-agriculturists classes have been showing lip sympathy for the zamindars and just now the Honourable Finance Member made it clear that the welfare of both the money-lenders and the peasant is interconnected and the prosperity of the one depends on the prosperity of the other. Thus if you are making an attempt to save the zamindars from the serious menace to their very existence you are making at the same time an effort to save the money-lenders from the very destruction that stares the zamindars in the face. So, why should sensible men take exception to a measure of this type? On other occasions these gentlemen have shown lip sympathy for the zamindars but today I see they are up in arms against a measure which is intended to promote or improve the hopeless condition of the zamindars. Just as a poet says:—

مگر کے مدعی بتاتے تو جو اہل وطن کل تک | چڑھائے آستین اب ہر سر پٹکار بدلتے ہیں

Just see whether this is an occasion to take action against zamindars. The arguments advanced by my friend the honourable member for Lahore, who is by my side are so hollow that in fact no answer is needed for them. But some of these arguments are very amusing and I would just briefly touch them. For instance the honourable member says he has proposed a number of suggestions as alternatives to this good Bill. He says that if the Government acts upon these suggestions it will save nearly a sum of Rs. 30 lakhs. But I do not think some of them can be practically followed. For instance, the reduction of the post of the Financial Commissioner was so much debated in this very House. This Council found that the existence of both the Financial Commissioners was necessary. I do not see why the honourable member has brought in this question when the proposal has already been discussed and decided and has been totally rejected by this very House. To bring this up again before the Council is nothing but a reflection on the prestige of the House. But, supposing that all these suggestions were acted upon by the Government—I doubt very much if the Punjab Government is competent to carry out any of these suggestions—but, suppose they are carried out by the Punjab Government, the honourable member says that this will result in a saving of Rs. 30 lakhs a year. Well I take him at his word and I prefer to think that it is correct. But supposing Government saves 80 lakhs a year, but what is your total amount of debt? It was 135 crores in 1929 and by this time it has risen to over 200 crores. Now imagine the interest on this sum. If you want to deal with money-lenders, then, the average rate of interest would be 15 per cent. On this huge amount of debt the total amount of interest during the year comes to over 25 crores of rupees.

If you save Rs. 80 lakhs by crippling the efficiency of the Punjab Government, it would be a drop in the ocean and the debt of the zamindars will go on increasing if the Government were to act upon the suggestions which have not been made in a responsible spirit. The remedy is worse than the disease and the measure is not at all one meriting the serious consideration of the House. The suggestion seems to me to have been made in a light-hearted manner without thinking of the consequences that would result to the Government as well as to the whole population of zamindars.

There is no greater matter for amusement in the speech of the honourable member than that which touches the Acts that have been passed by the Government for the benefit of the zamindars. He says the Taccavi Act of 1888, the Land Improvements Loans Act of 1884 and the Alienation of Land Act have not helped the zamindars in the least. This is dense ignorance. I maintain and I can quote the authorities of the honourable Financial Commissioners besides others that if this Act had not been passed, the zamindar class would have been effaced by this time and all the land would have passed into the hands of non-agriculturists and the zamindars would have been hewers of wood and drawers of water.

There would remain only a portion of the zamindar population and the rest would have gone to hell or heaven, I do not know which. Take this argument in a converse way. Abolish the Land Alienation Act to-day. Within five years you will see that not a bit of land remains with the agriculturists. The non-agriculturist classes have pressed many a time for the abolition of this Act. The result would be that in five years not a single kanal of land would be with the zamindars. I am sorry that my honourable friend from Lahore, Mr. Muhammad Din Malak, is not here in his seat. Perhaps he was afraid of the force of my argument and felt that he could not stand it. That is of course the best way, for, Saadi says, there—

There are two methods of fighting. The first is to go before your adversary with your full armoury. The second one is to run away as fast as you can. My honourable friend has acted on the second alternative because it is a safe one. Anyhow I say that no honourable member of this House, be he a zamindar or a non-zamindar, can plead that the Land Alienation Act has been of no use. My honourable friend Raja Narendra Nath was a deputy commissioner and he should have seen how land is rapidly passing even in spite of the Land Alienation Act into the hands of money-lenders. Think of what hell they would have created if this Act were not in existence. The zamindars pinched by necessity are prepared to pay anything, to pawn anything, their honour, their land and everything to the money-lender provided they get the money they need. The money-lender may say, I will take your land and I will arrange it as a benami transaction. I will ask some zamindar to take it at a certain amount of money in his name. The zamindar agrees and asks him how much he would charge. Rupees thirty he says. No, no, says the zamindar, Rs. 3. Ultimately they will agree for Rs. 5, 6 or 7. The Land Alienation Act is in full force in the province and we have urged in this Council that it should be strictly enforced. Even with the Act this is the condition of the zamindars. The honourable member is a representative of the zamindars and he must know their condition. When he says that the Land Alienation Act has been of no good it is reprehensible ignorance. Then the honourable member says that the remission of Rs. 6 crores given by Government in various years ranging from 1930 up to the present time has not done any good to the zamindars. The zamindars know how they have been saved thereby. And they have appreciated the action of the Government in the press. I happened to talk to a zamindar once when the remissions were given. I said the Council had been at great pains to give relief to the zamindars. I am very sorry, I said, that owing to the financial condition of the province we in Council could not give you more help than saving you about 4 anna in the rupee. He replied that the zamindars valued this help very much as even a pice saved was relief to them. The honourable member living in the capital city of the Punjab may say that the Act has not done any good to the zamindars. The zamindars know that even half a loaf that has been given to them is better than no bread. On hearing the honourable member's speech I was reminded of the Greek philosophers, the Stoics, who said that if a man got ill it was no use attempting to cure him but that he should be killed. This doctrine has been exploded and we see now there are a number of hospitals and medical men successfully saving men from the clutches of death. Those philosophers, however, said that a man who was seized with illness became a diseased member of the society and so should be killed. On the same lines my honourable friend says, if the zamindars' debts are not wiped off in full, they should die and no help of even a small kind should be extended to them. It would have been straightforward of the honourable member to have said that his sympathies lay with the money-lender and so he was opposing this Bill. I would have welcomed that straightforwardness. The drowning man should clutch at a straw and so we the representatives of the zamindars are thankful for even small help. We realise that by the force of circumstances through which the world has been passing the zamindars have been put to a very serious condition and any little help afforded to us goes a long way. I do not say that the money-lenders have been stone hearted. There are money-lenders even among the zamindars. My honourable friends showed that some 40 per cent. of the money-lenders belonged to the zamindar class and the rest were non-agriculturists. I ask, why then should the non-agriculturist money-lenders attack this Bill?

The other argument of my honourable friend was that he was asking Government to make certain reductions in their expenditure. One argument was that the salaries of all services under Government should be reduced. Even if the Government has any mind to reduce the salaries to the pre-war level, it should be realised that when the salaries were increased it was done permanently and there was no indication that it was for a certain number of years. Government therefore say that they cannot go back upon the contract. Again, even if the Punjab Government is inclined to take that step there is the Government of India. There are the States who would still give them a job. Indian Civil Service Officers are under the Secretary of State and the Parliament. I, therefore, think that the suggestion is not worth the serious consideration of the Punjab Government. Of course, for the provincial services the rates have been reduced for new entrants and the Punjab Government can do only this much. Whatever the Punjab Government saves will be barely enough to ameliorate the lot of the zamindars of the province. In their present condition, how can the Government expect or any one imagine that the debt of Rs. 200 crores which is outstanding now would ever be repaid by the zamindars?

The land revenue of the Punjab is $4\frac{1}{2}$ crores. The debt is fifty times the land revenue of the year and the zamindar in one harvest with the greatest economy can pay the land revenue of one crore and the debt is 100 times the land revenue. When the zamindar cannot pay land revenue of one crore, how can he pay up the debt which is as much as one hundred times the land revenue? He cannot possibly pay it. There must be some measure thought of by the Government as well as by the members of this House and if it is a wholesome measure we must accept it. The Honourable Finance Member just now pointed out that even the sub-judges who belong to the money-lending classes have supported the Bill, and if there are some that have opposed it, their number is insignificant and can be safely ignored. But look at the majority of the executive officers, sub-judges, sessions judges, in fact every public man, member of the money-lending classes, who have welcomed the Bill. I tell money-lenders—and they know it—that it is hopeless for them to recover their debt from the zamindars. No zamindar can pay up his debt. When he pays his land revenue with great difficulty he knows that he cannot pay 100 times of land revenue during the whole of his life. How can you possibly recover this amount which is increasing every year, every month, every week, every day, every minute? How can you expect to recover all this debt from the land owners? It cannot be recovered. The question is whether you are willing to lose a portion of it or whether you are willing to lose the whole of your debt. If you want to take the latter attitude you are welcome, but the safer thing would be to make an attempt to make as much out of it as the circumstances allow. Under this measure when the burden of debt is lightened whether by conciliation board or by other means suggested in the Act, when the burden has been lightened, the zamindar will try his best and make payment, because the "grinding mill" which was the expression used by my honourable friend (Mr. Muhammad Din Malak) of debt is pressing most heavily on him. If you lighten it, perhaps the zamindars will be discharging the revenue and the simile applied by my honourable friend can aptly be used here too. Supposing there is a labourer carrying uphill a very heavy load which is crushing him. If you let him go, he will perhaps not be able to go and will die on the way or will give it up in despair, but if you lighten his weight by half or by even one-fourth, he may possibly carry it to the summit. So it is with the zamindar. If you lighten his weight when you find that he is unable to carry it further, he may be able to carry it on, and perhaps in that way the money-lending classes will get something out of the poor zamindar, but if you resist all measures, if you resist every effort, that is made for increasing the income of the zamindar, you are cutting not only the legs of the zamindar but your whole resources.

Then incidentally a remark was made that there is no need for the Commissioner for Rural Reconstruction. On financial grounds I also take this view, but I may also tell my friend that if this department is carried on economically, it will be able to increase the income of the zamindars and it will increase his output, and then it will be a most welcome department. At one time I was opposed to it but thinking that the zamindars will not be able to live under this heavy load of debt and the heavy liabilities owing to reduced income on account of the fall in prices, they will not be able to pull on any longer, I have come to the conclusion that this measure is a measure for ameliorating the conditions of the zamindar and if the Commissioner of Rural Reconstruction carries it on with as much economy as possible and does not think of living in luxury, I think this little expenditure is justified. So far as the cutting down of other expenditure is concerned, Government should make every effort, but I think this particular department will not be a burden to the agriculturist. My zamindar friends who have happened to talk to me outside the Council have told me that this measure is not sufficient, so they would rather not have it. My advice to them is: "Take this and devise other means. You are welcome to make suggestions. Take what you get and agitate for more." Now the Bill is going to a select committee where I have no doubt it will be improved in some respects and if you are keen on making more improvements make suggestions to the select committee or when the Bill comes before you again you can make your suggestions, but to state that because it does not solve the whole problem therefore it should be thrown out is a counsel of despair, and is an advice which will not appeal to anyone who thinks seriously. This is sufficient, I suppose, for meeting the arguments of my honourable friend.

As to the general merits of the Bill itself many zamindars have said that Government has come forward with half measures, but I say Government cannot go beyond this. After all the Government has to look to the interests of both the zamindar and the money-lender. Government is not composed of zamindars. It has made every effort to save the zamindar and I am glad it has come to its help in time, though a little late but still in time, because still the zamindar exists and this attempt can save him.

I have said that the Bill is a wholesome measure and that if it is passed into law, both the zamindar and the non-zamindar will be benefited by it and the sooner it is passed the better for all concerned. I say this Act will not wipe out the whole debt, and after a time the non-zamindar can bring forward another measure to repeal it, for, by then, the burden of the zamindar will have been lightened, but at this time to oppose it is perhaps to do like the man who cuts his own feet. The zamindars will again be able to make payments and the condition of the non-zamindars will again improve. You must welcome the present measure and must give it a willing support. Then the zamindar will be thankful. He will say, you came to my rescue in time of need, I appreciate your kindness and your generosity. And when the zamindar is in a better position you can get this Act actually repealed. Then will be the time for you, but at present when the poor zamindar is sinking, it is your duty to save him. All the income of the money-lenders, whether they be zamindars or non-zamindars, all their huge palaces are built upon the life-blood of the zamindar, either in the shape of usury or interest.

When these people are crying, cannot you make a little sacrifice? We are not asking you to forego the whole of your amount. Make a little sacrifice. You must, even if for no other reason, at least out of consideration for the benefits which you have received so far from the zamindar class. I say Government is showing its appreciation or gratefulness for the part the zamindars have played in the strengthening of the position of the Punjab Government. It is the zamindars upon whom the Punjab Government has depended and upon whom Government was built and it is good of Government to show its practical sympathy by a measure like this. The money lenders also have lived upon the zamindars and now that the Government is doing its part to relieve the distress of the zamindars, what does the non-agriculturist propose to do for them? It is not fair that the House should leave them in the ocean to be drowned. I am glad that the honourable members on this side profess sympathy for 40 per cent. of the money-lenders who are non-agriculturists. Let them show a similar sympathy for the zamindars who have been the backbone of this province up to this time. There are times when the money-lenders can afford to be shylocks, when they can extract the last drop of blood out of the zamindars. But this is not the time for it. I now warn the members. See how many money-lenders have been killed during these years! This is due to the very hard measures they have been adopting for recovering the debts. If this state of things continues, their very existence will be wiped out of the face of this earth. Therefore, even if the honourable members wish to show practical sympathy to the money-lenders, they cannot do so better than by supporting the Bill. If the Bill is not adopted, if the volume of debt remains as it is and is even allowed to increase and if the money-lenders adopt coercive measures to recover the debts, there will be more murders and misery for the money-lenders. I would therefore advise the honourable members to act with foresight like men of practical experience. With these words I make an appeal to the sentiment of the House and I hope it will give its whole-hearted support to this measure instead of adopting destructive measures. I would suggest that it is well that the Bill is passed even during the present session, sitting for two or more days if necessary. If as a result of the working of this Act it is found that it is injurious to the interests of the province, then a repealing Bill can be brought forward. There is no harm in passing the present Bill. If you adopt this Bill it will be only showing practical sympathy and consideration not only to the zamindars but for the money-lenders also. With these words I support the motion before the House.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): Sir, a committee was appointed by the Punjab Government in March 1932 to examine the recommendations relating to the relief of indebtedness made by the Royal Commission on Agriculture, the Royal Commission on Labour and the various banking committees and to submit proposals to the Punjab Government in connection therewith. The committee considered the various proposals and spent a good deal of time in reading through these reports and other literature on the subject and came to the unanimous conclusion that there was very little prospect of relief from debt to the agricultural population until the industries of the province were developed and subsidiary occupations were provided for the agricultural population. It will be observed from paragraph 47 at page 15 of the Report of the Committee on Indebtedness. that the committee recommended—

Finally we wish to point out, that it is partly the concentration of population on agriculture which has contributed to widespread indebtedness of the poorer classes of the Punjab and that until it is possible for the people to find remunerative occupation as an alternative to or in conjunction with agriculture there will be little prospect of permanent relief from debt. * * * We do not make specific suggestions because we realise that as we are without technical knowledge our suggestions would be of little value, but we wish to emphasise the vital importance of this work and the necessity of doing everything possible to help the industries of the province.

It was felt that these were times of financial stringency and retrenchment, and the committee went on to recommend—

This work is an attack upon the roots of the main economic disease of the province, and times of financial stringency and retrenchment should not be allowed to cause any curtailment of the work.

Thus the unanimous recommendation of the committee was that the real remedy of the disease was the encouragement of industries of this province and the provision of subsidiary occupations for the rural population. This point was emphasised in a note which I appended to the report. May I just refer to a short extract from that note, in which this point was emphasised—

On account of conditions inherent in the nature of holdings in this province and the natural conditions on which agriculture depends, our agricultural population cannot in our opinion be actually prosperous or relieved of its indebtedness unless some subsidiary occupations are found for them. In our opinion even if the entire agricultural debt of the province could be wiped out at one moment by a decree of the legislature the agricultural population would again become indebted in a few years time to the same extent. We are strengthened in this opinion by the experience of other countries as well as by a study of the relevant literature on the subject. Mr. Darling in his admirable book 'Punjab Peasant in prosperity and debt' after comparing the conditions of debt in the various parts of the province comes to the conclusion—

'Broadly it may be said that, without this second string to his bow (i.e. a subsidiary occupation) the Punjab peasant proprietor must always be in debt. Even when considering the indebtedness in the various tahsils of the same district, e.g., Hoshiarpur, he found that in Hoshiarpur and Garhshankar tahsils where the population has got subsidiary occupation the indebtedness is comparatively much smaller than the indebtedness in other tahsils.'

Mr. Darling again points out in his admirable book—

Our second conclusion is that the peasant proprietor cannot keep out of debt unless he is exceptionally industrious and frugal, or has a second string to his bow. This fact has again and again been stressed in the course of our enquiry, and so far as the Punjab is concerned, it is abundantly proved by what we have encountered in different parts of the province. We have seen that where industry is unflagging and habits frugal, as amongst the Mahtons of Jullundur and the Ahirs of Gurgaon, or whereas in Rawalpindi, men are accustomed to emigrate or enlist, debt is comparatively light: but where these factors are absent, the peasant is largely dependent upon the money-lender. * * * In Japan where 96 per cent. of the cultivators live on less than eight acres, more than one-third of the farming population keep themselves afloat by the rearing of silk worms. In Italy and France sericulture plays a similar if less important part, as also does the making of toys in Germany and Russia.

Mr. President: Is the honourable member reading from a book?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I am reading an extract from Mr. Darling's book which is embodied in my note to the report of Punjab Indebtedness Committee.

Mr. President : This report has, I believe, been circulated to members.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It has been circulated to honourable members. In fact, it is on the basis of this Report that the present legislation is framed.

In other countries it has been met by the development of the more intensive forms of farming implied in market gardening, dairying and stock-breeding.

May I ask what the Punjab Government has done to implement this unanimous recommendation of the committee to which both officials and non-officials, zamindars and non-zamindars were parties? Have the Government done anything in the year 1933 or 1934 to provide any more money than in previous years to foster the industries of this province? Have they set up even an expert committee to enquire as to what subsidiary occupations could be provided for the agricultural population? In spite of what the committee appointed by the Government unanimously recommended as the root cause of the disease, in spite of the fact that the committee recommended that the times of retrenchment and financial stringency should not be allowed to stand in its way, the Punjab Government has not since the report was submitted, taken any action on this recommendation. Instead of giving effect to this agreed solution, the Punjab Government has come forward with proposals based on recommendations about some of which the committee themselves felt sceptic and about most of which the members of the committee were divided in opinion and about some of which the best economic opinion in the world is at hopeless variance. This is not a proper manner of dealing with the unanimous recommendations of a committee. Before proposing legislation on matters on which the opinion was sharply divided it was expected from the Punjab Government, if they really wanted to find a solution of this difficult problem, that they would take the Council into their confidence as to what they thought of this recommendation. But not only have they not done anything, but I may be pardoned for saying that they do not appear to have made any attempt to find out if this recommendation was useful or practicable.

Now coming to the question of the relief of indebtedness in this province, it will be noticed that the Punjab Government has not at all put forward any proposals for the relief of indebtedness in general but has confined itself to the relief of indebtedness of a particular class of the population of the province. How far is such a course justified? How far is it equitable? Suppose a zamindar is indebted to the money lender of his village to the extent of say Rs. 5,000. The Government in the first place proposes to create for him difficulties in the way of realisation, secondly, has put forward suggestions for scaling down his debts and ultimately provides machinery for wiping out those debts. But having done so it does not afford any relief to the poor money-lender against his creditor. It may be that the zamindar to whom the sahukar has advanced money possesses assets to the tune of 2 lakhs of rupees, whereas the total assets of the money-lender who has advanced the sum of Rs. 5,000, may not exceed Rs. 10,000. He might have as is most often the case, borrowed the amount at 9 per cent. himself and lent it at 12 per cent. But the Punjab Government does not propose to give him any relief. Let the Punjab Government, if it genuinely wishes to give relief against debt, give relief to every one who has suffered by the present depression. If a zamindar whose assets exceed 2 lakhs stands in need of relief at the hands of his sahukar, relief must not be denied to the sahukar whose assets amount only to Rs. 10,000, and who has equally borrowed money from a bank or a bigger sahukar in the town. Reduce the rate of interest by all means, if you like, but will you kindly give the same facilities to the sahukar against his creditor as you give to the agriculturist debtor? What right has the Punjab Government to differentiate between two classes of people who are equally hit by the present depression? Are you not penalising one set of individuals just to please another set of individuals? So, the first effect of this Bill is that you are attempting to relieve the indebtedness of one class of people at the expense of another class without affording the other class any corresponding relief, i.e., any corresponding reduction of the debt he may have incurred. It is robbing Peter to pay Paul. Is the Punjab Government at all well advised in restricting this relief to one class only and is such a course of action justified on any fair and equitable grounds? Before we go into that question let us take stock of the existing legislation on this matter in this province. The agriculturists of this province already enjoy many facilities to evade payment of their just debts. The first facility is that provided by the Alienation of Land Act, section 16, which lays down that the land of a member of an agricultural tribe is not liable to be sold in execution of a decree passed by any court. This also applies to insolvency proceedings. It is well known that the chief if not the only asset of the agriculturist is his land and when the Punjab has already gone to the extent that no other legislature in India, except perhaps in one case and that too under exceptional circumstances, has gone, do you think that you would be justified in giving any further facilities? You have laid down that practically the entire property of an agriculturist is ultimately safe from the creditor. What other facilities does the zamindar want? This is his privilege under section 16 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. Now with respect to his moveable property, there is an all-India provision, section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code, which exempts from attachment his implements of husbandry, his cattle used for cultivation and his house in which he lives for purposes of cultivation. Thus you have his land safe from the creditor and you have also secured to him practically all his moveable property which in the ordinary course he is likely to possess. That is with respect to sale. There is just one loophole for the creditor and that is that although his land cannot be sold, the produce can be attached from year to year towards the recovery of the debt. Now with respect to that item also let us see what the Punjab Government has already done in this matter. Under section 74 of the Civil Procedure Code the Financial Commissioner has issued standing order No. 64 and in paragraph 21, sub-clause (3) of the standing order it is provided—

"Only such land should be temporarily alienated as may be in excess of what the judgment-debtor who depends entirely or mainly on his land requires for the reasonable support of himself and those immediately dependent on him."

Therefore land is not available for sale; his moveable property is not available; and only such produce of his land is available which is not required by him. Again there is another privilege which the Punjab agriculturist enjoys and which, I submit, is not available to any agriculturist in any other part of the world. This privilege has been conferred on him by a judicial decision, Punjab Record 4 of 1913 which has subsequently been modified by a Full Bench of the High Court, Punjab Record 7 of 1919. These rulings provide that where a male proprietor governed by custom—and all agriculturists are governed by custom in this province—has contracted a just debt and dies leaving ancestral property, such property is not liable in the hands of the rent-holder in respect of such debt, unless the debt has been expressly charged on the property. The effect of this provision is to exempt even the produce of land in the hands of a son from being attached. Kindly mark the iniquity and unfairness of a provision of that type.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : On a point of order : Is the honourable member in order in calling those Acts iniquitable ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I do not call any Act iniquitable but I would call it iniquitous.

Mr. President : What Acts ?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : He said that the Land Alienation Act was iniquitous.

Mr. President : Did the honourable member say so ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I did not do so, but I do so now.

Mr. President : Then he must withdraw it. Unless the repeal of a measure is under consideration no measure passed either by this Council or by the Assembly or by any other Council in India can be condemned.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It is under consideration inasmuch as the Honourable Finance Member said that he would be prepared to consider any suggestions for its modification.

Mr. President : The repeal of that measure is not now under consideration.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The question of the Alienation of Land Act as affecting the credit of the agriculturist is the one fundamental issue which is being discussed and which is going to be discussed at great length on the floor of this House.

Mr. President : But the repeal or amendment of that Act is not under consideration.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The Honourable the Finance Member has stated that he would be prepared to consider any suggestions for modification of that Act in committee.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : On a point of personal explanation. I will consider no recommendation whatever for the amendment of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am not discussing the merits or demerits of the Alienation of Land Act. But what I am pointing out is that the facilities enjoyed. . .

Mr. President : The honourable member will please withdraw the expression he has used.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The expression is Parliamentary and unobjectionable. But you want me to withdraw it and I will withdraw. But that is my opinion.

Mr. President : The honourable member may hold that opinion but he cannot express it here.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I know that certain matters are distasteful and even Government is afraid of these matters but a free expression of opinion should not be denied.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : What is your ruling, Sir ?

Mr. President : He has withdrawn the objectionable word.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : That legislation which is passed by this House cannot be attacked, but the legislation which is not passed by this House can be attacked.

Mr. President : No.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Let me give an illustration of this privilege enjoyed by the agriculturist against his creditor. A Jat advanced to another Jat of tahsil Daska, District Sialkot, about Rs. 10,000 for the purpose of purchasing land in Lyallpur. The money was paid to the person from whom the land was purchased and the debtor executed a pronote for the amount in favour of the creditor and with that money the debtor purchased the land in Lyallpur. After the land had been purchased and the pronote executed, unfortunately the debtor died. This land which was purchased with the creditor's money and in this case with an agriculturist creditor's money is in possession of the debtor's son. Is the person with whose money the land has been purchased entitled to recover this money from that judgment-debtor's son or from that land which has come to the judgment-debtor from his father ? I say, Sir, no system of law would prevent such a creditor from realising that money from that land. But in the Punjab, things are different. First there is the Punjab Land Alienation Act. The only way in which this agricultural creditor can recover his money is by filing a suit and obtaining a decree and after obtaining the decree by attaching and selling the land. But this land cannot be sold under the provisions of section 16 of the Land Alienation Act. Now, the question arises if it cannot be sold, can it be attached ? Cannot that poor fellow realise his ten thousand by dribblets by attaching the produce of that land ? The rule of custom is that he cannot even attach that land because the ancestral property (Rai Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : It is not ancestral property), in the hands of the debtor is not liable to attachment. This provision was pointed out by me to the members of the Punjab Indebtedness Committee, the Committee appointed by the Punjab Government of which the learned Legal Remembrancer and Mr. Calvert, the late Financial Commissioner, than whom there was no greater friend of the zamindars, were members, and the report of the majority of the committee to which both these gentlemen were a party was that such a privilege should disappear. The committee reported on page 4 of their report :—

The protection enjoyed by ancestral property for liabilities for debts of a previous owner should be withdrawn and an alienation in insolvency proceedings should continue after the death of the insolvent without the possibility of challenge by reversioner. This provision the majority consider essential in order to prevent objections and disputes and to secure fair dealings to the creditor. Three of us would leave the existing legislation as it is.

On what ground can you justify the continuance of such inequitable provisions in our land ? On what grounds of fairness or equity or justice could the minority, i.e., zamindar members have withheld concurrence from the view of the majority of that Committee? Therefore, this is another privilege which is enjoyed by the agriculturists. Again there is the Redemption of Mortgages Act which was introduced and passed by the Punjab Council with a view to secure summary redemption of mortgages and on the lines of which legislation is now being contemplated by other provinces and which has existed in this province for the benefit of the agriculturists for such a long time. To crown all, the Regulation of Accounts Act was passed only recently. What was expected was that before the Punjab Government came into the field again so soon, with fresh proposals for the relief of indebtedness not of the entire population which should be their charge but for the relief of indebtedness of the privileged class of whom they are afraid and at whose dictation they work, they would certainly wait and mark the result of their latest attempt in this line, i.e., the Regulation of Accounts Act. Any Government which has put on the Statute Book a legislation dealing with a particular subject waits for some time to watch the effect of that legislation before it suddenly embarks on another piece of similar legislation of a far-reaching character. Is it not known to the Government that the Regulation of Accounts Act—whether it is good, bad, useful or useless is a different matter—has considerably restricted rural credit. I challenge any of my honourable friends in this Council, to deny the truth of this statement. (A voice: Yes). Therefore, before embarking on legislation of this type it was natural that the Punjab Government would watch the effect of its latest and recent efforts, but no, it is impossible in the present state of affairs for the Punjab Government to withstand dictation from the zamindars whether it is in the giving of employment regardless of merit, whether it is in the grant of lands, whether it is in the conferring of titles or whether it is in the accepting of amendments to a harmless legislation like the Tobacco Bill which even defeated the very object which the Act had in view. The conduct of the Punjab Government is not strange and is in keeping with its best practice. But, after all, the Punjab is not Iceland, the Punjab is situated in India. Conditions in the Punjab are not so different from the conditions of other provinces. People know the state of indebtedness in the Punjab as well as the state of indebtedness in Madras, the United Provinces and the Central Provinces, and they can see that the state of the Punjab peasant is not worse materially than the state of the peasants in other provinces of India. I challenge any member of this House to contradict the statement that the peasant in the Punjab is more prosperous than the agriculturists in other parts of India. I do not say that he is not badly hit in these days by economic depression. Every one is badly hit, some more, some less, but I can confidently make the statement that the Punjab agriculturist is far better than the agriculturist in any other province of India.

Sardar Arjan Singh: Question.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Let us see what legislation the other provinces have brought into existence to meet the situation.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh: May I give the honourable member a piece of information?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Not unless it is with respect to the relief of indebtedness.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : I was just going to point out that in the United Provinces a very large measure is under consideration.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am surprised that the Honourable Minister for Agriculture should think that a member of this House is making a speech on that subject and is not aware of what a man in the street knows that some legislation relating to indebtedness is on the anvil of the legislature of the United Provinces. I am going to discuss that legislation and it would be time for my honourable friend to decide whether it is really necessary to pass on that information to me. I know very well his interest in getting this Bill through but certainly that is no reason for interrupting me. Now, Sir, the first privilege as I said, which the Punjab agriculturist enjoys because of the legislation in this province was of freedom from the sale of his land. Now does the agricultural population of Bengal, or the United Provinces (except a small population of Rohilkhand), Madras or Central Provinces enjoy that privilege? I put it to my learned friends to say if any of these legislatures up till now have passed any legislation which would bring into line their legislation with the existing legislation in this province. We have had this legislation for the protection of zamindars for the last 20 years, other provinces are now contemplating legislation to relieve indebtedness and it would be a matter of surprise to my honourable friend to learn that the proposed legislation in other provinces does not even go half as far as the existing Punjab legislation. No legislature has so far proposed to lay down that the land of an agriculturist shall not be an asset available for his creditors. Other provinces are dealing with this disease and are not prepared to go even half as far as existing legislation on the subject. One of the Acts in the United Provinces has been turned down by His Excellency the Governor. None of the other Governments proposes to give to the agriculturists of their provinces even those facilities which are already enjoyed by the agriculturists in this province and it passes my comprehension to see why the Punjab is being singled out for this special treatment.

Mian Nurullah : The Punjab is leading India in many respects.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : In the Punjab the question of creditor and debtor is further complicated by classes and communities. When the debtors of other provinces belong to the same community as the creditors, 90 per cent. of the debtors in this province belong to another. I do not say that this is the reason which has prompted the Punjab Government to move this measure.

Mr. Labh Singh : Why do you not say so?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I do not know what is passing in the minds of the Punjab Government but I certainly say that in view of the existing legislation on the subject, in view of the privileges already enjoyed by the agriculturists this legislation is entirely unnecessary and is the outcome of the fear engendered in the minds of the Government by zamindars both in the legislature and in the Government and the result of the influence which the Punjab Government constituted as it is dare not resist. Now, Sir, this legislation is entirely unnecessary. Now, coming to the point which was raised by the Honourable Minister for Agriculture that some remedy should be found for liquidation of debts—

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : I did not raise any point.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It is said that some remedy for liquidation of the debts of the agriculturists who are groaning under the weight of debts should be found and that the Government should do something. There are two remedies that obviously suggest themselves to any casual observer. Either repudiation of debts or finding facilities for providing cheap credit. Now, the second remedy, that is, providing cheap credit to these gentlemen is available and has been available for them but, how can you find cheap credit unless you are prepared to offer some substantial or realisable security? These gentlemen say that cheap credit should be provided to them without any security, that the one security that they can offer, i.e., land should be sacrosanct and not be realisable at the instance of a creditor. What happened in the conference which was convened by Sir George Schuster in 1934 to which he invited the Ministers of the various provincial Governments? A perfectly honest proposition was made to these gentlemen when the Honourable Minister, Sir Jogendra Singh was also present, and that was this, the creation of mortgage banks. When money is easy it would be quite possible for the Government to give cheap credit to these people if they would offer their land as security. And that proposal was discussed. But then, Sir Jogendra Singh said, 'No, no, we want to keep our security intact but want our debts to be wiped off.' And Sir George Schuster naturally retorted, 'You better go home and deal with this problem as best as you can as a provincial question.'

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : May I again correct the honourable member?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I shall just read a quotation from the report which would bear me out.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : The honourable member has referred to a statement made at a conference and at which he was not present. I would like to know where he secured this information and I would like to contradict him without giving any more information than I am allowed to do about that conference.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh was one of the Ministers present there and the proposal of Sir George Schuster that the land should be made available as a realisable asset for the mortgage banks was at once turned down by all the Ministers including Sir Jogendra Singh. No doubt I had no opportunity to listen to the actual talk but from the enthusiasm displayed by my learned friend in the course of my speech the only conclusion at which I could arrive was that the Honourable Minister was as enthusiastic there as he is to-day in interrupting my speech.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : The statement is entirely wrong.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : This is what is published in the Punjab Gazette on May 18, 1934—the proceedings of the Economic Conference, 1934, held under the presidency of Sir George Schuster. This meeting was convened with a view to consider agricultural indebtedness. On the question of land mortgage banks, this is what has been published :—

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

"The Conference examined the possibility of developing land mortgage banks in connection with the aspects of the problem noted above. The discussions made it clear that the essential problem in connection with such institutions in India lies in the realisation of that security, land and the restrictions on the transferability of land or the rights over land and the consequent expenses, uncertainty and delay in obtaining and executing decrees constitute real obstacles to the development of such banks. Conditions in this respect vary from province to province and representatives of several provinces.

including, of course, Sardar Jogendra Singh, this is my source of information and let the honourable member deny it if he can—

"representatives of several provinces were quite definite in their opinion that the danger of tampering with the land laws and increasing the facilities for the alienation of land were so great as to outweigh the advantages for improving the character of the security on which credit could be obtained."

Therefore, land mortgage banks cannot be established. Let the Land Alienation Act be amended so far that the land of agriculturists would be available for sale in favour of those land mortgage banks, not in favour of any private banks. Let these gentlemen if they want to have cheap credit mortgage their property which any honest debtor does for the amounts which he may have already borrowed or which he hopes to borrow. Why do the agriculturists refuse to give their asset as security not only in favour of an ordinary creditor but even in favour of the Government? If they really do oppose such a proposition the only conclusion is that they want to have the money and they do not wish to pay it back. If they do not wish to repay, then let them not have the money. But they desire to have the money and their desire is not likely to grow less, but they do not want to offer their assets as security for the payment of their just debts. This is an impossible position. I would advise them and also the Government to provide cheap credit to zamindars by making their land available as an asset for the mortgage banks. I do not wish that the Land Alienation Act should be repealed. If the Punjab Government is serious to meet the situation, let it be amended in such a way that cheap credit can be given to these people. All possibility of tampering with accounts, of unfair dealing, of charging exorbitant rates of interest are excluded by the fact that they are dealing with Government or semi-Government machinery or a machinery which may be created under an Act of legislature. Let them, therefore, offer their land as security not to everybody but to mortgage banks and let there be a further condition, if they so wish it, although it would be highly equitable and would decrease the value of their asset, that if the bank is obliged to sell the land in execution of a decree that might be sold in favour of an agriculturist. They can get cheap credit provided they offer the security. This one method of obtaining cheap credit is still available to the agriculturist. And you would be pleased to observe, Sir, that in almost all legislations which have so far been proposed in other places there is a provision that arrears of any adjusted amounts may be recovered as arrears of land revenue. It is exactly the same thing as to say that the land is available in spite of the Land Alienation Act as a security for the realisation of the debt. If the agriculturists wish the Bill to become law they should themselves propose modifications in the Land Alienation Act and while proposing such modifications let them safeguard themselves in any way they like against sahukars whether belonging to their own community or belonging to any other community. Let them then obtain cheap credit, from mortgage banks and pay a portion of their debt and let them also employ the money for the development of agriculture and industry in this province. No one would be happier than myself to see a flourishing zamindar population. The prosperity of the zamindar is really the prosperity of the province. Their adversity affects us all to an equal degree. Their prosperity makes other classes prosperous. Therefore, instead of following quack remedies which are suggested by expediency or by fear, let us save the real situation and try to increase the agriculturists' credit and give them cheap credit. If the agriculturists are not willing to avail themselves of this measure—and the proceedings before Sir George Schuster's committee say that they are not, and the attitude of the members here also shows that they are not—then the only other alternative is the repudiation of these debts. Repudiation of debts is advocated by the leader of the Unionist party by writings in the Press. They ask, if Belgium has repudiated its debts, if Italy has, if Germany, England and America have also done so, why cannot the zamindars of the province similarly repudiate their debts? Of course they assume that the zamindars of the province are a sovereign body like these countries. Cannot the poor non-zamindar also repudiate his debts? He cannot do so because the Government in power will say we uphold the sanctity of contracts. If you once countenance repudiation of debts there is no reason why the same reasoning should not apply to the repudiation of the liability to pay land revenue, or abiana, repudiation of the liability to pay lagan, i.e., rent and the repudiation of all other liabilities which people have so solemnly entered into. I do hope that the Punjab Government directly or indirectly will not be a party to such a move in spite of the suggestions emanating from the Unionist party.

The provisions of this Bill fall into seven parts. One of them deals with conciliation boards. I shall now address myself to the circumstances under which this proposal has come up before the House and the principle underlying it. The Council is no doubt aware that the proposals relating to conciliation boards have aroused a great deal of opposition and I think justifiable opposition. The Punjab Government in this matter have not followed the unanimous opinion of the Punjab Committee on Indebtedness. The Government have put forward proposals which are entirely different from the proposals made by the committee and without the necessary safeguards which the committee had unanimously recommended. The committee carefully considered the reports of the various commissions on agriculture, the Central Banking Enquiry committee, the Provincial Banking Enquiry Committee, and also studied a considerable amount of literature which thanks to the efforts of Mr. Calvert and Mr. Abel, the indefatigable Secretary of that committee, were made available to the members with a view to find out if by any process of conciliation between debtor and creditor the debts could be settled. Our conclusion and the unanimous conclusion of the committee was that in these expert reports there was absolutely no warrant for the institution of any conciliation boards. At a late stage of the enquiry a proposed Bill from the Central Provinces was placed in our hands whose such conciliation boards were proposed to be set up. The committee was anxious to find some method of relief by amicable settlement. It reported that an experiment may be made on the lines of the Bill of the Central Provinces but only under certain well-defined conditions. I shall just read an extract from the report on this point. I refer to paragraph 19 of the report of the committee.

The non-committal attitude of the Royal Commission on Agriculture with regard to conciliation boards has already been shown by a quotation from their report. The Central Banking Enquiry Committee did not advocate conciliation boards except as a possible means of assistance to special propaganda officers. Such officers would not, in our opinion, be necessary after the passing of a Petty Insolvencies Bill, the provisions of which would soon become well known. The relevant paragraph in the Committee's report reads as follows:—

"Special officers should be appointed in each Province whose function would be by propaganda to persuade the lender and the borrower to agree to a redemption of standing debt on the basis of a cash payment or equated payments spread over a number of years. It should be one of the functions of these officers to advise the agriculturist debtors of the existing facilities for lightening the burden of indebtedness, such as those provided for in the Usurious Loans Act and the Civil Procedure Code for repayment of loans by instalments. If it is considered desirable that the conciliation boards would facilitate the operations of these officers, local Government should arrange for their appointment."

The Punjab Provincial Banking Enquiry Committee Report does not deal with this subject except in mentioning efforts for composition of old debt through co-operative societies. Part 3 of Note C attached to their report shows that such efforts have only obtained occasional and partial success. Thus there is no weight of opinion in our authorities in favour of conciliation boards; we, however, adhere to our opinion that they may still be found useful under special conditions and in special localities.

The committee's report is that there is no weight of opinion or authority in all the literature that they have studied for the setting up of such conciliation boards, but they wished that an experiment might be tried under certain well-defined conditions and in special localities. What are those special conditions? One of the special conditions was laid down in the Act itself. One of the sections provided that the amount found due by the conciliation board would be realised by the Government as arrears of land revenue. Land Alienation Act does not apply to arrears of land revenue, and therefore the essential condition was that these conciliation boards were only to be subsidiary to Petty Insolvencies Bill and amongst other matters provision had to be made for realisation of the adjusted amount as an arrear of land revenue. A special condition of the functioning of a conciliation board was a provision for the payment or realisation of amount found due by the conciliation board. It was never contemplated that a decree which may have been passed by the High Court or even by Privy Council after great contest should be again presented for consideration before a conciliation board. In this connection may I draw your attention to the speech of Sir Malcolm Hailey dealing with a similar matter:—

It may be observed any scaling down of debts which does not provide to the creditor any increased facility for securing repayment in return for the loss of potential assets is not an appropriate manner.

He directed further action to be taken "to giving to creditor facilities for receiving the adjusted debt."

Now this is the view which all practical men would take as indicated by the opinion of Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram printed on page 132 of Opinions on the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill. I am quoting his words :—

The only remedy is for the State to take over all debts and repay them in cash to creditors at a flat rate of 4 annas in the rupee and then to recover it in small equal instalments extending over a period of 20 to 40 years along with revenue from owners of land and in some other way which I am not in a position to suggest at present from those who are neither land-owners nor occupancy tenants of agricultural land.

Therefore one sine qua non of the functioning of a conciliation board is a provision for the realisation or payment of the amount which has been found due by the conciliation board. This is what the Central Provinces Bill provides for, this is what Sir Malcolm Hailey and what even a strong supporter of the Bill like Chaudhri Chhotu Ram say that you must make some provision for payment. I am of opinion that the rate of scaling down should depend upon the nature of loan, whether it is productive or unproductive. If a loan has been advanced for productive purposes, that is for obtaining immovable property, then no conciliation board would for a moment think of dwindling down the debt. If, on the other hand, the debt has been advanced for unproductive purposes at a usurious rate of interest and consists merely of interest and the judgment-debtor is not in a position to pay, then considerable scaling down may be necessary by the conciliation board. But whatever the proportion by which debts have to be scaled down, has anybody ever heard of the proposal of scaling down debts without corresponding provision for their repayment? Therefore, if the Punjab Government is not prepared to accept the well-defined conditions under which this recommendation of the Punjab Indebtedness Enquiry Committee was made, that is to take upon itself the responsibility for payment of people's debts or create mortgage banks or form co-operative banks or devise some other remedy, then the proper thing is not to touch this proposal which was only limited to particular circumstances and particular conditions.

Another very satisfactory safeguard which the Punjab Committee on Indebtedness recommended for the conciliation board has, I find, again been unfortunately omitted by the Punjab Government. I am referring to section 4 of the Central Provinces Bill, which laid down that no application shall be made if the debtors' debt exceeds Rs. 2,000 or such amount as may be prescribed for such area.

Under the proposals of the Punjab Government a case of a debt of two lakhs of rupees, or even of a decree of two lakhs passed by the highest court can be sent to these conciliatory boards for review. That was never the intention of the Punjab Indebtedness Inquiry Committee. They confined the jurisdiction of the conciliatory board to what the Central Provinces Bill had laid down and which definitely confines the operation of these conciliatory boards to debts of Rs. 2,000. The object is apparent from the recommendations which were made and which laid down that these conciliatory boards were to be treated as auxiliary to petty insolvency courts; where jurisdiction was not to extend to persons whose assets exceeded Rs. 1,000. It was assumed that the only matters which would be sent to the conciliatory boards would be petty disputes. I am one of those who always try to compromise on these matters and I agreed to that suggestion that these conciliation boards might deal with cases in which assets do not exceed Rs. 1,000.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

I draw the attention of the House to the unanimous report of the Punjab Indebtedness Committee on this subject. I will read from paragraph 16 on page 5 of the committee's report.

In recommending the introduction of a simplified procedure for dealing with petty insolvency cases, we feel that a widespread resort to its provisions might possibly lead to some embitterment of feeling between lenders and debtors which might be avoided if the parties could be brought together in an atmosphere of conciliation. A lender has little to gain from pursuing an irrecoverable debt or from suing for a sum greater than he is likely to realise; many lenders would, we believe, willingly accept in lieu of the whole claim a portion of the sum owed if promptly paid down, and the necessity for insolvency proceedings might be avoided if a machinery existed for effecting mutual conciliation. The Royal Commission on Agriculture in discussing the advisability of a Rural Insolvency Bill remarks as follows:—

“Whether such a law should provide for conciliation boards or committees or whether such bodies should be regarded as an alternative to an insolvency law is an open question.”

We have already made our proposals for a Petty Insolvencies Bill, and we think it probable that such a measure would provide effective machinery for the re-adjustment of the burden of agricultural debts to the facts of the present time. But we would also recommend that where local conditions seem favourable conciliation boards should be set up with instructions to accept petitions from either debtor or creditor, and to attempt by persuasion to arrange a composition of the debts. We consider that the existence of a Petty Insolvencies Act (if such an Act were passed) would make creditors willing in many cases to accept the terms offered by the conciliation board.

Then later on the committee made this point further clear in the following words—

We do not think that the Collectors' efforts should end in futility if the Collector fails to recover, but that the failure of the Collector to recover the whole or any part of the sum should be regarded as proof of the insolvency of the debtor. Any law or procedure which makes it impossible for him to be adjudicated accordingly, and to secure his discharge, is defective and should be amended. It is for this reason that we regard the institution of conciliation boards as subsidiary to a Petty Insolvencies Bill, and we doubt whether, without the simplified insolvency procedure, conciliation boards will be of any use.

Therefore, Sir, the recommendations of the Punjab Indebtedness Committee with respect to the conciliation board was to confine their jurisdiction to cases where the debtor could take advantage of the petty insolvency procedure, with respect to which the committee recommended that only those cases would be taken up where the assets of the insolvent did not exceed Rs. 1,000.

Therefore, if these two essential requisites, namely provision for the payment of definite amounts and restrictions to disputes extending to rupees one thousand are not acceptable to the Punjab Government the best thing for the Punjab Government to do would be to drop this measure which even the Punjab Indebtedness Enquiry Committee recommended only as an experiment to be carefully applied and carefully watched.

Mr. President : Has the honourable member finished?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Not yet, Sir.

Mr. President : I know there is no time limit to speeches.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Do you think I have been repeating arguments?

The Council then adjourned till 9-30 A. M. on Wednesday, the 27th June 1934.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) No.

TAWAN.

3338. Mian Nurullah : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to enquire and state—

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) No.

(b) No. The sub-divisional officer and deputy collector are not required by rule 18·9 of the Revenue Manual to investigate cases personally from beginning to end.

(c) Yes, after the divisional officer has satisfied himself as to the correctness of the zilladar's report.

(d) No.

(e) If there is no complaint from an injured person no action for tawan can be taken by any officer.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) Yes.

(b) No tawan can be levied unless a warabandi has been sanctioned under section 68 of the Canal Act.

(c) See reply to (b). Tawan can, however, be imposed in the case of irrigation done from a watercourse outside the chak boundary, whether or not a warabandi exists or a complaint is made.

(d) and (e). The department can only take action in circumstances as explained at (b) above and after a complaint has been lodged by an injured person.

Copies of both are laid on the table.

PRESS COMMUNIQUE.

The following principles are applied in regulating the use of Canal roads and are published for the information of public.

1. Both banks wide enough for roads and boundary roads also exist.—The road on top of one bank only is reserved for Motor traffic as an Inspection road. No restrictions are ordinarily placed on the use by the public of the boundary roads and the top of the other bank.
2. Both banks wide enough for roads and no boundary roads exist.—The road on top of one bank is reserved for Motor traffic as an Inspection road. No restrictions are ordinarily placed on the use by the public of the top of the other bank.
3. One bank wide enough for road and boundary roads exist.—The road on top of the bank is reserved for Motor traffic as an Inspection road. No restrictions are ordinarily placed on the use by the public of the boundary roads.
4. One bank only wide enough for road and no boundary roads exist.—The road on top of the bank is reserved for Motor traffic as an Inspection road.
5. Banks not wide enough for road but two boundary roads exist.—One boundary road is reserved for Motor traffic as an Inspection road. No restrictions are ordinarily placed on the use by the public of the other boundary road.
6. Banks not wide enough for roads and only one boundary road exists.—The boundary road is reserved for Motor traffic as an Inspection road.

The above are subject to the following general rules :—

- (i) Permits are required for the use of the Inspection road by motors.
- (ii) The use of lorries on the Inspection roads is prohibited.
- (iii) The use of tum-tums, tongas, etc., on the Inspection roads is prohibited.
- (iv) The use of Inspection roads after rains even by motors is prohibited.
- (v) The use of Inspection roads after dark by any kind of vehicle is prohibited.
- (vi) All canal roads are used at user's risk entirely and Government is in no way responsible for any accidents or damage, as the roads are private and not public highways.
- (vii) Government reserves to itself the right of placing restrictions to use of any banks and roads for special reasons at any time.

Copy of a letter no. 2748/2765 S. I., dated the 2nd December 1930, from H. F. Ashton, Esquire, Chief Engineer, Irrigation Works, Punjab, Lahore, to all Superintending Engineers, Irrigation Branch, Punjab.

I HAVE the honour to state that there appears to have been some confusion as to the intention of the orders in Punjab Government letter No. 2041/58-S. I., dated the 17th October 1930, regarding motor permits for canal roads. These orders were issued with a view to effecting economy in the maintenance of canal roads by restricting their use to those—both officials and non-officials—whose business cannot be done without the use of certain reaches of canal roads.

2. I am directed to say that it has now been decided by the Governor in Council that permits for canal roads shall be issued as follows :—

- (1) Permanent permits to :—
 - (a) Heads of Departments.
 - (b) Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners.
 - (c) Deputy Inspectors-General of Police.

[The Hon. Sir Miles Irving.]

(d) Superintendents of Police.

(e) Officers of other Departments who have to use canal roads for the proper discharge of their duties.

(2) Annual permits to :—

(a) Assistant Commissioners and Assistant Superintendents of Police.

(b) Civil and Military Officers if Chief Engineers or Superintending Engineers are satisfied that these officers have to make use of canal banks for journeys on duty.

2 permits

(d) General Officer Commanding a District—4 permits

} will be issued by Chief Engineer only.

(e) Members of the Legislative Council—for roads in the areas which they represent where they need them to get to their homes and headquarters town.

(f) Land-owners—big land-owners to enable them to get to their lands, their homes and their headquarters town.

(3) Occasional permits to :—

(a), (b), (c) and (f) under (2) annual permits above. These can be issued by Executive Engineers as well as by Chief and Superintending Engineers.

3. Permits will be in the following forms :—

Permanent permits—green booklet.

Annual permits—red booklets.

Occasional permits—printed forms on paper as ordered in Chief Engineer's letter No. 2392/2410-S. I., dated 27th November 1929.

4. The general procedure should be that any canal officer will issue permits for roads in his charge only, i.e., if an applicant wants a permit for use of roads in one division only the Executive Engineer can issue an occasional permit; if an applicant wants a permit for use of roads in more than one division the application should be sent to the Superintending Engineer for issue of permit; if an applicant wants a permit for more than one Circle the application should be sent to the Chief Engineer for issue of permit.

Thus :—

(a) Occasional permits will be issued by Chief, Superintending and Executive Engineers.

(b) Annual permits will be issued by Chief and Superintending Engineers.

(c) Permanent permits will be issued by Chief Engineers only.

All permits will be issued on the understanding that canal roads will not be used when metalled public roads will serve the purpose.

5. I am to request that action may now be taken in accordance with these orders.

1. The lease shall be for the remaining term of settlement with effect from kharif 1898 subject to payment of Rs. 25, on account of land revenue and Rs. 25 on account of malikana per annum.

The rights of the several lessees in this leased land are determined by the proportion of revenue which each pays on the land owned by him in M. Bhabra.

2. The Government does not grant to the lessee, but hereby excepts and reserves to itself out of and in respect of the said lands all existing rights to and over all mines and minerals, coals, gold washings, earth-oils, and quarries in, under or upon, and also all rivers, streams and water-courses, and all public thoroughfares within and traversing the said lands, or any part thereof.

PART II.—STIPULATIONS OF THE LESSEES.

The lessees do hereby agree—

1. That they will pay the yearly rent reserved in two equal half-yearly instalments at Lahore on the First (1st) day of December and the Fifteenth (15th) day of June the first instalment being payable on the First (1st) day of December 1898.

2. That they will pay when due all rates and cases chargeable on the land, and also all charges (other than penalties) at any time leviable under Chapter VIII of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, in respect of the land leased to them. The words "rates" and "cesses" in this clause have the same meaning as in the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887. For the purpose of determining the amount of rates and cesses payable under this clause, the amount of the land revenue above stated shall be considered to be Rupees Twenty-five only (Rupees 25).

3. That they will permit the officers of Government to enter on the said lands for all purposes connected with the construction, maintenance, or repair of new as well as of existing thoroughfares and water-courses.

Provided that no compensation either by reduction of rent or otherwise shall become due to the lessees from Government by reason of any such operations.

4. That they will permit the officers of Government in like manner to enter and do all acts and things necessary or expedient for the full enjoyment of the right reserved to Government to or over all mines, minerals, coals, gold-washings, earth-oils and quarries, in, under or upon, the said land.

The amount of such compensation shall be determined by the Collector of Lahore and the said lessees. In the event of their being unable to agree upon the same, or in case of any dispute arising between the lessees and the Government as to the property and rights hereby reserved to Government, or as to any matter in any way relating thereto, the question shall be referred by the Collector to the officer empowered to sanction the application for the lease of the said lands, whose decision shall be final and conclusive between the parties to this lease.

5. That they will not do any act inconsistent with, or injurious to, any of the rights excepted and reserved to the Government in clause 2 of Part I of this lease, and will not in any way interfere with the lawful use by the public of any thoroughfare within the said lands.

ELECTIONS OF THE SENIOR AND JUNIOR VICE-PRESIDENTS OF LAHORE DISTRICT BOARD.

3389. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : (i) Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state whether elections of the Senior and Junior Vice-Presidents of Lahore District Board—

(a) were held in April, 1934 ;

(b) were due to be held some time in June, 1934 ;

(c) were held before they were due to be held ; if so, how much before time ?

(ii) If replies to the above be in the affirmative, will he kindly state reasons for holding the elections before time ?

(iii) Will he please state whether in view of the fact that elections of Senior and Junior Vice-Presidents of the Lahore District Board were held contrary to law, Government propose to declare the same null and void and direct the District Board to re-elect their Vice-Presidents ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (i) The Lahore District Board's rule, under clause (h) of section 26 of the Punjab District Boards Act, 1883 (read with section 19 (2)), is that a vice-chairman shall hold office for one year. It is understood in the Board that this period of one year is to coincide with the financial year. The election of vice-chairman for 1933-34 was delayed until June 1933 owing to the fact that a general election had taken place in the early months of that year. (The results of the election and the consequential nominations were notified in May 1983). The election of vice-chairman for 1984-85 was held in April 1984 in the normal way.

(ii) The election was not held before time. In any case no petition was filed against the election.

(iii) Government does not consider any action necessary.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Can you quote any precedent in which election of vice-chairman was held before time, as it has been admitted it was held in this case ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : It is not admitted that this election was held before time.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will you please quote precedent for holding this election before time ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : It is not admitted that the election was held before time.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : When was the last election held ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : In June.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Therefore the election was due in June.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : No. The honourable member missed the most material point in the answer and that was that by the word " year " the Board understood the financial year and not necessarily 12 months.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : When did the Deputy Commissioner under whose charge the election was held leave the district ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I do not know.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : That was the only point.

Mr. President : The honourable member may refer to the Punjab Government Gazette.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The honourable member, I believe, is supplied with a copy of the Gazette and a free copy.

ELECTIONS OF THE SENIOR AND JUNIOR VICE-PRESIDENTS, LAHORE DISTRICT BOARD.

3394. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

(a) whether the Chairman of the District Board, Lahore, had, at the time of election of the vice-presidents of the District Board, Lahore, at the very outset declared that as there were only two rival candidates votes would be taken not by ballot but by show of hands;

(b) whether this declaration of the Chairman was objected to by certain members and among others by the Honourable Rai Bahadur Ram Saran Das but the Chairman over-ruled the objections;

(c) whether as a result of this ruling one of the candidates for the junior vice-presidents withdrew from the contest;

(d) if the replies to the above be in the affirmative, whether the Government propose to take any action in the matter; if not, why not?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) and (c) A copy of the Board's resolution relating to the election (No. 2, dated the 6th April 1934) is laid on the table. The resolution describes the proceedings in detail.

District Board Resolution No. 2, dated 6th April 1934.

PROPOSAL.

Election of Vice-Chairmen.

DISTRICT BOARD ORDERS.

The names of the following two members only were proposed :—

(1) Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah Khan, M.L.C., proposed by Sardar Teja Singh of Chunian ; Seconded by Sardar Muhammad Akbar.

(2) Sardar Muhammad Hussain, proposed by Sardar Chanan Singh ; Seconded by Mian Muhammad Sharif.

No other names being proposed, the Chairman declared the two members named above to be duly elected to the two offices of Vice-Chairmen.

The question which of the above two Vice-Chairmen was to be declared as the senior and which as the junior was then taken up. The Chairman gave it as his ruling that this matter ought to be decided by show of hands, as contemplated in the proviso at the end of clause (c) of rule 56 (2) of the District Board Election Rules, 1933, and not by a secret ballot.

At the suggestion of certain members an adjournment for five minutes was then allowed by the Chairman, in order that the members might discuss among themselves whether a settlement by agreement could not be arranged.

When the meeting was resumed after this adjournment Sardar Muhammad Hussain proffered his resignation from the vice-chairmanship. This was accepted. The Chairman then ruled that Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah Khan must be deemed to have automatically become the Senior Vice-Chairman, in virtue of rule 57 of the District Board Election Rules, 1933.

The meeting then turned to the election of a junior vice-chairman, in the vacancy resulting from Sardar Muhammad Hussain's resignation. For this office one member only was proposed, as follows :—

Sardar Mangal Singh.

Proposed by the Honourable Rai Bahadur Lala Ram Saran Das, C.I.E.

Seconded by Mian Ata Ullah.

No other member being proposed for the vacant vice-chairmanship, Sardar Mangal Singh was declared to be duly elected.

- (b) the total amounts of payments of decretal money certified in courts each year since 1921 in each district in the province ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I regret that the information is not readily available and that its collection would entail an expenditure of time and money out of all proportion to the value of the information likely to be obtained.

3397. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Member for Finance please state—

- (a) the total number of insolvents adjudicated in each district since 1921 in the Punjab each year ;
- (b) the total amount of liabilities of such insolvents ;
- (c) the total value of the assets of such insolvents which came into the possession of receivers and were distributed amongst creditors ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) The information is being collected and will be supplied to the honourable member when available.

(b) and (c) This information is not readily available. The collection of these statistics would involve an expenditure of time and labour incommensurate with the public advantage to be gained.

SEPARATE OR JOINT ELECTORATES IN THE MUNICIPALITIES.

3398. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state the factors, if any, which led the Government to adopt separate or joint electorates in the municipalities in the province ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : A reference is invited to Punjab Gazette notification No. 2671-S., dated the 15th August 1928, under which a Note on the Reconstitution of the Municipal Committees and District Boards of the Punjab was published for general information. Paragraphs 2 and 5 of the Note deal particularly with the question of communal electorates raised by the honourable member.

HAISIYAT OR PROFESSIONAL TAX.

3399. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) which of the district boards in the province have levied haisiyat or professional tax ;
- (b) the proportion or percentage such tax bears to the total revenues of the district boards in each district ;

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

- (c) the amount of such tax realized by each district board during the last 5 years ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the assesseees of such tax are generally non-agriculturists and the assessors and collectors of such tax are agriculturists ;
- (e) whether Government and the Honourable Minister have received any complaints of the high-handedness and oppression by the agriculturists, tax collectors and assessors and as to arbitrary assessment and illegal exactions, if so, in how many cases in each district ;
- (f) if so, whether Government has made any enquiry into the veracity of such allegations, if so, with what result ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Fifteen district boards in the province have imposed haisiyat tax, and 11 profession tax, as under—Haisiyat-tax.

1. District Board, Hissar.
2. District Board, Gurgaon.
3. District Board, Karnal.
4. District Board, Ambala.
5. District Board, Amritsar.
6. District Board, Gurdaspur.
7. District Board, Sialkot.
8. District Board, Gujranwala.
9. District Board, Gujrat.
10. District Board, Shahpur.
11. District Board, Attock.
12. District Board, Mianwali.
13. District Board, Montgomery.

1. District Board, Rohtak.
2. District Board, Kangra.
3. District Board, Hoshiarpur.
4. District Board, Jullunder.
5. District Board, Ludhiana.
6. District Board, Ferozepore.
7. District Board, Lahore.
8. District Board, Sheikhupura.
9. District Board, Jhelum.
10. District Board, Multan.
11. District Board, Muzaffargarh.

(b) Columns 17 and 283 of Form II appended to the Reports on the Working of the District Boards in the Punjab, for the years 1930-31, 1931-32 and 1932-33, respectively, show the income from these taxes and the total income of the boards concerned.

(c) A reference is invited to the amounts shown in column 17 of Form II appended to the Annual Reports on the Working of District Boards in the Punjab for the years 1928-29 to 1932-33.

(d) Yes, but agriculturists enjoying an income apart from that which they derive from their land or their live-stock are liable to pay these taxes equally with non-agriculturists. It is correct that these taxes are assessed and collected generally by agriculturists but not exclusively by them.

(e) Government has received a number of complaints regarding the assessment and collection of these taxes, mainly from the Gujrat and Karnal districts. The honourable member will doubtless have read, in this connection, the press communiqué issued by the Ministry in May 1932.

(f) Government has been in consultation with local officers regarding the rectification of inequalities in the assessment of these taxes and the improvement of the arrangements for their collection: and hopes shortly to issue a set of rules for the guidance of district boards in these respects.

FRONTIER CRIME REGULATIONS COMMITTEE REPORT.

3400. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With reference to my question No. 2898¹ (starred), dated the 2nd March 1984, will the Honourable Member for Finance please lay on the table Government views on the Frontier Crime Regulations Committee Report communicated to Government of India ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The correspondence is of a confidential nature and it is not in the public interest to lay it on the table.

CENSUS OF THE UNEMPLOYED.

3401. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With reference to my question No. 2952² (starred), dated the 6th March 1984, will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it has ever been brought to the notice of the Government that in all civilised countries at least yearly census of the unemployed is taken ;
- (b) whether the Government is aware of the general impression that the Government do not take census of the unemployed because they feel no responsibility towards the people ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) and (b) No.

Mr. M. A. Ghani : Is it a fact or not that in England census of the unemployed is taken every year ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : I ask notice of that question.

Mr. M. A. Ghani : Does not the Honourable Revenue Member come from England ?

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Why is not the census taken ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : I must ask for notice of this question. If the honourable member is suggesting a course of action I am not at present prepared to say whether circumstances require it. He asked a definite question and I have given him a definite answer. If he will give notice of that question I will try to answer him.

WOMEN TEACHERS.

3402. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With reference to my question No. 2947³ (starred), dated the 6th March 1984, will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the Government advertised the posts of women teachers in any paper ;
- (b) how many times in the years 1982 and 1983 the Government advertised the posts in Muslim papers ;
- (c) the number of Muslim women teachers that applied for the posts ?

¹Volume XXIV, page 413.

³Volume XXIV, pages 528-29.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a), (b) and (c) Two posts in the Punjab Educational Service (Women's Branch) were advertised in the year 1932 in the Pioneer, Statesman and the Civil and Military Gazette. Two Muslim ladies applied for the posts. In the year 1933 one post in the Punjab Education Service (Women's Branch) was advertised in the Statesman, Civil and Military Gazette and the Tribune. No Muslim lady applied, but one Muslim lady was considered for the post. In the same year a post of vernacular teacher was advertised in the Civil and Military Gazette, Tribune, Statesman and The Eastern Times. Only two applications were received and both of them were from Muslim ladies. Another post of Hindi and Sanskrit teacher was advertised in 1933 in the Milap, Tribune and the Civil and Military Gazette. No applications were submitted for this post.

PUNITIVE POLICE POST IN CHAK NO. 174, MUHAMMAD PURA.

3403. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that a punitive police post has been stationed in Chak No. 174, Muhammad Pura, tahsil and district Sheikhpura in the month of November 1933 ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the amount of Rs. 1,900 was ordered to be recovered from the whole village ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that all village inhabitants have been exempted from payment except four families of 25 souls ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that no one out of these 25 persons was ever convicted of any offence ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that even in party factions, Honourable Mr. Justice Coldstream upheld the conviction of the leader of the party which is now exempted ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that Honourable Mr. Justice Coldstream even remarked that the party which is now exempted, was the aggressor ;
- (g) whether it is a fact that the Sessions Judge, Lyallpur, in his recent judgment quashed the proceedings taken under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, against the party which is now made to pay the cost of police post ;
- (h) whether it is a fact that two magistrates honourably acquitted some of the persons (who are now to pay the cost of punitive police) from the charges under section 353, Indian Penal Code ;
- (i) if so, what led to the imposition of heavy fine by way of cost of punitive police post on the families which were always oppressed ;
- (j) whether he proposes to make personal enquiries into the case, so that influential people may not go scot free and poor be grinded ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) It was located there for six months with effect from the 1st December 1933.

(b) The exact amount was Rs. 1,878-12-8.

(c) No. Only 29 persons and the village kamins were exempt, and the recovery has been made from 70 persons.

(d), (e) and (f) In the absence of particulars of the individuals and of the case referred to, I regret that the information cannot be supplied.

(g) Yes. I have not seen the judgment, but I understand that the District Magistrate's judgment was set aside on a technical point and that the Sessions Judge was of opinion that the case should have been brought under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code.

(h) The first Magistrate discharged them and on revision the second Magistrate acquitted them.

(i) The post was located there owing to a fear of a breach of the peace on the part of those who have had to bear the cost of it.

(j) The necessity for the post and the incidence of its cost were fully considered before it was sanctioned.

Mian Nurullah : Will the Honourable Member give the reasons for the imposition of the punitive police ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I am afraid I must have notice, I know very little about the case.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : With reference to reply to part (c) I would like to know whether any of the men exempted from the levy of the charge were those who had been convicted by courts and whose conviction had not been quashed by the High Court and were yet exempted from the charge ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I have not got the information with me.

Mian Nurullah : I would like to know the reasons for the exemption of certain members of the same community in a village ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : May I have notice.

Mr. M. A. Ghani : May I know the reasons why the members of a particular family were ordered to pay the punitive police tax ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Once more I must ask for notice.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : With reference to the answer to part (h) of the question, will the Honourable Member please state why those people who had been honourably acquitted were charged ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : If the honourable member gives notice I would be glad to answer this question.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : The question is plain and should have been answered.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : In my anxiety to answer these questions as soon as they were put, I had to give these answers without studying the cases very thoroughly.

Mian Nurullah : What were the technical grounds mentioned ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : May I have notice please.

Mr. M. A. Ghani : Will the Honourable Finance Member please give the policy of the Government by which the members of a particular community are made to pay the punitive police tax ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : There is no general policy in the question, each individual case is decided on its own merits.

Mr. M. A. Ghani : Is it or is it not a fact that only the aggressors are made to pay the punitive police tax ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : No, this is not a fact.

Mr. M. A. Ghani : Are innocent people made to pay ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I have already said that in these matters there is no general policy which governs them, each case is decided on its own merits. I cannot say more.

NUR MUHAMMAD, LAMBARDAR OF CHAK NO. 174, VILLAGE MUHAMMAD-PURA.

3404. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that Nur Muhammad, Lambardar of Chak No. 174, village Muhammadpura, tahsil and district Sheikhpura, was given land in exchange ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the newly acquired land is on outlet No. 2400, while the other land of the said Nur Muhammad is on outlet No. 2500.
- (c) whether it is a fact that since the allotment of land to Nur Muhammad on outlet No. 2400, trouble arose and there have been 60 criminal cases in the village ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that before 1900 when there was only one outlet, the party feeling was at its height and there were many criminal cases in the village ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that in 1900 authorities realised the position and the parties also gave consent to separate the outlet and the clash of the two parties came to an end ;
- (f) if so, why Nur Muhammad has been given land on outlet No. 2400, against the will of the other party in the year 1928 ;
- (g) whether it is a fact that Mr. W. C. Bradford, I.C.S., Collector, Sheikhpura, passed an order against this exchange on 23rd January 1929 ;
- (h) whether it is a fact that the officer mentioned above pointed out in his order that the general colony rule is that a charagh near a village should not be allotted ;
- (i) whether it is a fact that this officer had seen the spot and in his order made out that this exchange of land by Nur Muhammad, Lambardar of Chak No. 174, tahsil Sheikhpura, was made under a misapprehension ;
- (j) whether it is proposed that any senior officer may see the spot and then pass orders ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) Yes.

(b) No. There are three outlets for the village, namely, Nos. 24,000, 25,000 and 34,000. Nur Muhammad, Lambardar, held land on all the three outlets before the exchange of the land in dispute was sanctioned.

(c) Since 1928 when the exchange was sanctioned there have been only 14 criminal cases in the village.

(d) and (e) Government has no information.

(f) Does not arise.

(g), (h) and (i) Yes.

(j) Mr. Bradford's order was set aside on appeal by the Commissioner. Mr. Bradford's successor enquired into the case thoroughly again and found it unnecessary to have the exchange cancelled. Since then the case has been carefully considered by the Commissioner and Government, and Government does not propose now to interfere.

Mian Nurullah : Was the exchange mentioned in (a) against rules ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : I must ask for notice of this question.

Mian Nurullah : This point is clearly mentioned in part (a).

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : It was against the rules, to be exact against the general practice and not against any rule having the force of law.

Mr. M. A. Ghani : Do the Government intend to take any action to rectify the mistake ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : The answer to it is given that the Government have carefully considered the question and do not propose now to interfere.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : With reference to part (i) is it not a fact that as Deputy Commissioner Mr. Bradford as the result of an enquiry had found that the land allotted to Nur Muhammad on this particular outlet was due to a misapprehension ? If so, what led to this misapprehension and what steps does Government propose to take to set this matter right ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : The Government does not propose to take any steps.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : May I know the reasons why ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : I have already explained that the case has been carefully considered by the Commissioner and by Government and Government does not propose now to interfere.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : With regard to the reply given to part (e) is it not a fact that the authorities asked to investigate the matter had come to the conclusion that the outlets of these two parties should be separated, and that from 1900 to 1928 under this arrangement there was no trouble, and that the Government was not most ill advised in having reverted to the same conditions by awarding land to Nur Muhammad on the same outlet ?

Mr. President : The honourable member is making a speech. He is not putting a question.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : I am going to finish it. Is it not a fact that this particular action on the part of Government was a signal for a fresh outbreak of hostilities? Was it good policy on the part of Government to have done this?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : What is the question actually asked?

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : In 1900 as a result of the enquiry held by Government, Government had come to the conclusion that these two rival parties should not have lands on the same outlet.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : The question is so long that I would like to have it put in bits. As regards 1900 Government have no record of what happened on that occasion.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the honourable member find out what happened and also if there is any record and was it not the duty of the present Deputy Commissioner to have supplied full information?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : No. 1900 is a long time ago.

Mr. M. A. Ghani : Is it a fact that the Government were prepared to cancel the order of exchange provided Nur Muhammad was given land from the lands of———?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : I cannot say what happened in the course of the proceedings. What I have said is that Government has considered the case very carefully and has come to a final decision which it is not prepared to alter. It has done its best to come to the best decision possible.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : You, as Financial Commissioner yourself had in deciding this case held that you would not be prepared to pass an order on appeals for revision but if one of the rival parties will petition, then you would be prepared to consider it.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : I have not the faintest recollection.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : When a question is put the honourable member who has to reply should come fully prepared with the case. Otherwise what is the use of putting a supplementary question?

HEADMASTERS AND SECOND MASTERS IN GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOLS.

3407. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that in some of Government High Schools in this province, there are headmasters who are junior to their second masters in point of pay, experience and seniority ;
- (b) if so, the names of such institutions and also the names of the headmasters with their senior second masters under them, stating their academic and departmental qualifications and the grade promotions given to such headmasters ;
- (c) whether Government proposes to remove this anomaly ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) It may be added that in the cases to which this question refers no grade promotion was given to the men appointed as headmasters. The honourable member apparently fails to realize that independent charge of an institution is entrusted to officers who give proof of initiative and ability to command and control. A number of quite good teachers with high academic qualifications and long experience do not possess these qualifications but deserve and achieve ordinary grade promotion. If the honourable member insists the statement that she requires can be laid on the table but the reasons in each case for the supersession of the individual will have to be given. This will be greatly to the detriment of the reputation of the officers named and I hope that the honourable member will not press for this information, in the interests of persons whose welfare she has at heart.

(c) The answer to this is covered by the answer to (b) above.

MALE DOCTORS IN GIRLS' INSTITUTIONS.

3408. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state whether it is a fact that male doctors attend and examine the females in the girls' institutions ; if so, will the Director of Public Instruction, Punjab, kindly state why the male doctors are allowed to examine them against the sentiments of the public and the female purdah system ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : Enquiries are being made and the information will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

JOURNALS AND NEWSPAPERS PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

3409. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Member for Finance please state—

- (a) the names of all the journals and newspapers published in the Punjab ;
- (b) the names of their editors and printers ;
- (c) the total publication of each ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : There are no less than 597 such newspapers and periodicals known to the Punjab Government and the expense of setting out the information requested appears to Government to be incommensurate with any value which can be extracted from the list. If, however, details are required regarding any particular paper, I shall be happy to furnish them.

AGGARWALS IN POLICE SERVICE.

3410. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Member for Finance please state the number of Government servants in the Police service of different ranks belonging to the Aggarwal community in the Punjab.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The information asked for is not readily available and its collection from all the districts of the province will entail an amount of correspondence and labour which will not be commensurate with the results achieved.

ENFRANCHISING WOMEN IN MUNICIPALITIES.

3411. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state which of the municipalities in the Punjab have passed resolutions enfranchising women and which have turned down such a proposal?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The municipal committees of Ludhiana, Ferozepore and Karnal have passed resolutions under the proviso to clause (a) of rule 6 of the Municipal Election Rules, 1930, extending the franchise to women. No other municipal committee has passed such a resolution, while the municipal committees of Raikot and Jhang have positively resolved against the extension of the franchise to women. This reply does not cover the Jullundur district, in respect of which information has not been received in time to be included herein.

Mr. E. Mayadas : May I ask why Ludhiana is mentioned before Ferozepore ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The opinion might have come earlier from Ludhiana. That is the only reason I can guess. If there is any question of dignity involved we can revise the order.

Mr. E. Mayadas : As a matter of fact Ferozepore was the first to pass the resolution.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Is that so? The answer should then read "The municipal committees of Ferozepore, Ludhiana and Karnal."

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) There are certain differences between the two sets of bye-laws.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : A statement giving the required information is placed on the table.

It may, however, be added for the honourable member's information that cases of appointments of district inspectors, assistant district inspectors of schools, headmasters and teachers in colleges are dealt with by the Director of Public Instruction and not by the Assistant Director of Public Instruction and that stenographers according to the present practice are appointed by the officers under whom they have to serve.

(1) It will perhaps further interest the honourable member to know that district inspectors and assistant district inspectors of schools are primarily inspectors of rural schools and that therefore in selecting officers for these posts considerable importance is attached to rural origin and sympathies ;

(2) that in twenty districts out of twenty-nine Muslims have an overwhelming majority amongst the rural population as well as in the districts ;

(3) that the Muslims have only two colleges of their own as against nine of the Hindus and three of the Sikhs and that, therefore, for collegiate education the Muslims have to depend largely on Government colleges ;

(4) that the Hindu community is still markedly over-represented on the staff of Government colleges and the Muslims correspondingly under-represented, the proportion of each community being—

					Per cent.
Hindus	43·1
Muslims	28·4
Sikhs	14·0
Others	14·8

(5) that the Muslim community has comparatively very few recognised anglo-vernacular schools of its own, the proportion belonging to each community being—

Hindus	42·17
Muslims	18·53
Sikh	27·16
Others	12·14

and that the community for its secondary education has therefore to depend very largely on Government and board schools. Further that Government have laid down that as far as possible a Government school should have a headmaster belonging to a community which has no school of its own in the locality ;

(6) that the honourable member's community is still markedly over-represented among the anglo-vernaacular staff of Government schools, the proportion of each community being—

	Per cent.
Hindus	47
Muslims	89
Sikhs	13
Others	1

It has also to be remembered that the Hindu community takes the lion's share out of grants-in-aid and with this finances a very large number of its own schools whose headmasters are all Hindus.

(7) that headmasters in board schools are appointed by inspectors under Article 48 of the Punjab Education Code, and that the Director of Public Instruction's office has nothing to do with these appointments ; however the information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

HEADMASTER, PATTO HIRA SINGH HIGH SCHOOL.

863. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

(a) whether S. Jawahar Singh, Headmaster, Patto Hira Singh High School, was ever reverted to the position of a second master ;

[R. B. Lala Sewak Ram.]

(b) whether S. Sadhu Singh, A. D. L., was appointed in his place ;

(c) if so, who was put in place of S. Sadhu Singh and what was his designation before ;

(d) how many men he superseded on the list ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) M. Ahmad Khan, senior English master, Government High School, Jullundur.

(d) None. Transfer from the teaching line to the inspection line and vice versa is neither promotion nor degradation. Therefore the question of supersession does not arise.

ABDUL RASHID OF LUDHIANA COLLEGE.

864. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state :—

(a) whether one Abdul Rashid of the Ludhiana College after having resigned his service in the grade of Rs. 100—5—135, has been re-appointed in the grade of Rs. 140—10—190, and whether the break of his service has been condoned ;

(b) if so, the special reasons for this ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes. The correct name of the official is M. Rashid Ahmad and he was in the grade of Rs. 140—10—190 when he resigned his post in the Intermediate College, Ludhiana, because extension of leave for completion of his studies in Europe was refused. However on his return to India on the strong recommendation of the Principal, Ludhiana College, he was re-instated in his old post and the letter accepting his resignation was cancelled.

(b) His high academic qualifications, that is to say B.A., B.T., Mn. F., Ph. D. and M.A., of the University of London and his good record in service.

HEADMASTER, GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOL, FEROZEPUR.

865. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state :—

(a) whether M. Aziz Bakhsh was made headmaster in place of Lala Pars Ram, deceased, in the Government High School, Ferozepore :

(b) if so, what special reasons there were for his appointment and what length of service he had to his credit ?

(c) how many senior non-Muslims he superseded ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) No. M. Aziz Bakhsh was, however, appointed headmaster, Government High School, Garhshankar.

(b) He has put in sixteen years' service and was considered by the Inspector of Schools, Jullundur division, as most suitable for the post of headmaster. It may be added for the honourable member's information that the appointment of headmaster is made strictly by selection and among other things administrative ability is considered as an essential factor.

(c) M. Aziz Bakhsh was appointed as headmaster on his own pay in the grade of Rs. 140—10—190. Therefore strictly speaking there has been no supersession. However he has been appointed headmaster in preference to sixteen Muslims and twenty-nine non-Muslims who are above him in the graded list.

LALA AMIR CHAND, DISTRICT INSPECTOR.

866. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state :—

(a) whether Lala Amir Chand, District Inspector, has been reverted to the post of a headmaster of a middle school and has subsequently been sent to an Intermediate college ;

(b) if so, who has been appointed in his place and what was he before ;

(c) how many men he superseded ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) He was transferred as headmaster on the recommendation of his Inspector, but before he joined he was transferred at his own request to an Intermediate college.

(b) Mehta Ram Narain, 2nd master, Government High School, Sheikhpura.

(c) 37 Muslims and 75 non-Muslims. It may, however, be added for the honourable member's information that appointment of headmasters is made strictly by selection and that in the present case this appointment has involved no increase in pay or promotion in grade.

CHAUDHRI JHANDU MAL, DISTRICT INSPECTOR OF SCHOOLS.

867. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state :—

(a) whether Chaudhri Jhandu Mal, District Inspector of Schools, Education Department, has been made Assistant District Inspector ;

(b) if so, who has been appointed in his place ;

(c) his designation and his pay before and after the appointment?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes on the recommendation of Mr. Wilson, the Inspector of Schools, Ambala division.

(b) Mr. S. F. Dean, an Indian Christian.

(c) Personal assistant to district inspector of schools, Rohtak, in the grade of Rs. 110—5—135. He was appointed district inspector of schools, Simla, on the same rate of pay as he was drawing as assistant district inspector of schools. It may be added for the honourable member's information that Simla being a small district a junior assistant district inspector is always put in charge of this district.

MR. U. KARAMAT, LECTURER, ISLAMIA COLLEGE, LAHORE.

868. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state :—

- (a) whether it is a fact that one Mr. U. Karamat, Lecturer, Islamia College, Lahore, has directly been posted to the P. E. S. on Rs. 500 ;
- (b) if so, the special reasons for so doing ;
- (c) how many senior non-Muslims have been superseded by his appointment ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) There were two vacancies in the P. E. S. Class II to be filled by direct recruitment and the selection board placed U. Karamat at the top of the list. He was exceptionally well qualified and was in receipt of approximately Rs. 600 per mensem at the Islamia College, Lahore.

(c) As a certain percentage of recruitment to the P. E. S. is to be made by direct appointment the question of supersession does not arise. It will perhaps interest the honourable member to know that along with U. Karamat another candidate, viz., S. Iqbal Singh was also appointed direct to the P. E. S. and that both these appointments were made on the recommendation of the Selection Board which consists of two Muslims, one Hindu and one Sikh with Director of Public Instruction as Chairman and that the Muslim members were absent from the meeting which recommended these appointments.

MR. SIRAJ-UD-DIN, GOVERNMENT COLLEGE, LAHORE.

869. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state :—

- (a) the reasons for posting Mr. Siraj-ud-Din, a new hand, to the Government College, Lahore, in the P. E. S. grade ;
- (b) consequent upon this how many non-Muslims with higher claims have been superseded ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Mr. Siraj-ud-Din was originally recruited in the grade of Rs. 200—10—250 of the Subordinate Educational Service and posted to the Government College, Lahore. He was strongly recommended for the P. E. S. by the Principal, Mr. Garrett, who, on account of his high academic qualifications, considered him the most suitable candidate for a lectureship in English in the Government College, Lahore. He was consequently promoted to P. E. S. Class II on the recommendation of Mr. Parkinson when the latter was officiating as Director of Public Instruction.

(b) None. In fact there is no man of his qualifications in the S. E. S. or P. E. S. Class II. It will interest the honourable member to learn that the following non-Muslim officers were recruited direct to the P. E. S. to improve the staff of Government colleges.

OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

870. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state :—

- (a) whether it is a fact that Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi, Assistant Director of Public Instruction, has begun touring in the province as a Super-Inspector ;
- (b) if so, the object of these tours and what need there is for these tours ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) and (b) Tours by Assistant Director of Public Instruction have been undertaken in the interests of the Department and Government are satisfied that these tours have served useful purpose.

871. Cancelled.

WOMEN IN EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

872. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state :—

- (a) the total number of women employed in the Education Department communitywise (Sikhs, Muhammadans, Indian Christians, Anglo-Indians, Europeans and Hindus) ;
- (b) the total amount of pay drawn by the women of each community employed as above ;
- (c) the community to which the first highest placed ten female incumbents in the Education Department belong ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : The honourable member is referred to the consolidated statement showing the proportionate representation of the various communities serving in the different departments of the Punjab Government as it stood on the 1st January 1934, which has been laid on the table.¹

LAHORE CONSPIRACY CASE.

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

- (f) the amount paid to each of the Special Commissioners ;

- (h) the class given to the accused after conviction. If such class is inferior to what they enjoyed during the trial the reasons for that ;
- (i) whether there are different rules for the classification of prisoners, for giving better class treatment, during the trial and after conviction ;
- (j) the names of the Police officers who have been wholly in charge of this case ;
- (k) in how many cases was an appeal or revision filed against the orders of the Special Magistrate or Special Commissioners, in the High Court and in how many cases such appeals or revisions were accepted ;
- (l) whether the charge against the accused was that of conspiracy and whether such conspiracy has been held to be proved by the Special Commissioners ;
- (m) whether the opinion of the Government Advocate was obtained before launching the above prosecution case as to the factum of a conspiracy ; if so, what was that opinion ; if not, why it was not obtained ;
- (n) why the accused were challaned for conspiracy and not for overt acts done by them when such a procedure would have been simpler and less expensive ;
- (o) whether the Government is contemplating to start a supplementary case against the approver ; if so, whether it intends to pursue the same course as to the production of exhibits and witnesses and thus incur all the costs of the original case afresh ;
- (p) whether any allegations have been made by any of the accused or the witnesses against any of the Crown officers investigating the case ; if so, by whom and against whom and the nature of such allegations ;
- (q) whether the Government has inquired into the veracity of these allegations, if so, what were the conclusions at which it arrived ; if not, whether it proposes to do so now or after the conclusions of the appeal in the High Court ;
- (r) which of the officers who made investigation in this case have been promoted to higher rank or otherwise rewarded ;
- (s) whether any of the approvers have been rewarded in any way ;
- (t) what cost, if any, has the Government incurred in connection with the appeal in the High Court ;
- (u) whether it is a fact that the learned Special Commissioners have passed strictures on some of the magistrates who recorded the statements of the witnesses under section 164, Criminal Procedure Code ; if so, whether Government proposes to take any action against such magistrates ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The information is being collected and will be communicated to the honourable member when ready.

COMMUNAL TENDENCIES OF MR. HAKIM, PRINCIPAL, GUJRAT COLLEGE.

874. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state whether it is a fact—

- (a) that the Hindu Sabha, Gujrat, passed a unanimous resolution on the 10th November 1933, inviting the attention of the Punjab Government (Ministry of Education) to the ultra communal tendencies even in ordinary affairs of Mr. Hakim, the Principal of the Gujrat College ;
- (b) that a deputation of the Hindu Sabha accompanied by the President of the Mohiyal Sabha, Gujrat, waited upon the Director of Public Instruction on the 23rd November 1933 at Gujrat, inviting his attention to the communal administration of the Gujrat College ;
- (c) if so, what action has been taken on the representation of the said Sabha to allay the feelings of the aggrieved non-Muslims of the Gujrat district ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) The resolution does not appear to have been received by the Department.

(b) Yes.

(c) No action, as enquiries were made and it was found that the complaints were unfounded.

SERVANTS' FEE FUND, GUJRAT COLLEGE HOSTEL.

875. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that in hostels of Government colleges in the Punjab where Muslim students are in a minority there is a common servants' fee fund ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that in the Gujrat College hostel this fund has been separated with the result that the Hindu boarders have to pay a heavy sum towards the pay of their servants ;
- (c) whether the Government proposes to take necessary steps to make rules regarding the servants' pay fund uniform for all Government colleges in the province ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) In most of the Government Colleges ' Hostel Servants Fund ' is expended as a common fund for all boarders.

(b) No. There is no servants fee fund at the Government Intermediate College, Gujrat. In 1930, Lala Sri Kishen, the then Principal of the College, ruled that instead of the college paying the mess servants out of the ' servants fee fund ' to which the boarders contributed, the boarders should themselves pay the servants directly.

(c) No. The Government cannot interfere as the ' servants pay fund ' is a private fund of the boarders.

UNAUTHORISED OCCUPATION OF BUNGALOW OF PRINCIPAL, GUJRAT COLLEGE.

876. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that Mr. Chirag Ali, Advocate, Gujrat, the brother of the Principal, is living since April 1932 in the rent free bungalow provided to the Principal by the Government, although Mr. Chirag Ali is in no way dependent on the Principal and is having a lucrative practice at Gujrat ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that Principal Lal Chand of the Jhang College was removed from principalship for a similar offence ;
- (c) if so, whether the Government intends taking any action against the Principal of the Gujrat College, if so, what ; if not, why not?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes. M. Chiragh Ali, Advocate, Gujrat, lived with the Principal, his brother, up to August, 1933. He paid no rent.

(b) No.

(c) Does not arise.

GOVERNMENT ARTS COLLEGES.

877. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) how many Government Arts Colleges there are in the province ;
- (b) the total number of the professors of Persian and Urdu in such colleges ;
- (c) the number of Hindu professors for these subjects in such colleges ;
- (d) if the number of Hindu professors is nil or very small, what steps he proposes to take if qualified persons are available ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Twelve.

(b) Twenty-six. Eleven of these are teaching other subjects also, viz., Arabic, Mathematics and Philosophy.

(c) One.

(d) It is neither possible nor desirable to fix and maintain communal proportions for teachers of specific subjects. On the other hand, the honourable member will find that among teachers of Sanskrit and Hindi, his own community will predominate.

ZAILDARS IN AMRITSAR.

878. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With reference to my question No. 2897¹ (starred), dated 2nd March 1934, will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether he has ascertained the number of Muhammadan zaildars in Amritsar, if so, what is their proportion to the total number of zaildars ;
- (b) whether that is not an additional reason for the Muslims not getting adequate representation on the district board by election ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Of the 43 zaildars in the Amritsar district 9 were till recently Muslims. One of the Muslim zaildars has lately died. An appointment in his place has still to be made.

(b) Government have no reason to believe that the comparatively small number of Muslim zaildars in the district has affected the results of the elections to the District Board.

NON-VOTED EXPENDITURE.

879. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Member for Finance be pleased to state the amount of non-voted expenditure incurred in the Punjab in the years 1911, 1918 and 1922, respectively ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Expenditure was not classed as voted or non-voted in 1911 and 1918. In 1922, i.e., 1922-23 the non-voted expenditure was Rs. 3,56,82,701.

STIPENDS TO MUSLIM GIRLS.

880. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With reference to my starred question no. 2948¹, dated 6th March 1934, will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state whether the Government propose to give more stipends to Muslim girls ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : Four scholarships, two of the value of Rs. 15 per mensem, each, tenable in the intermediate classes and two of the value of Rs. 25 per mensem, each, tenable in the B.A. classes are already reserved for Muslim girls and even these are not fully utilized because the conditions laid down under Article 166 of the Punjab Education Code are not satisfied. Government are, however, watching the progress carefully.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. President : Does the honourable member wish to move for leave of the House to move his adjournment motion² ?

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : No, Sir, I do not wish to move my motion.²

STATEMENT RE RETRENCHMENT OF ONE CHIEF ENGINEER.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving (Revenue Member) : Sir, I desire to make a statement, correcting in some measure a statement³ I made in this House on the 12th of March in the course of the budget debate on the motion moved by Sardar Arjan Singh that the grant be reduced by Rs. 11,838-5-8 with respect to the item of Rs. 3,54,100, Chief Engineers.

¹Volume XXIV, page 529.

²To move the adjournment of the business of the Council for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely to disapprove the action of the Governor in Council in the appointment of Revenue Member (a member of a service who is a non-Indian) in the leave vacancy of Sir Sikander Hyat Khan.

³Vol. XXIV, page 761.

[The Hon. Sir Miles Irving.]

The object of this cut was to bring about the retrenchment of one post of Chief Engineer, and in the course of the debate I quoted Article 20 of the agreement into which the Punjab Government had entered with the State of Bahawalpur and the State of Bikaner in respect of the Sutlej Valley Project, which says—

The original construction of the canals, collateral works including distributaries shall be carried under the control of the Chief Engineer appointed by the British Government whose sole charge would be the construction and working of this project.

When I made this statement, I fully believed that we were bound under the agreement to retain the Chief Engineer, but the question has since been further examined with a view to making a representation to the other parties and further legal advice taken on the exact interpretation of the agreement, and Government are now advised by its own advisers that the period of construction having ended, it is not necessary to retain a Chief Engineer whose sole charge shall be the working of the project. Government have addressed the partners in the project in this sense and await their reply.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Mr. President : The Council will now resume discussion of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): When the Council rose yesterday, I was discussing the principles underlying the proposals relating to the conciliation boards and pointed out that the Punjab Indebtedness Committee intended to confine the jurisdiction of these conciliation boards to cases within the jurisdiction of the Petty Insolvencies Bill and it was never their intention to confer jurisdiction on conciliation boards with respect to debts of any amount howsoever high. I submit, therefore, that if the experiment of these conciliation boards is to be tried, it should be limited to cases where debts do not exceed a thousand rupees. After all, the object of this legislation is to relieve distress of poor people, and there is no reason why the Punjab Government should be particularly solicitous about the richer members of the zamindar community, who are rich enough to borrow Rs. 50,000 or a lakh or more, specially when nothing is being done to relieve similar distress among other members of the community.

Another matter in the legislation relating to conciliation boards which requires the attention of this House is the absence of verification of application. The opinions which have been received show that there is a very real danger of fictitious names of creditors being put in in these petitions. It is quite easy to write pronotes in favour of obliging friends and relatives to the extent of 60 per cent. or more of the total debts of a debtor applicant, and by the application of clause 16 of the Bill wipe out the entire debt of genuine creditors. Mr. J. D. Penny, I.C.S., the Commissioner of Multan Division and several district judges and other officials have drawn the attention of the Government to this real danger.

“The danger is that the machinery will be misused by debtors.....there is a danger of collusive settlement covering bogus debts under clause 16 calculated to harm the interests of persons who stand out against them.”

If the conciliation boards are to be tried with any chance of success, there should be a definite provision for severe punishment for putting in false particulars.

I do not wish to go into further details of the criticism of the provisions relating to conciliation boards but in reproducing in their entirety the provisions of the Central Provinces Act, the Punjab Government had lost sight of one important fact, that is, that in the Central Provinces land of the agriculturists is available for sale in satisfaction of the debts, while in the Punjab it is not. Therefore, the provision under clause 18 (3) which postpones the realisation of the decrees or the debts of non-agreeing debtors to a period after the debts of agreeing debtors have been satisfied amounts in the Punjab to a postponement of payment of debt for ever. In the Central Provinces land will be sold at the most in a year or two and after the agreeing creditors have been thus satisfied, the non-agreeing creditors could come and execute their decrees. But in the Punjab where the only security is a usufruct of the land, the agreeing creditors will not be paid till after twenty years' lease has expired. Of what use is the decree or the debt to any non-agreeing debtor under clause 18 (3)? All decrees are barred after 12 years and no debt can be kept alive for twenty years. Similarly there are other provisions of this Bill, for example, clause 23, which practically amount to a repudiation of debts, but in view of the fact that these matters have been brought out in the opinions received, I do not wish to go into further details.

Again, Sir, this legislation so far as it attempts to evade realisation of decrees from persons who can pay, but will not pay, is thoroughly unrighteous. If you study the reports on the Administration of Justice in the Punjab, you will find that in the year 1930 the proportion of the decrees realised to the decrees executed was only 30 per cent., in 1931 it was 25 per cent. and in 1932 it was 24 per cent. In fact, as it has been remarked by the Privy Council and pointed out over and over again by various High Courts, the difficulties of a decree-holder only commence after the decree has been obtained, and the entire effort of the judgment-debtor is to dodge the decree-holder. As soon as a decree is obtained and the property is attached there come in a crop of objections by sons and relatives, and wife of the judgment-debtor and after those objections have been dismissed there come in declaratory suits, which last for two or three years and the satisfaction of the decree is indefinitely postponed. When declaratory suits are dismissed, appeals are filed in the High Court which take a number of years. In these circumstances it is not fair on the part of the State to create further difficulties in the realisation of decrees from persons who can pay but will not pay. In this connection, I commend the report of the Civil Justice Committee to the serious consideration of the Government.

One argument advanced in favour of this legislation deserves serious consideration and I propose to lay my view on this point before the House. It is said that it is the fall in prices which is responsible for the sad plight of the agriculturists. Now, whatever may be said, one thing is certain that the sad plight of the agriculturist in this respect to whatever causes it may be due, is certainly not due to any fault of the money-lender. The money-lender has always been a help to the agriculturist. Besides there is legislation to deal with an unscrupulous money-lender. The sad plight of the agriculturist is due to reduction in the price of agricultural commodities—the real causes of which have baffled the most astute investigators. It may be the exchange ratio, the currency or fiscal policy of the Government, overproduction, etc. But whatever the causes may be, it has not been alleged even by the worst enemy of the money-lender that he is in any way to blame for it. Although it is true that a fall in the price of agricultural produce increases the burden of debt on the agriculturist debtor it also increases the burden of taxation inasmuch as the agriculturist has to sell more produce for paying his debt or his taxes. As against the increase of burden of debt, as against the creditor, the legislature has already provided an effective remedy because the chief asset of the agriculturist debtor, that is, land is safe from the creditor under section 16 of the Land Alienation Act. But he has no such relief against taxation. Therefore if the fall in prices has at all increased the burden of debt on the owner of land, so has it increased the burden of taxation. There is no remedy against taxation, inasmuch as under section 16 (2) the land of a member of an agricultural tribe is liable to be sold in realisation of arrears of land revenue. Therefore before any further relief is proposed, against the creditor, it is but fair that Government should afford a similar measure of relief against increased burden of taxation.

I would further point out that as far as the creditor is concerned he has been hit much more by the fall in prices than any individual debtor. As a result of the fall in prices and in view of the depression many of his debtors have gone into insolvency and half of his assets are thus entirely wiped out. If he has lent money to ten persons, five would go into insolvency and he will not be able to recover anything from them and thus half of his assets are wiped out. How far is it fair in the circumstances to ask a person who has already suffered by a fall in prices by asking him to scale down his debts even in the case of persons who can pay but will not pay?

I submit, that if the Government is in earnest in giving relief, I would make the following suggestions. I do not say that they are necessarily the most effective remedies, but they are the ones that have suggested themselves to me and I place them before the House for what they are worth—

- (i) Currency depreciation ;
- (ii) making a substantial remission in taxation ;
- (iii) removing unemployment by an intensive industrialisation of the country and by undertaking productive schemes of capital expenditure ;
- (iv) repealing or in any case substantially modifying the Punjab Land Alienation Act, which would have the effect of increasing the value of assets of zamindars and enable Government to supply cheap credit to zamindars by creating mortgage banks.

These are the suggestions and all or any of them may be tried.

This Bill has been circulated for opinion, and the House must have noticed that there is a sharp cleavage of opinion and mostly on communal lines, as has been pointed out by Mr. Stainton, I.C.S., Deputy Commissioner of Dera Ghazi Khan. Hindus are against the Bill. Opinion amongst Muslims is divided ; some are against it and some in favour. (An honourable member :

(Not all Hindus are against it.) Since my learned friend has interrupted me, may I just refer to the opinion of a Hindu gentleman of the class to which my learned friend belongs, who is a statutory agriculturist like the interruptor but who is able to take a fair and equitable view of the proposed Bill. I refer to the opinion of Rai Bahadur Diwan Chand Saini, the leader of Gurdaspur Bar, Vice-Chairman of the District Board of Gurdaspur and a leader of the Sainis of the Punjab. He says that he is a member of an agricultural tribe and feels full sense of responsibility in giving his opinion on the Bill. He says that the Bill "will work as an engine of oppression" and is not only most unjust and injurious to the creditors but "that it will really benefit the unscrupulous debtor generally and will ultimately ruin the agriculturists directly, and indirectly harm the Government materially." He is wholly opposed to the Bill. I was pointing out before I was interrupted that fortunately or unfortunately the trend of opinions for and against the Bill has taken a communal turn. But let it be said to the credit of some of the official members of the Indian Civil Service that they have not allowed their sense of fair play in any way to be affected even by their natural desire to support official policy or an official measure. I may refer in this connection to the opinion of Mr. Ormerod, District and Sessions Judge of Ambala. He says that the Bill "embodies neither sense, policy nor justice. It is intrinsically unworkable, morally iniquitous and juristically an outrage." Again I draw the attention of the House to the opinion of another illustrious member of the Indian Civil Service, Mr. King, Deputy Commissioner of Rawalpindi, with whose opinion I entirely agree and which I commend seriously to the attention of Government. I will just read a brief extract from his opinion. He says—

To my mind the great fault of the Bill lies in the fact that it does not assume the appearance of an emergency measure but rather that of an unfortunate experiment in party legislation, the effect of which will be permanently to depress the scale of justice in favour of the agriculturist at the expense of the shukar. There are few historical precedents for such legislation. One is reminded of Solon's Seisachtheia in the first decade of the sixth Century B. C., but it is to be remembered that in that case the legislator was himself an influential member of the mercantile class, whose interests were chiefly prejudiced while in the present case the Bill is being introduced by a foreign bureaucracy which has hardly enjoyed the confidence of the mercantile classes since the days of the Punjab Land Alienation Act.

Personally I have no doubt that the political effect of such a Bill would be permanently to antagonise the whole of the trading classes in the Punjab, and to throw them into the ranks of Congress or any similar subversive organisation.

Even assuming that Government is obliged to choose the lesser of two evils, and finds itself compelled to alienate the sympathies of the mercantile class with a view to lightening the overwhelming burden of the zamindar the method by which the relief is proposed to be given seems to me entirely wrong.

Again, in this connection the House should take note of the opinion of perhaps one of the ablest members of the Indian Civil Service—I refer to the opinion of Mr. E. P. Moon, I.C.S., Deputy Commissioner, Multan. He has given a detailed criticism of the measure and he finds that the Bill in its present form is vitiated by an inner contradiction, inasmuch as while aiming at reducing rates of interest, it attempts to impede recovery. He recommends that measures to facilitate recovery should be introduced. He is opposed to even experimenting with boards, which so far from conciliating are likely to lead to protraction of litigation, to a fresh outcrop of tricks and stratagems to delay payment and defeat justice and to a not inconsiderable waste of time and money. So, I submit that in view of the opinions of these gentlemen who have no axe to grind, but who have got the courage of their convictions, there is no reason why this legislation should not be laid aside for a time at least. It has been suggested in some quarters that this debate has been staged at Simla with a view to demonstrate to the minority community. "This is a sample of what you are going to get under provincial autonomy." Sir, I wish to bring this aspect of the question to the serious attention of honourable members sitting on the opposite Benches. I earnestly request them to approach this problem with a sense of fairness and justice and not insist upon having a thing because they are in a majority and they can dictate their wishes. Sir, I oppose this measure and its reference to select committee.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural): The Bill has been before the public for the last three months and no Bill at least during the life of the present Council has been so widely commented upon both in the Press and on the platform as this measure. The number of opinions received from the various religious, social and political bodies, from the various executive and judicial officers and from the private luminaries shows the keen interest which the public has taken in studying this Bill. I would suggest to the honourable members of Government to bring forward such a measure off and on to rouse the people from their deep slumber and to create some sort of interest and sensation in life which is otherwise growing more or less monotonous.

Almost all critics of the Bill grant that there is a real necessity for such a measure in order to save the people from sinking into the depths of poverty on account of the unprecedented economic depression. They differ only in matters of detail for which the stage has not yet been reached. Some critics say that it is very unjust to apply the Bill only to the agriculturists. Their logic I fail to understand. To-morrow they may say, "Why has the Government of India been spending lakhs of rupees for the province of Behar and Orissa and has not spent a single pie for the province of the Punjab?" The reason is that the province of Behar and Orissa has suffered from an unprecedented earthquake which had devastated and ruined the people, their houses and public buildings and public roads. A contingency has arisen in that province which has not arisen in the 11 A.M.

Punjab and that is the reason why that amount of money has been spent in that province. Another critic may say why has the Punjab Government spent so much money in the Rohtak district and not spent a single pie in the district of my learned friend from Lahore? The reason is simple and it is that that district has suffered from unprecedented flood which is not the state of affairs in the Lahore district. I therefore come to the conclusion that a cure is only needed where there is a disease. Nobody is expected to perform an operation on a healthy part of the body. Operation is always performed on the diseased part of the body, and not in its healthy parts. Continuing the same argument, it is the agriculturist and the agriculturist alone who is sinking day by day to the depth of poverty with such a speed with which even imagination cannot keep pace. The debt of the agriculturist up to the date of the Report of the Indebtedness Committee has swelled up to 135 crores and is increasing day by day by leaps and bounds. So it is in order to save such class of people that a remedy is necessary. I am aggrieved to remark that in criticising this Bill these gentlemen forget even their own interests. They must know that the agriculturist is the backbone of the structure and if he ceases to take interest in life everything will go in disorder and chaos. If the agriculturist is ruined, the sahukar will be ruined, the shopkeeper will be ruined, the arti will be ruined; the factories, firms and companies will be ruined; the lawyers, the doctors and other professional men will be ruined and in the end the country itself will be ruined. So, it is the interest of the sahukar to keep alive the agriculturist. It is as much the interest of the sahukar to keep alive the agriculturist as it is the interest of the lion to keep alive the goat, as it is the interest of the wolf to keep alive the lamb, and as it is the interest of the hawk to keep alive the partridge, because it is the agriculturist on whose flesh and bone, the sahukar has got to live. In killing the agriculturist the sahukar strikes an axe on his own roots. Therefore it is essential that he should support every measure which is intended to ameliorate the position of the agriculturist. Another objection which some critics bring forward is that the Bill will impair credit. That is what we exactly want. Unless we limit his credit, unless we limit his borrowing capacity, we cannot save that gentleman who is known as the agriculturist. "The credit holds up the landowner," in the words of Mr. Calvert, "as the rope holds up the hanged man." The zamindar will be ready to mortgage even the paradise if he can lay his hand upon it. He is ready to spend as he has credit. As he has credit he spends money on ceremonies, on marriage and funerals; as he has credit he is ready to run an election for which he may be totally unfit on account of his personal qualifications; as he has credit and he can spend money he is ready to spend it ruthlessly on eating, drinking and merry-making. So, it is his credit that we want to limit and unless we do that we cannot save him and this Bill limits that credit. We cannot do it unless we pass this Bill. It is on account of us that you are to-day rolling in wealth and if we die out, I do not think you will find anybody else to keep you sufficiently busy. This reminds me of a misra—

کر ہم نہ ہوں تو ناز نہ ہمارے اٹھائے کروں

It is on account of us that you are doing all these things.

As to the Bill itself, there are only three parts which are very contentious, Parts 3, 5 and 6. Part III relates to the provisions of the Usurious Loans Act. The provisions of the Usurious Loans Act have been a dead letter so far on account of two reasons. The first is that the courts were given discretion. They were not bound to act under that Act and therefore they did not want to worry themselves much while sitting under the cool pankhas and electric fans. They thought, why bother about these things and go into the question whether the debtor has capacity to pay or not. The second reason is that no definition has been given so far as to what is or what is not "an excessive interest," and this is why the Act has been a dead letter. History has proved that the lowering of the rate of interest always helps in developing industry, commerce, trade and agriculture. Even in England it was realised that the rate of interest should not exceed half the rate of profit on trade. While speaking on this part of the measure about the restrictions of contracts and upon fixing the rates of interest, we must take into consideration three elements. The first is the nature of an ordinary agricultural debtor. The ordinary agricultural debtor or an agriculturist or a zamindar is generous, hospitable, brave and credulous and at the same time simple, ignorant, inexperienced and extravagant. That is the first condition which we have to bear in mind. Then No. 2 is that the rate of interest levied on sums borrowed in this province varies from $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. to 100 per cent. and decrees are passed to the extent of 200 times the actual amount. No. 3 is the existence of a system of compound interest in this province. By simple arithmetical calculation we will know that a loan advanced under the present law, at compound interest and kadda as it is called, will double itself within three years. A sum of Re. 1 will swell to the extent of Rs. 6,71,000 in 78 years. This is the result of compound interest under which people are suffering. An argument might be brought forward as has been brought forward by the learned Sessions Judge of Ambala that it is the elementary principle of contract that mere unfairness of a contract between the parties should not lead the courts to interfere. Freedom of contract is a good thing but humanity and sense of proportion also must have weight. The principle is right but we should study the special conditions. Intelligent governments have always interfered when certain things go beyond their limits. Supposing plague breaks out in a certain town, Government at once stops the stocking of cotton in that locality. Nobody is allowed to enter into a contract which is against public policy. A contract that in a duel between two if one dies no action should be taken against the other is wrong. If there is a contract which tries to destroy the society and which is against public safety and public law, there is no reason why Government should not rise to the occasion and interfere. They must now limit this rate of interest and save our civil death which this rate of interest leads to. I say that the rate of interest given even under these provisions is still high. It must be still lower. In deciding these questions we have to see and study all these criterion. The first is, what is the rate of interest? If we study the rates of interest in other investments we will be convinced at once that the rate indicated in the Bill is too high. The rate of interest on Government's loan is $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. First class banks give at 4 per cent. and second class banks from 4 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Companies and other private firms give at 6 per cent. which is the highest limit. When the interest on other investments is so low as this, what is the reason that on these sums which are advanced to agriculturists the rate should be so high. I will go to part VI which deals with the rule of damdapat, i.e. the interest should not exceed the original amount. This rule, the rule of damdapat has been invariably accepted by Manu and all his commentators and is endorsed by the rishis and all have agreed that this is a sound rule. This is still in existence in the province of Bombay, as a special custom, on the original side of the Calcutta High Court, in all the states of Rajputana and in the districts of Ajmere and some other places. The rule was enforced in the Hindu period as well as in the Muslim period. It is after the constitution of the British courts that it was stopped. This has a brief history which I will not be irrelevant to mention here. In 1855 an Act known as the Usury Laws Repeal Act was passed in this country. That measure abolished all restrictions of contracts between parties so far as the fixing of the rate of interest on money was concerned. This Act was just, I should say, a copy of a measure passed in England in 1854. Before that in the times of Henry VIII the rate of interest was fixed at ten per cent., as the profit on trade was counted as 20 per cent. then in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and James I it was reduced from 10 to 8 per cent., then during the Commonwealth period it was reduced from 8 to 6 per cent. and then in the reign of Queen Anne it was reduced to 5 per cent. It was realized in that country that unless there was a limit to the rate of interest and unless there was some check on the swelling of debts they could not make a profit. What was the result? The result was that colonies spread everywhere, trade and commerce increased and industries sprang up in the country. In the same way, taking that thing in view the Indian legislature passed this Act. But the difference was a marked one. The condition of the society there was as different from the condition of the society in India as the cold and shivering temperature of England is to the hot and burning temperature of India. People there knew and had developed a bargaining sense, they knew what contracts were to their advantage and what contracts were to their disadvantage, but the people here are inexperienced, simple, uneducated and do not know these things. The debtor here was needy, helpless, ignorant and illiterate while the creditor here was greedy, powerful and crafty. The conditions of England did not prevail in this country and I will say at once that it was a sort of mistake to pass this Act. Abolishing the freedom of parties in matters of interest in money. So to say. The rule of damdapat being ancient, well known, definite and reasonable and not against public policy, morality, justice, equity and good conscience must be enforced in this province, otherwise there is no hope of these people living for a single day.

Now I come to the third point, that is, Chapter VI which relates to arrest. I should say at the very outset that attachment and arrest in these days are not effective remedies for the realization of debts. I have known people of a high position going to jail without hesitation. I have known a pensioned tahsildar going to jail because he could not pay his debt and he wanted to turn that jail into a first class restaurant because he said that he takes his tea in silver cups, wants silken quilts and very valuable lungia and tilladar shoes. He did not feel any disgrace. I have known another gentleman an honorary magistrate with ten thousand acres of land going to jail for a debt of Rs. 2,500. I am afraid I am supporting my friend in talking like this that though men could pay they went to jail, but I am talking of the attitude of these people. He went to jail and was there for three months in spite of the fact that he was a big landlord and he did not care a fig for his disgrace and he welcomed the jail. What I want to conclude from these examples is this that the arrest and attachment are not effective remedies. Therefore we should increase the re-paying capacity of the people so that they may not go to the insolvency courts and may refrain from being declared insolvents and that can only be done if we enforce the provisions of this Bill, and if we apply the rule of damdapat and if we apply the provisions of the Usurious Loans Act. Now, Sir, my learned friend has quoted from the opinion of a member of the Indian Civil Service and I will do the same and will quote the opinion of Mr. Innes who has been Registrar of the High

[Ch. Riasat Ali.]

Court and has been more in touch with the judicial branch than any other person. What he says is this :—

It is well-known that the money-lender is not usually anxious to recover the amount owing to him in the early stages of the debt and is only too glad to allow the interest to accumulate. It is just before the limitation is due to expire that he usually approaches his client and suggests, without pressing for payment that he should simply execute a fresh document in acknowledgment of the debt. The agriculturist sees in this his opportunity to defer the evil day of payment and usually agrees with the result that interest is included in the principal and a fresh document is executed. This process may go on for a number of years and the original amount advanced as principal may swell to a very high figure owing to the inclusion of various accumulations of interest.

This is the way, he says, in which these interests are accumulated. Again he says :—

The Bill is inadequate and insufficient to meet the necessities of the time.

I need quote no more, it will take time. One or two things about the fact which Mr. Puri has just now referred to. He says that the decrees have remained unpaid on account of the reason that judgment debtors have evaded payment. I can assure him by all that I have said that this is not the reason. The reason why decrees remain unpaid is that the judgment debtor is unable to pay. If, therefore, you pass this Bill into an Act, if these provisions work for a certain number of years, you will find that the paying capacity of the zamindars will increase, fewer people will go to the insolvency courts and his hopes will be realized and these debts will be paid at least by half if not in full. Another thing which he has said is that he has suggested certain remedies to Government to apply. I will only make this answer that the Government is suffering from the same disease from which we are suffering. I mean that in these days they have not sufficient funds to spend on new enterprises, new departments and on creation of industrial concerns. All these remedies demand further expenditure and are impracticable and I do not see he is right in saying that these are good remedies at the present time. Of course they are remedies, but they are remedies not in lieu of this Bill but in addition to this Bill. If those days come back when the Government can afford to spend money I would welcome them and I would myself request the Government to apply these remedies, but it is not practicable at present. He has referred to the opinion of the Sessions Judge of Ambala. That goes in my favour. It is on account of these expressions of opinion that there is a necessity of passing such a measure. This is the sympathy, this is the mentality of the judicial officers. They call our class "the privileged class" and the gentleman says, I will quote only two lines :—

The proposal to create a privileged class of the community is in itself iniquitous enough as has been observed above, but the proposal to extend the provisions of the Act even to the servants of the privileged community strikes me as even more iniquitous still.

This mentality and this lack of sympathy on the part of our judicial officers is still more the reason why we should make certain provisions in the Bill itself so that they may have no discretion to go beyond it, if we want to save the zamindars and if we want to save them from sinking into this sea of debt the Bill must be passed. I have said that the Bill in my humble estimation does not go as far as it ought to, it is insufficient and inadequate, but I am satisfied only in accordance with the well-known proverb that something is better than nothing, and we may hope that more will be done. We should proceed with this Bill like practical men and when we get this passed we can bring in amending Bills and in the next constitution when there would be a larger scope for going into the needs and wants of the elected members as they will be the representatives of the people, we will then have a greater occasion for having a Bill which is more sufficient for our needs. With these words I support this motion.

Mr. Manohar Lal (Punjab University): Sir, never have we in the Punjab Legislative Council been engaged on a measure of more far reaching importance, nor one where differences of opinion are more acute and the heat and bitterness of controversy more intense. And that is not surprising. For inspite of the advice of the poet "neither a borrower nor a lender be", the whole world is divided into two classes, the borrowers and the lenders; and whether it be under the impelling stress of economic motive—for producers everywhere must borrow—or for personal or private improvidence or because of the force of particular circumstances we are driven into being borrowers. The present controversy, it is no matter of surprise, has caused much passionate feeling. The representatives of both classes have expressed themselves at once with vehement indignation and intensity of feeling, because of the nature of the problem and the issues involved. Even high placed officials, so far as questions of justice, propriety and workability are concerned, have felt impelled to express themselves emphatically sometime it may be even in intemperate language. But harsh language furnishes no arguments. The District Judge of Ambala has expressed himself with what one might call undue energy of language but he has also deserved our thanks for the trouble he has taken in making a detailed investigation of some of the defects of the proposed legislation. If I may come at once to the question at issue, I may say that the critics of this measure do not seem to attach enough importance to the one fundamental and vital fact, and that is the great weight of debt under which the agriculturists in this province are at present suffering. It is calculated that in the year 1929, the agricultural debt stood at the stupendous figure of 185 crores and not long anterior to that date it was only 90 crores. The debt during a short period had increased by more than 50 per cent. The further fact that we cannot exclude from view is that the burden of this debt has increased tremendously in recent years. This is the imperious fact which we must face, and it is no use blaming the Government on its policy when, with whatever weakness, it makes an effort to face a situation of that magnitude. That, Sir, is a big fact that we have to take note of, the great debt and the increasing weight of that debt on shoulders no longer capable of bearing it (hear, hear). That is a fact. The other consideration is a dominant principle which governments must bear in view, and which I trust and I make no doubt, the Punjab Government is bearing in view, that nothing should be done to shake the basis of rural credit, because if that were done, we would not be helping the very class which we are most anxious to help.

Those are the two outstanding, all important and controlling considerations which we have to keep in view. In the few minutes that I shall take I propose not to address myself to any of the minor details which this Bill incorporates. No one claims, certainly the Finance Member has never claimed, that the Bill in the form in which it stands is anywhere near perfect

[Mr. Manohar Lal.]

This is a matter that the select committee can take care of and the House can do further amending thereafter. As I said the agriculturist has not only this big debt of Rs. 135 crores to bear but it might also be worth while remembering that next to Madras this is the biggest agricultural debt that exists in any province in India. We do not know the exact causes why the debt should be heavier in the Punjab than elsewhere. For instance, in the neighbouring province, the United Provinces, it stood at somewhere near Rs. 120 crores. The fact is that not only is this debt there, not only are agricultural prices falling but we are in the grip also of what is sometimes described as an agricultural crisis. It is not a crisis in the sense that something has come rapidly and is going to wear off with equal quickness. No. The more correct way of describing would be a prolonged agricultural depression. Not only is it a prolonged agricultural depression, but we are living at a time when this depression happens to be universal and when the causes that have created this position of depression are also of a character that do not give any promise of disappearing in any short interval. I am reading a very short passage—indeed it can hardly be called a passage, a bare line—from a work of very high authority, i.e., the report on agricultural depression produced under the League of Nations, and there the reason for this prolonged agricultural depression is set forth in these terms. "Agricultural prices are low in comparison with the expenditure which the farmer has to meet." This disproportion between the income and expenditure of agricultural undertakings is the dominant and decisive element of the prevailing depression, and most of the experts predict that this is going to be of long duration. It consists in the universal disturbance of the balance between production and consumption. It is a fact not quite realised by us but which is of great importance to the people of this province that while the forces of production have been practically revolutionised, especially on the technical side, consumption has not advanced in the same way, and this is particularly true of wheat. This may not be known or not sufficiently familiar to the members of this House, to the agriculturist members in particular, that the Germans have invented a special term for the present position as regards wheat consumption. They in their own cumbersome way called it "the structural aversion from the use of bread." The fundamental part played by bread as an article of food has decreased. In the United States what has happened is that between 1916 to 1928 while the population went up by 20 per cent. the consumption of wheat increased only by 5 per cent. The position as regards consumption on the one side and production on the other is so certain and well-marked that the economists entertain no doubt on the subject. While economics to-day speak with no certain voice, there is felt no doubt whatever that the price of wheat is not likely to increase to any considerable extent in any near future. In fact the economists' predictions are perfectly clear and all in one direction. In the Punjab we all know, it has been told us many times in this Chamber, that the prices of wheat and cotton, two of our staple agricultural commodities have substantially fallen during recent years, one by about 64 per cent. and the other by about 60 per cent. While the prices have fallen, it is a consideration of the highest importance which we ought to bear the whole time in view, that re-adjustments of expenditure on the part of the agriculturist are possible only to a much smaller extent. His prices fall and his expenditure is comparatively inelastic. If that be so, if he cannot cut his expenditure down in the same measure as the prices decline we see easily that his position is worsening day by day. And in this regard I would call your attention particularly to a most instructive publication produced by the Board of Economic Enquiry of the Punjab, namely the Farm Accounts of past four or five years. If you will study these farm accounts you will be confronted with the most startling fact. I will give you the position of a farm of about 28 acres situated about 12 miles from Lyallpur, this farm may in this regard be taken as a kind of sample because the changes that you need make as regards figures for other farms would be inconsiderable. The expenditure of the agriculturist may be summarized thus. He has to pay to the Government in land revenue and abiana something like 40 per cent. of his total expenditure. His expenses on the upkeep of bullocks is about 36 per cent., his expense on seeds is about 6 per cent. Then there is expenditure something on hired labour which varies, call it about 10 per cent. The rest is represented by implements and similar items. You will note that we have only to look at this analysis to realise what large percentage of the total expenditure is taken away by our honourable friend, the Finance Member—40 per cent. of the total expenditure,—and that the agriculturist is working so far as regards his expenditure under conditions, if not of absolute rigidity, of comparatively stern inelasticity. Whatever the remissions may be which the Punjab Government have made in recent years to afford a certain amount of relief in years of acute distress to the agriculturist, they are nothing compared with the total proportion of his expenditure on this one item, viz., land revenue and abiana. The relief cannot be much, however welcome that little relief may be. The agriculturist therefore is in this pitiable position that while his prices have been falling and the load of his debt remains constant, nay steadily increases, his expenditure is of an inelastic and comparatively rigid nature. So, given these broad facts, and given the large agricultural population of this province, on which it requires no great reasoning to see that the prosperity of this province, in fact its very existence, depends, I think no Government can be blamed when it puts forward a measure seeking to afford a certain degree of relief for the agriculturist's indebtedness. The question still remains whether the measure proposed is an appropriate one, whether it gives the necessary amount of relief, whether in the effort to give relief it does not affect seriously the very foundations of rural credit so essential for village economy and whether it touches improperly the fundamental principles of justice and propriety. These questions or some of them are in one sense questions of higher jurisprudence and in another sense questions of details with which the Bill is concerned in giving effect to the dominating idea of affording relief to a particular deserving class. Another consideration, at any rate with me, is of paramount importance and that is this. Here is this debt of Rs. 135 crores. Many of the protagonists of those who represent the lending side say and are pathetically conscious of the position, that they have no expectation that this debt will ever get paid off. They do not expect it. If that be so, is it not the dictate of wisdom that we should adopt some method by which something can be realised. What strikes me, and what is so clearly expressed in that most eminently sane opinion of Mr. Moon that we have before us, is that we must face the necessity of assuring payment of debts. Mr. Moon has used no really harsh words when he insisted on certain fundamental provisions that a piece of legislation such as this must embody. I do not think there is any getting over this that when you are making an effort to reduce the rate of interest, when you are making an effort to reduce the amount that may be due from the borrower you must also see that recovery is made more easy and payment is better assured. Whatever my honourable friends on the other side could call in question in that statement of view, I think Mr. Moon cannot be criticised when he says that if this Bill has implicit in it on one side a reduction of the rate of interest and the amounts due and on the other directly or indirectly it gives no assurance of payments, in fact makes payment more difficult, it has an inherent contradiction. And I trust, as one who is in general sympathy with the principle underlying this Bill, that steps will be taken either in the select committee or in this House that recovery shall not be impeded and payments shall be assured.

The second thing that strikes one is this and here we have the authority of investigations made by officers like Mr. Darling, than whom it would be difficult to find any officer in the Indian Civil Service with a larger measure of sympathy for our agriculturists. It is no use entering upon measures of agricultural relief for indebtedness or otherwise unless we address ourselves at the same time in some measure to the causes which have given rise to this indebtedness. You will remember, and surely this House remembers because we have it in a public document, that the greatest importance was attached by Mr. Darling to the many causes that have given rise to these debts in the first instance and have caused a rapid increase in them in more recent years. Among the more permanent causes he mentions the smallness of holdings and the way in which they are split, the heavy losses that occur to the agriculturist from the death of cattle, and his improvidence. Further factors are expansion of credit on the one side, and the opportunities to borrow on the other. As to more recent years, Mr. Darling has referred to what may be called the pet Calvert-Darling theory. These debts arise from increased prosperity among agriculturists. The steps are prosperity, desire to spend, facility in borrowing, money forthcoming, the agriculturist himself prospering and anxious to invest and the debts increasing.

A very important fact that has been brought out in the Punjab Banking Inquiry Committee and which we should bear in mind is this that about the time the Report was being written (in 1930) the number of agriculturist money-lenders was no less than 19,000, and you will find it laid down in that report that not only is the number so large, very nearly half the number of money-lenders who are non-agriculturists, but also a major part of the secured mortgage debt of the agriculturist is in the hands of these agriculturist money-lenders. That is a reflection, Sir, which I wish all would bear in mind, Government, people like me who think independently on this side and my friends opposite, that to forge out schemes of relief for agriculturists, we do not take any step which may unjustly hit or strike at the non-agriculturist money-lenders, because it is likely to have much larger and wider repercussions that one may imagine. To two or three more facts I shall, with your permission, draw the attention of this House. One is this, a great deal is said about the rates of interest prevailing in this province. The agriculturist it is said, is simply groaning under not only the burden of his deb but the heaviness of the interest which he has to pay. That is not the opinion of Mr. Darling and his Inquiry Committee. Mr. Darling—if you study carefully the Banking Inquiry Committee Report—brings out very carefully that where security is good the rate of interest is not much—it is between 6 and 9 per cent.,—where security is second class the rate of interest is between 9 and 12 per cent., and where so security exists it is difficult to speak of the height to which it may rise. That is perfectly obvious. Money-lending is not pure money-lending, it is not handing over a number of shining notes across the counter of the Imperial Bank of India. Nothing of the kind. It is one of the most risky, troublesome and unpleasant trades. Where you have no security, and the trade is difficult, as operations are in the main on a small scale, there is the greatest possible difficulty in recovering debts. I do not want to go into details, but it is perfectly plain and one is not surprised that the rates then should be high. I will just read half a line from the Punjab Banking Inquiry Committee's Report at page 38—

In the circumstances, though the rates in this country press heavily upon the cultivator, the customary rate of 18½ per cent. (paisa rupia) for small loans can hardly be regarded as usurious—so far as it is honourably applied.

Mr. Darling has called attention to rates of interest that prevail in such rich countries as the United States of America. The rate of interest then is the result of a combination of many factors most important of which are the risk and trouble in a business of that character, and therefore my friends opposite should remember, since they are as much in the class of money-lenders as any of us on this side might be, that in this country, given the type of security, hasty statements about the rates of interest being usurious or applying other opprobrious terms, to these rates is not the best way of seeking the solution of a matter of this difficulty. Sir, those of us who have read with care Mr. Darling's report have also come across another fact of the greatest possible importance, viz., that the sahukar class, the money-lending class, the non-agriculturist money-lending class is not in a happy position. He is reducing his business; the law's delays and the failure of execution put a premium on default and favour the bad borrower. They are moving from the village to the town. There is no great anxiety on the part of this class necessarily to remain as members of a village economy where their life is not too easy and where unnecessary suspicions are cast on his procedure and hard words used about what he does. That is a sad thing. An indispensable element in rural life is tending to disappear; widespread distress is the likely consequence unless the whole fabric of rural economy is differently fashioned. It is a matter requiring the serious attention of Government, that in the building up of our rural economy a process of slow social adjustment, of even slower economic adjustment nothing is introduced which may have any catastrophic effect at a time when already the money lender is a suffering person. These, if I may say so, are some of the principles which we shall have to bear in mind when we are making a rightful, proper, imperatively necessary effort to give relief to our agriculturist friends.

Sir, two words more before I have done, and that by way of a summary. The principles then which we must bear in mind, and if we put them away even for a moment we shall suffer heavily, are these. Rural credit must not be impaired because if you do so you will not help the agriculturist. In effecting reductions and settlements payments must be secured, otherwise no language will be too hard to characterise our legislation as being inherently contradictory, and otherwise open to many of the objections which have been formulated in strong language by the District Judge of Ambala and other critics.

Another principle that we must bear in mind is that a distinction must be drawn between large and small proprietors. That is absolutely essential. It can never be the policy of Government, it should never be the policy of any Government, and if it were so Government would stand irretrievably condemned, that in trying to help the peasant who is hard hit and who cannot bear the burden of debt, relief is being given to my agricultural friend there who gets a fat salary in addition to the thousands of acres of land which he owns. The peasant proprietor and the tenant deserve all our sympathy, but here we are not to legislate for the big landlord who lives like a prince and who so easily attains to a nawabhood nor for the big sardar who has thousands and thousands of acres of land and lives a life of luxury with his fleet of motor cars and his palaces and country houses. Nor must we forget—and this is important—that relief of indebtedness barely touches the fringe of the problem of farm relief. Our friend the Honourable Member for Finance referred to one or two countries where something has been done in this regard. Nothing is more interesting to a student of economics than to study the manner in which during the past eight or ten years in the course of the great upheaval caused by the War various countries of Europe and elsewhere have tried to evolve schemes of agricultural reform. In Bulgaria and other countries, for the extinction of debt Government has undertaken to pay large instalments, pay settled amounts by regulated instalments, and has undertaken other and larger measures of relief—not like in India where the Government of India has merely done some propaganda to restrict jute production, or like Government in the Punjab tinkering with the idea of relief by giving microscopic remissions. This is not the way in which Europe at the present time, and other advanced countries have tried to formulate policies of agricultural relief. And, even as I submitted before, the most important thing is that the Government must take steps to help the agriculturist in cutting down his expenditure, and a Government that takes away 40 per cent. of the amount that the agriculturist spends has a direct duty in this matter.

Calculations have been made by our co-operative societies that during the past two or three years 13 to 14 per cent. of the borrowings from the co-operative societies are on account of the payment of land revenue. Shall I be far wrong in saying that borrowings at any rate to a similar extent from the ordinary money-lender have also been on account of Government land revenue? And if that be so, is not the Government directly responsible for much of the debt under which the agriculturist is groaning at the present time? Is not the money taken from the co-operative societies or from the money lender merely to fill the coffers of our friend the Honourable Member for Revenue? The responsibility of Government is great, but the responsibility shall not be discharged unless and until they carefully overhaul their whole system of taxation, particularly of land taxation. If the factors to which I have referred, and I have emphasized only those to which confident reference is possible, are of a more or less permanent nature, affecting the economic position of our agriculturists then so far as I can see, any Government that does not promise promptly to take into hand a permanent system of reform in its land taxation affording real relief to the agriculturist shall not achieve any measures of real relief within the four corners of the legislation contemplated now. My friends on the opposite side say that this measure does not go far enough. I join hands with them. It does not; the proposed legislation by itself affords no real solution. All who have genuine sympathy with the agriculturists feel this; they are in distress and must have real relief. The Government ought to devise schemes of betterment for their relief. The present measure will bring at best some temporary relief. And, if it shakes rural credit the intended relief might be worse than the disease it provides against. These, Sir, are some of the principles of agricultural reform.

One word with regard to the principle of damdupat. I do not wish to address the House at length on this but that principle is often misunderstood. It is a principle of Hindu law that applies between a Hindu debtor and a Hindu creditor and is based on the reason that there is no law of limitation among the Hindus. And then it means only this, that at no one time can you get more than the amount of the principal itself by way of interest. And it does not say: if a money-lender has received Rs. 200 as interest at one time, Rs. 300 as interest at another time and Rs. 400 on still another occasion, and then is driven to make a claim he has to account for the amounts he has previously received by way of interest, he can still claim full interest equal to the principal; it also admits, if that a person has advanced a thousand rupees and is going to settle accounts with his debtor on a particular date he may capitalise the interest with that amount. Nothing will be gained by referring the Hindu principle of damdupat as such, though of course we may make such legislative provisions as we may desire.

My last word is simply addressed to my friends the agriculturists on the other side with whom I have the utmost sympathy. In considering this measure let them pause and think. Let them be just to the money-lenders though they themselves have started in the race of lending only a short while ago. I am sure that if they bear this reflection in view, sitting down together round a select committee or again in this House, we should be able to forge a piece of legislation that should be acceptable to us all. (Cheers).

Sardar Sahib Sardar Ujjal Singh (Sikh Urban): Sir, opinion in this country is no doubt sharply divided on the merits of the Bill. One class calls it a revolutionary measure and reads in it an attempt to declare a wholesale moratorium of the debts due to the money-lenders. This class also thinks that if the Bill is passed into an Act it will widen the gulf between the agriculturists and the non-agriculturists and that it will restrict the credit of the agriculturist borrower which will in the long run be detrimental to his own interest. The other class thinks that the Bill is a half-hearted measure to provide relief to the agriculturist who is groaning under the weight of a very heavy debt; and that in spite of the fact that the debt has reached a limit much beyond the capacity of the agriculturist the money-lender continues to have his pound of flesh. I think there is a good deal of misunderstanding about the provisions of the Bill. The position as has already been stated by Mr. Manohar Lal is this, the agriculturist debt which stood at a very high figure of 135 crores in 1929 is estimated to be about 200 crores to-day; and with the catastrophic fall in prices that debt measured in terms of produce amounts to nearly 400 crores. Even calculating at a moderate rate of 12 per cent. interest the annual interest on the 200 crores amounts to 24 crores of rupees, whereas the annual agricultural income available for debt services is estimated to be about 5 crores. Under these circumstances the agriculturist is hardly able even to meet a fraction of the interest due on his debts. He has lost all heart in his work and cannot take any interest in agriculture because whatever he earns must go to meet his liabilities. Besides, he sees no sign even in the distant future of his debt being reduced by a fraction. At the same time the money-lender also finds that his capital is locked up. He is unwilling to make fresh advances until he is able to recover part of his previous loan. Thus a state of deadlock has been created in the system of rural credit. Unless something is done drastically to relieve the present situation the consequences are bound to be grave. Mr. Puri dealt at length on the privileges enjoyed by the agricultural classes and based his opposition to the Bill mainly on those grounds. I agree with him that in no other country and probably in no other province in this country the agricultural classes are so better treated and enjoy so great privileges as they do in this province. But how does this help us to meet the present situation? As a matter of fact a practical moratorium exists and it is as much in the interests of the money-lender as of the agriculturist borrower that something should be done to ease the present situation. The Bill is an honest attempt to find a way out of the existing impasse. The money-lender is an indispensable feature of Indian rural economy. As has been stated in the Banking Enquiries Committee's Report, he is easily accessible, his methods of business are simple and elastic. No one ought to have any objection to the existence of money-lenders in the village. He is certainly an essential part of village life. But unfortunately some money-lenders have resorted to unfair means in their dealings; and it is mostly on account of this that the agricultural borrower finds himself in his present sad plight. If we were to study dispassionately the provisions of the Bill we will find that there is nothing revolutionary in this measure (hear, hear) which will upset the rural credit. There are three parts in the Bill, one of which deals with insolvency procedure, another with the rate of interest. Now the part which deals with the insolvency procedure only reduces the limit of the debt and enhances the limit of the property; so that, debtor whose debt exceeds Rs. 250 and whose property does not exceed Rs. 1,000 should be able to derive the benefit of the simplified insolvency procedure. No one to my knowledge has raised any objection to this part of the Bill with the exception perhaps of the District Judge, Jullundur, who thinks that if the agriculturist is encouraged to go to insolvency court he will lose his morality. He bases it on the ground that an agriculturist has a great deal of self-respect in him and if you encourage him to go frequently to insolvency courts he will be demoralised and as 70 per cent. of the population comes from that class the whole population will be demoralised. There may be some truth in it. An agriculturist no doubt cares more about his self-respect than anything.

else. But when he has nothing to pay and when he is harassed by the money-lender he has no option but to go to an insolvency court. This provision is therefore a very valuable one. But in order that the agriculturists may derive greater benefit from it, some special insolvency courts or insolvency judges should be created. The third part fixes the rate of interest which might be termed as excessive. I do not wish to go into the question whether the rate of interest fixed is fair or not. But I would only like to say something on the principle. The money-lender undoubtedly charges a very heavy rate of interest. The rate varies from 18 per cent. to 75 per cent. per annum and in some cases the money-lender insists upon the full payment at the rate of 75 per cent. The agricultural debtor once in debt is always in debt with such a heavy rate of interest. It may be that the risk and the expenses of collection involved are responsible for this high rate of interest. But even then there is no justification for such a usurious rate. The unfortunate part of it is that even the courts have been allowing as high a rate of interest as 36 per cent. They have not cared to make use of the existing provisions of the Usurious Loans Act. It is, therefore, found necessary that some limit ought to be fixed.

Part VI of the Bill deals with damdupat. It has just been explained by Mr. Manohar Lal and I therefore do not wish to go into its history. But the point is this that a creditor should not be allowed to have his debt swollen to more than twice the principal sum advanced by him. It may be that he will have to go to court oftener than he has been doing, so that the interest may not go on accumulating. But it will in the long run prove to the benefit of the agriculturist. In the past the money-lender has been in the habit of allowing interest to accumulate so that the debt may go on swelling. But according to the provision in this Bill the total amount of debt due will not be allowed to swell to a higher figure than twice the principal amount advanced. Provision has however been made that this will not have retrospective effect. The chief trouble will arise in practice in connection with parts III and VI of the Bill. Many of us know that the money-lender is in the habit of writing a higher sum than he actually advances and sometimes he gets the thumb impressions or signature on blank promissory notes. In future he is also likely to take advantage of the ignorance and need of the agriculturist and whatever the rate of interest fixed is, he will take into consideration the rate that he wants to charge and will put in the promissory note or the bond a larger amount than he actually advances, so that when the courts take notice of his promissory note or bond he will be content with the rate of interest fixed by the court.

The money-lender will also be able to evade the provision of damdupat. Whenever the debt matures, he will take into consideration the principal and the interest. He will get a fresh promissory note executed and the whole sum will become the principal sum. It is difficult to guard against these unfair means. A suggestion has been made that all these bonds and promissory notes should be executed in the presence of a registering authority. I do not know how far this is practicable, but something should be done so that the money-lender may not resort to these practices.

Coming to part IV I would say one or two things. Part IV is certainly a novel measure. The provisions are not very happily worded and require a good deal of elucidation and explanation. I think the whole part will have to be overhauled in the select committee. The principal matter with which this part deals is the establishment of conciliation boards. Conciliation boards are intended to effect a compromise between the money-lenders and debtors. Now in order that these boards should be able to effect a compromise the personnel of the board should be such as to inspire confidence both in the money-lender and the agricultural borrower, and if persons with requisite qualification and experience are found the success of the measure to a large extent will be ensured. The second point with regard to conciliation boards is that unless some arrangement is made for the payment of composed debts it will be impossible to effect a compromise. No money-lender would accept the reduction of his debt on paper unless he has some guarantee that the reduced debt will be paid. The point is this whether some financial arrangement can be made and in what manner. If any financial arrangement can be made, the agricultural borrower will be relieved of his debt to a very great extent. A creditor will be prepared to accept 4 to 6 annas of his debt, if he is sure that he is going to be paid in cash, otherwise he will not be inclined to accept a compromise or reduce his debt. My suggestion is that for affecting this reduction the Government and the Co-operative Societies should come into the field and play their part. Land Mortgage Banks or Co-operative Banks are the proper institutions which can help the zamindars in this matter. Loans should be advanced on long terms and easy rate of interest and payable by instalments in 20 to 30 years. If this is done I am sure this experiment of conciliation boards will succeed. I do not mean to say that money should be found for financing the entire agricultural debt. It will be impossible to do so. As the Bill provides, conciliation boards are to be constituted in certain areas as an experimental measure. My submission is that side by side an experiment of land mortgage banks should be carried on. Wherever conciliation boards manage to effect a compromise the money should be advanced by mortgage banks and paid to the money-lenders. It will take the sting out of the Bill. The agriculturist will be helped and the locked up capital will be set free. I do not wish to deal with other parts of the Bill. Certain provisions are necessary to make this Bill a success. For example, bogus creditors might be coming up before the conciliation boards. Some provision therefore should be made to prevent such false creditors coming forward and claiming their share. The only plausible criticism against this Bill is that it will have the effect of curtailing considerably the already low credit of the agriculturist. There is no doubt that credit is a very delicate matter and to some extent the credit of the zamindar will be restricted by this Bill. The zamindar utilizes his credit partly for unproductive and partly for productive purposes. If this shrinkage of credit results in the stopping of his unproductive debt it will prove a blessing in disguise. But the fact remains that zamindar requires money at the time of sowing. He wants seeds and when his bullocks die he wants money to replace them. Co-operative societies will have to play a far greater part than they have hitherto done and also taqavi loans will have to be advanced on much larger scale than hitherto. Excessive credit I believe does no one good, but it is certainly harmful to an ignorant and reckless borrower like the agriculturist. If his credit is restricted he will learn to live within his own means. On the other hand the money-lender will not be a sufferer as he is supposed to be.

My view is that the sooner this profession is stopped the better for the Hindus. The sooner the money-lender gives up this degraded profession which has taken the man out of him, the better for him. On the other hand I feel that the capital which the money-lender has, will be released for industrial development. The money-lender with all his brain and capital will not remain idle and will certainly find suitable and better avocation for himself. The Bill however does not provide any permanent remedy for the ills of agriculturists. It may be that the position of the agriculturist becomes worse as the Banking Enquiry Committee said in the report that "as shown by the experiment of the Deccan Agriculturists Relief Act the more restraints are placed on the money-lenders the worse becomes the condition of the borrowers." It may or may not prove true in our case, but the fact remains that unless the purchasing power of the agriculturist is raised nothing will save him. No measure of this nature will help him out of the mire. Government does not hesitate to bring forward measures which are considered controversial, measures of this nature or system like the separate and joint electorates, but the Government has been very slow in introducing that change in the currency system which the whole country has been demanding for the last many years. As a matter of fact it has been a universal demand and since the depression came, it has been a demand pressed by the agriculturists that nothing will tend to raise the prices of commodities more than a depreciation of the currency. And on what grounds does the Government oppose it? I may submit that on no practical grounds other than academic grounds. Sir George Schuster in his own words stated that the gain of the agriculturists will be the loss of the wage earners, whenever currency depreciates the agriculturists will gain because prices are bound to rise and with the rise of prices the wage earners who are paid in cash will certainly suffer. I submit that it is only thinking in terms of England where the industrial labour is paid in cash where there is industrial labour problem. In this country the chief wage earner is the peasant, the tenant, the menial, the village servant, the artisan. Every one of them is paid in kind and if the prices rise all these labourers will be the gainers.

No labourer will suffer. Undoubtedly some of the wage earners who are paid in cash in certain industrial districts or industrial towns will be slight sufferers, but they have been gainers on account of the catastrophic fall in prices. Another thing to which Governments must direct their attention is the development of cottage industries. We have always been advocating the cause of industrial development but nothing tangible has been done in this direction. We pity the lot of the zamindar who has nothing to do for a greater part of the year. For six or seven months in the year he remains idle; his family remains idle and still nothing has been done for him to supplement his income. This is the chief direction to which the Government ought to devote its attention.

I do not want to touch on the question of taxation as it has been pressed several times. Last of all I would say that there is need for uplift work in rural areas with the zeal of a missionary. The Banking Enquiry Committee stated—

In our opinion a real and lasting solution can only be found by the spread of education, the extension of co-operative and joint stock banking and by the training of the borrower in habits of thrift and saving.

[S. S. Ujjal Singh.]

Habits of thrift and saving cannot be acquired without persistent propaganda with the zeal of a missionary. I am glad to find that the Government has done something in this direction and has appointed an officer who has certainly got the zeal of a missionary and if finances are forthcoming he is certainly expected to do something in this direction. This Bill alone cannot provide the required relief to the agricultural classes. The Government must find means to raise the purchasing power of the peasant which he needs more than anything else at the present juncture. With these words I support the motion.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain (North-East Towns, non-Muhammdan, urban) (Urdu): Sir, I rise to oppose the Bill and its reference to the select committee. This Bill, I am convinced is open to serious objection constitutionally, legally, economically, socially and also from the point of view of the Government. I am fully aware that the condition of the zamindars is undoubtedly bad and for that reason it is my desire that means should be adopted to better their condition. But it is my firm belief that this Bill will not afford any relief to the zamindars and I, therefore, feel no hesitation in opposing it.

It will not be denied that it is a novel measure the like of which you will not find on the statute book of any civilised country in the world and the most funny thing about it is that the object with which it has been introduced before the Council will not be achieved thereby. As I have said, it will not help the zamindars at all. In fact no legislation can help them however stringent it may be. The history of the previous legislations which were passed with the avowed object of affording relief to the zamindars abundantly proves that the zamindars stand where they stood previous to their passage. To safeguard the interests of these zamindars the Government, which is so very solicitous of the welfare of the zamindars and which is inclined to favour them even at the cost of the interests of other communities, passed the Alienation of Land Act in order to protect the interests of the zamindars. It was the first of the series of legislations intended for the benefit of the zamindars. But it was not long after that that the zamindars and their representatives began to cry for help for them. This cry is heard so often on the opposite benches and it has been repeated here too on the heights of Simla. Obviously that Act has not helped them very much. Then followed the Usurious Loans Act which gave to the courts discretionary powers to allow very low rate or interests on loans advanced to the debtors or say zamindars because they are alleged to belong to the class of debtors, in case the courts found the debtors to be in adverse circumstances. This Act also appears to have not satisfied the zamindars. Of course these Acts have done a good deal of harm to the non-zamindars who are not permitted to own even a small plot of land even if some of them may have a great liking for the profession of agriculture. The Chief Court of the Punjab also helped the zamindars by ruling as in the 4 Punjab Law Report that zamindars could not mortgage or sell their land. There is another provision in section 7, order 21, rule 41 of the Civil Procedure Code which gives protection to this class of debtors. According to this provision of law the debtors cannot be arrested and sent to civil prison in execution of decrees. There is yet another piece of legislation called the Insolvency Act.

which permits a debtor to apply for being declared insolvent and which has so often been made use of by the zamindars in their capacity of debtors. But all these safeguards appear to have failed to protect the interests of the zamindars. The last of this series was the Regulation of Accounts Act and this Act was also passed on the incessant demand of the zamindars. They represented to the Government that the sahukars were getting Rs. 10 for every rupee advanced by them to the zamindars and in order to check their mal-practices, they must be compelled to keep accounts in a particular form. The sahukars had to submit to it and they have now to keep regular accounts and also to send copies of such accounts to their debtors after every six months. But all these measures appear to have failed to make the zamindars and their representatives cease crying for help. That help they require even now which they required 35 years ago and I am sure that they will continue to require that help till eternity even if any number of measures as these are passed and placed on the statute book. And I need hardly say that like its predecessors this measure will do them no good at all.

The remedy of all the ills from which the zamindars are suffering lies somewhere else. But before I proceed to point out what that remedy is, I would like to address a few words to the Government with your permission. The Government appears to think that the non-zamindars are in affluent circumstances and that, therefore, their interests can be sacrificed to appease the zamindars. This attitude of the Government is certainly not very commendable. We find that of late the Government has begun to favour the zamindars in every walk of life and it has at the same time ceased to take care of the interests of the other communities. I should think that the sight of the big bungalows and big shops in which no doubt big almirahs are lying, has deceived the Government and also the zamindars. To disillusion them I may say that these shops do not contain anything but these almirahs. All that used to be in these big shops has now gone out of them to find its place in the houses of the zamindars. The Government very well knows that on account of the world-wide trade depression the markets are dull and there is no business transacted there. The shop-keepers are now finding it difficult to make both ends meet. By the fall in prices the traders have suffered more losses than even the zamindars have suffered. Even admitting that the zamindars have lost all, they have yet their lands to fall back upon. But the non-zamindars who have been equally, if not more, hit by this depression have not even that resource to depend upon. Under the laws in force they cannot adopt farming as their profession. Also in services under the Government there is no scope left for them. I have very little experience as a member of the Council, but from what I witnessed in the last budget session of the Council, I know that most of the motions moved at that time were intended to increase the number of zamindars in the services. One resolution was also moved recommending to the Government that early steps should be taken to increase the proportion of the zamindars in these services. The Government, as the House is aware, gave an assurance that they will have regard for the wishes of the mover. It is, therefore, clear that very little share out of the very limited posts, which Government can offer, will go to the non-zamindars. In short all doors are blocked for them and if under such circumstances the debts which they owe from the zamindars are wiped out or they are made difficult of realisation, it will certainly amount to crushing one community or one section of the population to please the zamindars. The Government owes its duty to the non-zamindars as well and it will not be doing the proper thing to ignore in this manner their interests.

This Bill, as I have said before, will not do a bit of good to the zamindars. To be very plain I do not exactly understand the definition of 'zamindar' given in the Bill. It is very vague and very wide too. The definition as it is will include all such vakils and barristers and Government servants who own lands and who derive some income from such lands even if many of them may never have seen those lands and may never have known how they are cultivated and what is cultivated therein. It will include all the big nawabs, big landlords and big sardar bahadurs who certainly do not require protection by Bills like these. May I ask whether the Government is justified in giving protection to these big men? I do not think it is. Of course, if the Bill was intended to protect the small holders and the petty zamindars, who really deserve protection, I would have been the first person to support such a Bill and I am sure that no one from the members of the Council would have opposed it. But to ask for protection for the big zamindars and landlords who owe as much as 50 thousand rupees against those who, as our zamindar brethren take pride in saying, have never tasted the so-called dainty dishes prepared by the meat of cocks and eggs and who live upon mung ki dal only, is asking for too much (laughter). On the one side is a very big and influential man for whom protection is being sought and on the other side is that poor sahukar all bones and no flesh and wearing a tattered and dirty dhoti against whom protection is to be given to that influential man or an honorary magistrates as my honourable friend has said.

Mian Nurullah : But where to draw the line between the big zamindars and the petty zamindars?

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : That is not a very difficult problem to solve if only the Government were willing to solve it. In many cases the zamindars come weeping to the sahukars and beg with folded hands that they should be advanced loan because they have to pay land revenue and because in default of payment, they will be arrested and their wives and children will be miserable after their arrest. The sahukars taking pity on them advance them loans even if they may have to borrow the amounts to be advanced from other sahukars and I may tell the House that it happens in not a few cases. Therefore in considering this motion this point should also be borne in mind that many sahukars who have advanced loans to the zamindars are themselves in debt to other sahukars to almost the same amount which they owe from the zamindars. They will be surely hard hit if this measure is passed and enforced. I should say that they will be ruined and many others too and I am sure the Government will not let things go to such a pass. While on this point, I may inform the House and the Government too that it is not the petty zamindars who owe this big amount of 185 crores to the sahukars. If they owe at all they owe only a very small portion of it. It is the big zamindars on the other hand who owe a large portion of this debt and I may also say that the loans taken by them were not taken because they were in trouble or that they had to pay land revenue, but because they wanted to have four wives (laughter). Such big loans were taken by them because they were not satisfied with a small house and wanted to have a palace for them or because they wanted to indulge in other luxuries. In many cases these debts were incurred because certain persons, or I should say zamindars, wanted to have two bottles of liquor every day to enjoy and make merry. In other cases such loans were taken because the debtors had to send their sons to England for further study and now when the time has come for the repayment of such loans, which the sahkars advanced after living on frugal meals after denying themselves all pleasures, these big zamindars ask for protection against these sahkars. These representatives of the zamindars are in fact their own representatives. They have not the interest of the poor zamindars dear to them. They in fact ask for protection for those who do not deserve this protection. I cannot imagine that the petty zamindars can or could ever have taken loans exceeding 20 or 30 or 50 or at the most 100 rupees. The money borrowed by them, therefore, cannot form a very large portion of the whole debt payable by the zamindar community and this is why I say that it is not so much to protect such petty zamindars that this Bill has been introduced as to protect those who do not deserve this protection. Therefore I see no reason why it should be placed on the statute book.

If the Government is really anxious to give relief to the zamindars, it can adopt other reasonable means to achieve that object. First it should lower the rates of land revenue which are very heavy and which have now become unbearable for the zamindars. If it is not prepared to lower the rates, it should introduce the old system of charging land revenue in kind as the rajas and kings of olden times used to do. If that system is introduced the fall in prices of the agricultural produce or low yield from crops will not affect in any way the zamindars. In any case the revision of these rates is essential particularly because these rates were fixed in most of the districts at a time when the wheat was selling at Rs. 8 or Rs. 10 whereas it is now selling at the rate of Rs. 2 per maund only. The big zamindars may not be feeling any difficulty in paying off the Government dues under the present circumstances, but the petty zamindars find it impossible to continue to pay at the present rates. To further ameliorate the sad condition of the poor zamindars, the Government should make arrangements on an extensive scale to educate them so that they may learn the advantages of living within means. I have had enough opportunities to see and meet the villagers in their huts as I should call them and I know that a large majority of them do not get more than dry pieces of bread to eat and onions for many of them is a luxury with which to take their meals. But when any marriage is to take place even such a zamindar will seek the help of the bania and will try to get loan at as high a rate of interest as the latter may demand. He will then go to the city and purchase silk clothes and other materials of luxury which he cannot really afford to enjoy. It is, therefore, necessary that the zamindars should be educated so that they may be able to know for themselves what is good and what is bad for them. The Co-operative movement I may point out here which organises magic lantern lectures in the villages is doing harm rather than good to the people. As I understand, it makes it known by beat of drum to the people of a locality that there will be tamasha to-day and the people are thus attracted to the scene in large numbers. In the pictures that are shown the zamindar is shown as having all bones and no flesh and the sahukar is shown as a leech sucking the blood of the zamindar. Over and above that the spectators are advised to consider the sahukar not as their friend but as their bitter enemy and it is this propaganda of the Co-operative Department that is mainly responsible for so many murders of the sahukars during the last few years. This is not the way to educate people and educate these zamindars. There are other means to achieve that end and if they are properly taught I am sure they will cease to spend on marriages and on such other occasions many hundreds and thousands of rupees and they will certainly celebrate their marriages with as much as they can afford to spend without going to the sahukars. Zamindars should be taught to live within their means. They should not spend too much on marriage and death ceremonies.

I want to bring home to the Government another fact and it is that if the present Bill is passed it will not only harm the agriculturists and the zamindars but will also cause a good deal of trouble to the Government. This Bill will strain the relations between the zamindars and the Hindu money-lenders. Already the people are sufficiently divided amongst themselves. This Bill will divide them further. At present the communal question has become so strong that even for small posts Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs quarrel among themselves and approach the Government to consider their respective claims for those posts. This causes a good deal of botheration to the Government. Moreover, the Government will lose a good portion of its income which it receives under the head of court-fee.

I P.M.

In addition to this the present Bill will stimulate socialist ideas amongst the people. They will think that it is a good thing to get whatever belongs to another for the Government itself is in favour of snatching things from the rich and giving them to the poor. This Bill in practice would mean nothing less than a strong fillip to such socialistic tendencies. A thing which is very heavy can only be lifted if three or four men or as many as are required to lift it lend their hands. The money-lender alone cannot bear the heavy burden which will fall on him after the passage of this Bill. He will simply perish under its weight. Let all the three parties concerned divide the burden amongst themselves. The Government, the money-lenders and the zamindars should jointly bear this burden. A burden of debt to the extent of 150 crores of rupees cannot be borne by the money-lenders alone. Let the Government reduce the rates of land revenue. Let the zamindar honestly make a sincere effort to pay whatever he can from the income of his land. Let the money-lenders accept a little less. The Government can also stop the zamindars alienating their lands unnecessarily. Let it raise a loan and advance it to the zamindars so that they may be able to pay it further to the sahukars. If the Government arranges to borrow money in order to advance it to the zamindars in order to enable them to pay their creditors, I think the condition of the zamindars can be ameliorated without giving any cause of complaint to the money-lending classes. The Government can advance loans to the zamindars on the security of their lands and can get it back in easy instalments. When the Government will be the creditor the zamindars will be more careful to pay back their loans. They will observe every economy on account of the fear that they may not lose their land on the security of which the loans were advanced to them.

Then, Sir, there is another very important point and it is this that a class whose interests have been already safeguarded by such Acts as Land Alienation Act and Regulation of Accounts Act need not be given any further security by a measure like the present one. A class which cannot ameliorate its condition by the security afforded to it by the Acts already referred to cannot be expected to derive any benefit by the passage of the present Bill. The Government receives complaints from the zamindars that the money-lenders by deceitful means rob them of their money and believes them, thinking that they are illiterate and such a thing is possible. I ask why those people who are educated and can understand their liability after accepting a loan, borrow it from the money-lenders. Even those, who are educated, borrow. They borrow not only from the sahukars but also from the Pathan money-lenders. The Hindu money-lender is different from a Pathan money-lender. Pathan money-lender is a rude fellow and the debtor has to pay. As soon as the babu gets his salary on the 1st of the month the Pathan creditor appears and he forces the Babu to pay him back his money along with its interest.

Moreover public opinion is against it. At present the opinion of the zamindars and the money-lenders should be ignored for it is natural that the former should support it and the latter oppose it. The only opinion that counts is the opinion of a third party which is not interested and is not affected by the provisions of this Bill. In the opinion of such a third party this Bill is meaningless and absurd. The District and Sessions Judge of Ambala has expressed his opinion against the Bill and his opinion, he being disinterested, is important. This Bill is harmful for the sahukars, the zamindars and the Government equally. By its passage and enforcement the small holders will disappear. The big landlords will swallow them up. The Government also stands to lose for the same argument that the sahukars are rich and, therefore, they can afford to forego the amount of debt advanced to the zamindars, can also be adapted to be used against the Government so far as the realisation of land revenue is concerned. The very money-lenders who will be hit by the present measure will start a propaganda against the Government saying that the zamindars are poor, they want relief, Government is rich and can afford it, therefore, it should not be paid its dues. The only thing possible is this that the Government, the money-lenders and the zamindars should try to arrive at an amicable settlement amongst themselves. The Government should reduce the rates of land revenue and abiana. The sahukar should agree to receive back Rs. 4 or Rs. 8 per rupee advanced as loan to the zamindars and the zamindars should observe economy in order to save sufficient to pay back to the money-lender the amount of debt received by him. The speech which was made yesterday from the Government benches was a very reasonable one and it showed that the Government realises its responsibility. It is true as the Honourable Member said, in no country such a law can do any good. How can a man agree that another man to whom he has advanced some loan should not return it back? I ask from honourable Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, for whom I have every regard and respect whether if any one were to suggest to him that he may very kindly give all his land to the poor people he would agree to such a proposal. I can anticipate his answer. It will be, no. Yes; no one can agree to such a proposal. If so, how can you expect the sahkars to agree to forego the amount of debt which is due to them from the zamindars? I request the House to oppose this Bill for the reasons to which I have drawn their attention. With these words I resume my seat.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq (Amritsar City, Muhammadan, Urban), (Urdu): The honourable the lady member has said very nice things, but they were not relevant to the motion under discussion. Instead of discussing the condition of the zamindars and their indebtedness she started discussing big landlords. She digressed from the subject under discussion and tried to draw the debate into a quite different channel. Perhaps she did it purposely to divert our attention to something else. She made mention of the houses of the big zamindars, and how they send their sons to England. She advocated the cause of the small land-holders who are not rich and said that had the Bill been for their benefit alone she would have supported it. I am sure that if we agree that the benefit of the provisions of this Bill should only extend to the poor agriculturists, she would rescind her position. The agriculturist is the backbone of the province and it is the duty of the Government to protect him. If the zamindar falls on evil days the whole province is affected—commerce, trade, money-lending, legal practice, etc., all are affected. I request the honourable members opposite to calmly think over this matter and instead of caring for their immediate gain should consider those evil consequences which will surely overtake the province as a whole, if the zamindars are not given any relief. You respect cow and protect it. Why do you do so? You do so because you know that cow is a very useful animal. It gives milk, and for this reason you protect it. Similar is the case of the zamindars. They work and the whole population depends upon the result of their toil. Consider how useful the zamindars are for each and every class of the people and then try to realise our loss in case the zamindars, as a class are ruined. Come, let us join hands and do our best to protect the future of the zamindars. The Englishmen belong to a very cold country. India is comparatively much hotter. The Englishmen here in India and Indians from Kashmir in the winter season put on very warm clothes and also often use overcoats. But the poor zamindars when it is very cold in the winter season go about their work dressed in ordinary cotton clothes. Do you think zamindar will go about in his tattered cotton clothes in winter if he could afford warm clothings? He does so because he is too poor even to clothe himself. The zamindars are poor. They are underfed. They are under-clothed. Their condition is pitiable. The honourable Mr. Mahohar Lal and other members of the House should give practical proof of their sympathies with the zamindars by affording them some sort of relief. The burden of indebtedness is so heavy that it is impossible for the zamindars to pay back their debts. Italy owed a debt of no less than 100 crores to England. But England cancelled a great part of that debt. Similarly to France was due a large amount of debt from Germany. What did France do? Instead of asking for the impossible they reduced it as it was expected that it would not be paid back. France let go a greater part of her claims to it. America also cancelled a large amount of debt which was due to it from England. Here in India, why cannot one class of people write off certain portion of its debts in favour of another class of people? The honourable lady member herself and others of the opposite benches admit that this large amount of debt is impossible of being paid back. We quite agree with them and say that the Punjab peasant can never discharge such a huge liability. Therefore, it is essential that we should adopt such measures by which the further accumulation of debt may be stopped and also the rates of interest may become reasonable. If a man is a fool and he agrees to a contract that he would pay 40 per cent. interest on a sum advanced to him then, I think the creditor is a greater fool to expect him to pay such a high rate of interest. In England a similar stage was reached on account of the Jew money-lenders. It was the time of Edward III who turned them out of England. It was a most undesirable act, but all the same history shows to what extent people can go who get exasperated through what they consider the tyranny of money-lenders. Sir, the very word sahukar means a person whose work it is to steal. A son of Shivaji who was brought to Delhi as a hostage was given the name of saku, i.e., a thief. The Moghuls gave that name to the money-lenders. It is the duty of the Government to afford some relief to the zamindars in the form of cheap justice, reduction of interest, part cancellation of debts and stop lending of money for extravagances. If the Government is of the opinion that rates of interest can remain as to its present extent then I may assure them that they will require a much larger number of jails all over the province. Government will have to send millions of people to the jail, and convert the whole of the Punjab into a jail.

It has also been observed that the money-lenders often do not enter in their register those sums which are paid back by the debtors. I happened to enquire from a Sikh gentleman who was also a money-lender about this matter and he told me laughingly what of that if sometimes he forgot to make the entry and the money returned remained unentered, in the register. A similar statement was also made by a Muhammadan money-lender. You blame the zamindars that they are not honest in their dealings. How can you expect them to be reasonable and honest? In their heart of hearts they know that the sahukar's demand from them is unjust but since they happen to have committed themselves by executing a promote, etc., they cannot do anything but to try to trick the money-lender. Once a Sikh friend of mine told me that his grandfather once advanced a loan of Rs. 50 to a shoe-maker. The shoe-maker was a poor fellow. He could not return the loan, so, for some two or three generations the whole family was supplied shoes by that shoe-maker. And in the end this loan was also realised from him. The zamindars who are rich and very fat are very few. There are cases of the extravagances of rich zamindars, but we all know that they have paid many times their original debts in the form of interest. We have to see the condition of the Punjab peasant generally. He is starving and it is feared that he may not rise in revolt against the Government or against the sahuikars. The economic condition of the people is so bad that a man who borrowed one rupee a few years back cannot now pay even four annas of the loan, because the price of commodities have fallen very low and after paying his Government revenue, seeds, etc., nothing much is left to him.

Sir, much stress has been laid on cutting down the Government expenditure in order to afford relief to the zamindars. I hope Government will reduce their expenses, but even if it is reduced by 25 per cent. even then the problem will remain unsolved. The Government at the most will whittle down the expenditure which it incurs on account of the beneficent departments. How selfish this suggestion is? The money-lending classes want that all the country may go to dogs, but they must have their high rates of interest. They say, let education be not given to the people, let their health be not looked after, let them not have anything beneficial from the Government so that the money which is being spent on all these things may be given to the zamindars who may pass it on to them. The money-lenders do not want to make any sacrifice. A similar situation had arisen in the United Provinces. The people became heavily indebted. The money-lenders squeezed everything out of them. The agriculturists had to leave the country. Your syces and other servants who look after the horses and bring grass for them belong to that part of the United Provinces which was vacated by them on account of the highhandedness of the money-lenders. At present that once fertile land is included in tarai and is overgrown with dense forests wherein now wild animals roam and is the home of mosquitos. Perhaps the honourable lady member wants that the same fate may overtake the Punjab.

I know it is no offence against society to carry on money-lending trade. It is, on the other hand a useful and beneficial occupation both for the debtors and creditors. What I want to urge, however, is that the sahuikars should take reasonable interest on loans advanced by them just as it is taken by the banks. I feel that the sahuikar is a fellow human-being and as such he deserves our sympathy and protection. If he is honest in his dealings we should certainly protect his interests. It is with a view to protect the interests of honest sahuikars as well as the afflicted debtors that we urge upon the Government not to sponsor haphazard laws on this subject but bring forward comprehensive measures which may meet all the requirements of the situation. If the Government does not realise its responsibility and does not take effective steps in the direction of providing a permanent relief to the agriculturist debtors the time will soon come when their own revenue will become impossible of realisation. The Government should, therefore, consult all its officers who are competent to give advice on this subject and with their help bring forward a comprehensive and complete measure in order to meet this grave situation. Many kinds of measures may be suggested for the present relief and future protection of the zamindar. I, for one, would heartily welcome a measure penalising excessive expenditure on marriages. I shall be very glad if no zamindar is allowed to spend more than six or seven rupees on the marriage of his son or daughter. Such laws, if passed, will do immense good to the province in general and the zamindars in particular. Need I emphasise once again that I am perfectly at one with

Mr. Manohar Lal when he says that the existence of honest money-lenders is useful, nay essential, for the society? Nor do I cherish any ill-will against the sahukars as a class. I simply want to put a curb on the activities of rapacious and dishonest sahukars. I hope we shall be able to show generosity to the honest sahukars in the select committee, and will so modify this Bill as to preclude all possibilities of injustice being done to them or to their trade, and at the same time protect millions of poor starving peasantry from the clutches of dishonest sahukars. With these words, Sir, I lend my support to the motion now before the House.

The Council then adjourned for lunch.

The Council re-assembled at 3 p. m. Mr. President in the Chair.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

OCCUPIERS' RATE ON FODDER.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah (Lahore, Muhammadan, Rural), (Urdu): Sir, I move the adjournment of the business of the Council for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, viz., to disapprove the action of Government in enhancing the occupiers' rate on fodder throughout the province..

Before inviting the attention of the House to the subject which I propose to discuss I think it necessary to express my regret at the inconvenience which I have caused the members by bringing forward this motion. My apology, however, is this that the circumstances are such that I cannot help bringing forward this motion. The enhancement of occupiers' rate on fodder is a matter of recent occurrence and has caused great hardship to the zamindars. I have taken, therefore, the earliest opportunity that offered itself to me to invite the attention of the Government to the great wrong which this new action of theirs has done to the zamindar population of the province. No sooner was the report of the Abiana Committee published than the Government passed a resolution enhancing the occupiers' rate on fodder. But my impression is that the Government have failed to grasp the exact sense of the recommendation of the Abiana Committee. I have received many letters from zamindars throughout the province who have strongly protested against this action of the Government. The Punjab Zamindars Union which is a representative body of zamindars and which has its branches extended all over the province, has sent me several letters urging that water rates on fodder have been enhanced in utter disregard of the local conditions. The Government would have never taken such a step, the zamindars think, if they had taken into consideration all the pros and cons of the problem. I had a mind to draw the attention of this House to one other matter of great importance besides the recommendations of the Abiana Committee, namely, the report of the Franchise Committee in this session and I had sent a letter to the Government requesting that a non-official day should be given for the discussion of the reports of both the aforementioned committees. But I am sorry that my request was not acceded to owing to some reasons and my letter, which I sent through you, Sir, was not even acknowledged. I had, therefore, no other alternative but to move the adjournment of the business of the Council.

[K. B. Sardar Habib Ullah.]

When the Abiana Committee was appointed many honourable members had dwelt at length on the difficulties of the zamindars in this period of general depression and I need not repeat, once again, what was said at that time on the floor of this House. They had made it clear that the zamindars expected practical proof of sympathy from the Government and could not be content with mere lip-sympathy. The Committee was appointed on the unanimous recommendation of this House. Its report has recently been published and the honourable members must have read it. The non-official members of the Abiana Committee recommended that a reduction to the extent of one crore of rupees should be made in abiana. If the Government may not be able to reduce their dues to the extent of one crore, they suggested, it should at least effect a reduction to the extent of 80 lakhs of rupees. While making this recommendation they made it abundantly clear that they would not be satisfied with anything less than that. They made out a very good case and adduced cogent arguments in support of their recommendations. We may have an opportunity of examining those arguments when the report of the Abiana Committee comes up for discussion before this House. The Committee, however, had expressed their willingness to recommend a slightly higher rate on fodder in the event of the Government's making a reduction in their demand to the extent of at least 80 lakhs. But just as has been the wont of the strong the Government have taken advantage of the first part of their recommendations and have conveniently ignored the second part, which makes the reduction of 80 lakhs of rupees a necessary condition to be fulfilled before the enhancement of the occupiers' rate on fodder. What the Committee had suggested was only this that the rise of rate on fodder from Re. 1-8-0 to Rs. 2 would not cause much hardship if a reduction to the extent of 80 lakhs is made in the Government dues. But the Government did not pay any attention to their recommendation with regard to the reduction in their dues and adhered to the proposal of the enhancement of rate on fodder. The recommendation of the Committee was in this way badly slighted. It is, however, to be noted that the opinion of one honourable member of the Committee was greatly honoured by the Government. It was Mr. Labh Chand who wrote that no reduction need be made in the Government dues and the Government thought that it was he only who could give them sound advice on agrarian matters and that the zamindar members showed hopeless ignorance of the conditions and requisites of the rural area. I am reminded of a sentence occurring in the holy book of Mussalmans the meaning of which are said to have been distorted in the same manner in which the Government have distorted the recommendation of the Abiana Committee.

The Qoranic verse reads something like this: "Do not stand in prayer while you are tipsy." Now a certain witty fellow who was constantly asked by his friends to say his prayers punctually would refer them always to the first half of this verse, that is, "Do not stand in prayer" and would adroitly leave out the second half which says that you are forbidden to stand in prayer while you are under the influence of some intoxicating drug. The recommendation of the Committee is couched in a single sentence and the Government cannot say that it has not been possible for them to keep in view all the implications of the suggestion. I am very sorry that the Gov-erner in Council has accepted such a resolution which has been the cause of very great trouble for the poor zamindars.

It was not very difficult for the Government to see, that there was no reason for the zamindar members of the Abiana Committee to have proposed even a slight enhancement of the occupiers' rate on fodder if they had not cherished this hope that the Government dues would be materially reduced. Now a glance at the schedule reveals that whereas a reduction of Rs. 52 lakhs has been made, 17 lakhs have been realised by enhancing the fodder rate. This is, the zamindars rightly complain, no relief at all.

In 1924-25 which was quite a prosperous year the fodder rate was Rs. 8 per acre. But the zamindars felt that this was too much and they raised a great hue and cry against this excessive demand. The result was that a reduction of one rupee was made in it. Again in 1926-27 the zamindars complained that they could not pay even that much and a further reduction of one rupee was made in it and the rate was fixed at Rs. 1-8-0 per acre. Now these years were more prosperous than the present time and I fail to understand why the Government have thought it fit to enhance the fodder rate at such a time when the financial difficulties of the zamindars have reached their highest pitch. Let us examine the reasons of the Government for reducing their demand. They are enumerated in the Government's resolution and are as follows :—

His Excellency the Governor has been influenced by the following considerations—

- (a) primarily by the large drop in agricultural prices especially in prices of cotton and wheat ;
- (b) by the absence of any reliable indication that prices are likely to improve substantially in the near future ;
- (c) by the desirability of doing everything possible to prevent an undue fall in the standard of living ; and
- (d) by his desire once again to show his practical sympathy with the people in their gallant struggle against adverse circumstances.

These are the grounds why the Government thought fit to give certain measure of relief to the zamindar. I want to emphasise that the self-same reasons are equally present in the case of fodder too. I want to make it clear that the enhancement of fodder rate has not affected me or my friend the Nawab Sahib so much as it has affected the petty land-holder. The condition of the big zamindars is better, because the relief which they have got on precious crops like sugarcane or wheat amply compensates for the loss sustained in the shape of enhancement of proprietors' rate on fodder. It is, therefore, with a view to help the petty cultivator that I have brought forward this motion. The petty cultivator produces only as much fodder as is absolutely necessary for his cattle. He does not, and cannot afford to, grow fodder for making money by its sale. The big zamindar can afford to grow less fodder if he wills, because he can reduce the number of his cattle from, say, ten to five. But the poor cultivator cannot further reduce his pair of bullocks. Some people might suggest that the zamindar is in the habit of keeping a herd of unnecessary cattle for whom he has to grow fodder. But I assure them that things have changed now and the zamindar has only as many cattle as are absolutely necessary for him.

(At this stage the honourable member resumed his seat as his fifteen minutes were over.)

Sardar Bishan Singh (Sialkot-cum-Gurdaspur, Sikh, Rural, (Urdu) : Sir, the result of levying excessive rate on fodder would be to deprive the unfortunate zamindar of his scanty fare of milk, butter and curd. He keeps one or two milch cattle besides his pair of bullocks and it is for them that he grows some fodder. Now the present excessive rate on fodder will prohibit his growing fodder and in this way he will no longer be able to keep a cow or a buffalo. You know he is so poor that he cannot afford to have meat for his food. It is the milk and curd-milk got from his cattle that maintain his strength. If the prohibitive fodder rate is continued the zamindar will not be able to afford to keep a cow or buffalo and coarse dry bread will make him so weak that he will not be able to continue his agricultural occupation which requires much physical strength. It is really strange that the Government should have reduced the charges on sugarcane and wheat and should have increased the charges on another important produce. This is nothing short of giving with one hand and snatching away with the other. Moreover, it is highly anomalous to levy more rates on barley and jari, the food of cattle, than on wheat which is the food of man the noblest of God's creatures. I am afraid this enhancement of fodder rates will be a source of very great trouble to the zamindars and more particularly to the petty zamindars.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri Fazl Ali (Gujrat East, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I have stood up to point out to the Government that fodder is more valuable for the poor zamindar than the staple crops like wheat and barley. Wherever he goes the first thing which he wants to secure is fodder for his cattle. If no fodder is available he cannot carry on his agricultural occupation. Moreover, fodder is the only crop which is equally important for the rich and poor zamindars. The big zamindars, however, can afford to bear excessive charges on fodder because it is very easy for them to reduce the number of their cattle as my honourable friend Sardar Sahib suggested and thereby escape the extra burden. They can very easily reduce the number of their mares by four but such is not the case of a petty land-holder. He has a pair of bullocks without which he cannot do. Then there is his cow on which he depends for his curd-milk which constitutes the only sauce for his coarse bread. He has no pulao not even dal to eat along with his bread. It is the milk or curd-milk which keeps his appetite keen. If fodder is made very dear and rare on account of the prohibitive fodder rates he will have to go without meals. I hope the Government will realise that it has put the petty zamindar in a very bad position by taxing fodder so heavily.

There is one thing more which ought to be borne in mind in this connection. Fodder is a crop which is equally wanted all over the province. If it is heavily taxed the whole province has to suffer. On the other hand staple crops like rice and wheat are grown in certain areas and are not grown in certain other areas. Therefore any reduction in charges on those crops help only a limited number of cultivators. It is the paramount duty of the Government therefore to reduce charges on a crop that is of universal importance and thereby help all and sundry.

It is not of much value, furthermore, to reduce charges on precious crops like sugarcane. This is such a crop that the growers stand to gain a good deal out of it. Sometimes sugarcane yields hundreds of maunds of gur and the cultivators are quite well off. But fodder is the concern of a poor peasant who sometimes has only one ox and yokes his cow with him in order to till his soil. Taxing fodder, therefore, will mean taxing the pocket of this poor man. One thing more is worth considering in this respect. Kamins and menials go to live in villages simply because they can keep a cow or buffalo there and fodder is to be got from the zamindar who gets his plough repaired or manufactured in return. If the fodder is made very dear and the zamindar is unable to provide it for the cattle of his kamins they will leave him and will not care to live in the village. And the zamindar is naturally unable to pay in cash for all the work which the kamin does for him. It is, therefore, necessary that fodder is not heavily taxed; otherwise it will result in incalculable hardship to the zamindar. This is my considered and honest opinion and I hope the Government will do the needful to remove this grievance of the zamindars.

Mian Nurullah (Lyallpur South, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, it is very unfortunate that the non-official members of the Abiana Committee gave a hint that they will not object to a slight enhancement of the occupiers' rate on fodder. But the Government on their part have not acted judiciously by ordering an immediate enhancement of that demand. It may be recalled that after 1924 when abiana was increased to the extent of one crore of rupees. it was fodder on which the greatest amount of reduction was allowed as soon as opportunity arose. It was done under the impression that fodder was a very essential and important crop. It is a key crop. The Government should have thought a hundred times, therefore, before sanctioning this increase. The proposed enhancement of fodder rate is bad in principle also. It is not in accordance with the accepted theory of the Government that the price of water spent on a crop should be realised in any case. As we all know wheat requires five or six waterings before the crop matures and the sugarcane crop wants twice as many waterings as are necessary for wheat but the Government has in spite of all this thought it fit to reduce charges on these crops and enhance the rate with respect to fodder which requires half the amount of water as compared, with wheat. The Government ought to have borne in mind the hard fact that fodder is most essential for the cultivator. He in fact cannot carry on agricultural occupation if there is no fodder. More of fodder encourages the zamindar to keep more cattle and he gets very good manure out of their dung. This manure performs marvels with the crop of the zamindar. In this way the zamindar is enabled to reap good harvest and has more money to pay the Government dues. It is, therefore, not difficult to see that fodder helps the zamindar to a very great extent and is a very important instrument of production and should be treated as such. I should be very glad if the Government disencumbers fodder from all liabilities and makes it a free crop for the cultivator. If it is done I assure the Government that they will not lose anything but will have a great gain on account of this arrangement. But the Government seems to have developed a great liking for the policy of giving with one hand and taking away with the other. The locals of Lyallpur, Sheikhupura and Lahore districts who are commonly known by the name of janglis expressed their great dissatisfaction with this action of the Government. Living as these people are on the banks of the river Ravi they grow much fodder and breed cattle. Milch cattle provide them with milk and ghee.

[Mian Nurullah.]

It is by the sale of ghee that they generally pay their land revenue. If nothing else is available they can sell a cattle or two and pay up the Government dues. The Government have now made it difficult for those people to grow much fodder and keep a good number of cattle. Realisation of revenue from them would become a matter of difficulty.

Furthermore, it is the petty zamindar who has been the hardest hit on account of this enhancement of fodder rate. The big zamindar is not to lose much by this arrangement. He can very easily ask his tenants not to sow much fodder. And if they grow fodder he would make a proportionate charge on that crop and would not lose anything. The petty zamindars always complain, that the big zamindars who represent them in the Council pay no heed to their interests.

Now this is a reflection on all the members of the Council. It is, therefore, our bounden duty to strongly urge upon the Government that this unreasonable charge should be brought to its former level. It was the recommendation of the Crop Planning Conference also that charges on crops like fodder should be reduced and their cultivation should be encouraged. The Conference recommended, moreover, that cultivation of barley should be encouraged as against wheat. But the Abiana Committee has recommended a reduction of abiana in case of wheat and not on barley. In this way it is clear that the recommendation of the Abiana Committee relating to fodder is not very convincing.

I wonder who supplied facts and figures to the Government which made them think that it was proper to enhance the proprietor's rate on fodder. The state of affairs is such specially on Mailsi Canal that the zamindars are being made to pay Rs. 55 per khatauni as against the previous charge of Rs. 50 per khatauni. This is after a "reduction" in the Government charges. This is really strange. As you know, Lyallpur was and is still a most flourishing colony, the consumption of milk there is second to New York only. Excessive rates on fodder will considerably reduce the production of milk in Lyallpur and, as Sardar Bishen Singh pointed out, will have a very bad effect on the health of the people living there. It is, therefore, not proper that the enhanced rates on fodder should be continued.

With these words, Sir, I support the motion under consideration.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General)
(Urdu): Sir, I whole-heartedly support the suggestion that water rates now charged on fodder crops should be brought down to the level of water rates charged in 1927. Some of the honourable members who have preceded me have referred to the recommendation made by the Abiana Committee. As a matter of fact the Committee recommended that if a material reduction was made in water rates charged on wheat and cotton crops they would not object to some increase being made in water rates charged on fodder. Nobody ever thought that an increase to the extent of one rupee in water rates would be made. It was suggested that water rates on cotton should be reduced and water rates on fodder might be enhanced to some extent. The Government have readily accepted one part of this proposal and ignored the other part. I think that reduction ought to be made in water rates charged on fodder, for whatever is paid on that account should be considered an item in the cost of production. Without cattle no cultivation is possible. If you continue to charge the present rates on fodder it will adversely affect the zamindar and reduce his margin of profit on all cultivation. It is really very useful for the zamindars to keep a large number of milch cattle. But even if they may not keep milch cattle it is essential to reduce the water rates now charged on fodder. I am quite at one with the honourable member representing Industries when he says that the condition of the zamindars cannot improve in the least unless they resort to some cottage industries. It is very difficult rather impossible to save the zamindars from the disastrous effects of the present general depression without asking them to resort to a cottage industry subsidiary to agriculture. The prices of wheat and cotton being very low the zamindars should take to producing more milk and ghee and that cannot be done unless they keep a large number of milch cattle. It would, therefore, be in the fitness of things that occupiers' rates should be reduced to the level of rates charged in 1927. With these few words I strongly support the motion now before the House.

Mr. E. Maya Das (Non-official, Nominated) : Sir, the resolution before the Council is about the one rupee which has been increased on fodder. I would like to see the area divided into two circles where fodder is sown. One circle comprising the lands nearer the towns where fodder is sold, including those villages where the people are able to sell milk and ghee. That I would like to see as one circle and the remainder as another circle. I shall confine my remarks to the first circle. I think that many of us will remember the speech made by the honourable member from Sheikhpura some months back in this Council. He pointed out how fodder was being sold from Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 a kanal. If that be so, can the people of that area really come forward and complain that this increase of Re. 1 is too much? And, Sir, what is true of Sheikhpura is true of the neighbourhood of every town because the townspeople must have the fodder and, therefore, they are prepared to pay for the fodder which they require for their animals.

It has been remarked by the mover of this motion that fodder is not a money-making crop. I beg to differ from him in this matter, for in the circle to which I have made reference I say that it certainly is a money-making crop whether you sell it direct or whether you feed the animals and sell the milk or make ghee out of the milk. To that extent it is a money-making crop. And another honourable member was pleased to ask, why a higher rate on oats? The reason is because oat is the finest fodder that you can get and, therefore, people are prepared to pay a higher rate for oats. I, therefore, beg to say that in the area where fodder can be sold, where it can be converted into milk and ghee the complaint against the increase is not a strong one. As regards the remaining area, as I am not acquainted with facts and figures I am not able to express an opinion now.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala Division, North-East, Muham-madan, Rural) : Sir, the arguments in support of the motion are so poor that I cannot bring myself to support it. Besides I know that for me to support this motion would be highly injurious to the general body of zamindars and I shall give my reasons. The Abiana Committee in paragraph 89 of their report recommended that if Government was unable to find money otherwise then it could resort to an increase of abiana on fodder upto Rs. 2-8-0.

[Ch. Allah Dad Khan.]

The resolution of Government on paragraph No. 16 on page 34 of the Abiana Committee's report clearly says that Government has tapped all its resources and has strained itself to the utmost to save the last pie out of its income and with the utmost economy it has been able to spare only Rs. 36 lakhs. That cannot be an appreciable sum, and now when we are going to accept the recommendation of the Abiana Committee which said that an increase of the rate on fodder would give us an additional revenue of Rs. 16 lakhs, we can expect to have an appreciable sum of Rs. 53 lakhs and odd on the whole. With what face can honourable members now come and say that Government has not done anything and that full reduction has not been given? If Government is going to take the argument seriously, it will say, "let the rate remain as before; we are not going to give a reduction of Rs. 36 lakhs," that would deprive the zamindars of the advantage of having a reduction in the total abiana of Rs. 36 lakhs that they are now getting. The serious part of the thing is that the honourable mover of the motion has quoted a proverb and has brought the sacred Quran in his support but he has absolutely misapplied it. People say in the villages :

کنوار کے لئے موصل اور بندوق برابر ہیں

To a rustic there is no difference between a gun and a rice crushing club. Somebody says do not go to prayer when you are drunk, garbling the quotation. Now have the Government not given any remission in this case? Government have tried to meet the wishes of not only the Abiana Committee but of the general body of zamindars and have given a remission of Rs. 53 lakhs more or less of a permanent character. Now the honourable mover himself admits that he has financial interest in this motion. He says that he will be benefited by this motion, but not much. I request the Chair to exclude him, therefore, from taking part in the discussion of and voting on this motion. The Chair has already given a ruling that the member who has a personal financial interest in any matter before the House shall not partake in its discussion and voting on it.

Mr. President : Will the honourable member please quote the ruling to which he refers?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : On a previous occasion when we were discussing.....

Mr. President : Will the honourable member please read the ruling? I do not want his version of it. It should be read.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I well remember that you quoted the instance of Parliament and said that in Parliament it is a rule that a member who has financial interest in a matter under discussion is not allowed to vote on a motion relating to such a matter.

Mr. President : If I recollect aright all I said at first was that no member having a direct pecuniary interest in any matter could vote upon it; but I added that I will give a considered ruling and I gave one the same day. According to that ruling pecuniary interest alone is not a disqualification.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I am coming to that. After that you said that a member personally interested was debarred from voting.

Mr. President : If the honourable member behaves like that I shall have to ask him to resume his seat.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I will leave this argument as you are not allowing me to explain it.

Mr. President : I am afraid I shall have to ask the honourable member, unless he asks the forgiveness of the House, to leave the House. I have asked the honourable member to quote my ruling but instead of doing that he is insisting upon his own version of it which is clearly incorrect.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I withdraw my remark.

When these gentlemen of the Abiana Committee made the recommendation and the Government has substantially accepted it, with what face can they now demand the Government to go back on the resolution which they have passed in the Executive Council and which has had the effect of relieving a great burden on the zamindars? The zamindars have known the benefits that have resulted to them and they have appreciated the action of Government in this matter. If the Government were to go back upon the resolution and annul the reduction of abiana the zamindar will put his own version on the Government's action and it would be very awkward for the Government to face the position. I do not think any zamindar has given authority to the honourable mover for his motion. He says he has received letters but not a single letter has been quoted before this House. He should have laid his cards on the table and should have said that the zamindars have expressed themselves in that way. He has not done that and he is, therefore, not justified in bringing this motion. If at all any zamindars advised any member of this House to raise the matter here they would have requested me rather than my honourable friend the mover. For I have constantly stood for their rights and they are well aware of it, whereas the honourable mover on three occasions in this House has spoken against the interest of the zamindars. I can quote those occasions. When the Shikar Act was being passed I opposed it and the honourable member supported it. But after the Act had been passed I know that the zamindars of the honourable member's constituency disowned him.

Mr. President : Order, order. The honourable member should not be personal. Will he please withdraw his remark?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Very well. I will withdraw it. Ask any zamindar what he says about the Shikari Act. The zamindars as a class dislike it.

Mr. President : The honourable member should speak to the motion relating to fodder and not discuss the conduct of the mover of the motion? I may warn him that he has not behaved quite properly to-day, and that I am not going to tolerate this any longer. He has no business to attack a member as he has done.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I have not attacked him. I was speaking about the Shikar Act to bring another argument.

Mr. President : Order, order. The honourable member is not the judge of his own faults. It is for the Chair to decide whether he has gone beyond the limits of propriety or not.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Sir—

Mr. President : The honourable member's time is up. So I cannot allow him to speak any more.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : With these words I oppose the motion.

Mr. President : The honourable member has disobeyed the ruling of the Chair. I requested him to stop speaking but he did not care for my request. Under the circumstances I hold his conduct to be grossly disorderly and request him to withdraw from the Council.

The honourable member then left the Chamber.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural), (Urdu) : Sir, there is no doubt that the motion now before the House is of vital importance and as such it deserves careful consideration on our part. So far as I remember, the decision with regard to the enhancement of water rates on fodder was arrived at some three months ago and I believe the honourable mover served on the Abiana Committee.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : No, I was not a member of the Committee.

Sardar Arjan Singh : Anyhow the arguments advanced in favour of the motion are weighty and convincing. It has been said that water rates charged on fodder crops should be taken to be included in the cost of production. There is no doubt about it. The zamindar has fallen on evil days and he should therefore be allowed to resort to some other subsidiary industry. He keeps milch cattle and produces milk and ghee. That is true. But I wonder when the members of the Abiana Committee knew that fodder was a dire necessity of the zamindars why they recommended that the occupiers' rates should be enhanced. And when the rates are enhanced they come forward with this adjournment motion to reduce these rates. Is it not blowing hot and cold in the same breath? Sir, as you know the zamindars of barani ilaqas are far more hard pressed than the zamindars of the canal irrigated areas but the former have not been granted any relief at all. When the water rates on fodder crops have been increased in pursuance of the recommendation of the Abiana Committee and when no specific reasons have been given for asking the Government to go against their decision I see no reason why I should support the motion under consideration. I therefore, oppose the motion.

Chaudhri Shah Muhammad (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural), (Urdu) : Sir, I rise to support the motion now before the House. The Government have been kind enough to make certain reductions in water rates charged on wheat and cotton crops, but the salutary effect of such reductions has been nullified by the enhancement of water rates charged on fodder crops. This enhancement of water rates has caused discontent, rather resentment amongst the zamindars and they have been constrained to think that whatever was given by one hand has been taken away by the other. Honestly speaking this enhancement has caused great dissatisfaction amongst the zamindars. In reply to the remarks made by my friend Mr. Maya Das I would submit that if we take into consideration the quantity of fodder produced and the price at which it is sold in cities and towns in the province we will find that such rates if charged on fodder grown in such places would not work hardship on the zamindars of those places. But the enhanced water rates charged on fodder crops grown in rural areas are causing great hardship to the zamindars of those areas. I feel that in our zeal to help the zamindars we should not press unreasonable demands and thus make the position of Government awkward. But at the same time I also feel that Government should not hesitate to render reasonable assistance to the zamindars. Let the Government appoint tahsildars and naib-tahsildars to report how much fodder is produced and how much price is realised for it in cities and towns in the province and if some such rates are levied on such fodder, whether it will work hardship on people responsible for producing and selling fodder in such places. If that is done I am sure the report will be in favour of levying some such rates on fodder grown near cities and towns of the province. I, therefore, submit that there would be no harm if enhanced rates are charged on fodder grown in the neighbourhood of cities and towns to make up the deficiency caused in income by the remission granted in rates charged on wheat and cotton crops. But it is rather a sin to burden those who are already over-burdened. We should not add to their anxieties. There is already great scarcity of fodder in villages. Under the present circumstances an increase of a pie in water rates charged on fodder cannot be justified. The oxen of the zamindars are not properly fed for want of sufficient fodder and consequently the labours of the zamindars do not bear fruits which they ought to have borne otherwise. They cannot feed their cattle with grain or bajra. It is only fodder with which they feed their cattle. It would, therefore, be in the fitness of things to reduce the water rates now charged on fodder and that deficiency caused in income by the remission granted in abiana may be made up by levying enhanced rates on fodder grown in the neighbourhood of 184 towns in the province.

I am inclined to think that the members of the Abiana Committee acted in the same manner as members of various select committees act. They do not give much time and thought to the questions that come up before such committees and I will not be far wrong if I say that most of them append their signatures to the reports on being asked by a few of them. The members of the Abiana Committee or at least many of them appear to have acted in a similar manner and that is why this difficulty has arisen. If they had discharged their duty conscientiously this question would never have cropped up. However, I divide the motion now before the House into two parts and so far as the second part is concerned I give my whole-hearted support to it.

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh (Multan Division and Sheikhpura, Sikh, Rural), (Urdu): I was very much wonderstruck to see the somewhat strange attitude which my honourable friend Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan, who claims to be a supporter of the cause of the zamindars, adopted with regard to this motion. I really fail to reconcile this attitude of his with the professions that he has been making ever since he joined us as a member of the Council. Coming to the question before the House I say that the remission that the Government has been pleased to grant to the zamindars ought to have been so distributed as to fully satisfy those for whom this remission in abiana was meant. To render help to a person or to a community is one thing and to strike its imagination by rendering such help is another thing. To be very plain the Government has failed to strike the imagination of the zamindars by the help it has rendered them by this remission. As my friend Sardar Sahib remarked the Government has taken with the other hand what it had given with one hand and has thereby marred the good effect that the remission in abiana on wheat had produced on the zamindars. Not only that. The enhancement of occupiers' rate on fodder has created feelings of discontent and dissatisfaction amongst the poor zamindars and particularly the kamins in the villages who depend so much for their welfare on the fodder crops. I know it for a fact that the zamindars are surprised on this action of the Government. They are surprised because they cannot account for this serious mistake, as they consider it to be, in the presence of such high and capable officers at the disposal of the Government. It passes their comprehension why not only jau but jau also has been included in the fodder crops in regard to which abiana has been enhanced. I may inform the Government, if it is not already aware of it, that jau crop is generally cultivated in those plots of land which are very inferior and which are considered unfit for any other crop. And it is made use of as fodder and in many cases as grain also just before wheat matures and ripens. Therefore, the enhancement on fodder crops like these has been very keenly felt and widely resented.

It is now on the lip of every one that the zamindars should take to subsidiary industries by which they may be able to meet their requirements in times like these when there is so much slump and depression all over the world. I am in perfect agreement with those who advocate and advise this course for the zamindars of this province. But the pity is that these zamindars have so much sense of pride in them that they consider it beneath their dignity to take to poultry farming or dairy farming. I know that in England there is no farm to which either a dairy or poultry farm is not attached. But here in the Punjab the zamindars are too proud to take up these professions as even subsidiary industries. They say that to deal in eggs, etc., is the work of Sansis and other kamins and to sell milk is the work of the Gujjars alone. It is only the kamins, as I have already said, who benefit by these professions. But these kamins too will not find these professions very profitable now when the occupiers' rate on fodder crops have been enhanced. The Government by its action has in a way discouraged these industries and it will, therefore, do well if it reduces these rates again and brings them down to their previous level. I will be excused repetition, but I cannot help saying it once again that this enhancement has been very keenly felt and it would have been more politic and more wise if the Government had not taken this step. If it had decided to remit only 35 or 36 lakhs of rupees, it could have allowed remission in abiana on wheat to a smaller extent. But it is not a good policy to remit abiana on wheat to the extent to which it has been remitted and to make up the loss by increasing the rates on fodder crops. The Government should have acted in a manner, in granting any remission, as to do the greatest good to the greatest numbers. That would have saved it from all criticism and the zamindars would have also been satisfied.

Before I close my remarks I would like to say that my honourable friend from Hoshiarpur does not appear to have carefully read the wording of the motion before the House nor has he understood its import. If he had carefully read it and tried to understand it, I am sure he would never have got up to say that the Government has done the right thing in enhancing the occupiers' rates on fodder crops. I may also say a few words in reply to one remark of my friend from Sheikhpura. He has been pleased to suggest to the Government that the rates on fodder crops grown in the neighbourhood of cities and big towns can be safely and justifiably increase because, as he said, such crops sell at a very high price in the cities. May I ask whether such crops sell at a very high price at Sheikhpura? Certainly not. Barring, of course, a few cities like Lahore and Amritsar and perhaps Gujranwala, there is no other city or big town where fodder sells at a very high price and, therefore, the Government will not be justified to increase the occupiers' rates on fodder crops in places in the neighbourhood of cities in order to reduce them at places far away from such cities. With these words I give my whole-hearted support to the motion moved by my honourable friend from Lahore.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving (Revenue Member): I feel that Government has cause to complain at the form in which this motion is put which is to disapprove of the action of Government in enhancing the occupiers' rates on fodder throughout the province, because it entirely conceals from the public view, even from the view of this House, that that enhancement is part and parcel of a general and I think generous reduction of abiana. Any one might think that at this time of emergency Government has suddenly without rhyme or reason run up fodder rates, whereas this action is only a part of the general reduction and has been taken with the very good purpose of making that reduction go as far as possible. The problem may be reduced to a somewhat simple one. Government had to accept the situation that it had only something like 96 lakhs. That is what has been put before us by the financial advisers of Government. That has been fixed as the vital limiting factor. The sole thought of Government was how to give the greatest good to the greatest number. Honourable members who have read this report of the Abiana Committee and the Resolution of Government will see that Government had placed before it three schedules, three different ways of distributing this money, one was that fodder should be unchanged, the second that fodder should be raised to Rs. 2, and the third that fodder should be raised to Rs. 2-8-0. Now, had the views now expressed in this House been before the Government, and had they been accepted on that occasion, the effect would have been that there would have been a reduction in wheat of ten annas as against one rupee. That was really the main question. Is it better for the people at large to get a rupee on wheat counterbalanced by the rise in fodder or to get ten annas on wheat and not have fodder touched? After all the person who grows fodder is the same person who grows wheat. If he gains in the whole transaction, it is but little unreasonable of him to say "Well, never mind about that rupee you give on wheat; what about my fodder?" In point of fact in this particular harvest we have calculated that the zamindar has been given 26 lakhs on wheat and he has had taken away from him 6 lakhs on fodder. Government may have with one hand taken away while it gave something with the other hand. But the hand with which it gave was much fuller than that with which it took away.

[The Hon'ble Sir Miles Irving.]

On the actual merits of the case, Government has been very much interested in the views which have been expressed. Here are three schedules. If it appeared to Government that really in the interest of the zamindar schedule I is better whereby Government shall give him 10 annas on wheat and give him nothing on fodder, it will not be impervious to that argument. But it appeared to Government that in certain areas fodder is often a very paying business and it also appeared that there was good reason to believe that even outside these areas trade in ghee, milk and bred of cattle was a paying one and that therefore those who did that business could very well pay a good price for fodder. Honourable members will remember that when the rates on fodder were put down those were times when Government could get what it liked on wheat as the prices of wheat were soaring and it was not necessary for Government to squeeze fodder. As a matter of fact it has somewhat surprised the Government that the reduction of rates on fodder has not caused any increase in the area under it. The area under fodder remains the same.

Therefore, for these reasons we thought—we may be right or wrong—that if we took the position of the ordinary man who grows so many kanals of wheat, so much of fodder, so much of cotton he would get the best out of the money we gave him if we gave it in wheat and took it from fodder, but we are not impervious to further arguments. But Government cannot accept this motion which is in the form of a censure and therefore, I am bound to oppose it. I am very much interested in the views expressed and I shall certainly bear them in mind.

Mr. Labh Singh : May I request you that you will be pleased to cancel the order of expulsion passed on Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan as the same is being felt by him and others as being rather harsh? I was not present in the House when the incident took place; but I have taken it upon myself to ask for your indulgence.

Mr. President : If the honourable members of the House wish that he may be forgiven, I have no objection.

(The wish of the House being expressed by voices that he may be forgiven—Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan entered the Chamber amidst applause.)

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah (Urdu) : I was very sorry to hear from the Honourable the Revenue Member that three schedules were appended to the report of the Abiana Committee and that the zamindars were at liberty to select any one of them for adoption by the Government. I very much liked to discuss this question in my first speech, but for want of time I could not do so. I may however say that even if the selection of any one of the schedules depended upon the zamindars, I for one could not advise the zamindars which is the best to be selected. I am inclined to think that even other members of the Council, laymen as they are, could not tender any useful advice on the point. It is after all for the experts of the Government to play with the figures, which may after all be wrong. It was, therefore, not proper for the Honourable Revenue Member to take shelter behind this argument.

I say, if the Government had definitely decided to grant relief to the zamindars to the extent of 35 lakhs only why did it remit as much as 52 lakhs in the first instance and then want to take back in the form of enhanced occupiers' rates as much as 17 lakhs from the fodder crops? It would have been much better if it had remitted only 35 lakhs in the very beginning and thus avoided this question being raised in this way. As I have said before, the enhancement of the occupiers' rates on fodder crops has produced a very bad effect on the minds of the zamindars in general. I fail to find words to express the bad effect that it has produced. I have been told that on account of this enhancement many zamindars have been made to pay more than they had to pay even if the remission in abiana on wheat had not been granted. The case of the zamindars on the Mailai Canals is in point.

Mr. President : This has been said already.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : I only wanted to emphasise that many zamindars on other canals also have been made to pay Rs. 15 or to take a very conservative estimate, Rs. 12 on account of this enhancement where they used to pay Rs. 10 only before. Again, Sir, I want to ask one very relevant question from the Government. What right the Government had to charge enhanced rates on fodder crops without due notice?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : This point was not raised in the debate and so I could not reply to it.

Mr. President : No new point should be raised in reply.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : My point is to show where the harshness has occurred.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : On a point of order. That is a very important point and it was not raised in the debate and I, therefore, could not reply to it.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : With the permission of the Chair the Leader of the House can answer to this point now.

Mr. President : Yes, he has a right of reply.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : What I wanted to make clear is that if the Government had given due notice with regard to the enhancement of these rates on fodder crops, it is very probable that the zamindars would not have sown as much fodder crop as has been sown now. Without such a notice the Government had no justification whatever to charge enhanced rates. It is, therefore, only reasonable for the Government to reduce those to their previous level. I do not think it will be very difficult for the Government to do so and to make a further provision of 17 lakhs for bringing down these rates. If there is no other source to look to, it can reduce the expenditure on the Irrigation Department which, as it has itself admitted, gone up very high during the course of the last few years. We know that Government has given reasons for this increase in expenditure, but I believe that there is much scope for reducing them in order to give much needed relief to the zamindars. With regard to the remarks of the honourable member from Hoshiarpur I think it will suffice to say that by opposing this motion he has betrayed his gross ignorance of the facts relating to the question under consideration. He has neither studied the report nor listened to the debates of the House. With these words I commend this motion for the acceptance of the House.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : I will endeavour to be as brief as possible and to confine my remarks to what has fallen from the honourable member in his concluding speech. He referred to the Mailai Canals. As a matter of fact on non-perennial canals on the Lower Sutlej Valley Project we actually did find that this distribution had worked out in an exceptional way and that the people were paying more than they did before and therefore we at the last moment postponed the revision for the present rabi and we are having new rates under consideration for those non-perennial canals. I must refer to a point the honourable member made, that these rates on fodder were raised without notice. I will refer to the terms of reference to the Abiana Committee, that they were to find means of readjusting rates. Readjusting means, if necessary, raising as well as lowering and as I have already explained Government found that so much money had to be found and in the opinion of its advisers the most profitable way of finding it from the point of view of the zamindar was by a reduction of the rates on wheat and other crop and by an enhancement of those on fodder, and it was fortified in that method of dealing with the situation by the opinion of the Committee which has said that in certain circumstances a general reduction may be accompanied by an enhancement on fodder. Now, therefore the total scheme must stand as a whole and that scheme had to be introduced at once, not merely because of the members of the Abiana Committee most pressing that it should be introduced at once, but also because in the course of the debate in this House I gave an assurance that it would be introduced with effect from this rabi. If therefore that promise has to be carried out, if this assurance were to be fulfilled the whole scheme had to be introduced at once including a certain portion of reduction. I come finally to the real meaning of this debate. The motion is, as I have said, to disapprove the action of Government in enhancing the occupiers' rate on fodder in this province. I have explained that Government was tied to 86 lakhs and I am afraid my honourable colleague who sits on my left can give countenance to no suggestion that 5 or 6 lakhs more should be produced. As a matter of fact 17 lakhs more ought to be produced. Therefore that is the position we are in and if you look at that position the only meaning of the motion would be that you accept Schedule I, i.e., only a ten annas reduction on wheat and no enhancement on fodder and that advice the honourable member is not prepared to give to me. Therefore I think we have had a very interesting debate and it may now draw to a close.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the Council do now adjourn.

AZAN IN GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS IN THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

3436. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that azan is called in the boarding house of the Gujrat College, a Government building ;
- (b) whether azan is allowed in Government buildings in the Education Department ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) No.

(b) No general orders have been issued by Government in the matter. I would request the honourable member to ask some friend to explain to him the meaning of the azan and then to let me know whether he still entertains a hostile feeling towards it.

HINDU WATER MAN FOR THE GUJRAT COLLEGE.

3437. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the only non-Muslim manial in the Government College, Gujrat, was turned out on the ground of his being a junior man, when a post was reduced by the Government in April last ;

[R. B. Lala Sewak Ram,]

- (b) whether it is a fact that when the Hindu staff represented to the Principal the difficulty that they and the non-Muslim students had to suffer during the summer in the matter of water supply and the supply of other needs of the Hindu staff during College hours, the Principal did not pay heed to their representation ;
- (c) whether the Government propose to take steps to appoint a whole-time Hindu water-man for the Gujrat College ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : I regret that the reply to this question is not yet ready. It will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

GOVERNMENT COLLEGE, GUJRAT.

3438. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that M. Chiragh-ud-din, a teacher in the Gujrat College, was absent from the college on 2nd January 1932, the day following the Christmas holidays, and that his absence on that day was treated as casual leave ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that Lala Kanshi Ram, a professor of the College, took leave for one day in continuation of Christmas holidays of 1932 and that it was treated as privilege leave ;
- (c) if the answers to above are in the affirmative, the reason why in one case it was treated as casual leave and in the other as privilege leave ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) No. M. Chiragh-ud-din attended college on 2nd January, but as he was unwell he was permitted by L. Sri Krishan Kapur (Principal) to go home at 11 A. M.

(b) Yes. L. Kanshi Ram Narang was granted privilege leave for the 4th January and allowed to combine it with the Christmas holidays, the intervening Sunday, the Proclamation Day and Guru Gobind Singh's Birthday. He could not under the rules be granted casual leave.

(c) Does not arise.

WHEAT CROP IN THE ILAQA BEIT.

3439. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state—

- (a) whether the Government is aware of the fact that the yield of wheat crop this year is much below the average in the ilaqa Beit of tahsil Nawanshahr and tahsil Garhshankar ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the suspended land revenue demand for the last kharif is being realised along with the rabi instalment of land revenue ;
- (c) whether the Government is prepared to grant some concessions to the zamindars regarding the payment of land revenue ?
If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : The required information is being collected and will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

M. MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN HAKIM, PRINCIPAL, GUJRAT COLLEGE.

3440. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that M. Mohammad Hussain Hakim, the Gujrat College Principal, is a local man ;
- (b) whether Government will state their policy regarding the posting of high Government servants in their native districts ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) So far as the inspecting staff is concerned it is the normal policy of Government not to post them to their home districts, but this policy is not applied in the case of the teaching staff. On the contrary, it is a distinct advantage if the head and the teaching staff of an educational institution have local influence.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Is the Honourable Minister aware that this is not done in other departments ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : I was only talking of the teaching staff and not of the other departments. There is a lot of difference between a police officer, for instance, and a schoolmaster.

LAHORE QUTAB ICE FACTORY.

3441. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : With reference to the answer to unstarred question No. 6811, will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state whether the Municipal Engineer, Lahore Municipality, inspected the Qutab Ice Factory during the summer of 1933, and, if so, whether in his opinion the factory was a nuisance to the neighbourhood, or not ? If he found the factory to be a nuisance to the neighbourhood, what steps have so far been taken by the Municipal Committee or the Government to save the neighbours from the existing trouble caused by this factory ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokal Chand Narang : The Municipal Engineer inspected the Qutab Ice Factory on the 28th June 1933. He found it to be a nuisance to the neighbourhood. The factory's licence was accordingly not renewed for 1933-34.

3442. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (b) whether any inquiry has been made ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) and (b) Yes.

- (a) what has been the produce of rabi this year in Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana districts as compared with that of the years 1931 and 1932 ;
- (b) whether the produce of rabi is less than that of the year 1931-32 ;
- (c) what remission has been proposed in both the districts this year ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) The returns for rabi 1931-32 and 1932-33 will be found by the honourable member in the Season and Crop reports for those years and that for 1933-34 in the report shortly to be published.

(b) As far as wheat and gram are concerned, the area matured is greater than in 1932-33, but less than in 1931-32.

(c) No remission has been proposed in these districts with the exception of special remission of Rs. 4,579 made on account of damage to crops caused by hail in Garhshanker tahsil of the Hoshiarpur district.

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : I regret that the reply to this question is not yet ready. It will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN THE SERVICES.

3445. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) how many times in the years 1931 and 1932 the Governor in Council met to consider the question of communal representation in the services ;
- (b) whether he will lay on the table the instructions issued to the heads of departments for recruitment of the different communities ;
- (c) whether he will make a statement as to the steps taken by the Government to make up the deficiency of the different communities in the different departments ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) It would not be in the public interest to disclose the information asked.

(b) and (c) The policy of Government was enunciated by the Honourable Member for Finance on the 19th July 1927 in this House,—vide pages 873 to 877 of the Punjab Legislative Council Debates from 18th July to 25th November 1927—Volume X-B. That policy is still being pursued.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN THE SERVICES.

3446. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) what steps he has taken to make up the deficiency of various communities with regard to the representation in services in the departments under his control ;
- (b) whether he is prepared to make any statement with regard to the progress made in making up the deficiency in respect of communal representation in the services since he has taken the charge of the office ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) None. The responsibility for ensuring that no one class or community predominates unduly in any department is primarily that of the head of the department. If the honourable member can indicate any instance in which this responsibility has obviously not been fulfilled, I shall be glad to make enquiries.

(b) I may remind the honourable member that I have been in charge of my present office for rather less than two months.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN THE SERVICES.

3447. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) what steps he has taken to make up the deficiency of various communities with regard to the representation in the services in the departments under his control ;
- (b) whether he is prepared to make any statement with regard to the progress made in making up the deficiency in respect of communal representation in the services since he has taken the charge of his office ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) The policy of Government was stated by the Honourable Finance Member in a debate in the Legislative Council on the 19th July, 1927. This is still the policy of Government, and Government will continue to carry out the requirements of the formula contained in the said statement of policy.

(b) Government thinks that the labour of collecting the information for the brief period mentioned would be out of proportion to its value.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN THE SERVICES.

3448. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) what steps he has taken to make up the deficiency of various communities with regard to the representation in the services in the departments under his control ;
- (b) whether he is prepared to make any statement as to the progress made in making up the deficiency since he has taken charge of his office ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) The policy of Government regarding the maintenance of the communal balance in services, as explained by the Honourable Finance Member in his statement made in the Punjab Legislative Council on the 19th July 1927, is being adhered to.

[The Hon. Dr. Gokal Chand Narang.]

(b) Within the short time available since the receipt of the notice of this question it has not been found possible to prepare a statement, but the honourable member's attention is invited to the Consolidated Statement showing the proportionate representation of the various communities in different Departments of the Punjab Government published annually.

3449. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) the number of districts where monopoly is given to a single company or firm for plying lorries on hire ;
- (b) for how long one company or firm has held the licence in each district ;
- (c) whether the Government intends to cancel such licences and issue licences without monopoly ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : The required information is being collected and will be communicated to the honourable member when ready.

HUNGER STRIKE IN LAHORE CENTRAL JAIL.

3450. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the prisoners in the Lahore Central Jail went on hunger strike about the middle of the month of May 1934 ;
- (b) the cause of the hunger strike ;
- (c) whether any member of the Council visited the jail and made a report on the event and whether he will lay that report on the table ;
- (d) whether the grievances of the prisoners have been removed ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Yes.

(b) They went on hunger strike as a protest against the holding of food parade in the manner prescribed by paragraph 591 of the Punjab Jail Manual.

(c) No such report has been received.

(d) The prisoners had no legitimate grievance and gave up the hunger strike.

3451. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased —

(iii) the number of dailies in the province in the years 1922 and 1932 ;

(ii) Eighty-one and 203.

(iii) Thirty-nine to 45.

(b) No.

3452. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Member for Finance be pleased to state—

(a) the number of detenues in the Punjab Jails from other parts of the country ;

(b) whether the Government has received complaints with regard to their health and treatment ;

(c) how many of them have applied for transfer from the Punjab jails ;

(d) what steps have been taken on their applications ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Three.

(b) Yes.

(c) One.

(d) The application was rejected by the Government of Bengal.

PERSONS SHADOWED BY THE POLICE.

3453. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

(a) the number of persons in the province who are shadowed by the police ;

(b) whether the Government have received complaints from time to time that police officers harass certain political workers ;

(c) if so, whether the Government propose issuing instructions to the police officers for not harassing political workers ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) It is not in the public interest to give this information.

(b) Yes.

(c) The police already have instructions to this effect.

POLITICAL OFFENDERS.

3454. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Member for Finance be pleased to—

(a) state whether it is a fact that all the political offenders are kept in cells under the last year's instructions of the Inspector-General of Prisons ;

(b) place on the table of the House those instructions stating to which class of prisoners those instructions apply ;

[Ch. Afzal Haq.]

- (c) state what necessitated the Government to confine a certain class of political prisoners to be kept in separate cells?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) No.

(b) The orders are of a confidential nature, and it is not in the public interest to disclose them. They apply to those prisoners who have been connected with the terrorist movement.

(c) Mainly to prevent them from contaminating young and impressionable prisoners with their ideas.

CONTROVERSY BETWEEN LAHORE ELECTRIC SUPPLY COMPANY AND LAHORE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

3455. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that a controversy is going on for a fairly long time between the Lahore Electric Supply Company and the Lahore Municipal Committee;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the District Magistrate, Lahore, promulgated an order, under section 144, Civil Procedure Code, prohibiting the Electric Supply Company from refusing electric supply to Lahore Municipal Committee;
- (c) for how long the tussle between the Municipal Committee and the Electric Supply Company has been going on;
- (d) why Government did not take early steps to amicably settle the matter?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes. On the 12th May 1934.

(c) Relations between the Municipal Committee and the Electric Supply Company have for some years been strained. Their disputes were discussed in detail in Chapter XI of Part I of the Report on the Affairs of the Municipal Committee of Lahore (1931). A reference is invited particularly to paragraph 128 in that chapter. The particular dispute to which publicity has been given in the press, regarding the terms of the new contract between the two bodies, may be said to date from the 19th April of the present year, when the Municipal Committee first made its suggestions to the Lahore Electric Supply Company, Ltd., regarding the terms of the new contract.

(d) The matter was primarily one for adjustment between the municipal body and the licensee-company. The district officers and the local Government, however, throughout maintained a close watch over the progress of the negotiations between the parties, and after inviting the representatives of the parties to a conference on the 14th of June 1934 assisted in securing agreement between them which it is anticipated will be confirmed by the two bodies concerned.

CUT MOTION REGARDING LAND REVENUE DEMAND.

3456. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state—

- (a) what action has been taken on the cut motion reducing the land revenue demand by 25 per cent. carried by a majority of votes at the last Budget Session of the Council ;
- (b) whether 25 per cent. reduction has been allowed in the land revenue demand for the present rabi crop ? If not, why not ;
- (c) whether the Government propose to give effect to this cut at the time of the next crop ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) and (b) Government were unable to agree with the necessity of a general reduction of 25 per cent. in the land revenue demand. They have, however, followed their accepted policy of giving special remissions on account of low prices.

(c) The question whether any reduction or remission at the next harvest is necessary will be considered in due course on its merits.

WHEAT CROP.

3457. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state—

- (a) whether the Government is aware of the fact that the yield of wheat crop this year is about $\frac{1}{3}$ rd less than the average yield ;
- (b) whether the Government has reduced the land revenue demand in proportion to the reduced yield of the wheat crop ;
- (c) whether the zamindars are entitled to any reduction of land revenue ; if so, what concession Government has granted to the zamindars ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) The statement appears to be correct with regard to certain unirrigated tracts in the Jullundur and Ludhiana districts.

(b) No.

(c) Remission of fixed land revenue is determined by a variety of considerations relating to each estate and not solely by the yield of one crop in a single harvest ; and Government has no reason to believe that the case has not been properly dealt with by the local officers.

RIOTS IN CONNECTION WITH THE TAZIA PROCESSION.

3458. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan ; Will the Honourable Member for Finance kindly state—

- (a) the names and number of places where riots took place in connection with the tazia procession this year ;
- (b) whether the Government is prepared to issue stringent instructions to the local officers for the prompt suppression of all such outbreaks. If so, when ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) One, viz., Jaijon, Hoshiarpur district.

(b) Instructions for dealing with such outbreaks already exist, and the issue of supplementary instructions does not appear necessary.

MOTOR LORRIES BETWEEN HOSHIARPUR AND BHARWAIN OF UNA.

3459. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that a single firm has got the monopoly of running motor lorries between Hoshiarpur and Bharwain and Una ;
- (b) why the license is issued to only one company ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that many other persons applied for license who even offered better terms ;
- (d) if so, whether the Government intends to cancel the present license and to give license to companies or firms without any one holding a monopoly ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) Yes.

(b) The roads are dangerous and unfit for unrestricted motor traffic.

(c) Yes.

(d) No.

ASSISTANT SURGEONS.

3460. Chaudhri Riasat Ali : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (i) whether 20 assistant surgeons were recruited in 1930 ;
- (ii) whether the posts were advertised as permanent ones ;
- (iii) whether it was mentioned in the letters of appointment that these people were taken in the permanent cadre and would be on probation for a period of 2 years ;
- (iv) whether that period has already elapsed ;
- (v) whether they have been confirmed in their appointments ;
- (vi) if not, why not ;
- (vii) whether similar vacancies have been filled in 1932 and 1934 ;
- (viii) if so, on what conditions ;
- (ix) whether there is any provision for the temporary assistant surgeons in the cadre now ;
- (x) whether any of these doctors have earned their first increment ;
- (xi) whether Government is prepared to consider the question of their confirmation ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (i) to (iv) The reply is in the affirmative.

(v) A notification confirming these assistant surgeons is likely to be issued shortly.

(vi) Does not arise.

- (vi) Yes.
- (vii) The conditions were the same as in 1980.
- (ix) No, but it sometimes becomes necessary to fill an appointment which has been sanctioned for a certain specified length of time only, and which is not of a permanent character.
- (x) The assistant surgeons recruited in 1980 and 1982 have earned their first increments. These increments are being allowed them.
- (xi) Those officials who were appointed after 31st December 1980 cannot, according to Government orders in connection with retrenchment, be confirmed for the present in the Government service. They will continue to be shown as officiating so long as these orders remain in force.

MOTOR BUS SERVICE FROM SIMLA TO MASHOBRA.

3461. Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerji : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether his attention has been called to the correspondence which has appeared in the Statesman on the 12th May, the Civil and Military Gazette on the 9th May and the Liddell's Weekly on the 28th April and 12th May 1984 on the subject of an experimental motor bus service from Simla to Mashobra? If not, will the Honourable Minister take an early opportunity of procuring this correspondence;
- (b) whether the Honourable Minister is aware that there is a very strong public demand in Simla that the experiment of running this bus service under municipal control be given a fair and reasonable trial;
- (c) the reason why this legitimate request supported by almost all classes at the station as well as by the municipality has been summarily refused;
- (d) whether in view of the fact that the Government of India possesses extremely large interests in Simla, the Government of India has been consulted on this question? If not, whether the Honourable Minister is now prepared to do so;
- (e) whether he is also prepared to reconsider his decision and so prevent the possibility of a public demonstration in Simla as a protest against this decision?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes to some.

(b) The proposal put forward by the municipality undoubtedly has the support of a section of the Simla public. There is at the same time an opposition which though not organized is believed to be strong. The suggestion that the scheme is "supported by almost all classes at the station" is not correct.

(c) The Mashobra road, which is not wide, carries a considerable traffic of horsemen, pedestrians and rickshaws, particularly at week-ends. Motor traffic would be the cause of great inconvenience, and even danger, to these users of the road.

(d) Any communication which may be received on the subject from the Government of India will of course receive from this Government the most careful consideration. The matter is, however, one which is clearly within the purview of the local Government.

(e) Government will be prepared to consider any new facts brought to their notice, but these will have to be of a cogent character to justify a revision of the decision already reached.

KHARABA IN JANDIALA DIVISION.

3462. Chaudhri Faqir Husain Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state—

- (a) the total area irrigated in Jandiala division during kharif 1933-34 ;
- (b) the amount of kharaba given in the said division ;
- (c) the proportion the amount mentioned in (b) bears to the kharaba given on area irrigated by perennial canals in other divisions of the province ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) 186,636 acres.

(b) 1,095 acres.

(c) It is not clear what information is sought, but the following is given as being probably what the honourable member requires. The percentage of remission given in the Jandiala division was 59 per cent. as against 1·25 per cent. for the Upper Bari Doab Canal and 5·21 per cent. for all perennial canals in the province.

IRRIGATION IN JANDIALA DIVISION.

3463. Chaudhri Faqir Husain Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state—

- (a) the amount spent on remodelling scheme in Jandiala division in 1930 ;
- (b) the total area under irrigation in this division ;
- (c) the proportion the area mentioned in (b) bears to the area irrigated by perennial canals in the province ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) Rs. 13,597 in 1930-31.

(b) 361,051 acres.

(c) 3·78 per cent.

KHARABA IN JANDIALA DIVISION.

3464. Chaudhri Faqir Husain Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state—

- (a) the number of applications for the grant of kharaba received in 1933-34, in Jandiala division ;
- (b) the number of applications rejected without an enquiry being made into the circumstances of the case ;
- (c) the number of applications found to be based upon facts ;
- (d) the number of applications upon which it was remarked that the crop having been removed the facts stated in the application cannot be verified ;

- (e) the number of cases in which kharaba was actually granted ;
- (f) the number of cases in which the applications for kharaba were rejected ;
- (g) the proportion (e) and (f) bear to the kharaba granted on area irrigated by other perennial canals in the province ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) 2,654.

(b) Nil.

(c), (d), (e), (f) and (g). The unit of kharaba is the field number and not the application. Most applications contain requests for remission of many field numbers. The department does not keep any statistics enabling Government to reply to the parts (c) to (g) of the question without very great labour.

ABIANA.

3465. Chaudhri Faqir Husain Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state—

- (i) (a) the amount of abiana realised district-wise in (i) rabi 1933 and (ii) kharif 1933-34 ;
- (b) the amount of inam the lambardars were entitled to get under the rules, district-wise ;
- (c) the amount of inam actually given to the lambardars district-wise ;
- (d) the amount of inam confiscated district-wise, due to non-payment of abiana at the proper time ;

- (f) what steps he proposes to take so that the number of students be restored to the original strength ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a), (b), (c) and (d). A statement giving the required information is placed on the table :—

(e) The decline in numbers is largely due to the following causes :—

- (i) For the enrolment in the ninth class the college has to depend only on the Government Middle School, and even this institution, owing to the rivalry and vigorous propaganda of the local high schools, has not been able to pass on all its boys to the Government Intermediate College.
- (ii) In the Intermediate classes, the numbers have fallen because Jullundur and Ludhiana now have degree colleges, and some parents prefer to send their boys to a college at which they can complete their degree course. The decline in numbers in the college classes is also partially due to the fact that the tuition fees charged in the D. A.-V. colleges both at Hoshiarpur and at Jullundur are much lower than those charged at the Government College. Another possible reason for this decline is that Economics which has little educational value at the intermediate stage but which is comparatively much easier than the alternative subjects, is not taught in the Government College, while it is being taught in the D. A.-V. colleges at Hoshiarpur and at Jullundur.

(f) The Inspection Committee for Government Colleges went into this question thoroughly at their last inspection of the college, and their report and recommendations are under consideration of the Government.

[Sardar Jawahar Singh Dhillon.]

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : But this is a separate question.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The answer is exactly the same.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : That is no answer. I rise to a point of order, Sir. The answer given by the Honourable Finance Member is no answer to my question. My question is :—

"Will the Honourable Member for Finance please state in reference to the reply given to part (c) of starred question no. 1703,² asked on 10th November 1932, namely "for technical education and technical institutes he (the Director of Industries) has the assistance of technical experts"— ¹Page 272 infra.

²Volume XXII, page 242.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : I respectfully repeat that my question as framed by me and as admitted by you and already printed on the order paper has to be replied. The Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government who had undertaken to reply, as I understand it, on behalf of the Honourable Finance Member has entered into explaining as to what are the duties of the Director of Industries. That is not my question. I do not ask for the duties of the Director of Industries.

Mr. President : Please allow him to finish his reply and if you wish to say anything further you may do so after his answer is finished.

HINDU JAT AS INSPECTOR OF POLICE.

3521. Chaudhri Ram Sarup : Will the Honourable Finance Member kindly state whether it is a fact that in 1918 in answer to a question put by Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand, Government held out an assurance that at least one Hindu Jat will be recruited directly as Inspector of Police as soon as vacancies occur? If so, how many persons have been recruited directly as Inspectors of Police since 1918 and was any of them a Hindu Jat? If not, has Government any intention of redeeming that assurance?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : No such assurance was given. It was, however, stated that the Inspector-General of Police is always prepared to consider the claims of any Hindu Jat candidates who have the necessary qualifications. Sixteen direct appointments of Inspectors of Police have been made since 1918, but none was a Hindu Jat. The policy of Government in this matter remains the same as was indicated by the reply to the previous question on the subject.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ELECTION TO MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, SARGODHA.

1. Sardar Sahib Sardar Ujjal Singh : (a) Is the Honourable Minister or Local Self-Government aware that election of members to Municipal Committee, Sargodha, was held on 15th to 18th December, 1933, and results declared on 19th December ;

(b) is he also aware that the names of elected members have not so far been notified in the Government Gazette ; if not, the reason for the same ?

2. Sardar Sahib Sardar Ujjal Singh : (a) Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state the period under the Municipal Election Rules within which the Deputy Commissioner of a district should forward the names of the successful candidates to the Commissioner in the case of a second class municipality ?

[S. S. Sardar Ujjal Singh.]

(b) Did the Deputy Commissioner, Shahpur district, comply with the election rules in the case of the Sargodha Municipality? If not, why not?

3. Sardar Sahib Sardar Ujjal Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state whether he has received any representation on the subject of election of members to Municipal Committee, Sargodha, from the Sargodha Ratepayers' Association? If so, what action has he been pleased to take in the matter?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : It is very difficult on this short notice to give a detailed reply to the questions put by the honourable member but I expect it would satisfy him to know that on a representation received in connection with this matter a report has already been requisitioned from the Commissioner and that on receipt of it necessary action will be taken.

APPOINTMENT OF REVENUE MEMBER.

4. Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : (a) Will the Honourable Finance Member please state if the attention of Government has been drawn to the disappointment and indignation expressed in the Indian press on the appointment of a non-Indian in the leave vacancy of Sir Sikander Hyat Khan?

(b) If so, will he please state why the appointment was made against the established convention and the deliberate recommendation contained in clause 5 of the Joint Select Committee's report?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Government have seen various opinions on the subject in the Indian press; but they have by no means been all of the character suggested by the honourable member.

(b) The honourable member presumably has in mind the views of the Joint Select Committee as expressed in their comments on clause 5 of the draft bill of the present Government of India Act. These are contained in paragraph 7 and not paragraph 5 of their report. So far as permanent Members of the Executive Council are concerned, the arrangement is in accordance with the recommendations of the Joint Select Committee. The present acting arrangements, which are for a short period only, were made in order to avoid two changes in the charge of the portfolio within a few months. There was no intention on the part of the Governor in Council to create any precedent, nor will the arrangements made in exceptional circumstances be regarded by him as a precedent.

APPOINTMENT OF REVENUE MEMBER.

5. Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : Will the Honourable Finance Member please state—

(a) if it is a fact that the reserve half of the Punjab Cabinet has never been without an Indian member like other provincial Cabinets;

(b) if it is a fact that the Indian Members of the provincial Executive Council, besides administering the departments placed in their charge, are consulted in matters relating to important questions of policy, especially as regards reforms and the opinions of Indian members of the reserved half of provincial Government have on many important points, in the past, been different from the opinions held by the official members ;

- (c) if it is a fact that during these days, opinions on questions of provincial autonomy are being raised in England ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Yes.

(b) For a description of the relations prevailing within the Executive Government and of its method of working I would refer the honourable member to paragraphs 39 and 40 of Chapter VIII of Volume I, Part I of the Memorandum prepared by the Punjab Government for the use of the Indian Statutory Commission. The description there given still holds good. It will be seen that it is the practice in the Punjab Government to consult freely with Indian Members of the Government, including the Ministers, in all matters of common interest. These, of course, include matters relating to constitutional reform. I shall not be revealing matters of a confidential character when I say that it is inevitable that from time to time there should be difference of opinion on some matters—as between officials themselves ; between officials and non-officials ; and between non-officials themselves. Nevertheless, in the words of the Memorandum already quoted :—

“ Neither side feels that any vital interest has been jeopardized. The set-backs which the system has forced them to accept have been outweighed by the achievement of a very substantial measure of constructive work in the development of the province.”

- (c) Yes.

APPOINTMENT OF REVENUE MEMBER.

6. Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : Will the Honourable Finance Member please state—

- (a) whether the Cabinet deciding that an Indian need not be appointed to fill the temporary vacancy caused by the leave of Sir Sikander Hyat Khan, included an Indian Member ;
(b) whether Ministers were consulted collectively in a meeting or individually, and if so, what were their joint or individual opinions ;
(c) whether this temporary appointment was offered to any Indian, and if so, when ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) and (b) The decision was made by the present Governor in Council under section 92 (3) of the Government of India Act.

- (c) It is not in the public interest to disclose opinion which is obviously of a highly confidential nature.

POLICY IN THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

7. Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri Fazal Ali : (a) Has the attention of the Honourable Minister for Education been drawn to a series of letters which have recently appeared in the Tribune over the signature of Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram holding Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi, Assistant Director of Public Instruction, responsible for the general policy of the Department and for all appointments and promotions and alleging that the present policy of the Department is pro-Muslim?

(b) Will the Honourable Minister kindly state how far the allegations made in the said letters both with reference to Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi and the general policy of the Department are true?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : It is a lengthy answer and I shall lay it on the table.

Mian Nurullah : Does it take away the right of honourable members to put supplementary questions.

Mr. President : If the answer is a lengthy one it may be laid on the table. That is enough.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Then it means that in regard to supplementary questions we have to give notice of them.

Mr. President : Yes.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (1) (a) Yes.

(b) After a close and careful scrutiny of the cases mentioned by Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram in his letters to the press, Government is fully convinced that the allegations are without foundation.

2. All the appointments and promotions mentioned in the honourable member's letter published in the Tribune of April 11th, 1934, are either in the Provincial Educational Service or in the Subordinate Educational Service above the grade of Rs. 110—5—135, and Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi is not concerned with them either directly or indirectly. With reference to the specific cases mentioned, the files when going up to the Director of Public Instruction did not even pass through the hands of the Assistant Director, except in the three following cases:—

- (i) In the case of No. 1 of the letter under reference, the Assistant Director suggested the name of a Sikh in place of Sardar Sadhu Singh but the Director overruled this suggestion and appointed a Muslim.
- (ii) In the case of Mr. Abdur Rashid, No. 2, of Ludhiana, a very strong recommendation was received from Mr. Harvey which the Assistant Director merely passed on to the Director.
- (iii) With reference to No. 9, Mr. Siraj Din, Mr. Garrett, Principal, Government College, Lahore, and Mr. Dickinson, Head of the English Department of that college, very strongly recommended the appointment to the Provincial Educational Service. The Assistant Director, however, suggested that he should in the first instance be appointed to the Subordinate Educational Service and he was so appointed. Later on strong representations from Mr. Garrett, Mr. Parkinson, when officiating as Director of Public Instruction, recommended him for promotion to the Provincial Educational Service, which was done. It may be mentioned that Mr. Siraj Din is an M. A. (first Division) in English of the Punjab University and a B. Litt. of the University of Oxford; no officer in the Provincial Educational Service (class II) or in the Subordinate Educational Service has such high qualifications in this subject.

3. With regard to Mr. Fazal Din, No. 7, it may be pointed out that he was transferred to Simla on Mr. Wilson's advice before Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi became Assistant Director. It may also be noted that he is an Indian Christian and not a Muslim.

4. Of the eleven instances mentioned by the honourable member in his letter published on April 22, 1934, eight did not fall within the province of the Assistant Director of Public Instruction and therefore were not dealt with by him. Of the remaining three, one was decided before his time. In the second case, the man was reverted because the Inspector reported him as inefficient, the substitute being appointed by the Inspector himself according to the prevailing practice. In the third case, the appointment was made by the Principal, Government College, Lahore.

5. The honourable member's letter published on the 25th of April, 1934, mentions that Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi has arrogated to himself the duties of other officers in the office of the Director of Public Instruction. The fact, however, is that Khan Bahadur is discharging the same duties and functions as his predecessors in office did. The honourable member's letter published on April 28, 1934, complains of the present communal proportion in the office of the Director of Public Instruction. This is as follows :—

	Per cent.
Muslims	46.4
Hindus	35.2
Sikhs	9.8
Christians	8.4

These figures do not indicate that the Muslims are over-represented in the office. At all events, the Assistant Director is not responsible for this proportion. The present Assistant Director has made only one appointment in the office, a Hindu. As regards promotions, the Assistant Director has made only two, one of which has gone to the seniormost clerk in the office, a Muslim and the other to a Hindu. It may be added here that for more than 20 years there was no Muslim head assistant in the office of the Director of Public Instruction. Inspectors and headmasters are selected by the Director and not by the Assistant Director as alleged by Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram.

6. In his letter published on May 4, 1934, the honourable member mentions certain cases of promotions. All these are cases of officers above the grade of Rs. 110—5—135 in the Subordinate Educational Service, and the Assistant Director is not at all concerned. It may, however, be added that transfer from the teaching line to the inspectorate or vice versa is neither promotion nor reduction and that therefore in the case of Chaudhri Pran Nath and Lala Hardayal Chopra there has been no reduction or degradation; similar action was taken in the case of Mufti Ahmad Said, District Inspector of Schools, Gurgaon, and Pir Wilayat Shah, District Inspector of Schools,

[The Hon. Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon.]

Attock. Moreover, Lala Hardayal Chopra's transfer to the teaching line took place before Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi became Assistant Director. As regards M. Khurshaid Hasan, his promotion to Rs. 200—10—250 grade was made before the present Director and Assistant Director were appointed to their present posts.

7. In his letter published on May 12, 1934, the honourable member complains that in the Simla move the Muslims have been specially favoured by the Assistant Director. The only communal change that has taken place this year is that a Hindu clerk has been replaced by a Sikh clerk; the Muslim proportion remains the same as before.

8. It will thus be clear that the honourable member was not in possession of the true facts of the various cases and it is to be regretted that he did not verify them before he made allegations which are contrary to facts and thus created false impressions in the public mind.

9. As regards the general policy of the department three statements are laid on the table showing the relative position of each of the communities in 1926 and 1934 in respect of representation in services, amounts of grants-in-aid received, and the proportion of the recognised schools.

first increment, and when issuing orders for their confirmation, and when sanctioning pension.

Superintending engineers see the personal registers annually, and take such action as they consider necessary or advisable with a view to confirming or reversing any unfavourable entries.

(b) No, as these reports deal with the general working of the year. But adverse entries are dealt with as in (a), and communicated finally by the Superintending Engineer to the person concerned.

(b) Paragraph 3 of the 1919 Resolution, which was published in the Punjab Government Gazette.

(b) A statement is laid on the table.

Statement.

The orders referred to by Sir Henry Craik were as follows :—

A point of considerable importance is the definition to be employed of the term "agriculturist." After careful consideration, the Governor in Council has decided to adhere to the definition used in the Resolution of the 3rd of October 1919, viz. :—

"All hereditary proprietors or tenure holders of agricultural land, mainly dependent thereon and residing in rural areas, as well as actual cultivators of such land."

There are, however, reasons to suppose that in compiling statistics to illustrate the effect given to the orders conveyed in "the Resolution of the 3rd of October 1919, this definition has been used with considerable laxity, and that in certain departments non-agriculturists have been entered on the strength of their own statements as agriculturists without any attempt to verify those statements. In order to avoid such mistakes, heads of departments should follow the principle explained below. Where a Government servant is not a member of a tribe notified as 'an agricultural tribe' under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, he must, if he claims to be an agriculturist, satisfy the head of his department that he actually comes under the definition quoted above. If he fails so to satisfy the head of his department, he should be entered as a non-agriculturist. The expression 'notified agricultural tribe' in the preceding sentence is not to include tribes notified as agricultural tribes in separate groups, as specified in appendix B of Financial Commissioner's Standing Order No. 1.

The term 'hereditary proprietor' is to be taken as meaning that the grandfather or some more remote ancestor of the official in question owned agricultural land."

In order to avoid possible misunderstandings, it should be explained that so far as the maintenance of the consolidated statement is concerned, these orders held good only till 21st December 1926, when the following orders were issued :

On a careful consideration of all the facts the Governor in Council with the concurrence of his Ministers, has come to the conclusion that it is impossible to frame a definition of "agriculturist" that will present an accurate picture of the extent to which Government actually employs persons whose interests are mainly rural, except by taking a census of so elaborate a nature as to make an undue demand on the time of recording officers. He has accordingly decided not to make any further attempt for the purpose of this census to classify Government servants as "agriculturists" or "non-agriculturists." The object of the census will in future be to classify Government servants according to the different religious communities to which they belong and to make a further sub-division according to whether they are or are not members of the tribes notified as agricultural tribes under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. This decision, while it will to some extent impair the value of the statistics obtained by the census, will considerably lighten the task of classifying officers.

In order to give effect to it, it will be necessary to alter the headings of certain of the sub-columns of the statement circulated with my letter No. 24269 (H.—Genl.), of the 9th November 1925, from "agriculturists" and "non-agriculturists" into "members of notified agricultural tribes" and "others."

Thus the present position is that, there is no accurate census of the number of agriculturists recruited. The consolidated statement contains only the numbers of statutory agriculturists and is therefore an understatement of the numbers of those referred to by the honourable member in his question No. 777¹ as receiving the privilege of preferential treatment.

RAJPUTS IN PUBLIC SERVICES.

913. Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state what is the proportion of Rajputs in public services holding appointments in the Punjab out of those held by statutory agriculturists on 1st January 1934 ? If such information is not available, will he be pleased to state if Government is prepared to collect the necessary information ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The information is not available and its collection would involve an expenditure of labour and money incommensurate with any public advantage to be gained.

RAJPUTS IN PUBLIC SERVICES.

914. Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state what is the proportion of Ahirs holding appointments in the Punjab out of those held by statutory agriculturists on 1st January 1934 ? If such information is not available, whether Government will, in view of the fact that the number of Ahirs is very small and His Majesty in "Instrument of Instruction" in paragraph 7 has specially enjoined on the Governor the duty of advancing the social welfare of those who on account of the smallness of their numbers rely on the care of the Sovereign, fix the proportion of their recruitment in various departments ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I regret that the information is not available. Government could not fix the proportion of recruitment of Ahirs in various departments without doing the same for numerous other tribes. Any such scheme would be unworkable.

(c) The recovery of suspended land revenue and local rate was ordered after careful consideration of the paying capacity of the zamindars of each village as determined by the condition of crops and the existence of other liabilities in the manner provided in the Financial Commissioners' standing order No. 30 and Land Administration Manual, Chapter XVI. It is not in the public interest to lay the mass of documents in question on the table.

(d) Yes. Rs. 6,380 on account of land revenue and Rs. 31,000 on account of local rate have been ordered for collection, during rabi 1934, out of the amounts suspended in 1931-32 and 1932-33. For the remainder of this question see the reply to part (c) preceding.

916. Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state whether it is true that the majority of 38,788 Brahmins, as shown in the census table of Amritsar district, are tillers of the soil? If so, why are they not treated as statutory agriculturists?

(c) Government does not intend to withdraw the order.

Hukam Singh, came twice here, 10 days each time, to dispose of a large amount of arrears of criminal cases and appeals of Sheikhpura and that such visits are to continue in future till the arrears are finished ;

- (g) whether it is a fact that the district authorities have moved the Government for moving the headquarters of the Additional Sessions Judge from Lyallpur to Sheikhpura in the interests of public and the proper working of administration ;
- (h) whether it is a fact that the Government is contemplating some such change and the selection lies between Jhang and Sheikhpura ;

CHARGES FOR LIFTING WATER FROM WELLS WITH HYDRO-ELECTRIC CURRENT.

926. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state what is the scale of charges for lifting water from the wells with hydro-electric current and how do these charges compare with abiana rates of the Irrigation Department ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Taking an average rate for abiana and the flat rates corresponding to the tariffs a copy of which has already been laid on the table in reply to the honourable member's unstarred question No. 839¹, the comparison works out as follows :—

Crop.	Abiana rate (per acre).	Cost of maturing an acre of crop with water lifted by elec- tricity.
		Rs.	A.	P.
Wheat ..	5 4 0	11	6	0
Cotton ..	5 8 0	11	6	0
Sugarcane ..	12 0 0	28	7	0

The following assumptions have been made in working out the figures in column 3 above :—

- (i) That the well is capable of delivering a cubic foot of water per second.
 (ii) That the lift is 10 feet ;
 (iii) That the efficiency of the motor, machinery and channels is 50 per cent. In other words that twice as much electrical energy is paid for as would be the case if the flow of water was frictionless, the lifting machinery and the motor were perfect and no water was lost in the Kuhls (channels) between the well head and the fields.

- (iv) That the land to be irrigated from one well is 6 acres or more so that the pump can be run continuously during the time of watering.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Since 1st April 1887.

(b) For the maintenance of the college, to be used in connection with secular instruction.

(c) Some of the colleges have been in receipt of maintenance grants from provincial revenues for more than forty years.

(d) Yes.

(e) The Audit Department now wants a certificate to the effect that the grants are utilised for the purposes for which they are sanctioned, and the Department cannot supply such a certificate without an actual scrutiny of the accounts of these colleges.

Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to lay a statement on the table showing the names of municipalities, that during the last three years have fulfilled their obligations to the tax payers with regard to roads, drainage, water supply, provision of trained daits, play-grounds for schools, pardah gardens for women and children, and maternity hospitals or suitable arrangements in lieu thereof ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : It is not possible to list municipalities in the manner proposed, or to separate out those which have "fulfilled their obligations" in the directions indicated from those which have not. On the whole, however, the municipal committees have begun to show a better sense of responsibility.

TAX ON PRIVATE MOTOR CARS.

931. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that in the Delhi province the driver's seat of private motor is free of tax, but in the Punjab it is not ;

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) The driver's seat of a private motor vehicle is included in the number of seats which form the basis of taxation in the Punjab. Government have not been able in the time given to obtain information regarding motor taxation in Delhi. But if the facts are as suggested by the honourable member they would give no ground for altering the system of assessing the tax in the Punjab.

932. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes. By Punjab Gazette notification No. 21692, dated the 16th May, 1932, district boards have been authorised to establish and administer such stands.

(b) The charges levied are understood to vary from district to district and from place to place. Government has lately issued instructions to Commissioners insisting that the fees charged shall be carefully regulated. A copy of these instructions is laid on the table.

(c) The fees are a rent on the land occupied.

public motor vehicles, I am directed to inform you that the Punjab Government (Ministry of Local Self-Government) are advised that the system of leasing of such places by auction and of the lessees charging fees on the earnings of the motor vehicles is not illegal. Government, however, have strong reasons to believe that such a system has in practice led to exorbitant fees being levied, and they consider, therefore, that the stands should preferably be managed by the local bodies themselves. If that is impracticable it is considered that the next best system would be for the stands to be let out on a tender system at reasonable rates. If that again is considered not to be feasible, then the stands could be leased by auction. But in such a case I am to request that you will insist that the fees to be charged by the lessees are per vehicle and not per passenger, and fixed according to the class of vehicles and the amount of time spent at the stand. The lessee should in each case execute an agreement containing these conditions and also a condition that the lessee himself will not run his own vehicles. The bids at the auction should be subject to the approval of the deputy commissioner of the district, who, in giving his approval, should consider whether the rates are reasonable and the contractor reliable.

2. I am also to suggest that the rates authorized to be charged should be clearly advertised on large boards at either end of the motor vehicle stand as already directed in paragraph 2 of Punjab Government letter No. 14118, dated 15th May 1933, and should be communicated to the Superintendent of Police, who would arrange for regular inspections and report to the registering authority cases of overcharging by the contractors or lessees so that the registering authority can withdraw this approval of the contract or lease.

- (b) whether Government intends taking some action by which the irregularity might be avoided in future ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) To collect detailed information as to the reasons for the delays in the case of all the local bodies included in the list would be a large operation, if the honourable member desires information in connection with any particular case or cases it will be obtained.

(b) Commissioners have been asked to impress upon the local bodies concerned the necessity of punctuality in the preparation and submission of their budgets.

Mayadas : With reference to answer to unstarred question No. 816² asked at the recent budget session, will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state whether he is prepared to suggest to local bodies to consider the advisability of spending money on temperance propaganda ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Government is not contemplating the issue of any instructions on the subject. The matter is one that can well be left to the initiative of the local bodies themselves.

- (b) whether it is a fact that along the narrow portion on one side is the Public Works Department rest house and on the other side the military encamping ground ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that this military encamping ground is used by the military every year and tents are pitched opposite the Public Works Department rest house ;

[Mr. E. Mayadas.]

(e) whether it is a fact that on such occasions there is congestion of traffic, and consequent inconvenience and some risk of damage to the public, which would be considerably lessened, if not entirely obviated, if the road were not so narrow as it is at the present time;

(f) if so, what action is the Government prepared to take in the matter?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) and (b) The road width is uniform throughout with a 30 feet formation.

DOGARS IN THE FEROZEPUR DISTRICT.

945. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the population of Dogars in the Ferozepur district by tahsils ?

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : I regret that the reply to this question is not yet ready. It will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

BOYS OF THE DOGAR COMMUNITY IN THE FEROZEPORE DISTRICT.

946. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

(a) how many boys of the Dogar community in the Ferozepore district have up to the end of 1933, passed the following examinations :—

Middle, Entrance, First Arts, B.A., and M.A. ;

(b) in case the number of passes is extremely low, what action Government is prepared to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) and (b) The honourable member's question is so vague that it is impossible to take steps to collect the information required. Even if dates were specified the records of the Department and University would not provide the information and, enquiries would not be justified by the value of the information. Suppose the numbers are low, what does the honourable member wish the Government to do ? The success in examination depends on the intelligence and industry of the student, and I shall be glad to know how Government can help in either case.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR THE EDUCATION OF DOGAR COMMUNITY IN FEROZEPORE.

947. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state whether the District Board of Ferozepore has provided any special scholarships for the education of Dogar community in Ferozepore ; if not, whether Government is prepared to suggest to the District Board to consider the matter ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : The District Board of Ferozepore has not provided any special scholarships for the education of Dogars in Ferozepore. The Board can, however, do so with the sanction of the Commissioner—vide Article 128 of the Punjab Education Code,—and Government cannot interfere in the matter.

PRIMARY SCHOOLS FOR GIRLS, FEROZEPORE.

948. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

(b) whether young boys are allowed to study in girls' schools ; if so, up to what age ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) 36.

(b) The information is being collected, and will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

MIDDLE AND HIGH SCHOOLS FOR GIRLS IN THE PROVINCE.

949. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to lay a statement on the table showing the number of middle and high schools for girls maintained by district boards in the province ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : The required information is as follows :—

Name of the District Board.	Number of middle schools.	Number of high schools.
1. Gurgaon	1	Nil.
2. Ludhiana	1	Nil.
3. Amritsar	1	Nil.
4. Dera Ghazi Khan	1	Nil.
5. Kangra	6	Nil.
6. Rawalpindi	2	Nil.

BOARDING HOUSES OF AIDED PRIVATE COLLEGES.

950. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state whether it is a fact that private colleges, receiving Government aid, are permitted to frame rules for their boarding houses, which operate favourably for certain communities but unfavourably to others ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : Government has not issued any instructions on the subject. The attention of the honourable member is, however, invited to rule 2 published on page 115 of the Punjab University Calendar for 1933-34.

EXPENDITURE ON EDUCATION OF GIRLS.

951. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to lay a statement on the table showing the proportion of education budget spent on education of girls during the past financial year by the following district boards—

Ferozepore, Lahore, Amritsar, Hoshiarpur, Jullundur, Lyallpur, Montgomery, Multan, Sheikhupura, Gurdaspur, Sialkot and Gujranwala ?

PHYSICAL INSTRUCTION IN GIRLS' SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

952. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state if any progress has been made in the scheme for providing physical instruction in girls' schools and colleges ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : Government pays a grant of Rs. 272 per mensem to the Young Women's Christian Association, Lahore, to meet the salary of their Physical Training Instructress who acts as adviser in physical education to the Education Department. She holds physical training classes for lady teachers under training and inspects their work in schools. Inter-school games tournaments are also held, and they have proved valuable means of raising the standard of games and improving the physical health of girl students.

PHYSICAL INSTRUCTION OF INSTRUCTRESSES.

953. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) if arrangements have been made whereby selected women could receive a course of physical instruction with a view to qualify as instructresses of physical education in schools and colleges ;
- (b) if not, whether Government is now prepared to consider the matter ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : It has so far been impossible to make arrangements for this highly specialised physical training for selected women, but arrangements already exist for the instruction of lady teachers in physical training so that they may undertake the simpler forms of this work in schools and colleges.

EXPENDITURE ON GIRLS' SCHOLARSHIPS BY DISTRICT BOARDS.

954. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to lay a statement on the table showing the amount spent on girls' scholarships by district boards of the province during the last financial year, giving the number and amount of scholarships for passing middle, entrance, F.A., F. Sc., B.A., B.Sc., M.A. and M.Sc. examinations ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : The information is being collected, and will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

PLAY-GROUNDS IN HIGH SCHOOLS FOR GIRLS.

955. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state what progress has been made in supplying suitable play-grounds in high schools for girls ?

PLAY-GROUND FOR GIRLS AT THE GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL, MOGA.

956. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that no suitable play-ground is available for the use of girls at the Girls' High School at Moga ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that a school play-ground does exist, which while not far does not adjoin the school ;

- (c) whether Government is prepared to enquire about the possibility of providing a play-ground adjoining the school ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) There is a play-ground in front of the school boarding house, about $\frac{1}{2}$ acre in area.

(b) No.

(c) More space for games is indeed needed, but this will have to wait till the financial position improves.

PUNJAB HEALTH SCHOOL, LAHORE.

957. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that during certain seasons of the year the neighbourhood of the Punjab Health School, Lahore, becomes very unhealthy ;
- (b) whether rain water collects and owing to absence of suitable outlet, stagnates for long periods giving out most offensive smells ;
- (c) whether there is no suitable arrangement for the disposal of the drainwater from neighbouring houses ;
- (d) in case the conditions are as stated above, what action Government is prepared to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : I regret that the reply to this question is not yet ready. It will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

958. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) how many times during the year 1938 the Municipal Health Officer inspected the Punjab Health School and its neighbourhood ;
- (b) if so, whether he made any reports ;
- (c) if so, in brief what was the gist of his reports ;
- (d) whether he made any recommendations, if so, what ;
- (e) whether any action has been taken on his recommendations ;
- (f) if so, what action Government is prepared to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) The Municipal Medical Officer of Health inspected the school compound once during the year ; its neighbourhood on several occasions.

(b) No written report was made.

(c), (d) and (e) Do not arise.

(f) The attention of the Municipal Medical Officer of Health, Lahore, is being drawn to the matter.

POHLI AND LEH.

959. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that certain weeds known as Pohli and Leh, &c., are found growing in various parts of the province ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that their seed is carried far and wide by air ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that the more these weeds flourish the greater is the effect of weakening of the soil ;
- (d) what action Government is prepared to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh, Kt. : (a) and (c) Yes.

(d) A pamphlet¹ showing a possible course of action has been widely circulated. A copy is laid on the table, and in Jullundur Division Pohli Weeks have been organised with success to eradicate the weed.

ACCOUNTS OF DISTRICT BOARDS.

960. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the accounts of two district boards are in a hopelessly bad condition ;
- (b) if so, the names of these boards ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) and (b) The question is rather vague, but in the Annual Report of the Local Audit Fund Department for the year ending 31st March the district boards of Lyallpur and Shahpur were criticised in the terms of the question.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Mr. President : The Council will now resume discussion on the motion to refer the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill to the select committee.

Dewan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Land-holders, General) : Sir, I am grateful to the previous speakers of my party. They have lightened my task. The question before us is not a difficult one. It does not admit of multifarious conflicting answers, but the mode of representation may be different. I hope that my representation of the problem may appeal to my zamindar brethren (hear, hear). I would lay down certain propositions and then I will try to build up my conclusions. First of all we are all cognizant of the fact that Punjab Government had done more for the zamindars of the province than any other local Government has done for zamindars of any other province. The needs of the zamindars of the Punjab are much the same as those of the zamindars of any other province. They want money to meet Government demands which are in cash, they want money for seed, they want money for cattle, if unfortunately the cattle die and in case they are tenants paying cash rents they want money to pay rents to their landlords ; they have also to spend money on the weddings of their children ¹Kept in Council Library.

These are the requirements of the zamindars which are common to all of them. In every province, the causes which make them poor and which keep them economically backward are also more or less the same. They are illiterate and ignorant, they are subject to a law of inheritance which allows sub-division of holdings, fragmentation even beyond the limit of an economic holding, the population is increasing and they are impervious to any advice with regard to birth control. The traditions of all asiatic countries are opposed to all measures leading to birth control. Each one of us is familiar with the fact that if a pice is given to a poor faqir, he blesses the donor by the words در دین لایس، عے بی — دایر (May you have enough milk and sons.) A man who is not blessed with a child is called Autra Nithatra. He is the most unfortunate man in the world. These are the traditions of the country. Our people have not outgrown them. Then there is a lack of occupations or vocations to which the surplus agricultural population can have recourse for the purpose of earning their livelihood. Industrial development is very slow in this country. In addition to this I am very sorry to advert to another tendency which is markedly shown by the urban population and which unfortunately is being imitated by the rural population, the urbanization of the rural population is rapidly increasing. The urban population combines the eastern habits of extravagance with the western habits of extravagance. A well-to-do man of the present day has to spend lavishly on marriages and if he comes up to Simla he has to live in the Cecil Hotel. The standard of living has risen. All these things are in operation to keep the economic condition of the zamindars backward and at a low ebb. There is a tendency amongst us to over-estimate the effect of one and to under-estimate the effect of the other. The allegory with which I would illustrate my meaning is this that to a cistern there are 6 outlets, each outlet is blaming the other outlet that it is taking away a larger quantity than the other whereas all the six are combined in emptying the cistern. In sociological phenomena it is in most cases difficult to make a precise quantitative measurement of the effect of cause. If the figures quoted by my honourable friend the member for University yesterday were correct, if 40 per cent. of the earnings of the zamindars go to Government in the way of abiana and land revenue, certainly the size of outlet by which Government takes is a very large one.

This is the general condition of the zamindar all over the country. We have to face along with this fact the situation that the indebtedness of the Punjab zamindar per capita is the highest in the country. I read a book on the subject a short time ago and if I remember aright, the debt is Rs. 92 per head. It should be borne in mind that the indebtedness of the Punjab zamindar is the highest, higher than the indebtedness per capita of any zamindar in any other province. These three propositions must be borne in mind. (1) The Punjab Government has done more than any other local Government in any other province, (2) the needs of the zamindars of the Punjab are the same as the needs of the zamindars of other provinces, and (3) the causes which keep them economically backward, in fact keep them poor and indigent in this province are the same as are in operation in other provinces.

Now, I would proceed with the fourth proposition. Reference was made by my honourable friend, the member for industries to agrarian laws prevailing in the province. My honourable friend the member for Ambala stood up in defence of these laws. I am not sure if my honourable friend the member for industries, directed his attack on the vulnerable point in the agrarian laws, in other words confined his attack to the vulnerable point in these laws. I would be very sorry if I find any one who looks upon with indifference and non-chalance on the expropriation of the hereditary land owners of the province. No reasonable person would contemplate the situation with indifference. Well, Sir, I have long been connected with the administration of the agrarian laws to which reference was made. When the Land Alienation Act was before the Legislative Council in the form of a Bill I wrote a minute and if I remember aright it was in the month of November 1899. In that minute I attacked the discriminating nature of the law. I said, that it did not give sufficient protection. Protection we need, but we want protection against all. This discrimination, this creation of a dual class, one in a position of advantage and the other in a position of disadvantage is the feature which I have been attacking, which I attacked then and which I attack now and which I have been attacking ever since. I came into contact with the originators of the Bill, I came into contact with the sponsors of the Bill, Sir Charles Rivaz and with Sir Lewis Tupper who was the greatest supporter of it. They explained to me what the reason was for differentiation. They said that if we did not allow the zamindars to sell their lands to a section of the people we would reduce his credit to zero. We want the door open to a certain extent so that a zamindar may be able to obtain money for his practical requirements. That small loophole which was left has now become a wide door. In fact not only a door, but perhaps it has become as wide as the portico of this hall. My honourable friend the member for University gave the number of money-lenders who belong to the agriculturist classes. It comes to 19,000. That is nearly half of the money-lenders of non-agricultural classes. This is a situation which has developed which we anticipated and which may develop still more. The agricultural money-lenders indulge in money-lending with full prospects of advantage. He lends money at a fairly high rate of interest and then if he is unable to recover his money he can get land. The non-agriculturist money-lender is constrained to raise the rate of interest. The honest sahuakar has ceased to exist. That sahuakar who was really a helpmate and who was really helpful to the zamindar has ceased to exist. My honourable friend the member for University referred yesterday to page 31 of the Report of the Banking Inquiry Committee in which the causes which determine the rate of interest are laid down. I invite your special attention to them. It is stated that the greater the risk, the higher the interest. One of the factors which determine the rate of interest is the risk involved in the loan. The greater the risk the higher is the rate of interest. On the one hand you have rise in the rate of interest owing to your agrarian laws, on the other hand you have got a class of money-lenders who easily swallow the land of the debtor. Now, I ask, is not that sufficient to explain the higher rate of debt per capita of the Punjab zamindar? Is there any other cause? I have an open mind and I am quite prepared to listen. Can any honourable member refer to any other circumstances which distinguish the Punjab zamindars from the zamindars of any other province in which the ryotwari system prevails? Mind you, I know that Punjab is a province of peasant proprietors, but provinces in which the ryotwari system prevails are much the same in this respect. They are owners of small holdings, there are also the causes that impoverish the Punjab zamindar operating here. Just try to think whether you have not misapplied the remedy or whether you have not over-done it. One of the weaknesses of human mind is that when once it falls into a groove, it is very difficult to get it out of that groove. You have fallen into one from which you cannot extricate yourself.

I say that the peculiar nature of the agrarian laws of the province accounts for the higher indebtedness of the Punjab zamindars, indebtedness which to a certain extent of course he shares with others. But I cannot see what cause can be assigned for the higher rate per capita of the Punjab zamindar's indebtedness.

Another unfortunate circumstance of the province is that class and communal conflict in this province is at its highest. All of us more or less suffer from what I call the communal or class squint which prevents us from looking at economic questions in their true perspective. Every one is liable to it but I only put forward one claim that I have of being comparatively free from that disease and it is this that for 28 years I have been under a training which should at least reduce to a minimum that squint if it has not obliterated it altogether. That being the case let us not look to the opinion of one side or the other. Let us not take into consideration what I say or you say or any friend of mine on this bench says or any friend of mine on the other bench says. Let us consider how other provinces are grappling with the problem. Measures for the relief of indebtedness have been introduced in two other provinces. They have also been tackled in the Indian States. Let us see how they propose to solve the problem. In the United Provinces there is a Bill for the relief of agricultural indebtedness. Will honourable members kindly make a comparative study of it? It only attempts to reduce the rates of interest. It does in fact nothing similar to section 16 of our Land Alienation Act which reduces agricultural credit to its lowest limit. It attempts nothing of the kind and yet that Bill was returned by His Excellency Sir Malcolm Hailey to the Council for reconsideration. The speech which Sir Malcolm Hailey made before the Council from which he sought reconsideration of the Bill is a very useful one and is full of lessons for both of us, honourable members who oppose and those who support the Bill. I shall read some extracts from it but I assure you I will not take long. This is what Sir Malcolm, says :—

Let me first ask them the question whether any general scaling down of standing debt by legislative enactment is to be regarded as a proper remedy. I give you my own conclusions, the result of most careful consideration. A general scaling down of debt which takes account only of the amount of debt due and not the rates of interest and which does not provide to the creditor any increased facilities for securing repayment in return of the loan by potential assets is not an appropriate measure. It would create a general loss of confidence which would react gravely on credit not only as applied to agricultural but other transactions thus rendering it difficult to secure future credit even for necessary or productive purposes and it fails in one element essential to the improvement of the present situation, namely, the restoration to the creditor of sums which are necessary to him as working capital. Such working capital is essential if credit which is not largely suspended is again to be set floating.

Further, he said :—

The rates prescribed must bear some proper relation to the prevailing rates earned by money elsewhere and to the extra reasons which are admittedly involved in this particular class of transaction. Further in subsidiary regulations such as those relating to the compulsory grant of instalments on decretal debts must be such as to afford reasonable protection to the creditor. If we overlook this we are again in danger of restricting credit.

I need not waste the time of the House by citing other parts of the speech. But let it be remembered that these words of advice come from an officer of the Indian Civil Service who has been a Member for Finance with the Government of India, who knows the economic conditions of the Punjab and who is one of the ablest administrators that the Civil Service has produced. You cannot accuse him of class or communal squint even if you bring that charge against me.

Then, another instance that I will quote to you is that of the law in the Central Provinces. I invite your attention to clauses 12 and 13 of the Central Provinces Conciliation Bill. I think it has since been passed into an Act. It provides for repayment. Without payment, lowering of the rate of interest is suicidal. It will be a drastic step towards destroying the agriculturist's credit which is already at a very low ebb. If you give a very great advantage to the agriculturist money-lender he will swallow the whole land of the hereditary landholder. I warn you against the consequences and I hope you will bear that in mind.

Now I come to the parts of the Bill before us based on certain principles which are very objectionable. First of all I invite your attention to the definition of agriculturist. A curious sort of definition of agriculturist prevails in this province. Men who can earn Rs. 3,000 a month in the legal profession, men who are able enough to occupy with credit the office of the Member of the Executive Council of the Government of India, men who can take part wisely in the deliberations relating to the administration of the whole of the Indian Empire are to be treated as minors and as Hindu widows (laughter) when their own land is concerned. I appeal to the Leader of the House, I appeal to the Honourable the Finance Member who is in charge of the Bill, is that a logical position? It is absurd, it is nonsense. There is no other word for it. I want a radical change in the definition of agriculturist. On this point I put forward some ideas before the Royal Commission on Agriculture. And some years ago I put a question in the Council to the Revenue Member drawing his attention to the evidence which I gave before the Agricultural Commission. I asked him to make a free use of section 24. I do not want to repeal the Land Alienation Act. I do not want the hereditary landowners to be expropriated. But I certainly want individuals who have no reasonable claim to be treated as minors and Hindu widows should not be treated as such and the necessary correction can be made by appropriate action under section 24 of the Act which exists. No repeal is wanted. Nobody listened to me. I find now that the Northern India Chamber of Commerce has made the same suggestion. I draw your attention to it.

Then there is the provision about conciliation boards. You know and you will readily admit that class rivalry, class hostility, communal rivalry and communal hostility are at their zenith in this province. Under these circumstances can it be expected that the conciliation boards will be able to achieve anything? Will they be able to conciliate the parties? Not at all.

What is the use of assuming that the conciliation boards will achieve something? Assuming that they are able to give a certificate to the creditor that his claims above the amount mentioned in the certificate are not just, assuming that a settlement is arrived at, that settlement is merely a blank paper. What is a civil court's decree against an agriculturist, what value has it? It is because the civil court's decree has no value that the money-lender enhances the rate of interest, it is because the only way of recovering money open to the money-lender is to go to the threshing floor to get as much out of debtor as he can that he puts up his rate of interest. The zamindar is driven to the necessity of going to the money-lender again and ask for loan because the zamindar cannot live without borrowing. The zamindar by the necessity of his circumstances yields to the money-lender's demand, succumbs to him as that poor chap has no remedy. Without providing for repayment you simply increase the extortion of the money-lender.

A friend of mine when I was coming to the Council asked me what name could be given to the Bill. I hummed and, hawed, paused and reflected and then answered him in one of the versus of Zauq :

برأت عاشقان بر شاخ آهو اسکو کہتے ہیں

If the honourable Member for Industry wants a more direct answer I will add :

سوال قرضہ کو تالا جو اب چلن آبر دے

برأت عاشقان بر شاخ آهو اسکو کہتے ہیں

(Honourable members: Please translate). I am afraid that the verse cannot be rendered into English.

I am glad to hear that the Government is keeping an open mind. But if the select committee is unable to change the Bill on the lines on which it ought to be changed on the lines which I have recommended and which I hope will prove acceptable to the official members, then who is to blame for it? I am always reluctant to acquiesce in any denunciation of Government. My honourable friend, the member for industries, was very strong in his denunciation. He indulged in very strong language. But if no change is made, if the select committee is unable to make a change, if the Council is unable to make a change, then I will I think myself not add to the denunciation in which my honourable friend the member for industries indulged. What is the general state of things due to? It is all due to the policy which has been followed for the last thirty or forty years from which Government would have retracted if the power had not passed into the hands of those who benefit by that policy. Government is, therefore, itself responsible for the condition of things which allow the Bill to remain unchanged.

With these words I resume my seat.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural): In relation to the treatment which has been meted out in the past by Government to that section of the population which has been defined in the Indebtedness Bill as agriculturist, my feelings normally have been those of sourness, soreness and dissatisfaction. But during the last two days I have felt in spite of myself not inconsiderable sympathy for the Government.

✓[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

I felt that Government had undertaken a very thankless task. This

11 A.M.

Bill which Government thinks will do a great deal of good to the indebted classes has not received the blessings of the indebted classes. On the other hand it has been definitely condemned by the representatives of money-lending classes. And what is more there is a lurking suspicion on both sides that the Government may have designed this Bill as an apple of discord. The opinions which have been expressed in the press, the opinions which have been expressed by private individuals and which are contained in these three fairly bulky volumes show that. When the Government has to incur such a heavy amount of odium in undertaking a legislation, certainly it will induce a good deal of sympathy in the minds of anybody as it has done in mine. However, in spite of that I am free to say that this Bill in its present shape is not calculated to do any appreciable good to indebted classes. I am not going to discuss the details of this Bill. I am not going to enter into a detailed criticism of the actual provisions of the Bill as they stand at present. I would simply content myself with enunciating the attitude which my party has adopted. So far as the principle of the Bill is concerned, the National Unionist Party approves of it. So far as the object of the Bill is concerned, we welcome that object. But so far as the actual shape in which the Bill has been presented is concerned we are deeply dissatisfied and disappointed. And our attitude towards the final stages of the Bill will be determined by the shape in which this Bill emerges from the Select Committee. If the Bill is not modified to a sufficient extent then we shall be free to oppose the Bill. It may be that both the representatives of money-lending classes and the representatives of debtor classes may join hands in throwing this Bill out unanimously. (An honourable member: Why not do that now?) At present we are being asked only to agree to the principle of the Bill. The principle of the Bill is perfectly sound and therefore so far as these benches are concerned, we lend our support to the principle and are perfectly willing to send this Bill to the select committee where we shall try our best to secure such amendments and modifications as are calculated to do good to the debtor classes. Having enunciated the attitude of my party I will proceed to answer the criticism which has been levelled against this Bill. I will not say any more with regard to the Bill itself.

I am reserving my answer to the criticism which was made by the honourable member who represents Industry to the last. I will first take up the criticism which was offered by Shrimati Lekhwati. She had been speaking as if she was not on this earth. She was speaking from the fairy-land or dreamland of which I have not much experience. She said this Bill was not meant for the benefit of the poorer zamindars; this Bill was really meant for the benefit of bigger zamindars—zamindars with big palaces who have four wives and not content with four wives have gone in for more undesirable ways of life in the same direction. Shrimati Lekhwati probably does not know what is the composition of the agricultural population in this province. She has known only those gentlemen who are present here in this Council hall. Probably she does not know the exact texture of the agricultural population of this province. Further she has not read carefully the definition of the word "agriculturist" as adopted in this Bill. This Bill is not confined to the classes which we know and speak of as zamindars or agriculturists in ordinary parlance. The word " agriculturist " as defined in the Indebtedness Bill has been extended to tenants, to servants of zamindars, in fact, to all those who are actually engaged in the occupation of agriculture, and derive their livelihood from the profession of agriculture. This Bill extends to agricultural labourers; this Bill extends to chamars; this Bill extends to chuhras; this Bill extends to kumhars; this Bill extends to village menials; this Bill extends to village artisans. Therefore, to speak only of zamindars in the ordinary sense of the word as benefiting under the provisions of this Bill is entirely unfair. It is entirely unfair to Government and to the principles of truth and justice.

Let me first tell Shrimati Lekhwati what the exact texture of the agricultural population in this province is, that is, agricultural in the ordinary limited sense. If I remember aright Mr. Calvert says that the total number of landowners in this province is in the neighbourhood of 40 lakhs. Now among those 40 lakhs there are only 8,109 land owners who pay an annual land revenue of Rs. 500 or more. I do not think a land owner who pays an annual land revenue of Rs. 500 can be regarded as a very big land owner, and yet even that class comprises only 8,109. Can Shrimati Lekhwati or anybody else who is inclined to agree with her maintain that Nawab Ahmad Yar Khan is typical of the Punjab agricultural population? Can anybody suggest that Nawab Umar Hayat Qureshi is typical of the agricultural population of the Punjab? Certainly not. He is only perhaps one in several thousands or perhaps one in a lakh. (An honourable member: What about yourself?) So far as I am concerned, my friends will perhaps be surprised to learn that my ancestral holding consists of only 50 bighas in which there are one uncle and two brothers as co-sharers. (An honourable member: So you are a poor zamindar!). And I can well represent the poorer section of the agricultural population.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain: If big landlords are excluded I am perfectly willing to lend my support to this Bill.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: If any legislation on the lines suggested by Shrimati is ever introduced in this Council she will stand up and speak in quite a different strain.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: No.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: Certainly, she will.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: Try an experiment.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: I think opportunities will arise in this House when the bona fides of Pandit Nanak Chand, Mr. Puri and Shrimati Lekhwati will be tested.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit: Try them now.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: I have no time to draft a Bill while on my legs and present it to the Council, but occasions will certainly arise in future, perhaps, even in the near future when the bona fides of these gentlemen who claim to sympathise with poor agriculturists will be put to the test. They have arisen in the past. (Interruptions). When the question of the reduction of abiana was being considered in 1925 these gentlemen said: you have to spend as much as Rs. 20 or Rs. 25 per acre on well irrigation and Government is only charging Rs. 5-8-0. Government would have been justified even if it had gone up to Rs. 20 per acre. That is the help which the poor agriculturist has received from the occupants of those benches in the past. There was a time when we on these benches urged that an owner of one acre of land should be exempted from the payment of land revenue. At that time opposition to the proposal was offered by the Leader of that Party. So we have had occasions where the bona fides of these gentlemen have been tested in the past. There will be occasions when they will be tested again.

I was suggesting that the Bill is not intended to benefit those few individuals who have a variety of houses to live in, one house at Lahore, another house in the countryside and a third house at Simla, or those gentlemen who have wasted their money on women and wine. I have absolutely no sympathy with that class of people. But here this Bill is intended to benefit those teeming millions who are strangers to two square meals a day, whose back seldom knows a clean shirt, who have to go about, perhaps bare headed, in the burning sun. It is the man behind the plough who is intended to be benefited by this legislation. The man with a basket, or the man with a kahi is the man whom it is the intention of this legislation to benefit. It is true that there will be a very limited number of persons who fall under the category specified by Shrimati Lekhwati who will also gain, but whenever any legislation meant to benefit a class or classes is undertaken you cannot take account of individuals.

As a matter of fact if my friends occupying those benches had cared to go carefully through these two volumes of opinions they would have come across criticism offered by their own brethren that it was absurd to speak of individual servants of land owners as agriculturists. A bania may take up service under a zamindar and he will be regarded as an agriculturist (An honourable member : Never). He will take up service, if it serves his purpose. A Khatri may be a servant of a zamindar to-day, he may be a gumashta, karinda or clerk, a Khatri may turn himself into a servant of a zamindar in any other capacity in order to get the benefit of this legislation. After two years he may leave his service. So in a couple of years the same man may have the capacity or status of an agriculturist and a non-agriculturist. That criticism is there. Therefore, I strongly maintain that in any legislation which is necessary and is undertaken in the interest of a whole class, you can take account of only that overwhelming proportion which consists of the normal types. When you speak of the agricultural population of the Punjab, you are thinking of those 90 per cent. who are owners of 2 to 5 acres, not of owners of broad acres.

You are certainly not thinking of Nawab Ahmad Yar Khan or of Sir Umar Hayat Khan, or of Nawab Muhammad Nawaz Khan or anybody of that position. You will have to consider the 99.9 per cent. of the population (Interruption). I do not like to be interrupted. I never interrupt other honourable members. I submit very strongly that though this legislation may benefit a few individuals of a very high position, the aim and object of this legislation is to benefit that overwhelming proportion of the agricultural population which under the definition of this Bill consists of peasant proprietors, tenants and labourers. For perhaps 40 or 50 zamindars of very high position and wealthy status you find millions upon millions of people who are absolutely groaning under the weight of debt. And so far as those few individuals are concerned, I believe certain proportion of them will be found to be free from debt. Therefore the actual number of the type of zamindars corresponding to the bug-bear of Shrimati Lekhwati's imagination who will benefit under this legislation will be very very small. Therefore, you cannot spoil a good class legislation by taking note of individuals. If you once allow individuals to be considered you do not know where to draw the line. It is an impossible task to hammer out a decent legislation if you take note of individuals in a measure of this kind.

While on this subject I may also answer the criticisms which were made by Raja Narendra Nath. He said, "What justification is there to treat certain big people as minors and Hindu widows?" Well, that is a very large question. That really relates to the Land Alienation Act and not to this Bill.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : No, it relates to this Bill also.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : It is a very large question and I am perfectly willing to have a full dress debate either in this House or outside when I am sure I can successfully defend the definition which includes people of that type within the category of statutory agriculturists. Generally speaking my answer to this criticism is that when you restrict the credit of a class you can restrict it within certain limits with advantage but you cannot afford to shatter it altogether.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : But the United Provinces Bills have done that.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : The honourable member representing big landlords of this province was saying that it was very undesirable to seek to do anything which will impair the credit of the population. Now he says with apparent approval that the thing has actually been done in the United Provinces. I do not know which of these two statements is correct. But I take my stand upon this. It is sometimes necessary, it is sometimes essential, it is sometimes desirable to restrict the credit of a class within certain limits. But you cannot afford to shatter the credit of that class entirely. Now take the Land Alienation Act. There, of course, no definition has been attempted of the word 'agriculturist.' But what we understand by agriculturist is that a member of one of various hereditary landowning classes will be regarded as an agriculturist. (An honourable member : An agriculturist by birth?) Yes. Raja Sahib says, "Why treat these big people as minors and Hindu widows?" Suppose we refuse to treat them as Hindu widows as Raja Sahib has chosen to call them (Interruption). Yes, I am talking of individuals. Suppose all individuals who have some brains, who have some money and who have some wealth are eliminated from the group of statutory agriculturists, what will be the result? There will be nobody to be found in the ranks of hereditary landowning classes to buy the land of others who are under a necessity to sell their land. Therefore their land will cease to be an asset of any value whatsoever. Is it desirable, is it reasonable to make the land an asset of no value whatsoever? And yet, if you eliminate all men who have sufficient means to purchase when necessity arises the land belonging to other people, the result is bound to be that. Therefore, it is absolutely essential to retain within the ranks of statutory agriculturists certain proportion of people who are in a position to purchase or take on mortgage land belonging to others. You cannot afford to make land entirely valueless. Therefore I beg to submit that the policy of retaining men of talent education and wealth, among the statutory agriculturists tribe is a perfectly sound one. I need not enter into any elaborate defence of this policy here and now. But what I have said in a general way now ought to satisfy those who have not developed that squint of which Raja Sahib has been speaking.

The Raja Sahib has been complaining that a large proportion of members of various classes and communities and a large proportion of the members of this House have developed a kind of squint and that, in consequence, they cannot take a normal view of things, that they cannot look upon various matters of vital importance from a correct angle of vision, and that that squint gives them a perverse judgment. But he claims for himself the credit that having served for about 28 years under Government he had got rid of that squint. I have no knowledge of his official career, but it seems to me that since he retired on pension he has again developed that squint, and shares to the full those weaknesses of which he has accused other members of this House.

I must certainly say a few words with regard to the speech which was made by Mr. Manohar Lal. That was an excellent speech made in a most commendable spirit. (Hear, hear). If there was ever made a speech in this House which breathes a spirit of catholicity, that speech came from Mr. Manohar Lal yesterday. I can certainly say that that speech was entirely free from communal or class bias and nearly entirely free from the effects of those unconscious class instincts which are implanted in the breast of us all, which are the result of the surroundings in the midst of which we pass our lives. Therefore I must pay a tribute to Mr. Manohar Lal for the excellent speech which he made and for the excellent example which he set in this House for others to follow. (Cheers).

Now, I will come to the speech of my honourable friend representing Industries. As Raja Sahib says most of the people in the Punjab suffer from a squint. But nobody suffers from a more accentuated squint than the member who represents Industries. He said that the measure was a communal one and he quoted the authority of certain district officers. Unfortunately it is true that a couple of district officers have stated that generally speaking Hindus are hostile to this legislation and Muslims are either favourable to it or lukewarm about it. But he forgot to disclose to us what districts he was referring to. The district officers happen to serve in districts where the Hindu population consists entirely of money-lending and shop-keeping classes and where Muhammadans alone represent the debtor class. Therefore it is, though not quite accurate, substantially correct in their case to say that Muslims are favourable or lukewarm about this legislation and that the Hindus generally speaking are hostile. But the word 'Hindu' obviously and manifestly means in that context the money-lending class and the shop-keeping class. However my friend knows perfectly well that this measure is not a communal measure at all, is not even a measure which takes note of the ordinary cleavage of zamindar and non-zamindar with which we are so familiar. It is not a measure which is intended or calculated to benefit only zamindars. It is a measure which seeks to regulate the relations of money-lending class on the one hand and the debtor class on the other. It is absolutely an economic measure. That it is not a communal measure is perfectly well-known to my friend. He knows quite well that this measure has been supported by Hindu Rajputs, by Hindu Jats, by Gaur Brahmans, by Sikh zamindars and by the Indian Christian zamindars and also by that section of the population which has suffered most grievously both economically and socially at the hands of the money-lending class and which is represented by Chaudhri Bansilal. Therefore the completest possible answer will be furnished to that part of the criticism of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri on the floor of the House itself. I think speeches have already been made by members belonging to various groups in this House which ought to have convinced him, if he really required to be convinced, that this measure is not a communal measure at all. However, if my friend goes again carefully through the opinions of various individuals and of various anjumanas and societies he would be convinced that it is not a communal measure.

Again my friend made a reference to three very estimable individuals. One was Rai Bahadur Diwan Chand Saini, a statutory agriculturist. I know him well. If Mr. Mukand Lal Puri had made enquiries he would have found that that gentleman was probably himself a money-lender. Unfortunately he happens to be a zamindar and not a zamindar in the broad sense of the term but a statutory agriculturist. A statutory agriculturist can certainly turn to the profession of money-lending. (Interruption). Anyhow, the honourable member will do well to make enquiries and may then contradict me if necessary. (Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I have made enquiries. He is not a money-lender). If the honourable member is sure that that gentleman is not a money-lender, then I withdraw my statement and I also apologise to the honourable member and to that gentleman. (Interruption). I have accepted the statement of the honourable member and he ought to accept my apology in the spirit in which it has been offered. If I had been disposed otherwise I would have contradicted him on the floor of this House. However, one opinion does not matter. One swallow does not make the summer. Now, Mr. Puri referred to three individuals one was Rai Bahadur Diwan Chand Saini. My argument so far as Rai Bahadur Diwan Chand is concerned is that he is just one solitary swallow who cannot possibly make the summer. He has made a reference to two officers. One is the District and Sessions Judge of Ambala. He is a raw, inexperienced youngman just fresh from college who has not been able to gather that amount of experience of actual life which would enable him to understand that the sanctity of contract in England is quite different from the sanctity of contract in this country (laughter). He is absolutely unaware of the peculiar conditions which exist here. He has not yet known sufficiently of the country to see that along with the sanctity of contract he ought also to take into consideration the fact that the contracting parties, the parties which are alleged to have entered or are assumed to have entered into a contract, do not really stand on an equal footing. One is really an intellectual minor and to his intellectual minority is added the further disadvantage of his extreme poverty and need. These things taken together deprive any transaction of that sanctity which may be attached to corresponding transactions in a country like England where everybody is well educated and can be regarded as better able to look after his interests than the ignorant needy peasant proprietors or their kamins and village artisans in this country. With regard to Mr. King I will say nothing. And when I say that, I have really said enough.

I will take seriatim the various other points taken up by Mr. Puri. In the first instance he made a grievance of the fact that Government did not take any action on the recommendations which had been made by the Indebtedness Committee. Well, I am perfectly at one with him there. So far as the specific recommendation with regard to the provision of additional or alternative lucrative profession for the agriculturists is concerned no action has been taken so far by Government, and Government is really and seriously to blame in that respect. I do not know what excuse or justification Government has for sleeping over the report for such a long time. It is perfectly true that if we really require a permanent remedy for the present economic helplessness of the agricultural population the only remedy is to provide other more lucrative professions, lucrative occupations in addition to agriculture. But so long as that is not done you can try only remedies which will prove of a temporary nature, and which will prove only partially effective. But Mr. Puri forgot the other side of the picture, and that side is that the present economic collapse of the agricultural population is so serious that you cannot wait until the specific recommendations of the Indebtedness Committee can be acted upon by the Government. I may remind my honourable friend of that Persian saying :—

تا تریاق از عراق آورده شود مار کزیده مرده شود

These specific recommendations require some time to be scrutinized and to be put into effect. But the exact state of things at present is such that you cannot wait and if you wait the result would be simply disastrous. As a matter of fact Government action has already been delayed too long. The Government ought to have taken the action which is now being taken a couple of years ago. Our Government has been more to blame in this respect than other provincial Governments.

The Bengal Government took action much more quickly, the United Provinces Government took action earlier than our own. I understand that the Central Provinces Government passed a legislation which has now actually been in operation for some time. Therefore while I agree that Government has not so far done anything in the way of providing additional lucrative professions for the agricultural population, I entirely dissent from the view of Mr. Puri that the present measure should not be undertaken. The next point which he made was that even if all the present debts were wiped out by this legislation, the zamindars would run into debt again. Sir, I have never been able to understand this dual argument. On the one hand the argument is put forward that if you pass this legislation the system of rural credit will suffer beyond measure. The credit of the zamindar classes will be entirely gone, they will not be able to raise a single rupee to pay Government dues and yet on the other hand it is stated, perhaps seriously, that even if this legislation undertakes to wipe out and succeeds in wiping out all the debts the zamindars will run into debt again. This is not intelligible to me. If their credit is gone, how can they run into debt again? At least both of these arguments cannot be sound, one of them may or may not be sound, but both of them cannot be. Either this legislation cannot restrict their credit to the extent to which it is claimed by certain people that it will or the rural classes will not be able to run into debt again. The third point to which he made reference was that a large number of concessions in favour of agriculturists already existed and that in the presence of those concessions no further legislation was necessary. Now I reserve the discussion whether a legislation of this kind is needed or is not needed to the last stage of my speech, but I will dispose of at once the various concessions which he made a reference to. He made a reference to the Land Alienation Act. That Act like the head of King Charles must turn up whenever any subject of any type is under discussion between zamindars and non-zamindars. The money-lending classes cannot yet get rid of this obsession. However this Act cannot help in giving relief to the zamindars in respect of the existing burden of debt. Next, he made reference to section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code which gave exemption in respect of plough cattle, houses and implements of agriculture. Now either the law is defective or its interpretation is unsound. But as a lawyer I have come across cases in which persian wheels have been attached and sold, in which bullocks have been attached and sold and in which houses have been attached and sold. If the interpretation is unsound we cannot help it. That is the business of the High Court. The only thing for this legislature to do is to press for a suitable amendment of the existing law if amendment is called for. If, however, the existing law is as it should be but the interpretation is unsound then the executive Government may, in the course of time do something to change the present complexion of the judiciary and help indirectly to change the present mentality of the judiciary. That, however, might take a whole generation and by that time the agriculturists may disappear as a living economic unit of the Punjab population. If my honourable friend is not inclined to agree with me that courts take such a perverse view of the existing law here I have in my hand a notice issued by a court, an injunction order that the defendant—mind you it is before judgment, before the merits of the case have been decided—should not alienate to anybody either by sale, gift or mortgage, the houses, agricultural land, and two bullocks. Anybody who is inclined to dissent from my charge that our subordinate judiciary do not take a view of the law which is in consonance with its real spirit or which is fair to the agriculturists, he may have a look at the notice in my hand. I have got it in original. I have also come across a number of cases in which a single house occupied by an agriculturist has been attached and sold because the court held that it was not necessary for the needs of that agriculturist: it is too big. The present law and the manner in which it is being interpreted by judicial officers is such that the concessions to which reference was made by my honourable friend are as good or as bad as non-existent because they are nullified by the attitude of our judicial officers. Another point to which reference was made was that land in excess of the actual requirements of a family could not be attached and sold. That concession may exist on paper but it does not exist in practice. I have known a whole holding comprising 840 bighas of nahri land belonging to 4 minor boys with 5 minor sisters and a widowed mother being attached and handed over to the decree-holder for full 20 years inspite of the report of the tahsildar and the collector that that family had absolutely no other source of livelihood.

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair and it was occupied by the Deputy President.)

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : What was the amount of the debt ?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Rs. 4,000. I have given only one example and it is an example of a very bad type, 340 bighas of nahri land being handed over for full 20 years, a whole generation, to a decree-holder and leaving 11 persons, 5 minor girls, 4 minor boys and one widow to shift for themselves, inspite of the report of the tahsildar and the collector that the family had no other source of livelihood. This is the manner in which civil law is being administered by our courts and yet my friend representing Industries claims that the existing concessions make it entirely unnecessary to have any fresh legislation in this House. Then another reference was made in disparagement of this Bill. Why undertake legislation for the benefit of one class only ? Probably by that he only meant to specify the zamindar class. Well, as a matter of fact this legislation is not meant merely for the benefit of zamindars. However I maintain that even if this legislation had been undertaken in the interests and for the benefit of zamindars alone Government would have perfectly been justified in doing so. I will tell you why. My friends want to know why Government should undertake a legislation for the benefit of one class only. My answer is this. These zamindars are a class which fills the coffer of the State twice every year. These zamindars are a class which serves as cannon fodder for machine-guns when the war comes.

Mr. Labh Singh : All for nothing ?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Of course they get paid but they get paid while shedding their lifeblood whereas the non-zamindars get paid while sitting comfortably in a chair twenty times more heavily. A soldier goes out only for Rs. 17 a month and risks his life.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : That is a privilege.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : That privilege was offered to the non-martial classes during the war. Was the offer accepted ? (Hear, hear). The University Corps was started and this House would be surprised to learn the number of men belonging to non-martial classes who came forward to join that Corps. They could be counted on the fingers of perhaps one hand. You had that privilege extended to you but you did not avail yourselves of it, and I am absolutely sure that if that privilege is again extended it will not be availed of by non-martial classes.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Question.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : As a matter of fact Government is wrong in giving these classes an opportunity of making a grouse about what they will never really attempt to avail themselves of. The bania is not made for bullets. He is made only for making money at the expense of the poor zamindar. He will never take the risk of these bullets even if he is offered Rs. 170 a month instead of Rs. 17.

Then I may put forward another argument which may or may not appeal to my honourable and learned friend but is really sound in character. It is in consequence of the policy which has been followed by Government in the past in neglecting the education of rural classes and in neglecting to improve the economic condition of rural classes that we have really fallen into the clutches of the money-lending classes. The present helplessness of the agriculturists is, in a great measure, due to a culpable negligence on the part of the Government. It is up to the Government that it should undertake legislation which will help them to some extent to get out of the pit into which this negligence has let them. We have been contributing 90 per cent. of the provincial revenues while 90 per cent. of the revenues has been spent in the past for the benefit of urban and commercial classes. We have been left behind in the race of life. We have been left behind economically and educationally with the result that we cannot effectively safeguard our own interests. Therefore if Government does nothing by way of legislation to lift these helpless classes out of this economic pit it will fail miserably in its duty. In fact this Bill is an earnest of belated justice while the justice which is being offered to us is not at all effective. Another point which he hinted at was that things would adjust themselves in the course of time. But why should the Government wait for this adjustment? And who says that this adjustment will come? Government has imposed the Pax Britannica on this country. It has established peace and the peace has been continued far too long. The forces which occasionally enabled these things to adjust themselves do not now exist. We have been living under a stable Government and have not had the Pax Britannica disturbed now for 80 years. How can things adjust themselves? The police is there, the law is there, and courts are there to give the protection for which in troubled times the money-lender could look up to the zamindar alone. The sense of inter-dependence, mutual good will and mutual accommodation is now gone. The whole force of law and the whole might of Government is there on the side of the money lending class and commercial class. If there is any class which has benefited by the Pax Britannica more than others it is the money-lending and commercial class. If there is any class which has suffered under this Pax Britannica more than others it is the agricultural and martial class. Therefore the only possibility which could have allowed a readjustment of things has been eliminated by this long continued peace. Hence it is all the more necessary that Government should undertake a legislation which would help things to adjust themselves in a peaceful manner. Another grievance to which Mr. Puri referred was that no legislation of the kind of the Land Alienation Act existed in any other part of our own country, or anywhere on the face of the world. I cannot give the exact number of the issue but two years ago I read an article in the Modern Review that a legislation far more stringent than the Land Alienation Act of the Punjab existed in Mexico.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Impossible.

Mr. Labh Singh : Based on caste system?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I cannot give you any detail. That legislation could take note of only classes and not of individuals.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I challenge the honourable member to give any instance.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Let us now come to our own country. In Bundhelkhand a Land Alienation Act has been in operation for a long time. A similar Act is in force in Hyderabad State, there is a Land Alienation Act in the Kashmere State, in the Patiala State and now a vitiated copy of our present Land Alienation Act, I understand, has been introduced in the Kapurthala State. Let us now take Oudh. The whole province practically consists of estates which are inalienable. Therefore any legislation of that character was not needed in Oudh. While I am not acquainted with conditions prevailing in Bombay or Madras, in Bihar and Bengal land is concentrated in a few hands and therefore it would have been wrong to introduce in those provinces any legislation to prevent the free flow of land into hands other than those of the present owners. As to our own province, I claim that even if you introduce a communistic system of Government I do not think you will be able to devise a better distribution of land than you already have in the Punjab. There are no less than 3 to 4 million land owners in the Punjab and the average holding consists of 7 acres. Could anything better be really desired by any body? Suppose the whole of the land were transferred to the Government and the Government were to make a fresh distribution of that land, could a better distribution be made? Certainly not. As a matter of fact a holding of 7 or 8 acres is not an economic holding. At least in barani areas an economic holding ought to be of the size of at least 12 to 15 acres. Therefore the present distribution of land in the Punjab is almost ideal.

Mr. Labh Singh : Ideal because of its being uneconomic?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I mean to say you could not undertake a distribution of land which will allow that land to be shared by a larger number of persons. For these reasons the existing distribution of land in the Punjab is ideal and therefore it was absolutely essential that a legislation preventing the alienation of land into undesirable hands should have been enacted. There was just one more point to which reference was made by Mr. Puri and that was that I had urged the repudiation of debts. He said that the Leader of the Opposition had urged a repudiation of debts. So far as this Bill is concerned there is no such thing as the repudiation of debts or even a scaling down of debts, and I have not so far urged any repudiation of debts but a state of things can arise in which I may certainly urge a repudiation of debts and consider myself perfectly justified in doing so.

Mr. Labh Singh : And after that, repudiation of land revenue and after that Bolshevism?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : If you want to frighten the Government you may do so. But let me say that the stage has not arrived to test my convictions in the matter. When it arrives you may put me that question. I do not think the Government can be so simple as to be frightened by these stupid remarks.

There was one more curious remark, curious and most uninformed, made by my honourable friend Mr. Puri. He said that the Punjab zamindar, the Punjab peasant was the most prosperous individual among peasants in the whole of India. So igno.

rant of facts. The honourable member would make any wild statement without having made sure whether his statement is at all based on truth or not. He said that the Punjab peasant was the most prosperous, his lot was the best in the whole of India. For his benefit I will draw his attention to a small pamphlet which has been written, not by Chhotu Ram, not by any zamindar belonging to the Punjab but by Mr. Nalini Ranjan Sarkar. At page 5 of that pamphlet you will find that the total debt of the Punjab is Rs. 135 crores. Calculated per agriculturist it comes to Rs. 92 per head. Just look at the figures relating to other provinces. In Assam the debt per agriculturist is only Rs. 31; in Bengal, only Rs. 31; in Bihar and Orissa again, only Rs. 31; in Bombay, only Rs. 49. In the Central Provinces it is only Rs. 30, in Madras it is Rs. 50, in the United Provinces it is only Rs. 36, while in this blessed land of the Five Rivers it stands at Rs. 92. And yet without any knowledge of facts my honourable friend made the most irresponsible and wild statement that the Punjab peasant was really in a most enviable position, that he was far above his counterpart in any other province.

Mr. Labh Singh : Will the honourable member please say what proportion does it bear to the asset per capita of the peasant and secondly how much of this debt is productive and how much, non-productive?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Unfortunately those details have not been worked out. But there is one detail to which I would draw your attention.

Mr. Labh Singh : Before the honourable member says that that statement was irresponsible and wild he should answer this question in order to understand the situation properly.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I can assure the honourable member that I understand the situation quite well and I understand his point of view quite well too.

I now come to the question why this legislation is needed in the province. I will deal with that almost immediately. In the meantime on the point of relative indebtedness in the Punjab let me draw your attention to an authority nearer home—

It is indeed strange that the figure for agricultural indebtedness should be at its maximum in the Punjab. The average indebtedness per agriculturist is higher in the Punjab than in any other Province.

This is the opinion expressed by the Honourable Rai Bahadur Lala Ram Saran Das, C.I.E., of Lahore. I believe there will be no disposition on the part of the occupants of the Hindu Sabha benches to disbelieve this statement.

Mr. President : The honourable member has spoken for one hour.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : But there were members who took an hour and a half. May I have another 15 minutes? On behalf of members on my side of the House I am told that they would like the whole of their time to be allotted to me.

I was coming to the question whether a legislation of this kind is needed or is not needed in the Punjab. I will draw the attention of the House to the opinion of a gentleman who I believe is not a zamindar and who has expressed his opinion as a representative of the Bar Association of Jullundur, as specifically authorised by that Bar Association. Here is what he says :—

I as the Joint Secretary of the Bar Association, Jullundur, and having been authorised to give opinion on the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill on behalf of the Bar Association, Jullundur, beg to submit the following :—

Nothing could be more gratifying than to see the Punjab Legislature becoming alive to the imperative need of relieving the agriculturists from the clutches of money-lenders. Over 75 per cent. of Punjabees are agriculturists and it is high time that steps for their social and economic uplift be taken. The provisions of the Bill are very satisfactory and except for a few points discussed hereinafter, all the gulfs have been bridged.

I may also draw the attention of the House to the opinion expressed by the Bar Association of Rohtak. It is comprised of individuals among whom an absolute majority is commanded by Mahajans whose business is mostly that of money-lending. They enjoy an absolute majority, and a substantially absolute majority at that. The President is a Mahajan, the Secretary is a Mahajan and it is the Secretary who is writing this note :—

"This Bill is undoubtedly meant to provide for the relief of indebtedness and the improvement of agrarian credit in the Punjab. I am afraid the Bill in its present form is not at all calculated to achieve the end in view. The provisions of the Bill are indefinite, inadequate and inconclusive. The reduction of the amount of the maximum debt entitling a debtor to present an application for insolvency from Rs. 500 to Rs. 250 hardly affords any relief. Clause 16 would take effect only in cases where 60 per cent. of the creditors would agree to an amicable settlement. Such a settlement is not likely in a majority of cases. certificate embodied in clause 18 hardly affords any relief to the debtor. The possibility of costs or interest being disallowed would be very remote. It must be confessed that the sponsors of the Bill have only proceeded in a half-hearted manner and they have not boldly and squarely faced the problem. The provisions of the Bill are a mere eye-wash. A tabula rasa might have been much preferable to this half-hearted measure."

Here are the opinions of people who, if anything, may have a prejudice in favour of the money-lending classes and not against them. The Deputy Commissioner of Jullundur who has, I think, over 30 years of public service to his credit speaks more or less in the same strain. He is a non-agriculturist. Take another Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Thapar, I.C.S., who is in charge of Montgomery. He is also not a zamindar. He belongs to a class which does a good deal of money-lending. Being a young man, however, he has had the good fortune of possessing a fresh outlook. He has not developed any squint yet. And, therefore, he expresses himself in favour of the object of the Bill. There is another judicial officer with a much longer and more varied experience than that of Mr. Ormerod, I mean Rai Bahadur Chuni Lal. He blesses the object and principle of this Bill. Therefore, I think I am perfectly justified in saying that all those even among money-lenders who have succeeded in getting rid of the unfortunate squint alluded to by Raja Narendra Nath have expressed their opinion in favour of the principle and object of this Bill.

Now let us take some other facts. Economic laws act with a force which it is very difficult to withstand. The most prosperous and powerful nations in the world such as England, France, Italy, and Germany have pleaded their inability to pay their debts. Although they have not urged an entire repudiation of debts yet for the last three years most of these countries have not paid anything. England paid its last quota, I think, in June 1933. But the instalment which was due on the 15th of June 1934 has not been paid. England presented a note to the United States urging that it was not in a position to pay the instalment which was due on the 15th June 1934 and that it would like to negotiate with the United States on fresh terms on the basis of which England would undertake to pay the debt due from her to the United States. Now when a nation of the prosperity of England can plead inability to pay, would it be any wonder if the poor zamindar of the Punjab even repudiated his debts? We are only pleading inability to pay at present but I say nobody ought to pretend to be surprised at even a suggestion of repudiation of debts by the zamindar. We cannot pay. There is nothing to pay out of. Then again representatives of money-lenders' associations representing money-lending interests, have expressed their opinion freely and frankly that the zamindar is really very heavily indebted, so heavily indebted that he cannot pay land revenue and abiana, and therefore the present burden of land revenue and abiana should be substantially reduced. There are a large number of individuals and associations who have urged that land revenue and abiana should be reduced by as much as 50 per cent. Now just compare the burden which land revenue imposes on the zamindar and the burden which the interest on his present debt imposes on the zamindar. For the last four years the average of our land revenue has been Rs. 260 lakhs. The total amount of debt in 1929 stood at Rs. 135 crores. Since then repayments have been most difficult and I think it would be mentioning a conservative figure if I suggested that the present debt stood at Rs. 200 crores. I think it will be regarded by all fair-minded people as a conservative estimate of the present debt burden. Just calculate the interest on this huge figure.

On a debt of Rs. 135 crores the annual interest at the rate of 20 per cent. will be 27 crores; at 15 per cent. it will be 20.25 crores and at 10 per cent. it will be 13.5 crores. If you take the higher estimate then on Rs. 200 crores at the rate of 20 per cent. the annual interest would be 40 crores; at 15 per cent. it would be 30 crores and at 10 per cent. it would come to 20 crores. What comparison is there between the burden of land revenue and the terrible burden of this interest. And yet representatives of money-lending interests have themselves admitted that the burden of land revenue is too heavy to be borne by the agriculturist. If the burden of land revenue which ranges between 6 and 16 per cent. of the burden of interest on debt cannot be borne by the agriculturist, how can this annual burden of interest be borne by the agriculturist? Is there any system of arithmetic or mathematics or magic which would convince anybody in this House that if a burden of 260 lakhs is too heavy to be borne by the agriculturists of the Punjab, a burden which may range between 13.5 and 40 crores a year can be borne by the Punjab agriculturists? Another point deserves to be stressed. I have taken a rate of interest for my calculations, which is much lower than the rate of interest which has been regarded in this Bill as excessive. This Bill says that only that rate of interest which exceeds 24 per cent. will be regarded as excessive. I have taken the highest rate of interest as only 20 per cent. If I took a rate which would be regarded normally under this Bill as excessive, it would be 25 per cent. Therefore, I beg to submit that even at a moderate rate of interest the annual burden imposed on the agricultural population of the Punjab in the form of interest is so heavy that it will break the back of any section of the population, not to speak of the agricultural population which has been suffering under a very bad system of taxation for generations and generations.

[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

Another factor to which I may draw the attention of the House is this, that payments have to be made after all out of the income which is made by agriculturists. Let us see what the income of an agriculturist out of his agricultural land can be. In our province the area owned per head by agriculturists is 1.80 acres—a little less than 2 acres. Let us assume that the whole of this area is sown with wheat—a valuable crop, more valuable than most. Let us assume that there is no failure of rains and that there is no failure of water supply at the critical moment. What is the outturn? The average outturn per acre is about 10 maunds. That is to say, 1.8 acres of land would produce 18 maunds of wheat. Eighteen maunds of wheat would be sold for Rs. 31-8-0 at Rs. 1-12-0 per maund. Rs. 31-8-0 is the price of the produce of the whole area which is owned by an agriculturist in the Punjab. Take the other side, the expenditure side. On two acres I have calculated that Government dues would amount to about Rs. 17. Then there will be the usual cost of production, his cost of seed, maintenance of bullocks, labour, etc. Nothing will be left with an agriculturist out of which he can pay the money-lender. Supposing no legislation is passed; what would be the result. The agriculturist has no money out of which he can make any payment what-so-ever. He has his house, he has his cattle and he has a very limited amount of house-hold chattels. At the utmost the money-lender can get a decree from a civil court and as was admitted by Mr. Puri the troubles of a money-lender only commence after he has obtained his decree. Let us admit that that statement is well-founded. What will be the result? Will he be able to get satisfaction of his decree? He can have the debtor's cattle sold. How many cattle can the money-lender himself purchase? Because there being no ready money with the agriculturist class as a whole, they will not purchase. He can have the house sold by auction. Who is going to purchase? He can have his household chattel sold by auction. Who is going to buy? The money-lender cannot possibly purchase and supposing he purchases all these things, what will be the result? Could all the agriculturists be expelled from their houses? And suppose all the debtors who are now about 90 per cent. of the total population are ejected from their homes who can deny that a most desperate situation will arise? How can you have about 2 crores of the population rendered homeless, destitute and utterly desperate? But if you reduce that population to these straits, the result will be that you will have to reckon with a veritable hell.

Mr. F. B. Wace (Registrar of Co-operative Societies): Sir, in rising to address the House may I claim the indulgence that is habitually accorded to members undergoing that ordeal for the first time. I am by the nature of my service a simple clodhopper emerging, blinking and stammering into the light an eloquence of this august assemblage. Certainly I cannot hope to rival the staying power that has been displayed in this debate by the leading exponents. Speakers on each side on this very vital subject of rural indebtedness have most of them dealt with the subject from the point of view of one party to the situation. I think that I may perhaps claim some advantage in surveying the question by reason of the position which I now occupy, as Registrar of Co-operative Societies. If I may so prescribe myself, the last of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle but by the order of Government I am what I am. The Registrar, though an official, has occupied traditionally a position intermediate between the true blue crusted bureaucrat (if such a phenomenon exists) and the representative and champion of a growing army of co-operators now numbering over seven lakhs, mostly among the poorest zamindars of the province. Not only so, but in regard to this question of rural debt, I am of necessity compelled to see the question both from the point of view of the creditor and of the debtor. Members of co-operative societies are debtors to their societies in their individual capacity but as members of societies they are also creditors of those who have borrowed money from the society. More even than that—the societies are in no privileged position as regards their debtors. They occupy, as regards the execution of their awards, the same position as any non-agriculturist creditor. What in this position and with this experience I would like to emphasize is that it no more accords with the true facts of the situation to represent that all sahukars are sharks and robbers, intent on the ruin of zamindars, than to picture all zamindars as injured innocents, ignorant of the use of money and of the devices of the law-courts which enable them to evade payment. The money-lender has performed and is performing an essential function in rural economy, (I speak advisedly, even as the representative of another large system of rural credit) and it cannot be the policy of Government to destroy that whole class and make it impossible for them to perform their legitimate functions. In this connection may I for one moment advert to a point raised by the honourable lady member who pointed out that the co-operative societies in their propaganda frequently hold up to odium the sahukar as an enemy. There has inevitably been some opposition between co-operative societies as a credit agency and the sahukar. But it has not been and it certainly is not now the policy of the Co-operative Department, in carrying out any propaganda, to carry it out as against the sahukar as a class, and instructions have been repeatedly issued that propaganda is not to be carried out on those lines. The enemy of the zamindar and the Co-operative Department is not the sahukar, it is the usurer. On the other hand there is no doubt that the zamindar's whole outlook is overshadowed by the existence of the spectre of debt, debt which has accumulated partly by legitimate borrowing, partly by borrowing for extravagant and improvident purposes, partly by the accumulation of interest at rates which have sometimes been unconscionable and usurious and partly on account of his inability to pay in recent years owing to the prolonged agricultural depression. In some cases his attitude towards that debt is one of sullen resentment and in some cases, of despair. The element that is fast disappearing is that of hope.

I would like to say one word about the figures of this debt. The estimated debt of the province as a whole and of the individual zamindar in particular is of a highly conjectural nature and therefore, there is an uncertain element in any comparisons between the Punjab and the other parts of India. But, here I would join issue with the Leader of the Unionist Party who in replying to the member for Industries strongly contested the statement that the Punjab peasant was more prosperous than the peasant in other provinces; and for that purpose he cited figures showing that the debt of the Punjab zamindar was very much higher than the debt of peasants.

in other provinces. Well, Sir, I thought that the proposition was by now familiar enough that the debt of a man corresponds roughly with his credit and that his credit can only be adjusted in accordance with his prosperity. Therefore, prima facie, if the figure of debt in the Punjab is higher than the figure of debt in other provinces, it is evidence that the Punjab peasant in the past at least, in spite of the restriction created by the Land Alienation Act, has been more prosperous than the peasant of other provinces.

The existence of an enormous load of debt is, however, undoubted. The question is, what can be done by Government by creditors and by debtors to evolve a solution of the problem which it represents. The Honourable Member for Finance in introducing the Bill cited instances to show the danger of attempting drastic, grandiose and rapid solutions of the problem. None the less, the tendency of nearly all speeches on the subject has been to suggest, directly or indirectly, that it is Government that must shoulder the burden, that no efforts by the parties concerned—immediately concerned, I should say—can contribute materially towards the solution. It has been said that Government should itself pay off the debts, compounded to a reasonable figure, and should recover it by easy instalments spread over a term of years; that mortgage banks and co-operative societies (terms which trip glibly from the tongues of those unacquainted with the difficulties which they involve) should undertake the burden. Now, as regards Government paying the debts of the zamindars and recover them, I leave it to Government speakers with more authority than I have to state the attitude of Government, towards such proposals. But to the rural debtors I would put this question whether they realise that by this process they are sacrificing some of the privileges conferred on them by the Land Alienation Act. For, if Government is to collect the debts, they must presumably collect them as land revenue and all the sanctions applicable to the collection of arrears of land revenue must apply to the collection of those debts. In the same connection I would ask the great class of creditors, how and from whom they suppose that this great sum of money for payment of debts is to be raised? If it is raised and suddenly disbursed amongst the creditors, how in the present conditions of trade and industry and the money market are they to employ at a profit this sudden and unprecedented access to capital?

I will now turn to the question of mortgage banks, a technical and a difficult one, the solution of which has been attempted on different lines in very many different countries. Now, it cannot be denied that in countries where land is freely alienable and where agriculture is prosperous or at least solvent, long term credit on the basis of the mortgage of agricultural land can confer immense benefit. I believe that even in this province, subject to the restrictions imposed on the transference of land by the Alienation of Land Act and to the reduced profits now to be obtained from land, an extension of mortgage credit is possible and can be of advantage. The question is being examined and, as announced in the recent Resolution of the Government of India following the Provincial Economic Conference, it will be one of the first on which the advice of Mr. Darling as representing the rural credit section of the Reserve Bank will be available for Government. But I must utter a word of warning. Mortgage banks, mortgage credit, mortgage associations cannot afford a complete solution of rural debt in the Punjab and to suggest it and to encourage debtors to believe it is inadvisable and even dangerous. Let me stress one point in this connection. How do mortgage banks or corporations in any country raise funds? They raise them by the issue of bonds or debentures having as their basis the security of first mortgages on the lands of the debtors to whom the loans are issued. These bonds or debentures are to be subscribed by the public, by professional men throughout the province, by the members of the public such as the members of this House. Now, I would ask the question, are you as men of ordinary business prudence going to subscribe to these bonds if the security is not ultimately realisable, that is, if the bank is not to have absolute power, as it has in all countries in which the system is enforced, of foreclosing on the property and selling it outright or managing it, as may be more suitable? I think I should refer in passing to the experience of the mortgage banks established in this province. Those members who read the annual reports of this department, and I hope there are very few who do not, will be acquainted with the difficulties now being encountered by these banks. Those difficulties are largely due to their having been started in the boom period of agriculture and to advances having been made on the basis of land and crop values then prevailing. They are also due to reckless borrowing by members and to inadequate supervision by directors, and (let me not shirk any of the blame), to imperfect knowledge and control by the department. But here too, they find their ultimate difficulty in the practical impossibility of realising to the full their basic security, the land of the borrower. That such banks can be run and properly controlled, that they can advance loans and recover their instalments has been demonstrated by one or two examples. I may quote in particular the Shahpur Mortgage Bank which, largely under the guidance of the Nawab Sahib, the member for Shahpur, has maintained a record unequalled by other mortgage banks in the province. But I know that the Nawab Sahib himself, in whose presence I recently had the pleasure of inspecting his bank, will acknowledge the difficulties and the limitations inherent in mortgage credit in this province.

Sir, I have little more to add. We are debating not the specific provisions of the Bill—that is for the select committee and for subsequent stages—but its general principles. Only one point raised in the eloquent and able speech of Mr. Manohar Lal calls for brief comment from me. He drew attention to the fact that a considerable percentage of the loans made by co-operative societies were for the payment of Government land revenue; and he seemed to imply that this indicated that the zamindar was finding it more and more difficult to meet the Government demands. That the zamindar has in recent years, in certain areas, found it increasingly difficult to pay his land revenue, I do not deny. But it is fallacious to assume that the difficulty is demonstrated by borrowing from co-operative societies. A zamindar habitually borrows cash to pay land revenue for the simple reason that the land revenue payment usually falls due before he has realised the money from his crop. The loan is therefore a short term loan which is usually repaid as soon as the current crop is marketed. Therefore, the figures of borrowing for this purpose are no indication of the aggregate increase in the zamindar's permanent load of debt.

There is one other somewhat important point and that is about the conciliation boards. Great emphasis has been laid on the criticism that the monetary jurisdiction of these boards is practically unlimited. It is said that they have been given power not enjoyed by the high courts or by any other civil court in this country or elsewhere. In that connection I would draw your attention to one simple provision in the Bill, namely clause 6 (2). Under the definition of "debtor" it is laid down that a debtor means an agriculturist whose debt amounts to a sum prescribed by the local Government, for the area in which he resides, that is to say, that Government can prescribe in any area the amount which these conciliation boards can deal with.

The Bill provides no short cut to prosperity. None is possible. It does not purport to wipe off by one stroke the zamindars' debt and the money-lenders' anxieties. Such ideals, even if desirable, are impossible of realisation. What is surely needed is a measure that will put new heart and new hope in the debtor, that will convince him that his difficulties are realised by Government, that will suggest to him the way by which he himself, by his own efforts and aided by the sympathy and co-operation of Government and his creditors, can re-establish his credit and his self-respect. From the point of view of the creditor, what is needed is some measure that will tend to thaw and set flowing again the frozen streams of capital and credit and once more set his business going on a reasonable and profitable basis. The creditor throughout the province knows that a considerable proportion of his debt is in reality irrecoverable. He can only hope to have this proportion decided by a competent and impartial investigation, with very definitely increased chances of recovery of the balance.

For both debtor and creditor what is needed is an opportunity to come together and settle their difficulties on the basis of common interest and a common notion. It is these objects, if I rightly interpret the mind of Government that this Bill aims to bring about and it is for this reason that I would appeal to members on all sides of the House to raise this question out of the rut of party politics, sectional rancour and communal prejudice, and to give the measure a fair and unbiassed examination (Applause.)

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): The honourable the leader of the Unionist Party has admitted practically in so many words that he was playing the roll of a paid advocate. That this is so is perfectly apparent from the mode of argument that he adopted and the admissions that he made. He told us that this Bill was designed for the protection of the poor peasant. But he also took care to see to it that he was included in that list although he was by no means either poor or a peasant or an agriculturist. He only wanted to be paid for his advocacy and the method of payment is that he indirectly confers upon himself by this piece of legislation a special privilege, namely of exploiting his fellow statutory agriculturists. He can get their land with perfect ease and he wants the machinery by which he should be able to add to his broad acres, to be oiled and greased and impediment and friction removed as much as possible. His position, therefore, reduces itself on his own admission to that of a paid advocate. Therefore, I would submit that all the arguments that he has adduced before you should be discounted as a judge would naturally discount the arguments of a paid advocate. He has made three principal points and almost everyone of them would not bear a proper and judicious scrutiny. In the first place he has told us that the Punjab peasant was not the most prosperous in the land. The method that he adopted in proving that part of his proposition was to show that his debt was the highest. The honourable member who preceded me has shown to the satisfaction of the House, if not to his satisfaction, that the higher the debt, the greater is the prosperity. Of all the provinces of India it is apparent that the debt of the Punjab peasant stands at the highest. That shows that the Punjab peasant commands high credit and is the most prosperous peasant in the whole country. Another aspect of this question to which I would like to advert is that the honourable member was reluctant to examine and analyse as to what portion of this debt was productive and what portion was unproductive. If we judge by these standards it would be perfectly apparent, as has been shown to the House by the honourable member who preceded me, that the Punjab peasant is in a much better position than his brother similarly situated in any other part of the country. This is so far as the first proposition that he made is concerned. The second proposition he made was that the Punjab agriculturist deserves special treatment because of his military services, and a good deal of emphasis was laid on this. But I think it should be apparent to those officers of the Government who were engaged in recruitment work during the Great War that every effort was made to enlist non-agriculturist classes under the name and guise of agricultural classes. Numerous kamins were offered as Jat and Rajput recruits. Many who hold chits for having served the Government by supplying them with recruits during the Great War would know on examination that they really offered landless kamins in preference to such persons as were their own kith and kin. If anything at all, the original purpose of the Land Alienation Act, namely that it would enable Government to have a class from which recruitment could be easily made was not served. It stood in the way of easy recruitment. I think this must be known to most officers of Government. The third point the honourable leader of the Unionist party made was that he did not really want any of these protective measures. He did not want the Land Alienation Act; he did not want the Money-lenders Act; he did not want the Regulation of Accounts Act and he is not very much for this Bill which is now before the House and he was driven to the extreme of asking for these small mercies because something stood in the way of his being able to secure the rights to himself by the direct primitive method. That is his chief grievance. The relations would adjust themselves, normal relations would prevail and the good old rule, the ancient plan, let him keep who has the power, and let him take who can, would come into operation. This is what he is standing for. This is what he is preaching and I hope Government would take full note of that. I shall refer to this attitude in another connection and on another point. But this is the mentality behind the argument which needs to be publicly exposed. It is the Government which is standing in the way of his enforcing his alleged rights or in the way of his removing his alleged disabilities. Government will have to take full note of the mentality which really actuates and which is being preached by a gentleman who poses to be their friend. These are the only three points which were made by him and I listened to him very attentively.

Now coming to the merits of the Bill I may say at once that the Bill before us will not achieve any of the objects which the Honourable Member in-charge of the Bill told us it was calculated to achieve. He told us in so many words that the Bill was intended to bring the money-lender and the debtor together. I hope I am quoting his words correctly. It would perhaps be more appropriate to say that this Bill is intended to pull classes by the ears and that is the way in which the money-lenders and their clients would be brought together or are intended to be brought together. Of course it has been said times without number and this is a very appropriate occasion on which this charge could be repeated, that our masters, our Governors, are really adepts in this art of setting one class against another and bringing people together on the basis and in the manner in which I have indicated. The opinions that have been invited—I have just one before me—are not very encouraging. One gentleman, the Deputy Commissioner of Multan, says on page 6 :—

“There is considerable force in their complaint and one cogent objection against the Bill as a whole is that, while it is bound to arouse bitter class feeling, it provides no solution to the real problem with which we are confronted.”

This is only a specimen of the opinions that have been expressed with reference to this capacity of the Bill to bring classes together. Everybody who has given attention to the details of this Bill and the policy on which it is based is of the opinion that this cannot but exasperate inter-class and inter-communal feelings. It is calculated to create more friction in the body politic rather than oil the machinery. It will not prove as a lubricant but it will be a piece of obstruction in the harmonious development of relations between the lending classes and the borrowing classes. A question in this reference was addressed by the Government to the Honourable Judges of the High Court and they have studiously refrained from giving an answer on the plea that it is the business of the Government really to examine the results of the policy that they advocate and they as such would not hazard an opinion on that point which means, read between the words, that they are apprehensive that this would lead to further estrangement between classes and will in no way tend to smooth matters or lead to harmonious working as is alleged by the authors of the Bill.

The next point that I want to make is that it is apparent that the Bill does not follow the recommendations of the Indebtedness Enquiry Committee. It was pointed out at great length by the honourable member for commerce and industry and I would not like to repeat the arguments that he addressed to the House, that it is perfectly apparent that the Bill as drafted ignores the vital recommendations of that Committee and belittles the safeguards under which those recommendations were made. The principal provisions of the Bill which is before us, I venture to submit, are ill-conceived and their full legal, economic, social and political implications have not been envisaged at all. To use the words of one of the District Judges, the District and Sessions Judge of Ambala,

It would be more honest for the legislature to throw off the mask and admit at once that the main object of the Bill is to secure that no proceedings shall be conducted in conformity with either law or justice.

This is the characterisation of the Bill made by one of the learned District and Sessions Judges in the province. I hope the framers would pause to think. It is a pity and it must be admitted as a fact that the debt is large and the amount of it is certainly increasing, but the question, as I have already submitted, is to find out how much of it is productive and how much unproductive, and in order to devise proper remedies it would be essential that we should go into an analysis of the question. In the absence of that analysis and in the absence of that information, we are simply groping in the dark and would not be devising the remedies appropriate to the needs of the case. It is really the unproductive debt with which we are mainly concerned, and we have got to direct our remedies to that direction. The measure before us is not likely to furnish any the least relief, and in this particular point I am in full agreement with the Leader of the Unionist Party. The measure before us, I repeat, is not likely to give any the least relief. Its inevitable effect, as I take it, would be to disturb, and dislocate, and perhaps to destroy, entirely the rural system of credit. I will ask in all earnestness, can Government really afford to see this system destroyed? Will you be able to carry on or improve agriculture with this system of agricultural credit eliminated? Have you got a substitute? The co-operative system of credit which was brought into being hardly touches the fringe of the problem, and, if I understand aright from the reports that are being published from year to year, it has practically ceased to function, at least actively. (An honourable member: No.) I accept the amendment. It has not ceased to function, but it is grinding itself and doing its work perfunctorily. (Interruption.) Even if it is working in full swing and to the satisfaction of the department, the question is what part of the problem does it really touch? How much ground does it cover? What is the proportion that it bears to the entire system of rural credit with which we as a Council have got to deal? Your's is only perhaps an experiment in the laboratory. We have got to deal with colossal operations, operations on the large provincial and national scale. Your co-operative system touches now only the fringe of the problem as compared with the magnitude of the question with which we are dealing. It is merely a drop in the ocean. Now, if you destroy this indigenous system of rural and agricultural credit, you will simply rue the day. I hold that this system has its virtues. It is the least costly method that any student of economics must have come across in his studies and which prevails nowhere else in the world. Its effects have stood the test of time. It is an indigenous product, the result of a long process of social evolution. That is what you have got to consider. But I am not standing for it. I am prepared to grant that it is faulty. I am prepared to grant that it should be replaced by another system. But the point is where is the substitute? And when there is no substitute why destroy this? By destroying this without providing a substitute, you are simply bringing agriculture to a standstill, and it would be as much to the detriment of the Government as to that of the peasant if you abolish the system. All operations of agriculture in this country will be brought to an end. Why not develop the existing co-operative societies more and more? That will be the best way of supplanting this present system of credit. The sahnkar would be done away with, and automatically he would be displaced by your rural banks and your rural co-operative societies and other kindred institutions. Let the sahnkar die a natural death in the process of evolution. Do not try to strangle him. It would be both unnatural and unjustifiable and obviously uneconomic and not paying if you do so. I have tried to go through the opinions received, and they are unanimous that the Bill as drafted at present will gradually destroy and curtail rural credit with all the consequences that I have enumerated. Government will be ill-advised in destroying the system. They themselves would suffer more than the zamindar, as I have indicated. A day would come when it would be no longer possible for you to collect your revenue. Eliminate the sowcar, and I prophecy with perfect confidence that it will not be possible for you to have your revenue with as much ease and as much promptness as at present. By killing out the sahukar you would compel the agriculturist to sell off his produce at the earliest possible opportunity in order to pay his land revenue and at the least remunerative rates. This is the injury that you are inflicting on the agriculturists and upon the Government. (Pir Akbar Ali: He does the same thing now.) He has now more staying power. He retains his grain and sells it at the most favourable opportunity. You have only got to examine the transactions of the agriculturist and the sahukar, and you will come to the conclusion that money is being freely lent to the peasants to enable them to pay off their land revenue demands. (An honourable member: Absolutely wrong.) My own impression is that this Bill is really a political stunt. It is really not calculated to provide in the least any economic relief and, unless it is radically modified it will prove to be a piece of political charlatanism. It will not help either one side or the other. It will only do the mischief which I have indicated. The remedy which this Bill seeks to propose is really worse than the disease. I think we all of us on every side of the House should really work together and find out the real maladies which afflict the zamindar, the hardships from which he suffers. Instead of investigating these difficulties we are presented with this Bill which would lead us nowhere. The permanent and real remedy of the peasants' ills, I would venture to submit, is the Gandhian remedy. The solution propounded by Mahatma Gandhi, I believe, is the real solution of the difficulty, namely, that you should give the agriculturist some sort of supplementary occupation. He remains idle for nearly six months in the year, if not more. You should try to utilise his services, and it is only by supplementing his income that you can really make him more prosperous and less dependent on the sahukar or the money-lender. That will be the real remedy. You should establish some sort of cottage industries, encourage people to take to callings other than pure agriculture and other avocations which require very little capital. That would be a real remedy which will help the peasant and which would help everybody. The second remedy, as has already been pointed out, is the industrialisation of the country. Unless you develop industries, the peasant is bound to remain as he is. No purely agricultural country can possibly expect that its members would be prosperous. It is impossible in the very nature of things. The real remedy lies in the promotion of industry. Here, however, there is a fundamental clash between the interests of India and the interests of England so far as the promotion of industries is concerned, and so long as that clash continues there seems to be no way out of the difficulty, and so long as that clash continues there cannot be any real endeavours by the Government to promote indigenous industries, and so long as industrialisation does not take place it is impossible to expect that our peasantry would become richer than it is at present. The condition of the peasantry must remain what it is. That is inherent in the very nature of things. The third remedy that I would propound with your permission is the rationalisation of the land tax. By all means exempt the small holder of an acre or so. Graduate the tax if you like. Let him who has the capacity to pay be made to pay and not everybody irrespective of the fact whether he is in a position to pay or not. This process by whatever name you call it—I would call it rationalisation of land tax—will prove a real and permanent remedy and would make the peasant prosperous. Still more important, and one which perhaps is within the power of the Government to do at once, is the fourth remedy, namely, the nationalisation of the country's fiscal and monetary policy. Just at present we have absolutely no hand in determining our monetary policy or our fiscal policy. Even some of the officers to whom the Bill was sent for expression of opinion frankly tell us, that the real solution of the problem of the cultivator's debt is to be found in a reduction in the exchange value of the rupee, and this is the policy which in my opinion should be pressed upon the Government of India. This is mentioned in many of the opinions received. I would not dwell much upon this rather intricate and technical remedy, but this is really one of the vital things to which we should address ourselves and to which perhaps by the very condition of things we are prevented from paying any attention.

1 P.M.

Lastly, I would submit that one mode of real relief would be provided by the retrenchment of expenditure. We have all complained from time immemorial, if I may say so, that the administration of the province is costing us more and more. Cut down expenditure. That would be a relief to the tax-payer. Let all that relief be given to the poor landowner if you so like. But unless you cut down your expenditure you cannot possibly expect that relief would come. For you cannot create something out of nothing. These are, in my humble submission, the real remedies which ought to be pursued if we want to see our peasant prosperous on a permanent basis. All other remedies would be quack remedies. They might at best be temporary palliatives. If you analyse them deeply you will soon discover that their after effects as well as their immediate effects would lead us nowhere. They will not prove to be real remedies of the situation, and the Bill only provides you with some quack remedies, as I have already said. As a matter of fact while coming to Simla with this Bill in my hand I was really thinking whether this Bill if enacted into law would provide more relief to the peasants or the making of a present to them of Rs. 20 or 30 thousand that we are likely to spend on holding a session of the Council in Simla would have afforded the greater relief. I have certainly not the least doubt in my mind, and I unhesitatingly came to the inference that making a present to them of the expenditure incurred on holding this session here and carrying on this infructuous discussion would make a better method of relief. The only result of this discussion would be that this Bill would be placed on the Statute Book. Place it on the Statute Book even as it is. I prophesy with full confidence that it will not help the agriculturist in the least. But with the help of Rs. 20 or 30,000 in a rural area you can establish a hospital or perhaps a couple of them, on a satisfactory and permanent basis.

Apart from the defects that I have enumerated and the objections which I entertain to the Bill as we have it before us my main objection is that this Bill and legislation of kindred nature tend to demoralise the people. It would demoralise both the borrower and the creditor. Take, for instance, one simple item of fixing the rate of interest. Can rate of interest be fixed by fiat of the legislature? I know experiments of this kind have been made in America, perhaps in almost all the States. But what have they found? They have all come to the conclusion now that the rate of interest cannot be regulated by the State. State regulations of rates of interest is next to impossible. The honourable member in charge of the Bill made a very candid remark, and I took down his words. I am sorry I have not got them here. The purport of them was this that it was almost as difficult and dangerous to interfere with economic laws as it was to interfere with the laws of nature. Not only impossible to interfere, but if you interfere, you go one step further and you interfere at your own peril, at your own risk, at your own cost. And what is this Bill? Is it not an attempt to interfere with the laws of economics? Is it not, therefore, dangerous to enact it? Is it not therefore impossible to pass it into law? The Bill is a mere camouflage, a mere political stunt to divert attention. It has no virtue, no meaning, no significance. It will lead us nowhere. This is what I want to impress upon the members of the Unionist Party who espouse the cause of the peasants. (An honourable member: Make it stronger). In what direction? If the rate of interest is say, 5 per cent., if we bring it down to 2 per cent. will it make the Bill stronger? If we want to provide a real remedy we shall have to bring in an entirely different Bill. I venture to repeat again that the Bill as it is is a mere political stunt and not a measure of economic relief. If it is dangerous to interfere with the laws of nature and impossible to do so, the same, according to the mover of the Bill, applies to economic laws. Can you really regulate the rate of interest? Has anybody succeeded so far in doing so? If you prescribe the rate of interest what would be the result? The result would be inevitable, namely, the borrower and the creditor would collude. They will say: Al right, let us put down the rate at 8 per cent. because the law says it should be 8 per cent. But the real rate of interest would be what the creditor wants. It is really your credit in the market that would determine the rate of interest, your credit and its economic value. It is not a fiat of the legislature that can possibly determine the rate of interest. Has that been done successfully anywhere? Not to my knowledge. As I said attempts have been made in some of the States of America, but they have all come to nothing. They have realised at the end that it is impossible to regulate by an ipse dixit of the State legislature what the rate of interest should be. What would be the inevitable result? Collusion between the creditor and debtor and the demoralisation of both. I began by saying that my main objection to the Bill is the demoralisation to which it would lead. Are we not already sufficiently demoralised? Read through these opinions. What do you find? Are we not sufficiently demoralised already? That is perhaps the necessary incident of the state of political subjection in which we find ourselves, the necessary incident perhaps of the governance of one country by another. Whatever may be the reason the broad fact remains that we stand sufficiently demoralised. If you read through these three volumes of the opinions on the Bill the one thing that should strike you is that leaving aside the two, three, four or half a dozen opinions which are really candid and which are very refreshing for their candour and for their straightforwardness the rest are such that they unthinkingly say either yes or no. And the large majority of the opinions dare not speak the truth directly. They know what the opinion of the Government is, and they understand which way the wind blows and they have got to see that their promotions, their preferments...

Mr. D. J. Boyd : I protest against this mean aspersion upon officials that they are afraid to tell the truth because they have to look to their promotion.

Mr. Labh Singh : I am not casting any aspersion. I am rather giving credit to those people who have spoken boldly. As for others I was speaking of the difficulties of their position. They indulge in circumlocutions as distinguished from those people who have dared to speak out their mind directly and boldly. Because they indulge in unnecessary circumlocution I think to that extent they are afraid to speak out the truth. It serves no purpose to waste the reader's time by going round and round as they do and trying to say things which one could say outright, directly and in bolder ways. I was going to make a contrast between those opinions which have indulged in periphrasis with those which have been rather candid and open when I was interrupted. My submission in brief is that the Government and the select committee will very carefully examine the reasons which support the various opinions. And if the opinions against the Bill are really sound and if they are borne out by experience, then those opinions should be given their proper weight and should be given effect to.

Another aspect of the question which is also a direct corollary of the Bill is that you are practically encouraging people to demand the repudiation of just debts. This is what the Bill does, and my honourable friends on the other side say they want the Bill to be strengthened and what would the strengthening of the Bill amount to ? It would come to this that instead of repudiating the debts by 20 per cent. let them be repudiated by 50 per cent or by 40 per cent. or in toto. I mean the more you strengthen the Bill the more would it come to this. In this country it is known to everybody that the discharge of debts and obligations has been considered the pious obligation of all.

To encourage them to repudiate their debts even in part would be trying to bring about a change in their mental attitude and in their morals which we should deprecate and discourage. The proposals as embodied in this Bill would simply let in a flood of demoralisation. The opinions before us tell us that the existing insolvency law is already being abused to a very large extent, and that demoralisation would be universal and complete if this Bill is passed into law. The repudiation of one obligation would lead naturally and normally to a tendency to repudiate all other obligations. Be prepared, I would submit, after this, for the next no-rent campaigns. With what possible justification, except perhaps the justification of force, can you possibly prevent these no-rent campaigns being launched after you have once allowed the idea to go abroad that people can repudiate their debts. The repudiation of one obligation would necessarily and by the force of logic lead to the repudiation of other obligations. It would be inevitable, and it would certainly be the next step from this. You cannot avoid these repercussions. You cannot allow the mind of people to work in separate watertight compartments. If they are encouraged to believe that this thing can be done in one direction, they would certainly jump to the conclusion that it is also possible to do it in all other directions. The Bill, therefore, as I have already submitted, would tend to give a bolshevik orientation to the mentality of the people. I hope the House and the Government would ponder over this proposition. You are spending good money on anti-bolshevik propaganda and your own action is calculated to burst all barriers. This is what you are preaching by your conduct by putting through a Bill of this kind.

Mr. M. A. Ghani : May I know if any money is spent on anti-bolshevik propaganda by Government ?

Mr. Labh Singh : If not directly by this Government, certainly by the Government of India.

I have to make only two minor points and they are in the nature really of corollaries. It is a fact well-known to Government and to the House that the migration of sahuks from villages to towns is rapidly taking place, and a Bill of this description would naturally tend to hasten that process. It is for Government to consider if it is wise to do so. In my humble opinion the sahuks constitute centres of conservatism in the countryside. They are elements which make for strength and stability in the administration, and if you drive them to the towns you would leave the countryside bereft of those elements of safety, stability and strength, and the countryside would become one long prairie ready for conflagration which would be difficult for you to put out if it takes place.

The second corollary to which I want to draw the attention of the Government as well as the House is that the Bill has in it sections which relate to easy insolvency. The operation of these sections would practically automatically disenfranchise the people on a large scale. I hope it is known to all members that insolvency constitutes an electoral disability, and if a person runs insolvent he loses his right of vote. Those who are aware of the working of the existing insolvency laws know that, there is already a very growing and rapid tendency towards the acquisition of this status, this privilege. The easier insolvency procedure would lead to automatic disenfranchisement. I hope that the Government and the select committee will take note of these considerations and the measure would be made conformable to the dictates of conscience, common sense, justice and ordinary political prudence. The conciliation boards, I hope, would be deleted, else their jurisdiction would be restricted within the narrowest limits and the safeguards which were suggested by the Indebtedness Inquiry Committee would be provided, and also the right of appeal and representation by pleader would be conceded. I need not dwell upon the necessity of these provisions. The justice and necessity are apparent, and I hope these concessions would be made. The operation of the Bill, I trust, would be restricted to the petty holder and the small peasant in spite of what the honourable the leader of the Unionist Party has said, and its provisions would be so recast as not to be availed of by such high personages as our late Governor, or by our present Ministers or by the honourable the leader of the Unionist Party, and gentlemen of that degree of respectability, culture and strength, and that the definition of an agriculturist would be also brought in conformity with the dictates of reason and the necessities of economics.

One thing very important that I would like to suggest at the end is this. If this measure is only an experimental one, its life should be limited to two years or at the best to three years. We have been told that this measure is of an experimental nature. If that is so, that should be provided for in the body of the Bill itself that the life of this Act when enacted would not exceed two or three years.

In the end, I would again refer you to the opinions that are before us. I hope full weight would be given to their contents. With these remarks, Sir, I resume my seat.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I have got few points which have not been touched by the other speakers. When I read this Bill I was convinced that there has been a bankruptcy not only in the finances of the Punjab but also in the statesmanship of the Punjab Government which has chosen a Bill of this kind without understanding its implications and without in the least doing any good to any party, either the agriculturists or the non-agriculturists. Before I actually deal with the Bill itself, I want to make one point absolutely clear. The Honourable Finance Member has moved the motion, and I find that in the select committee which is to consider this Bill there are eleven members. Out of these eleven gentlemen, six belong to what are called the agricultural tribes. Three belong to the Government benches who are naturally supporters of this Bill at least in its present form, and two represent the non-agricultural tribes of the Punjab which in population is larger than the agricultural tribe in the Punjab.

It has been found that there are over 50 per cent. non-agricultural tribes in the Punjab and less than 50 per cent. agriculturist tribes. Therefore you can just imagine that if this Bill goes to the select committee as at present constituted there is absolutely no chance of the other point of view being heard or properly considered by the committee. That is one submission I would like to make to the Government members who are responsible for bringing forward this motion, that they should so constitute the committee that the two sides are evenly balanced so that the Government members may have a chance of giving their verdict on the various proposals that will come up before them. There is another proposal that I would press with all seriousness. The Bill is called the Relief of Indebtedness Bill. If on this committee there are any members who are themselves debtors, they should not be permitted to sit on the committee, because you cannot possibly expect an unprejudiced and impartial consideration of the question from such people who are to consider a Bill of this kind. I would give this warning to the Government members, because I intend to send this debate to the members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee so that they may see how in the future the Punjab is going to be governed. I really fail to understand why the two gentlemen, Mr. Labh Singh and Mr. Mukand Lal Puri who sat on the Calvert Committee have not been put on the select committee on this Bill. With these preliminary observations with regard to the constitution of the select committee, I shall make general observations with regard to the Bill itself.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

It is my definite opinion that this Bill is a class measure. Call it by any name you like ; but if you read the opinions you will find that there is a sharp cleavage between two classes, one the supporters of the Bill and the others those who oppose the Bill. For example, you know as a matter of fact that the district boards represent agricultural tribes and are generally in favour of the Bill ; whereas municipalities which generally consists of non-agricultural tribes have opposed the Bill. That is one line of distinction. Secondly, you will observe that the Bar Associations except that very highly intellectual Bar Association of Rohtak represented in this Council by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and his other friends, and excepting the Muslim Bar Association of Sargodha, there has been unanimity of opinion against this Bill. That is what I find here. There may be one or two which I might have missed, but I can give you names of the various bar associations which have considered this Bill in all its bearing and have as a result opposed this Bill. Then again, I have seen that individual Hindus have generally, with some exceptions, of course, have opposed this Bill while the Muhammadans generally have supported the Bill. There is one Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Stainton, who has definitely stated that in his district the Bill has been opposed by the Hindus and supported by Muhammadans. There is one body of impartial opinion, unprejudiced and impartial opinion from the European members who are serving as district judges or deputy commissioners. I have very carefully gone through their opinions and I find that even those who are said to support this Bill actually oppose it because they have definitely stated in various places that with regard to the conciliation boards, with regard to the definition of agriculturist and so on there must be radical improvement. Thus that unprejudiced and impartial opinion which you find given by the European gentlemen shows that the Bill is a highly contentious measure and it would not be worth while to pass it without full consideration. Therefore I am perfectly justified in saying that this Bill is a class measure which is really the culmination of that policy of dividing class against class which the Punjab Government has been following for the last 84 years. I repeat these words and I am prepared to substantiate it that the Bill is really the natural and logical consequence of that policy which was enunciated in 1900 when the Punjab Land Alienation Act was passed in this province which was a class measure which has, if we understand facts properly, has not given any relief to the small peasant proprietor. That is my point. I shall demonstrate this by showing that what I am saying is perfectly correct. The Honourable Leader of the opposition said, "Look at the opinion of the District Judge, Ambala. He is merely a young man, fresh from college and his opinions are, therefore, not worth anything. The Punjab Land Alienation Act is not a class measure " and so on and so forth. I would like to place before the members of Government what was said by Lord Lothian's Committee (the Franchise Committee) which went into the whole of this question and gave this verdict after hearing all the evidence. Sir Miles Irving was the President of the provincial committee which co-operated with Lord Lothian's Committee. Here I must pay my homage to that committee which went into this question and gave an impartial verdict so far as the Punjab Land Alienation Act and the policy underlying that Act is concerned. It said that the Punjab Land Alienation Act conferred great advantages, social and economic on the members of the agricultural tribes and it would not be right to give them any political predominance which they would get if they formed three-fourths of the electorate. Now keeping these matters in view, I would request the members of Government not to be carried away by the hysterical cry raised by pseudo-zamindars and by those who do not advocate the cause of poor zamindars but of the zamindars who have got money but who do not desire to pay the debts which they incurred. I would request the Government to go into this question very carefully and not to raise issues of vast magnitude the result of which would be paralysing the Government machinery in times to come. That is my deliberate opinion and this opinion I hope will be shared by those who once analyse what had been suggested here and what had been said outside this Council. We were told by one honourable member whom I do not see here now, the honourable Muhammadan member for Amritsar (Mr. Muhammad Sadiq) in a language which cannot be mistaken, how the Jews in England and in other countries had been dealt with in the past. The Jews according to him were money-lenders, disabilities were imposed upon them and everything was done to keep them out and destroy them. He also stated very briefly what had been done to the Jews recently in Germany. That is exactly the mentality of honourable members occupying those benches who would not take an impartial view the implication of that speech, and that has been understood by many of us on this side, is that when power is transferred to the agriculturists, the Hindus will be deemed Jews of India and will be dealt with like the Jews in England in the past and in Germany quite recently. This is not the first time that I hear such views. This has been said times without number in the Moslem newspapers that no quarter should be given to people who lend money to borrowers. Therefore I warn the Hindus that they should take note of what is being said here and outside the Council and they should so organise their forces by all legitimate and constitutional means and put before those who are going to give a new constitution for the whole country what is going to happen in the Punjab. We are accustomed to money-lenders being murdered and the murderers going unpunished. We know that on various occasions false methods are adopted in order that the payment may not be made. There are district judges, Europeans, who have said that this Bill will lead to fraud of that kind and so far as conciliation boards are concerned they would be of no help and of no avail. These are warnings given by those people who now possess some sort of power to stem the evil tide of repression which is going to arise after the whole power passes into the hands of those who will not know how to use that power. I, therefore, state with all the emphasis that I can command, but with every respect that 50 per cent. of the population of the Punjab is inadequately represented in this House. They have got very few representatives on account of the land qualification which is the chief qualification for membership of this Council. It is our duty to see that this 50 per cent. of the population is not injured in this way. That is the appeal which I make to the members on the Government benches.

Now, the honourable member for Rohtak (Chaudhri Chhotu Ram) questioned the bona fides of myself, of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and of the honourable lady member. Speaking for myself, I had three times the honour of fighting the election. In the second election I had to fight with an agriculturist member and the Ministers went to my constituency to help that agriculturist candidate. I had to fight not only the agriculturist candidate but also a congress candidate. I defeated both of them. The poor zamindars of the Hoshiarpur district reposed their confidence in me. It, therefore, does not lie in the mouth of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram who represents only half the district of Rohtak to come forward and say that he alone is the representative of the agriculturist in the Punjab. I may say this—and I have said it more than once on the floor of the House—that I regard the agriculturists as the backbone of the Punjab. It is through him that every profession thrives here and grows prosperous; and if anything can be done to promote his welfare Chaudhri Sahib will find that we are not in any way behind him.

I submit that the real problem is not tackled by this Bill. What is the problem? It is this in a nutshell. Here are a number of persons who are called money lenders. They have no hope of recovering the money they have lent and they have no more money to lend. That is the point. I would request Government to note this point that by merely calling them money lenders or bankers they should not be supposed to have got a hoard of wealth to their credit. These people who had been lending money as a profession find at this time that they have not got any money with which to carry on their business or earn their subsistence. That is one part of the problem. The other part is this. Leaving aside those big and rich landlords who have taken loans and who do not want to return them because they have the sense of security that their land is protected by the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, there are as a matter of fact a large number of small peasant proprietors who are in debt, who are born in debt, who live in debt and who die in debt. Therefore the problem is this, how to benefit this class of people on the one side who are deserving of full sympathy and on the other side the large class of moneylenders who have to depend for their livelihood on the profession which they have been carrying on and who will now find that they have no money left and their debts are not to be paid. This is the problem which the Government if it is really in earnest to solve the problem should direct its attention to. And I say with all seriousness that this Bill does not touch the problem at all; not at all. It does not, as Mr. Manohar Lal has remarked, even touch the fringe of the problem. In this connection I would very briefly touch upon the provisions of the Bill. Take for example the definition of the agriculturist. It is not I who am saying this but it is Mr. Penny, an officer of very long standing, Commissioner of Multan and a person who has got greater experience in matters like this than my friend Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, who says that an agriculturist should be defined as one who carries on the profession with his own hand. An agriculturist or a cultivator is the person who cultivates the land with his own hand. And because he is a worker, because he is a tiller of the soil and because he is not in a position to compete with other people, he must be protected and that cultivator of the soil, or the tiller of the soil will have my full sympathy whether Rai Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has it himself or not. But he does not want to help him. I say this, that throughout his career he has never brought forward one single motion that the agriculturist money-lender who swallows the land of this small peasant proprietor without any pity should be touched at all. It is about this type of money-lender that Mr. Darling has written in his book that while the non-agriculturist money-lender shows some kind of pity to the small peasant proprietor the agriculturist money-lender does not. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has never said that so far as the land of this small peasant proprietor is concerned it should be held inalienable even against this agriculturist money-lender. And I am a supporter of this proposition that the small peasant proprietor who lives by the sweat of his brow, by the labour of his lands, should be protected against the agriculturist money-lender as well. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram should come forward with a proposition of this kind. Now if under sanction from the Deputy Commissioner the land of this man is going to be sold, then it should be sold in the open market. There should be open field and no favour. If a land is sold in the open market it is bound to fetch a higher price than otherwise. The agriculturist money-lender should not be allowed to go on weaving his net like a spider round the poor peasant proprietor. Therefore I submit that this amendment is absolutely necessary in the interests and safety of the small peasant proprietor. It is an axiom of political economy and every elementary student knows that if you can give security you can get money at a lower rate of interest. Everybody knows that. The result of the Punjab Land Alienation Act has been that the rate of interest has been higher in the case of these people who cannot offer any security. The result of that has been that alienations have been going on and the peasant proprietor has been suffering and if my honourable friend, Chaudhri Chhotu Ram takes into consideration the condition of the Muzaffargarh district and other districts which are mentioned by Mr. Darling, he will find that what I have been stating is perfectly correct. Therefore if you are really serious in giving relief to the peasant proprietor, the definition of an agriculturist should be radically amended and it should be made occupational. I cannot for the life of me understand why a man owning thousands of acres, cultivating the land through servants and then borrowing money from money-lenders and banks, should be protected. I do not understand this logic. Why should such a definition be given here of the agriculturist money-lender. The reason is plain. The Government has practically passed into the hands of these big zamindars. Look at the constitution of the Government benches. (Interruption). You cannot possibly expect that Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, the protagonist of the agriculturists or other members sitting on the Government Benches, the Members of Government, should support the definition which Mr. Penny has suggested and which various other members here have suggested. Therefore this is one important point which I would submit before the Government and if that definition is inserted and the Land Alienation Act is amended in the manner in which people have suggested, you will perhaps have the wholehearted sympathy and support of members of my party. I say perhaps because there might be one or two who will not agree even there. But speaking for the majority of the people in the Punjab, if you remove this inequity and inequality which exists in the Act, things can go a long way in meeting and overcoming the trouble.

With regard to conciliation boards, opinion has been expressed in no uncertain terms that these boards are unworkable and it would not be possible to make any proper use of them. Whether the officials to whom reference has been made have supported these boards or not, there is one undercurrent running throughout their suggestions and that is that it would be difficult to find impartial and honest men to work on these conciliation boards. And, who is to appoint these conciliation boards? The Local Government. And who is going to be the Local Government in the future? Members of those tribes who now predominate in this Council and who are bound to predominate in the future. Therefore, you cannot possibly expect an impartial selection or election to these conciliation boards. That is one point. Then the second point in this connection, which has been made out by various persons who deal with these matters is with regard to the service of notice, and the wiping off the debt. Almost all have stated that this would lead to mere fraud. People have said that in the matter of service of notice there is always some sort of wrong report. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram was showing some notice or something like that. But I can give him my personal experience. I am not a money-lender but some members of the agricultural tribes took forcible possession of a piece of land belonging to me situated in my village. But thanks to a non-agricultural gentleman, who on this occasion was Mr. Jenkins I was given possession of this land. Not satisfied with this they took over a portion of that land once more and I had to go to a civil court and I got a decree with some costs which amounted to about Rs. 170. Now for the last three years I have been trying to serve notice on them to recover this Rs. 170 from 5 people who possess land, who possess houses in my village and who paid the fines imposed on them. Reply is always received that there is nobody in the village and no person belonging to that party who could tell us about the property to be attached. These things have been going on for the last three years. If members of agricultural or non-agricultural tribes can deal in this manner with a man like myself, you can just imagine what would be the lot of the poor illiterate money-lenders who have got no such resources as I have got. And if I take steps to arrest these men, my honourable friends will say that I am proceeding against the members of the agricultural tribes. I have not done that so far. But here is a problem which has been distinctly pointed out by the learned district judges and other people who deal in law affairs and on which there have been rulings of courts that the misery of the decree holder begins when he has got a decree. He has to spend more on the recovery of the amount than the actual amount itself. These points must be put forward in reply to the honourable member who has spoken vehemently against Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and Shrimati Lekhwati Jain. But here I give you a personal example. Let Chaudhri Chhotu Ram take it up and investigate it. This is the second point with regard to the conciliation boards.

A third point is that after the decree has been given, if mistakes are made there is to be no appeal, no revision, nothing of the kind. I cannot understand why a board which is to consist of persons who have got no judicial training or very little of it should not be appealed against. Why should it not be revised, reviewed or appealed against? There is a considerable body of opinion which exists on this point and which supports the view I am submitting.

Again with regard to the question of arrest, I do not like to arrest people for debts and the District Judge of Karnal has said that in his two districts of Karnal and Rohtak from where Chaudhri Chhotu Ram comes, there have been numerous decrees going into thousands and there have been arrests only in a few hundred cases, perhaps the number is 117. If this power of arrest is taken away or if a notice is to be issued to the person who is to be arrested to the effect that he is going to be arrested he can run away from British territory into a native State and can escape arrest. I ask therefore, "how are you going to tackle this problem?"

Another point I would submit, as the learned Judges of the High Court have said, is, what is the benefit to the money-lender if instead of having his debt cleared, he gets a certificate from this board—one paper in place of another paper? He can only sit down in his house and get the satisfaction that three honourable members one belonging to the agricultural tribe, another to non-agricultural tribe and the third to another tribe, have given him a certificate which he can keep in his pocket not knowing when and how he is going to recover his money. I do not know who was responsible for this wonderful provision. The people are brought together, the debtor and the creditor, a settlement is arrived and what is that settlement? A person who has lent one thousand rupees will get a certificate for Rs. 300 and he will have to be satisfied with what you have done for him. A settlement should benefit both the parties but in this case it will benefit only one. The Government member who has invented this settlement cannot be congratulated on bringing about such a settlement. Of course it would be a settlement if you say, "look here I owe you one thousand and am prepared to pay you Rs. 500; let us settle." But this is no settlement to say that instead of one paper you have another, and have the satisfaction that a settlement has been arrived at. It would be a very cheap thing to do undoubtedly. Why do you not say that all the debts should stand wiped off. There is a clean sweep. One hundred and thirty-five crores are going like this, as Mr. Sadiq suggested, as it was done in England. According to him Germany, England and France have done it. I do not know whether they have done it or not, but Mr. Sadiq seems to have some information on this point and relying on that I do say that 135 crores should be wiped off. This solution does not appeal to anybody. No man of any sense and reason unless there are political reasons behind will agree that this is a reasonable solution. Even Mr. King has said that this Bill will have a very bad political effect because one class of people feel that Government times out of number have been siding with the other side and sacrificing the interests of half of the population. I have not the least hesitation in saying that just 50 per cent. are neglected. They cannot purchase land, they cannot build houses and the doors of Government service are being closed against them. Sir Jogendra Singh in a reply to a question this morning said that all things being equal a member of the agricultural tribe will have a preference and these things being equal, we all know how they can be made equal. If there is a difference of 19 and 20 things still can be made equal. Then the non-martial races are not even permitted to go into the army, which is the last resort of these martial races. Now when the poisonous gases will come I do not know whether they alone will be fodder for the gases or other people also will suffer. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram lives in the 14th century. He is unaware of the things that have taken place in Europe to-day and if there is one class of people who are going to suffer most it is the people living in the cities where bombs will be dropped and poisonous gases will be thrown. What are the martial races going to do them?

Mr. President : I hold this to be irrelevant.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Therefore I may submit that the other occupation of getting themselves enrolled in the army is also closed to them. Where are these 50 per cent. of the population to go? Are they going to take this Relief of Indebtedness Bill and parade it before the people saying "here is the magna charta, of the money-lenders and we are satisfied because it will solve our problem and will bring happiness to our children."? Honourable members who sit on Government benches have closed their eyes. Either the facts are not placed before them or they imagine that in villages and other places the money-lenders have large hoards of money which they can utilize in time of need. They are entirely ignorant that to-day the traders and the money-lenders have nothing to fall back upon and are dying of starvation. I know it and can prove it that they have nothing to live upon. After all you are also responsible for the safety and the prosperity of 50 per cent. of the people who live under what you call your law and order. This therefore is a matter which is not to be lightly brushed aside. You may do so but I am going to send this debate to members of Parliament. It is the logical consequence of that policy which you have been pursuing for the last 40 years of sacrificing one class of people for the sake of others. The situation that presents itself to-day is, as Mr. Manohar Lal pointed out yesterday, 40 per cent. of the income of the peasant proprietor is taken away by Government.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Is it not an incorrect interpretation of the speech of the honourable member for the University? I think he said that 40 per cent. of the expenditure of an agriculturist is taken away by land revenue and abiana demand.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I will leave Mr. Manohar Lal alone, and will say that 50 per cent. of the income of a peasant is taken away by Government and if you want me to prove it by facts and figures that 50 per cent. is taken away by land revenue and 20 per cent. or a little less by petty officials, etc., I will be prepared to do so.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I invite the honourable member to prove this to Sir Miles Irving.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : No I will come to the Honourable Finance Member and prove it. He will not shirk his responsibility. It is a known fact. There was that bribery enquiry committee; and further I wanted to bring this question and Chaudhri Afzal Haq also wanted to do so in the last session of the Council but unfortunately we could not bring this up for want of time. The small peasant proprietor has to pay this gratification to various officials. I have known these things while moving amongst these people. I am quite at one with Chaudhri Chhotu Ram that the real problem is the education of these people. Chaudhri Sahib will remember that times out of number I have, on the floor of this House, asked for compulsory education. I sat on the committee on compulsory primary education, but its report did not see the light of the day and I do not think it will be translated into a Bill at all. The real remedy therefore is that the Government should come forward with an offer for a reduction in the land revenues. It should not put these agricultural tribes against the money-lenders. They should therefore try to find a real solution and such a solution can be found. I submit that if the House and the Government interest themselves in this matter a solution can be found. A loan can be floated and by that loan reduced amounts can be paid to the money-lenders. You can float a loan at 3 per cent. or $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. and you can pay to the money-lenders from 50 to 75 per cent. according to what has been repaid to them and then you can get by instalments these loans from the peasant proprietors. But I will always make an exception that these rich and big landlords, these capitalists and these professional men, these doctors and lawyers who in the garb of agriculturists are trying to get all the benefits for themselves, they should not be protected. I read in these opinions a gentleman perhaps a European gentleman asking whether Sir Jogendra Singh and Sir Sikander Hyat Khan are also to be classed as agriculturists and I would ask Sir Firoz Khan Noon the same question. My submission is that first of all a select committee should be constituted which may inspire confidence in the minds of the 50 per cent. of population. I appeal to Sir Miles Irving who is known for his justice and for his impartiality, whatever other people may say, Sir Miles Irving knows I have always put full confidence in him and I hope he will induce Mr. Boyd to add four other names in order to balance the two parties. Of course Chaudhri Chhotu Ram would like to see that the Bill is worded as he likes it. But I would beg of you that it is not a matter which can be brushed aside lightly. You cannot trifle with these threats which have been held out by Mr. Sadiq and we cannot trifle with the feelings of 50 per cent. of the people. These threats will be translated into action in the new provincial autonomy which is coming just now.

Mr. President : The honourable member is repeating his own arguments.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I am summing up and therefore the Government members should take a more just view of the things (hear hear).

Mian Nurullah : May I point out one small fact that none of the members whose main source of income is from agriculture has spoken yet ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : I have got two very good reasons for making my remarks very brief. One is that I am hungry and the other is that my main thesis is already amply supported by all speakers, at least by a great majority of speakers. There is one statement of the last speaker which I think it will be dangerous to let pass unchallenged. He has maintained that this is a case of opposition between 50-50 of the population. It is nothing of the kind. Far from it. If it is an opposition between agriculturists and money-lenders then it is an opposition between something like 50 per cent. of the population and perhaps 10 per cent., a very small percentage indeed. Therefore this plea of want of representation of money-lending classes is entirely beside the point.

[The Hon. Mr. D. J. Boyd.]

The position of Government in this debate has turned out to be that of one who interrupts in a quarrel between a husband and wife. The interrupter gets the worst of it. In the same way both sides have attacked the Government and to my mind unfairly. The main attack has been that it has done nothing whatever to encourage industries especially cottage industries. As for the encouragement of industries I must leave that to my honourable colleague the Minister for Industries. But with regard to cottage industries the scope is very small indeed. There are very few things that can be done and I claim that Government has tried to do them. There is the case of the lac industry. A great deal of money has been spent on research in it and I hope that it will bear real fruit before long. There is also the case of silk rearing. Everybody knows that owing to the introduction of artificial silk there is so great a fall in price that nothing much can be done at present. There is the case of bee-keeping. That has also proved very difficult but it is being attended to by the agricultural department. There is also poultry keeping. Agricultural assistants are receiving training in this line so that they may go down and teach zamindars how to keep and rear poultry. There is also a section in the Hissar Cattle Farm working at a new breed of sheep that would be really suitable to the province. I can only mention these things very briefly indeed. But I think that they deserve to be mentioned in reply to the attack that has been made upon Government that it has done nothing to increase the wealth of the people. That, of course, taken in the wide sense, is a wicked misrepresentation. I once sat between Pandit Moti Lal Nehru and Mr. Iyengar at a lunch and they talked as a matter of course of the Punjab as the richest province in India. When they said that I gasped because I believed it to be one of the poorest. I said: What on earth do you mean by saying that it is the richest province? They said, "Of course, it is. Look at your canal colonies. They forgot to add that the canal colonies had been made by this very Government that is blamed for doing nothing to increase the wealth of the people. It has raised the Punjab from one of the poorest provinces in India into a first rate province. I did not hear any speaker giving credit for that. They very seldom do.

There is only one other remark I would like to make and that is to regret very much the failure of my appeal to keep bitterness out of this debate. Two of the speeches, Mr. Manohar Lal's and Mr. Wace's had been on a very high level indeed and it was a pleasure to listen to every word of them. Other speeches have not been open to criticism on the ground of bitterness but some, and particularly, one is open to the very strongest exception on that ground. I think we on the Government benches have got a very good ground indeed for complaining of the aspersion, absolutely and utterly unworthy aspersion, made upon Government in saying that it introduced this measure merely as an apple of discord between the two communities. That is absolutely untrue and I deny it utterly. Another aspersion to which I take the strongest exception is the aspersion on Government officials, the suggestion that they would not give their true opinions for fear that their promotion would be affected. To begin with, Government which is responsible for their promotion is not so petty-minded as to take notice of their opinions when it comes to a question of promotion.

Mr. Labh Singh : May I explain? Nothing of that kind was said, All I said was they are to look to the opinions of Government while expressing their opinion on the Bill. They know the mind of Government and they give their opinions so as to suit the provisions of the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I am afraid I have not quite understood. But I am delighted to hear that the member has not the unkind intention which he seemed to have when I was listening to him.

The third is another aspersion with which perhaps I am not personally concerned and which I might let go but it was highly unfair. It is the unfair aspersion on the martial classes that they sought to gain credit during the War by producing as recruits their kamins and members of the non-martial classes. I think it is a very unfair aspersion on a very gallant class of men.

Finally I would only say that whatever one's opinion may be about the establishment of conciliation boards I think it is quite clear that there are four parts of the Bill which are a real contribution to the solution of the relief of indebtedness, or at any rate to the relief of the agricultural debtor. These are the extension of the summary procedure of insolvency, the amendment which to my mind has been long overdue, of the Usurious Loans Act so as to make it into a real working measure instead of the fiasco that it has been up to date, thirdly the protection of the debtor from summary arrest and lastly the introduction of the principle of damdupat.

I think that is all that I need say. I hope the House will now commit the Bill to a select committee. (Cheers).

Mr. President : Question is—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill be referred to a select committee consisting of—

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath

Mr. Manohar Lal

Sardar Bishen Singh

Pir Akbar Ali

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving

Mr. J. D. Anderson

Nominee of the Honourable President and

The Mover.

Mr. Labh Singh : I propose—

That the name of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri be added.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I propose—

That the name of Chaudhri Riasat Ali be added.

Mr. President : Amendment moved is :—

That the names of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and Chaudhri Riasat Ali be added.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the names of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and Chaudhri Riasat Ali be added to the select committee.

The amendment was carried.

The motion as amended was also carried.

Mr. President : What shall be the quorum of the select committee ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I propose that it be fixed at seven.

The council agreed to the proposal.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : May I seek the guidance of the Chair on one important aspect of the Bill. It is a very controversial Bill which will go to the select committee. We should very much like to know what amendments can be moved in the select committee by way of addition, omission or alteration.

Mr. President : Our Rules and Standing Orders are silent as to the functions and powers and also as to the procedure of select committees. This is a very serious omission indeed. Our select committees do not know what additions and alterations can be made to Bills referred to them. Is it the pleasure of the honourable members that on the point raised by the honourable member I may send a note to the select committee or briefly state to the House the powers and functions of a select committee according to Parliamentary Practice ?

Mr. Manohar Lal : Would the note of yours bind the select committee ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What is the object of that note ? Will it be to guide the deliberations of the select committee or to limit their operations ?

Mr. President : According to Sir Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice my answer to Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram's question is :—

"Doubts have arisen whether the committee, to whom a bill has been referred, can by amendment so change the provisions of the bill, that when it is reported to the house, the bill is in substance a bill other than that which was referred to the committee. A committee can negative every clause of which the bill committed to them is composed, and can substitute for those clauses new clauses, if relevant to the bill, as read a second time, and otherwise in order." (P. 412).

It would appear from the passage I have read out that relevancy is the sole test, and this is further explained on page 398 of the same book :

"It must be borne in mind that, under the parliamentary usage in force in former times, an amendment might be wholly irrelevant to the motion or bill to which it was proposed, and that consequently clauses might be added to a bill during its progress through the house relating to any matters however various and unconnected, whether with one another or with the bill as originally drawn."

This was the original practice.

"A reaction from such laxity of procedure led to the establishment of rules and practice which imposed on the House of Commons an inconvenient rigidity in dealing with a bill. No amendment could be moved which was not strictly within the scope of the prefatory paragraph, known as the title, which is prefixed to every bill and describes its object and scope." (P. 398).

In other words, the rule was that nothing which went beyond the scope of a Bill could be inserted in it by a select committee but that everything within the scope could be inserted. However, this rule also was found to be unsatisfactory, and

"To obviate the difficulty thus created, the House, in 1854, by Standing Order No. 34, gave a general instruction to all committees of the whole House to which bills were committed, which empowered them to make such amendments therein as they should think fit, provided that the amendments were relevant to the subject-matter of the bill; and, if such amendments were not within the title of the bill, the title was to be amended, and reported specially to the House." (P. 398).

According to this rule every amendment that is relevant to this bill can be made by the select committee even if it goes beyond the scope of the Bill, in which case the scope should be widened by amending the title of the Bill. The Standing Order 34 of the House of Commons runs as follows:—

It shall be an instruction to all committees of the whole House to which bills may be committed, that they have power to make such amendments therein as they shall think fit, provided they be relevant to the subject-matter of the bill; but that if any such amendments shall not be within the title of the bill, they do amend the title accordingly, and do report the same specially to the House.

The procedure of a committee of the whole house, of a standing committee or of a select committee is generally the same. For reference see Sir Erskine May's book, page 478. There occurs the following sentence:

"Generally speaking, the proceedings of a select committee are assimilated, like those of standing committees, to those of a committee of the whole House."

The Council then adjourned sine die.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

CANAL ADVISORY COMMITTEES OF DIPALPUR AND SOHAG DIVISIONS.

3525. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

- (a) the names of the non-official members of the Canal Advisory Committees of (i) Dipalpur division and (ii) Sohag division respectively ;
- (b) how many suggestions or requests were made at the meetings of the committees by the non-official members of (i) and (ii) in (a) above, from 1st June 1933 to 31st May 1934 ;
- (c) how many of the suggestions or requests mentioned in (b) were accepted ;
- (d) if the number of suggestions accepted is almost nil or very small, what are the reasons for it ;
- (e) what are in brief the suggestions or requests that were rejected ;
- (f) what expenses were incurred by Government in convening the meetings of these advisory committees ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) It is presumed that the honourable member refers to what are now called the Khanwah and Suleimanke divisions of the Dipalpur Canal ;

(i) Khanwah division—

1. Sardar Muhammad Hussain of Ganja Kalan (Lahore district).
2. Lala Dhanpat Bai, Honorary Magistrate, Chunian (Lahore district).
3. Malik Khuda Bakhsb, Zaildar, Khai Hithar (Lahore district).

[The Hon. Capt. Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan.]

(ii) Thirteen.

(c) (i) Two.

(ii) Four.

(d) Taking the two divisions together it will be seen that six out of sixteen requests or suggestions were accepted, which is not a negligible proportion.

The main reasons for rejecting suggestions are that they are financially, technically or administratively impracticable or that they have a provincial application and so do not come within the scope of a Divisional Committee.

(e) (i) The maize used for fodder should be assessed at fodder rates.

(ii) (I) That area of zamindari watercourses should be deducted in measuring up crops.

(II) That if cotton and chari-moth are grown mixed and cotton fails the remission should be given both on cotton and chari-moth.

(III) That when a crop is sown on well water and subsequently irrigated by canal water only half abiana should be charged.

(IV) That land should be acquired along the minor of Haveli distributary for construction of boundary roads.

(V) That if any action has been taken on a certain question asked in the previous committee meeting, the correspondence relating to that action should be laid before the Committee.

- (VI) That on irrigation from outlets at the tail of distributaries and minors half remission should be permissible if the crop is only worth annas 8 in the rupee.
 - (VII) That a certain patwari should be transferred.
 - (VIII) That when gram and fodder are sown mixed only the fodder rate should be charged.
 - (IX) That in warabandi cases the certificate of the civil patwari to the accuracy of the list of areas should be dispensed with.
- (f) The total expenditure incurred by Government in connection with meetings of the committees held between the dates specified was Rs. 123-4-0.

INSPECTOR OF FISHERIES.

3526. Sardar Sampuran Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the object of the Fisheries Department is not only to levy tax on the fishermen of the province but also to increase the supply of indigenous fish by proper scientific means ;
- (b) what scientific academic qualifications or special knowledge in fish culture the Inspector of Fisheries possesses ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that a new gazetted post in the provincial grade is being created in the Fisheries Department ; if so, what reasons and what definite qualifications are fixed for the same ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) Yes.

(b) No scientific academic qualifications ; but has acquired special knowledge in this line during his service in the Fisheries branch for about 29 years.

(c) No.

INSPECTOR OF FISHERIES.

3527. Sardar Sampuran Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state if it is a fact that the Inspector of Fisheries is the only officer directly in touch with the outdoor fisheries staff, and that all promotions, transfers and punishments to the subordinate fisheries staff are given on his recommendation ?

The Honourable Sirdar Sir Jogendra Singh : Yes. The Director of Agriculture and Assistant Director of Agriculture, however, occasionally inspect the work of the Fisheries staff when on tour. All cases of promotions, transfers and punishments to the subordinate Fisheries staff are carefully considered by the Director of Agriculture before orders are passed.

SIKH REPRESENTATION IN FINANCIAL COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE.

3528. Sardar Sahib Sardar Gurbachan Singh : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue please state—

- (i) the total number of posts of (a) superintendents, (b) assistants and (c) senior clerks in the Financial Commissioners' office ;
- (ii) how many of them are held by Sikhs ;
- (iii) whether it is a fact that there is a paucity of Sikhs in this office ;
- (iv) if the reply to (iii) above is in the affirmative, what action Government proposes to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (i) and (ii) The total number of posts in the Financial Commissioners' office and the number held by Sikhs are given below—

	Superintendents.	Assistants.	Senior Clerks.
Total number ..	(a) 6	(b) 24	(c) 14
Held by Sikhs ..	(a) Nil	(b) 1	(c) 1

(iii) Including junior clerks Sikhs hold 12 out of 80 permanent appointments, and Government does not consider that there is a paucity of Sikhs in the office as a whole.

(iv) Does not arise.

ADMISSION OF GIRL STUDENTS IN AMRITSAR MEDICAL SCHOOL.

3529. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is definitely given out in the prospectus of the Amritsar Medical School that 15 girls are to be admitted to the first year class in the present year ;
- (b) how many girls in all communitywise (Hindu, Muslim and Sikh) applied for admission ;
- (c) how many such girls (communitywise) were actually admitted ;
- (d) if no Muslim girls have been admitted, what are the reasons for their non-admission ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that in preference to the Hindu girl applicants six Muslim male students have been admitted ;
- (f) whether any instructions were issued by the Honourable Minister either before, at the time of, or after the admission on the above subject that instead of Hindu girls, Muslim boys may be admitted ;
- (g) why the full number of 15 female candidates has not been admitted as advertised in the prospectus, thereby causing great hardship to the various girl students coming from far off distances ;
- (h) what action Government proposes to take to remedy the injustice done to female candidates ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) The prospectus states that out of 100 seats not more than 15 are reserved for women candidates.

(b) This year thirty girls in all applied for admission, of whom 24 were Hindus and 6 Sikhs.

(c) Seven Hindus and 3 Sikhs.

(d) No Muslim girl applied for admission this year.

(e) The girls take a share out of the number allotted to their respective communities so that no Muslim boy can be said to have been given preference over Hindu girls.

(f), (g) and (h) The admissions are regulated with a view to attaining the following communal distribution among the students :—

	Per cent.
Muslims	40
Sikhs	20
Others	40

In April 1984, before the last admissions were made, instructions had been issued that the number of women students of each community in the school should be counted against the number of students to which each community was entitled according to the above percentages. These instructions were interpreted by the authorities responsible for making the admissions to mean that if any community were unable to find its quota of female students the deficiency should be made up by male students of that community, the total number of female candidates being reduced accordingly. Further instructions have since been issued, making it clear that the failure of any community to fill its quota should not operate to reduce the total number of female candidates admitted. The latest instructions state that if in any year a sufficient number of qualified women candidates are not available from any community, the unfilled places may be allotted to women candidates of another community. In that case the number of male candidates belonging to the communities concerned will be correspondingly increased or decreased, the communal percentages fixed above (40 per cent., 20 per cent., 40 per cent.) being maintained over the total admissions for the year (male and female students taken together).

FEE CONCESSIONS TO SONS OF TEACHERS.

3530. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

(a) whether any concession in school fees is allowed by the Government and Education Department to the sons of teachers drawing Rs. 50 or less as their pay ;

(b) if so, whether Government will allow this very concession to the sons of all those teachers whose income is less than Rs. 1,000 per annum ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : The honourable member is referred to the reply given to starred Council question no. 8484¹ asked by Khawaja Muhammad Eusoof, M.L.C., in the last session of the Punjab Legislative Council.

ADMISSION OF PLUCKED MATRICULATION CANDIDATES INTO SCHOOLS.

3531. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that several headmasters of several high schools on one pretext or another stand in the way of the admission of some of their boys plucked in the matriculation examination to their tenth classes and do not generally admit the plucked students of other schools to their such classes, if they happen to have failed in two or more subjects ;
- (b) if so, whether the Punjab Education Code confers upon headmasters these discretionary powers ;
- (c) if the Punjab Education Code is silent in this matter, whether the Honourable Minister will be pleased to have the powers of headmasters in the Code defined in the interest of plucked matriculation candidates and their unfortunate parents ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) The information available shows that as a rule the headmasters do not refuse readmission to students who are likely to benefit by re-admission.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN GOVERNMENT NORMAL SCHOOLS.

3532. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that there is not a single Hindu or Sikh headmaster of any Government Normal School in the Punjab at present ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the Inspector of these training schools is also a Muslim ;
- (c) when the last non-Muslim incumbents of these above posts were transferred ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) There are only three normal schools in the province, and they happen to have at present Muslim headmasters. It will perhaps further interest the honourable member to know that normal schools are intended chiefly for the training of village school masters, and that therefore as far as possible they are given headmasters who, besides the necessary training experience and administrative ability, have pronounced rural sympathies and evinced an active interest in rural uplift. The choice of the Department seems to have fallen on men who are Muslims.

(b) Yes. It may, however, be added for the honourable member's information that the normal schools are administratively under the divisional inspectors and not under the Inspector of Training Institutions.

- (c) 1. Inspector of Training Institutions—April, 1931.
- 2. Headmaster, Normal School, Jullundur—March, 1934.
- 3. Headmaster, Normal School, Gakhar—February, 1934.
- 4. Headmaster, Normal School, Lala Musa—June, 1928.

SPECIAL FEE CONCESSIONS IN ANGLO-VERNACULAR CLASSES.

3533. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) the number of tahsils in each division where students of statutory agricultural tribes enjoy special fee concession in anglo-vernacular schools ;
- (b) the number of students communitywise (Hindus, Sikhs and Muslims) enjoying, on 31st March 1984, the special fee concessions in anglo-vernacular classes of Punjab schools ;
- (c) if the number of the students belonging to the majority community of Muslims is larger than that of students belonging to the minority community of Sikhs and Hindus, whether he will be kind enough to extend the same concession to the students of Sikh and Hindu communities ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) and (c) Ambala division = 7.

(ii) Jullundur division = 5.

(iii) Lahore division = 2.

(iv) Multan division = 8.

(v) Rawalpindi division = 16.

All the children of statutory agriculturists in the areas mentioned in the Punjab Government (Ministry of Education) Memorandum no. 12095-B., dated the 12th July, 1930, who comply with the requisite conditions are given these concessions regardless of the community to which they belong.

(b) In view of the answer to (a) and (c) it is hoped that the honourable member will not press Government to enter into this lengthy and unnecessary correspondence.

ENGLISH OPTIONAL CLASSES IN DISTRICT BOARD MIDDLE SCHOOLS.

3534. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state the names of district board middle schools where English optional classes have come to be abolished in each division within the last four years and the number of students affected thereby communitywise (Muslims and non-Muslims) who were studying English optionally in those district board vernacular schools ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : The optional English classes have been closed in no school with a view to harm the education of boys belonging to a particular community. The district boards have acted purely in the interests of economy. If the honourable member will very kindly let me know her object in asking this question I can perhaps give her the information she needs without having to make a province-wide enquiry.

LOSS OF FILES IN SADHORA MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

3535. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (f) if no action has been taken so far, what action he proposes to take now ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) and (b) At the end of 1931, when a clerk of the Committee went on leave, 53 files were found to be missing. All the missing files have since been found among the committee's miscellaneous records, with the exception of one which is still untraced.

(c) No. The Committee preferred to entrust the enquiry to certain of its own members.

(d) No.

(e) The mislaying of the 53 files appears to have been the result of negligent work by a clerk who has since retired.

- (d) if so, what action was taken by the Government on that representation ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that the nomination of a Muslim gives the Muhammadans over-representation ;

- (g) whether he will take suitable steps to nominate a Hindu in view of the fact that the Muslims have enjoyed this over-representation for more than 6 years ;
- (h) if for any reason it be not possible to nominate a male Hindu, whether he will nominate a suitable female member ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Until recently there was one nominated seat only. An additional seat has lately been created.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) The concessions are given to the children of such teachers whose income does not exceed Rs. 50 per mensem.

(b) Yes.

(c) No. An article in the Daily Herald, dated the 7th June, 1934, on the subject, has however, come to the notice of the Department.

(d) The financial implications involved prevent Government from meeting the demands in (b) in full or raising the limit in (a).

(c) No.

(d) No. It is, however, added for the honourable member's information that the vernacular teachers are chiefly meant for village schools, and therefore preference is given to the candidates belonging to the agriculturist classes. 5. Multan division	46,56,041

It may further be added for the honourable member's information that the favourable position of the Rawalpindi division is due to the high grading of the district boards in the division. Thus Rawalpindi and Jhelum get cent. per cent. grant, Attock and Mianwali 90 per cent. and Gujrat and Shahpur 60 per cent. of their approved additional expenditure. These grades were fixed in 1918 and were determined by the following factors—

REFERENCE TO LATE CHAUDHRI SHAH MUHAMMAD.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East, Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I believe that most of the members of this honourable House are aware that Chaudhri Shah Muhammad who represented the Sheikhpura district in this House passed away suddenly and prematurely about the middle of last month. He was a very sincere friend and a very earnest worker and what distinguished him most was that he was entirely free from the tinge of communalism which is such a characteristic and undesirable feature of the Punjab province. His career was full of INDUSTRIES.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I beg to move—

That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 34,540 be granted to the Punjab Government (Ministry of Local Self-Government) to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March, 1935, in respect of Industries.

The motion was carried.

MISCELLANEOUS (RESERVED).

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I beg to move—

That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 42,400 be granted to the Governor in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March, 1935, in respect of Miscellaneous (Reserved).

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 42,400 be granted to the Governor in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March, 1935, in respect of Miscellaneous (Reserved).

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I rise to oppose the grant under consideration. This grant consists of two main items. The first relates to the Wild Animals and Wild Birds Protection Act and the second to the Commissioner of Rural Reconstruction. I will take the first item first. The Wild Animals and Wild Birds Protection Act was passed by this Council more than a year ago. When this measure was under consideration it was given out that the rules framed under the Act would be so lenient that there would be no objection to them, whereas the rules which have been now issued by the Punjab Government are so hard and stringent and so exacting that there will be no room for shikar in the future. No one, I dare say, who has any respect for law will care to take a gun for shooting. If he wants to defy the law, that is another matter. But if he is a conscientious man and wants to respect law, he will never go out for shooting. I may assure the House that I am not making these serious remarks without full facts before me. I shall refer to the rules themselves. These rules are published in the Punjab Government Gazette, Part I, page 942, dated 7th September, 1934. The last sentence of rule 6 reads—

Such licence shall not exempt the holder thereof from any liability under the Forest Act or any other law for anything done in contravention of such Act or law or for any damage done by him or his retainers or followers.

The next rule reads—

The following animals may be killed or captured by a holder of a licence described in column 7 to the extent permitted in column 5, provided that the length of horn of each kind shall not be under that mentioned in column 6 for each species.

Any one who carefully reads this rule and the schedule attached to it must realise how impossible it is to have shikar. The first item in the schedule is black buck whose minimum length of horn should be 20 inches. How is it possible for a person shooting from a distance of 200 or 300 or 400 yards to measure exactly the length of horn of the buck? The animal is not a fool to remain standing till the shikari measures the length of the horn before shooting it. (Laughter.) How is it possible for a person to measure the length of horns of these animals while they are running? I anticipated that the Punjab Government would make the rules in such a way that it would be absolutely impossible to shoot a game. I, therefore, raised objection to the Act even while it was under the consideration of the select committee and again of this Council. But at that time it was given out that the rules would be very lenient. Now, coming to the next animal, ravine deer, it has been prescribed that the minimum length of the horn of this animal should be 10 inches. No one will shoot the animal at a distance of less than 20 yards, and it is not possible for him to judge the length of the horn of this animal for that distance ; and if he happens to shoot the animal and it happens to possess horn less than 10 inches he is liable to prosecution. If this is the way in which the Government proposes to work the Wild Animals and Wild Birds Protection Act, they may as well prohibit all games in future. That will be more correct than to prohibit all games by such indirect means, by such stringent and impossible rules. There is another animal, the goral whose minimum length of horns should be 42 inches. Surely it is impossible to measure the length of horn of these animals. Next is the barking deer the minimum length of whose horns should be 28 inches including pedicel. Then there is another, caprasiberica—30 inches. Pantholops hodgsoni, 22 inches. Ovis hodgsoni, 42 inches and so on. Even at the distance from here to the Honourable President it is difficult to measure 42 inches. Nobody can have an idea of what a measurement of 42 inches is. A villager living in the village cannot measure this distance. Do you imagine that all people are astronomers and use all sorts of delicate instruments? Where are now the honourable members who voted for this Act? Let them see how their kindness has been availed of by the Government, how their kindness has been exploited by the Government. In one district alone, i.e., Multan, I hear 1,400 licences are necessary and at the rate of Rs. 8 per licence this brings in more than Rs. 10,000. At the time when the Act was under consideration, the Honourable Revenue Member gave us the assurance that it was not intended to make money by means of this Act. But now they are trying to make as much money as possible. At that time the idea was that the licence fee should be a rupee or two. But now it is as much as Rs. 20 in some cases. In the case of the Kangra district it is still more. If these facts had been given out at the time when the Bill was being passed by this Council, I am sure none of us would have supported such a measure. As if these stringent rules were not sufficient, there is another provision at the end of the rules, "provided that no deer with horns in velvet may be killed or captured." If the Punjab Government cannot keep that assurance which it gave us at the time when this measure was before the Council, it behoves us now as the representatives of the rural and urban classes, not to grant this money at all and thus make these rules a dead letter, so that they can make more practical rules in the future. Sometimes it is even difficult to distinguish a male from a female animal. There are some males which have small horns and which cannot be seen from a distance. Again even in the case of small animals the licence fee is as much as Rs. 5. Now in these days of financial stringency when people are hard pressed for money, do you think that it is easy for the people to pay this amount. When the fee for the renewal of the gun licence is only Rs. 2½, why does the Government fix this licence fee at Rs. 5 and 8? It will be very hard on the people. In the first place Government has no right to levy any fee because the land belongs to the landlord. But when we have given them this power, they should not say to the landlord that he should not shoot unless he pays the Government Rs. 8 and 10. The fee is very high. I say generally people will not be able to possess a licence paying such a high fee. That being so, what is the use of enacting a measure, the provisions of which are too difficult to be followed?

Now I come to the other part of the demand, namely the Commissioner for Rural Reconstruction. Last time when the Relief of Indebtedness Bill was being discussed, some of my friends took exception to the creation of this department by the Government in these days of financial stringency. I said that if this department were worked with the minimum cost, it would be very good. But since then many things have been done which are not proper. For instance, lately it has been proclaimed from all possible places that all zamindars should possess mosquito nets of the value of Rs. 1-8 each. It has been said that there are agencies in the districts which supply these nets. Now the average family of a zamindar consists of 7 members and if all of them are to be provided with one net each, taking the cost of bamboo and the rope also into consideration, it means Rs. 2 each net or Rs. 14 for the family of the zamindar. Now the population of the Punjab is 2,50,00,000 and that means the total cost will come to 5 crores, land revenue itself being about 4½ crores. Will the zamindar be able to pay another sum equivalent to the land revenue itself? Do honourable members know with what difficulty the land revenue is realised? It is in some cases in arrears for two years. It may be said that there is no compulsion and that zamindars are only being persuaded and are only advised. But then, why have official agencies for their sale? Why are tahsildars asked to make this persuasive propaganda in the villages? The Deputy Commissioner has no other business now except the preaching of the gospel of mosquito net. I know in the Gurgaon district a certain European gentleman, a deputy commissioner, under whom I had the fortune or misfortune of serving, was doing propaganda for Raja plough, so much so for some time we tahsildars were doing no other work than selling this Raja plough. Of course we were told that we should not press them. But it is well-known what persuasive propaganda by Government officials is. There is no other agency in the world which can do this sort of propaganda better than the Government agency. If all deputy commissioners are to persuade people in the villages to provide themselves with mosquito nets, it is as good as to compel them to purchase. But then, how will the zamindar be able to use the mosquito net? Is it imagined that they sleep all the night in their houses? They go out at dead of night to watch their fields and to drive away jackals and foxes. Is it contemplated that they should have mosquito net around them when they are ploughing the fields? In any case why should agencies be appointed in the districts? Government is not a company that it should provide all things purchased by the people. Let the people themselves buy their requirements where they like. I should think that a zamindar can make similar nets for ten or eleven annas, by putting a piece of khaddar at the top and by stitching a few yards of jalli cloth. I think that will be a better net. There was a zamindar with whom a deputy commissioner was discussing the question of these nets. The zamindar said that he would like to fare better than sleep under these nets. These nets will make him uneasy, and a prisoner in his own bed. This answer generally will be given by all the rural people. They cannot find so much money as to provide themselves with mosquito nets for each member of their family. Alone he cannot sleep under these nets leaving all his children out. Moreover if he were to provide nets for everybody he will not be able to use it. The best course would be to give instructions to villagers and leave the question of providing them with nets to themselves. But I think now the evil has gone far and all the deputy commissioners are persuasively lecturing to the people whom they meet and are talking to them. And I know what these lectures and talks mean. When I was persuading people in old days to buy Raja ploughs in the Gurgaon district, I knew what that meant. People had to purchase them, but I was not to blame. I had to do this. The gentleman who is in charge of the Rural Reconstruction Department does not profit in any way from the lessons taught to him in the Gurgaon district. When we were making propaganda for the purchase of the Raja plough there were anonymous letters to the Government alleging that commission was being taken by officers on the sale of these ploughs. One zamindar told me that he had purchased the Raja plough directly for Rs. 38 whereas it was being sold under official agency for Rs. 60. I think this should provide us with an object lesson against pressing people to indulge in this sort of luxury. A zamindar never dies of mosquito bite. He will die, if at all, of bankruptcy or starvation and want of money and penury but he will not die of want of mosquito nets. They can ward off many things. Unless therefore it is promised that a circular letter will be issued at once to all deputy commissioners to stop this agency in the Punjab, no sum should be voted for it. Not with as much force, but I think with a little modification, these remarks can be applied to the sale of quinine. I admit that quinine is a very good thing, but let the zamindar purchase it from any shop he likes, if he finds it cheaper anywhere else. What I object is to these agencies being run to make money out of the people's resources, and making the Government badnam. They make money and the people do not know whether they are to blame or the Government is to blame. I admit that it is a good department and does valuable work, but I do not want that it should be worked in such a reckless manner as to compel the zamindars to make these agency-wallahs rich at their own expense at this time of starvation and financial stringency. With these few words I oppose the entire demand under consideration.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq (Hoshiarpur-cum-Ludhiana, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, it has pained me to hear what the honourable member for Ambala has said in his speech on the demand under consideration. This idea has haunted me for a long time past that the masses in general require the services of a body of enthusiastic men to awaken them to the sense of helping themselves by way of living according to the principles of sanitation and taking care of their health and the health of their children. I readily acknowledge that they very much lack this sense at present. It will not be denied that unless the people in general are taught and at the same time begin to bring up their children properly, we cannot expect the future generation to fill the places that will be vacated by their elders in a fitting manner. It is, therefore, necessary that we should welcome any step in this direction, no matter if that step is taken by the Government of the country. There have been in existence and even now there are in existence political bodies and movements, but as I have already said, no movement has so far been started to teach the people, in the countryside in particular, as to how they can improve their lot without spending anything for the purpose. And if now after a very long time the Government has taken a step in the right direction, it does not behove us to discourage it on the ground that some mistakes have been committed in the beginning. I need hardly say that such mistakes must necessarily be committed in the beginning of every scheme of reform and construction and if we find that some such mistakes have been committed in this scheme of rural reconstruction, we should ignore them knowing that the principles underlying the scheme are commendable.

It is now admitted both by the officials and non-officials that the spirit with which Mr. Brayne has started the work entrusted to him is simply praiseworthy and that if this work is continued to be done in the same spirit for some time to come, it will help to remove many ills from which the masses are now suffering (hear, hear). Under the circumstances to pick out mosquito nets, one of the items of the programme before the Commissioner of the Rural Reconstruction, and to attack him or the Government on that score appears to me to be a most unreasonable attitude. I am aware that persuasion in many cases by the Government officials assumes the form of force, but if such cases are frequent and come to our notice we can take steps to put a check to them. I already fear that this department may be abolished as according to the present sanction it is to last up to 28th February 1935. My fear is confirmed when I find in the explanatory memorandum that it is intended to make this department self-supporting in which case it will be necessary to disband the already insufficient staff working at present. While on this point I may be permitted to say that very little interest is being taken by the Government in making this department as useful as it ought to be and this is evident from the fact that although Mr. Brayne has remained away from duty for about four months no substitute has been engaged in his place to look after the activities of the department. Not even that. His assistant who was allowed to go back to his original post has not so far been replaced by any other suitable officer. This is certainly an attitude which cannot but arouse suspicion about the intention of the Government with regard to this department. I would very much like to know what the Government has to say to clear this misunderstanding if it is at all a misunderstanding.

The honourable members of the House who attended the last Budget Session of the Council will remember that a large number of young men were seen sitting outside the room of Mr. Brayne in the hope of getting employment in this department. Many of them were then advised to do honorary work for some time to popularise the department and they were held out this promise and that if they were found suitable, they would be permanently taken in the department. It is now 8 or 9 months since these young men have been working and waiting to be absorbed by the department. But from what one sees at a cursory glance of the department it appears that disappointment awaits these young men. I wonder why the Government does not make its position clear in this matter. I know that in these days of financial stringency it is very difficult to spare any money for the creation of a new department. But I realise that I shall be guilty of moral weakness if on that ground I should withhold my support when I know that this department is sure to prove more useful than all other departments now in existence. There is another point worth considering in this connection. If one were to study carefully the programme of the Rural Reconstruction Scheme, one will find that there are many items in it which do not require a penny to be spent upon them. For example, it requires no money to go and ask and persuade the villagers to store heaps of dung-hills at places far away from the villages instead of storing them, as they do at present, just behind the walls of the villages. Further it does not require much effort or pain or money to make the villagers aware of the disadvantages of sleeping in the same room in which the cattle are kept. I may mention that the Government of the United Provinces has made up its mind to spend lakhs of rupees to extend the activities of a similar department there to every nook and corner of that province. This also encourages me to give my whole-hearted support to the creation of this Rural Reconstruction Department on a permanent basis. Although the Department of Agriculture exists, so long as there is nobody to go into the villages and tell people how they can ameliorate their condition by sowing good seed and by manuring their fields with the cow dung which is usually left in the village streets to stink and stagnate, there is no hope of bettering the condition of the villagers. The rural population is illiterate and does not know how to do the uplift work, and there is no one who is interested in their welfare. When the Government undertook to perform the work of rural reconstruction and with this purpose brought into existence a separate department, the members began to ridicule this department by criticising and laughing at their methods. I think the amelioration of the condition of the villagers is possible only by maintaining the Rural Reconstruction Department. As long as the villagers are not taught all these things, which this department has undertaken to teach them, their condition cannot be bettered. It is quite possible that Mr. Brayne might have committed some mistakes but I may tell the honourable members that every reformer who undertakes to carry out some reform work is sure to commit some mistakes. These mistakes are due to over-zeal and over enthusiasm, and can be easily ignored. His importance lies in the work of reform which he tries to effect. He is respected for the honesty of his purpose and the sincerity with which he undertakes the work of reform. The Rural Reconstruction Department was created by the Government about eight months ago and within 3 or 4 months of its coming into existence it did such good work which no other department ever did. But it is very unfortunate that this department is being closed down by the Government without taking into consideration its importance and its necessity for the rural population. I hope the Honourable Finance Member will agree with me, when I say that, in the absence of the Head of the Department nothing much can be expected from a few clerks and assistants. Mr. Brayne is on leave and in his absence we cannot expect that any work of rural uplift is possible by the office clerks, etc. The Government is closing down this department and then after some time it will say that a department for rural reconstruction work was started but the Indian people are hopeless, they did not co-operate and so the department had to be closed down. In all the countries of the world there are only two methods for effecting reforms. One of them is dictatorship. The word of the dictator is law and it has to be obeyed. The other is that the governments start propaganda or canvassing work and make the people realise their own benefit. Here in our country the authority of the dictator is there but the spirit of the dictator is nowhere. Every tahsildar is a dictator and he sees that the law is obeyed but that spirit of reform which distinguishes a dictator from an autocrat is missing. This department which was started under Mr. Brayne was a ray of hope and we expected that something more would be done as soon as the department became stable. But the Government and not the honourable members, is unwilling to allow this department to continue. When the honourable members of the Council were invited by Mr. Brayne to explain the working of this department, they assured him that they would support him in his undertaking and would do everything to encourage his department. Now the honourable members have done their duty. Let the Government end this department or mend it; the responsibility is theirs. If the note put up by the Government really represents some truth then let the Government pay money for the upkeep of this department and if there is no truth in their note then let them close down this department. But as it is the claim of the Government that this note represents a reality and as I also think it does, I say that it is but fair that this department should be maintained.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri Fazl Ali (Gujrat East, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, when Chaudhri Allah Dad

3 P.M.

Khan began his speech, I thought that he was going to say something in favour of this department in some indirect and subtle way, but after hearing him for some time I was disappointed to find that he was actually criticising the work of rural reconstruction. He ridiculed the methods adopted by this department to ameliorate the condition of the peasants. He showed deplorable lack of knowledge regarding matters which even an illiterate man is likely to know. Health and hygienic conditions are as necessary for the rural public as they are for the urban population. No other department can be as beneficent for the rural population as the Rural Reconstruction Department. We are thankful to the Government for starting this department and we are also obliged to Mr. Brayne for the excellent work which he did in connection with this department. Do the honourable members think that the zamindars are a proof against mosquito bites? Do they think that they are not liable to fall ill on account of malaria? Zamindars are human beings like ourselves. If mosquito nets are required by us they also require them. It is deplorable on our part not to do anything for the welfare of the zamindars who day and night labour to supply the whole country with foodstuffs. We should be thankful to the zamindars for what they do for us. They work for us in every season and in every place. We should try to compensate them for their services, instead of ignoring them. I wonder why the honourable member has said things which are not in the interest of the zamindars. The honourable member, if he was bent upon opposing this demand, could have opposed it by criticising some other aspect of it. Why did he indulge in crying down the department which is so necessary for the welfare of the zamindars? We are thankful not only to the Government and Mr. Brayne that they have done so much for the zamindars but we are also thankful to the deputy commissioners of various districts who not minding their own discomfort go out into the villages to do rural uplift work. The deputy commissioners have been going out into the villages in order to do propaganda work and to make the people realise the importance of self-help. Since the work of rural reconstruction has been started many societies of rural reconstruction have come into existence and they are doing good work. We are thankful to the Government and to our present deputy commissioners who are taking so much interest in our welfare. I am surprised to hear from Chaudhri Sahib that the deputy commissioners and other Government officers use force in these matters. May be that it has some foundation and truth so far as his own district is concerned. But the case is reverse in our district because I know it for a fact that our deputy commissioner and other Government officers in utter disregard of their personal discomfort and inconvenience in traversing bad and uneven roads go to villages situated at great distance from the headquarters and do propaganda work and make the people understand the importance of rural reconstruction. As a result of the efforts in this behalf 200 societies have come into existence in the Gujrat district in order to carry on the work of rural reconstruction. They are doing very good work. Consequently the people have no complaint against the Government officers and the deputy commissioner of our district. Rather they appreciate and are thankful to them for the work they do for them.

I may also mention that the Raja kal is a very useful instrument for ploughing land. The Hindustan and Meston ploughs are also very useful. The furrows made by these ploughs are deep. Let the honourable member know that deeper the furrows are made in the fields, better the crop that grows in them. The honourable member said that the department was brought into existence only to teach the people that they should use mosquito nets. The honourable member perhaps does not know that the department also instructs people as regards manure, better and modern methods of agriculture, and principles of hygiene. Knowledge of these things is necessary for ameliorating their financial as well as their physical condition. If the zamindars do not waste their manure but use it in their fields that would help them so far as the growth of better crops is concerned. If they observe the rules of health they will not fall sick and thus by remaining healthy their work will not suffer. If they know the modern methods of agriculture, they will grow better crops in their fields and this will bring them more money. I had no intention to speak but after hearing the honourable Chaudhri Sahib I was constrained to make these remarks so that the deputy commissioners and the department concerned may not be led to think that their work has been criticised. We are thankful to all these officers and especially to the deputy commissioner of our own district, who have helped in the work of rural uplift. I request the Government that if once they have started a good work then let that work continue. The zamindars really require the help of such a department. I request the Government that it should anyhow manage to bear the expenses of this department and should not abolish it. In the end I thank those honourable members who approached His Excellency to request him to start this department. I am also thankful to His Excellency who very kindly acceded to the request of those honourable members. Now if the Government will very kindly allow this department to continue and also to encourage it to do the work of rural uplift on an extensive scale and provide more money than is provided for it at present, we will feel deeply obliged and grateful.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan (Revenue Member): Sir, I will be very brief in what I have to say. In the first place, I have to reply to the objections raised by the honourable member from Ambala with regard to the rules framed under the Wild Animals Protection Act. As the title of that Act indicates that Act has been enacted with a view to protect wild animals and wild birds, and the rules which he considers to be stringent were made stringent in order to achieve this object. He tried to ridicule some of the provisions in those rules by referring to the length of horns of certain animals. He is probably not aware that all these restrictions existed even before this Act came into force. In the districts where big game is to be found, rules under the forest law contained all these restrictions which have now been incorporated in the rules framed under this Act. The honourable member can take it from me, and I know it for a fact that in my own district such restrictions existed in the case of Urial, the main object being to ensure that animals which are immature are not shot. He said that it would be difficult to discriminate in practice between a buck having horns more than 32" or less than 32"! I admit that a non-shikari like the honourable member would find it difficult to distinguish between a male or a female but no shikari worth the name can make such a mistake. It is easy for a shikari to distinguish between a male and female or between a mature and immature animal. There has been no difficulty on that account in the past. As I have said all those restrictions were in force even before the present Act was framed. (An honourable member: What about the beginners?) A beginner would not start shooting a Sambhar, he would start with ghugis. As I have repeatedly impressed on the House the main object of the Act and the rules framed thereunder is to dissuade people from exterminating wild game in this province. (An honourable member: But these rules are not put in force.) They will be enforced if people try to ignore them; but, as I have said, we have had no difficulty in working the rules under the Forest Act which contained all those provisions to which the honourable member from Ambala seems to take objection.

The honourable member is aware that these rules were published in the Gazette. We gave considerable time and opportunity to those interested to send in objections and criticisms and suggestions. He would, perhaps, be surprised to learn that very few objections were received, and these were given very careful consideration. This is ample testimony of the thoroughness and care with which these rules were framed. I know it from my personal experience and knowledge that these rules have given a great deal of trouble and work to my colleague, the Home Secretary, who was continuously working at them for several months before they could be finally published. When I was in Europe a few months back I found that the zamindars there were making considerable income from their game preserves. I do not see why the zamindars in this province should not benefit likewise and add to their income by turning their waste lands and rakhs in their villages into game preserves, and letting them for shooting to those who want to enjoy sport. In England they make a fairly big income out of it. They charge for each gun a substantial sum for a fixed period.

The honourable member also said that fees fixed under these rules were heavy. He is probably not aware that in the adjoining Indian State of Kashmir much heavier fees are charged. For instance, it probably costs Rs. 20 or more to get a licence to shoot one Sambhar. But here in fixing the scale of fees we had to keep in view the point of view put forward by the honourable member and of those who think like him that the fees should not be prohibitive. We have tried to keep them as low as possible without frustrating the real object of the Act, viz., protection of wild birds and animals.

So far as the different items in this demand are concerned, it will be noticed that the actual amount which is to be spent upon the administration of the Act is only a little over Rs. 3,000. The remaining Rs. 30,000 would go to the non-official fauna committees which are to be formed in every district to assist and help in preserving game. The income calculated is about Rs. 75,000 in the first year and a lakh in the next year. This is a very conservative estimate. I believe that before long the income will be much larger. There are about 36,000 gun licences in the province; and even if 30,000 of these licensees were to take out sporting licences we ought to be able to get $1\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs of rupees in fees. This does not include licences for big game for which we have fixed a fee of Rs. 8. That should bring in a small additional income. The honourable member was right when he said that an undertaking was given that Government would spend this money in the interests of the preservation of game and distribute a portion of the income to various districts for the same object. We are doing that by encouraging the formation of local fauna committees and a sum of Rs. 30,000 is being provided for the purpose. I hope I have made it clear that the objections raised by the honourable member are groundless and do not deserve any serious consideration.

With regard to the rural uplift work my task has been made easier by the honourable member from Hoshiarpur and the honourable member from Gujrat who have fully answered the criticism and objections of the honourable member from Ambala. But there is one point which I should like to make quite clear to the House. There seems to be some misapprehension about Mr. Brayne's position. Mr. Brayne is not the head of any separate department. His work mainly lies in co-ordinating the activities of the various beneficent departments of Government and of popularising them. That is the main purpose for which he has been appointed. The work which can come under the category of rural uplift is included in one or the other of the departments of Government. Mr. Brayne has been appointed to intensify and co-ordinate that work, and to encourage and persuade people to co-operate with the various departments in bringing about reform in rural areas. I hope honourable members will not remain under any misapprehension that by appointing Mr. Brayne we have created a new and separate department. It is merely, as I have said, to intensify, co-ordinate and popularise the work of the various beneficent departments that this post has been created temporarily for the present.

As regards mosquito nets, the honourable members from Hoshiarpur and Gujrat have fully met the criticism and objections of the honourable member for Ambala; but I can also assure him that no compulsion is being used in the matter of purchase of these nets, and I can give him the further assurance that if any instance of compulsion is brought to our notice we would be glad to take action with a view to stop it. The honourable member will, I am sure, not deny that mosquito nets are useful. Nor can he deny the enormous loss to the zamindar and the province through malaria. The amount of money which the zamindar loses by reason of his being incapacitated during the malaria season if calculated would be found to run into many millions. As the honourable member for Hoshiarpur said it is the duty of the State and of every public spirited citizen to try and better the conditions of the people in the villages. It is equally our duty to raise the standard of living of people. This can only be done by raising the income of the people. As the honourable member for Gujrat pointed out one of the important functions of the Commissioner of Rural Reconstruction is to encourage the zamindars to use better seed and better methods of cultivation. If the zamindar earns more his standard of living will automatically go up.

The honourable member for Hoshiarpur mentioned that since Mr. Brayne had been on leave the work of the department—which he described as a separate department—was at a standstill. As I have explained, Mr. Brayne has no separate department, his work is to co-ordinate the work of the existing departments of Government. During his absence on leave the work has not been at a standstill. His office has been dealing with the correspondence and keeping in touch with the district authorities.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With your permission, Sir, I would like to know how many letters were issued by the department to the deputy commissioners and how many of those letters have not been replied to. The deputy commissioners after Mr. Brayne's leave have been taking absolutely no notice of what is being written to them by the department.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : I am afraid I cannot give an answer to that question off hand, but I am satisfied that Mr. Brayne is not an officer who would allow the deputy commissioners to sleep over, at any rate for long, over his letters. I do not think that the work has suffered any set back by his absence, because very little touring can be done in the summer months, and Mr. Brayne will be back in time to take up the threads where he left them. Any way I can assure the honourable members that Government gave careful consideration to the question of the extension of Mr. Brayne's term of office, and since it was also the wish of the rural members of the Council that it should continue it has been decided to extend it. If at the end of the present term Government is satisfied that Mr. Brayne's efforts are proving useful and successful in rousing the villager from his apathy the question of further extension will undoubtedly receive sympathetic consideration. I am sure that what I have said will satisfy the honourable members here that both items included in this demand are essential in the interests of the zamindars.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : May I put a question to the Honourable Revenue Member ? I want to know whether the Government is satisfied with the working of the Commissioner of Rural Reconstruction or not and whether it requires more time to feel convinced of the usefulness of the work of the Commissioner. If it is satisfied with the success of the experiment, where is the need for again considering the question after the 28th February 1935 ? Why should not the Government assure us that this department will continue ?

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : I fear I have not made myself clear. What I said was that if the honourable members feel that during this period the work of the department has been useful and that the experiment has been a success—of course there are objections and criticisms of the work done by the department—if, on the whole, honourable members are satisfied that the department is doing useful work, they may press the Government to extend the period of experiment and I am sure Government will very sympathetically consider it.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq (Amritsar city, Muhammadan, Urban) : There is no doubt that this rural uplift is a very important subject. It is even more important than law and order about which the Government is very particular. The one objection against the scheme of rural uplift that is being raised now is that it is not doing as much useful work as it ought to. Look at the propaganda that was being carried on by the British Government during the War. Everybody in this province was made to believe that Germany was in the wrong, that the Germans were liars and that they were cruel. Look at the propaganda that is being carried on by Hitler in Germany. He is trying to convince the Germans that the republican system of Government was wrong; he is instilling into the minds of the people that democracy is wrong and that only one man can do the right and that all those who are against him are idiots. Look at Mussolini. He is doing the same. He is making the people believe that none but Mussolini can do the right thing. This is the way in which propaganda is being carried on in Europe. On the other hand in the matter of this rural uplift movement the Government is doing propaganda in a half-hearted manner. I wish the Government spent more money on it than it has been doing. There is no one in this House except Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan who will grudge more money for this cause. The deputy commissioners who are paid from the public revenues ought to be made to work for this movement. They should be told that their work does not consist simply in arresting and imprisoning the people but also in uplifting the country by helping the people.

There is no doubt that the present heavy expenditure of the rural uplift department is due to the fact that it is too heavy. Mr. Brayne is an enthusiastic worker in the cause of rural uplift. He is a very sincere person. But what about his salary. He draws Rs. 4,000 a month. (An Honourable Member : Rs. 3,250). Yes, but with overseas allowance and other allowances, the total comes to Rs. 4,000. I do not mean to grudge him that salary. Look at the five officers' grades. We find that their combined pay is less than one fourth of the pay of the special Commissioner. What do these people do? They type notes and send them to the district officers who in their turn simply throw them in the waste paper baskets. It is suggested that this work of rural uplift should be taken up by non-official agency independent of deputy commissioners. We are told that the deputy commissioners have to do things beginning from the birth of a person to his burial and this work of rural uplift will be an extra burden to him. No doubt this is true, but we want the co-operation of officials and non-officials in this case. It is rumoured that the Government wanted to shunt out Mr. Brayne, and so they have appointed him for this job. I do not mean to cast any reflection on that officer. On the other hand I have great respect and ad-imitation for him. But, if the Government is really sincere about the rural uplift movement, let it provide adequate funds for the purpose. In each district let there be a board of four representatives and let ten lakhs of rupees be allotted for the whole scheme. We are not having Alladin's chiragh with which we can achieve our purpose with the aid of gins and devs. If we are to achieve real success we must be prepared to spend money. If the Government is not prepared to spend at least two or three lakhs on honest propaganda it is no use spending any money at all and all this expenditure is a waste. It would be a pity if we allow the whole scheme to languish for lack of funds. I did not want to inflict a speech on this subject, but I thought that this aspect of the matter was ignored and that is why I have got up to speak. If the Government is really sincere about the scheme let it provide more funds for the purpose. We are ready to accord sanction to the demand for additional funds. If more money is not forthcoming we are prepared to pay additional taxation; or the Government can cut short its expenditure in some other direction. It is only by this means that we and the Government can work hand in hand for the rural reconstruction. We want the health of our people to be looked after, we want to stop waste of money, we want to instil frugal habits, and for this purpose unless we employ paid people for propaganda who can carry on the work actively, it is no use to spend the present amount of money. I will certainly oppose the expenditure at the next session, unless I find that the Government is ready to allot more money for actively carrying on the propaganda.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural) : Sir, I was really surprised to find my friend Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan who is an ardent supporter of the zamindars taking objection to a scheme designed to help the zamindars. I have never heard him make a speech in which he has not shown his solicitude and sympathy for the zamindar cause. But when the real question of the uplift of the zamindar classes comes up, the honourable member puts forth arguments against the scheme which to tell the truth are not intelligible. I think honourable members who have spoken after him have sufficiently replied to him and I, therefore, need not dilate much on this point. There is, however, one important question in this connection and it is this. This Government takes its hint, as do all Governments from the propaganda in the Press. Probably the attention of some of the members of Government has been invited to a certain passage appearing in a certain paper. I am not going to give the name of the paper just now. Evidently the writer had some misapprehensions about the Government and he, therefore, attributed sinister motives to Government. He perhaps thought that the Government was spreading this propaganda in order to counteract the propaganda that had been carried on by some national organisation. I may assure the Government that we take the strongest exception to any motives that might be attributed to Government. Government in its turn should not care for what might be said by certain sections of the Press. Government should come forward to ameliorate the condition of the zamindars, to help them in their moral and material advancement. We welcome the step that has been taken by the Government and I whole-heartedly support the remarks that have been made by previous speakers that Government should try to find more funds for this very important work.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muham-madan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I propose to say a few words with regard to the demand under discussion. I think it will not be improper to recall at this juncture the origin of the Wild Birds and Animals Protection Act. Sometime before the Government thought of gracing the statute book with the said Act, His Excellency the Governor paid a visit to the Kangra District. He was disappointed to find that there was a dearth of suitable game in the ilaga and when he learnt that the local shikaris had been very extravagant in the consumption of game he thought of putting a check on their activities. He became anxious to preserve game for the pleasure of respectable and virtuous big men. He could not tolerate the idea of allowing the ordinary village-folk to take an undue advantage of their proximity and kill the greatest number of wild animals and birds. Why should, he thought, a local shikari be allowed to bag any number of birds and animals for a paltry sum of Rs. 2-8-0 as licence fee? This was how the idea of passing a Wild Birds and Animals Act originated.

But it was given out that the real object underlying this Act was to better the prospects of zamindars. Mr. Donald pointed out and the promise was repeated in the select committee on which I was invited to work, that the Government intended to preserve a particular ilaga where all sorts of game would be allowed to flourish. Such a scheme, it was stated, would greatly benefit the zamindars of the ilaga. But now it has transpired that the Government does not intend to preserve game for the benefit of the zamindars but its intention is to tax the people and thus make money out of this affair. There is no doubt that mention was made of a licence fee in the beginning but its object was stated to be this that the money so collected would be utilized in mitigating the zamindars' burden of taxation. It was not mentioned that the licence fee was to be levied in order to meet the expenditure of the department. But now it is proposed to levy something more than would be necessary for the running of the department. The Memorandum accompanying the Supplementary Estimates contains these significant words:—

The cost of this appointment will be more than covered by the receipts from the sale of licences under the rules.

I am sorry that Pir Akbar Ali is not present here. He would have borne me out that we expressed this fear in the select committee that the Government would certainly levy more fees than would be absolutely necessary and perhaps Mr. Donald would be appointed to work this scheme. We were doubtful in the very beginning that the Government wanted to provide protection for the birds and animals of the jungle. What the Government wanted, we thought, was to provide work for one of their officers like Mr. Donald.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan: Was Mr. Donald appointed?

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan: He was not appointed but somebody was appointed after all.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan: Somebody had to be appointed, you know.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : I want that such an officer should be appointed who may be acquainted with all the local conditions. Moreover, the licence fee should not be fixed so high as to allow of some money being saved after meeting the necessary expenditure of the department. Unnecessary burden of taxes should not be placed on the people's shoulders.

My honourable friend Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan raised the question of rural reconstruction. I cannot associate myself with everything which he said. I, however, would point out that whereas the efforts of Mr. Brayne, the deputy commissioners and the revenue assistants under them are praised to the skies nothing is said about the honest endeavours of the subordinate staff under these officers. We should not fail to appreciate the services of the subordinate staff too. I know that people praise only the high officers in order to win their favour. But they should never forget that the brunt of the greatest toil is borne by the members of the lower services. I know Mr. Brayne is a man of sterling worth. He has a mania for making the rural reconstruction scheme a success. (An honourable member : Now you are praising him.) I never fail to give honour where it is due. My point is only this that it is very bad to ignore the services of the subordinate staff.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : It is very bad really.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : With these words, I resume my seat.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I think the spirit underlying the speech of my honourable friend, Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan, has been misunderstood. I do not think, at least I did not understand him to mean, that he was against the rural reconstruction work. What I understood was that the method in which the large amount of people's money was going to be wasted was objectionable. He gave one instance of the supply of a large number of mosquito nets at a cost of Rs. 1-8-0 each for the protection of the people from malaria and mosquitoes. I cannot really understand how a net costing Re. 1-8-0 can be serviceable or useful. Those people who are in the habit of using these nets find that even nets which cost Rs. 5, 6 or 7 become useless in a short time. That being so, how can the zamindar spending Rs. 1-8-0 for himself and for six others of his family at that rate, be able to protect himself and his family from malaria and mosquitoes ? What I understood Chaudhri Sahib to mean was that some work should be done which should really be effective and by which people may really be benefited. I have heard the praises of Mr. Brayne from all sides. But I have not heard a single word as to in what manner the rural reconstruction work so far carried on has proved useful and how people have benefited proportionate to the money spent. It would have been much better if members who are in touch with this work had given some effective and good instances as to how the work has really been done and how it has benefited the zamindar. All members who represent rural constituencies are very anxious that the lot of the people in the villages should be made better, that sanitation should be improved, that education should be improved and so on. But so far as I have been able to see from the various posters and speeches of members here, I gather that nothing has been done by which the people at large have really and effectively gained. What we insist and what we should insist is that undoubtedly more money than Rs. 3,500 a month should be spent. Rs. 3,500 a month is nothing compared to the great amount of work to be done. But instead of spending Rs. 3,500 a month on one high official, it would be much better if Government had appointed 100 or 200 graduates and trained them in this propaganda work so that they could go from village to village drawing people's attention to the various diseases such as cholera, small-pox and hundreds of other diseases. I am unable to accept the various kinds of praise put upon rural reconstruction work unless I see any tangible result from it and that is the spirit underlying the speech of my honourable friend, Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan. He really meant this, at least I understood him to mean this, when he was speaking about the mosquito nets, that they were utterly useless, that they could not help the zamindar in any way, and that there should be official agencies for selling these nets is very bad. Even non-official agencies are there which make money on this sort of mosquito net costing Rs. 1-8-0.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Have you seen the net ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : No.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Have a look and then talk.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : You better send them to Anarkali. Moreover there is another point. A zamindar cannot possibly sleep in the net. He is not accustomed to it. He may sometimes sleep in the farm. There are various ways in which money for rural reconstruction may be spent. It should be well spent and people should be educated in the various methods by which they can make themselves better and happier.

Rao Bahadur Captain Rao Balbir Singh (Gurgaon, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I have the honour to represent that district where this scheme of rural reconstruction originated. I, therefore, am constrained to participate in this debate. It is really a pity that many of us try to find every possible fault with all the schemes put forward by the Government. If there are a few defects in a scheme, we should overlook them in the interest of the greater gain accruing from most of its parts. For instance, spreading of education is a very important item of the programme of rural reconstruction. Another useful thing introduced by this scheme is the breeding of stallions from Hissar. These stallions have improved our cow breed and the zamindars have earned lakhs of rupees by the sale of bulls of good breed. It does not behove honourable members, therefore, to find fault with the entire scheme of rural reconstruction if they do not like the popularization of mosquito nets. Pandit Nanak Chand objects to the introduction of mosquito nets on the ground that it is a perfectly new thing and that the zamindars are not in the habit of sleeping under them. I confess that I have not been able to see the logic of his argument. Everybody knows that Pandits of old times used to wear dhotis and draw tilaks on their foreheads. But now the Pandits of our times have adopted western dress and their fore-fathers will never be able to recognise them as their own children if by some miracle they were to come back to life. People begin to use English shoes first of all, then put on trousers and last of all take to the tie too and gradually become most fashionable as regards their dress. In the same manner the zamindar will also adapt himself to the new circumstances and will learn by and by to utilize the modern articles of use. Another honourable friend of mine said that the zamindars could not afford to buy mosquito nets for Rs. 1-8-0 each. I would ask him to bear in mind that the zamindar stands to lose a good deal more if he is ill on account of mosquito bites. Malarial fever continues for several weeks and the patient cannot attend to any work for months. The money spent on the mosquito nets, therefore, will be profitably spent. Furthermore, the usefulness or otherwise of the scheme of rural reconstruction can be ascertained only by going to villages. We who live and work in villages know full well what advantages have accrued to the zamindar by innovations like Raja hal. It has greatly improved the lot of the zamindar. Many are getting benefit by manufacturing models of this plough. We should, therefore, abstain from embarking on a wholesale condemnation of the scheme brought forward by the Government but should try to help in its working and making it all the more useful.

It has rather become a habit with certain honourable members of the House to oppose the Government in and out of season without considering whether or not the proposal put forward by them is conducive to general welfare. As to the Wild Birds and Wild Animals Protection Act I would simply say that it is intended to afford a sufficient measure of protection to game birds and beasts which are now in danger of becoming extinct. The shikaris have effected wholesale destruction of certain beautiful game birds. They have so to say adopted the role of butchers. They go about hunting in order to satiate their taste of different meat dishes leaving instructions to their servants behind to keep ready the spices for cooking the shot birds. Whenever they go to hotels they ask the hotel keepers to serve them with a cooked black partridge dish or a quail dish although it is very difficult for them to discriminate whether it was really a cooked partridge dish or a pigeon dish. When this is the state of affairs, how would you be able to afford adequate protection to game birds unless you adopt some suitable preventive measures? With these words I resume my seat.

Mr. President : Question is—

That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 42,400 be granted to the Governor-in-Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Miscellaneous (Reserved).

The motion was carried.

MISCELLANEOUS (TRANSFERRED).

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to move—

That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 7,000 be granted to the Punjab Government (Ministry of Local Self-Government) to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Miscellaneous (Transferred).

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 7,000 be granted to the Punjab Government (Ministry of Local Self-Government) to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Miscellaneous (Transferred).

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, north-east, Muham-madan, Rural) : I want to say just a few words about this demand. If I read aright, it has been laid down with respect to demand No. 8 that this money has to be provided to meet the charges of giving four months' leave to those Panchayat officers who were employed till 1931. It is not given from what year they were employed. I think they were discharged within a year or so. If so, they should not be given four months' pay considering that they were in employ only for a year or so. According to Civil Service Regulations a man is entitled to four months' leave if he serves for four years. Why should four months' leave be granted to these gentlemen when they served only for one year. If at all, they can be given only one month's pay. In that case only one-fourth of the amount will be necessary to meet this demand. Unless it is explained what length of service these men had put in—

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : These men had been appointed certainly in 1928 if not earlier. As Commissioner of Rawalpindi I remember having made these appointments.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : That means they have served only for three years.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It may be 1927, but I remember certainly they were there in 1928.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : The note is defective. It is not put down in it when they were appointed and when they were discharged. How can a man say anything about it? As I understand from the wording of the memorandum at page 13, that they were there only for a short period.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : No, they served the full period and were brought under retrenchment and their claim was very carefully considered and the leave was found due to them. There is no over-charge of any kind.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : After four or five years the Punjab Government has awakened to find that these men should be granted leave for four months! Why should the Punjab Government have slept for so many years? You can discharge a temporary man at any time and I believe the Government gave one month's notice and I think that was all that the circumstances of the case required. I therefore consider that this money is not necessary.

Mr. President : Question is—

That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 7,000 be granted to the Punjab Government (Ministry of Local Self-Government) to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Miscellaneous (Transferred).

The motion was carried.

CIVIL WORKS (CAPITAL EXPENDITURE).

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I beg to move—

That an additional sum not exceeding Rs. 25,000 be granted to the Punjab Government (Ministry of Agriculture) to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Civil Works (Capital Expenditure).

The motion was carried.

EXPENDITURE IN ENGLAND.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Sir, I beg to move—

That an additional sum not exceeding Rs. 4,000 be granted to the Governor in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Expenditure in England (other than Stores) under the control of High Commissioner for India.

The motion was carried.

IRRIGATION—WORKING EXPENSES.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I beg to move—

That a token sum not exceeding Rs. 10 be granted to the Governor in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Irrigation Working Expenses.

The motion was carried.

CIVIL WORKS (TRANSFERRED).

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I beg to move—

That a token sum not exceeding Rs. 10 be granted to the Punjab Government (Ministry of Agriculture) to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Civil Works (Transferred)

Mr. President : Motion moved—

Chaudhri Afzal Haq (Hoshiarpur-cum-Ludhiana, Muhammadan, Rural); (Urdu) : Sir, it is a matter of great pleasure that Government have after all come to feel for the terrorist prisoners who have so far been confined in the solitary cells in the various jails of the province. Quite contrary to the spirit of the provisions of the Jail Manual they have not been provided with any companion. Every precaution has been taken to prevent communication between them and ordinary prisoners. It is now proposed to concentrate the dangerous convicts in the Central Jail, Lahore, in a special section accommodating 20 such prisoners. This shows that their number at present is 20 only. But I am sure that there are not only twenty such prisoners but scores of such prisoners confined in solitary cells in the various jails of the province. Their solitary confinement is a source of great hardship to them. In this connection I would like to give an instance of an assistant surgeon prisoner who was imported into this province from Bengal. He was kept confined for full eleven months in the Rawalpindi Jail in a solitary cell and this exasperated him so much that he had to give notice to the Government of his intention to end his miserable life by committing suicide in case he continued to remain in that cell without companion for any length of time. Consequently I was transferred from Multan Jail to keep company with him in the Rawalpindi Jail. This is how the terrorist prisoners are treated. This Bengalee prisoner was a learned young man and I succeeded in persuading him to give up the terrorist creed.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Very good.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : But Government cannot take pride in such a state of affairs. The said prisoner during this period of eleven months did not commit any jail offence although walking swiftly, coughing and laughing loudly constitute jail offences. In spite of this the treatment meted out to him was very harsh. The twenty prisoners referred to above have been kept confined in solitary cells for the last eight months and they must have been treated in the manner in which the Bengalee prisoner was treated. A civilised Government cannot be expected to treat prisoners even if they are terrorists in a manner which I have already described. There is no harm if the terrorists are given the company of other prisoners. The prisoners of the Kanari Bazar case were kept together. They did not do anything which was against the rules of the Jail Manual. They never tried to escape, nor did anything else which could be described as an infringement of the jail rules. There are not only 20 prisoners to accommodate whom the Government has made a provision. There are some 50 or 60 such prisoners whom I know and who are at present kept in the different jails of the country. They are confined in separate cells and no one is allowed to go near them. Those people who have never been kept in the jails cannot realise the hardships of separate confinement. In the jails of this province you can easily make arrangements for accommodating such prisoners. The Central Jail, Multan, is a most up to date jail. In this jail you can keep the terrorist prisoners. In the New Central Jail you have kept together very dangerous criminals—the term of imprisonment of each of them being more than 80 years or a century,—but you keep the terrorists in separate cells. You have got sufficient accommodation in the New Central Jail. You can put such prisoners in it. In addition to it the Borstal Jail is also a very safe place. You can accommodate these prisoners in it. The part of the jail which is meant for the old prisoners can be utilized for this purpose. For the time being you can transfer the terrorist prisoners to Lahore. To keep these prisoners in separate cells is a cruelty and I wonder how it is they have not become insane up to this time. I hope the Government will very kindly consider the submissions that I have made.

Mr. President : Question is—

SALE OF ANCESTRAL AGRICULTURAL LAND IN KOTLI AKHWANAN.

3559. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that about a year ago Mr. Jowala Das, a Subordinate Judge of Phalia tahsil, ordered the sale of ancestral agricultural land belonging to one Muhammad Din, a minor Arain lad and his younger brothers, which is situated in Kotli Akhwanan in Gujrat district, in execution of a money decree obtained by one Nathu Ram, a non-agriculturist of Mong in the same tahsil ;
- (b) whether the land has been actually sold in execution of the said decree ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that the said Muhammad Din is entered in the revenue records as a Maliar ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that Arains in a large number of Punjab districts are known as Maliars, and that Gujrat district is one of such districts ;
- (e) whether Government propose to take any action in the matter ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a),

(b) and (c) The information is correct with regard to one Muhammad Din who is entered in the revenue records as a Maliar. Government have no information whether this Muhammad Din is in reality an Arain ;

(d) Government understand that Arains are in parts of the province sometimes known as Maliars, but this does not necessarily imply that every Maliar is an Arain.

(e) Government obviously can take no action in the case mentioned. It is open to any person who is entered in the revenue records as a Maliar to prove if he can by the ordinary process of law that he is an Arain.

(g) Government are not proposing to lower the charges.

CHARGES FOR ISSUING URDU AND ENGLISH COPIES IN THE COPYING
DEPARTMENT.

3571. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

- (a) what was the modus operandi for issuing copies in the copying department in 1925 ;
- (b) what is the present procedure ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that the present procedure causes great inconvenience to all who have to obtain copies, and whether any complaints have been received by Government in that respect ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the present method causes much botheration to the staff of the department who have to preserve unnecessary accounts and make extra payments to the litigants ;
- (e) whether Government will call for a report on the working of the present method from all head copying agents in all the districts ;
- (f) whether Government consider the advisability of introducing the old method which was convenient both to the litigants and the staff of the department ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) and (b) The procedure is prescribed in Financial Commissioners' Standing Order No. 5. No alteration has been made except that copies are now supplied on deposit of the approximate cost of copies, whereas prior to April 1932 they were supplied V. P. P.

(c) and (d) It is a fact that the Financial Commissioner has received complaints that the present system of advances is causing inconvenience both to the public and to the staff.

(e) This has already been done.

(f) This will be decided after the local officers have reported.

DEPARTMENT.

3572. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

- (a) the rates of charges for issuing Urdu and English copies in the copying department in the Punjab ;
- (b) the charges in the United Provinces ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that the charges for obtaining certified copies in the Punjab are far higher than in any other province in India ;
- (d) whether the cost of preparing copies in the Punjab is higher than in the United Provinces ;

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

- (e) if so, why ;
 (f) if not, why there is so much difference in charges ;
 (g) the charges prevalent in 1910, 1920, and 1930 ; and under what circumstances these charges were enhanced ;
 (h) whether Government will consider the desirability of lowering these charges ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a)
 The information is given in the reply to part (g) below. The rates of 1930 are still in force in the Punjab.

(b) The charges in the United Provinces are as follows :—

	Judgment or final order in any judicial proceeding.	Deposition.	Decree.	Any other paper except a book, register, map, or plan or an extract therefrom.
	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.
Ordinary copy ..	1 4 0	1 0 0	0 8 0	1 0 0
Urgent copy ..	2 8 0	2 0 0	1 0 0	2 0 0

(c) The charges in the other provinces in India are not known. The relative cost as between the Punjab and the United Provinces depends on the length of the copy asked for.

(d) Government have no information.

(e) and (f) Do not arise.

(g) The rates prevalent in 1910, 1920 and 1930 are given below—

Year.		RATES OF COPYING FEES.
		English.	Urdu.
		Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.
1910	For first 200 words or under ..	0 6 0	0 3 0
	For every additional 100 words or fraction thereof.	0 2 0	0 1 0
1920	For first 200 words or under ..	0 8 0	0 4 0
	For every additional 100 words or fraction thereof.	0 4 0	0 2 0
1930	For first 200 words or under ..	0 12 0	0 6 0
	For every additional 100 words or fraction thereof.	0 6 0	0 3 0

The rates of 1910 were exclusive of record-office fees and the cost of the paper, while those of 1920 were consolidated rates including record-office fees and cost of paper. The rates of 1930, which are still in force, were introduced in 1921 as part of a general financial readjustment.

(h) The Financial Commissioner has recently considered the desirability of reducing copying fees (as a result of a cut motion moved by Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan, in the March 1934 session of the Punjab Legislative Council, with the object of inviting attention to the excessive rates of copying fees prevalent in the Punjab). After consulting all the Deputy Commissioners the Financial Commissioner decided that no general reduction was possible in view of the statistics given in reply to Council question No. 9573 (starred). Further enquiry is, however, being made with regard to copies of depositions of parties and exhibits filed in a case, with a view to reducing copying fees, if possible, for these documents.

- whether these utensils and clothes are purchased by the Jail authorities from the market or from some Government store ;

- (h) how Government proposes to prevent this evil in Ambala Jail ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a), (b), (c) and (d) Utensils and clothes are not supplied to civil prisoners by the jail authorities and no amounts are realised by the jail authorities on this account from the decree-holder. Clothes are supplied by the decree-holder who can, if he wishes, obtain them from the local Discharged Prisoners' Home. Utensils are not required, as the food of civil prisoners is prepared in the convict cook-house and served by convict cooks. If any civil prisoners prefer it, they are permitted to use their own utensils or are supplied with the use of cooking vessels by the jail.

(e) and (f) As already explained, utensils are not supplied. On the release of a civil prisoner, any articles of clothing which were not originally his own property are taken from him and made over to the decree-holder or his agent.

(g) No. In particular the suggestion of misappropriation on the part of the Jail authorities is totally unjustified.

(h) Does not arise.

- (d) what are the articles so supplied to civil prisoners and the cost-price of each such article ;

(b), (c) and (d) Do not arise.

DIRECTOR OF INDUSTRIES.

3579. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : (i) Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state whether it is a fact—

- (a) that in 1919 Mr. E. A. Scott, a senior engineer officer of the North-Western Railway, and as such possessed of life-long experience in mechanical and industrial engineering, was appointed as Assistant Director of Industries, and it was only after he had inspected the existing industries in the Punjab for 6 months and had acquired first hand knowledge of the Department of Industries in other provinces that he was appointed as Director of Industries, Punjab ;
- (b) that Mr. E. A. Scott was succeeded on his retirement, in October 1925, by Dr. R. C. Rawlley, M.A., M.Sc., D.Sc. (London), F.R.E.S., who, besides such high academical qualifications had a wide experience of commerce and industries in their various branches, had worked on the teaching staff of the London School of Economics, and before joining as Director of Industries in the Punjab had worked as managing director of the Sholapur Cotton Mills ;
- (c) that on the termination of Dr. Rawlley's 5 years contract of service, in August 1930, Rai Bahadur Lala Ram Lal was appointed as Director of Industries whose qualifications are—
 - (i) that he is a matriculate of the Punjab University ;
 - (ii) that he started service as a junior clerk, then became a stenographer, and was subsequently promoted to the Punjab Civil Service ?
- (d) If the replies to (a), (b) and (c) above be in the affirmative, will Government please state as to why the recommendations of the Industrial Commission, as embodied in paragraph 811 of their report 1916—18, were ignored in appointing Rai Bahadur Lala Ram Lal as Director of Industries, and the reason for not making any attempt to enlist the services of a well-equipped gentleman to act as a successor of Messrs. E. A. Scott and R. C. Rawlley ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (i) and (ii) Government consider that the selection of Rai Bahadur Lala Ram Lal, as Director of Industries, has been fully justified by the results he has achieved. Government is not now prepared to discuss the propriety of that choice or to enter into invidious comparison in respect of academic qualifications which have never been considered an essential factor in the selection of officers for high posts, even for posts much more exalted than that of Director of Industries.

The selection of Rai Bahadur Ram Lal for the post of Director of Industries does not contravene the recommendations of the Industrial Commission and is amply justified by his all-round ability and his excellent work.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : May I know what those "more exalted" posts are that are referred to in the answer?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I should require notice of that question. But I may say that they include the Executive Councillorship of the Viceroy's Council.

DIRECTOR OF INDUSTRIES.

3580. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : With reference to the reply given to starred question No. 3505¹ by the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government on behalf of the Honourable Member for Finance, namely—

"It may interest the honourable member to know that with the exception of Bengal and Bombay, the Directors of Industries in all provinces of India are civilians possessing no technical qualifications as such," will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) the respective academical qualifications of such of the Directors of Industries of other provinces as are civilians and are not possessed of technical qualifications, and
- (b) whether such civilian Directors of Industries belong to the cadre of Indian Civil Service or provincial civil service, and,
- (c) whether there are any civilian Directors of Industries in other provinces whose academical qualifications are not higher than the matriculation standard?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Government do not consider that any useful purpose will be served by the collection of the information which the honourable member requires. If these questions are intended to suggest that the present incumbent of the office of the Director of Industries has not the necessary qualifications for that appointment, I can assure the honourable member that Government are completely satisfied that the present Director of Industries has more than justified his appointment by his industry, ability, integrity and by the improvements he has effected in the Department.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : There is nothing to add to the reply already given to part (b) of the starred question No. 3313¹. The auditors did not recommend that the Headmaster of the Central Model School, Lahore, should be charged for the use of extra rooms which he never occupied, and no action was, therefore, called for or necessary.

MR. COYNE, SUPERINTENDENT, IRRIGATION SECRETARIAT.

3587. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : With reference to answer to starred questions 3006³, 3372⁴ and the supplementary question put thereunder, and the subsequent communication by post from the Honourable Revenue Member that Mr. Coyne had been suspended though not under rule 16 of the Government Servants' Conduct Rules, will the Honourable Member for Revenue please state—

Copy of paragraph 1·38 of Chapter I, Public Works Department Code.

III.—SUSPENSION.

1·38. Any person whose conduct is under investigation on a serious charge likely to involve dismissal, if proved, should be placed under suspension till the matter has been decided by the authority competent to dismiss him.

(2) A person whose conduct is under investigation should also be suspended, if necessary, to safeguard against his tampering with records or witnesses.

(3) The authority competent to suspend or release from suspension is the local Government or any lower authority having the power to dismiss the person concerned. When an officer who has not the power considers immediate suspension essential, he may order it subject to confirmation by competent authority, making an immediate report asking for confirmation, but this course should not be taken without very good reason.

NOTE.—In the Irrigation Branch no officer below the rank of a Superintending Engineer may place under suspension a subordinate non-ministerial or ministerial Government servant.

MR. COYNE, SUPERINTENDENT, IRRIGATION SECRETARIAT.

3588. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : With reference to the replies given to starred questions 3006¹ and 3373², will the Honourable Revenue Member please state the reasons which disposed Government not to take due action against Mr. Coyne for such a long time, particularly when it stands admitted,—

- (i) that his pay has been under attachment for approximately 24 months ;
- (ii) that his pay has been attached since 1929 with the exception of certain periods of long and short leave ;
- (iii) that he has not been able to discharge his debts within the prescribed period of 2 years ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The only action that is due to be taken under the Governments Servants' Conduct Rules is that detailed in paragraph 4 of Rule 16 (copy placed† on the table in connection with the reply to Council question 3006¹).

On 28th June 1929 Mr. Coyne was asked to explain his position with reference to Rule 16. As it appeared probable that, if granted leave, he could obtain funds sufficient to clear his debts, he was allowed to proceed on leave on 14th October 1929, from which he returned on 8th February 1931. During his absence on leave, there was no need to proceed with the case.

TRANSFERS OF OFFICERS AND SUBORDINATES OF THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

3590. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please lay on the table departmental orders and circulars which govern transfers of officers and subordinates of the Education Department?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : Copies of the latest departmental circulars governing the transfers of officers and subordinates employed in the Education Department are laid on the table. It is added for the information of the honourable member that previous circulars which have been more or less superseded are very old and difficult to trace unless the period for which they are required is specified.

Copy of a letter No. 16380-E., dated Lahore, the 16th November 1930, from Sir George Anderson, Director of Public Instruction, Punjab, to the Divisional Inspectors of Schools, Punjab.

I HAVE the honour to invite attention to the instructions contained in paragraph 1 (b) of Punjab Government (Ministry of Education) Memo. No. 530-E.S., dated the 18th July 1923. In spite of these orders, and of my letter No. 2182-E., dated the 24th January 1928, transfers ordered by divisional inspectors continue to be frequent and take place at all times of the year instead of as indicated in that memo. I would request that the orders of Government may be more carefully observed in future.

Copy of a letter C. M. No. 11120-E., dated the 30th May 1933, from R. Sanderson, Esq., M.A., Under-Secretary to Government, Punjab, to (1) the Divisional Inspectors of Schools in the Punjab, (2) the Principals of Government Colleges in the Punjab, (3) the Deputy Directors of Public Instruction, Punjab.

I AM directed by the Punjab Government (Ministry of Education) to invite attention to the orders in Punjab Government letter No. 29580 (H.-Gaz.), dated the 17th November 1927, a copy of which was forwarded to you with C. M. endorsement No. 18717-E., dated the 5th December, 1927, and to state that these orders are frequently disregarded in the matter of postings and transfers. It should, therefore, be made quite clear to the officers serving under you that they are employed where, in the opinion of Government, they can be most useful, and that transfer from the inspection to the teaching line and vice versa is normal and is not to be considered as either degradation or promotion. Any further breach of the orders in question will be visited with severe disciplinary action.

Copy of a letter No. 16211-E., dated Simla, the 30th August 1934, from R. Sanderson, Esq., M.A., Director of Public Instruction, Punjab, to the Divisional Inspectors of Schools in the Punjab.

A CASE has recently come to my notice where an inspector of schools transferred a teacher at his own expense as a punitive measure without giving him an opportunity to clear his position. As a transfer at one's own expense, except when applied for, is tantamount to a fine and, therefore, definitely a penalty, I have the honour to state that transfers under such conditions must not be made until the officer concerned has been given an opportunity to clear himself.

PROFESSIONAL OR HAISYAT TAX IN AMBALA.

3642. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) whether any professional or haisyat tax is levied in the Ambala district by the district board;
- (b) whether it is a fact that some of the assesses have been taxed for two years 1932-33 and 1934;

- (h) whether it is a fact that taxes assessed by the zail committee have been enhanced by the tahsil sub-committee ;
- (i) if so, what is the use of having a zail committee ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes. Haisiyat tax.

(b) The assessments for 1932-33 and 1933-34 were made simultaneously (for the whole district).

(c) Yes.

(d), (e) and (f) The limitation period for appeals in such cases is fixed by the proviso to section 72 (1) of the Punjab District Boards Act, 1888. It is understood that in the case of the Ambala haisiyat tax assessments all the demand notices (these demand notices contain a mention of the last date fixed for the presentation of an appeal) were issued within the limitation period. Out of these notices 198 remained in the first instance undelivered, owing to the absence of the assesseees from their residences or for similar reasons. The 198 notices were sent out again by post from the District Board office, with the appeal dates unchanged. The propriety of issuing revised cards in these 198 cases, with revised appeal dates, is under the Board's consideration. In any case the late receipt of a demand notice could be pleaded by an assessee desiring to appeal as a ground for an extension of the limitation period.

(g), (h) and (i) The local Government's direction in regard to the Ambala tax is that the assessments shall be made under the orders of the District Board by committees or persons appointed by the Board. Actually the Ambala Board has established three sets of committees to carry out the assessment—

Zail Committees.—To make the original assessments on the spot.

Tahsil Committees.—To hear objections against the Zail Committees' assessments and generally to scrutinize and revise those assessments.

The District Committees.—To hear objections in cases where the Tahsil Committee has enhanced the assessment made by the Zail Committee.

The number of cases in which enhancements have been made by the Tahsil Committees is very small.

Sardar Sahib Sardar Gurbachan Singh : Is it not possible to give electricity to agriculturists, because Government is certainly running a loss by carrying all these towers and that line up to Jullundur and not giving electricity to agriculturists.

PROFESSIONAL OR HAI SYAT TAX IN AMBALA.

3642. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) whether any professional or haisyat tax is levied in the Ambala district by the district board;
- (b) whether it is a fact that some of the assesseees have been taxed for two years 1982-83 and 1984;

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

- (d) whether it is a fact that the appeal cards were issued from the office of the District Board actually after the time for filing the appeals had expired ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that many of the assesseees have been deprived of the right of appeal on account of the negligence of the district board authorities ;
- (f) what Government proposes to do to give the assesseees the right of appeal which they have thus lost ;
- (g) whether it is a fact that the proper authority for assessing tax is the zail committee ;

- (i) if so, what is the use of having a zail committee ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes. Haisiyat tax.

(b) The assessments for 1932-33 and 1933-34 were made simultaneously (for the whole district).

(c) Yes.

(d), (e) and (f) The limitation period for appeals in such cases is fixed by the proviso to section 72 (1) of the Punjab District Boards Act, 1883. It is understood that in the case of the Ambala haisiyat tax assessments all the demand notices (these demand notices contain a mention of the last date fixed for the presentation of an appeal) were issued within the limitation period. Out of these notices 198 remained in the first instance undelivered, owing to the absence of the assesseees from their residences or for similar reasons. The 198 notices were sent out again by post from the District Board office, with the appeal dates unchanged. The propriety of issuing revised cards in these 198 cases, with revised appeal dates, is under the Board's consideration. In any case the late receipt of a demand notice could be pleaded by an assessee desiring to appeal as a ground for an extension of the limitation period.

(g), (h) and (i) The local Government's direction in regard to the Ambala tax is that the assessments shall be made under the orders of the District Board by committees or persons appointed by the Board. Actually the Ambala Board has established three sets of committees to carry out the assessment—

Zail Committees.—To make the original assessments on the spot.

Tahsil Committees.—To hear objections against the Zail Committees' assessments and generally to scrutinize and revise those assessments.

The District Committees.—To hear objections in cases where the Tahsil Committee has enhanced the assessment made by the Zail Committee.

The number of cases in which enhancements have been made by the Tahsil Committees is very small.

Night classes for suitable literate prisoners are held in some jails, but no literacy certificates are given.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) and (b) Out of five divisional inspectors two are Muslims, one Hindu, one Sikh (officiating) and one European, and out of four officers at the head-quarters three are Muslims and one Hindu. It may be added for the information of the honourable member that of the officers at the head-quarters Assistant Director of Public Instruction is the only one that assists Director of Public Instruction in administration; the rest perform no administrative functions. The honourable member will perhaps be further interested to know that there was a time, about six years ago, when out of five divisional inspectors and five officers at the headquarters only two were Muslims.

(b) No. Out of twenty-nine district inspectors of schools in the Punjab fifteen are Muslims, eight Hindus, four Sikhs and two Christians.

(c) No. Out of one hundred and fifty assistant district inspectors of schools eighty-seven are Muslims, thirty-nine Hindus, twenty-three Sikhs and one Christian.

In connection with (b) and (c) the attention of the honourable member is also drawn to my answer to his Council question No. 862¹.

(e) Yes. It may, however, be added for the information of the honourable member that appointments of Head Assistants and Junior Superintendents in the office of Director of Public Instruction, Punjab, are made by promotion on the basis of seniority and record and not on communal considerations. Accordingly there was a time when for years not a single Head Assistant or Junior Superintendent in the office of Director of Public Instruction was a Muslim.

(f) The policy of Government was stated by the Honourable Finance Member in a debate in the Legislative Council on the 19th of July 1927. This is still the policy of Government and Government continue to carry out the requirements of the formula contained in the said statement of policy.

966. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) how many Hindu candidates were recommended by the Board for the P.C.M.S. this year;
- (b) how many of them were statutory agriculturists and to which tribe did they belong;
- (c) what respective position was assigned by the Board to the Hindu agriculturist candidates in the order of merit;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the candidate who was given the prior place by the Board has been rejected, while the other candidate, whom the Board considered less efficient has been accepted;
- (e) if so, the reasons for that;
- (f) in how many other cases the Honourable Minister has interfered with the decision of the Board;

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

- (g) if the Honourable Minister can thus over-ride the decision of the Board, what use there is of the Board and the expenses incurred therefor ;
- (h) if the answer to (d) be in the affirmative, what steps the Honourable Minister intends to take to undo the great hardship caused to the agriculturist candidate, who has been rejected, though he was considered better by the Board ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : I regret that the reply to this question is not yet ready. It will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

CANDIDATES FOR THE P. C. M. S.

967. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) how many candidates for the P.C.M.S. were recommended community-wise, Muslims, Hindus, Sikhs and Christians, and how many candidates have been accepted, community-wise, Muslims, Hindus, Sikhs and Christians ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that Muslim candidates who have been accepted for the P.C.M.S. are more than those of all other communities combined ;
- (c) if so, the reasons for that ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : I regret that the reply to this question is not yet ready. It will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

IMPERIAL CHEMICALS AND CONCESSIONS IN THE PUNJAB.

968. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the Imperial Chemicals or any other firm in Great Britain is at present negotiating with the Punjab Government through the Government of India for concession in any part of the Punjab ;
- (b) whether such concessions are asked for a period of 50 years ; if not, whether it is for a shorter or longer period ;
- (c) whether the said firm proposes to open its work at Dandot in Jhelum District, Punjab, for the purpose of exploiting the salt and lime resources of India ;
- (d) whether the Government will lay on the table of the House the original proposals of the said concerns and the reply given by the Government ;
- (e) whether the Government is prepared to extend the same facilities to any other company floated in India with Indian capital and directorate ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) No. The Imperial Chemical Industries (India), Limited, are negotiating direct with the Punjab Government and not through the Government of India.

(b) and (c) So far as the Punjab Government are concerned, the Imperial Chemical Industries (India), Limited, have applied for a prospecting licence for a period of five years, with the option of a lease for a period of fifty years to quarry limestone near Dandot.

(d) Government considers it against the public interest to publish negotiations.

(e) Government are prepared to consider every application on its merits.

ADVOCATES AND PLEADERS ENROLLED IN THE LAHORE HIGH COURT.

971. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) the total number of advocates enrolled in the Lahore High Court on 31st August 1934 ;
- (b) the total number of pleaders enrolled in the Lahore High Court authorised to practice in the mofussil courts on 31st August 1934 ;
- (c) whether Government realizes that the profession of law is more than over-crowded, and this over-crowding has led to much corruption and employment of undesirable means such as tout-ing, acceptance of ridiculously low fees, canvassing of clients by doubtful means, etc. ;
- (d) in view of this over-congestion in the profession of law, whether Government will consider the desirability of restricting the enrolment of lawyers in the Lahore High Court, as was done in 1913 and 1914 ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) 1,851.

(b) 4,242.

(c) Government are aware that the profession is overcrowded, a position that must lead to undesirable results.

(d) The experiment of restricting the number of new pleaders' licences issued was tried in 1914, but was abandoned partly because of its general unpopularity and partly for the following reasons. Inasmuch as a man who has passed the LL.B. degree examination cannot again present himself for the same examination in the following year, while a man who has failed may do so, it seems to follow that a man who is 31st in the list is absolutely excluded from ever joining the legal profession as a pleader, but to a man who fails altogether to pass, it is still open to appear again next year and perhaps to get into the first 30 and so obtain a licence. It seems unfair that the better man should be thus penalised. It may be noted also that there are no restrictions on the number of Advocates annually enrolled in the Court, nor is it possible to make any restriction. Every Barrister of any English or Irish Inn of Court, and every Scottish Advocate who chooses to apply is enrolled on proof of good character. It is increasingly felt that in these circumstances to limit the number of pleaders is to make a different law for the rich and the poor, for only well-to-do young men can afford to proceed to Europe. Again, it has been strongly urged, and with some reason, that it is hard that a man should spend two years in a highly technical course of study, fitting him exclusively for one profession, and then be refused entry into that profession by reason of an arbitrary rule ; and that the rule is calculated to create a class of men not unjustly aggrieved against the authorities. A system of apprenticeship has now been adopted by the High Court, and it appears advisable to await the result before trying further experiments.

AID BY FEROZEPORE MUNICIPALITY TO HINDU STUDENTS' RELIEF SOCIETY.

972. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that on the constitution of the Hindu Students Relief Society, the President of the Ferozepore Municipality has granted an aid of Rs. 40 per mensem to support the Society ;
- (b) the number of such societies as are supported by the Municipality ;
- (c) if reply to (b) above is in the negative, the reasons for giving aid to the Hindu Students' Relief Society only ;
- (d) whether the aid was granted by the Committee unanimously ;
- (e) whether the question of aid was put before the Committee ;
- (f) if reply to (d) and (e) above be in the negative, on what authority the President has granted the aid in question ;

973. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) the number of Hindu girls' schools opened by the Ferozepore Municipality, and the number of Muslim girls' schools ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that all the Muslim girls' schools are closed down except two ;
- (c) if so, why ?

- (b) whether it is a fact that the President gave him the permission to file a suit against the member ;
- (c) if so, on what grounds the President granted him permission to file the suit against the member ;

MAHESH CHAND MEMORIAL LIBRARY, FEROZEPORE.

976. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that all the furniture as well as the books of the Municipal Library of Ferozepore have been handed over to the Mahesh Chand Memorial Library ;
- (b) if so, the reasons for the same ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) and (b). The question suggests that books and equipment of the municipal library have been handed over to a private library. This is not the case. The facts are that the old municipal library room was found to be too small. A gentleman named Dr. Sadhu Chand built a hall at a cost of some three thousand rupees and presented the hall to the Municipal Committee of Ferozepore on the condition that the municipal library should be located in it and should be named "The Mahesh Chand Memorial Municipal Library." The gift was gratefully and unanimously accepted by the Committee.

(d) if so, what action, if any, has been taken on that representation ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) No. Certain suggestions were, however, made by the Examiner, Local Fund Accounts, after an inspection of the Boards' accounts in December, 1933, for retrenchments in the Board's Public Works establishment and in the salaries of school teachers in outlying localities.

(b) A statement is laid on the table showing the retrenchments effected by the Board as the result of the Examiner's note.

DISTRICT ENGINEER, JHANG.

978. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

- whether it is a fact that the extension given to the District Engineer, Jhang, expired in March 1933 ;
- whether the District Board passed a resolution unanimously that his services be terminated after March 1933 ;
- whether it is a fact that he applied for extension to the Chairman for another year and that application was summarily rejected ;
- whether it is a fact that the District Board Engineer was given extension for another year after the unanimous resolution of the District Board against extension being given to him and the orders of the President ;
- if so, the special reasons for giving extension to him ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) By a resolution passed by the Jhang District Board on the 5th February 1934, the District Engineer was given a year's extension. This expired on the 15th April 1934.

(b) By resolution No. I (30) passed on the 8th February 1934, the Board decided that no further extension should be given. A copy of the resolution is laid on the table.

(c) (i) Yes, (ii) No.

(d) The question was reconsidered by the Board on the 12th April 1934 when a resolution (No. VI (9)) was passed sanctioning a further year's extension. A copy of this resolution is also laid on the table.

(e) The resolution does not state any special reasons.

[Hon. Dr. Gokul Chand Narang.]

Copy of District Board Resolution No. I (30), dated the 8th February 1934, passed by the District Board, Jhang.

READ papers regarding the retirement of Agha Mukhtar Husain, District Engineer. The year's extension granted to him by the Board's resolution No. I (26), dated the 5th February 1933, will expire on the 15th April 1934. The District Engineer has not asked for further extension. The Chairman suggests that in the interest of economy no further extension be given, and that in future the post of the District Engineer be reduced to one of a supervisor on the scale of pay of Rs. 150—16—200. Early steps should be taken for the appointment of a suitable person.

Order of the Board. Sanctioned.

Copy of Resolution No. VI (3), dated the 12th April 1934, passed by the District Board, Jhang.

READ application, dated 23rd February 1934, from Agha Mukhtar Husain, District Engineer, Jhang, requesting one year's extension in service together with the proposal to re-consider the question decided in the District Board resolution No. I (30), dated 23rd February 1934, regarding his retirement from the date on which the previous term expires. There is no objection to the grant of extension if the District Board wishes to do so.

The sub-committee recommends.

Order of the Board. Sanctioned.

- (b) whether any enquiry was held into the matter ;
- (c) if the reply to (b) is in the negative, what steps the Government now proposes to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) A petition was preferred by the Accountant to the Chairman of the Board on the 6th February 1934 alleging that the Secretary had been guilty of various financial mal-practices.

(b) An inquiry was made by the Vice-Chairman and the Chairman. The Accountant's allegations were found to be baseless and to have been the result of personal animosity. The Accountant was accordingly warned by the Chairman.

- (c) Does not arise.

SECRETARY, DISTRICT BOARD, JHANG.

980. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the Secretary, District Board, Jhang, is residing in the District Board building on a monthly rent of Rs. 4 only ;
- (b) the average annual expenditure on improvements and repairs of the house occupied by the Secretary during the last five years ;

- (c) if the annual expenditure incurred is more than the rent received, what action the Honourable Minister proposes to take in the interest of the District Board?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes. The rent was fixed by the District Board itself in resolution No. 47, dated the 7th December 1926, and was apparently intended to be a nominal one. A copy of the resolution is laid on the table.

(b) Rs. 51-9-0.

(c) Government does not propose to take any action in the matter.

Copy of Resolution No. 47, dated the 7th December 1926, passed by the District Board, Jhang.

READ application of M. Shuja-ud-Din, Secretary, District Board, stating that there are two godowns, one old and the other new one. The former is properly used and the latter is seldom required for articles to be put therein. It practically remains as nearly vacant or mostly unused. That in view of the spacious room now provided in the old godown, there will be no need to make use of the new godown. The articles appertaining to both can easily be arranged and put in one place. Under the circumstances he requests that, if considered advisable, the new godown may kindly be ordered to be used by him as his residential quarters free of charge or on payment of a nominal rent as fixed by the Chairman. He does not own any house in the town for residence.

The Vice-Chairman recommends.

The Chairman has sanctioned the same.

Approval of the Board is required.

Order of the Board. Sanctioned Rs. 4 a month.

(ii) (1923) Insubordination.

[Hon. Dr. Gokul Chand Narang.]

(c) The facts have been brought to the notice of the Commissioner of the division, who has full power under section 27 of the Punjab District Boards Act, 1883, to deal with the case.

(ii) (a) whether it is a fact that certain members of the temporary staff attached to late 3rd Bahawalpur Circle were awarded "Thanks Sanads" during 1933-34 from the Local Self-Government for the hard work done by them during construction days ; if so, whether he will place a statement showing the names separately of those (1) who were still in service, (2) who were brought under reduction at the closure of the Circle ;

(b) whether Government proposes to give any consideration to the hard work done by the retrenched persons by re-employing them ; if so, what steps have been taken by the Government ;

(c) whether Government proposes to start Havelian Project ; if so, whether Government will consider the desirability of re-employing the retrenched persons ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan :

(i) Clerks	9

(ii) (a) Yes.

A statement is placed on the table.

(b) The claims of retrenched men are given full consideration when vacancies occur.

Some retrenched clerks have recently been selected for permanent appointment in preference to men actually in service. The same has been done for draftsmen and tracers. All retrenched engineering subordinates have been classified in the order in which they may be re-employed.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : With reference to his reply to unstarred question No. 8621, wherein it was stated that (a) the cases of appointments of district inspectors, assistant district inspectors, headmasters and teachers in colleges are dealt with by the Director of Public Instruction and not by the Assistant Director of Public Instruction and (b) that stenographers according to the present practice are appointed by the officers under whom they have to serve, will the Honourable Minister for Education kindly state—

- (a) the number of cases since the appointment of the present Assistant Director of Public Instruction in which the Director of Public Instruction has informally consulted the Assistant Director of Public Instruction in regard to appointments of district inspectors, assistant district inspectors of schools, headmasters and teachers in colleges which are beyond the province of the Assistant Director of Public Instruction ;
- (b) whether it has been the usual practice with the present Director of Public Instruction to consult the Assistant Director of Public Instruction in most of the cases which are referred to above in reply to my question ;
- (c) in how many cases the Assistant Director of Public Instruction has informally, but personally consulted the members of the Inspection Committee of Colleges with regard to appointments of college staff ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the appointment of stenographer of the Divisional Inspector, Multan, was made in July or August not by the Divisional Inspector himself, but as a result of competition held by a Junior Office Superintendent of the Director of Public Instruction's office ;
- (e) if reply to (d) is in the affirmative, how does Honourable Minister reconcile his previous statement with the real facts as admitted by him in reply to (d) above ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) and (b) In consulting the Assistant Director of Public Instruction in the matters detailed by the honourable member and other matters the Director of Public Instruction uses his own discretion and generally follows the practice he adopted in relation to the present Assistant Director of Public Instruction's predecessor.

(c) None.

(d) Yes.

(e) This is an innovation which the Department has tried in imitation of the Punjab Civil Secretariat. As a result of this competitive examination a Hindu was appointed. Would the honourable member wish me to have this appointment cancelled and the matter left to the divisional inspector ?

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

986. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : With reference to his reply to question No. 862¹, in which it was stated that district inspectors and assistant district inspectors of schools are primarily inspectors of rural schools and that, therefore, in selecting officers for these posts considerable importance is attached to rural origin and sympathies, will the Honourable Minister for Education kindly state—

- (a) what he means by rural origin and sympathies ;
- (b) whether he has been able to discover the line which separates the rural population from the urban population ;
- (c) whether it is not a fact that unless the rule regarding recruitment of only notified agriculturists is relaxed the Hindus will have very few chances of joining the inspection line ;
- (d) how many vacancies occurred among the district inspectors and assistant district inspectors since 1st November 1930, and how many of them were filled by members of each community ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) The words ' rural origin ' and ' rural sympathies ' are simple enough and well understood in the province, and I am sure the honourable member understands them as well as I do. Government have laid down no statutory definition for this purpose.

(b) The distinction is there, and is well known to every one in the province.

(c) The relaxation is neither necessary nor desirable. Qualified Hindu agriculturists are now becoming available in increasing numbers.

(d) Since the 1st of November, 1930, there have been eighteen vacancies for district inspectors of schools. Ten of these have been held by Muslims, five by Hindus and three by Sikhs. Their places have been taken by eleven Muslims, three Hindus, two Sikhs and two of other religions. In the same period the posts of thirty-six assistant district inspectors of schools have fallen vacant. They were originally held by fifteen Muslims, fourteen Hindus, six Sikhs and one of another religion. Their places have been taken by sixteen Muslims, thirteen Hindus and seven Sikhs. It may be added for the honourable member's information that there are only eight districts in the province in which the population is predominantly Hindu.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

987. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : With reference to his reply to question No. 868², wherein it was stated that " transfer from the teaching line to the inspection line is neither promotion nor degradation," will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (a) whether it is not a fact that M. Ahmad Khan when he was serving in the Ferozepore district in the inspection line, was adversely reported by the European Deputy Commissioner and by way of punishment was reverted to the teaching line ;

[R. B. Lala Sewak Ram.]

- (b) whether it is not a fact that M. Sardar Alam, District Inspector, was transferred to teaching line on the adverse report of the Assistant Director of Public Instruction when he went out on tour in 1933 and his transfer was ordered without even the Inspector of Schools of the division being consulted ;
- (c) if reversion from the inspection line to the teaching line is not a degradation, whether he will quote any cases of persons in the teaching line who were sent to the inspection line by way of punishment on the adverse report by some officer ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) M. Ahmad Khan was transferred to the teaching line not as a punishment, but because at the time his transfer from the inspection line was considered desirable in the interest of public service.

(b) M. Sardar Alam was also appointed headmaster of a high school in the interest of public service. This in no way affected his status, pay or prospects in service. His divisional inspector was consulted.

(c) The attention of the honourable member is invited to the answers given to his Council questions Nos. 287¹ and 772² asked in March 1932 and March 1934, respectively.

PROFESSORS OF PERSIAN AND URDU IN GOVERNMENT COLLEGES.

968. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : With reference to reply to question No. 877³, will the Honourable Minister for Education please state—

- (b) how many of them were selected ;
- (c) the number of Muslim M.A.s in Sanskrit who applied for the posts of professors of Sanskrit and Hindi and with what result ;
- (d) whether, in view of the paucity of Hindus in Colleges to teach Persian and Urdu in spite of there being qualified persons available, he is prepared to take Hindus as professors of Persian and Urdu ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Only one. He applied in August 1933.

(b) None. It may be added for the honourable member's information that no new appointment of a Persian and Urdu teacher has been made in Government Colleges since August 1933.

(c) None.

(d) The attention of the honourable member is invited to the reply given to part (d) of his Council question No. 877³ of 1934.

- (c) in view of the fact that the number of training institutions as given in reply to (b) above has been very much reduced, whether it is intended to amalgamate the post of the Inspector of Training Institution with that of the Inspector of Vernacular Education ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) The Inspector of Training Institutions' principal duty is, and has always been not only to inspect training institutions, but also to advise the Director of Public Instruction, in regard to the training of vernacular teachers and to assist him in office work which has been steadily increasing since the reforms.

(b) Training classes for vernacular teachers :—

- whether it is a fact that on account of the failure of crops land revenue instalments under suspension of kharif 1932, rabi 1933, and previous harvests have been remitted in most of the barani villages ;

[R. B. Lala Sewak Ram.]

- (d) whether it is a fact that Government had to forego a sum of Rs. 13½ lakhs advanced to the people of the Gurgaon district as taqavi during the last seven or eight years?

- (d) if the answer to (a), (b) and (c) be in the affirmative what action Government proposes to take for decreasing the rate of malikana and for charging it on matured instead of allotted area in the Pir Mahal extensions ?

- (e) in view of (a), (b), (c) and (d) above whether he will consider the desirability of making it clear by incorporating it in the Education Code that the rules will only apply to schools to be recognised hereafter?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Government has seen the article by Lala Jagan Nath Aggarwal but not that by Lala Mukand Lal Puri.

(b) Yes.

(c) The complete sentence referred to is—

"The defects mentioned in the last year's report (these relate to insecurity of tenure and irregular payment of salaries to teachers) generally continue as the rules of recognition which demand service rules and sound financial position do not apply to old schools already recognised."

(d) Yes.

(e) All aspects of the question will be borne in mind when Government is considering the question of the retrospective application of the new rules to the old institutions.

RESOLUTIONS.

CONCESSIONS TO AUCTION PURCHASERS OF LAND IN SHAHDARA TAHSIL, SHEIKHUPURA DISTRICT.

Sardar Sahib Sardar Gurbachan Singh (Jullundur, Sikh, Rural) :
Sir, I beg to move—

This Council recommends to the Government that the rights of Dakhalkars, reduction of price of land and other concessions, as per Government letter No. 1386-C. S., dated the 29th September 1932, advertised in vernacular, by the Deputy Commissioner, Montgomery, in a notice, dated the 26th October 1932, allowed to the purchasers of the lands in the Montgomery District, Lower Bari Doab Colony, should also be allowed to extend for the same reason to the land purchasers of the same years in the Shahdara Tahsil, Sheikhpura District, Upper Chenab Colony, non-perennial channels.

I will not take much time of the House in regard to this resolution because this resolution is identical with the one moved by me in February 1931, which the Government very kindly accepted and on the basis of which issued the letters mentioned in the body of this resolution. I may, however, by way of reminding the House read out passages from the speech of Mr. Calvert, the then Financial Commissioner, Development. It is contained in Volume XVIII at pages 84 and 35 of the Punjab Council Debates. Mr. Calvert very sympathetically said :

The question of affording relief to those who have purchased land during the various auctions held in the last six or seven years has been constantly under the consideration of the Punjab Government and the Punjab Government has agreed in a very generous manner to release a large number of auction purchasers from sums due by them under their contracts with Government.

He further said—

Government does not in the least deny that great hardship has been caused among these, especially those who bid rather over-high for the lands they purchased and has, as I have said, tried to meet in a very generous manner indeed, the cases of all auction purchasers who have paid more than the earnest money.

Similarly, Mr. Calvert says later :

These people have agreed that if they default the instalment the land is to be re-auctioned and they will be liable to make good the loss of any difference in price between what they bid and what was bid at the later auction. Government does not intend to press that condition under the contract. It has relieved them entirely of that very great obligation under their contract.

I hope I have said enough to explain to the House firstly how very anxiously Government is considering the cases of auction purchasers, not only those mentioned by the honourable mover, but all those who bid at auctions from 1925 onwards.

I do not think that there is much to be said about it by me and I hope that the honourable the Deputy President whose district really this resolution concerns will explain all the difficulties that the zamindars feel in the district.

In the end I should say that I am rather fortunate to have the same Honourable Revenue Member who is more ripe in experience now, having had the chances of administering this province as a Governor. I am also lucky in having Mr. Ferguson as Financial Commissioner, Development, in this House who is always keen to help the zamindars. I trust that they will both take a very sympathetic view of this resolution and do all they can for the poor zamindars who are hit hard. With these words I commend the resolution for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. President : Resolution moved—

This Council recommends to the Government that the rights of Dakhalkars, reduction of prices of land and other concessions, as per Government letter No. 1366-C.S., dated the 20th September 1932, advertised in vernacular, by the Deputy Commissioner, Montgomery, in a notice, dated the 26th October 1932, allowed to the purchasers of the lands in the Montgomery District, Lower Bari Doab Colony, should also be allowed to extend for the same reason to the land purchasers of the same years in the Shahdara Tahsil, Sheikhpura District, Upper Chenab Colony, non-perennial channels.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala Division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): I rise to support the resolution under consideration. The concessions which have already been given to the auction purchasers in the Montgomery district in the Lower Bari Doab Colony are very material indeed and such concessions have been given to purchasers of land much better in quality than the lands covered by this resolution. The land in the Sheikhpura district, particularly in Shahdara tahsil, which is the subject of this resolution, is very much inferior and perhaps has one-tenth of the productive capacity of the land in the Montgomery district on which concessions have already been given. This can be best proved by seeing that the land in Shahdara yields only one crop during the year while the land in the Montgomery district for which concessions have been given yields two. Again the land in the Montgomery district has perennial canals running all the year round, while the land in Shahdara has non-perennial canals running only for four months in the year. In the Montgomery district, again, the land yields all sorts of crops, sugarcane, wheat, makki, bajra, rice and other crops. The land in Shahdara yields only one crop and that is the inferior sort of rice which is sold very cheap in the bazar, perhaps at Rs. 2 per maund. It can also be pointed out that the purchasers of land in Shahdara are less wealthy than those in Montgomery. It may be well known to Members of Government that the lands in Shahdara were given up by some of the men who had purchased them before and left as unfit for cultivation. They were again auctioned and the great difficulty under which the purchasers have been suffering is that they purchased the lands at the time when high prices were reigning for commodities. That accounts for the high rate realised for these lands at the auction. The bid rose very high as money was plentiful in those days and the purchasers had every hope of becoming the proprietors of the lands they purchased. But as ill-luck would have it in a very short period the prices had fallen very low, so low that the people had absolutely no means of making payment of the balances that were due from them. And these balances were very high. About a year ago the rate for the land went as high as Rs. 560 per acre. The land of a certain man who had purchased at auction was confiscated because he could not pay the balance of the money due. When it was auctioned the bid rose to as high as Rs. 560 an acre. The bid was made by one Takht Mal who is a big money-lender and who had command of money. But he soon realised the inferior quality of the land and did not make the full payment and the result was that the land was further put to auction after a certain amount had been realised from him. The only bid that could be got was at Rs. 40 an acre. This instance puts the case in a nut-shell. The utmost price that can now be charged from the people would be about Rs. 40 an acre. I wonder if even that price could be realised from the purchasers. The Government should really come to their help. When there are so many points in their favour I cannot understand why Government do not like to extend the same concessions which were allowed to the purchasers of colony land in the Montgomery district. (An honourable member: What were those concessions?) In the first place the sale prices had been reduced to about one-fourth of the original bid.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan: Where did the honourable member get that?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan: I got it from heaven. The honourable member for Government can contradict me if he can.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan: The honourable member has got it all wrong.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan: It will be open to the Honourable Revenue Member to correct the figures when he rises to speak. I give them according to my own information. In some cases the prices had to be reduced by as much as one-fourth of the original price. Is it not so?

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan: In no case has the price been reduced.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan: Then the rights of dakhelkars have been conferred on those people who have not been able to make payment. I am glad that this is not contradicted. Those people who have made any payments or paid as much as those in the Montgomery district should be given the status of occupancy tenants or dakhelkars as they are called, as long as they are not able to make the payment of the balance. Another concession given in the case of Montgomery is that proprietary rights are promised to be conferred on those men who make good the payments within thirty years at the maximum. They can pay off within a smaller period.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan: I think the honourable member has mixed up the information which he has received from somewhere.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan: Of course I have not got the records which are available to the Honourable Revenue Member.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan: The honourable member will do well not to go into details, if he is not sure of his ground.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan: I am only enumerating the concessions as the question has been put to me. Another concession is that the amount which has already been paid by the people in the Montgomery district has been credited to their account and not confiscated, and the people have been called upon to make good the balance due. In this case, however, either the money which has already been paid has been confiscated or letters to that effect have been issued.

As the Honourable Revenue Member wishes that I should not go into details, I shall content myself with saying that we want only those concessions which were allowed in the case of Montgomery and nothing more, although our case merits more liberal concessions. (The Honourable Revenue Member : There are three separate sets of concessions. Which one does the honourable member want ?) I shall enumerate the concessions leaving it to Government to give such of them as meet their sweet will and pleasure. First, the conferring of the rights of dakhelkars, second, the extension of the period if not to thirty years at least to some period equitable and just within which the people can make the payments. And then I also want that the price which has been charged for these lands should be reduced and you should be guided by the case of that gentleman, Takht Ram, who purchased land in great eagerness at Rs. 560 per acre, and then that same land was sold for Rs. 40 per acre.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : The honourable member is going beyond the scope of the resolution and should be careful. On the Lower Bari Doab Canal we did not reduce the price of land.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : These concessions should be given to these men who are still holders of land in these auction proceedings and to those from whom lands have been taken or confiscated on account of their failure to pay. These concessions should apply to all, not only to those who still possess these lands but to those who have left them and who were turned out from them and whose lands were confiscated. These concessions should apply to all for if anybody has been compelled to the extent of forsaking his land and his land has been confiscated, it is due to his utter incapacity. As long as the zamindar can afford to make payment he will never leave his land ; he will go to the last resource. The fact that these men have been compelled to leave these lands and see them confiscated clearly shows that the last resource was tried. The Government should have more sympathy for them than for those who are still in possession of land, and their case is harder still than the case of those who still possess these lands, for if these people are not helped they will be ruined. If they could afford the least amount they would have credited it to the Government. If you do not extend the concession to them they will be turned into robbers and thieves. As I said the last resource was tried and they failed to make payment. The only means open to them will be unlawful means wherewith to make a living, and in helping that cause Government will not only help the agriculturists but it will be helping the cause of keeping good government, the cause of good society. Government wants that they should remain members of good society and for that reason they deserve greater sympathy than those who are in possession of their lands. I have already pointed out some of the considerations which merit these concessions but there are others too and as the Honourable Revenue Member appears to me to be sympathetically inclined I need not take the time of the Council and I hope he will in his speech give some hope or promise and with these words I support the motion under consideration. (Interruption). My friend has come to my help. The reduction of price is mentioned in the resolution. It reads : " This Council recommends to the Government that the rights of Dakhelkars, reduction of price of land and other concessions..... " So I was not after all wrong and I did not go beyond the scope of the resolution.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : What I meant was that it is not a Lower Bari Doab Canal concession.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : These concessions appear to have been given in two places.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : There are three different kinds of concession.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : The reduction of price is also one of them. It says so in the resolution. So it is not beyond the scope of the resolution.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : You are perfectly welcome to say what you want to.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I need not repeat what has already been said, for I will not be allowed repetition, but there is another reason why these concessions should be given on these lands in a more generous spirit than on the Lower Bari Doab Canal. On the Lower Bari Doab Canal where there are two crops they have made some profit after all because if one crop has failed they have got something from the second crop, whereas on the Upper Chenab Canal if the only crop fails they make nothing. In the latter case people have suffered loss after loss. Some of them have run away; those that are still there are there on account of the hardness of their heart. Otherwise they would have run away too. This is an additional reason why you should give concession and even more concession to these people. I hope with these words the Honourable Revenue Member and other members will be convinced that their case is a deserving one for the kindness of Government, and with these words I support the motion under consideration.

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh (Multan division and Sheikhpura, Sikh, Rural) : Sir, this resolution is very simple and the request made therein is for equal or similar treatment. The people of this tract of land do not want any extra concession but they want to be similarly and equally treated with their brethren in the Montgomery district. But I would like to draw the attention of this House to the two points which have already been raised by the honourable Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan who has just spoken before me. One is that the land is very inferior as compared with any other land not only in the Punjab but you will never come across such bad land throughout the length and breadth of India, and as my friend has already pointed out water too with which it is irrigated is not supplied throughout the year as it is only non-perennial. The second point to which my friend has also referred is that the people here have not been able to get the barest possible return on what they spent originally, that is to say, not even on the one-tenth instalment which they were required to pay at the time of making their bids, and especially during these days for the last three or four years when the prices have gone down so low, even in the best part of the country the zamindars have failed to meet Government demands and they have not been able to get the barest necessities of life out of their land. So that the first thing to do in the case of the zamindars who have such inferior land is to extend to them the same concessions which have been allowed to their brethren in the Montgomery district. I have already said that their land is of inferior kind, and secondly, that the allotment of water too is very little. In some of these canals they can get 60 per cent. or 75 per cent. but here they get less than 30 per cent. with the result that there is less production, and less out-turn of crop is expected from this land. So, taking all these things into consideration, I have every hope that the Revenue Member, who has always been sympathetic where the zamindars are concerned, will come to their assistance. I do think that this is their just demand. Not only have they spent so much without getting any return but sometimes I cannot help admiring their courage and enterprise in that they are still sticking to that inferior land. If you think of the reasons why they are still holding on, you will find that some of them are Government pensioners. They get their pensions all right and pay revenue dues and abiani and water rates out of them. Otherwise it is simply impossible on their part to pay even their Government demands not to say of their making any profit out of that land.

My friend has already advanced all the points which I wanted to make before this House and I need not repeat them. All that I want to say is that our request is a very reasonable one. We do not want anything extra. All we want is that the concessions which have been extended to zamindars in the Montgomery district should be extended to the zamindars on the Upper Chenab Colony in the Shahdara tahsil also.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan (Revenue Member): Sir, I must confess that I have not been able to understand, from the wording of the resolution, what the honourable member really wants. The honourable mover in the first place desires that the concessions granted to the purchasers of lands in the Montgomery district should also be extended to the purchasers of land in the Shahdara tahsil of the Sheikhpura district. My difficulty is this: In the Montgomery district, i.e., the Lower Bari Doab Canal Colony, we gave three separate sets of concessions to three different kinds of purchasers who bought land at different times. For instance there was sale by auction in 1925-26, and to the 1925-26 purchasers we gave certain concessions which are not identical with those given to the 1927-28 purchasers, or to the 1930-31 purchasers. It is not clear from the resolution as to which set of concessions the honourable mover desires should be given to the purchasers of land in the Shahdara tahsil, that is to say, whether he desires that concessions given to 1925-26 purchasers should be extended to the purchasers in Shahdara tahsil or those given to the 1927-28 or 1930-31 purchasers. Had the honourable member been more clear and specific on that point it would have made my task easier. (Interruption). However, I take it that the honourable member wants the most generous of these three sets of concessions to be applied. (An honourable member: Yes). Again, I do not understand why the honourable member has confined his recommendation to Shahdara tahsil only. I found on looking through the papers that some land was sold in the Nankana Sahib tahsil as also in the Sheikhpura tahsil. Perhaps the honourable member was unaware of this, and that is why he has not included these tahsils in his recommendation.

[Hon. Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan.]

Before I indicate to the House what the Government is prepared to do in regard to this matter, I think it may be of interest to my honourable friend on my right, the member from Hoshiarpur, to know the conditions of sale on the Lower Bari Doab Colony and the Upper Chenab Colony, as also the concessions which we have been giving from time to time in the Upper Chenab Colony. The conditions of sale in the Upper Chenab Canal were (1) the auction was open to all and sundry including Hindus and non-agriculturists; (2) 10 per cent. of the bid price was to be paid at the fall of the hammer; (3) interest was to be charged at 8 per cent. per annum on the overdue instalments only (not on the balance of the purchase price); (4) balance of the purchase money, if not paid within three months from the date of the sale, was to be paid in six equal half-yearly instalments; (5) no malikana was to be charged; (6) no penal interest was to be charged on overdue instalments. In the Lower Bari Doab Canal the conditions were (1) payment of 10 per cent. of the price bid on the fall of the hammer; (2) five years cultivation free of instalments, but subject to the payment of malikana at the rate of rupee one per matured acre; (3) initial remissions for the first four harvests, which meant that during these four harvests no land revenue, water rate, or cesses were to be charged; (4) the balance of the purchase money was payable on the expiry of five years in (a) six half-yearly instalments in the case of tenderers, and (b) ten half-yearly instalments in the case of auction purchasers; (5) interest was to be charged after the expiry of five years at 6 per cent. on the unpaid balance of the purchase money; (6) no penal interest was to be charged on overdue instalments. The House will thus see the difference between the two sets of conditions. The biggest difference, however, is the difference in the price. I am sure the House will be interested to know that whereas the price on the Lower Bari Doab Canal in the case of land sold by tender was on an average Rs. 321 an acre, the price in the Upper Chenab Canal was only Rs. 91 per acre. Again in the Lower Bari Doab Canal the average price of land sold by auction was much higher, about seven times that of the Upper Chenab Canal. The average price of land sold by auction there was Rs. 605 an acre. So, when the economic depression set in it was obvious that it would be impossible for the purchasers to pay such high prices and we decided to give them generous concessions. On the Upper Chenab Canal the average price bid was much lower and consequently it cannot be reasonably argued that the same consideration should be shown to the purchasers in the Sheikhpura district. Moreover they have paid only Rs. 25 per acre towards purchase price whereas in the Lower Bari Doab Colony the initial instalments paid by the purchasers were Rs. 50 per acre.

It would perhaps also interest the House to know what concessions we have hitherto given to the purchasers of land on the Upper Chenab Colony from time to time. I have read to the House the original conditions, but these conditions were altered and certain concessions were given from time to time with a view to assist the purchasers in the Upper Chenab Canal Colony even before the slump set in. In 1927 the purchasers were permitted to pay the balance of the purchase money in five yearly instalments instead of six half-yearly instalments. Then, in 1929 the period for the payment of the balance of the purchase money was extended to 15 half-yearly instalments. It was also ordered that there was no objection to persons, who had already defaulted and their land was resumed, being allowed the option of paying up under the new terms. In January 1930 the auction purchasers represented that the balance of the purchase money should be recovered in 80 half-yearly instalments. After full consideration of the case the following orders were issued :—

- (a) those who had paid no instalments over and above the original deposit should have their lands resumed ;
- (b) where instalments had been paid in addition, the following alternatives were to be offered—
 - (i) if, after deducting from the sum paid interest due up to rabi 1930, any balance remained, the purchaser was to be allowed to retain in proprietary rights area which he could have secured or such a balance at the rate bid, the unit of allotment being one or more contiguous line of killas, or
 - (ii) if the purchaser failed to avail himself of the above concession by June 1931, he was to be permitted to pay the balance of principal and interest at 8 per cent. due up to rabi 1930 in 15 annual instalments beginning from rabi 1931. Interest was thenceforward to be charged at the reduced rate of 6 per cent. per annum.

It will thus be seen that Government has been giving very generous concessions from time to time to these people on the Upper Chenab Canal in spite of the fact that the prices which they originally bid, and the very small fraction of it which they had paid, were much less as compared with the prices bid and the amount actually paid by the purchasers on the Lower Bari Doab Canal. But I admit that the economic depression has made conditions very difficult and in spite of the arguments to the contrary Government is prepared to go even further in this case and grant them more or less the same concessions which have been given to the purchasers on the Lower Bari Doab Canal (hear, hear). I may also mention that these concessions will not be confined to the Shahdara tahsil only. I think it is only equitable that we should extend them to the whole of the Sheikhpura district. The Government has decided to give the following concessions which I think are even more generous than the concessions which the honourable member from Ambala demands. I will, with your permission, Sir, read out the orders which the Government propose to issue. In the case of lands in the said area in the Upper Chenab Colony, which have been resumed but have not yet been re-allotted.—I should like to draw the attention of the House to this point, because the House should understand it clearly that nothing can be done in the case of land which has been resumed and re-sold or re-allotted—Government is prepared to grant, on application—I hope the honourable members will give as wide publicity as possible to this so that the people may take the fullest advantage of this concession—by the grantee concerned, both (a) proprietary rights to the nearest killa paid for as at the rate bid at the auction ; and (b) occupancy rights in the remainder and the right to purchase the said remainder at the rate bid at the auction on the conditions as regards the acquisition of proprietary rights applicable to peasant grantees in Upper Chenab Colony. I am sure the honourable mover will appreciate that Government is giving far greater concessions to the purchasers of land in the Sheikhpura district than he has asked for in this resolution. (Cheers).

Sardar Sahib Sardar Gurbachan Singh : In view of the speech delivered by the Honourable Revenue Member I beg leave to withdraw the resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

RE PROPAGANDA AGAINST THE USE OF ALCOHOL AND OTHER INTOXICANTS.

Mr. E. Mayadas (Nominated, non-official) : Sir, I beg to move—

This Council recommends to the Government to make provision of a sum of five thousand rupees in the next year's budget for propaganda purposes against the use of alcohol and other harmful intoxicants.

I will first try and show how the use of alcohol and other harmful drugs is on the increase. It was on the 27th of February 1930 that the Honourable Minister for Agriculture while making a speech, furnished us with some information. At that time it was said that the net profit which Government was making in the Excise Department was something like 75 lakhs of rupees. But since then in 1930-31 it rose to 99 lakhs. But later it fell. In 1931-32 it fell to 88 lakhs and in 1932-33 it fell to 82 lakhs. I have not got figures later than that. The Government report for the year 1932-33 gives an explanation for this decrease and says that it was due to the general depression, but does not suggest that it was due to any lack of desire on the part of the people to drink. I will now give figures which will give some idea of the quantity of liquor that is consumed. In 1910 it stood as high as 441,000 gallons, but by careful efforts on the part of the Government by the year 1923-24 it had fallen to 122,000 gallons. In 1927-28 it rose very high, 540,000 gallons. In 1928-29 it again fell to 362,000 gallons. In the Government report for 1932-33 the quantity in gallons has not been worked out, but for every 100 persons the quantity consumed in 1931-32 is 1.24 and in 1932-33 it was 1.19. I think that if this is worked out in gallons it comes to less than 300,000 gallons.

The Honourable Minister in the course of his speech made a comparison of the number of shops in this province with those in other provinces. For every 100,000 of population in the Punjab there were 3 shops. In the United Provinces there were 5 and in the Central Provinces 15. This shows that there is yet great scope for the further spread of the drink habit, that it is possible for us to have as many as 5 times the number of shops we have got. Then in the year 1928-29 as many as 183 illicit stills were discovered, and the number of persons convicted for illicit distillation was 565. In the year 1932-33 the number of illicit stills was 335, that is, they had increased from 183 to 335, and the number of persons convicted had increased to 1,342. Then again there was increase in the number of licences. In 1923-24 the number of licences were 578 and in 1926-27 it was 661. As regards shops, in 1906-07 they were 1,292 and Government cut them down to 674 in 1928-29. The report for 1932-33 shows that the number of shops had again slightly increased to 682. All this will give some idea of the extent of consumption of liquor in our province.

Just a few figures regarding other drugs. In 1931-32 the opium consumed for 100 of the population was .12 seers and in 1932-33 also it was .12 seers. It is very suggestive that owing to general depression there was a decrease in the case of liquor, but in the case of opium there was no decrease. In the case of charas there was a slight decrease. In 1931-32 for every 100 persons it was .26 seers and in 1932-33 it was .06 seers. Thus there is a fall. In the matter of bhang, in 1931-32 it was .39 seers and in 1932-33 it had increased to .52 seers, so that in spite of the depression in the case of bhang there was an increase. Now, apart from this consumption we have also to take into consideration the matter of illicit distillation, and this has now increased to such an extent that Government in their report for 1932-33 have felt compelled to remark that it is not possible to compete with the illicit producer. His facilities are so great, his chances of making money so large and his chances of escaping punishment so favourable that he is able to carry on his trade without much concern. One reason why in some of the districts it has become easier to manufacture is because of the supply of "Rab" from new sugar factories. Then Government have also made a remark in the report that the manufacture of illicit liquor is becoming so common as to have become a sort of cottage industry. Where illicit distillation is on the increase and seems to have taken a deep root, there Government feels compelled to open shops and that explains how the increase in the number of shops is brought about.

As regards opium, much of it comes from the hills and the report says that the smugglers are very active and that the present conditions are even more favourable than before and it is more easy for people to buy from the smugglers than before. As regards charas the Government report says that whereas it is very desirable that this deleterious drug should be prohibited, there are so many routes from across the boundaries of our province that it is impossible to control the import. One reason why so much of smuggling in liquor and other drugs goes on is because of the position of the Indian States, how they are wedged and how in the length of our boundaries are increased and therefore the proper guarding of the boundaries becomes a much more difficult matter.

I will make just a few observations about the evils of drink. You might have heard the same thing over and over again, but even at the risk of boring you I will say a few words. There are some matters in which we are compelled to repeat the same arguments again and again lest the matter be lost sight of. There are moderate drinkers and there are heavy drinkers. No one ever becomes a heavy drinker until he is first a moderate drinker and since we do not know what a man will turn out to be, hence it is our duty to be watchful from the beginning, because every man is an asset to the country, and we should be careful lest we lose him by his becoming a heavy drinker.

[Mr. E. Mayadas.]

I would first of all like to lay emphasis on the point that no insurance company would insure the life of one who drinks at the same rate at which it would insure the life of an abstainer. His premium will be heavier. No heavy drinker ever rose to be able to perform great deeds. Some years ago we heard of Lindbergh having flown the Atlantic. One of the reasons attributed for that great performance was that he never touched drink. Only to-day we have read in the papers about Mr. Scott having won the Melbourne Air Race. Can any one of us imagine that this would have been possible had he been a drinker or if he took to drink while in the aeroplane or before he started? No man under the influence of drink has ever been able to perform great deeds, on the other hand it is under the influence of drink many undesirable things happen of which we are all too well aware.

I think, Sir, that it is an admitted fact that about 75 per cent. of crimes that are committed can be traced to drink. Over fifty 4 P.M. per cent. of the accidents in railways and motor cars can be traced to drink. But there are worse things than that. There are times when a man wants to commit murder or dacoity but he is not able to get the full courage to do this and then he goes to have a good drink and under the influence of that drink he is able to do things which he would never have done otherwise. Only yesterday I came to know of one case where a boy who had got into the habit of drink was prepared after a good drink to commit murder for the sake of ten rupees.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Where was that ?

Mr. E. Mayadas : Somewhere in Jullundur. There is another matter connected with drink, the transmission of the weakness to children. If we go to a lunatic asylum and ask for the history of the inmates there, we will discover that 75 per cent. of the past history of these people is connected with drink. Sometime back I saw in the room of the Honourable Minister for Agriculture a number of charts which gave some very useful, interesting and striking information gathered in America. I think if similar charts are prepared in India they will prove very beneficial.

In brief I will suggest a few propaganda methods. Books very largely can serve the purpose, literature for primary and high classes. A little of such literature exists in the country and more can be prepared. And then charts and magic lanterns and any other means which may appear advisable after consulting other provinces or from the experience of other countries may be employed.

If I am not mistaken the Governments of Madras, Central Provinces, and the United Provinces are making grants for such purposes. I have been told that the figure of 5,000 is too small. I know that and I feel I should apologise for having fixed such a small amount. When our budget is something in the neighbourhood of ten crores, the figure of Rs. 5,000 is small. But about a larger amount it can be stated that it cannot be spared. This small sum is like اونٹ کی ڈالہ میں زیر

There are some people who raise objection and ask which religion allows the use of intoxicants. If religions do not allow why need take any trouble over it? But what religion allows murder, dacoity or theft? But still these things take place and the restraint of religion alone is not sufficient in such cases. Sir, there is great possibility of a lasting impression being made on the minds of children if such books are placed in their hands and if they come to understand that drink is the way for ruining their lives and if they once take a dislike to the use of drink and other intoxicants then when this generation comes to take their place in the world, what a volume of opinion there will be against the use of intoxicants! Therefore it seems to me that this is the most easy way of teaching people of our country the evils of intoxicants. It might be asked whether this will bring about total prohibition. It will not, but the number of people that will be opposed to the use of intoxicants will be considerably increased and this will gradually bring about the desired change, money now being spent on drink will be saved, savings bank accounts of the people will be larger, the number of murders will decrease and the number of prisoners will decrease, the number of court cases will be less, the number of dacoities will decrease and we will in due course save our opeople from untold misery.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : How will the lawyers live ?

Mr. E. Mayadas : And we will be bringing about happiness and joy in the lives of the people. With these words I place my resolution before this House.

Mr. President : Resolution moved—

This Council recommends to the Government to make provision of a sum of five thousand rupees in the next year's budget for propaganda against the use of alcohol and other harmful intoxicants.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural) : Sir, the speech that has been made by the honourable mover was well reasoned and has been supported by facts and figures. No lengthy speeches are therefore needed to support the resolution. It is undoubtedly true that the harm that alcohol is doing and the havoc that it has created is too obvious to need any detailed mention. It is also quite true that all religions forbid it and there are so many organisations amongst the Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs that are doing very useful work to counteract the effects of alcohol. But unfortunately the evil is so deep-rooted and is so widespread that some sort of earnest propaganda is needed and it cannot be denied that any propaganda that is done by the Government is sure to succeed. Because it cannot be denied that the people have still faith in any propaganda that is done by Government; they listen with confidence to what the Government have to say in matters like this and they have also faith in the stability and soundness of any work that is started by the Government. Therefore I would suggest that it is high time that the Government should make a small beginning which might bring very desirable results in the near future. There is another aspect of this that the time for this propaganda is very psychological. As a matter of fact, the economic depression through which we have been passing is, I should say, in this respect at least, a blessing in disguise. It cannot be denied that the economic depression has told upon the pockets of the zamindars and the consumption of liquor has considerably decreased, and if serious work is undertaken at this moment results will certainly be very hopeful. The sum that has been suggested by my honourable friend is certainly a very paltry amount and the results which are likely to accrue are certainly out of all proportion. Therefore I would suggest that such a modest and moderate sum as has been suggested by my friend should be accepted and the Government should give an index of their sympathy that they always have for the masses by accepting this resolution. With these words I support the resolution.

Lala Bhagat Ram (Jullundur-cum-Ludhiana, Non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, the resolution moved by my honourable friend is very important. He has really pointed out a very big evil which is sapping the very foundations of our society and we should all try hard to eradicate it. The habit of drink is undoubtedly difficult to shake off and people, in spite of their poverty and pennilessness, maintain this evil at all costs, but with proper propaganda and preaching work one can do a lot to hasten its end. It is on account of the habit of drink, as the mover has rightly pointed out, that crimes are on the increase in our province and the general condition of people's health is not what may be desired. The sum which the honourable mover has demanded to be earmarked for purposes of propaganda is not too much for such a noble object. I hope the Government will not grudge him this paltry sum. If the Government agrees to setting aside the proposed sum the people will be convinced of their earnest solicitude for the welfare of this country. But I have my fears that the Government will not be prepared to forego an income of one crore of rupees which accrues to it by the auction of liquor shops. But it will not be difficult for them, however, to forego even this big source of revenue if the desire of doing good to the public is uppermost in their minds. I will support the resolution on religious grounds also. Propaganda against intoxicants will block the way of immorality. With these few words, Sir, I lend my whole-hearted support to this resolution.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala Division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, the speech that has been made by the honourable mover is so well reasoned and has been so supported by facts and figures that I will take only two minutes for just making one useful suggestion. There is no doubt that the able way in which the mover has moved this resolution has convinced all the non-official members at least that this is a very useful movement to be undertaken by the Government and the only difficulty perhaps would be for the Government to earmark some money for it in the present state of our finances. So I want to make this suggestion that the Commissioner, Rural Reconstruction Department, should include this in his propaganda. (Hear, hear). Because there is no doubt that drink habit is at the bottom of so many quarrels and evils in the villages which lead to deterioration in agriculture and deterioration in morals, abduction of females and murders and dacoities. It is thus most appropriately the function of the Rural Reconstruction Department to train people in a way in which greater prosperity may be ensured for them. Until they can give greater attention to agriculture, how can they prosper? You know a drunkard is very badly fitted for agriculture. Many a time he remains in bed till 8 or 9 A. M.

Mr. President: The question now before the House is whether the sum specified in the resolution should be provided for in the budget for the next year. If the House passes the resolution and the sum is budgeted, then the question may arise how it is to be spent.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I simply wanted to give the suggestion to Government. If the Government could give this assurance, perhaps the honourable mover would withdraw his resolution. As for the object of incurring this expenditure it is a very laudable one so that no one can have any hesitation in accepting this resolution and it should be pointed out to Mr. Brayne that his programme should also contain work in this direction. With these words I support the resolution.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh (Minister for Agriculture): I have heard the speeches in support of the resolution with very deep interest as they indicate that members are alive to their duty in promoting the cause of temperance. Before I proceed further I just want to go into the figures which the honourable mover of the resolution quoted in support of his contention, that, both the consumption of drink and opium had increased. So far as our figures are concerned, his contention is not borne out. Illicit drinking is not on the increase. In 1927-28 there were 655 shops and the consumption stood at 388,158 gallons. In 1932-33 there were 682 shops and the consumption stood at 281,842 gallons which I am sure the honourable member will admit registers a decline. In the matter of opium, in 1928-29 the excise opium stood at about 37,480 seers consumption while in 1932-33 the figure was 29,103. In the matter of charas, I admit there has been a slight increase from 15,105 seers in 1928-29 to 15,292 seers in 1932-33. Throughout the period in which I have held the portfolio of excise it has been my endeavour to support the cause of true temperance, and that policy has succeeded. Madras and Bombay have now come to accept the policy which we initiated in the Punjab, with the support of the House.

Coming to the main point of the resolution that a certain amount of funds should be devoted to propaganda in the interest of temperance, perhaps the honourable mover of the resolution is not aware, that from 1930 onwards, I have been making donations to temperance societies which have shown good work in this direction. In spite of financial stringency in 1929-30 the Punjab Government gave a donation of Rs. 1,000 to the Punjab Temperance Federation, Amritsar. In 1930-31, we gave another Rs. 1,000 to the Amritsar Temperance Society; in 1931-32, Rs. 1,000 to the Punjab Temperance Federation, Amritsar, and Rs. 1,000 to the Amritsar Temperance Society; in 1933-34, Rs. 500 to the Punjab Temperance Federation, Amritsar, and Rs. 500 to the Punjab division of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of India. Therefore I can assure the honourable mover that I have been in full sympathy with the views which he has advocated in his speech.

There is one more point which I should like to mention and that is the question of illicit distillation. The honourable member quoted the number of distills captured as an evidence of increased weakness in the excise administration. On the other hand the capture of these distills indicates the results of a vigorous excise policy, to prevent the manufacture and use of illicit liquor. The honourable mover said that it was easy to counteract the desire for drink by publishing books and prescribing them in the primary and high schools. If I may respectfully submit, I am sure he would admit that where religion has failed, it is not possible for any books of less weighty authority to gain greater ground.

Before I conclude I wish to congratulate the honourable member, Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan, who said that he was going only to speak for two minutes. His knowledge in all matters is so limitless, that he can speak for hours on any question that comes before the House. I feel really gratified that on this important matter he thought only two minutes would suffice and he has kept his word.

I am sure the honourable mover will admit, that neither my friend sitting in front of him, nor I, have any desire to sterilise the virility of the coming generations by providing for them drink nor have we any desire to provide spirits for people so that they may be spurred on to crime. We, both, and, I think, every member on the Government benches are anxious to bring under control both illicit distillation and as far as possible the habit of drink.

I may say that it is not at present necessary to provide any definite sum in the hudget. We have a reward grant from which I have been meeting any demands that have so far been made and as any evidence of work on temperance lines is brought to the notice of the Financial Commissioner, Revenue, or to my notice, we can promise him a very cordial support. I do not wish to oppose the resolution.

Mr. E. Mayadas : In view of the reply of the Honourable Minister, I beg leave to withdraw the resolution.

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

RE PUNITIVE POLICE.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, Non-Muhammadan, Rural : I beg to move the resolution which stands in my name. The resolution is to the following effect—

This Council recommends to the Government that before a force of punitive police is quartered at any place the inhabitants of that place should be supplied in writing with a statement of the grounds on which punitive action is based and of the term for which and the strength at which it is proposed to quarter the said force in order that the said inhabitants may have an opportunity of making such representation as they consider necessary and the local Government may have before it the other side of the picture when final orders are passed.

I feel that the proposal which is embodied in this resolution is very simple and just as moderate and modest as the proposal which was contained in the resolution which was moved by Mr. Ernest Mayadas and which received the support of members from various quarters of the House. The resolution which I have moved involves a very important principle and in view of the importance of the principle involved I have no doubt that it will receive the earnest attention of the various sections of the House including the official benches.

The practice of quartering punitive police at any particular place involves the principles of what may be called vicarious punishment, the punishment of a large number of men for the offence or faults of certain other people ✓ who have remained undetected. Whenever a punitive force is stationed at any place the plea on which that action is sought to be justified is that certain people have committed offences of a more or less serious character and those offences have remained undetected. As the people of that place are supposed to be under an obligation to render all necessary help for the detection and punishment of the crime, Government thinks that there is a justification for the stationing of punitive police whenever the inhabitants of a particular village or town have failed to render that assistance. My answer to this plea is that the failure of the police, in many cases, to detect and punish crime may be due as much to the inefficiency of the police force as to the reluctance of the people to help and it becomes really very difficult to judge and decide whether the fault lies more at the door of the police than at the door of those people whom it is proposed to penalise for the faults of others. I think I can with reason urge that it is a vicious principle to punish people for offences which have not been committed by them. This principle of punishing a certain class of people for the offences and crimes committed by certain unknown people is one to which naturally objection can be taken by all fair minded people. Why should there be any punishment imposed upon innocent people for the offences of others who have themselves escaped that punishment. It is true that normally speaking it is the duty of every citizen to render all help of which he is capable in the detection and punishment of crime. That is a duty which every citizen owes to society. But at the same time it is wrong in principle to punish people for the faults of others. As this principle is very important I think I can reasonably appeal to the House to take a very deep view of it. We should not confine ourselves to a shallow view of this principle and this practice.

(At this stage Mr. President left the Chair and it was occupied by Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.)

Government, of course, finds it very convenient to impose punitive police because if the force which is employed by Government for the particular purpose of detecting and punishing crime fails in the discharge of its duty and the punishment is imposed upon other unoffending people that in a way helps to conceal the failure of that force. Thus this principle of vicarious punishment is objectionable on two grounds. The first ground is that it is improper to punish innocent people for the fault of others and the second ground on which this principle can be attacked easily and with reason is that it helps to conceal the inefficiency of the force whose duty it is to detect crime and to bring the guilty to book by recourse to courts. Therefore when I make a request to Government by means of this resolution that they should give an opportunity to those whom the order will ultimately affect to present their own side of the picture, I am not making any unreasonable request at all. The principle of vicarious punishment is, as I said in the very beginning, a vicious principle and if in certain stages of development of society recourse is had to it then it is the business of Government to see that vicarious punishment is imposed after all possible and necessary precautions have been taken to ensure that people will not be condemned without being given an opportunity of being heard. That is the underlying motive of my resolution, that is the underlying object which I wish to achieve by means of this resolution. I maintain that if under certain circumstances Government still finds itself compelled to resort to this principle and practice of vicarious punishment it is the duty of Government to give every possible opportunity to those who are affected by its orders to present their own side of the picture. It is true that some inquiries are made by local officers. The district magistrate and the superintendent of police make the preliminary inquiries and then the result of those inquiries is forwarded to the commissioner who forwards the result of district officer's inquiries with perhaps his own comments to the Inspector-General of Police and ultimately the Home Member deals with the case and orders are passed. It may be urged that when inquiries have been made by district officers and have been endorsed by the Commissioner and then sifted and scrutinised by head-quarters officers the need for the present resolution disappears. I beg to submit that the need for this resolution is just as great as it would have been if the question had not been dealt with by the officers through whose hands the original proposals now have to pass. The district magistrate is now-a-days very hard-worked indeed. He has such an unending series of duties to attend to that he must necessarily and naturally depend upon the reports which he receives from the police officers, and police officers, although all of them are not bad, have certainly a reputation on which it is not easy to congratulate either them or ourselves. It happens many a time that a single police officer gets offended with the people of a village over something and takes it into his head to see that that village is punished and punished seriously. One of the ways in which a whole village can be punished is to see that punitive force is stationed in that village. Of course I do not say that this happens very frequently, but there may be cases in which this does happen. Then there is another very serious difficulty which arises from the stationing of punitive police at a particular place. It really lends itself to a good deal of abuse on the part of local police force which is stationed at a village. The members of this force can, if they so desire, stir a good deal of litigation and mutual bitterness in the village in which punitive police force is stationed. The very fact that a police force is there is fruitful of ugly happenings. The police force generally consist of people who have absolutely nothing in common with the villagers. They may be entire strangers, who cannot be expected to have the same respect for village traditions, for the women folk of the village as people of the village itself will have, and though it is a very unpleasant thing to refer to still it does happen and happen fairly frequently that the strangers make themselves responsible for incidents of a very unsavoury character in the village. This leads to a good deal of discontent against the administration. People feel that the misdeeds of petty officials of the police are really such as would throw discredit on the administration as a whole. In fact there are few departments, the harshness of whose methods or whose misdeeds bring greater discredit upon the administration or bring greater bad name upon the Government than the improper manner in which sometimes petty police officials behave themselves in the countryside. The misdeeds are those of a few, of practically irresponsible men, of men of no position, of men of ill-developed sense of duty. But as these men are the employees of Government, as they are public-servants their misdeeds will necessarily bring bad name upon Government. Therefore unless it is absolutely essential that a police force should be stationed at any place it will be to the good of all if Government spares the people the rigour of this law and one way in which this can be done is to give an opportunity to the people concerned to say what they have to say against the proposal.

As things stand at present the inhabitants of the locality where it is proposed to station a police force are given no opportunity whatsoever to urge their objection to that proposal. They are not told what specific grounds there are on which the proposal for the stationing of punitive police is based. Generally speaking, they may come to know from the sub-inspector who possibly goes to the village where it is proposed to station a police force what the ground is. In a general rough manner they may come to know, but it is neither in a formal manner nor in a manner which will enable the people to fix exactly upon the alleged faults on which action is proposed. Consequently in many, practically in all, cases the case of the villagers goes by default. If they are formally informed of the grounds on which punitive action has been proposed against them, they certainly will make some representation either against the proposal itself or against its details. Ordinarily the objection will be against the proposal as a whole because nobody wishes to be saddled with extra expense and particularly expense in connection with the stationing of punitive police, but apart from the general objections to that proposal there are certain other factors. People never know for what length the punitive force will be stationed at least not officially and formally. They may hear vague rumours about the term for which punitive police is to be stationed in their village but official information is not actually conveyed to the people. I am speaking subject to correction, but that is my information.

Mr. J. W. Hearn : At what time? When the deputy commissioner formulates his proposal?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : They are informed neither at the stage when the deputy commissioner formulates his proposal nor are they informed formally at the stage when final orders have been passed by Government and the police force has been stationed there.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : But there is always a proclamation in the Gazette.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Is the term stated in the Gazette?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Yes.

Mr. J. W. Hearn : When would you like them to be informed?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : The object of this resolution is that the people concerned should be informed at a time when they will be in a position to make their own objections against the proposal itself, so that the deputy commissioner may have an opportunity of considering their objections and the Government may have those objections before it when it is passing final orders. That is my proposal. The stationing of punitive police furnishes an occasion for corruption. Such of the officials as are corrupt suggest to the people that they are in a position to have the punitive police lifted before its time or recommend its extension. That is another side of the picture which should not be overlooked. The people should be given an opportunity to urge their objections against the proposal. It will be for the good of all if the people are placed in a position to urge their objections. If the deputy commissioner knew what the people felt about the proposal or about its details it would not do any harm to anybody. If the commissioner knew what the people felt, it certainly would not hurt him; it would not hurt either the Inspector-General of Police or the Home Member or the Government to know exactly how the people felt about the proposal, whether they have any objections and if so whether those objections are in any way substantial or flimsy. If those things become known to the officers who have the power to pass orders, it will not do any harm to anybody. As a matter of fact it will on the other hand, result in advantage all round. One advantage of a moral character and on that ground of a fairly high value is that if people are given an opportunity to explain their own view point if people feel that they have been heard, then the discontent against the order will not be so bitter as it is now. Now the people feel that they are not given any opportunity to explain their side of the case. Reports are made by the police officials behind the back of the people, the deputy commissioner formulates his proposals and the commissioner makes his recommendations behind the back of the people. The Inspector-General and the Home Member give no opportunity whatsoever to the people to controvert the grounds on which punitive action is taken against them. This feeling of theirs that they remain unheard certainly generates an amount of discontent a portion of which can be easily avoided if they are given an opportunity to be heard. After all, what harm will it do to anybody, either to the officers of Government or the Government itself if people are given an opportunity to urge their objections against the proposal or against the details of the proposal or against the grounds on which punitive action is suggested against them? Personally I feel that it will not do any harm to anybody. It will not in any way affect the prestige either of the local officers or of the Government as a whole, whereas it will remove that sting out of the final orders which is now felt by the people. Everything is now being done behind the back of the people and no opportunity is given to them to make their own views known. When a man is condemned unheard he feels doubly aggrieved and I think he has a legitimate ground to feel aggrieved. Therefore the proposal which is contained in this resolution is, I think, eminently reasonable. It does not in any way embarrass the Government. It does not bind the hands of Government so far as the actual passing of final orders is concerned, and I think that Government will have no objection to such an opportunity being given to the people before it passes its final orders.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit): Resolution moved--

This Council recommends to the Government that before a force of punitive police is quartered at any place the inhabitants of that place should be supplied in writing with a statement of the grounds on which punitive action is based and of the term for which and the strength at which it is proposed to quarter the said force in order that the said inhabitants may have an opportunity of making such representation as they consider necessary and the local Government may have before it the other side of the picture when final orders are passed.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq (Hoshiarpur-cum-Ludhiana, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I thought that the honourable leader of the Unionist party would bring in some suitable resolution to serve his purpose but I am disappointed to find that he has brought forward a resolution which will not achieve his object. When the whole body is suffering from impurity of blood, you cannot heal it by cutting off one of its limbs. When the whole police administration and the policy on which it is being run, are not above criticism, it is unreasonable for us to direct our attack against the punitive police alone. The local officers are not, as they are being depicted, unmindful of the public welfare. They do sympathise with the public but their sympathy is immaterial. So long as the theory of "the man on the spot" is in force, you cannot expect a better state of affairs prevailing in the country. The people may or may not raise a hue and cry on injustice being done to them, the man on the spot will always carry his point. The present policy of the Government has been responsible for bringing into existence a class of people who dance attendance upon local officers and it is through them that Government hears about or looks into the public affairs. I think none of the honourable members of the House is unaware of the present state of village life. In almost every village the people are divided into factions and there are people always ready to inflict serious injuries on others in order to serve their own ends. The sufferings of the people which are due to these factions and the presence of the rude and ill-mannered police cannot be removed with the help of this resolution. In other civilised countries like England the police force is a conscientious body of public servants. They dare not invite public criticism by doing any illegal act. But the case of our police is different. I wonder, when our honourable leader knows all this, why he thought it advisable to move a resolution like the one now before the House. We have very often protested against the imposition of punitive police on the ground that it does not serve any moral or public purpose. The existence of such a force is a relic of barbarism. This is an old institution the existence of which cannot be tolerated in these days of enlightenment. The object of the punitive police is to punish and keep under control certain bad characters, but it eventually creates trouble for even the most law-abiding people. We even condemn the very idea of punitive police. You are not living in Manu's time. It is now the twentieth century when these things are considered to be quite out of place. The Government should themselves realise that institutions like the punitive police are bound to bring discredit to them. With these words I would request the honourable mover to withdraw his resolution and would also point to Government that if they want to punish certain bad characters, the imposition of punitive police is not the only way to punish them but there are many other ways, for instance, you can restrain their nefarious activities by inflicting fines on them. In any case there is no use in pressing the resolution under consideration as it will not in any way improve the present situation.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural): I think there seems to be a misapprehension in the mind of the mover about the location of the punitive police in any village. He will probably agree with me when I tell him that all sorts of enquiries are made before this drastic step is taken. Ordinarily you will find that in all the districts a very few number of punitive police is located. I have been in charge of more than half a dozen districts and during a period of 15 years of service I think I had been able to get the approval of the Government for the location of the punitive police in about half a dozen villages. If you take the census of the punitive police throughout the Punjab, you will find that the number is very small. When all attempts fail to detect or punish crime in a village and when there have been a series of crimes, then it is the last step which the local authority and the Government are compelled to take. As regards the representation of the people I think no useful purpose will be served by provoking the people or by asking them to be more discontented when they know fully well that they are guilty and they have been responsible for the commission of a series of crimes and it is wrong to say that the whole village in which there has been a series of crimes is punished for the sake of a few. Every effort is made to sift truth and all classes of people who are peaceful or law abiding are excluded, such as the religious heads, widows, orphans and children and I have come across cases in which even sections of the population of a village have been excluded. Representations will serve no useful purpose because all the facts and figures are before the local officers. In the first instance the report is made by the police, then it comes to the deputy commissioner and then if the deputy commissioner finds that there is a prima facie case for the location of the punitive police he asks the tahsildar to go to the spot and make enquiries. The paying capacity of the people is also taken into account and the criterion of that is the land revenue paid by that village. As regards the term for the location of the punitive police it depends upon the seriousness of the crime and the number of offences. It has been said that because the police have failed to detect the crime, in order to conceal their inefficiency they resort to this step. I am sorry I am bound to differ from the honourable mover because it cannot be said that the police have failed to detect or punish the crime in a certain village while they have succeeded throughout the remaining portion of that district. As I have said before when they have failed altogether in detecting or punishing a series of crimes, the only step left for the Government or the local administration for the protection of the people is to take this drastic step and my experience is that this step has really led to the reclamation of the people (hear, hear) and there is very little crime during the location of the punitive police, not only during the location of the punitive police but even subsequently. As regards representations, it is an open secret. When such a step is taken by the local officers, at once the people come to know through the thanedar or the tahsildar and now-a-days, anybody who is aware of the mentality of the people knows it, not only anonymous representations but also signed representations are made to the district officer as well as to the higher authorities and these come back to the local authorities for further enquiry and report. Even after that report is complete, the thing is sent on to the commissioner, to the Deputy Inspector-General and to the Inspector-General and then to the Home Secretary and the Home Member. All these officers go through these records and into facts and figures and then come to the conclusion whether from the administrative point of view it is necessary or desirable to locate the punitive police. Under these circumstances I do not see what useful purpose can be served by asking the people to make any further representations. When they do not make any representations it is quite clear that they have nothing to say because they themselves in their heart of hearts know that they have been guilty. Any one who is acquainted with the village life can very well remember that owing to class or village feeling people rarely come forward in this country to help the administration and that is one reason why this step is taken, so that the responsibility of the people may be brought home to them. With these words I oppose the resolution. (Cheers).

(At this stage, Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit left the chair and it was occupied by the Deputy President.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): After the excellent and able maiden speech on which I would like to congratulate our latest joined member (cheers), I do not feel that there is anything very much left for me to say. He has said a great deal of what I wanted to say and he has said it very well indeed. I think that after the last two speeches it is quite clear that ample opportunity for making representations is given to the people, I do not say given formally, but given in effect. If I understood the honourable member opposite, Chaudhri Afzal Haq, correctly, he himself admitted that opportunities for making representations do exist. The process, as we have just heard from the honourable member for Sheikhpura, which is gone through before additional police are quartered in any area is a lengthy one involving detailed enquiries during which people invariably get to know what is happening and have opportunities of making representations against the proposals and in fact do make these representations. I should think there are very few cases indeed in which extra police are quartered in any area without objections being made by the people. The honourable member referred to one recent case in which extra police have been quartered in something like 32 villages of his own district but he will remember that Government received a lengthy representation from himself before that was ever done. Obviously he knew what was coming. He made his representation and I can assure him that representation was very fully considered indeed. Before I come to what I might call positive arguments, there are one or two misunderstandings that I would like to remove, if possible. The honourable mover said, as I understood him, that punitive posts involved vicarious punishment and that they are imposed because the offences in a particular area remained undetected. That is not, I think, a correct representation of the position. The additional police are imposed under section 15 of the Police Act which says—

It shall be lawful for the Local Government by proclamation to be notified in the official gazette—

That is the first point I would call your attention to. A proclamation must be issued by notification in the official gazette in a certain manner—

And in such other manner as the Local Government shall direct, to declare that any area subject to its authority has been found to be in a disturbed or dangerous state, or that, from the conduct of the inhabitants of such area or of any class or section of them, it is expedient to increase the number of police.

This provision of law is not punitive. It is preventive. It is because an area is found to be in a disturbed or dangerous state that the number of police is increased, or if the conduct of the inhabitants is such that additional police is required then Government may quarter them. It is not of a punitive nature. They are additional police and that is what they are meant to be. They are additional police to prevent the continuance of a state of disturbance or danger in any particular area or to prevent the inhabitants of that area from continuing in a state of criminal activity. I think therefore that the honourable mover was mistaken in his description of the object of this provision of the law. Then the honourable mover said that the fault for this condition of any particular area is mainly on the police itself which has failed to detect the crime and prevent recurrence and it is wrong that some innocent people should be involved because of the fault of the police. Whatever the reason of the disturbed or dangerous condition of an area is, I think all speakers so far have forgotten the fact that there is a certain amount of communal responsibility in such matters. As we all know, the Indian village community was definitely in the old times a unit, a corporate body and that position has not yet entirely disappeared and by usage, if not by definite law, communities are held jointly responsible for the condition prevailing amongst them. That is a very useful institution. It helps to preserve village life and at the same time it helps to enforce, I think rightly, communal responsibility for the preservation of peace and in order to prevent gross injustice to individuals. We have another provision in the same section of the Act and that is—

The magistrate of the district, after such enquiry as he may deem necessary, shall apportion such cost among the inhabitants who are liable to bear the same.

And he has authority to recommend to Government that certain persons be exempted and as the last speaker stated in some cases a large number of innocent people are exempted from the duty of contributing towards the cost of the additional police.

There are certain reasons why Government cannot accept this resolution. The first reason why Government cannot accept this resolution is that it is unnecessary because in the present state of affairs the people have an opportunity of representing their case. Beyond that I should like to mention to the House, the result of proposals for additional police which have been made from 1st January 1932. Up to date 35 proposals have been made. Of these 9 have been turned down entirely by Government (hear, hear), slightly more than a fourth of the proposals; fourteen of these have been modified and it is only one-third of the proposals which have been accepted. I think it is very clear that proposals for punitive police are very carefully scrutinized throughout all the long chain of officers who consider them and that in the end it is very unlikely that injustice will be done. There are one or two other reasons. I would remind you that the Act under which additional police are imposed is an Act of 1861. It has been in force for 73 years, it has been known to work satisfactorily during the 73 years. Now it is very easy when we get democratic powers to scrap all the wisdom of our predecessors and say that the powers enjoyed by them are no longer necessary. It is an easy thing to say but it is an extremely unwise thing to do. At the present moment we have a new constitution impending and the part of the new constitution which has been most severely criticised by people who are called die-hards in the press is the transfer of law and order to the control of popular ministers and the whole of the Empire will look very critically indeed at the handling of law and order in the provinces under the new constitution.

Are we at the present moment going to weaken the hands of our future ministers in charge of law and order by compelling them to go through a process that is bound to involve delay and by preventing them from dealing rapidly with situations which will need the speediest cure and the speediest treatment? Are we going to do this foolish thing? I sincerely trust not (hear, hear). Of course the honourable mover might say as has been already said, that if the people do have opportunities of representing their case, why should we not make this a regular practice. The reason is that there are cases in which rapid procedure is absolutely necessary. There may be a serious state of affairs or communal feeling in a particular area and if it is not quickly dealt with by having additional police on the spot, there is bound to be trouble. The procedure of inviting objections and inquiry will take a considerable time as you are bound to give people sufficient time in which to make their objections. Then they will make no end of objections, against the sub-inspector, the zaildars, etc. and there will be allegations against everybody in the hope of delaying the imposition of the extra police or getting rid of it entirely. These allegations will take a long time to investigate and will delay proceedings very seriously indeed. The honourable member has refrained from mentioning the imposition of additional police on 34 villages of the Rohtak district which appears to have given birth to this motion. In that particular case, I think, the evils of delay are very seriously and very emphatically exhibited. In 1930 or 1931, there were in Rohtak district the murderous criminals Banwari and Har Phul. Banwari committed, I think, 4 murders and many dacoities if I remember aright. Har Phul committed 14 murders of 8 Hindus and 11 Muslims. We have got that in an answer to a question to-day and now we have Mughla against whom 15 murders were alleged, I think 12 cases of murder in which 15 murders had occurred. There were certainly 25 cases altogether against him of which 15 were murders. In 1931 after Banwari and Har Phul had been rounded up, His Excellency Sir Geoffrey deMontmorency went down to Rohtak district and he told the people how it has been proposed to impose additional police upon some villages of their district. I may quote his words:—

I cannot conceal from you that I think this terrible outbreak constitutes a most grave and deplorable blot on the good name of the Rohtak district, or, at any rate, on some parts of it. It is true that it is alleged that one of the chief gangs of dacoits was raised and gernealled by a person from outside this district, and that one of those alleged to have been most prominent in another of the gangs also came from outside the district. This may be so. Nevertheless, it is beyond dispute that a number of residents of this district joined these gangs and took part in their crimes. It is unfortunately also beyond controversy that the movements of the gangs and individuals connected with them were well-known to the residents of various villages in certain portions of the district; and they received shelter and help in a number of places; and numbers of people knew where the gangs kept their illicit arms and the proceeds of their crimes. Though it was realized that these gangs were a menace to the peace of the district, and that their continued activity meant the greatest peril to person and property, nevertheless neither those on whom is laid by statute the duty of co-operating with authority in giving information regarding cognizable crime and in helping to arrest its perpetrators, nor the general public, on whom a responsibility, perhaps not so precisely defined, but certainly definitely hallowed by the traditions of many a year, rests to render cognate service, did their part. There was, as I conceive it, a clear and regrettable dereliction of public duty.

His Excellency went on to say that while the imposition of additional police upon parts of the district was fully deserved,

Government has decided to place the district as a whole, and these tracts in particular, on probation.

[The Hon. Mr. D. J. Boyd.]

In 1931 the district was placed on probation. What happened after that? The life of Harphul was published in which he was extolled as a martyr and a champion of his community, an absolutely wickedly wrong attitude to take towards a murderer. The result was the outbreak of crime under Mughla who is believed to have murdered 15 people at different times over a long period, in Rohtak and Hissar, mainly in Rohtak. If the additional police which had been threatened in 1931 had been imposed on these 50 odd villages of Rohtak district at that time, I very much doubt whether we would have had the recent outbreak on the part of Mughla, who created a reign of terror throughout the district. I am fairly certain that he would never have been harboured and helped in the way in which he was helped to enable him to keep going for so many months, and commit so many crimes. It shows the evils of delay and perhaps the evil of weakness on the part of Government in refraining from doing what it really thought right at the time. I should say that 11 of the villages on which it was then proposed in 1931 to impose additional police are included in the 34 upon which we have now imposed additional police. I would ask you to remember that the present procedure gives ample opportunity for making representation, but it does not compel the Government to delay many months before taking action. I would also ask you to remember that action may be of an urgent nature in order to prevent outbreaks of lawlessness in which unfortunate innocent people suffer and I would finally ask you to remember that it is extremely inadvisable to weaken the hands of the administration when a new and democratic Government is about to take charge of law and order. (Hear hear and cheers).

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): I rise to support the motion under consideration. In fact it is a matter of surprise to me that so much opposition has been offered by Government against this innocent provision being made in the Police Act. If you condemn a man in a most rigorous manner you should take his explanation. When you dismiss a public servant drawing even a salary of Rs. 15 per mensem you call for his explanation. When you fine these people for so many years and you take away their liberty and freedom in a manner unwarranted by law, then you do not take their explanation. If you admit that you are giving them opportunities of being heard, why do you refuse this open way of making explanations. My friend, the member for Sheikhpura, for whose maiden speech I have also some appreciation has experience as an autocrat or a bureaucrat. He must not go by his experience. He says every opportunity is given to the village where additional police is imposed. Well that every opportunity must include representation by the villagers. What are the opportunities that are given to the villagers? What do you mean by the word opportunity? The deputy commissioner sits in closed doors and people go to see him, most of whom are toadies. When they see that the attitude of the deputy commissioner is in a certain way they say aye to it. The deputy commissioner puts them a question, 'what about that village, it appears to be a very bad one?' They at once say 'yes full of thieves, full of murderers, full of robbers and dacoits and unless you take strong measures against it, there will be no hope for the people.' This is the sort of inquiry held and the opportunity given to the villagers. Why not make direct inquiry? If you want to condemn a man you should hear him first. It is not a sound policy to punish a man without hearing him. The Honourable Finance Member has just now said that this procedure has been continued from year to year from the passing of the Police Act in 1861 and he says that it has worked well. I wonder if it has worked well. It has worked miserably and that is why we want a change in it. You do not know what the attitude of the people is. He has said that the state of dacoities and murders in Rohtak district furnishes an additional ground for taking action against these people. I say if you think over it calmly you may find that such actions are responsible for raising these dacoits in villages. I have not read the life of these three dacoits whom the Honourable Finance Member has mentioned, but I have read the life of another dacoit, Tantia, the Bhil. He committed so many murders and harassed the Government for so many years. I have read his life. He says that he turned a dacoit on account of the severities committed by Government upon him.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan: Which Government?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan: The Government of the province in which he was living. He was living in the Central Provinces. He said that he turned a dacoit only in order to avenge those severities which were committed on him without justification.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: When did he live?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan: During the time of the British Government. He was living in 1898 or so.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan: No.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan: If you read the lives of these men, you will find that they put down their desperate character to the grievances they had against the Government. If you punish a zamindar why do you not give him opportunity to explain? Perhaps they will be able to give good reasons. I will give you an instance of a punitive police in the Rohtak district when Mr. Gordon Walker was deputy commissioner. This is what happened. The honourable member who just now spoke in opposition to the motion did not give the full facts of such cases, but I will give the full facts. The sub-inspector for some good reason is against a village. What does he do? He lets off some people to commit thefts or minor crimes which he does not trace out and does not punish the perpetrators but he continues to bring the crimes to the notice of higher authorities. After a short time a good case is made out. The report is submitted to the superintendent of police and he always takes it personally to the deputy commissioner. I challenge the honourable member from Shahpur to show that he never received the report of the superintendent of police personally in the matter of quartering of punitive police at any locality. The superintendent says to the deputy commissioner: Here is a bad village. My sub-inspector reports that a good deal of crime is going on in the village. The whole village is rotten to the core and you must make as much haste as possible to get these men burdened with a punitive police force. The deputy commissioner never wants to fall foul with the superintendent of police. They are twin brothers each supporting the other. Just imagine what order the deputy commissioner gives to his tahsildar. He says: It is decided that this village should be burdened with the cost of a punitive police force for so many years. Report which people you want to get exempted in that village. Remember that the tahsildar is not called upon to give reason why the punitive police should or should not be quartered, but he is only to give the names of persons whom he wants to be exempted and also to give the probable cost. That is the only report that the tahsildar is called upon to make. Imagine an officer of a different department, I mean the superintendent of police coming with a report and the tahsildar is not called upon to investigate whether the inspector of police was justified in making his report. There was a case of this kind regarding two villages in the Roh-tak district. The charge was that these villages were notorious for thefts. When the report was sent to the tahsildar I looked up the list of offences and I found there were some fifty out of which perhaps, I do not remember exactly, there was a big proportion, more than forty were cases which were untraced. Those cases did not happen in the village but in the neighbouring village. I called the lambardar and said: There are some fifty cases in your village during the year. How can you expect to be exempted? He said: Not a single case has occurred in my village. Please go carefully through the list. I read it again carefully and I found that most of the cases were untraced and the thefts occurred in a village fifteen miles off. Yet the sub-inspector of police said that the thefts must have been committed by people of this village. What proof had the sub-inspector to make this charge? Absolutely none. The people of the village were prepared to swear that they knew nothing of the thefts. But the sub-inspector could not trace the offenders and the people of the village were charged. There was no help. When one recalls such an instance it is unthinkable why such an innocent resolution as this which seeks to do the barest justice should be opposed. That particular cases were not detected cannot serve as proof of the guilt of a whole set of people. We see the order of the world rapidly changing in regard to crimes. More facilities are being offered even to proved criminals. On many occasions criminals have cleared themselves of the offence of murder alleged against them. Why not allow people to clear themselves of the charge of being fit to be saddled with punitive police? They will, in most cases, make good use of the opportunity so given to them. Why should this be refused?

As for the plea that it would make for delay, I assure the House that not a single day's delay would ensue. The report is asked from the tahsildar. Let it be a report after asking the people to state their reasons against the charge. The people will submit a representation before the tahsildar and the tahsildar will then submit his report. Even if there is some delay, how does it matter in view of the great injustice you are doing to a lot of people of a particular place? It is not simply the action of a single sub-inspector of police for it reacts on the government as a whole. People never say that the particular sub-inspector is a bad man. They say that the government is bad in forcing a punitive police force. Should not the Government keep itself free from the blame? Of course the Government is not bound by the representations made to it. If Government is not convinced, throw away the representations and quarter the police straightaway. What is the harm in adopting such a procedure? I do not really understand the mentality which is responsible for insisting upon this practice except that it is the love of power which has been enjoyed for some time and which the people who have been enjoying it are chary of giving up. There is nothing else in it, no fear of delay, no perversion of procedure. Even in petty cases where a fine of Rs. 10 is imposed the naib-tahsildar tries cases for three months. Where a fine of thousands of rupees is imposed on a particular village, is it improper that some time should be allowed? (An honourable member: Meanwhile dozens of people are murdered). The gravity of the offence should be measured by the fact that the punishment is imposed upon a whole village. You may be doing an injustice not to a single individual but to the entire village. In that case it would be a salutary reform of the law to give an opportunity to the people charged to explain themselves.

The Honourable Finance Member has taken this opportunity of visualising the situation under the future constitution. I say that in view of the constitutional reform in the future it is all the more the reason why the defective practice followed all along should be rectified. Government have been experimenting with this procedure for so many years and they have failed for we know there is discontent raging on every side. We should not conceal this discontent. To conceal it would be to make the case worse. Openly face the situation. Look at the facts with a full perspective. If Government are convinced that their procedure has produced discontent, has resulted in injustice and iniquity and trouble to lots of people, they should not insist on their method because they have been following it for a long time. I think the ministers in future will know the people better and even if Government are now unwilling to yield now I trust that the first thing that ministers under the new reforms would do is to introduce the change sought to be effected by this resolution. It is a modest demand which will heighten the prestige of Government and Government should accept it with good grace and profit by the remarks made on the floor of the House. Let not Government think that the men who praise them to their face are their friends. Those who say things which Government do not cherish are Government's greater friends whose advice should be taken.

With these words I support the motion so ably moved by my honourable friend the member from Rohtak.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I move—

That the question be now put,

The motion was carried.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I congratulate my friend who has been elected to represent in this Council the district of Sheikhpura on his maiden speech. He made a very good speech, well-reasoned and well-worded and lent a very weighty support to the official view. I could not possibly have expected him to shed his official mentality so soon nor could I have expected him to have imbibed the spirit which generally characterises private members in this House so quickly after his return to the Council. However, I certainly congratulate him and heartily congratulate him on the excellent speech that he made. I wish that speech had been made for me.

I would like to answer some of the criticisms that have been offered by various members. One of the criticisms that proceeded from my honourable friend to my left was that I ought really to have brought forward a much more radical and a much more comprehensive resolution in this House to do away with all the iniquities of which the police are universally guilty. I am afraid it would be impossible for me to bring forward such a resolution and a resolution of that character would have aroused much greater opposition perhaps on much sounder grounds than the resolution which I have now proposed.

One of the reasons put forward by the Honourable Finance Member is that we should be very careful about what we say with regard to police or law and order at the present time.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : On a point of personal explanation. I did not say anything of that kind. I talked about doing and not saying anything. I said we should not weaken the powers of the future ministers in charge of law and order.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : The Honourable Finance Member says that we should not do anything which may be used by the die-hards in England—

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Pardon me. I did not say that.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I have not got his exact words but that certainly was the purport of what he said, that we should not do anything which can be easily used by the opponents of reform to say that Indians have not developed that amount of responsibility which should characterise them before they could claim the transfer of law and order to popular ministers. I think that was the general purport of what the honourable Finance Member said.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I certainly uttered no threat whatever about the effect of the remarks made in the House to-day. I said that the most criticised part of the new constitution was the transfer of law and order and I appealed to the House to do nothing which would weaken the hands of the new ministers.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : The only meaning of those remarks would be that if we did anything which seemed to weaken the hands of the new ministers, that was likely to be used by the opponents of reform in England to our detriment.

✓ The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : That was not my intention.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : That is what I understand the Honourable Finance Member to mean. I am sorry if I have not been able to catch his exact meaning. The next point is whether we are doing anything, by putting forward or passing this resolution to weaken the hands of ministers who may be in charge of law and order under the future constitution. The Honourable Finance Member had himself to admit that though formally the opportunity of making representations is not given to the people where punitive police is quartered, in fact they did get those opportunities. If in actual practice people get opportunities for which I urge a formal recognition I do not really understand the validity of the objection that has been put forward by the Honourable the Finance Member. I want formal recognition to be given in actual practice. Could there possibly be any objection in such recognition? I think not. My friend who represents ✓ Ambala in the House said that he failed to understand the mentality of official members who refuse even to accept a reasonable resolution of the character which is now under discussion. I can perfectly understand that mentality and that mentality is not to accept anything that is suggested by a non-official member unless they are compelled to.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : What about two of the three resolutions which were accepted a little while ago ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Decision had already been taken by Government and they could not very well deny in the House the validity of what they had acknowledged in action without the knowledge of private members. I do not call that acceptance of a resolution. The mentality of officials generally is not to accept a suggestion made by a private member because that in some inscrutable way is understood by them to affect their prestige. Why should they accept any suggestion made by a non-official member ? That is a feature of official mentality which is responsible for opposition to this resolution. I have not been able to understand the validity of the objection of the Honourable Finance Member when he says that in actual practice an opportunity for which I claim formal recognition exists. I say, let the people get that opportunity formally with your consent under the rules made by yourself. Will any body say no ? And yet the Honourable Member for Finance says that he is not prepared to accept this resolution.

There was a reference made to the circumstances which according to the belief of the Honourable Finance Member have induced me to move this resolution. He is perfectly right there. This resolution was certainly suggested to me by the quartering of additional police in the Rohtak district, but I fail to understand why he has sought to use that argument to justify his opposition to this resolution. He says that 32 villages have been selected for the quartering of additional police in the Rohtak district, and he has drawn attention of the House to the outbreak of criminal acts on the part of one single individual criminal. He also made a reference to the answer which Sir Geoffrey deMontmorency made in reply to a representation which was made by the people of Rohtak when he visited that district in 1981. It is true that in his reply to that representation His Excellency had said that the district was being placed on probation. But that is not the whole truth. How long was that probation to last ? That is the question and that is a very important question. I am not quite sure but I have a recollection that he had said that Government would wait and see how things shaped themselves and would come to a final decision in October next. This could only mean that the district was on probation for six months during which the Government was to make up its mind whether the district had given a good account of itself, whether the district had mended its ways or had maintained its reputation for criminality or had even enhanced that reputation for criminality.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : What do you think ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : The district, I think, has definitely improved its reputation. There is less of violent crime than there was in 1981. (An honourable member : Congratulations !) The

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

Honourable Member for Finance had made a reference to the activities of Mughla and section 15 of the Police Act. This section simply says that if Government thinks that any particular area is in a disturbed or dangerous state then it may make a certain notification and declare that on account of that disturbed and dangerous state of the area the stationing of additional police is essential and in order to give effect to that view it may take certain action. So far as any areas are concerned, they are not in a disturbed or dangerous state at all in Rohtak. The Honourable Finance Member has been able to quote only the activities of one single individual. It is true that he was a notorious offender, he was an absconder, he was responsible for a number of murders. But more than half of these murders had been committed not in Rohtak but in Hissar and Jind and Karnal. His activities naturally and legitimately caused anxiety to Government and it had every right to take such steps as were necessary to put a stop to them. But, I think I have a perfect right to suggest that the Government took this action much too late. If any action was needed that action was needed when Mughla was still at large. Mughla was arrested in May, he was tried, and he was hanged on the 25th of September, and this additional police is being quartered now in as many as 32 villages. Is there any justification? So far as the activities of Mughla are concerned, I admit that they were very wicked, they were nefarious and all that, but to sanction the quartering of additional police in as many as 32 villages on the basis of the activities of a man who is no more in this world is doing grave injustice to the people who are in a terribly low economic condition at present. On the one hand, Government makes remissions of land revenue, makes remissions of water rate, and puts forward a Bill in this House in order to give relief to the people.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : How many absconders from Rohtak are still wanted by the police? I understand there are 92 absconders from that district.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I do not know definitely the number of absconders in the Rohtak district at present, but I know that the absconders who are still at large and not arrested are absconders for cases of burglary, perhaps petty thefts.

The Honourable Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : Dacoity.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Not many, only a few; but now I think it is perfectly plain that if people of these villages had been given an opportunity of being heard they might have been able to urge things which could possibly have influenced the deputy commissioner or the commissioner or the local Government here in their action. My friend the Finance Member said that a lengthy representation was made against the quartering of additional police by myself. That representation probably was made in 1931.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I am referring to a letter I received from the honourable member which is obviously on the same subject.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I did send a letter, and a fairly detailed letter, but I am not quite sure as to its contents. I may have put forth in it the grounds which militated against the quartering of additional police. But certainly even if there was a letter from me in my individual capacity, it could not possibly have taken the place of the objections of the people themselves because I was not in a position either to consult the inhabitants of those villages or to pay a visit to those villages. If you just take these villages one by one, you will find that there are villages in which no offence has been committed during the last five years. Not one. There are villages from which there is no absconder. (An honourable member: Except harbouring). There are villages about which there were no complaints of harbouring.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: We will give you all the information, if you like, about it.

An honourable member: What about Harphul Singh?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: He was also hanged about three years ago.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I never thought that Rohtak was so criminal as has been demonstrated to-day (laughter).

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: Am I to understand that that is a ground put forward by the honourable member in order to plead his inability to support this resolution? Any way I am giving certain lines upon which inquiries can be made to redress the wrong even now. The amount of additional burden which Government has imposed upon the people is Rs. 73,000. Rupees 73,000 is not a small sum in these days. On the one hand, Government itself is committed to the position that people are in need of relief, and stand in need of immediate relief. On the other hand an additional burden of Rs. 73,000 is imposed upon as many as 32 villages in the district without giving them an opportunity of being heard. My individual letter cannot be regarded as serving the purpose of a representation from the villages concerned. I had no opportunity myself to make any detailed inquiries. I have put a certain number of questions asking whether the amount of crime in any of these villages had gone up. If it is found as a result of inquiries that any of the villages have shown a tendency of enhanced criminality there may be some justification, but that enhanced criminality should relate to the present period. It should not relate to the period six years back.

The district, as a whole also, has shown signs of distinct improvement. So far as the number of murders is concerned, roughly speaking it has gone down very considerably during the last twelve months. With the additional police there may be cases of assault either on private people or upon women or in retaliation by the people upon the police itself. That may add to the number of offences committed in the Rohtak district, but so far as the general level of criminality is concerned, I think it has definitely come down. In these circumstances it was neither fair, nor just, nor advisable to impose any fresh burden upon the people, particularly in view of the fact that the person whose activities provoked that order is no more in this world. Again I think I have a right to state in this House that the original proposals were probably made more than twelve months ago, perhaps eighteen months ago. During those twelve months if steps had been taken to find out whether people had anything to say it could have been very easily done. All this time has been spent upon figures or scrutiny of statements made on paper. There has been no living touch between the people concerned and even the head of the district, what to speak of the head of the department here.

6 P.M.

I do not think the District Magistrate sent for anybody from the villages concerned. I do not think that the head of the district even paid a visit to these villages with this specific object. They were not told that unless they improved their ways punitive police would be imposed on them. After all, what is the good of quartering punitive police unless you impress upon the people the reasons which account for your action. The Honourable Member for Finance has stated that this additional police was a preventive and not a punitive measure. What do you wish to prevent? There is nothing abnormal in the district. Criminal offences in the Rohtak district have gone down, they have not gone up. The villagers concerned have not done anything except, perhaps, in the way of harbouring the Mughlas in some cases. But all the villages were not guilty of harbouring Mughlas or anybody else. (An honourable member: Name those villages). It would perhaps be possible for me to answer that question if I were to sit down and think calmly about all the villages and then carry my recollection back to the activities of those villages. But I may say this that if the Government were to make enquiries as to the number of offences committed in those villages, whether of harbouring or others, it would find that in many of the villages no offence has been committed for years. (An honourable member: That is not quite accurate). It may not be quite accurate, I admit, because as I have already said I have not been able to go into the detailed history of the crimes committed by the various villages. But that is my general impression and that is the general opinion prevailing in those areas. It is on the basis of my general impression and the general prevailing opinion that I am speaking. I may be wrong here and there, but I am sure I am right in respect of some villages even though I may be wrong in respect of others. (An honourable member: The time is up and it will be well if the honourable member finishes his speech soon). Very well, I will accept the advice of the honourable member and close my speech.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: I wish to say only one sentence. The honourable member just mentioned about the big sum of Rs. 73,000 which is to be imposed upon 34 villages, but he has not said a word about the very heavy burden upon the whole province. Something like 100 reserve police had to be taken from the Attock, Gurgaon and other districts of the province and they had to suffer while Rohtak carried on its way.

Mr. President: The question is—

This Council recommends to the Government that before a force of punitive police is quartered at any place the inhabitants of that place should be supplied in writing with a statement of the grounds on which punitive action is based and of the term for which and the strength at which it is proposed to quarter the said force in order that the said inhabitants may have an opportunity of making such representation as they consider necessary and the local Government may have before it the other side of the picture when final orders are passed.

The motion was lost.

The Council then adjourned till 2 P. M. on Thursday, the 25th of October 1934.

- (c) whether it is a fact that on the date of the interview they were not sent for to be interviewed ;
- (d) if so, the reasons why they were not allowed to be interviewed ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Since 1931 bona fide residents of the Punjab who have passed the Intermediate Examination (Medical Group) of the Aligarh University have been eligible for admission to the King Edward Medical College on equal terms with students from the Punjab University. There is no rule requiring the admission in any year of any specified number of students from the Aligarh University.

(c) and (d) All applicants for admission are required to present themselves personally at the college on a fixed date. Interviews are not, however, in practice given to those candidates whose papers show their qualifications to be definitely inferior to those of other applicants. A-CLASS LOCAL MANAGERS IN THE ELECTRICITY BRANCH.

3664. Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) the number of budgetted posts in the cadre of A Class (1st class) Local Managers in the Electricity Branch of the Public Works Department for the financial years 1933-34 and 1934-35, respectively ;

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang :

(a) 1933-34	12
1934-35	12

(b) This part of the question is not quite clear, but if the honourable member wants to know whether all Grade I appointments were filled up by officers appointed permanently to that grade, the answer is that two posts were not so filled, but were filled temporarily by men holding appointments in Grade II who were allowed to work against those posts.

(c) Yes.

A-CLASS LOCAL MANAGERS IN THE ELECTRICITY BRANCH.

3665. Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government please state—

- (a) the number of vacancies that occurred in the cadre of A class (1st class) Local Managers in the Electricity Branch of Public Works Department during the financial years 1933-34 and 1934-35 respectively ;
- (b) how many of these posts fell vacant owing to voluntary resignation by persons holding them and how many vacancies in this grade were the result of departmental action taken against persons holding these posts ;
- (c) how many of these vacancies were filled up by importing persons from outside the department and how many of them were filled by the promotion of persons already working in the B class (2nd class) cadre of the Local Managers ; in case none of the B class Local Managers were so promoted, whether none of them was considered to be efficient enough to fill up these vacant posts ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang :

(a) 1933-34	3
1934-35	3

(b) Of the above 6 vacancies, one was due to voluntary resignation, two were the result of departmental action against certain employees, one was due to the promotion of a Local Manager, Grade I, to a higher post, one was against a leave reserve post and the sixth against a temporary post sanctioned for one year.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, PANIPAT.

3667. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state--

- (a) whether the members of the Panipat municipal committee have been allotted large sums of money for each ward for repairing and paving lanes in their own respective wards and executing the work under their direct control and supervision without any estimate ;
- (b) whether they have been directly purchasing bricks, cement and other material from the suppliers according to their own choice without a supply order indent and even without an agreement ;
- (c) whether they have been presenting bills several months after the completion of such works with insufficient details of cost and sanctioning them despite numerous irregularities ;
- (d) whether such works were noted in the Measurement Book ; if so, how long after completion thereof ; why the works were not measured while in progress ;
- (e) whether bricks, cement and other material purchased for these amani works were entered in the Stock Book to show their gradual supply and consumption ;
- (f) whether the auditors have not been taking exception to the above irregularities from year to year in their audit and objection notes ;
- (g) how much loss has occurred to the committee during the last five years through this irregular practice ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) No. In 1929-30 as an experimental measure certain of the members were authorised to effect the execution of repairs to the pavement of lanes within their wards. For this purpose the requisite funds were sanctioned, on estimates prepared in advance. On the completion of the works payment was made to the suppliers of material and labour.

(b) No. The material was supplied under the directions of the Secretary and was checked by the members.

(c) No bills were presented by the members.

(d) No. The works were not noted in the measurement books, but comparative statements were prepared to show the profit and loss on the work actually done. No measurements are taken while the work is in progress, but measurements are made on the completion of the work.

(e) No, for the reason that in 1929 stock books were not kept.

(f) An audit objection was raised against the action of the Committee referred to in the reply to part (a) of the question. The Committee satisfied the auditors and the objection was not repeated.

(g) The so-called irregular practice was tried during a single year only. No loss is reported to have resulted from it.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, PANIPAT.

3668. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state--

- (a) whether it is not a fact that in the Panipat municipality payments have been made for labour, earth and sand during the last fifteen or twenty years, at one and the same rate, despite considerable fall in the market rates ;

- (b) whether it is not a fact that one Ibrahim alias Jajul, potter, has been enjoying the sole monopoly for supplying earth and sand for the last 15 or 20 years at an unfluctuated rate, and when this time honoured practice was objected to, the said Jajul was substituted by his own brother Mohammad Siddiq ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) No.

(b) No.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, PANIPAT.

3669. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state whether it is true that in the Panipat municipality the whole amount reserved for roads in the budget for 1933-34 was bound down by giving certain contracts in May 1933, although the financial year had still ten months to run its course, and consequently when M. Ijaz-un-Nabi Khan, late president, took over charge on 16th May 1933 there were no funds available for repairs of the more important roads ? What were the reasons for this hasty measure ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : No. In the 1933-34 budget the provision under head " VII—Municipal Works " was Rs. 11,200. Out of this sum no more than Rs. 4,577 was expended in May 1933.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, PANIPAT.

3670. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) who were responsible for the forged and fictitious tender for lighting contract presented in the name of Dhola in time of M. Ijaz-un-Nabi Khan, late president of the Panipat municipal committee, as also for other irregularities reported by that officer ;
- (b) whether certain serious allegations were made by a number of contractors in the joint application submitted to the Deputy Commissioner, Karnal, in the time of M. Ijaz-un-Nabi Khan, late president ;
- (c) whether a thorough inquiry into the matter was made, if not whether an enquiry is going to be made in the matter ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The matter is under correspondence with the Commissioner. A final reply will be communicated to the honourable member as soon as the facts have been ascertained.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, PANIPAT.

3671. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state the total amount paid from the municipal funds from time to time to Abdul Hakim, contractor, and Jajul, potter, for various contracts of works and supplies of the Panipat municipality during the last five years ?

Will he please lay on the table a statement showing the works and the payments of each year ?

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, PANIPAT.

3672. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state whether meetings of the municipal committee, Panipat, recorded in the minute book as having been held in the municipal hall were held at Tahsil premises?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : No. During the last five years only three meetings of the Panipat committee have been held in the Tahsil premises (on the 11th August, 1929, the 28th January, 1930, and the 11th January, 1932). The minute book expressly mentions the fact that these meetings were held at the Tahsil.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, PANIPAT.

3673. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that for the consolidation of a portion of a circular road from Tel Dhal Gate to Chul Khan Gate and other roads at Panipat metalled within the last two or three years.

certain contractors were paid for supplying of kankar at the rate of more distant quarry than one from which kankar was actually brought? If so, why the excess amount should not be recovered from those responsible for this irregularity and abuse of public money;

(b) whether the committee satisfied itself before making payments of bill that Government royalty had been duly paid by the contractors for the kankar supplied by them. If not, who is responsible for the omission;

(c) what roads and at what cost were repaired and consolidated during the last five years? Does their present condition show the least trace of the work done?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) No.

(b) Under the Punjab Minor Minerals Rules the Government royalty has to be deposited in advance, and no person is permitted to quarry kankar unless the patwari is satisfied that the dues have been paid. In such circumstances it would be superfluous for a municipal committee, before paying bills for kankar, to embark on inquiries whether or not the contractors have paid the royalty. Actually there appears no reason to believe that any of the Panipat committee's contractors have evaded the payment of royalty.

(c) Statements containing the requisite information are laid on the table. All the roads shown as repaired or constructed are in good condition except three of them which require patch repairs.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, PANIPAT.

3674. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that a sum of about Rs. 45 due on account of terminal tax on brasswares exported to Delhi by motor lorry was reported in June, 1933, to have been embezzled by the municipal staff of Panipat, but no punishment has been meted out to the defaulter ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : On the 26th June, 1933, one of the members of the Panipat Committee made a report to the president that the greater part of the terminal tax payable on a consignment of brass goods exported to Delhi on the 12th May, 1933, had been embezzled by the barrier staff. The Finance sub-committee, who investigated the case, came to the conclusion that the full tax had been credited to the municipal fund, Re. 0-14-0 on the morning of the 13th May, 1933, and Rs. 49-8-9 on the afternoon of the same day. The conduct of the municipal secretary in connection with this case formed one of the charges in departmental proceedings which were subsequently taken against him and which have since led to his dismissal (in April last). An appeal by the secretary against his dismissal is at present pending with the Commissioner of Ambala. The municipal committee has deferred its own final opinion on the alleged embezzlement until the decision of the secretary's appeal.

- (b) whether the Government has made enquiries into the allegations ;
- (c) whether those allegations were found true ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes, it is a fact that a Muslim deputation waited upon the Deputy Commissioner, Hoshiarpur, and the Commissioner, Jullundur Division, and had also furnished some facts and figures showing how the number of non-Muslim voters had been increased in the case of the Hoshiarpur Municipality. They also put in written representations in this respect which were summarily enquired into and rejected both by the Deputy Commissioner, Hoshiarpur, and the Commissioner, Jullundur Division.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) The number of lecturers on the staff of the Amritsar School is eight. One of these is a Muslim.

The examinations are conducted by the Punjab Medical Faculty, not by the staff of the School.

(c) A statement containing the required information is laid on the table, Statement showing the number of students of Medical School, Amritsar, who succeeded in passing the final professional examination (years 1928 to 1934).

- (b) whether the sanction of the Commissioner was obtained before building these stables ;
- (c) if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes. The buildings are temporary ones, constructed by the Municipal Engineer on a small plot of land leased to him by the municipal committee for the purpose. The lease, which was approved by the municipal committee in two resolutions passed respectively on the 16th November 1933 and the 25th January 1934, was for two years on a rent of Rs. 6 per marla per annum.

(b) By its resolution of the 16th November 1933 the municipal committee sought the Commissioner's permission in the terms of section 48 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911. The permission was accorded in a letter issued by the Commissioner on the 28rd May 1934.

(c) It is understood that the Municipal Engineer constructed his buildings before the receipt of the permission which had been sought from the Commissioner. If so, there would seem to have been a technical impropriety, but the matter does not appear to be of great importance.

(b) The cost price of the boiler was approximately Rs. 8,000. It was sold this year for Rs. 1,200.

(d) There is no such document as referred to in this part of the question.

(f) The report having been returned by Government to the local officers for certain further enquiries is not available in the Secretariat, and it is, therefore, regretted that it cannot be laid on the table. It can, if so required, be laid on the table at some future sitting of the Council unless on examination it is considered not to be in the public interest to do so.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : May I know whether the majority or minority reports mentioned here are confidential ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I never said so, did I ? Only they cover 85 closely typed foolscap pages.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) and (b) Times of opening of inundation canals mean little. The correct criterion is the average monthly supply run, over a period of years. The average monthly supplies run under inundation conditions (average of 5 years 1921—1925) as compared with the average supplies run under weir controlled conditions (1930—34) are :—

	Inundation.	Sutlej Valley Project.

- (c) which method is more accurate ;
- (d) whether it is not a fact that the self-cultivating proprietor is prejudiced by the method of calculating net assets given in the assessment rules, 1929 ; if so, whether the Government is prepared to change it ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Yes ;

(b) it is open to the honourable member to draw his own conclusion after studying the two documents referred to ;

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Member for Finance kindly state whether Government has ever taken any step, and, if it has not, whether it has any objection to taking necessary steps now to ascertain in the number of cinema houses in the towns of Lahore, Amritsar, Multan, Sialkot, Rawalpindi, Jullundur, Ludhiana, Ferozepore and Ambala, the average daily attendance at each of these houses and the income which will accrue by the levy of a fee of 6½ per cent. on the price of each ticket issued ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The information has been collected, but further consideration of the proposal to levy such a vend fee was postponed until such time as the financial condition of the province makes it absolutely necessary. PUNITIVE POLICE IN ROHTAK DISTRICT.

✓*3728. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Member for Finance kindly state the grounds on which punitive police has been stationed in each of the 33 villages selected for punishment in the Rohtak district, whether the inhabitants of these villages were given an opportunity to show cause why additional police should not be quartered in their villages, or whether any intimation of the grounds necessitating punitive police was sent to the villagers at all ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The imposition of additional police at the cost of 33 villages in the Rohtak district and 3 mohallas of Rohtak city was necessitated by the assistance given by the inhabitants to a succession of desperate outlaws of whom the last and most notorious was Moghla, who, from 1932 up to the 15th May 1934, when he was arrested, was responsible for 15 murders or attempted murders in addition to 1 dacoity and 2 robberies. In consequence of the harbouring of the outlaws Banwari and Harphul and the occurrence of a large number of dacoities in the district in the year 1930, a proposal to impose additional police on 55 villages in the district, including 11 of those on which additional police have now been imposed, was prepared in 1931. Government decided, however, to give the district a chance to report, and in reply to an address presented to him at Rohtak on the 15th April 1931 by the District Zamindars League, Sir Geoffrey deMontmorency administered an unmistakable warning of the consequence of continued failure to assist the authorities in controlling crime. Unfortunately no heed was paid to this grave warning, and the outlaw Moghla was freely harboured and assisted and thereby enabled to escape arrest for a period of two years. It will thus be seen that the reasons which would necessitate the imposition of additional police were intimated to the inhabitants of the Rohtak district as a whole in most unmistakable terms some two and-a-half years before the additional police were actually imposed, and that the inhabitants of the villages concerned had every opportunity to render the imposition of the additional police unnecessary by co-operating with the authorities.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member's attention is invited to paragraph (iv) of Council question No. 8254¹, dated 26th June 1934. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Can the Honourable Member give the reason why the agriculturist wanted to sell his land ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Probably his creditors were pressing him.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : The Deputy Commissioner should not have sanctioned the sale.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The proper remedy then would be to have recourse to law.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Cannot the Revenue Member or the Financial Commissioner review the case of their own accord and revise the orders of sanction ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Why should the Financial Commissioner do so ?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Because there has been the violation of the Punjab Land Alienation Act.

(b) With the advent of the canal, spring levels in this tract commenced to rise and the fact has been under notice since then.

(c) and (k) On the whole, observations show that the subsoil water level has become steady, and that water-logging is not on the increase ; although abnormal rainfall does accentuate conditions. Lakhanwali village was evacuated about 1926.

- (c) if any enquiry was made and with what result ;
- (d) what reply, if any, the Registrar sent to Agha Sher Afghan Khan ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) Yes.

(b) An enquiry was conducted through the Deputy Registrar.

(c) The allegations were found to be false and malicious.

(d) The Registrar informed Agha Sher Afghan Khan of this finding.

CIRCLE REGISTRAR OF CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES, AMBALA.

3748. Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

(a) whether it is a fact that in July 1933 and again in August 1933, S. Mohammad Yakub Khan, Director of the Central Co-operative Bank, Ludhiana, tabled a censure motion against the Circle Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Ambala, and the said motion was put on the Bank agenda ;

(b) whether the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Punjab, asked the Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana, that such things should not be allowed ;

(c) whether the Registrar enquired from the mover his reasons for proceeding as such ;

(d) the reasons for the Registrar's action ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : Government has no information as the proceedings of co-operative institutions are not under its control.

CIRCLE REGISTRAR OF CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES, AMBALA.

3749. Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

(a) whether it is a fact that after the publication of the pamphlet mentioned in question No. 3747 above and after censure motion was tabled by Agha Sher Afghan Khan and Sardar Mohammad Yakub Khan of Ludhiana, an election petition was made to the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Punjab, against the election of the aforesaid gentleman to the Ludhiana Central Co-operative Bank directorate ;

(b) whether the Registrar sent the said election petition to the Circle Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Ambala, for disposal ;

(c) whether the Registrar, Punjab, received a transfer application supported by affidavits by these gentlemen ;

(d) whether the Government will kindly lay a copy of the said application on the table together with the order of the Registrar on it ;

(e) whether the Registrar, Punjab, received a transfer application from Sardar Gurnam Singh, a director of the Central Co-operative Bank, Ludhiana, against whom also the said election petition referred to in (a) above was made, and he also requested that the said election petition be transferred from the Circle Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Ambala, to some other officer ;

- (f) the Registrar's order on the transfer application of Sardar Gurnam Singh ;
- (g) whether the Circle Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Ambala, then on the basis of the said election petition sent a restraint order to the Central Co-operative Bank, Ludhiana, and the gentlemen referred to above to the effect that they were not allowed to participate in any function as directors of the Central Co-operative Bank, Ludhiana, or attend its meetings ;
- (h) if answer to (g) above be in the affirmative, whether the Circle Registrar, Co-operative Societies, Ambala, was empowered to issue such restraint orders ; if so, under what rule ;
- (i) whether the Registrar, Punjab, in view of the restraint order, which he afterwards cancelled, refused to transfer the said election petition from the Circle Registrar, Ambala, to some other officer ;
- (j) whether the said election petition was made under bye-law No. 18 of the Central Co-operative Bank, Ludhiana, and whether Government will kindly lay a copy of the said bye-law on the table ;
- (k) the final order of the Circle Registrar, Ambala, on that election petition, placing a copy of his order on the table ;
- (l) whether the Registrar, Punjab, revised the order of the Circle Registrar, Ambala, on the election petition, and what was his order ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) Yes ; but the application in question was not an election petition, but a dispute referred to the Registrar under Rule 18 of the Rules under the Co-operative Societies Act.

(b) The Assistant Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Ambala, himself exercises the full powers of a Registrar in such matters, and the application was therefore sent to him for disposal.

(c) Yes.

(d) Copies are laid on the table.

(e) Yes.

(f) Copies are laid on the table.

(g) The Assistant Registrar in summoning the gentlemen in question for the hearing of the dispute directed them to refrain from exercising their functions as Directors of the Central Bank pending its decision.

(h) and (i) It is a matter of doubt whether such an order of restraint could be passed in a case of this nature and, in view of this doubt, on application being made to the Registrar he requested the Assistant Registrar to withdraw it. The passing of the restraint order constituted no ground for a transfer of the dispute nor was it made a ground for any application for transfer.

[Hon. Sir Jogendra Singh.]

(j) As stated above the application was not an election petition, but the reference of a dispute between members of a co-operative society under the provision of the Co-operative Societies Act and the rules thereunder. It alleged a breach of by-law No. 18 of the Ludhiana Central Co-operative Bank, a copy of which is laid on the table.

(k) A copy of the Assistant Registrar's award is laid on the table.

(l) A petition for revision of the order was made to the Registrar, although there is no legal provision for such revision. The Registrar rejected the petition and a copy of his order is laid on the table.

Transfer application from the arbitrator Mr. Iqbal Singh, A.R., of the so-called election petition under by-law 18 filed by the applicant and named as respondent by the A. R. Mr. Iqbal Singh.

Sir,

The grounds of transfer are as follows :—

1. That the enmity of the A. R. is patent with the petitioner (affidavit attached). The petitioner has tabled inter alia a censure motion against the A. R., and that he (the petitioner) and S. Joginder Singh, Pleader, member District Board and Managing Director, L. C. C. Bank, have tabled a motion against the A. R. and his staff.
2. That the arbitrator (Mr. Iqbal Singh) tried hard to oust the petitioner from the Bank Committee in the last election in March 1933.
3. That Agha Sher Afgan Khan, Director, a defendant in the said so-called election petition, has openly pamphleteered against the anti-Muslim activities of the A. R. (Mr. Iqbal Singh).
4. That other prominent Muslim gentlemen, societies and papers have written and are writing against A. R.'s anti-Muslim machinations.
5. That the A. R. has got this frivolous application filed and illegally restrained the petitioner from attending Bank meetings which inherently shows his implicable enmity towards the petitioner.
6. That the petitioner shall summon the A. R. as his witness to prove A. R.'s part in this show.
7. That the application per se is a farce and ultra vires.
8. That to further harass the petitioner the A. R. has summoned him to Ambala, whereas the petition should be heard where the alleged invalidity was committed. This is another glaring instance of his despotic bias and prejudice.
9. That the A. R. has not supplied the petitioner with a copy of the so-called election petition, and has asked for the production of defence which is palpably illegal and harassing.
10. That the A. R. has summoned the petitioner to Ambala on the 2nd September 1933 to decide the said frivolous petition summarily in one sitting, whereas dates should have been fixed for striking issues and then for hearing the parties and arguments. This is another instance of his incompetency to hear such petition and his zeal to wrong the petitioner.
11. That in May last when the arbitrator (A. R.) tried to square up all the differences, created and originated by his despotic activities with the petitioner, he was rebuffed by defendant No. 1 and the petitioner when he vainly attempted to outwit both of us at a special tea given in honour of saving him (A. R.) from further annihilation.

Therefore, it is requested that in view of the above facts the petitioner has no faith in the arbitrator the O. R., the so-called election petition be transferred to some other official of British descent, and that it be heard and decided if it is so considered, at Ludhiana.

I solemnly affirm that what is given above is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

S. GURNAM SINGH and others, Directors of Ludhiana Central Co-operative Bank.

SIR,

I respectfully beg to apply for the transfer of election petition of Dr. Jodh Singh from S. Iqbal Singh, Assistant Registrar, who has rendered himself unfit for such arbitration on the following grounds:—

1. That the Assistant Registrar on account of his enmity with myself has made the applicant to file this application.
2. That I have in the meeting opposed the unreasonable demands of the Assistant Registrar's party which opposed me in the last general election in accordance to the Assistant Registrar's wishes.
3. That the Assistant Registrar some three months back tried to patch up his differences with me and other defendants in this petition, but he met with retorts because he wanted to play upon us fraudulently.
4. That despite Assistant Registrar's opposition I voted for the formation of Managing Committee and verifying sub-committee.
5. That notwithstanding Assistant Registrar's sponsoring the Shena C. O. scheme, I voted for dropping this question on most reasonable grounds.
6. That the Assistant Registrar by the help of his party got an article published against myself and my colleagues in the daily Sikh Sewak of Amritsar.
7. That the Assistant Registrar has got published several pamphlets against my relatives, the proprietor Khalsa Boot Botes, with a view to putting pressure upon me and bringing me round to his own views.
8. That the Assistant Registrar has issued an illegal restraint order which reflects his innate enmity with myself.

Therefore it is requested that the said election be transferred to some other responsible officer.

I have passed orders on two similar applications to-day. The same orders will apply.

(Order of the Registrar on the transfer application).

Transfer application filed by Muhammad Yaqub Khan, B.A., LL.B., in connection with a petition under bye-law 18 of the Central Co-operative Bank, Limited, Ludhiana.

An application has been made to Sardar Iqbal Singh acting with the powers of a Registrar calling in dispute the validity of the election of the Directors of the Central Co-operative Bank, Limited, Ludhiana. This dispute has to be decided by the Registrar, Sardar Iqbal Singh, under provisions of the Co-operative Societies Act and rules thereunder. The applicant S. Muhammad Yaqub Khan is one of the three members against whom the application is being made. He has applied to me to order transfer of the case to some officer other than Sardar Iqbal Singh on the grounds that that officer is hostile to him and he, therefore, does not expect justice at his hands. He goes so far as to allege that the application has been filed at the instance of Sardar Iqbal Singh himself.

[25TH OCT. 1934.]

[Hon. Sir Jogendra Singh.]

There is, as a matter of fact, no provision in the Act or the notified rules to empower such a transfer. In such cases the Assistant Registrar is himself exercising the full powers of a Registrar under the Act. I have, however, considered the application on its merits, and I see no reason why it should not be decided by Sardar Iqbal Singh. The allegation that S. Iqbal Singh is inimical to the applicant, is supported first by a bare affidavit that this is in fact the case, and, secondly, by various statements that the applicant himself has made accusations against the Assistant Registrar. The consequence, therefore, of such a claim as this would be that any person can oust the jurisdiction of an officer by the simple expedient of entering upon a campaign of unscrupulous defamation against that officer and thereupon alleging that this proves that there is hostility between them. I am well aware of the campaign which the applicant and others have been carrying on against the Assistant Registrar, Ambala, but I have no evidence that the Assistant Registrar himself is in any way hostilely disposed to the applicants. I reject the application. The applicant to be informed.

(Order of the Registrar on the revision application.)

By submitting this as an application for revision, the petitioner has recognized the fact that no appeal lies from the order in question, which was given by the Assistant Registrar exercising the powers of Registrar. Nor in fact is there any legal provision for revision of such an order. On another application in connection with this case I exercised my general powers of control over Assistant Registrars, and requested the withdrawal of an interim restraint order. I should only take such action where there has been a patent miscarriage of justice, and on going carefully through this case, I can find no evidence that such miscarriage has occurred. I am, in fact, satisfied that the Assistant Registrar's interpretation of the by-laws and his findings of fact are correct; his decision follows inevitably.

I therefore reject this application. The applicant should be informed.

- (c) what action in view of the police enquiry Government proposes to take as regards the feasibility of retaining this officer in Government service, especially in the Co-operative Department ;
- (d) whether Government is aware that previously the Registrar, Punjab, received many applications from co-operators of Jagraon tahsil against this officer and also a demi-official from Mr. F. A. Connor, late Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana ; what action the Government took or now proposes to take ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) Yes.

(b) For self-protection ; but the District Magistrate did not grant the licence.

(c) No police enquiry was held, which could be made the basis of any action against the official.

(d) Some complaints were made, but on investigation they proved to be baseless. There is no record of the demi-official letter.

Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof : Was any police inquiry made ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : No, no police inquiry was held.

- (c) what enquiry, if any, was held by the Registrar into such applications and through whom and with what result ;

[Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof.]

(d) whether it is a fact that a clash occurred amongst the co-operators of Sherpur Kalan Co-operative Credit Society, tahsil and district Ludhiana, and people were challaned in May last ;

(e) the cause of the clash referred to in (d) above ?

MUSLIM DEPUTATION AT LUDHIANA ON THE REGISTRAR, CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES.

(b) the submissions of the deputationists, and whether the Registrar promised to look into those allegations ;

(c) the result of the enquiry, if any, made by the Registrar and the name of the officer who was deputed to make the enquiry ;

(d) what action Government proposes to take if the result of those enquiries supports the version of the deputationists ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) Yes ; but the deputation was representative of certain city societies only, and not of the district.

(b) That Muslims were unfairly treated by officers of the Department, e.g., that fewer societies were formed among Muslims than non-Muslims, that the credit limits of Muslim societies were unjustifiably reduced, etc.

(c) The Registrar enquired personally into the allegations by reference to the statistics maintained, and found them to be unjustified.

(d) Does not arise.

CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK, LUDHIANA.

3753. Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

(a) how many persons in 1934 applied for buying one share each of the Central Co-operative Bank, Ludhiana ;

(c) whether in 1933 and previously the Central Co-operative Bank, Ludhiana, sold by transfer one share each to every such buyer ;

(d) whether it is not against the registered bye-laws of the said Bank to refuse allotting one share ;

(e) whether the Registrar received any protest from any of those who were thus rejected, and what action he took ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a), (b) and (c) These questions relate to the internal working of a co-operative bank, information about which is not available.

(d) No. The Bank has absolute discretion in the admission or exclusion of applicants for membership.

(e) No protest appears to have been received by the Registrar.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN THE DIRECTORATE OF CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK, LUDHIANA.

3754. Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

(a) the number of directors community-wise in the Central Co-operative Bank, Ludhiana, in January 1932 and in May 1934 ;

(b) what action Government proposes to take if the representation of any one community has gone low ; and the reasons for such low representation ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a)—

	Hindus.	Muhammadans.	Sikhs.	Christian.
January 1932 ..	1	5	6	1
May 1934	5	8	..

(b) None ; as Government has no control over the election of directors of co-operative banks, which is carried out by open election in a general meeting of shareholders. It may, however, be pointed out that Muslim representation as against non-Muslims is fully proportionate to their membership in the bank.

CO-OPERATIVE CREDIT SOCIETIES IN AMBALA AND LUDHIANA.

3755. Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, SHERPUR KALAN.

3758. Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the co-operative society, village Sherpur Kalan, tahsil and district Ludhiana, twice wired and afterwards submitted detailed accounts to the Registrar, Punjab, and complained against the local co-operative staff that they, backed by the Circle Registrar, Ambala, tried to create dissensions in the society ;

- (f) whether it is not a fact that the said society is working very satisfactorily, and rose from 'C' to 'B' class through the good management of the present managing committee ;
- (g) whether it is a fact that after the said wires were sent to the Registrar, an enquiry under section 35 of the Act was ordered ;
- (h) the reasons for ordering an enquiry under section 35 of the Act ;
- (i) whether Government will lay on the table the enquiries made by the Circle Registrar into the part played by the local co-operative staff, Ludhiana, in connection with the affairs of the Sherpur Kalan Society, district and tahsil Ludhiana ;
- (j) whether it is not a fact that the said society repeatedly requested the Registrar either to hold an enquiry personally or through some impartial officer, other than the Circle Registrar, and also informed the Registrar that the allegations were based on very reliable, oral and documentary evidence ;
- (k) if answer to (j) above be in the affirmative whether the Government will lay on the table a copy of the reply of the Registrar given to the said society ;
- (l) whether it is a fact that the president of the Sherpur Kalan Society, tahsil and district Ludhiana, bound himself to pay the expenses of the Registrar incurred on the journey from his own pocket, in case the enquiry was conducted by the Registrar personally and the allegation found baseless ;
- (m) if reply to (l) above be in the affirmative, the reasons of the Registrar for rejecting such a request ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) The leaders of one faction in the co-operative society mentioned sent a telegram and an application in May last to the Registrar alleging that the local subordinate staff were creating dissensions. These applications contained no allegations against the Circle Registrar.

(b) Yes ; as stated there were no allegations against the Circle Registrar personally.

(c) The Circle Registrar after enquiry concluded that the complaints were without foundation.

(d) and (e) The Circle Registrar called for a report from the Inspector, who had detailed knowledge of the society extending over a considerable period.

(f) No.

(g) Yes.

(h) Because the party in question, a father and his two sons, had obtained control over the society and were using their power to harass other members. The financial interests of the society were being subordinated to the satisfaction of personal feuds.

(i) It is not in the public interest to lay such record on the table.

[Hon. Sir Jogendra Singh.]

(j) A second application was then made to the Registrar, which was sent to the Deputy Registrar, Jullundur, for inquiry and report.

(k) An intermediate reply was given to the society that on conclusion of the inquiry, under section 35, suitable orders would be passed. At the same time the Deputy Registrar started to make personal inquiries, which are still proceeding.

(l) The President did make such an offer in the course of his application.

(m) Because the Registrar had full confidence in the ability of the Deputy Registrar to conduct the necessary inquiries, and himself had other pre-occupations of greater importance.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

RE-APPOINTMENT OF RETRENCHED CLERKS IN IRRIGATION DEPARTMENT.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state—

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) No.

(c) No further action is considered to be necessary.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUININE.

1001. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state :—

- (a) whether it is a fact that quinine under the name of Ethylchin and Aspirin are being manufactured in the Punjab, if so, by whom and where ;
- (b) whether these articles have been placed on the market for sale ;
- (c) whether Government expert has examined these articles ; if so, what is his opinion regarding them ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes, by Indian Chemical Manufacturers Limited (outside Sheranwala Gate, Lahore).

(b) Yes.

(c) The drugs have been analysed by the Chemical Examiner to Government, Punjab, and his opinion is as follows :—

'Ethylchin'.—These tablets contain five grains Quinine Ethylcarbonate (Euquinine). They are very hard, and absorption will be in consequence diminished. The manufacturers have not used the correct excipient. It is possible for these tablets to pass through the whole alimentary tract without breaking up.

'Aspirin'.—Acid Acetyl-Salicylic (Aspirin) conforms with the British Pharmacopoeia tests.

MOSQUITOES IN LAHORE.

1002. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state :—

- (a) what portions of the Lahore municipal area, and during what season, can be said to be free from mosquitoes ;
- (b) what portions of this area, during what season, can be said to be heavily invaded by mosquitoes ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) The city proper is practically free from mosquitoes during the winter and during the months of extreme dry heat.

(b) The outskirts of Lahore, including the civil station and the "new abadis", are infested with mosquitoes during the spring and monsoon seasons.

LOW PLACES IN LAHORE.

1003. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state :—

- (a) whether there are any low places within municipal area of Lahore where rain water collects and stagnates for many days ; if so, what is their number and what is their locality ;

[Mr. E. Mayadas]

- (b) whether there are some low places in Lahore municipal area and if rain water did collect therein during 1933 from how many of them it was pumped out in order to dry the place and prevent mosquitoes from breeding ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) A list of such depressions is attached. The honourable member will doubtless realise that the enumerating of depressions over an area of the extent of the Lahore municipality must be a somewhat arbitrary proceeding.

(b) Government understand that during the monsoon of 1933 the Lahore Municipal Committee made arrangements to drain 80 depressions in which water was stagnating.

THE PUNJAB ANTI-BEGGARY BILL.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain (North-East Towns, Non-Muhammadan, Urban): Sir, I beg to move—

That leave be granted to introduce the Punjab Anti-Beggary Bill.

¹See Appendix A.

Mr. President : The motion is—

That leave be granted to introduce the Punjab Anti-Beggary Bill.

Has any honourable member any objection to the leave being granted ?

No objection being raised the motion was carried.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Sir, I introduce the Punjab Anti-Beggary Bill.

THE PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move—

That leave be granted to introduce the Punjab Alienation of Land (Amendment) Bill.

Mr. President : The motion is—

That leave be granted to introduce the Punjab Alienation of Land (Amendment) Bill.

Is there any objection to the leave being granted ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan (Revenue Member) : Yes, Sir.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : In asking for leave to introduce the Bill I want to make one or two very brief observations in support of it. The reckless manner in which permission has been given throughout the Punjab for alienating the land of the agriculturists to non-agriculturists is appalling. In the district of Gujrat alone from 1930 to 1934, 125 permissions were given alienating an area of land about 450 kanals of the value of some 4 lakhs of rupees. When these are the figures for one place known as Pindi Baha-ud-Din, the matter becomes still more serious. There is another village named Kandawala in the same tahsil in which 107 kanals were allowed to be alienated in this manner by means of 97 sanctions. There is one case in these figures which is more serious. There is the case of a man who wanted to sell his land to one Bishan Singh, a non-agriculturist. He put down his debt at many times more than the original one in order that sanction may be practicable and that sanction may be given as a matter of course. This debt was ten times of the original one and on the strength of the debt being so exorbitant the man was confident that he would get the sanction, but the deputy commissioner refused it. The result was that the man who had offered to purchase the land brought a suit for the recovery of Rs. 12,000 from the same man whereas the real debt was about one-tenth of this sum.

3 P. M.

A suit was brought for the recovery of Rs. 12,000 and the attention of the deputy commissioner was drawn to the fact that this poor man would be ruined miserably and that something ought to be done to save him. So the deputy commissioner had at last to give sanction for the sale of this land. These are the ways in which things are done to defeat the provisions of the Land Alienation Act. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram when he made his speech in March last on this subject said that in the Hissar district permission to alienate 400 bighas of land was given. In the Mianwali district permission to alienate as much as 6,000 kanals of land to a non-agriculturist was given by the deputy commissioner. With all due respect to the officials of Government I must submit that they have not opened their eyes to these transactions. The worst offenders in this respect have been Gujrat, Jhang and Mianwali districts. It is really surprising that such a flagrant abuse of the law is allowed and no action is being taken against the officials concerned. Only to-day there was a question put by my honourable friend the member from Jullundur to which the Honourable Revenue Member replied that one Muhammad Din of Khandhanwala was permitted to sell 250 kanals of land to a non-agriculturist. Look at the reason given by the vendor for the sale of the land to a non-agriculturist. He said that he must have a right to sell his land to whomsoever he pleased and at whatever price he liked. It is high time, therefore, that Government should take early steps to rectify the wrong that is being done almost daily. I, therefore, have brought in this Bill to put a check on the arbitrary power given to the deputy commissioner by the Land Alienation Act. I may assure the House that the Bill does in no way put any obstacle in the way of the smooth working of the Act.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Sir, I was given to understand that the honourable member would not move for leave for the introduction of this Bill as he was now satisfied that the action which Government has already taken is adequate to avoid evasion of the rules and the provisions of the Act. I may perhaps state for the information of the Council what the Government has done in this matter. The attention of all deputy commissioners has been drawn to paragraph 97 of the Land Administration Manual, and there will be no further cases of complaint of the sort mentioned by the honourable member. The deputy commissioners have also been told that they must use their powers under section 3 (2) of the Punjab Land Alienation Act very sparingly. Again orders have issued—Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : In view of the steps taken by Government to check the practices at present prevailing in the matter of alienations of land, I do not want to press my motion. I accordingly beg leave to withdraw the motion.

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

THE PUNJAB SMALL TOWNS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural) : Sir, I move—

That leave be granted to introduce the Punjab Small Towns (Amendment) Bill.

Mr. President : The question is—

That leave be granted to introduce the Punjab Small Towns (Amendment) Bill.

Is there any objection to the leave being granted ?

No member objecting the motion was carried.

Sardar Arjan Singh : I introduce the Punjab Small Towns (Amendment) Bill.

THE PUNJAB VILLAGE PANCHAYAT (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muhamadan, Rural) : Sir, I move—

That leave be granted to introduce the Punjab Village Panchayat (Amendment) Bill.

Mr. President : The question is—

That leave be granted to introduce the Punjab Village Panchayat (Amendment) Bill.

Is there any objection to the leave being granted ?

No objection being raised the motion was carried.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : I introduce the Punjab Village Panchayat (Amendment) Bill.

THE PUNJAB SUPPRESSION OF IMMORAL TRAFFIC BILL.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadian, Rural) : Sir, in view of the fact that the Bill of which I have given notice has already been published in the Gazette under Rule 18 of the Punjab Legislative Council Rules, I do not propose to move for leave to introduce the Bill. I accordingly introduce the Bill directly.

THE PUNJAB ANTI-BEGGARY BILL.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain (North-East Towns, non-Muhammadian, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I would not like to make a lengthy speech in support of the Punjab Anti-Beggary Bill but would rather remain content with making a few observations. You are well aware that begging has become a regular nuisance. Both in cities and villages numerous beggars and mendicants haunt public places and consequently the public is put to much trouble. Besides, beggary encourages laziness. If this Bill is passed into law beggars and mendicants who number about nine lakhs at present, would necessarily take to some work and become useful members of society. The Bill may be objected to on the ground that before passing it into law poor-houses should be constructed for these people. But that is not necessary, because begging in public places is proposed to be penalised for the present. This Bill is not the first of its kind so far introduced in any provincial legislature in India. I understand that a similar Bill was introduced in the Assam Council some time back. I am really very sorry to remark that many people have come to adopt begging as an easy profession in these hard days. There must be some check on their activities. If you want to raise India in general and the Punjab in particular to the level of civilised countries of the world, you should see that this curse of begging is altogether removed. If only these beggars and mendicants begin to work, the labour will probably become as cheap as that in Japan. It is, therefore, in the fitness of things to pass this Bill into law. But at this stage I would move—

That the Punjab Anti-Beggary Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the Punjab Anti-Beggary Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon.

The motion was carried.

THE PUNJAB SUPPRESSION OF IMMORAL TRAFFIC BILL.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural) :
I move—

That the Punjab Suppression of Immoral Traffic Bill be referred to a select committee consisting of—

Dr. (Mrs.) M. C. Shave,
Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram,
Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah,
Mr. Muhammad Din Malik,
The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon.
Mr. Manohar Lal,
Lala Jyoti Prasad,
Sardar Sampuran Singh,
Sardar Sahib Sardar Ujjal Singh,
Sardar Sahib Sardar Gurbachan Singh,
A nominee of the Honourable the President.
The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd,
Mr. J. D. Anderson, and
The mover

The Bill has been before the public for a very long time and those honourable members who have been studying the papers would have found that a large number of associations all over the province have welcomed the bringing of this Bill before the Punjab Legislative Council. Before I actually go into the details of this Bill and enunciate the principles on which it is based, I should like to pay a tribute of thanks to Miss Miliscent Shepherd who has been going from place to place and educating public opinion on this very important measure. The Bill, as you will find, is a part of the international efforts made in various countries for the suppression of immoral traffic. Those who have read something that is going on under the guidance of the League of Nations for the betterment of the world would have found that efforts are being made in every European country and in several Asiatic countries for the suppression of this most immoral commercialised vice. You know and every honourable member, I believe, knows that in every important town whether in India or outside, immature girls are taken hold of by immoral men and used for their own purposes, that is to say, for putting them in the market and using their body and soul in order to fill their pockets. That is a great shame. These are really the results of the so-called civilisation under which we live. Such things were unknown in times gone by. I find that the more the civilisation advances the more peculiar methods of this vice are found. This sort of vice goes on increasing. Therefore, it is the duty of every civilised government to adopt measures for the suppression of traffic of this kind. We find homes ruined. We find the health of individuals and nations ruined. Therefore, earnest efforts should be made by everybody concerned to see that this kind of immoral traffic is suppressed with a strong hand. The Bill gives in the statement of objects and reasons the various provinces which have accepted legislation of this kind. For example in Bombay, Bengal, Burma, Madras, Ceylon, United Provinces, Pudukottah, Travancore and Cochin Bills of a similar nature have become Acts. Efforts are being made in the Central Provinces. Mysore, North-West Frontier Province, Assam and Delhi to bring measures of a similar nature. This Bill is the result of very great efforts and very great thought on the part of an association here which has undertaken to advance causes of this nature—the cause of social and moral hygiene. I do not claim that the Bill is perfect. I, therefore, sought the consent of those gentlemen who feel interested in this subject for the benefit of their advice. I would have been glad if the Bill had gone through at this time and the motion for reference to select committee accepted. But the Government feels, I understand, that something more should be done and public opinion should be elicited from all quarters. If the Government so desires, I do not think I should oppose that motion because I wish that light should be thrown from all quarters and as the Government is ultimately responsible for the maintenance of law and order I do not think I should stand in their way.

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That the Punjab Suppression of Immoral Traffic Bill be referred to a select committee consisting of—

Dr. (Mrs.) M. C. Shave,
Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram,
Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah,
r. Muhammad Din Malak,
he Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon,
r. Manohar Lal,
Lala Jyoti Prasad,
Sardar Sampuran Singh,
Sardar Sahib Sardar Ujjal Singh,
Sardar Sahib Sardar Gurbachan Singh,
A nominee of the Honourable the President,
The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd,
Mr. J. D. Anderson, and
The mover.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, I move—

That the Punjab Suppression of Immoral Traffic Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 15th December, 1934.

In doing so, I would like to make it quite clear that my intention is not that of delaying the coming into force of this Bill as a law. My intention simply is this, that the Government consider circulation for opinion necessary because there are many novel provisions in this Bill. For instance, the Bill seeks to shift the responsibility for the control of immoral traffic from local bodies to the district magistrate and the superintendent of police. This is a very big change indeed, a change in principle and a change in detail which may be even more important than the change in principle and we would like to know what exactly the public generally think of this proposed change of policy before we lend the Bill our active support. There is another reason too for insisting on circulation. It is this: The utility of the Bill is doubtful, distinctly doubtful, unless it is supported by public opinion; otherwise I fear it may become a dead-letter. The principle of the Bill is one with which every decent person is bound to sympathise. There can be no doubt of that whatever and I think we may all congratulate the honourable member on his spirit in introducing a measure of this kind. Whether it will be workable or not we are not quite sure yet and we would like to learn by circulating the Bill for opinion. The honourable member has told us that the Bill has already been before the public and is known to people generally and that many associations have expressed their opinion upon the Bill already in the press, and the inference is that circulation is not so necessary. But while the Bill has been commented upon by bodies and associations who are naturally interested in it, it has not been commented upon by the public generally who very often, in fact generally, will not take the trouble to express an opinion upon a matter in which they are not very directly interested. Also it is obvious that we would like to have the opinion of the High Court and the other courts and legal bodies, bar associations, etc., upon a measure of this kind. It is for this reason that I move the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the Punjab Suppression of Immoral Traffic Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 15th December, 1934.

The motion was carried.

THE PUNJAB SMALL TOWNS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Small Towns (Amendment) Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon.

Sir, at this stage I do not propose to make any lengthy speech. Section 21 of the existing law authorizes the small town committees to impose taxes upon all sorts of people. In the first place they can impose taxes upon all owners and occupiers of houses within their jurisdiction. Another clause authorizes these committees to impose taxes upon all the residents of the small towns according to their income and it is laid down there that that sum shall not exceed Rs. 7-8-0 per mensem in any one small town. It has been noticed that these small towns are more or less populated by both agriculturists and non-agriculturists. In a majority of these towns the proprietary body consists of agriculturists, jats, pathans, rajputs and there are also people who carry on trade and live within the towns. Now under clause 2 the committee is authorized to impose a tax according to the income while what is actually done in practice and has been seen in experience is that when they consider the income of any particular resident of that committee they take into consideration the income which the residents living within the town derive from their lands which are certainly outside the limits of the committee and are within the jurisdiction of the district board areas. This is an anomaly and I have introduced this Bill to remove that anomaly. Because it is found that the land as such is liable to land revenue, also there are local rates and cesses which are paid by the committees to the district boards and those district boards in their turn open primary schools and hospitals which cater to the amenities of life of the people living in the municipal area. Therefore, in a way those people who are carrying on agriculture as their trade or work or profession actually contribute to the finances of those committees. It would be seen that there is another class which perhaps also might have a grievance in this respect and that class consists of some Government servants who are working in some high schools which have been provincialized. These Government high schools are just outside the limits of the committees and those teachers who are working there have their residences in the areas within the jurisdiction of the committees and, therefore, as such they are under the existing law liable to assessment. Therefore, I have moved this Bill with a view to see whether that anomaly also is removed or not. With this explanatory remark I move that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon.

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That the Punjab Small Towns (Amendment) Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang (Minister for Local Self-Government) : I do not want to oppose the motion but I want to make it clear that in not opposing the motion for circulation the Government does not commit itself either to the principle or the provisions of the Bill. It is only in pursuit of the general convention that the Bills moved by private members should have a fair chance and every private member if he wants to move any Bill should have an opportunity of consulting public opinion that no opposition is being offered to this motion and this would be the attitude of Government with respect to every private Bill on the agenda so far as I am concerned.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the Punjab Small Towns (Amendment) Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon.

The motion was carried.

THE PUNJAB VILLAGE PANCHAYAT (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muhamadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move :—

That the Punjab Village Panchayat (Amendment) Bill be taken into consideration at once.

This amending Bill has been brought forward to vest local officers and, I should say, deputy commissioners with increased powers in the interest of the public at large. At present, according to section 81 of the Village Panchayat Act, any sentence, decree or order, other than ex-parte decree or order, passed by a panchayat is not subject to appeal, revision or review at the hands of any court or authority. This provision of the law which is very stringent on the face of it works great hardship in not a few cases and more so because the deputy commissioners generally hesitate to interfere with the orders of the panchayats even if in some hard and deserving cases, they may desire to do so. I am not in a position to say definitely why the deputy commissioners generally take up that attitude in this matter, but I am inclined to think that the provision laid down in section 41 of the Act, according to which they must submit a report and give reasons to the commissioner concerned for suspending or prohibiting the execution of an order of a panchayat, deters them from taking a suitable action. To avoid going to the commissioners for the confirmation of their orders, the deputy commissioners are generally heard to say to the aggrieved persons that because the fine has already been paid, it is not necessary or desirable to re-open the matter. May be they do not also want to bring a bad name to the panchayats by interfering and setting aside so often their orders. It is, therefore, very necessary that the desired amendment be made and the deputy commissioners be vested with powers to revise or review the orders of the panchayats without going to the commissioners. The attitude of the panchayats themselves also warrants this action being taken. It will perhaps interest the honourable members to know, and I am sure the Government will also be very much interested, that unfortunately for the public, the panchayats have come to think that the accused arraigned before them need not be given any facilities to defend themselves. Not even that. They do not care whether a summons issued for any one of them has been duly served upon the accused or not. I know of a case which came up before the panchayat at Shahzadpur in which an accused was punished and fined without his having been given an opportunity to plead his cause. No doubt a summons was issued by the panchayat to be served upon the accused, but it was never duly served upon him. However, it was taken by the panchayat to have been duly served upon the accused because his elder brother had come and appeared before the panchayat being another accused in that case. This case was brought to the notice of the deputy commissioner concerned who felt that injustice had been done. But all the same he preferred not to reopen the case. There is another very interesting case in point. In this case a person was asked by a panchayat to demolish the house in which he was living. As the house did not belong to him he did not and in fact could not obey the order of the panchayat. But in spite of his pleading his inability to demolish the house, he was fined Rs. 5 per day. In this case too the deputy commissioner concerned did not like to interfere although there was good reason for him to do so. The pity is that this is being done by panchayats having educated men as their members. To put a stop to such arbitrary orders of the panchayats I am sure that the Government will have no objection to accept this motion and allow it to be considered at once. If, however, it is considered necessary that this Bill should also be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon I shall have no objection to that course being adopted.

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That the Punjab Village Panchayat (Amendment) Bill be taken into consideration at once.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang (Minister for Local Self-Government) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Village Panchayat (Amendment) Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by the middle of February, 1935.

In moving this amendment I express no views on the merits of the Bill at all. But I think the Bill involves an important question of principle which should not be decided straight off and people who are likely to be affected by this amendment ought to be consulted. I expect that the honourable mover of the motion which is now before the House will accept this amendment of mine.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : I accept it.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the Punjab Village Panchayat (Amendment) Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon by the middle of February, 1935.

The motion was carried.

The Council then adjourned till 2-30 P. M. on Friday, the 26th October, 1934.

3803. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : (i) Arising out of Council question No. 671¹ asked and answered on 28th July 1933, will the Honourable Minister for Education kindly state—

(a) whether Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi still has any pecuniary interest in the sale of his books either himself or through any one of his relatives ;

(b) whether he and his relatives have completely severed their financial relations with the publishers with respect to books published by him ;

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) and (b) Neither Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi nor any relative of his has any interest in any text book in use in the Punjab. Shaikh Nur Elahi still owns the copy right of his story books, which he could not sell. The Khan Bahadur has, however, stopped all future publication of these books, and has also surrendered his interest in the present stock, the publishers having been instructed to use his share of the income from royalty for any charitable purpose.

(ii) Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi sold the copy right of his text-books within the Punjab on 27th January, 1928, and the last instalment on account of this sale was paid in December 1930. The last year for which he received royalty on the sale of story books is 1932-33.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) It is regretted that the list asked for by the honourable member cannot be laid on the table, as it is considered that the time and labour involved in preparing it will not be commensurate with the advantage likely to be obtained from it.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) The honourable member is referred to the answer given to part (c) of Council question No. *3770¹ asked by Chaudhri Afzal Haq.

(b) Sardar Sant Singh was selected because besides being a qualified Engineer, he also possessed about 7 years' experience of Head Works and was therefore, considered most suitable.

HEAD WORKS ENGINEER, ELECTRICITY BRANCH.

3807. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that one Mr. Ghafoor actually held the charge of the post of the Head Works Engineer in Electricity Branch ;
- (b) if so, why it was not considered feasible to appoint Mr. Ghafoor as Head Works Engineer ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

MUSLIMS IN ELECTRICITY BRANCH.

3808. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the Government is aware of the considerable excitement that has been and is being evinced by the Muslim journals of the province over the elimination of Muslims from the Department of Electricity of the Punjab ;
- (b) whether the Government is aware of the fact that Muslim feelings regarding the Electricity Department have been voiced from time to time through the Punjab Legislative Council ;
- (c) what steps the Government will take to improve the matters, if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Certain Muslim periodicals have alleged that Muslims do not get a fair chance in the Electricity Branch.

(b) Yes.

(c) Qualified Muslims have in fact no less opportunities of admissions to the Branch and advancement therein than qualified representatives of any other community.

MUSLIM GRIEVANCES.

*3809. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Chief Secretary to the Punjab Government kindly state—

- (a) whether the Government is aware of the letter addressed to His Excellency the Governor in February 1934, by the Secretary, Muslim Rights Protection Board ;
- (b) what are the contents of the said letter ;
- (c) whether Government have taken any measures to redress Muslim grievances, if not, why not ?

Mr. C. C. Garbett : (a) If the honourable member will kindly give further particulars about the letter efforts will be made to trace it.

(b) and (c) Do not arise.

LOCAL MANAGER, ELECTRICITY BRANCH.

*3810. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that Mr. Sibou, the present Local Manager, in the Electricity Branch, passed the subordinate examination from the Roorkee College and served the department as a temporary engineer ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the said Mr. Sibou failed to pass the examination prescribed for engineers ;
- (c) whether Mr. Sibou was reverted from a senior to a junior grade ; and why ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that along with Mr. Sibou there was a Muslim officer named Mr. Ghafoor, who received his training in England ;
- (e) whether the said Mr. Ghafoor had earned extremely good reports as a construction officer ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that Mr. Ghafoor was turned out of the Department of Electricity on the allegation that he possessed insufficient qualifications ;
- (g) whether Mr. Sibou has not the same disqualification ;
- (h) if so, why he was granted a permanent post ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Mr. Sibou passed the Technical Class from Roorkee College and was employed in the Electricity Branch as a temporary engineer.

(b) Mr. Sibou did not sit for the examination referred to.

(c) Yes because he did not sit for the examination referred to in (b) above.

(d) Mr. Ghafoor did receive training in England but was unable to obtain a Diploma or Degree.

[Hon. Dr. Gokul Chand Narang.]

(e) Some reports were good, some otherwise.

(f) No.

(g) and (h) Mr. Sibou does not hold any of the Degrees, Diplomas or certificates prescribed for appointment to the Provincial Service of Engineers in the Electricity Branch but he has been selected for appointment as Local Manager, Grade I, because he has over 22 years' service to his credit, and has already held charge of a sub-division for some years, has considerable experience on the commercial side of the Project and was strongly recommended by the Chief Engineer as a person fit to perform the duties of Local Manager, Grade I.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Was this fact that the name of the candidate was Sibou, a reason for making his selection ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : No.

SHIFT ENGINEER.

3811. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

(a) whether it is a fact that an additional post of Shift Engineer has been added to the three such posts already, making four in all ;

(b) whether this fourth post will be filled by a Muslim Shift Engineer ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes.

(b) The post has already been filled by a non-Muslim as no suitable Muslim was available.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : If a suitable Muslim is available now ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Certainly I will consider his case if any vacancy occurs in the future.

SHIFT ENGINEERS.

3812. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

(a) whether it is a fact that formerly there were two Sikh and one Muslim Shift Engineers ;

(b) whether it is a fact that the said Muslim Shift Engineer was discharged after some time ;

(c) if so, what charge was levelled against him and whether the charge was proved ;

(d) if not, for what reason the Muslim Shift Engineer was dismissed ;

(e) the name of the person placed in his place and his qualifications ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes.

(b), (c) and (d) The attention of the honourable member is invited to the reply given to Council question No. 2840¹ asked by Chaudhri Afzal Haq on 27th February 1934.

(e) No permanent appointment has yet been made. Mr. Sleem Hassan is working as an apprentice engineer. He holds a diploma from a State Technical College at Munich.

ELECTRICITY DEPARTMENT.

3813. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

(a) whether the Government is aware of the fact that in winter session an honourable member brought to the notice of the House the wrongs perpetrated on the Muslims in the Electricity Department ;

(b) whether it is a fact that the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government gave an undertaking that he would see that no injustice should be done to the Mussalmans in the Electricity Branch in future ;

(c) what steps the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government has so far taken to do justice to the Muslims in regard to the undertaking given in the winter session ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Government is aware that an honourable member brought to the notice of the House the alleged paucity of Muslims in the Electricity Branch.

(b) An assurance was given that keeping in view the words of Sir Geoffrey deMontmorency that "efficiency is the primary consideration" it will be certainly kept in view that every community is justly and fairly dealt with.

(c) All possible efforts are being made to fulfil the above assurance.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : Will the Honourable Minister give an instance in which efforts were made in earnest to secure the services of a Muslim gentleman ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang (Urdu) : Yes. An engineer with an experience of head works was required. Every effort was made to secure the services of an experienced Muslim. But no Muslim with an experience of head works could be found. To achieve this end a letter was also sent to the Irrigation Department requisitioning the services of an experienced Muslim to fill up this vacancy. But a Muslim candidate also was not forthcoming even in that department. Consequently a Sikh was appointed. He had an experience of 7 years of head works.

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah (Urdu) : Did you know before you sent the requisition to the Irrigation Department that they will not be able to comply with it ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang (Urdu): I am not a Pir like you to claim to know things beforehand.

An Honourable Member (Urdu): Did the Chief Engineer suggest to the Honourable Minister that he should ask the honourable member who so often asks questions regarding the deficiency of Muslim representation in the Electricity Branch, to recommend the names of some Muslim engineers with the requisite qualifications and experience? If so, did he act accordingly?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang (Urdu): No. You had undertaken to supply experienced Muslims for this department. But you did not supply any.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq (Urdu): Did any subordinate of this department suggest that the honourable member should be asked to recommend the names of any such experienced Muslim engineers or did it occur to the Honourable Minister himself?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang (Urdu): No doubt it occurred to me and I thought of instructing the department to consult the honourable member about it but knowing that he had no experience of this line and that he did not appear very serious about it I gave up the idea. If the honourable member cares to supply us with a list containing the names of such Muslim engineers I would certainly consider their claims for any post falling vacant in the future.

An Honourable Member (Urdu): But tell us who suggested that the honourable member should be consulted about it. . . . Was it suggested by the Chief Engineer or some body else?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang (Urdu): I say that it occurred to me that the honourable member should be consulted about it and I was going to write to the department but later on as I thought the honourable member could not be serious about it I dropped the idea. You can even now give me a list containing the names of qualified candidates. Can you suggest the name of any one who possessed the required qualifications and experience but was not taken?

Chaudhri Afzal Haq (Urdu): There were four such candidates who were highly qualified but were not taken. For instance Ata-ur-Rahman was not taken although he was qualified for this job. This shows . . .

Mr. President: Order. Order.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang: If the department is to run smoothly it must not be attacked by the honourable members in this way. I fear the Chief Engineer would rather resign his office than have men under him who may not be able to run the show. It is most unfair that a technical department like this should be made the butt of such attacks. With your permission Sir, I would submit that these questions are not always well-considered and their consequences are not properly weighed. I must submit that it has been felt by this department that these questions have led to a deterioration of discipline. It appears that some honourable members of this House get at the clerks of various departments and get information from them which is against all discipline and which is against all rules and then make use of the incomplete information obtained from the subordinate staff. I leave it to you to decide how far it is consistent with the duty of an honourable member of this House who is expected to co-operate with the administration and not to put obstacles in the way of the successful operation of the department.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : May I explain my position? When an Honourable Minister attacks honourable members of the House .

Mr. President : Did the Honourable Minister attack any honourable member?

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President : If so, the Honourable Minister should withdraw his attack.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I did not attack the honourable member. I only said that these questions were not always well-considered and the consequence not properly weighed.

HEAD WORKS ENGINEER.

3814. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that Sh. Ghulam Mustafa, an overseer of the Irrigation Department served the Electricity Branch for several years as an overseer and sub-divisional officer ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that Sh. Ghulam Mustafa was reverted to his own department at the completion of the construction of the scheme ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that Sardar Sant Singh, an overseer of the Irrigation Department, has been appointed as Head Works Engineer ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that Sardar Sant Singh never before served the Electricity Branch ;
- (e) if the answer to (d) is in the negative, why Sh. Ghulam Mustafa was not given preference to Sardar Sant Singh ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a), (b), (c) and (d) : Yes.

- (e) Because he was not qualified ; nor did he apply.

SUTLEJ VALLEY PROJECT.

3815. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that on page 41 of the Accountant-General's report on the Appropriation Accounts for the year 1928, it is stated that the Sutlej Valley Project is expected to yield a net profit of 12.6 per cent. ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that actually there was a loss of 2.7 per cent. ;

[Ch. Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan.]

- (c) whether it is a fact that the Government promised to appoint a committee to investigate and report on the causes of this loss ;
- (d) if the answer to (c) above be in the affirmative, whether the said committee has submitted its report ; if so, when is it likely to be made available for the use of this Council ;
- (e) if the answer to (c) above be in the negative, whether Government proposes to appoint such a committee ; if so, when ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) The honourable member's reference is incorrect. He presumably refers to page 41 of the Appropriation Accounts for the year 1931-32 wherein it is stated that the Sutlej Valley Project was expected to yield a net profit of 12·06 per cent. in that year.

(b) No. The loss was 2·47 per cent.

(c) No. For reasons fully detailed at page 41 of the Appropriation Accounts 1931-32.

(d) Does not arise.

(e) No. As the completion report of the Sutlej Valley Project which will shortly be ready will enable Government to review the situation and take such action as may be considered desirable.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : The answer to my question may kindly be given in Urdu as I cannot understand the answer given in English.

Mr. President : I am not aware of any rule or standing order under which I can ask the honourable member to translate his answer.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : Sir, this is a Council of the Kalamen and it is expected that their language should also be a Kali language. But it is very unfortunate that instead of a Kali language a foreign language of white people is being used as a medium of expression.

Mr. President : I shall be very glad to help the honourable member if the standing orders allow me to do so.

Mian Nurullah : If speeches can be made in Urdu it is only common sense that questions put in Urdu should be answered in Urdu.

Mr. President : An attempt is being made to answer questions in Urdu.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : Sir, it is proper that the answers to questions put by the non-English knowing members should be given in Urdu so that they may be able to understand them.

Mr. President : Yes, if the rules and standing orders in force permit. The honourable member may have the standing orders amended.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : Sir, I request that the answers to my questions should be given in Urdu.

Mr. President : For how many years has the honourable member been a member of the Council ? Before to-day did he ever insist on his questions being answered in Urdu ?

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : Sir, I have always put questions in Urdu and expected that their answers will also be given in Urdu.

Mr. President : The honourable member may have asked one of his friends to move an amendment to standing orders.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : May I submit that three years ago the procedure of this House was to have the questions and answers translated into Urdu and printed and distributed to members in advance ? That practice has now been stopped. Will you kindly direct your office that in future the old practice should be restored ?

Mr. President : That matter is under consideration. It was the Retrenchment Committee which suggested a discontinuance of the practice of printing questions and answers in advance. Now it is for the House to decide whether the old practice should be restored.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : As you are aware, Sir, according to an old practice of this House certain English speeches were translated into Urdu for the benefit of non-English knowing members. Now, Sir, you know that I do not know English . . .

Mr. President : Speeches can be translated even now under Standing Order 88 (4). But there is no such provision about Questions and Answers. Is it the wish of the House that the answers to questions should be printed as before ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : May I point out, Sir, one important consideration before you take the sense of the House ? Apart from the question of expense which we can ill-afford at the present moment, there is this aspect of the question. At present we are able to answer practically all the starred questions which are asked in the Council. If all these answers are to be printed beforehand it would mean that we would have to furnish the answers to the Council office several days before the date on which they are put in the Council so that they could be printed in time. Obviously a large number of ad interim replies to starred questions would not be of any use to the House.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : I suggest that at least the questions and answers may be printed in English.

An Honourable Member : It was the practice of the House to get the questions as well as their answers printed beforehand. This practice may be restored.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : The suggestion made by the honourable member will unnecessarily burden the poor zamindars. The old practice should not, therefore, be restored. (Hear, hear).

Mr. Labh Singh : My considered opinion is that most of these questions which are asked in this Council are of such a nature that it will be much better not to give them wider publicity than is being done at present by translating them into Urdu. I am all for restricting the scope of their mischief.

Mian Nurullah : May I suggest that the answers be given in the language in which the questions are put.

An Honourable Member : That would mean that if Mr. Mukerji puts his question in Bengali he must be answered in Bengali ?

(The sense of the House having been collected it was found that a majority was for continuing the existing practice).

MANDI HYDRO-ELECTRIC SCHEME.

3816. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the Mandi Hydro-Electric Scheme was launched with a view to supply electric current for the industrial development of the province ;
- (b) whether the Mandi Hydro-Electric Scheme has so far contributed in any way towards the industrial development of the province ;
- (c) the amount of profits originally estimated to accrue from this scheme ;
- (d) the amount of profit or loss that has actually accrued from this scheme ;
- (e) whether the Government propose to prepare a full report in regard to this scheme ; if so, when ; and if not, why not ;
- (f) the names of towns and cities which have been so far electrified as a result of this scheme ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes, this was one of the objects.

(b) Yes.

- (i) Many mills and factories which were originally running with coal or fuel oil have been converted to electric drive thereby resulting in money previously spent outside the province being retained in it.
- (ii) Many industries such as cement making, spinning and weaving, rubber pressing and rolling, vegetable ghee making, etc., etc., are being developed.
- (iii) It is partly due to the advent of hydro-electric power and consequent adoption of electric drive in preference to oil engine drive in various mills and factories that the fuel oil companies have reduced their prices by more than 25 per cent. so that even those industrialists who are not using electrical energy to drive their factories are being benefitted by reduced costs in production due to this drop in price.

(c) and (d) In this connection the attention of the honourable member is invited to paragraphs 91 and 92 of the report of the Committee of Inquiry into the progress of the Uhl River Hydro-Electric Scheme, from which it will be seen that the scheme is expected to be fully loaded in the 10th year of operation and able to show surplus in the 12th year. It is believed from the present rate of progress that the anticipations of the above Committee will be fully realized before the anticipated periods.

(e) Completion Report of the Scheme is under preparation in the office of the Chief Engineer.

(f) A list giving the information required is laid on the table.

List of towns being supplied with hydro power from the first stage of the Uhl River Hydro-Electric Scheme :—

1. Pathankot.
2. Gurdaspur.
3. Batala.
4. Dina Nagar.
5. Amritsar Municipal Committee.
6. Amritsar Suburban (Chheharta area).
7. Tarn Taran.
8. Ludhiana.
9. Lahore Suburban area (Sadat Bazar Lahore Cantonment and factories near Ichhra, Gulab Devi Hospital, etc., etc.).
10. Baghbanpura.
11. Kasur.
12. Ferozepore.
13. Sheikhpura.
14. Nankana Sahib.
15. Chkharharkana.
16. Jaranwala.
17. Lyallpur.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : I have not followed what the Honourable Minister has said in answer to my question.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan (Urdu) : How would you understand it even if it is printed ?

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : But if I have to put a supplementary question does it mean that I should put it after the answer has been printed and Council adjourned ?

DISTRICT BOARD ENGINEER, JULLUNDUR.

3817. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state—

- (a) when was the present District Board Engineer to the Jullundur District Board appointed to his present post ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the said Engineer is not a qualified man and that he has not obtained his diploma from any recognised engineering institution ;

[Ch. Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan.]

(c) : if so, whether it is proposed to appoint a fully qualified engineer in his place ; if so, when ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) In 1932.

(b) The present incumbent does not possess the technical qualifications prescribed in rule 10 of the District Works Rules, 1926. Sanction to his appointment was given by the local Government, under the proviso to the rule, in view of the fact that he had served the Jullundur Board in a subordinate capacity for some twenty years and had twice officiated in the District Engineer's appointment for extended periods, with satisfactory results.

(c) So far as Government are aware, the Jullundur Board is not proposing to make any change.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : Sir, I request that the answers to my questions should be printed and supplied to me beforehand so that I may be able to put supplementary questions.

Mr. President : The honourable member is again labouring under a misapprehension. When answers are printed and circulated before they are given on the floor of the House, no supplementary questions are allowed.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : I think it is an important point and it should be decided.

Mr. President : Let a regular motion come so that the matter may be discussed thoroughly.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : This is a very practical suggestion. Those members of the Government who understand Urdu, and practically every one of them does, can reply in Urdu.

Mr. President : It is for them to decide. They have been answering in Urdu as well.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : Then let them do it.

M. President : I may inform the honourable members that the questions, which are being answered now, were delivered to the Secretary of the Council, in English, signed by the honourable member. Now he wants their answers in vernacular.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Urdu) : It is very seldom that I send my questions in English. If I do so sometimes it is only for the convenience of the Council office. I think it is unfair to take undue advantage of this course of action which I adopt sometimes.

DISTRICT BOARD HIGH SCHOOL, NAKODAR.

3818. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Education kindly state—

(a) whether it is a fact that the Government propose to provincialise a number of schools this year ;

(b) if so, whether it is intended to provincialise District Board High School, Nakodar, district Jullundur ;

(c) if not, when is the said school proposed to be provincialised ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

COTTON IN LYALLPUR.

COTTON IN LYALLPUR.

3828. Mian Nurullah : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

(a) for how long the south wind (Dakhan) has been blowing this year in the district of Lyallpur ;

(b) the effect of the above wind on the kharif crop especially cotton ;

(c) whether the Government is aware that the zamindars hold that the above wind does not allow cotton bolls to grow and develop, on the other hand it makes them fall ;

(d) how far the views of the zamindars referred to in (c) above are correct ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) The south-east wind commonly known as Dakhan has been blowing in the Lyallpur district during the day time only 6th to 11th October 1934.

(b) The south-east wind generally reduces humidity and consequently has a desiccating affect on the kharif crops. This year, however, with the exception of desi cotton there was no apparent effect on other kharif crops. Shedding of flower buds, though not serious, was caused in desi cotton, more particularly in the early sown crop while American cottons have so far remained practically unaffected.

(c) and (d) The zamindars generally believe that the south-east wind does not allow cotton bolls to grow and develop. Shedding is mainly caused in flower buds but the development of bolls is also adversely affected as a result of decrease in humidity.

(d) if the answer to (c) above is in the affirmative, why is the measurement being continued or at least not being modified as recommended by the Settlement Officer ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) and (b) It is not in the public interest to publish the purport of letters received by Government from its officers.

(c) Yes.

(d) Orders were recently issued by Government, that tarmim should be confined to areas where tatimma shajras had been prepared since the last settlement

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill as reported by the select committee be taken into consideration.

When this Bill emerged from the select committee it emerged with several amendments and additions. I have to announce that I have been informed by the Leader of the National Unionist Party that his party is not going to press the last three clauses of the Bill. I am very glad that they have come to that decision because if they had decided to press these three clauses into law, Government would have to support the amendment for the circulation of the Bill for opinion. I need hardly go into the reasons except to say that obviously serious changes in the civil law should not be rushed through a legislature. They should first be referred to elicit the opinion of the public, to elicit the opinion of the courts and above all of the High Court and in our opinion it would be hardly courteous to the High Court to proceed with the consideration of drastic amendments of the civil law without first giving them an opportunity of expressing their opinion thereon. At the same time the Leader of the National Unionist Party informed me that his party is not pressing these clauses on the understanding which Government has given it that Government will give facilities for a private Bill including these clauses, provided that that private Bill is circulated for opinion. I renew that assurance now and Government will adhere to it. As those three clauses which embody the most important amendments of the civil law now included in the Bill are not going to be pressed I can whole-heartedly recommend that the Bill be now taken into consideration. Government is anxious to see it passed into law as soon as possible, because the state of indebtedness among the agriculturists of the Punjab is such as to demand such alleviation as Government can give. I must make one other explanation and it is this. The Government themselves embodied in the original Bill a clause mitigating the severity of the present law with regard to imprisonment for debt. That clause has been amended in the select committee. Logically Government might be expected to go forward and to support the new clause which goes to abolish imprisonment for debt. But we have been informed by the Government of India that it is their intention to introduce legislation as early as possible with the object of amending and mitigating the law upon this very subject, and they desire that we should not proceed with our own provincial legislation upon the subject. In view of that position the Government are compelled to contest clause 33 as it stands at present. The attitude of Government with regard to the remaining clauses of this Bill is sufficiently indicated by the official amendments of which notice has been given and I do not think I need say any more. (Hear, hear).

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill as reported by the select committee be taken into consideration.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Sir, I rise to a point of order. Part VIII of the Bill, I understand, has been newly incorporated by the select committee. I do not find any corresponding clauses in the original Bill. I, therefore, submit to the House that the character of this legislation has wholly changed, and it does not retain its original character. Either the Government should see or the Unionist Party should agree to omit wholly parts VII and VIII. I submit that the character of the Bill has been changed. There are other similar clauses but perhaps I will not be absolutely clear unless I refer to them and explain them, but with the incorporation of these two parts the original Bill has certainly been changed.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : May I make an explanation. The honourable member has just suggested that part VIII is entirely new. I draw his attention to clause 33 as included in the Bill. A provision relating to imprisonment for debt was originally provided by the Government though it was amended by the select committee. That certainly is not a new clause. With regard to other clauses in part VIII the really important ones are clauses 36, 37 and 38.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Clauses 34 and 35 are also important.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : These, I understand, are going to be dropped by the Unionist Party and Government will certainly connive at their dropping.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : After discussion with the honourable member in charge of the Bill the National Unionist Party met and discussed the whole subject and came to a definite conclusion that if deletion of the last three clauses is moved by the member in charge or by any other member they should not object to that deletion. In this decision the Sikh party also agreed. Therefore, I beg to submit that this portion of the Bill which gave it a new character will go out and the Bill which will be before the House for consideration will be substantially the same as it was when it was introduced.

Mr. President : The practice of the House of Commons is that when a Bill is extensively amended by a select committee the Speaker cannot stop its consideration, but advises the House and the member in charge to withdraw the Bill and introduce a new one in its place. There can be no two opinions that very important and drastic changes have been made in the Bill by the select committee and it may be fairly said that for all practical purposes the Bill as reported by that committee is a new Bill. (Hear, hear). But it may be that in the light of the explanation given by the Member in charge of the Bill and the Leader of the Opposition, who is probably responsible for the important and drastic changes, the House may not insist upon withdrawal of the Bill. At any rate it is for the House to decide whether, despite the peculiar facts of the case, it will care to adopt the practice obtaining in the Mother of Parliaments. If that practice is adopted the course for the mover of the Bill as well as for the members of the Council is perfectly clear.

Mr. Labh Singh : In view of the past practice of the Chair—I look upon this as a very important point which should be emphasised—the Chair should give the weight of its authority to the House before asking the House to vote on the matter. You, Sir, have always upheld the practice obtaining in the Mother of Parliaments.

Mr. President : It is for the House to decide the matter. The honourable member might remember that a couple of years ago my advice to follow Parliamentary practice and not to discuss the necessity for Legislation or matters involving legislation was not followed by the House.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : May I draw your attention to one fact ?

Maulvi Mazhar Ali Azhar : I wish to know whether it is for the House to decide points of order or whether it is for the Chair to decide.

Mr. President : As the matter is of great importance I would like the House to decide it. I have placed my view before honourable members.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Before the question is put to the House may I submit just one word. It is a suggestion which I want to make. So far as the question of Parliamentary practice is concerned, I think it can be safely left aside after the explanation given by the Honourable Finance Member and the honourable Leader of the Opposition. If it is accepted that this Bill is not in effect a new Bill that question does not arise. It is not fair to the House to ask it to give its opinion on an issue which in view of the statements I have referred to cannot and does not arise.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : There are other members in the House who have something to say upon the matter.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : We have got a legitimate grievance that the report of the select committee has altered the original Bill entirely and these gentlemen have come to some understanding behind our backs.

Mr. President : They have placed that understanding before the House and now it is for the House to decide whether it will proceed with the Bill or not.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Is it not for the Chair to protect the privileges of members on this side of the House and also the population of this province ?

Mr. President : I have stated my view.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The Chair has now given the correct advice as regards our adopting the Parliamentary procedure. The proper thing for you, Sir, now is to give effect to what you feel rather than seek shelter behind the arrangement come to between the Member in charge and the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. President : I have clearly stated my view.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The point is that the clauses in regard to which the arrangement has been arrived at do not exhaust the list of drastic changes.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I was not perhaps able to make myself clear. My point was that in view of the statements made by the Honourable Finance Member and the Leader of the Opposition it is not necessary to bring in the question of Parliamentary practice at all, because the Bill for all practical purposes, remains substantially unaltered.

Mr. President : It is for the House to decide whether it will proceed or not with the motion for consideration of the Bill.

(After gathering the sense of the House). I find that the House is in favour of proceeding with the motion for consideration.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I ask for a division.

Mr. Labh Singh : According to your own showing, Sir, there was no sense in not following the Parliamentary practice and now your ruling is something to the effect that the Parliamentary practice may not be followed.

4 P. M.

Mr. President : I do not think so.

Mr. Labh Singh : I discover a patent contradiction of terms.

Mr. President : The honourable member has misunderstood. After stating the Parliamentary practice I left it to the House to decide, whether in view of the explanations given by the Leader of the Opposition and the Member in charge of the Bill, it will proceed with the motion for consideration of the Bill or not, and it was on that point that I gathered the sense of the House.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : There was a motion before the House when I asked for a division and it would be fair that we should know whether Government members do not want Parliamentary practice to be followed in future.

Mr. President : The honourable member had simply raised an objection or a point of order and I have taken on it the sense of the House informally in the light of explanation given. It has decided that, on the special facts of this case, the motion for consideration may be proceeded with.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Decided by whom? And we want to know how many are in favour and how many against.

Mr. President : I have gathered the sense of the House informally and not formally on the point of order raised by the learned Pandit.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, at the last meeting of the Council you were pleased to direct the select committee to proceed according to the Parliamentary practice from which you read out copious extracts and in obedience to that the select committee in spite of my protest proceeded to embody these matters. Now when it comes up for consideration it is stated that Parliamentary practice should not be allowed to prevail and that some other procedure which is convenient for the occasion should be followed.

Mr. President : I am afraid the honourable member's criticism of the ruling of the Chair is not justified.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The ruling of the Chair was quite correct. We carried out your behest. But that ruling is not being given effect to.

Mr. President : Will the honourable member please read out the ruling?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Your speech at the end of the last session of the Council giving instructions to the select committee how to proceed was very clear and unequivocal; and I would request you to ask the Secretary to get you a copy. You will find that you directed the select committee to proceed according to Parliamentary practice and we did so.

Mr. President : I do not think I directed the select committee to follow the Parliamentary practice. In reply to a question by one of the honourable members I said that our Business Manual contained no rules or standing orders on the procedure of a select committee. At the same time I summarised the Parliamentary practice on the point, but do not remember to have said that that practice should be followed. In fact I had no power to do so.

Mr. Labh Singh : I submit that the sense of the House has not been gathered.

Mr. President : I will again take the sense of the House.

(40 members against 9 rose at their seats for proceeding with the motion for consideration.)

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General): Sir, I move—

That the Bill as reported by the select committee be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon by the 15th February 1935.

[D. B. Raja Narendra Nath.]

After what has just now preceded and after what I have witnessed in this House I really wonder why Government has not taken back the Bill and come with a new Bill. There are so many material changes that the Bill has been changed beyond recognition. I will deal with the points of difference later on, but let me point out to you and to the House that the select committee unanimously recommended re-publication in the Gazette because it felt that the Bill had undergone drastic changes. My motion goes only a step beyond. The proper course for the Government was to take back the Bill and to bring in a new Bill altogether. However, that has not been done and I must confine myself to the amendment which I have moved.

The changes which have been made in the Bill are so very drastic that public opinion has to be elicited from two quarters. I will deal with the negotiations which have been proceeding in a most objectionable manner afterwards. Quite irrespective of the changes which Government proposes to move, quite irrespective of the amendments, that have to come from Government benches, I want to examine the Bill itself as it is before us and compare it with what it was when it went to the select committee. (An honourable member : You were one of the members of the select committee) : Yes, I was. Opinion has to be elicited from two quarters, first from the money-lending and the trading classes, and, secondly, from the judiciary. So many changes have been proposed in the Bill and so many changes have already been made that it is absolutely necessary to consult the highest court in this province, but they are being ignored, nobody cares for them. I will point out presently how material are the changes which have been made in the original Bill.

Let me examine the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee by stages, that is to say, I will point out what the difference is between this Bill and the Bill when it went to the select committee and what changes have been made. I will come to the Government amendments afterwards.

First of all, in the part which deals with the Usurious Loans Act compound interest has been discountenanced and the rate of interest as originally proposed in the Bill has been materially reduced. That is a change made in Part III. With regard to the discountenancing of the compound interest, what would be its effect on the judiciary and on litigation? The High Court should have been asked whether litigation will not increase to such an extent that it will become difficult to deal with it. Clause 6 of the new Bill is altogether new. It did not exist in the former Bill and I want to invite your particular attention to the application of Part III to pending suits. Has it been realised what the effect of that will be? The effect will be that all the pending cases will have to be tried de novo. If a case is ripe for judgment when the Act comes into force, the case will have to be retried and reheard in the light of changes which have been made in the law and if the original court does not do it, in the appellate court the judgment-debtor will urge that he should be given the benefit of the new law, and the case will have to be remanded. I wonder whether this aspect of the question was considered. It is a question on which the judiciary ought to have been consulted. With regard to conciliation boards, the cautious provisions of the old clause 16 have been altogether wiped out. In the old clause 16 it was provided that if the debtor and creditors to whom not less than sixty per cent. of the total debts are due accept a settlement, then the remaining recusant creditors of 40 per cent. can be forced into acceptance by being told that their debt will be certified and if they choose to sue for their debt they will not be awarded costs and certain other limitations will be imposed. That was a very wise and healthy provision. The new Bill altogether abolishes it. Clause 17 does not appear in the new Bill. It has been done away with altogether. Clause 17 provided that if the board is satisfied on some grounds that there is no reason for proceeding with the application put before it, the board may dismiss the application. That power has been taken away and nothing has been substituted in its place. Parts VII and VIII are altogether new. Part VIII introduces certain very radical changes in civil law which is applicable to the whole of India. I do not see the necessity of altering that general law in the Punjab.

I now come to the amendments which Government proposes to move. In the first place, when I heard that negotiations were going on between the Leader of the National Unionist party and Government I spoke out my mind plainly to the Leader of the House. I said that it would be a case of—

ہم کو کش بگیں تا کہ وہ تپ راضی شود

"Offer him death, so that he may accept fever." That is what has happened. The learned Leader of the Unionist Party made extreme proposals and in order to win over his support the Government yielded on certain points on which it did not intend to yield when it brought forward the original Bill. Now, there is a further point. The Honourable Mover of the Bill says that the last two clauses of the Bill will be deleted and that a motion to this effect will be moved in the Council. But what about the alterations proposed by clauses 34 to 36? The Leader of the House does not commit himself to anything in regard to these clauses. Thus even assuming that the Government amendments in regard to the deletion of the last two clauses of the Bill are accepted by the Council, still the Bill contains new clauses and there is such a material change in the Bill that re-circulation is necessary. As I pointed out re-circulation is necessary not only in the interests of money-lenders or borrowers, but also in the interests of sound judicial administration of the province. The judges of the High Court ought to be consulted as to the effect of the changes made in the Bill by the select committee.

I do not propose to detain the House long. Any additional material that has to be placed before the House will be put by my honourable friend on my right (Mr. Mukand Lal Puri) who has got a bulky file before him. I need not therefore add anything to what I have said. I hope the House will consider my motion in a detached spirit and in a dispassionate manner.

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That the Bill as reported by the select committee be re-circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon by the 15th February 1935.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, this Bill has been before the House and not only before the House but before the public at large for the last ten months. The Bill was published first in the Government Gazette in February 1934. Afterwards it was introduced in the Budget session of this Council by that wise mariner who steered the boat of our province through the rough seas of economic depression, who always knew to drive a nail where it will go, I mean Sir Henry Craik. He himself realising the contentious nature of the Bill and anticipating its deep-rooted and far-reaching results very modestly moved the motion that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon. After that we received opinions of the public at large in huge volumes. I may submit that no Bill in the history of this Council has ever been so widely circulated and commented upon as this Bill. (An honourable member : It is not the Bill that is now before the House that was circulated and commented upon. It was the original Bill). When I refer to this Bill I include the original Bill also.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I may point out to the honourable member that you have already ruled that the present Bill is a new Bill.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali : That ruling has not been given effect to. However that may be, I hope I will be allowed to proceed with my speech without interruption. I am now referring to the past history of the Bill. I was submitting that we received the opinions of the High Court, the judiciary and the executive, of district judges and deputy commissioners, of magistrates and sub-judges, religious, social and political bodies, of individuals, officials and non-officials, sahkars, lawyers and zamindars. In fact, no two persons have met since the introduction of this Bill in the Council who have not commented upon and criticised the provisions of the Bill on railway platforms, in trains, in lorries, and in all other places. Taking into consideration this huge amount of opinions which we have received, I think that it does not admit of any further comment at all. Afterwards in the Simla session the Member now in charge of the Bill himself moved a motion that the Bill be referred to a select committee. The Bill was submitted to a committee of 18 members. Whether the committee consisted of an inauspicious number as the "Tribune" says, or not, all the same it was a select committee to all intents and purposes. That wise officer prompted by the advantages of a long experience of a brilliant record of service thought it fit that the Bill should be sifted thoroughly by a select committee before its coming to this Council for further consideration clause by clause. That select committee finished its labours in no less than eleven sittings. The summoning of the meetings of that select committee has involved an expenditure of a very large sum to Government.

Let me explain here before I proceed further that the select committee discussed that Bill clause by clause, scrutinised it in full detail with an open mind and not as representatives of any interests, without any bias. Now the mover of the motion for re-circulation of the Bill has told us that drastic changes have been effected in the provisions of the Bill and therefore this Bill should be re-circulated. I may assure the House that on a close examination it will be found that the statement that drastic changes have been made in the Bill is a mere illusion and not a reality. The honourable member, for instance, pointed out some amendments in the Usurious Loans Act and the provisions relating to conciliation boards. Now these amendments to Usurious Loans Act and the provisions relating to conciliation boards were already in the original Bill and these two classes of provisions have already been considered and even commented upon by the public at large. If the honourable member considers that these amendments are not suitable he is quite welcome to move amendments to the same and they will be considered and disposed of by the Council on their merits. But it cannot be said that either he or the other members of the Council have been taken unawares in the matter of these provisions. After all when a Bill goes to a select committee it is the right of that committee to cut short, to omit a clause or to add new words in the clauses and so on. Otherwise where is the necessity to send a Bill to a select committee. The select committee meets only to consider the provisions of a measure very closely, because the whole Council has not got the time to do so. If honourable members do not agree with the changes effected in the Bill as a result of their close scrutiny it is open to them to bring forward amendments on the floor of the House.

So far as clauses 36, 37 and 38 are concerned, an announcement has been made that they are not going to be discussed here. I need not therefore speak on these clauses. But the honourable member attacked Chapter VIII of the Bill as a whole and asked, "What are the reasons for changing radically the civil law of the land." I will briefly give him one or two reasons which I believe will satisfy him. The important part of Chapter VIII is clause 33 which relates to arrest. As already pointed out by the Honourable Finance Member there was a provision in clauses 27 and 28 of the original Bill which made certain changes in the matter of arrest. In Order 21, Rule 37 and in Order 21, Rule 40 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code it was provided in the original Bill that the word 'shall' should be substituted for the word 'may.' That is to say, the original Bill wanted to take away the discretion which the courts have, that they may issue notice before the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor. The amendment made it obligatory for the court to issue such notice. That shows that this matter of arrest in one aspect or another was in the original Bill which has been sufficiently commented upon by the public at large. Therefore, there is nothing new so far as change in the law of arrest is concerned. Clause 34 relates to section 60 (1) (e) of the Code of Civil Procedure. Now this section has been a dead letter. Why? Because the interpretation as to what property or what house could be saved from attachment or sale was in the hands of the judiciary. And as misfortune will have it, whenever the question of interpretation by courts comes in—I do not mean to impute any motives to courts—if it is a matter between a debtor and creditor or rather between an agriculturist debtor and a non-agriculturist creditor, the interpretation is always made in favour of the creditor.

There have been rulings which we quoted in the select committee itself in which our High Court have held that when a zamindar had two houses in one of which he tethered his mare, that house is not safe from attachment or sale in execution of a decree. Our High Court have gone so far. (An honourable member: Where?). They say that it is not covered by the term cattle. I do not propose to go very much into details. When the time comes I will go into them. What I want to illustrate is that section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code has been up to this time a dead letter and what we want is that no interpretation should be left in the hands of the judicial courts. We want to make provision for everything in the Bill itself. That is the reason for incorporating section 34 in the Bill which my friend wanted to know. Then under the Civil Procedure Code a man who paid the decretal amount or part of it outside the Court and did not get it certified within a fixed period, was debarred from proving that payment out of court especially when there is a quarrel or jhagra over the factum of payment. This is a strange thing. The law imposes a liability on the creditor and I fail to understand why if the creditor failed to discharge that liability the man to be punished for that should be the debtor. The duty is imposed on the creditor and if he fails to fulfil that duty punishment is awarded to the poor debtor. That is why this section 35 is put in to omit sub-rule 3 of Rule 2 of Order XXI of the Civil Procedure Code. I have dealt with clauses which occur in Part VIII of the Bill and which the honourable mover of the Bill does not propose to delete. Then, Sir, I further want to add that all these clauses are within the scope of the Bill. The scope of the Bill is to give relief to those in debt, debtors in general. Clauses 30, 31, 32, 33 and 34 have been added in that spirit. The condition of the debtor in this province was, as my honourable friends over there already know, published in the Calvert Committee report and it was in furtherance of that that this measure was brought forward by the Government. The debts estimated at that time amounted to 135 crores which by this time must have swelled to at least 200 crores of rupees. This is the time I suggest that this measure should not be delayed even by a single day otherwise

تا تریان از عراق آورده شود ملزم گردیدہ مرده شود

The snake-bitten will die before the antidote is brought to him. Any delay might result, I am afraid, in general dissatisfaction in the country side. We might be entangled in political difficulties if we fail to help those persons who are in debt at this critical stage. Now the stage has reached when they say that the last straw might break the camel's back. The zamindars and those in debt—I am not talking of zamindars only but all those persons who are in debt—are unable to make both ends meet. We have read in the papers the other day that one man committed theft simply for the reason that he wanted to go to jail because he could not find two meals a day if he remained outside. When this stage has reached, it is the duty of the Government as well as of all members of this House, to try to ameliorate the position of the debtor. This Bill was brought forward by the Government itself. It is not a non-official measure and I appeal to the Government that it is their bounden duty to see that the Bill is carried through during the present session and not delayed by a single minute. We have as I have already mentioned sufficiently gauged public opinion and even if we send the Bill again for eliciting public opinion thereon, what will be the result? The result will be tons and tons more of opinion, those in favour of the Bill adding five more sentences and those against five more sentences each in their own line. i.e., for, for and against, against. Practically it comes to nothing. Unfortunately everything in this province takes somehow or other a communal tinge and this Bill is not an exception to that. We tried in the select committee to make this Bill general. But unfortunately we failed and we submitted ourselves to the vote of the majority. They wanted to give relief especially to those persons who are petty landholders and whose condition is very bad. The reason why the Bill is called a communal measure is that the Hindu sahukars and the Ahrtis or the traders are creditors while the Muslim zamindars happen to be debtors. That is the reason why a communal tinge is given to this Bill. I think I have given sufficient reasons to prove that no drastic changes have been made in this measure and it has been sufficiently circulated throughout the length and breadth of the province and there is no reason why we should lag behind other provinces which are so ahead. It will not be out of place to mention that the Bhavnagar State, the Kapurthala State and even the Jammu and Kashmir State have passed similar measures. The necessity for such a measure is keenly felt throughout the Empire. There is also the Bengal Money Lending Act; there is the Central Provinces Conciliation Boards Amendment Act. Similar measures are also under consideration in other provinces, such as the Temporary Regulation of Sales Bill in the United Provinces, the Regulation of Execution Bill, the Usurious Loans Amendment Bill and the Encumbered Estates Bill in the same province.

What I want to impress is that not only has this Bill been studied but it has been widely circulated and so widely known to everybody, as a sort of thrill or sensation has been sent throughout the Indian Empire that every body is well versed with the pros and cons of this question. With these words I oppose this motion.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural): Sir, Whenever speeches are made on this Bill, whether at Simla or here or whether we go through the minutes of dissent that have been added to the select committee report both by the members representing the rural classes and by those representing the urban interests, it looks as if something very drastic or something in the nature of a Magna Charta is being created for the benefit of the zamindar. I would like to mention at the very outset that the situation is a very serious one and under such an exceptional situation an exceptional measure is needed and I frankly admit that this measure is a very halting one. It is not at all likely to meet the requirements of the case. Anyhow we have proceeded to discuss this Bill and we should proceed with it in the hope that our friends over there will see the wisdom of proceeding with this legislation and if a more drastic legislation were needed there will be time to consider that. Sir, if a reference is made to the history of the circumstances which have necessitated this Bill, no doubt is left in the mind of any body that the Government have already taken no less than about 8 years in bringing forward this legislation before the House. The economic depression that made its appearance about the close of 1930 or at the beginning of 1931 is still continuing with its usual rigour and vigour and we do not find any signs of its abatement in the near future. It was then that it was pointed out to the Government that they should come forward with some legislation which might afford substantial and immediate relief to the indebted classes. The Government took sufficient time to make up their mind and set up an enquiry committee which, if I remember right, submitted its report to this House about the middle of June last year and that report was discussed in this House and the Government were requested to come forward with legislation and the Government took, it will be pertinent to remember, six more months to come to a definite conclusion and they introduced this Bill in the last budget session in March 1933 and at that time the motion was that it should be circulated for eliciting public opinion and it is unquestionably true that we have got a large volume of opinion on this Bill, some for and some against, which have been discussed by this House in the session at Simla. After that motion, the House took no less than a week to go through the pros and cons of the question and these provisions were discussed threadbare. It was then that this measure was referred to a select committee and they have come forward with certain amendments and I am free to admit that in some very important matters the provisions of this Bill have been rather toned down in favour of the creditor rather than the debtor.

I will point out what I mean by this. This will make it quite clear that this is not the time now to adopt any dilatory tactics regarding this legislation. Immediate legislation is needed and we have taken sufficient time and I think this legislation is rather overdue. Again I would make one observation in this connection and that is this that an attempt has been made to make this legislation a class legislation or what is called a communal legislation. I will not detain this House long over this question. I will content myself by reading two or three lines from the report of Dewan Gokul Chand, Revenue Assistant, Ludhiana. He has put the whole question in a nutshell. This is what he has to say—

The Bill both in form and substance appears to be an economic measure and to give it a communal colour is the height of absurdity.

He quotes figures.

I understand that there are more than 40,000 money-lenders in the Punjab and this number includes Khojas, Pathans, Shaikhs amongst Muslims, Brahmans, Khatrias, Aroras and Jats amongst Sikhs. No sane person can reasonably imagine that the Bill is directed against Hindus alone, as money-lenders come from all religions, nor can it be said that the Bill can benefit any particular community.

After this passage I think no room is left for any sane person to give it a communal colour or to call it a class legislation.

While on this subject I will make one or two observations for the benefit of those friends who have moved a motion that this Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion. There has been some propaganda in the press that this is a class legislation. I put it to them, is it not that they represent Hindus as such? Do they forget that they are the representatives of the Hindus as a class?

Mr. Labh Singh : No.

Sardar Arjan Singh : They would not concede that point. Do they forget that a nation—Hindus being included amongst them,—according to John Bright lives in a hut? Do they forget in their own particular case—leave alone the case of the Sikhs and the Muslims, I am taking the Hindus as a community—do they not find that their community also lives in huts? Can they say when they are offering opposition to this legislation, whether they are serving the interests of the Hindus? Can they give any explanation as to the attitude which they have adopted towards this legislation? I quite realize that Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, the zamindar Hindu leader, may have incurred the displeasure of certain members of this House, but I ask what have those Hindu zamindars the Jats, the Dogars, the rajputs, the Sainis, etc., have done to incur their displeasure? They have kept up the Hindu traditions. Are the Hindu members here serving their interests all right? Do they not know that at this time by their opposition to this legislation they are betraying their own cause? (Hear, hear). They are talking of majorities and minorities in this House. Do they forget that they themselves are creating all this? As a matter of fact, they should give their best consideration to these few observations and they should remember that the zamindars are looking forward to them. They have all respect for the Hindu members but those who pose themselves to be the representatives of those interests are not alive to the interests of these people, and the time is coming, I should say that the Nemesis is closely following them and they will have to cast off this mask or they will have to fall into line with the other people who are representing real zamindar interests (hear, hear). Do they not know that only a day or two back Mahatma Gandhi observed that the condition of the zamindars in the rural areas is miserable? After he has defrayed the cost of farming he has very little left to him. So far perhaps honourable members will agree, but Mahatma Gandhi goes further. He lays the whole fault at our doors. He says the fault lies at the door of the urban people and perhaps he might have with some justification added that the urban people are not only not protecting their interests but, I will be excused if I say, that they are exploiting these masses.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Just as you are doing now.

Sardar Arjan Singh : The honourable member will go to ask for their votes. He has been returned by their votes and he will remember that all sorts of propaganda has to be carried on. Elections are again approaching. But the zamindars are simple people, they are poor people, they are deserving of our support, they deserve protection, but they never expect the treatment we are meting out to them. After these observations, I have a word or two for the consideration of this Government.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : That was a sermon to me. Now what about the merits of the case?

Sardar Arjan Singh : The Government have taken long in coming to a conclusion that some measure is needed, and having adopted that course the Government should not be deflected from the course that they have adopted on account of some wrong propaganda that has been started by our friends over there. I have been reading since the report of the select committee has been published or has at least been made available to the press that some associations have come into existence. There are some mushroom growths and telegrams have been submitted to His Excellency the Governor. Nobody questions their right to approach the head of the province, but what I take exception to is the language, the offensive language, in which those telegrams are couched.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Have any telegrams been sent to His Excellency the Governor?

Sardar Arjan Singh : The papers say that they have been submitted to His Excellency.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : You seem to know the language.

Sardar Arjan Singh : The papers publish the language.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I know if the honourable member has seen those telegrams? Has the purport been indicated to him by Government?

Sardar Arjan Singh : I have seen the very language of the telegrams which have been submitted to His Excellency and which have been published in the papers. There has never been a denial that such and such a telegram has not been sent. But my friends have begun to take exception before they have heard the words to which I take exception. These words are—indebted zamindar members are rushing this legislation through the Council. I admit that zamindars are not rich. It may be that they have not amassed and hoarded up money by exploiting and by squeezing out the blood of human beings, but I say the zamindar members here are as free from indebtedness as anybody on the other side can claim to be. They are saying that members are indebted, that zamindars are indebted. These are aspersions which should not be allowed to go unchallenged by members on this side of the House. That being the kind of propaganda I will request the Government to take no notice of such malicious propaganda as has been started by some interested persons.

Now, it has been suggested that the existing law is quite sufficient to cope with the situation. But it has been made clear that the existing law is a dead letter and it has also been shown by a speaker who has just preceded me that the language of that law is vague and indefinite and also that it gives so much wide discretion to the courts and that the courts have disregarded the spirit of the law. It is therefore absolutely necessary that some kind of legislation should be brought forward.

Again some criticism has been offered and that is this that the credit of the agriculturist tribes or the agricultural debtors will be restricted. It is true that it will be restricted and I for one would welcome it if the credit in some cases is restricted, because it will remove the charge that has been from time to time levelled against the zamindars that because he can get money easily therefore he has been a spendthrift and has been extravagant. If he gets money for necessary purposes no money is needed for extravagance. We, therefore, should welcome that restriction of credit or the crippling of the credit as has been described by some members. I wonder very much why the honourable members opposing this legislation are so much affected with a tender heart for the interests of the zamindars. In this connection I may be allowed to quote the proverb:

امان کولون هیجلی پیر لانی They have been opposing every legislation intended for the amelioration of the conditions of the zamindars; how is it then that they have discovered that at least in this one respect it will cripple the credit of the zamindar?

Now, I would make a hurried reference to one or two provisions of the Bill. As has been pointed out, the need for re-circulation has not been established. While speaking about the credit of the zamindars I forgot to say one or two things. If actually the credit of the zamindar goes down and he is not in a position to get money for his extravagance, I am sure some money would be made available for the advancement of industries. The provisions of the Bill have been before the public and the insolvency proceedings are its operative portions.

The strongest objection put forward by the honourable member, Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath was that the High Court were not consulted at all. He would be surprised to know that if the High Court have approved of anything in this legislation it is this clause. They have put their seal of approval to the modification in the insolvency procedure.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I did not say that with regard to the insolvency procedure. I think I said that the High Court did not approve of other things in this Bill.

Sardar Arjan Singh : The High Court say that this provision will afford some relief and that no serious objection can be taken to it. That is a question of opinion. But the question of whether the sum should be the one fixed originally in the Bill or the figure suggested by the select committee is a question of detail which need not be decided on the floor of this House. Again objection has been taken by Raja Sahib regarding the provision for interest. There again it is admitted that certain rates of interest are excessive and certain transactions are unfair. It is also a question of detail what rate of interest should be considered excessive and what kinds of transaction unfair. That question can be considered when the particular clause comes up for consideration. Objection, again, has been taken to the provision of conciliation boards. Here I may be allowed to say that the procedure that has been adopted by the select committee is much, too much, in favour of the creditor. Clauses 13 and 14 are an improvement in favour of the creditor. A clause has also been added by which if the applicant does not prosecute his application with due care and caution, the application should be dismissed. That is a disabling clause added to the detriment of the debtor.

There is yet another clause to which objection was taken, that is, that legal practitioners as such were excluded from putting in appearance before these conciliation boards. In clause 23 the select committee has provided that legal practitioners or agents should be allowed to appear before the conciliation boards. There was another provision which was an important one, I mean that relating to the modification of the law regarding arrest. That has now been abolished altogether and the Honourable Finance Member has explained that the Government of India have some legislation under their contemplation in which they might deal with this question of arrest and imprisonment of the debtor. It was, therefore, thought desirable to drop this clause altogether. Regarding other clauses the Leader of the Unionist Party and the Government seem to have come to an understanding. They certainly were very important but as the legislation is urgently needed we have to take it as it is.

I would submit that a very important case has been made out for this Bill and that the relief which is proposed to be afforded should not only be substantial but immediate. This latter object would be defeated if the circulation motion is again allowed now. It should also be made clear that if these dilatory tactics succeed the charge would be levelled at the door of this House as well as of Government, the Government on the ground that they are not doing the needful in the circumstances of the case and this House for the unbusinesslike manner in which it would be acquitting itself if it lent support to the motion for circulation. With these words I support the motion for consideration and oppose the motion for circulation of the Bill.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, Non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I have listened with very great delight to the charges made against me personally by the honourable member who has just sat down. But I think the honourable member was falling into a mistake himself against which he was warning the House. Before listening to me, before hearing what I have to say, he started a tirade against myself personally and against other members sitting on this side generally. I shall come to his points later on.

I want first of all to examine this report and the constitution of the committee besides other matters. This report is by a select committee which consisted of 13 members. Seven of them belonged to what are called the agricultural tribes. I certainly make a distinction between members of the agricultural tribes and agriculturists. An agriculturist is one who lives by agriculture, cultivates the land by his own hand and is a peasant in the true sense of the word. But here are agriculturists of the type of the honourable member who has just sat down who are agriculturists by accident of birth merely to exploit the agriculturists by saying that they also belong to that class. I shall presently show how the agriculturists are exploited by these members of the agriculturist tribes. There were seven members of these tribes. These seven members represented, according to my estimate, 50 per cent. of the Punjab population. There were three members who belonged to the non-agricultural tribes and they were also representatives of more than 50 per cent. of the population because it has been ascertained that agricultural tribes in the province are less in number than non-agricultural tribes. Investigations have been made and it has been accepted by His Majesty's Government that in the Punjab the division of classes into agricultural tribes and non-agricultural tribes leads to this that they are at least fifty-fifty but that the agricultural tribes are less in number than the non-agricultural tribes. So on this committee which was to represent the population of the Punjab seven members belonging to the agricultural tribes were allotted seats and three seats were allotted to non-agricultural tribes representing fifty per cent. or more of His Majesty's subjects, in this province. There were then three official members. Even if the official members wanted to help the non-agricultural tribes or desired to take an impartial view there were seven members on the one side and six on the other. Even if the official members tried to take a judicial view which they did not, it was impossible for them to carry it. Thus we find a report of the select committee consisting of 13 members, but not one of them prepared to support the report. Because we find that the official members say that they sign the report subject to their right to move or support any amendment in the Council. Similarly the seven members of the agricultural tribes have also written a minute of dissent. The three members belonging to the non-agricultural tribes have also written a minute of dissent. So that the report which is signed by 13 members as it stands has not got one supporter in this House. This is one point with regard to the report.

There is another point to which I wish to draw the attention of honourable members and the fact is very significant. Originally it was said in the heading of the Bill, a Bill to provide for the relief of indebtedness, and the improvement of agrarian credit in the Punjab. The words 'improvement of agrarian credit in the Punjab' have now been deleted and this omission is very significant. The official members and others must have realised that if this measure were to become law it would not improve agrarian credit. Far from it it would go to discredit the financial situation throughout the province, and that is a reason, a very pertinent reason why these words have been dropped. If, as I shall presently show, the whole scheme of the Bill is such that instead of improving agrarian credit it lays the axe at the root of agrarian credit in this province, it would be impossible for the provisions of the Bill to be accepted. I am certain that after this Bill becomes law there could be no credit left in the villages.

I find one charge has been levelled against me and that is that I represent the rural classes and that I should not therefore oppose this measure. That is no argument. I am opposing this measure precisely because I am a representative of the rural classes. I am not speaking for any party. Perhaps on some points my views may be different from those which might be expressed by other members sitting on these benches. But as a representative of rural areas I say that the Bill does not even touch the fringe of the problem, the problem of agrarian indebtedness and it is principally on this ground that I am not prepared to support it in its present form. It entirely absolutely shows no kind of relief to the agriculturists, none whatever as I shall presently show. I am one of those, I think I have expressed myself pretty strongly, who believe that the peasant class in the Punjab is the backbone of the province and it ought to be protected. I believe also that the peasant is born in debt, lives in debt and dies in debt, and that everything should be done by the State to better his condition. I repeat that feeling of mine now. On the peasant depends the prosperity of this province. He who cultivates the land with his own hand, the peasant, the tiller of the society gives everything to us, he is the backbone of society. He gives the lawyer his fat fee; he gives the trader something to trade with; he gives everybody something to live upon. I am not one of those who believe that the peasant should not be relieved of the distress which is undoubtedly there in this class. I entirely agree with the honourable member, Sardar Arjan Singh, who I am sorry has now fled away and who does not want to hear what I have to say, that relief must be afforded to the peasant. But it should be relief, real relief and not merely an eye-wash. It is on the ground that this Bill proposes merely an eye-wash that I am not prepared to support it, that it gives no relief to the real agriculturist, to the small peasant proprietor. While I am a supporter of the agriculturist, I also want to protect the honest money-lender, not the dishonest money-lender, not the shylock, not the person who weaves a web round a person like a spider and swallows him, of which you find many instances in Darling's book. I am not a supporter of that class. I shall never support such a money-lender. I think it is a sin to support such a person. On the other hand this province is so constituted that money-lending is not confined to a particular class or caste. There are hundreds of widows who do money-lending, who lend money on interest in order to carry on their existence. There are hundreds of people who are not money-lenders and whom this Bill will entirely destroy without bringing any relief to the agriculturist. I, therefore, say that the Government was merely thinking of the regular money-lenders when it prepared this Bill. It is not the small honest money-lender; it is the big landlord who really would be benefited by this Bill and no other person would be benefited by it. (A voice : Question.) You may question. I am going to make it absolutely plain that I oppose the Bill on two grounds, first that it does not give any relief to the peasant proprietor and, secondly, that it really destroys the honest money-lender or the person who lends money honestly without trying to entangle any one in his meshes. It is for these reasons that I am not going to support the Bill.

I will give you instances where several countries have tried to tackle this problem before. In the United States of America at one time the peasant had a very large amount of debt to pay. The amount was much larger than the land revenue here. The principal debt here would not even pay the interest on the debts in the United States of America. (A voice : What was the amount ?) I cannot tell you just now, but I will give you the definite figure on Monday if you like. The problem there was tackled by the United States Government and they did not bring in a Bill of this kind or such Acts of spoliation which really take away from the poor people and put in the pocket of the people who deserve absolutely no sympathy. I would like to ask, is this an honest measure ? An agriculturist as defined here or a debtor as defined here—an owner of a thousand acres of canal-irrigated land—goes to a money-lender and borrows Rs. 10,000 and purchases more land. He comes and tries to take the benefit of the definition which is now given and he will get the benefit. His land cannot be touched because he is an agriculturist, his houses cannot be touched because he is an agriculturist, and the money-lender gave him Rs. 10,000 thinking that he was lending to a substantial man who could pay. I ask Sardar Arjan Singh who sits there and calls himself an agriculturist—he calls himself an agriculturist by mere concession (laughter)—he goes there and buys land which I cannot buy. He borrows Rs. 10,000. He goes in the open market and purchases canal-irrigated land. When the money-lender claims his money back, he simply snaps his fingers at the unfortunate money-lender and tells him, "I belong to an agriculturist tribe, you cannot touch my land, you cannot touch my house, you can do what you like." Is that justice, is that fair-play ? Should Sardar Arjan Singh try to compel me to support this Bill ? Can he make any distinction so far as he and I are concerned ? He comes from Hoshiarpur, so do I. He belongs to a land-owning class, so do I. His forefathers might have fought in the War but, so did mine. He is a lawyer, so am I. But in the matter of repayment of loan, his land cannot be touched, his property cannot be touched.

Pir Akbar Ali : Sir, is the honourable member speaking on the motion before the House ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : People should try to understand and not interrupt. I say that when you define "debtors" as has been defined here, you really give protection to a class which does not deserve protection, and it would be no protection to the small peasant proprietor. It is wrong to say that the poor peasant is protected by the provisions of this Bill and, therefore, my submission is that really there must be an amendment of the definition of "debtor" if you want this Act to be beneficial. Similarly, the term "agriculturist" must also be properly defined. You cannot escape it. It is no use quoting the Acts of Bengal and the United Provinces and the Central Provinces. The problem there is not the same as it is here.

The definition of "agriculturist" here with Punjab is based on birth which as you know, once a Jat or a Gujar you can never become a Brahmin or a non-Brahmin, except in your next birth if there is any. This is the real position. The problem, I say, has not been studied by Government benches and it has not been studied by those who really want to benefit the small peasant proprietor. It has never happened in the history of the world that an Act like this has been framed to benefit the small peasant proprietor. Unfortunately to-day Government says that the small peasant proprietor shall pay no debt to the money-lender. What consolation is it to an agriculturist if to-day he gets out of the clutches of a non-agriculturist and falls into those of an agriculturist money-lender to-morrow? The result would be simply this that to-day perhaps Rai Bahadur Sewak Ram is swallowing him, to-morrow Sardar Arjan Singh will swallow him. Sardar Arjan Singh will not have the slightest hesitation to swallow him, and if he wants any authority I can quote it. Mr. Darling says in his book that the Arora makes the worst money-lender, but the Jat beats him. He quotes instances that wherever a man has fallen into the clutches of a Jat money-lender, he has never been relieved of his miseries. The Land Alienation Act has given this class liberty to swallow the small peasant proprietor. Kindly read the description of the Muzaffargarh district.

That is the problem. Are you out to benefit the small peasant proprietor, the person on whom the prosperity of this province depends or are you going to increase dishonesty, or are you going to increase inefficiency, or are you going to increase the miseries of the people in whose name you have brought this Bill? I cannot understand why those members who represent the rural classes want to be kind to debtors of all kinds. They say that they tried their best to extend the scope of the Bill, that they wanted to include the urban classes, but that it was the representatives of the urban classes who would not agree to it. I will read out the passage. They say:

We desire earnestly to impress upon all concerned that if effective steps are not taken to afford relief to debtor classes the peace of the province will be endangered.

These are threats "do not pay land revenue, do not do this and do not do that." People have been instigated to commit murders and these murders have been going on throughout the province. It is no use placing these threats before the world. Here's what they say. It shows how they propose to bring in the depressed classes.

One of the sorest grievances with the critics of this Bill was that Government and zamindars had entered into an unholy alliance to benefit the Muslim at the expense of the Hindu and the zamindar at the expense of the non-zamindar.

It has been proved beyond a shadow of doubt that there has been a sort of alliance between the zamindar members and the Government, according to which it has been agreed that they will not move such and such clauses if the others will not move their amendments. There is a definite evidence on the floor of this House that some sort of alliance does exist between the so-called zamindars on the one side and the Government on the other. The note states further :

As soon as the select committee entered upon its business we made a definite suggestion that the supposed sting of this legislation being a pro-Muslim or a pro-zamindar measure be taken out and all the provisions of the Bill should be made applicable to all sections of the population, whether agricultural or non-agricultural, rural or urban. We were surprised to find that this suggestion was stoutly opposed by those of our colleagues who claim to represent money-lending interests and the alliance, whether holy or unholy, seemed to have come into existence between the official members and the urban members of the select committee, because our official colleagues were just as keen and anxious to oppose this suggestion as our urban non-official colleagues on the Committee.

Then later on they say :

With this end in view, after our proposal to make this Bill a law of general application had failed, we proposed that the word 'agriculturist' should be so defined as to include (a) all the members of notified agricultural tribes—and here's the cat out of the bag—

(a) All the members of notified agricultural tribes ; (b) all members of depressed classes among Hindus with all members of the classes corresponding to these Hindu classes among Muslims and Sikhs and (c) all other persons earning their livelihood mainly by agriculture.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Is it not fair ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : No, because you are also included in (a) (laughter). I will be satisfied with (c) but not the other two. That is the main point. (a) and (b) are definitely caste and class distinctions. They are based on birth, they are not based on occupation or any other distinction of this kind. Therefore, these seven members were very anxious that these agricultural tribes should come in with these members of the depressed classes and they should come in because in the near future when the depressed classes have their eight seats they should have them on their side and with the agriculturists and the depressed classes on the other, they would say, now we are going to rule the province. This is a sort of exploitation. Instead of confining the definition to a poor man not earning more than Rs. 20 or Rs. 40 or to a person who has got nothing to live upon but his own land, these gentlemen wanted a definition of this kind. "All other persons earning their livelihood mainly by agriculture" that is the only thing which should have been there. I am objecting to (a) and (b).

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : See the definition of 'debtor'. Does that not meet your point ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : It does not. The definition runs thus :

'Debtor' means a person who owes a debt or debts and

(i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a landowner, or tenant or a servant of a landowner or tenant.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Where does Raja Narendra Nath come in ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I do not want him to be there.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Where is Rai Bahadur Sewak Ram ? Do you not want to bring him in ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : In this definition I do not want to give him a place.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : He would in any case be excluded under other clauses.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I definitely interpret it in the way I do. I am not going to accept the honourable member's interpretation. This is a landowner. That means any person who owns land. If a person owns 20,000 acres of land, the benefit would go to him.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : But it says, "who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture."

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : "And does agriculture by means of a servant"—what would you call him?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I would call him a landowner.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I am not prepared to extend the benefit to that class. All those who desire that the credit of the province should not suffer should exclude these classes.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Do you want to exclude Raja Sahib?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Certainly, I do. I want to exclude Rai Bahadur Sewak Ram and Sardar Arjan Singh and Sardar Buta Singh and all the so-called "agriculturist" gentlemen who sit there. That is the main point. Therefore, I would give protection only to that person who is a petty peasant who earns his livelihood by means of agriculture and cultivates with his own hand. If you limit the Bill only to that class then you will have their sympathy. Speaking for myself I will wholeheartedly support that amendment if it is moved by Government. But the Government will not, in order to have the support of the benches opposite who claim to clamour for the protection of the small landholder. That is why I have been pointing out that the definition of debtor has been so framed that really it does not do any benefit to those poor people who ought to be benefited by a measure like this but those rich people who should not be afforded the sort of protection proposed to be given by this measure. I, therefore, submit with all the earnestness at my command that the Bill should be confined to those classes who are ignorant, who are illiterate, who cannot protect themselves and whose main livelihood is agriculture or agricultural labour. I have no objection to a Bill of that kind. But this Bill does not benefit them.

Take another instance. Here is an agriculturist under the Punjab Land Alienation Act. He wants to pay off his debt by selling his land. But he cannot go to the open market and get the highest possible price for his land. His market is very restricted and he is compelled to sell his land naturally at a price less than what it will fetch if sold in an open market. Therefore, the debt which he can wipe off by selling say ten or fifteen kanals of his land in an open market has now to be wiped off by selling 30 or 40 kanals because of the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

Sardar Arjan Singh spoke so much about his solicitude for the poor agriculturists. I can claim to represent their interest to a greater extent than the honourable member can claim. It is only by an accident that he managed to come into the Council without election. I can challenge him to stand as a candidate for the Hoshiarpur district to which he belongs and I am sure of beating him hollow at the elections if the Hindus and the Sikhs were allowed joint electorates. That will show how much the agriculturists there have confidence in him and are prepared to support his candidature and how much confidence they have in me and support my candidature.

Mr. President : There should be a limit to irrelevancy.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I am only replying to what the honourable Sikh member for Hoshiarpur has been saying about me. More than half of his speech was directed against me. My submission is this : If you want to give genuine protection to the agriculturists you should change this definition which exists in the Punjab Land Alienation Act, so that he may have the whole market for him to dispose off as much of his land as he likes for the best price possible to enable him to wipe off his debts. Otherwise his land should be made absolutely inalienable, not alienable even to the so-called agriculturists. After all, what does it matter to a poor peasant if his land is sold to an agriculturist money-lender or to a non-agriculturist money-lender? So far as he is concerned, he is swallowed. This is the situation which I presented before the Joint Parliamentary Committee and which gave so much offence to my friend, Sardar Buta Singh. That is the real crux of the whole problem. If it is desired to save the poor agriculturist, the small landholder, either make his land absolutely inalienable, either to an agriculturist or to a non-agriculturist, or if for necessary purposes the permission of the deputy commissioner may be taken for the alienation of land, let that permission be for the small landholder to sell his land in the open market so that it may fetch him the highest price. I ask, is it justice to give protection to big landlords in the garb of giving protection to small landholders? I cannot really understand the hypocrisy underlying this sort of protection. It is impossible to argue with people who will not see the obvious. That is why we see people bringing in measures to amend the Usurious Loans Act, the Insolvency Act, the Civil Procedure Code and it will not be surprising if to-morrow a measure is brought forward to amend the Criminal Procedure Code giving protection to an agriculturist who may murder or slaughter his money-lender. If there is a genuine desire on the part of Government to help the poor agriculturists, they must take a lesson from other countries. What is the cause of the poverty and indebtedness of the poor peasants? Is he poor because of the money-lender? No. The money-lender is perhaps only one of the causes of the poverty of the agriculturist. But the real cause is that there is no small cottage industry in which he can employ himself in his spare hours and thus increase his earnings. The Government should try to find out the real causes of the poverty of the agriculturists and try to solve the problem of their relief as America has done. The State should take over the burden of the peasants. (Interruption). There are no such problems in America as exist here such as agriculturists and non-agriculturists. There are no problems there of a communal nature. It must be admitted that there are no castes. Therefore the Government here must do what Governments in other countries have done by removing all causes of friction between the various castes, tribes and communities. (Interruption). Yes, America has done that. I have not got the book before me so that I can read extracts to show what America has done, but I will bring it next day and prove the correctness of my statement. The way in which the Government should tackle the problem of poverty of the peasants here is to take up the debts of these people to the money-lenders. I will tell you presently how that can be done. Now that the rates of interest are very low, the Government can raise a loan enough to repay the loans of the agriculturists and pay the money-lenders their due and recover the same from the borrowers in small instalments. That is the way in which the problem of indebtedness can be solved. That will be a real remedy and not the destruction of the whole body of money-lenders, including petty money-lenders, widows and orphans whose main source of livelihood is money-lending. Again, we know as a matter of fact, that more than half the income of a landholder goes in land revenue. Government can help him by relinquishing a good part of that land revenue. The zamindar is already groaning under the heavy burden of land revenue especially in those parts which are not canal irrigated. Another fact is that the land owner has to pay large amounts of money to petty officials, patwaris, girdawar kanungos, tahsildars, police, and to several other people in various forms. That is well known to all. If there is any topic on which Chaudhri Afzal Haq and myself agree it is on this topic of corruption. This corruption should be eradicated from the Government departments altogether if the poor peasant is to be protected. Government should take strong measures against corrupt people and they should be made an example of for others. Here I may add that it is not only the duty of the Government to eradicate this evil, but it is also the duty of non-official members of this Council to help the Government in this respect to help the Government in this matter. Now, what happens? Whenever the Government makes an attempt to catch hold of a corrupt officer at once a communal defence is put up: This is the work of a Muslim; this is the work of a rich Hindu and thus protection is given to a corrupt official from communal motives, from communal bias or communal considerations. Communal patriotism is exploited by these corrupt people and the result is that you are not able to stop corruption which throttles the service everywhere. Therefore the Government should take note of this. Instead of promoting these sorts of things, they should take a strong hand with these men who are reputed to be corrupt. Otherwise you cannot stamp out corruption. This has been said from the time this Council came into existence and the Government unfortunately have not taken a strong lead. They should wholeheartedly co-operate to protect the poor peasant.

Now I have given three remedies as to how the peasant is to be helped. There is another suggestion. You have now got the Rural Reconstruction Department. You are hearing every day about this. But what have you done to make the zamindar happy? Thanks to Mahatama Gandhi, he has now taken up this problem in right earnest. He has developed his scheme of rural uplift, a scheme for the development of small industries. But what has the Government done? In other civilised parts of the world it has been considered the duty of the Government to see that the earning power of the small peasant is increased. Small industries are introduced. But here we hear of mosquito nets having been introduced. The Government should at the earliest possible moment see that in their spare time these peasants, these labourers who toil day and night in their fields have something to do in their spare time.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : What about silk rearing and poultry keeping ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Yes, do introduce them.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : They have been introduced here.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I can give you other suggestions on that point. But this is not the time for them. But I am asking, what has the Government done ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It has done these things.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : By having costly agricultural farms and paying big salaries to officers which are to be borne by the poor zamindars. I do not find any industrial programme for rural uplift.

Pir Akbar Ali : You will oppose that if the Government were to bring a motion on that subject.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : You are a prophet. That is another method by which the zamindar can be helped. But the Government has not done it and the Government will not do it. Government has got so many things on hand and it does not want to give up those things and take this rural question. If the mosquito nets are to be given by an officer drawing Rs. 8,000 a month and if you have such a costly machine, you cannot possibly help the zamindar. If I have the authority in my hand I would reduce the salaries of the high officers. Of course I would protect Mr. Boyd who comes from England. I will give him some allowance. But what justification has an Indian, a Hindu or a Muslim or a Sikh for the matter of that, to draw Rs. 5,000 or 4,000 or 3,000 ? I see this clamour going on everywhere. If you want to protect this rural man, do protect him.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali : Is the honourable member speaking to the motion ? Are these the reasons for recirculation of the Bill or is he criticising the Bill ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Let me explain matters. My friend has not understood me. The main point on which the Bill has been brought is the relief of indebtedness of the agricultural classes or the people who live on agriculture. That is the main problem. One of the burdens under which the agriculturist suffers and for which he has to borrow money is—

Pir Akbar Ali : The Bill is for the relief of indebtedness in the Punjab.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : My friend will not understand what is so obvious. If he has not to pay land revenue to such an extent, if he has not to pay such high salaries to officials, his trouble is reduced to half.

That is the argument which I am developing and my friend is interrupting because he cannot understand this problem. Therefore I say that not even the fringe of the problem has been touched by this measure. Now what has this measure done? Let me sum up how I have understood this Bill. It interferes with or modifies the provisions of the Insolvency Act. It interferes with or modifies some of the sections of the Civil Procedure Code. Whether they will be carried out or not we have yet to wait and see. We have to wait and see how Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and Mr. Boyd decide this point. We have to hold up our hearts in patience and see how these things work. But so far as the select committee report is concerned—we are entitled to speak only on that—my submission is this. First of all, after having given the House some facts which would go, in my opinion, a great extent towards the relief of the agriculturist debtor, I will now proceed to show how this Bill is not going to help him at all. Now there is the question of insolvency. Insolvency is considered to be a very bad thing in India. When we say that the man has become insolvent, diwala Nikal gia, it carries some odium with it. Every one knows that insolvency carries a sin with it. Nobody would like to be called an insolvent. It is considered to be a bad word. Now this Bill, if enacted into law, will lead an agriculturist straight to insolvency, if he is dishonest. The Bill points out the way to dishonesty. That is what the Bill says. If a nation becomes corrupt and dishonest, it should not be permitted to live. That is my opinion. A nation which is corrupt, a nation, consisting of people who do not want to pay off their just debts should not be permitted to thrive. Instead of making the provisions of insolvency more stringent, the Bill tells the people that they can easily be dishonest. Instead of uplifting him, we are now showing him the door through which he can become insolvent if he so wants. That is the most corrupt way, a vicious way of helping the agriculturist. That is not the right thing. We know it very well. Those who have got anything to do with legal cases know that very well. People who own property worth Rs. 10,000 and Rs. 20,000 come forward with long petitions in the courts of insolvency. I wish to know whether in any other civilised country it is possible for such a man to get the benefit of insolvency law. That is the proposition which I place before this Council. In England or in other countries, such a person would not dare to come anywhere near the doors of the insolvency court. Now what provision have you made to prevent such people owning large properties coming near the insolvency courts?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Can they go to the insolvency court?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Every day they do.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : They cannot.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : You study some of the records that are to be seen in the High Court and other courts.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The Bill puts a limit on the property held by a debtor who seeks the benefit of summary procedure without excluding land.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I say there must be a change in the Land Alienation Act. You really give protection by showing a door to these people to become dishonest by not changing the definition of land in the Land Alienation Act. Then with regard to the Usurious Loans Act, I am in sympathy with those members who do not want to fix a very heavy rate of interest. I am one of those who think that a rate of 15 or 24 per cent. is a heavy rate of interest. No man should be permitted to exact such a heavy rate of interest. I am in sympathy with those people who want to deal with the Usurious Loans Act. But you should only amend it when other honest methods have been tried. When an amendment has been made in the definition of an agriculturist of the Land Alienation Act, it is only then that a person can come and say "you shall not charge 18 or 24 per cent., you shall only charge a reasonable rate of interest." Mr. Darling has gone into this question and he says that the rate of interest has risen higher because of the question of security. The two things hang together; the less the security, the higher the rate of interest. You cannot bring in this Bill unless you amend the other Act. That is a suggestion which I would respectfully make to those who are now dealing between man and man. If you say that you cannot amend the other Act, you cannot insist that the rate of interest should not be higher. As I say I am in sympathy with the proposal that lowers the rate of interest and here it is a case not only of a money-lender, belonging to a non-agriculturist tribe being the sinner, but the agriculturist money-lender himself is the greatest sinner in this respect. I just want to give an example to my friends there. He is always talking of agriculturist tribes. The other day I had a case of a Jat money-lender, the money lent by him being Rs. 28 and the court gave him a decree of Rs. 2,500. The money-lender came to me. He belonged to the Hissar district and he said I want my money. As a lawyer I could not refuse the case, as if I did so it would have been professional misconduct. The case was taken to the High Court and the judges gave a decree for Rs. 7,000.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Who were the judges ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : There were two judges, one a European and the other an Indian.

NAL-CHAH IN SONEPAT AND JHAJJAR TAHSILS.

✓*3855. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : With reference to question No. *8278¹ and the answer thereto, will the Honourable the Member for Revenue kindly state :—

- (a) the date on which a question on this subject was first asked ;
- (b) the approximate time within which, having regard to considerations of efficiency, Government expects a question of this nature to be finally settled by its officers ;
- (c) the total amount of money refundable to the owners of wells if the whole amount collected in respect of the wells which have been out of use successively for five years or more is ordered to be refunded ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) The question is difficult to answer inasmuch as the honourable member does not limit his enquiry to this Council nor to any particular questioner therein. The first question asked by the honourable member himself in this Council appears to be no. *584² to which a reply was given on 1st May 1931.

(b) Circumstances vary so much that it is impossible to estimate the period of such inquiries even approximately.

(c) It is not clear whether the honourable member's enquiry refers to the two wells of the Jhajjar tahsil mentioned in the reply to Council question No. *8278¹ as being entitled to remission of nal-chah or to any others. If he will specify the area for which he is making the enquiry an attempt will be made to collect the information for him.

DRAIN NEAR ASAUDAH.

✓*3856. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : With reference to question No. 3280³ and the answer thereto will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state :—

- (a) whether Government considers the reply given by the Superintending Engineers as reasonable ;
- (b) whether in answering a question Government considers its duty sufficiently discharged if it says it " has no information " while it is open to it to make enquiries and collect the information asked for if it is not already in possession of that information ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Yes. It is impossible to provide each village whose land is intersected by the drain with a bridge. Crossings were provided at reasonable intervals apart when the drain was originally constructed. The policy since has been that villagers requiring special crossings should themselves pay for them.

(b) The answer to this question depends upon the circumstances of each case. In the case under reference, Government satisfied themselves that the Superintending Engineer had gone into the case and had reached a reasonable decision.

(83) Inspector of Schools' Demi-official No. 144-C., dated the 25th February 1931, asking for a gift of lorry for Girls Schools from District Board. The District Board will be doing a great service to the cause of girls' education by making this gift. The District Inspector of Schools recommends that as the District Board has received a handsome grant that allows expenditure for the purchase of equipment and other things, the sum of Rs. 2,000 can very easily be allotted out of this head. The gift will benefit girls of neighbouring villages.	Sanctioned.

(f) when the enquiry is expected to be complete ;

(g) whether Government intends to hold judicial enquiry into the alleged offences and serious allegations ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Chander Kishore did apply for permission to prosecute certain jail officers but this was not granted by Government.

(b) and (f) An enquiry was made and the allegations made were found to be false.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) The Government are not prepared to lay on the table the proceedings of the enquiry as such a procedure would not be in the public interest.

(e) No delay occurred in making an enquiry into the allegations.

IMPERIAL CHEMICAL INDUSTRIES (INDIA), LIMITED.

3860. Sardar Sahib Sardar Ujjal Singh : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue kindly state—

(b) whether the Punjab Government was at all consulted in the matter ;

(c) whether the Punjab Government has explored the possibilities of manufacturing chemical products from such waste products of salt mines in the province ; if not, whether Government intends to do it now to encourage indigenous concerns for the purpose ?

(c) It is considered that such exploration is for private industrialists, rather than for Government, to undertake.

(a) whether the admission for Indian boys to the Bishop Cotton and other European schools in Simla is limited ; if so to what extent ;

(b) whether any rules and regulations exist in connection with uniform for boys ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Yes, to the extent of 15 per cent. of the total number of pupils or such other percentage as the Department may prescribe by special order for any particular school or place. But with the sanction of the Director of Public Instruction, Indian Christians and Indians whose vernacular language is not a local vernacular may be treated as Europeans up to a maximum of 10 per cent. of the total enrolment of the school.

(b) Government has not laid down any rules but all the schools, with one exception, have framed rules of their own.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : There are no rules and regulations existing in connection with uniform for boys in this school except that " Indian boys can only be admitted on the undertaking that they can conform in all things (except religious worship) to European customs and habits. No married boys can be admitted, nor will any boy be retained in the school after marriage."

- (b) the amount of capital deposited and contributed by share-holders and others communitywise ;
- (c) the number of sub-inspectors and inspectors recruited from the district during the last five years ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that persons related to the members and presidents of the societies only are recruited, and that other zamindar boys of much higher qualifications are not entertained and the posts have thus become a class preserve for a few individuals to the entire exclusion of other zamindar boys of the district ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that within two or three years orders have been passed that no Sikh belonging to the Hoshiarpur district should be recruited either as a sub-inspector or an inspector in the Co-operative Societies Department ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that this order has worked the greatest hardship on the Sikh candidates of the district who have been passed over by candidates of much lower qualifications belonging to other communities ;

COMPLAINT AGAINST KHAN SAHIB DR. NOOR MUHAMMAD OF LUDHIANA MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

3870. Chaudhri Riasat Ali : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly lay on the table the following :—

- (a) a written complaint, dated 6th July 1934, by Khwaja Muhammad Akram, Member, Ludhiana Municipal Committee, addressed to the President of that committee containing serious allegations committed by Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muhammad, a nominated member of that committee in abuse of his position as a member ;

(b) resolution No. 542 passed unanimously in a general meeting of Ludhiana Municipal Committee held on the 21st September 1934, upholding the allegations contained in the complaint referred to in (a) above, and recommending to the Local Government that the said Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muhammad be removed from membership under section 16 (e) of the Punjab Municipal Act ?

(c) Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly state what action, if any, has been taken or is contemplated in respect of the complaint and the resolution mentioned in the preceding question ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) and (b) An English translation of the complaint lodged by Khwaja Muhammad Akram and a copy of resolution No. 542 passed by the Municipal Committee of Ludhiana on the 21st September 1934 are laid on the table.

(c) The case is under examination by the Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana, from whom Government expect to receive a report in due course.

English translation of an application dated the 6th of July, 1934, from Khwaja Muhammad Akram, Municipal Commissioner, Ludhiana, to the address of the President, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana.

I beg to state that some of the residents of the City came to me and complained that all houses, which Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muhammad, a nominated member of the Municipal Committee, Ludhiana, has constructed in Mohalla Iqbal Ganj and Mohalla Takia Saraj Garan just after his retirement from Government service, are against the plans sanctioned by the Municipal Committee, Ludhiana, and that he is acting against the bye-laws of the Municipal Committee continuously. Repeated applications have been submitted against him to the municipal officers. As he is a member of the Municipal Committee, no legal action has so far been taken against him. It appears that these applications are thrown in the waste paper basket and the member is not prohibited from taking illegal advantage of his office. They informed me about two more violations of the bye-laws made by him, which are noted below. Investigation be made and action be taken—

- (1) He has constructed 4 or 5 tharis without permission and against the Committees bye-laws in front of his house situated in Mohalla Saraj Garan.
- (2) The Executive Officer of the Municipal Committee, Ludhiana, while patrolling the city noticed on the 12th of May, 1934, malba stacked on about 200 feet of the municipal land in front of the stable of Dr. Noor Muhammad in Mohalla Iqbal Ganj about which he made a report, but nothing was recovered from him and the papers were filed.

LUDHIANA MUNICIPALITY.

Copy of Resolution No. 542, passed at an adjourned Ordinary Meeting of Ludhiana Municipal Committee, held on 21st of September, 1934, in the Town Hall.

542. Read complaint of Mansa Ram Kalsi of Mohalla Rupa Mistri against Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muhammad, Municipal Commissioner, for erecting his house and tharis against the sanctioned plans and without permission in Mohalla Iqbal Ganj and Takia Shah Asghar on which the Vice-President ordered to put up all the files regarding him including the one which was pending with the Executive Officer as a notice under section 172/195, Municipal Act, for erecting tharis without permission had been issued. In this connection an application was also received from Khwaja Muhammad Akram by the President which is on the file and which complains of erection of houses and tharis by Dr. Sahib against the sanctioned plans and stacking of malba without permission on the Committee's land. The Vice-President after inspecting the site in company of the Secretary and the overseer reported that it was ascertained that the tharis and pullis were constructed nearly a fortnight ago. The allegations contained in the application are found to be true and Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muhammad seems to have built them without requisite permission. It is a serious matter, more so, because the gentleman contravening the provisions happened to be a nominated member of Municipality. All the files, concerning Dr. Noor Muhammad should be placed before the Committee in its next meeting, with application of Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muhammad in reply to notice served on him on 30th June 1934 under section 172/195 that the plan of tharis submitted by him early in May 1934 was sanctioned. The plan was duly passed by the Health Department and overseer and it was not against by-laws of the Committee. As delay occurred and no order was received from the Municipality he personally presented the case to the President, Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof, who verbally ordered him to construct the tharis. Letter received from Mansa Ram Kalsi and Dr. Noor Muhammad were also read before the House.

Proposal of Khwaja Muhammad Azam seconded by Pandit Muni Lal Kalia.

(1) Dr. Noor Muhammad, a nominated member of the Committee, applied for an erection of a house in Mohalla Saraj Garan on 15th February 1932 but as is evident from the report of the overseer he erected it against the sanctioned plan and thus knowingly and openly violated the law. He also erected some tharis in front of his house without permission and without any agreement, by means of which he has not only violated the law but has also made the Committee to suffer monetary loss and gained his own object. From the measurements of the tharis which were erected with permission it will appear that they have been erected 5 feet long instead of 3 feet. The list is as follows:—

(1)	One Thari	6 feet 10 inches.
(2)	Ditto	4 feet.
(3)	Ditto	5 feet.
(4)	Ditto	4 feet.
(5)	Ditto	5 feet.
(6)	Ditto	4 feet.
(7)	Ditto	2 feet 7 inches.

His residential house situated in Mohalla Iqbal Ganj has been erected and is being erected contrary to the sanctioned plan. Sanction was obtained on 10th March, 1932.

One house (stable) situated in Mohalla Iqbal Ganj has also been constructed against the sanctioned plan. Besides he has erected two tharis and one pulli without permission of the Committee and without any agreement. The application for the erection of the house which has been erected against the sanctioned plan was made by him on 27th February 1934.

Besides these irregularities Dr. Noor Muhammad has also erected a barhao in contravention of the law in Mohalla Saraj Garan. This site was inspected by the Vice-President, Lala Sant Das deputed for the purpose,—vide resolution No. 384, dated the 19th July 1933, who made a detailed report on 27th July 1933 and remarked therein that since Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muhammad has expressed regret the case be compounded on receipt of Rs. 20 from him and the case be laid before the Committee but this has never been laid before the Committee and the case has been filed.

Keeping these facts in view the Committee is of opinion that he has abused his position as a member and therefore the Local Government should be requested to take action against him for dismembering him under section 16 (e) of the Municipal Act. The action on the part of a nominated member is regrettable. The Executive Officer should after dealing with all the irregularities make a detailed report to the Committee.

The Note that has been given by Dr. Noor Muhammad about the President, i.e., that he erected the house with his verbal permission is meaningless. A member of the Committee ought to know that the President or the Committee have no power to sanction applications for erection of houses as this power is vested in the Executive Officer alone. Besides on enquiry from the President in the open house it has been ascertained that this statement is entirely wrong and it is a mere concoction of Dr. Sahib in order to save himself from the grip of the law.

Resolved unanimously that the proposal of Kh. Muhammad Azam is carried.

True copy.

(Sd.) (Illegible),

Secretary, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana.

(c) if reply to (b) above be in the negative, the reasons for promoting Harbans Lal over the heads of his seniors and the total number of cashiers and clerks whom he has superseded ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) He was appointed cashier on 1st April, 1933 and junior clerk on 12th December, 1933. The pay of these posts is the same. He has been officiating in the 40—105 grade in a temporary vacancy since 18th September, 1934.

(b) He was senior to all the cashiers but was not senior of the junior clerks.

FLOODS IN VILLAGE KOT QUTAB DIN.

*3882. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that village Kot Qutab Din, tahsil and district Gujrat, was every year flooded by the river Chenab and that to save it the Public Works Department has built some embankments ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the village above mentioned was shifted to a locality in the area of village Jasoke of the same district ;
- (c) the area of culturable land that lies between the embankments SPU RI, SPU RXX and SPUR-GH ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that in the rainy season the flood water of the Chenab enters the area surrounded by these bunds and stagnates there for months, there being no outlet in the bund SPUR-GH ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that an area of about 2,000 bighas of Kot Qutab Din, and about 3,000 bighas of Jasoke is thus rendered unfit for sowing the rabi crop in time and the kharif crop is invariably damaged every year ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that the Superintending Engineer, Lower Chenab Canal, Khanki, and the Deputy Commissioner, Gujrat, have received a number of representations from the zamindars of these villages, if so, to what effect ;
- (g) if the answers to (a), (b), (c), (d), (e) and (f) above are in the affirmative, the action that the Government propose to take to save the zamindars of this ilaga from this yearly loss in these hard times ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Yes, some training bunds have been built by the Irrigation Department to control the river and to protect the arable lands of the village.

(b) Yes, some 40 years ago the village abadi was shifted to a locality in the area of village Jasoke.

(c) About a thousand acres.

(d) The flood water enters this area but flows out gradually as the flood subsides.

(e) No, about 2,000 bighas of Jasoke alone are subject to river action, and the area affected has greatly benefitted by the construction of these bunds. It yields two crops—rice in kharif and wheat in rabi. The latter crop is sown in time and the former benefits by the flood water.

(f) Only one petition from the zamindars of Kot Qutab Din was received by the Deputy Commissioner in June 1933,—a year of extraordinary floods. No action was considered necessary. Information whether any representation was made to the Superintending Engineer, Lower Chenab Canal, Khanki, is not available.

(g) As the area under crops is increasing as a result of the construction of the training bunds, obviously no action is needed.

RETIREMENT OF CANAL PATWARIS.

3883. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether there are any rules for the retirement of canal patwaris ;
- (b) if there are none, how the retirement is effected in practice ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that in letter No. 0833/E.-I., dated the 15th June 1927, from the Chief Engineer, Public Works Department, Irrigation Branch, to the Superintending Engineer, 1st British Circle, Sutlej Valley Project, it is stated that there is no fixed age at which canal patwaris are to be retired and that they should not be retained except under the special circumstances after the age of 60 ;
- (d) whether in the letter quoted above the Superintending Engineers are given powers to decide whether the patwaris are to remain in service or not only after they have attained the age of 60 and not before that ;
- (e) if the answer to (c) and (d) above are in the affirmative whether the number of canal patwaris in the Upper Bari Doab Circle who are at present between 55 and 60 and whose cases for retirement are being taken up by the officers ;
- (f) the rules or orders under which patwaris are being made to retire before the age of 60 without anything being said as to their health and capacity to work ;
- (g) whether the Government is prepared to take steps to ensure that no patwari who is physically fit to discharge his duties be made to retire before the age of 60 ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Yes—a copy of Chief Engineer's letter No. 0833-E. I., dated 15th June 1927, is placed on the table.

- (b) Does not arise.
- (c) Yes.
- (d) No.
- (e) There are 13 patwaris in the Upper Bari Doab Canal Circle who are between 55 and 60 years of age. As they are under 60 the question of retirement does not arise under existing orders so long as they are fit for duty.
- (f) and (g) Do not arise.

APPOINTMENTS IN IRRIGATION DEPARTMENT.

3884. Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue please lay on the table copy of Chief Engineer, Irrigation's letter No. 3918, dated the 27th February 1929, on the subject of making appointments on communal basis ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : A copy of Punjab Government (Irrigation Branch) letter No. 8918-Est. C., of the 27th February 1932 (not 1929) on the subject of making appointments on communal basis is laid on the table.

Copy of a letter No. 3918-Est. C., dated the 27th February 1932, from T. M. Bostock, Esquire, Secretary to Government, Punjab, Public Works Department, Irrigation Branch, to All Superintending Engineers, Irrigation Branch, Punjab, Executive Engineers, Independent Divisions, Superintendent, Central Workshops Division and Scientific Research Officer, Irrigation Research Laboratory.

I am directed to convey the following instructions with regard to the proportions community-wise to be worked to in the making of appointments, discharges, etc., of the under-noted classes of establishment—

- (i) Subordinate Engineering Service.—Officiating overseers and temporary subordinates of all grades.
- (ii) Provincial Clerical Establishment.—Officiating clerks (who have no permanent appointment in the Clerical Establishment) of all grades and temporary clerks of all grades.
- (iii) Draftsmen Establishment.—Officiating draftsmen and tracers (who have no permanent appointment in the Draftsmen Establishment) of all grades and temporary draftsmen and tracers of all grades.

- (v) Patwari Establishment.—Permanent, officiating and temporary.
- (vi) Signaller Establishment.—Permanent, officiating and temporary in all grades.
- (vii) Artificers.—Permanent, officiating and temporary.

2. The proportions community-wise for each of the above-noted classes of Establishment are fixed at 50 per cent. Muslim and 50 per cent. non-Muslim.

3. Recruitment to each of the above-noted classes must be on a basis of the same proportions; but if the proportion of Muslims in any of these classes of establishment is below 50 per cent., then the recruitment of Muslims may be made in a proportion in excess of but certainly not less than 50 per cent., and vice versa.

4. Recruitment to classes (iv) and (v) above must further be on a basis of at least 60 per cent. agriculturists (all communities considered together).

5. In submitting rolls of temporary subordinates and officiating overseers recommended for appointment to the Subordinate Engineering Service, rolls of temporary and officiating clerks recommended for appointment to the Provincial Clerical Establishment and rolls of temporary and officiating draftsmen and tracers recommended for permanent appointment as draftsmen and tracers you are required wherever feasible to recommend the men in the proportions of 50 per cent. Muslim and 50 per cent. non-Muslim. In case you find in any particular instances that it be not feasible to do this, you are required, in submitting the rolls, to state the reasons why it is not feasible.

6. In discharging men (due to reduction of establishment or other reason) from any of the classes of establishment noted in paragraph 1 above, if the proportion of Muslims is less than 50 per cent., only non-Muslims should be discharged, provided that the Muslims retained are duly qualified and have satisfactory records of service.

7. With regard to the proportion of 50 per cent. non-Muslims prescribed in these instructions, I am to say that every effort should be made to sub-divide this proportion into 17 per cent. Sikhs and 33 per cent. others (including Hindus).

8. These instructions supersede instructions issued in the under-noted letters :—

NUR MUHAMMAD, LAMBARDAR OF CHAK NO. 174, VILLAGE MUHAMMADPURA.

3892. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With reference to question No. *3404¹, dated the 27th June 1934, will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the Financial Commissioner ordered that the possession of the exchanged land be stopped just in those days when the outlet No. 25,000 was closed in October 1931 ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the order was not carried out by the local authorities ; if so, why ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) The Financial Commissioner's order issued on 29th October 1931 was that the exchange should not be given effect to, until further orders, if it had not already been carried out ;

(b) The Deputy Commissioner, Sheikhpura, reported that possession was given to Nur Muhammad on 8th May 1930.

NUR MUHAMMAD, LAMBARDAR OF CHAK NO. 174, VILLAGE MUHAMMADPURA.

3893. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With reference to question No. *3404¹, dated the 27th June 1934, will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the exchange was against the rules ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that pointed attention was drawn to such breach of rules by Government letter No. 1841-C., dated the 28th April 1932 ;
- (c) whether he will lay it on the table ;
- (d) why the instructions embodied in the letter were not carried out ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a)—
(d) Punjab Government letter No. 1841-C., dated the 28th April 1932, is laid on the table. The exchange in question was sanctioned four years before this letter issued.

Copy of a letter No. 1841-C., dated 28th April 1932, from F. C. Bourne, Esquire, I.C.S., Deputy Secretary to Government, Punjab, Development Department, to All Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners in the Punjab.

I am directed to issue some general instructions in the matter of exchanges of colony land. Such exchanges are permitted under section 17 of the Colony Act and the considerations governing the sanction or refusal of them are set forth in section V of Chapter VIII of the Colony Manual, Volume I. It is realised that individual cases must be treated on their merits and that no set of instructions can be framed to cover all cases. But certain definite orders have been passed from time to time since the Colony Manual was revised in 1928 and pending further revision, the Financial Commissioner, Development, is of opinion that it will be of assistance to the local officers who have to deal originally with exchange applications, if these orders are collected and summarised. Since officers in districts containing no colony land are sometimes asked to recommend exchanges by residents or ex-residents of their districts who hold land in colonies these instructions are addressed to all districts.

2. Land within the reserved charagh area adjoining the village site should never be allotted in exchange. In all estates consisting mainly of grants on peasant terms this reserved area should be maintained to cover all land within a strip 2½ kallas wide round the abadi.

3. Land purchased at auction or otherwise cannot be exchanged without the express orders of Government which will only be sought in very exceptional cases.

4. Once proprietary rights have been acquired in a grant no application for exchange should be entertained.

5. Similarly, holders of old proprietary land should never be allowed to exchange such land for previously unallotted crown land in a colony without the express orders of Government. A mutual exchange of proprietary and allotted colony land even when both parties desire it should never be sanctioned as the colonist migrating to the proprietary land could no longer be held to conditions and as the colonization of Government lands does not extend to old proprietary lands it would not be possible to penalise him for breach.

6. Applications for exchange based on alleged deterioration of the soil through waterlogging must always in the first instance be referred to the Waterlogging Assistant to the Financial Commissioner who will forward them with a report for consideration by the Waterlogging Board.

7. Applications for exchanges out of one colony into another must invariably be refused by you as Commissioners have no power to sanction such cases.

8. No exchanges are to be allowed in old settled colonies (including the Lower Bari Doab Colony) when the grant has been held for five years or more except for administrative reasons e.g., when the land is required for some public purpose or where the Irrigation Branch find difficulty in maintaining irrigation.

9. No exchange can be allowed in respect of any colony holding for which a land revenue assessment has been announced at settlement.

NUR MUHAMMAD, LAMBARDAR OF CHAK No. 174, VILLAGE MUHAMMADPURA.

3894. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With reference to question No. *3404¹ dated the 27th June 1984, will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the exchange was allowed against the consent of the villagers ;
- (b) if not, the total population of Muhammadpura and the number of those who consented to the exchange ;
- (c) whether those few who gave their consent belong to the party of the said Nur Muhammad and are his relatives ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a). No, but certain objections were made after the exchange had been sanctioned. Moreover, Government is not bound by any restrictions in the disposal of unallotted Crown waste.

(b) The total population of Muhammadpura is 1,385. No further reply is called for in view of answer to (a) above.

(c) Does not arise.

- (a) whether it is a fact that patwaris and girdawars concerned were reprimanded for keeping in dark the higher authorities with respect to this exchange and thus favouring one party ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the agriculturists of the village did not as a protest water their lands and there was no rabi crop in 1981-82 ;
- (c) if so, whether the Government now intends to set the matter right ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) No patwari was reprimanded. The Field Kanungo concerned was censured for failure to conduct a proper enquiry into the exchange case in question.

(b) No.

(c) No. The honourable member is referred to the reply given to part (g) of his question No. *3404¹ asked by him in the last session of the Council.

(b) A reference is invited to the reply given in the last Simla session to Council question *3287¹. The success of the executive officer system cannot be fully expressed in figures. Government have no hesitation in saying that the Executive Officers have generally secured the confidence of the public. - the total number and the names of the different Electric Supply Companies working in the Punjab ;
- the number of the licenses that each of these companies has to its credit ;
- whether it is a fact that some of the concerns, e. g., Lahore and Rawalpindi, enjoy the monopoly of a number of towns ;
- if so, the reasons for permitting this monopoly ;
- whether it is the intention of the Government to grant them further licences ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) and (b) A statement is laid on the table.

(c) Yes.

(d) Every licensee has a virtual monopoly in the area of supply pertaining to his licence. It has been considered inadvisable to allot more than one licence in any one town. Licences can only be given on application being made, and there is no reason why the possession of a previous licence should disqualify an applicant.

(e) Government cannot foretell what applications will be received.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali : Is it the general policy of Government to give licence to one and the same concern or to other concerns also ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I have made it quite clear that each application is considered on its merits.

- whether the Hindus sit as jirga members in Mianwali ;
- if the answer to (a), (b) and (c) be in the affirmative, whether Government intends either to abolish the jirga system in the Mianwali district or to remove this difference in treatment ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) The exact percentage is 86·7. The reply to the second part is in the affirmative.

(b) Hindus are not exempt, but instructions have been issued that cases in which Hindus are accused persons should ordinarily not be tried under the Frontier Crimes Regulation.

impartiality is admitted by all, and it is believed that both the accused and the other members of the jirga welcome their presence in a Council of Elders. Government propose to leave the composition of jirgas to the Deputy Commissioner.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

CLOSURE OF THE BARI DOAB CANAL.

1. Mr. W. Roberts : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state the reasons for closing the Lower Bari Doab Canal from 20th November 1934 to 13th December 1934 ; and also, why this closure, if essential, could not be one month later ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The closure referred to is one in the Rotational Turn Programme of the Five Linked Canals. The preparation of this programme by a Committee of Superintending Engineers is always a matter of the utmost difficulty in view of the clashing of common interests.

This year several programmes were prepared and considered by this Committee including one at the instigation of the Chief Engineer which postponed the closure referred to by twelve days.

As regards supplies, the net result was practically the same, as there is only a limited amount of water available for distribution among all the five canals during the sowing period, each of which must get its proper share of the whole. After very full consideration, the distribution programme, which has been published, was finally accepted as the most suitable for all concerned.

[Hon. Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan.]

Due to there being only one branch on the canal a supply of less than 3,000 cusecs is insufficient to command the other distributaries on the Main Line. This involves periods of complete closure to balance periods of relatively high supplies in order to maintain the total share due to the canal. The alternative is small shares distributed over a longer time which has obvious disadvantages.

SECURITY OF THE "EHSAN" UNDER THE INDIAN PRESS ACT.

2. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that Government, under section 7 (3) of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, XXIII of 1931, demanded security of the Ehsan daily, Lahore ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the Government issued warning to the press on the 10th instant to the effect that it should not indulge in communal controversy with regard to certain cases of Karachi and Kasur ;
- (c) whether the security was demanded on the poem which was published long before that warning was issued ;
- (d) if so, what was the object of the warning when security was demanded on the poem of a previous issue ;
- (e) whether the Government now intends to withdraw the notice ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) and (b) Yes.

(c) Some time before. The actual dates are as follows. Government passed orders requiring security on the 5th of October, on account of the issue of the 29th September. These orders were not served till the 10th of October. The orders issued on the 5th October and the date of the press communiqué is the 10th of October. The honourable member will see that this particular notice was issued before the date of the press communiqué.

(d) The warning was general and necessary because the bad example set by the Ehsan and one or two other papers was being followed by other papers.

(e) No.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Which were the other papers ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The Zamindar was one.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : I am referring to the cases of Kasur and Karachi. The Zamindar was not one of the papers.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I can only say that there was a flood of articles on both sides, and it was decided by Government to take security. After that the other papers began to take the cudgels on one side or another, and there was a risk of a serious communal clash. In order to stop it this general warning was issued, and I am glad to say that it has had some effect though the effect was not immediate.

- (f) how the Jains compare with the Indian Christians in point of population ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) Muhammadans	15
Hindus	10
Sikhs	5
And others	2

(c) Two scholarships each on the results of Matriculation and Intermediate examinations are reserved for 'others.'

JAINS.

1044. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that from the religious point of view the Jains have much more in common with the Hindus than with any of the other communities with whom they are grouped; if so, why they are grouped amongst the "others" and apart from Hindus in the Census Report?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I regret I cannot supply the information requested.

INDIAN CHRISTIANS.

1045. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that compared with the Parsis, Jews, Brahmos, Europeans and Anglo-Indians, the Indian Christians are much more numerous in the province;
- (b) if so, whether Government intends to consider the question of treating the Indian Christians in the same way as the three communities,—Muslims, Hindus and Sikhs,—by reservation of scholarships for them; if not, why not?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Indian Christians form about 46 per cent. of the communities classed as others and about 1·8 per cent. of the total population of the province.

(b) No. It is not desirable to reserve scholarships for a very small minority which is at the same time the most advanced in English education.

The honourable member will perhaps be interested to know the proportional distribution of literates in English per mille for the Christians and the three major communities for the province—

COTTON PRICES.

1046. Mr. W. Roberts : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether Government is aware that the announcement of cotton prices usually given at 7 A. M. from Bombay on the wireless has been discontinued;

- (b) if so, whether the Punjab Government has protested against the discontinuance, in the interest of zamindars in this province and ginnerers who rely on this information for guidance in selling or buying kapas ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) The fact has been represented to Government by the Indian Central Cotton Committee.

- (b) Yes.

WIRELESS SETS.

1047. Mr. W. Roberts : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the number of wireless sets in use in the Punjab, and how many of these are used mainly for commercial purposes ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The number of broadcast receiver licences now in force in the Punjab is approximately 590, but it is not known how many are used for commercial purposes.

COPYISTS.

1048. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that about eleven years ago Mr. Abbott, then Financial Commissioner, worked out a statement showing what, in his opinion, was the necessary strength of copyists for English as well as vernacular work for certain districts in the province; if so, whether Government will place a copy of this statement on the table;
- (b) the number of copyists actually at work at present;
- (c) whether it is a fact that the number of men at work at present is larger in every district than what was proposed by Mr. Abbott, Financial Commissioner; if so, the reason for this increase;
- (d) whether copyists are given any provident fund, bonus, or pension?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) and (c) The attention of the honourable member is invited to the answer given to part (b) of the Council question No. *3794¹ asked by Shrimati Lekhwati Jain. It is against the public interest to publish official papers of this kind.

(b) A statement showing the number of copyists in each district on the 31st July 1934, is laid on the table.

(d) No bonus or pension is paid to copyists, but they are eligible to subscribe to the general provident fund.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.)

Mr. President : The Council will now resume discussion of Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath's motion that the Bill as reported by the select committee be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon by the 15th February 1935.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan. Rural) : Sir, yesterday when I referred to the effort made by the United States of America to tackle the problem of a similar nature, certain friends of mine were doubtful as to the correctness of the information. For their benefit and for the benefit of the honourable members who would like to study this question I just want to quote from two books which deal with this problem in the United States of America. The first one is "The Roosevelt Illusion" by Emile Burns and F. M. Roy. With regard to the debts in the United States of America on page 19 the following figures occur :

The income of the farmers alone had fallen from $11,000 million in 1929 to $5,000 million in 1932; their total debts to the banks in 1929 were estimated at $12,224 million, on which an annual interest charge of over $600 million had to be paid. To pay this sum out of a total income of $11,000 million was possible; to pay it out of $5,000 million was out of the question without real starvation.

In Indian currency the income of the farmers in the United States comes to 15 crores of rupees, whereas the debt owed by them is 36.67 crores and the interest thereon is 1.80 crores. The other book which I shall refer to is "The Future Comes" by Charles A. Beard and George H. E. Smith. This deals with the financial aspect of the question. At page 82 the book says—

Title II of the Farm Relief Act seeks to meet the second of the two major problems harassing the farmer, that of his burden of indebtedness.

On page 83, the book says—

Under Part I of Title II of the Farm Relief Act, amendments to the Farm Loan Act make it possible for the Federal Land Banks to issue farm-loan bonds up to an aggregate amount of $2,000,000,000 for the purpose of making new loans or for purchasing mortgages or exchanging bonds for mortgages.

Again on page 85, the book reads—

Part 3 of the same Title makes available to the Farm Loan Commissioner through the agency of the R. F. C. a fund of $200,000,000 for direct loans to farmers for the following purposes: (1) refinancing any indebtedness of the farmer, (2) providing working capital for his farm operations, (3) enabling him to redeem and/or repurchase farm property which was foreclosed at any time after July 1st 1931.

I shall not burden the House with further details, but here is an attempt made by the Government of the United States to take off and pay the debt of the farmer. This is, then, the suggestion that I would put to the Government that if it really is in earnest to help in the wiping off this rural indebtedness of the Punjab, it should take measures of a similar nature. The Bill before the House, if it becomes an Act, will not help the small peasant proprietor or the farmer in any material degree. This is so far as the suggestion which I made yesterday while talking on the usurious loans dealt with in clauses 5 and 6.

Now coming to my speech, I was submitting yesterday when the Council adjourned that I was in full sympathy with the movement that the farmer should not be made to pay heavy rates of interest or heavy compound interest. I cannot possibly understand how 24 per cent. or even 18½ per cent. is regarded as fair rate of interest. It really amounts to pure destruction so far as the farmer is concerned. I would, therefore, support any suggestion which lowers down the rate of interest. I consider it absolutely inhuman that a person who has not the capacity to pay should be made to pay at the rate of 24 per cent. simple or 18½ per cent. compound interest. If, in this respect, I differ from some of my friends on these benches I do so in the conviction that any attempt to raise the rate of interest would, from the point of view of the farmer, be suicidal to his interests. But at the same time I also suggest that there should be no distinction between an agriculturist money-lender and a money-lender belonging to the non-agriculturist class. As I have said, the rate of interest grows higher and higher as you take away the security which the farmer can offer to a non-agriculturist money-lender. These things act and re-act, and as I explained by an example the real menace to the peasant proprietor is not so much the non-agriculturist money-lender, as the agriculturist money-lender. I gave an instance where an agriculturist money-lender having lent Rs. 23 got a decree for Rs. 7,000 from the High Court. As for the remark from a gentleman on the other side which contained an implication that the judge must have been a money-lender or in sympathy with the money-lender, I can only regard that with contempt because the High Court judges are absolutely above considerations of this kind. Anybody who has had experience of the High Court would realise that the judges there always give their decisions unbiased by any considerations of this sort. If really the future government of the province passes into the hands of the agriculturists, it should be their duty so see that the confidence in the High Court judges is not impaired. It should not be undermined, because it is really the fountain of justice; and if law and order is to be maintained and justice is to be evenly distributed between man and man there should be no suggestion of this nature which is always not only being suggested, but a regular propaganda is being carried on against the judges. (Hear, hear).

The true menace to the rural society is not so much the non-agriculturist money-lender as the agriculturist money-lender. Here is a quotation from Darling's Book. "The Punjab Peasant in Prosperity and Debt." At pages 229-280 Darling says—

But if emigration, soldiering and high prices have given the agriculturist money-lender his means, it is the Land Alienation Act that has given him his opportunity. The sahukar deprived by the Act of the security of the land, can only lend up to the limit of what can be repaid from the produce; but the agriculturist money-lender, to whom the Act does not apply, can afford to lend up to the value of the land, and with land selling at inflated values this limit is considerably higher. He is, therefore, in the stronger position of the two; and ultimately he is the more formidable, for his object is the land, and to obtain it he will press a client till he is compelled to sell. On the other hand, the sahukar depending solely on the produce for repayment, hesitates to drive a client to extremes lest he should give up producing. It might be supposed that the Jat would be the more merciful of the two, as he is dealing with his own kith and kin. This, however, is not the opinion of the countryside. He may charge less at the start and is certainly less cunning in his devices, but must agree that he is harsher in his means. There is truth in the old saying, 'The cock and the crow nourish their families; and the Jat and the crocodile destroy them.' The sahukar will occasionally knock off part of his interest, but as a villager in Ludhiana remarked, 'a Jat foregoes nothing—not even a pebble (giti).' The Jat, too, being an agriculturist, knows how the cow can be milked, and is able to squeeze the last drop out of his client. Moreover, the sahukar, being timid by nature, can sometimes be intimidated, but 'the Jat seizes you by the throat and knocks you down'. As a zamindar said to the writer, if the Land Alienation Act has rescued the sheep from the wolf, it has only been to hand him over to the butcher.

This is a very carefully investigated statement made by Mr. Darling, and if you see the condition in the Muzaffargarh, Multan and Dera Ghazi Khan districts you will find that this Land Alienation Act has done havoc in the rural economy. Therefore if it is intended to relieve the peasant proprietor of his indebtedness the agriculturist money-lender must first be tackled. But the modifications proposed in the Usurious Loans Act do not clearly indicate how this problem of the agriculturist money-lender is tackled.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

No distinction should be made between the two kinds of money-lenders. This much as regards rural credit.

Coming to the next point, on reading the Bill I understand that it is going to be made applicable to the whole province, both rural and urban. That is what I understand by certain changes which have been effected in the Bill. The object of the Bill has been entirely changed. Instead of being a Bill merely confined to rural areas or the agriculturists, now it is sought to bring within its fold communities or classes who were originally not intended to be brought within the operation of this Bill. What is the result of these modifications in the Usurious Loans Act? I cannot possibly understand why as regards people living in commercial areas or people who have got commerce and trade as their main object in life, why any limit should be fixed so far as interest for them is concerned. I really do not understand why a person who is making 40 per cent. profit in some company and borrows at 12 per cent. compound interest should not pay this rate of interest. The whole thing has become a sort of a muddle. The original Bill was intended for rural areas, now it is being extended to urban areas as well, and the result of this action on the part of Government to fix one kind of rate for the two areas is calculated to harm the interests of the commercial and professional classes. The commercial and monied classes earn 40 and 50 per cent. dividends and sometimes even cent. per cent., and there is no reason why you should interfere with the urban economy in this manner. If it is really the desire of the Government that this Bill should apply to the province as a whole, that is, both rural areas and urban areas, then it is only reasonable to ask that the Bill should be circulated again for eliciting public opinion, so that the commercial classes may have something to say as to whether this Bill should be extended to them. The original object of the Bill has been frustrated by the amendments made by the select committee. (An honourable member: Which particular clauses is the honourable member referring to?) I am dealing with the provisions dealing with the Usurious Loans Act and the amendments fixing the rates of interest.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: Have you seen the Government amendments to these clauses?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit: Yes, I have received them. I submit that they are acceptable so far as rural areas are concerned, that is, so far as the Bill is applicable to agriculturists as defined by me, that is, the cultivator or the tiller of the soil. I would go still further and cut down the rates suggested by the Government amendments of 18½ per cent. simple interest or 14 per cent. compound interest if the Bill applies only to the tillers or cultivators of land. But I am not prepared to extend this concession to commercial classes. I am not for extending the operation of these clauses to commercial classes who are already alert in the matter of borrowing or lending and who are alert with regard to profit and ultimate gain.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: This clause has already been circulated for opinion.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit: But now the scope of the Bill has been extended. Instead of saying that this Bill will apply only to rural areas, it is being extended to urban areas also.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It was never meant for rural areas only.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : This part has always been of general application.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : The definition of 'debtor,' 'agriculturist' and so on, show that the Bill is going to be extended to the whole Punjab, rural areas as well as the rich people of urban areas.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Part III of the Bill has always been general.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : The original Bill was intended to provide for the relief of indebtedness and the improvement of agrarian credit in the Punjab. Now, the present Bill is to provide for the relief of indebtedness in the Punjab. The words 'and the improvement of agrarian credit' have been omitted. When the original Bill went to the select committee everybody read it to mean that it was intended for the agriculturists.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Not that particular part of the Bill.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I am talking of the Bill as a whole. I listened to all the speeches delivered in this Council, and it was always the agriculturist that was talked about.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Has the honourable member seen all the opinions received ?

Mr. Nanak Chand, Pandit : Yes, I have seen them. The Council understood the speeches delivered by honourable members including the Government members to refer to agriculturists, and even now if the original Bill which was referred to the select committee is carefully perused it will be found that it meant to apply only to agriculturists. That was the original object, and now it is sought to extend it to commercial classes and urban areas as well. I submit that if you apply these clauses to the whole of the province, then undoubtedly they will not fit in with the scheme of the original Bill. Then we come to the next part where there is the definition of the debtor. There you will find that it is mainly the agriculturist who is thought of.

3 P. M.

'Debtor' means a person who owes a debt or debts and—

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a land-owner, or tenant or a servant of a landowner or tenant, or
- (ii) who earns his livelihood as a village menial paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture.

Explanations—

- (i) a debtor shall not lose his status as such through involuntary unemployment, or on account of incapacity, temporary or permanent, by bodily infirmity or if he joins the military or naval service of His Majesty.

If any question arises whether or not a person is a debtor, the decision of a Debt Conciliation Board shall be final.

- (ii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such by reason of the fact that he makes income by using his plough cattle for purposes of transport.
- (iii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such only because he does not cultivate with his own hands.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

- (3) 'Agriculture' shall include horticulture and the use of land for any purpose of husbandry, inclusive of the keeping or breeding of live stock, poultry, or bees, and the growth of fruit, vegetables and the like.

Therefore, what the Bill is thinking of is the agriculturist.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Not necessarily.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : It follows definitely.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It does not.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : They definitely bring in the agriculturist.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : For purposes of that particular part of the Act.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Then there are conciliation boards and so on. The whole thing is in a muddle.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The intention was to have an omnibus Bill.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : You can make a speech and then make it clear. But this is what I understand. Now what I say is that the definition of the agriculturist should be a tiller of the soil. Make this exception if you will, I have got no objection to it, like involuntary incapacity, and so on. But the moment you bring in the landowner you bring in all those rich people who do not deserve any protection at the hands of the legislature, some who have made wealth by various means which can hardly be called agricultural. That is what I say. Attempts are being made, I actually saw an amendment to be moved by Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, to bring within the definition of debtor all members of agriculturist tribes or members of depressed classes, and so on. Now it is sought to confer more favours on those classes which are already in a privileged position, merely on account of birth or caste. So, whatever good points there may be in this Bill which one might discover with a microscope, they are taken away. The Council at present consists of 71 elected members of whom 50 belong to members of agricultural tribes, and with the help of Government benches there is no chance for a fair and proper treatment of this subject. Everybody will be carried away by his own pre-conceived notions and desires for more and more favours and privileges. That is one reason why Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram with the help of his bloc wishes to rush through his amendments. This kind of thing should not be tolerated at least by Government. Government should not give protection to people who seek privileges and favours on the basis of birth and caste. Some of these people do not deserve any protection at all. They have been making money, and they have been getting lands. As Mr. Darling has pointed out, they have been trying in every possible way to enrich themselves at the cost of the farmer. Government must, therefore, take a warning when granting privileges of this kind.

We then come to another important part of this Bill, the conciliation board. A grave doubt has been expressed in this connection by authorities such as the High Court with regard to the working of these boards. I do not understand how these boards are going to help either the creditor or the borrower. Here is a man who has to take Rs. 2,000 from a debtor. The matter goes before a conciliation board. Instead of the Rs. 2,000, let us suppose that the conciliation board says that the debtor shall pay Rs. 700. It is a paper in exchange for another paper. Instead of Rs. 2,000 it is adjudged by this board that the debtor shall pay Rs. 700. I could have understood if it was held or decreed that this money should at once be paid or that the conciliation will take place if the money is actually paid into the pocket of the creditor. There would have been some justice in this scheme of the conciliation board if actual money were paid. But no. Only one paper is to be exchanged for another paper. Now what is the good of this? Whom does it help? Does it help the debtor? Perhaps it gives him some sort of sentimental satisfaction that instead of paying Rs. 2,000 he would have now to pay only Rs. 700. Or, does it help the creditor? No. Therefore, a method should have been found to wipe off the debt altogether and to free the agriculturist or the tiller of the soil from the debt that hangs heavily on him or he should give the creditor the amount which the conciliation board decrees, but not allow the matter to go to the court again. That is the main defect which I want to point out in this scheme of conciliation board. Now, if the Government of the future is going to be a Government of zamindars or members of the agricultural tribes, what guarantee is there that members of the conciliation boards will sit on the bench with a clean heart or will not have some prejudices in favour of their own kith and kin. This is the danger; and I sound a note of warning to the Government that by having a scheme of this kind they are not doing the right and proper thing. Everybody knows that the Government in this province is going to pass to the privileged classes, the agricultural tribes. There are now 50 members out of a total of 71. In the future they will get a still larger percentage, and the result of that would be financial chaos so far as this Bill is concerned. Then again efforts should be made by the Government, if they are keen on having these conciliation boards, to see that they should not be used for fraudulent purposes. The amendment which was accepted by the select committee is to the effect that even if one debtor moves the Government for the appointment of a conciliation board, it should be appointed. Now it is very easy for any debtor to come in and put an application, and then this machinery will be put into force. There can be collusion. These are very dangerous things which the Government is launching, and it is the duty of the Government to think twice before making an attempt of this kind. I will not take a long time in dealing with this Bill. What I wish to state and what I have all along been stating is this, that the Bill is not one to relieve the indebtedness of the agriculturist. The result of this Bill would be to strike at the root of credit in this province, and trade and industry alike are going to suffer. It does not in any way help the peasant proprietor. Before I sit down I should like to summarise the suggestions that I have made with regard to giving relief to the peasant proprietor as follows:—

(1) There must be an amendment of the Land Alienation Act. The definition of the agriculturist should be made occupational. His land should be declared to be inalienable, and if out of necessity he is to sell his land with the permission of the Collector, he should be permitted to sell in the open market.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

(2) Government should float a loan in order to help the debtors to repay their debts to the money-lenders, and it should finance the peasant proprietor for proper cultivation.

(3) There must be substantial reduction in land revenue with corresponding decrease in Government expenditure especially by cutting down the high salaries drawn by the Indians in this province. They must show their patriotism by action.

(4) Government should invite Mahatma Gandhi to inaugurate the scheme of small industries in rural areas for the uplift of rural classes. If it is afraid of Mahatma Gandhi then they can invite others who are ready to co-operate with Government in this scheme.

(5) One other point I will emphasise which I did not mention, and that is that educated men should be settled in each village who will make agriculture their profession. This is the need of the hour. There are thousands of educated youngmen who are well-known for their willingness to start as agriculturists in the villages and give help to the villagers as to how agriculture should be carried on and who would be helpful, I submit to the Government very respectfully, to carry on the propaganda for sanitation and other good things for which every effort is being made by Mr. Brayne. Here also I would call attention to a few words from Mr. Darling. He deals with this subject at pages 187, 188 and 189—

Viewed in its relation to agricultural progress the Act may be challenged upon two grounds. In the first place all protection, if continued indefinitely, weakens what it protects. The child whose hand is always held will never learn to walk; and the cultivator who is always protected will never learn to be independent. A generation ago, in all affairs of business, the peasant was as helpless as a child and no doubt required protection, but now, thanks to co-operation and its 90,000 village banks—

Then with regard to the argument that agriculture must be confined to agricultural castes—

In a country where occupation and aptitude are largely determined by heredity and caste, this is a point of view that must command respect, but it is not one that is entirely endorsed by experience. In at least one part of the province, the south-west, agriculture owes much to the townsman. As long ago as 1859 the comparative prosperity of Multan was attributed mainly to the efforts of wealthy landowning Kirars, who by their labour and capital had greatly improved the productive power of the soil.

Dealing with this subject he has said that the Act must be amended in order to give the intelligentsia a chance to improve agriculture. At page 189 he says—

It may, therefore, be doubted whether the townsman will be more of a burden on the land than the wealthy zamindar, for whom, as a rule, there is little enough to be said. It is even possible that, with his superior education and commercial flair, he may introduce the very element that a backward rural society requires; and in any case he should provide a useful stimulus to the ordinary landlords, who will be all the better for a little competition. It should be remembered, too, that the urban landowner of the future will not be quite the same as the non-agriculturist of the past, who was generally nothing but a money-lender and trader combined, for in the last thirty years a new intelligentsia has sprung up in the towns, who, if they could be persuaded to study rural problems, might do something for their solution. In the writer's opinion, therefore, the time has come to consider whether the Act should not be amended.

These are the wise words written by Mr. Darling some years ago. During the intervening years there has grown up a large number of educated but unemployed youngmen who loiter from place to place, and who are prepared to take up agriculture as their profession, if only Government would give them proper facilities and remove the hardship of the Land Alienation Act. Such a step would be useful both to the peasant proprietor and to the country, and the peasant proprietor's purchasing power will be greatly increased. That is really the plain problem before the province of the Punjab, and I hope that the Government will take these suggestions, if it is really anxious to relieve the misery of the peasant proprietor and the cultivator and of the people who live in rural areas, into consideration. Therefore I would submit that so far as this Bill is concerned, in my humble opinion it defeats its very object. It destroys the credit and it does not help the small peasant proprietor whom we are all anxious to save (laughter from the Unionist benches). Chaudhri Chhotu Ram laughs. He is the only saviour of the small peasant proprietor (hear, hear, from the Unionist benches), but he has shown by his actions that he is not prepared to meet the suggestions which I have made. The reason is obvious. He himself belongs to an agricultural tribe, the privileged caste, and hence all this laughter and ridicule which is being cast upon the suggestions which have been accepted by such an advanced country as the United States of America. However, laughter will not stop me from placing these suggestions before the House. I am going to ask the small peasant proprietor to see wherein lies his proper interest, whether in accepting the scheme of things placed by the Government before the Council or whether the one adopted by the United States of America. Let Sardar Arjan Singh say what he likes. I do not mind it. The peasant is astute enough to-day. He understands what is really for his good. He is not prepared to be carried away by shibboleths and slogans. He really wants to know who really puts the bread in his stomach and he understands these things, and the time is bound to arrive when suggestions made by me will be accepted by him. Therefore, I submit that it will not be long when these privileges will be destroyed. I have placed these matters before the Joint Select Committee, and I am going to send this debate to the members of Parliament (hear, hear). I am not one of those who are deterred by obstructions of this kind. I believe that there is something noble in every human being. Let me pay this tribute to Lord Lothian and his colleagues that one single voice of mine was heard by them, and they accepted the suggestion that I made. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram knows it.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I hope that it has not delayed the progress of reforms.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : The suggestions with regard to agriculturists and non-agriculturists will, I hope, be accepted to some extent in spite of the fact that mine was the only voice to be raised in this connection. But I must admit that there is something noble and grand even in the meanest of men and if our cause is just and fair, the cause of the small peasant proprietor, the cause of the poor, it will appeal to the members of the Parliament, if not to these Government benches, most of whom I know think as I think and feel as I feel, but as they are part of the machine they may not vote with me. That is all I have to say.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) : My learned friend who has perhaps come here because he approached certain big zamindars and landowners in the Hoshiarpur district who in their turn

[Shaikh Abdul Ghani.]

A approached their tenants and peasant proprietors and their fraternity who voted for him, should not have risen to say that these zamindars are a curse to the community. He has not only to-day taken all the time of the House so far but the other day also he took most of the time of the House in denouncing the Land Alienation Act and the amenities that he thinks are open to zamindars, big and small, of this province. The motion before the House is whether this Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion and what the learned member has been saying has got absolutely nothing to do with the motion before the House. He began by giving us a lengthy address on the evils of the Land Alienation Act and by criticising the different provisions and he gave certain illustrations of how the bigger fish was eating up the smaller fry. After all we all know that this is a stale argument which has been repeated ad nauseam on every platform, in every meeting in which non-agriculturists predominate and this carries us nowhere so far as this Bill is concerned. We are not at present considering the repeal of the Land Alienation Act. No doubt that is a class legislation and as a representative of the urban population of the divisions of Rawalpindi and Multan if I get up and oppose class legislation there may be some justification for it, but the honourable Pandit being a representative of the zamindars and being here because of their votes I do not think it is fair for him to turn round and launch a ruthless campaign against a measure of this nature. Anyhow, I know as everyone else here does, that some sort of protection is to be given to certain classes in a society and the jurisprudence of every civilized country is replete with instances of this nature. That is called class legislation. Alienation of Land Act may be a class legislation, it may be an evil, and I admit that to a certain extent it is an evil, but after all it is a necessary evil and has to be tolerated. If you want your society to prosper then these agriculturists should be saved from the excesses of the money-lenders, be they agricultural money-lenders, or commercial money-lenders or any other community engaged in this trade. Now the position is that commercial money-lenders as a matter of fact have nothing to fear from this legislation. Commercial money-lenders would never go out of the town to advance money to the zamindars of the village. The agricultural money-lenders would be as much governed by the Bill as the ordinary money-lenders. The agriculturist money-lender is in no better position than the ordinary money-lender and my honourable friend's argument does not mean anything at all. It is due to a misconception of the provisions of the Bill. No such class of money-lenders is contemplated by it. Then my learned friend went on to say that the constitution of the boards was not satisfactory and that the boards would be passing decrees, they would be adjudging claims and that that would upset the course of justice. Here again my impression is he has not gone through the provisions of the Bill carefully. Under the provisions of the Bill the boards have got nothing of this sort to do. They cannot adjudge, they cannot pass a decree in the way my learned friend apprehends. All that they can do is to give advice. If that advice is accepted, well and good; they will pass a decree and that decree will be in conformity with the wishes of the parties. The boards cannot pass an independent decree of their own accord. All that they can do is to certify a certain act to which the parties have given their consent. If as a matter of fact the parties do not agree and if the money-lender for whom my learned friend has got such great sympathy, and for whose welfare he entertains great fears, is disagreeable, all that the money-lender has to suffer is that when he comes before a court of justice subsequently with a suit of his, he will be told that he cannot get interest after the certification and he cannot get costs. That is all that he stands to lose. It is wrong to say that the matter is adjudged by the board and that a decree is passed and that the money-lender would be forced to a particular settlement against his will. With respect to interest my learned friend was generous enough to admit that he would not be supporting those who advocate a high rate of interest. It is very generous of him and I think no fair-minded gentleman here will rise to support an excessive rate of interest. The rates have been carefully considered by the select committee and they have placed it at a reasonable percentage. I am glad that we have at least here secured the support of my honourable friend over there, who is a representative of the zamindars.

There was another objection raised the other day by my honourable friend, the Raja Sahib for whom I have got very great respect. Here again it is possible that there has been a misapprehension. The Raja Sahib referred to a provision in the Bill wherein it is said that the Bill would apply to pending suits. The Raja Sahib was not right when he said that this would mean that when this Act comes into force the suits will have to be retried. There is another clause in the Bill, clause 24, which says that pending suits will be stayed when an application is made to a board with respect to a subject matter which is already before the court. (Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: That occurs in a different part of the Bill altogether, part IV, while I referred to the provision in part III). I may explain my point. A matter is brought before a board and suppose with respect to that there is already a civil suit pending. That civil suit will be stayed. After the board has disposed of the matter, if the parties are satisfied it will be unnecessary to proceed with it. But if they are not, then there will be no necessity of any further proceedings and the pending suit can be revived. Though clause 24 occurs in a different part, I do not think its application is restricted. There is nothing in the Act which excludes the application of section 24. Suppose the fears entertained by my learned friend were correct, what would be the effect?—I mean the fears which have led him to propose that the Bill be re-circulated for eliciting public opinion. The Bill has gone round already once. It is here in black and white and it has to apply to pending suits. If you at this stage do not proceed with the Bill further but send it back for eliciting public opinion, the money-lenders being a clever lot will take advantage of it and would rush to courts with a crop of suits. There will be a multiplicity of cases, the courts will be flooded with new cases and the man whom you want to protect, the peasant proprietor, would have to thank his stars and would pray to be spared of his benefactors. There will be many decrees against him, many executions against him, many warrants for his arrest, many orders for attachment of his cattle and within a period of six or seven months practically he will be ruined. By the time this Act comes into force the mischief would be complete. It is rather an argument the other way.

With respect to the Bill it was remarked the other day by you, Sir,—I would very respectfully beg to differ on the point—that there has been a material alteration in the Bill. Delete the three clauses about which the Government and the Unionist Party have made a compromise. What is there left in the Bill except certain amendments here and there, the reduction of the rate of interest or doing away with compound interest altogether? Does it mean that the Bill has been so altered that it should be re-circulated for public opinion? I do not think so. There is nothing important left in the Act. On the vital questions—I do not know the facts, I was not present at the meeting but the honourable Leader of my party will excuse me if I say that he has committed a fatal mistake. For instance, if you take away the last clause which throws the onus of proof of debt on the creditor what is left there? The Division Bench ruling of 1926 in which the learned judges say that as soon as the creditor has proved the execution of a document the onus of consideration lies on the debtor has wrought a fundamental change in the law. It is for the debtor to prove that he did not get the consideration. Anybody who is acquainted with the working of courts now-a-days knows full well what is done. When a suit is brought and the documents have been filed, the court at once examines the creditor. He says: Here are my accounts, they are quite correct and here is the thumb mark of the debtor. The thumb mark is indeed there and the debtor is examined. He is asked, is this your thumb mark? He may or may not admit it. If he denies it it is sent to the finger print bureau. If the mark corresponds with his so far as execution goes the document is proved. It lies upon the debtor now to prove that he did not get the money. When he is admitted or it is proved that thumb mark is his, he is left to disprove the consideration. What a mockery and yet this is the law! Our party and our Leader agreed to the deletion of this clause. It is a suicidal step. Every one knows, every lawyer knows that there is practically nothing in the Bill which gives any considerable relief. The Bill, as it is, does not help the debtor, the peasant, to any very large extent. He has still to prove that he did not get the money. If the Government had done away with all the unwholesome provisions of the Bill, I mean disagreeable to the opposition and retained this one, I would have been glad over it. But with this provision deleted, with the onus still on the debtor to prove that he did not get the money, I ask, what relief is actually given to the debtor? He has to prove that he did not get the money, he has to prove that all the various items entered in Hindi in the account books from year to year have been falsely entered which is an impossibility. It is an impossible task that is imposed on him. It is but right that honourable members on the other side realise that the Bill as it is, is quite ineffective and in their heart of hearts they are jolly glad over it. But after all you have to put up appearances. They would not even give the little that Government are prepared to give or that our party, the zamindar party, simple people that they are, claim to get out of this measure. Honourable members on the other side seem to be prepared to fight it inch by inch, but I think it is a mere waste of time. The Bill seeks to effect nothing more than reduce the rate of interest and take away compound interest with respect to which I find the Honourable Finance Member has already given notice of an amendment. There is nothing material left in the Bill. I submit, therefore, that no case has been made out for a re-circulation of the Bill. There is absolutely no justification for taking any more time on the motion. It is a waste of time and public money. The delay in passing the Bill should be as little as possible because by the time all the procedure is gone through, and the Parliamentary practice is followed, the man whom you want to save would be done away with.

Shrimati Lakhwati Jain (North-East Towns, non-Muhammadian, Urban), (Urdu): Sir, I am extremely pained to see that communal complexion is being given to this Bill. One section of the people is crying that the Mussalman will be ruined if this Bill is not passed into law and the zamindar will be utterly crushed if it is re-circulated to elicit the public opinion thereon, and another party is pressing hard for its re-circulation. It is not proper that the Muslims or the Hindus should give this Bill a communal colour. The question now before us is not whether the Muslim will be saved by the passage of this Bill or the Hindu will be crushed by its coming on the Statute Book. What we have to decide is whether or not it should be re-circulated to elicit the public opinion thereon. Some honourable members on this side of the House have adduced arguments to show that it should be. There are others, however, who have severely criticised the remarks of the supporters of the re-circulation motion. They have exhorted the Government not to pay heed to the persuasions of the supporters of the re-circulation motion. They fear that if the Government agrees to the request of the Hindu party, the zamindars, and most particularly, the petty zamindars will be ruined. But, we on these benches are equally anxious to protect the petty zamindar. Some people say that swaraj can be achieved by going to temples, others hold that we can achieve it by praying in mosques. But my belief is that the temple of swaraj lies along the path of service of the petty zamindar. (Hear, hear.) We will get swaraj by serving the poor people. We know that these people are starving and their children are undergoing untold hardships. If we help these people the goal we want to reach will come much nearer. This is what we believe and this is what has been my belief personally. When my election was held Mr. Duni Chand was making propaganda that if I was returned this Hindu seat will go, as it were, to Chaudhri Chhotu Ram. He said so because he knew that I had great sympathies with the zamindars. (Laughter.) Mr. Duni Chand and Malviya know my views fully well. I have always thought and preached that the Hindu-Muslim unity is necessary for us if we want to achieve anything in the political field. So long as the Hindus and the Mussalmans do not unite like the Ganges and the Jumna they will not be able to pass even by the side of the temple of swaraj. (Cheers.) If I were to shed a single drop of my blood for the cause of Hindu-Muslim unity, I should consider that one drop more precious, more valuable, more usefully-spent than the whole blood in my veins. If I oppose the passage of the Bill now before the House it is because I feel that its passage will widen the gulf of hostility between the Hindus and the Mussalmans. Let the Government rush through this measure and the Hindu-Muslim unity will become an impossibility in this province. Then, why should the Government be too hasty? This Bill can well wait for a few months. The zamindar will not be subjected to any more hardships during the coming six months or so than he has been already. It is the duty of the Government, moreover, to invite the attention of the people of the province to the changes that have been made in this Bill, and give them the opportunity of expressing their opinion about the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee. It is not a question of now or never. The Government can pass the Bill whenever it likes. They have a very safe majority in favour of the measure. But I want to point out that no law can be successfully imposed merely by satisfying the majority and securing its consent. History tells us that whenever a majority has tried to trample under foot the rights and privileges of a minority that majority has been ruined. Instances of the Romans and the Danes, Buddhists and Brahmins and Mussalmans and Sikhs point out the same fact. I take this opportunity of sounding a note of warning to the Government that the results of passing this Bill into law with the help of the majority without paying any heed to the protest recorded by the minority will be most disastrous for the peace of this province. Yesterday, Chaudhri Riasat Ali said that as some people were definitely in favour of this Bill and some were definitely against it and neither the supporters nor the opponents of the Bill were likely to be converted to each others' view, the re-circulation of the Bill would be merely waste of time and money. He may be right. But it is a sound principle to place a Bill before the public, a Bill that has been materially changed by the select committee. It is the right of the people to express opinion on the changed form of this Bill and this House should not deny them their right. I will not say that the honourable member has not studied the opinions that were received on this Bill when it was circulated last time. But if he had done so, he would have been convinced of the controversial nature of this Bill and would have not opposed this motion. He would have certainly supported it. He is not unmindful of the fact that there is a third party in the province besides the supporters and opponents of this Bill, I mean the English people. They have nothing to gain or lose by the passage or rejection of this Bill. It would be in the fitness of things, therefore, to know the opinion of these people about the changed form of this Bill. The honourable members of this House are aware that the District and Sessions Judge of Ambala who is an Englishman vehemently opposed this measure. We cannot say anything against the unbiased opinion of such people. Then, we must know the opinion of the judiciary, sub-judges, senior sub-judges and judges of the High Court of Judicature should be equally consulted. We should not pass a law of such vast implications without enquiring the opinion of the high judicial authorities. I would, therefore, request the honourable members on the opposite benches not to oppose this circulation motion. They need not fear that the Bill will not be passed at all if it is circulated at this stage. They can pass it any time. Moreover, I for one, am not against the idea of giving relief to the petty zamindar. In my speech at Simla I made it abundantly clear that I had as much anxiety for the welfare of the petty zamindar as any honourable member on those benches. My fear, however, is this that the Bill in its present form does not give any relief to the petty zamindar. It does give much help to the big zamindar for whom no one of us need feel any solicitude. Furthermore, I will put a direct question to the honourable members opposite. They have not provided for the safety of the merchants of the province. Have these people no children to feed? Have they no one to look after? Do they not stand in need of bread and clothing? Why should this Council not look after their interests as well? The zamindar has been styled as the back-bone of this province. But the merchant class is the heart of our body-politic.

If there is no heart, of what use will the back-bone be? We should, therefore, show as much solicitude for the welfare of the merchant as we have for the peasant. I will not take much of your time. I have only to make this submission that the Government will not do any good to the people of the province by passing a controversial Bill of this type within three days and without inviting the opinion of the public on it. After all the Government is not to lose anything if this Bill is circulated for another time. May be, they think that there will be great agitation over it if it is referred to the public a second time. But they should bear in mind this fact also that if this Bill is passed into law without knowing the opinion of the public and without effecting any healthy change in it the agitation against it will assume very dangerous proportions. The Government must have received information that resolutions were passed by merchants and money-lenders of Lyallpur and other places to the effect that they would boycott British goods if this Bill is passed and if they are not able to do without foreign goods they would prefer to buy Chinese or Japanese goods. But they would cease to buy British goods in any case. Moreover, the merchants have resolved to refuse to lend money for purposes of paying land revenue. If this Bill is passed in its present form and the merchants and money-lenders carry their threats into effect the Government will not be able to realise land revenue from the zamindar because it is with the sahukar's help that the zamindar has been paying his land revenue and other Government dues. The Government should be mindful of these warnings and not disappoint these people by rejecting this circulation motion. No havoc will be wrought with the zamindars' resources if this Bill is held up for another five or six months. Even if some decrees are passed against them in the meanwhile as is feared by some people, they will be of no use. Their value will be nothing, because the conciliation boards are authorised under the proposed law to reduce the sum decreed. Of course the zamindars are in trouble, but we should not lose sight of the importance of public opinion. The Government, being sure of their majority, should not hurriedly pass the Bill into law. But if they attach little importance to public opinion, they need not have circulated it even in the first instance. They might have passed it into law then and there. But that is not the case. The Government realise the importance of public opinion. Anyhow the Bill as it stands destroys the rural credit and renders the payment of past debts impossible. Supposing a money-lender presents an application to the conciliation board and the debtor is summoned. The latter will say that he never refused to pay but he could not pay his debts and that the creditor had rather insulted him for which he would sue him in court. Thereupon, the board dismisses his application and the sahukar fails to recover his money. But if at all the sahukar succeeds in his attempt and gets a decree, he will not be able to recover the amount due to him. The debtor will also urge that interest on the money borrowed by him should be wiped off because he cannot pay even the principal. Under the existing law a warrant of arrest can be issued against the defaulting debtor, but this Bill, if passed into law, will let him off scott free. Besides, the board is empowered to grant decree of whatever amount it thinks fit. It may grant a decree of two or three or four hundred rupees instead of one thousand rupees. This is unfair. I would, therefore, appeal to the Government to consider the whole situation most dispassionately and re-circulate the Bill for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon. And if they fail to do so, I would once again warn them against the serious consequences of the step they are going to take. With these words I strongly support the motion now before the House.

4 P. M.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I have listened very carefully to the rambling speeches from the other side and from what I can gather from them I have to conclude that unfortunately in this country every problem is looked at from a communal point of view. Not only that. Some uncharitable people even accuse, or suspect Government of partiality with one party or another. They forget that no Government can exist unless it is broad-based on principles of impartiality, generosity and justice (hear, hear). That is the fundamental principle which the British Government here has always kept in view when dealing with the people in this country. The British people who are past masters in the art of Government realise fully that in the contentment and prosperity of the people lies their strength. It will not be inappropriate to quote Sa'adi on this subject—

رعیت چون بیخ است - سلطان درخت

درخت است - پسر باشد از بیخ - حکمت which rendered into English means—

The subjects are like the roots of a tree and the king like a tree.
The tree grows or remains firm and strong by the strength of its roots.

This is the principle which the Government has always kept in view. It was in pursuance of this principle that the Government during the past two or three decades finding that the peasants or zamindars were labouring under some great disabilities brought forward various Acts such as the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, the Co-operative Societies Act, the Regulation of Accounts Act and so on. But experience has shown that all these various Acts have not been a panacea for the ills of the zamindars and that is the reason why Government has come forward now with this new Bill. I must say that even this is only a palliative and does not go far enough. Anyhow, half a loaf is better than none.

A good deal has been said about the change in the title or in the clauses of the Bill. I would like to ask honourable members on the other side, as to what fundamental changes have been brought about in the Bill. Controversial points have been practically omitted by the Leader of the Unionist Party and here remains nothing in principle which is new. The old principles remain and the changes that have been introduced are of a degree only. Thus instead of 60 per cent. of the creditors, it is proposed to substitute 40 per cent. of creditors. Even this amendment has yet to be accepted by the House. Every one who is fully acquainted with the condition of the zamindars will feel that no time should be lost in saving them as otherwise every month that passes will add to the burden of the zamindars. It is an open secret that the zamindar is every day sinking lower and lower in the quagmire of indebtedness and unless this Bill is passed soon his condition will be beyond redemption, and there will be no power on earth that will be able to save him.

تا تریاق از عراق آورده شود مارگزیده مرده شود which rendered into English means, by the time the antidote is brought from Mesopotamia the snake-bitten will be dead. This question seems to be a sort of a tussle between the sahukar and the zamindar. The sahukar must remember that in reality if this Bill is passed it will be in his own interest. The interests of sahukars are mainly bound up with those of the zamindars. If the latter are prosperous the former also will be prosperous. If the zamindars are poor the sahukar cannot get anything from the former and there will be only unrest in the country.

It has been said that the Bill does not go far enough. I agree with the remarks of Mr. Nanak Chand suggesting measures which Government ought to adopt or could have adopted earlier. The Government should have started a sort of sinking fund or agricultural banks which should pay up all the debts of the zamindars. But that too will not prove effective unless we tackle the rate of interest. Unless some measures are adopted to stop this perennial source of indebtedness, no measure adopted by Government will alleviate the sufferings of the people. In this connection Mr. Nanak Chand read some quotations from Mr. Darling's book. I should also like to read a quotation from 'Conflict, Angora to Afghanistan' by Rosita Forbes. The authoress is a very learned lady and after going through all the countries she has recorded her experiences. This measure has been brought forward not only by this Government but by every Government where agriculture, the only industry, is faced with this difficult and complicated problem, for instance Germany, Roumania, Hungary, Rhodesia and others. After describing the pitiable condition of the Arabs who were being ejected from their lands, the book says—

A new Agricultural Bank is, I believe, one of the measures projected for the relief of farming, but it will not suffice to remedy the present unpalatable situation unless rigorous measures are taken for the suppression or regulation of money-lenders. In Rhodesia, I am told, the government at one time bought up all outstanding native debts to money-lenders at a reasonable rate of interest and allowed the debtors to repay the principal slowly, with interest at nine per cent. per annum. If this could be done in Palestine, it would free the Arabs from the worst tyranny they have suffered since the days of El Jezrani the Butcher.

Some such measure is also needed in this country in addition to this Bill. (An honourable member: Do you recommend this to the Government?) Yes. But if it merely passes this Bill and then sits with folded hands it is no good. It will have to adopt the other measures also or some other drastic measure will have to be adopted for clearing off the debts. Unless that is done there is no hope. Government can have a sinking fund or raise a loan. It is only a question of 300 crores. Now the debts are estimated to be about 200 crores but every month that will pass, if the Bill is not passed now, will add another load of 8 crores on the shoulders of the debtors. The Bill will have to be passed in the interests of the people as also in the interests of the sahukar. It is Government's duty to protect all classes of people. If the zamindar is poor and cannot pay the land revenue or the sahukar's debt, what will be the result? Unrest in the country, more assaults on the sahukar. I do not hold out any threat. But that is the natural result. It has happened in Palestine. It is said that there are 1,600 people in prison camps. If the people have been compelled to part with their lands, they must either starve or steal. That is bound to come and then the Government will be compelled to come to the protection of the sahukar by posting additional police and that means additional burden on the people. It will be in the interests of the zamindar as well as the sahukar and also in the interests of the Government to pass this Bill. The honourable member, Shrimati Lekhwati Jain, has said that she is prepared to shed her blood so as to give some assistance or succour to the zamindar. It reminds me of a proverb—which means if you want my life I have no hesitation, it is at your service; but if you want my money that requires consideration.

It is very well for the honourable lady member to shed crocodile tears and to offer sympathy with the zamindar. But can she or any member from that side bring forward a case in which a shylock has ever shown any real sympathy with the zamindar? I would, therefore, not only deprecate the re-circulation of this Bill but I strongly oppose it for the reasons which I have given.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra (Nominated, non-official), (Urdu): Sir, in view of the duties I owe to the Government, to this House and in fact to this province, I feel myself called upon to oppose the Bill now before the House. In my opinion the Bill as originally introduced by Government was an objectionable and iniquitous measure. But since the Honourable the Finance Member in his speech while moving that the Bill be referred to a select committee, assured the House that with regard to certain abnoxious provisions of the Bill the Government were not committed one way or the other and that they would be quite prepared to accept all reasonable amendments that may be proposed by the select committee and since, with regard to the provision relating to the establishment of conciliation boards, the Honourable the Finance Member was pleased to remark that Government themselves did not believe this as a solution of the problem but because they could not do otherwise, they had put it in the form of that provision and that if, however, the Council considered that they would not serve any useful purpose, Government would not regard them as an essential part of the measure, I did not oppose the Bill at that time expecting that the Bill would emerge out of the select committee shorn of its objectionable portions. But I am altogether disappointed to find that the Bill as reported by the select committee has become all the more objectionable. The clauses about which the trading public had already expressed their strong resentment have become more stringent so much so that if the Bill as it stands, is passed into law it will not only deal a death blow to the money-lending business, but it would seriously affect the credit and trade of the province. It is the case of a goat being slaughtered without pleasing one who eats its flesh. The money-lenders and traders will be ruined and the zamindars will gain nothing, for the present Bill is not likely to remove the causes of rural indebtedness or in any way to improve the agrarian credit. That this fact is admitted by the members of the select committee is proved by their having removed the words "For the improvement of the agrarian credit." from the objects of the Bill. I do admit that the zamindars have fallen on evil days. I do feel that it is the duty of Government to improve their lot by affording reasonable relief to them, for in their well-being lies the prosperity of the whole province. But the manner in which the Government want to help them is as unfair as undesirable. The burden of relief that may be afforded to zamindars should fall on the whole province. It is really unfair to rob Peter to pay Paul. The money-lenders who have been helping the zamindars at the time of their need, by lending them their hard-earned fortune should not be made the scapegoat.

Sardar Arjan Singh : Question.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand, Mehra : The money-lenders have given to the zamindars all they had in the form of loans. It is already very difficult for them to recover their debts, for many debtors who can really afford to pay have dishonestly taken recourse to insolvency proceedings. For God's sake do not simplify the insolvency proceedings by passing this Bill into law, otherwise it will mean nothing but help to the dishonest in their dishonesty and to tempt even the honest debtors to adopt dishonest ways to avoid payment of their debts. With regard to the system of compound interest I would simply say that it exists from time immemorial and being based on certain very sound principles is still in vogue in all the civilised countries of the world. To deprive the money-lenders of the benefit of compound interest is an absurdity pure and simple. The framers of this measure have admitted the principles of compound interest by making it lawful in case of transactions with the Government co-operative societies and banks. Is it not unfair that you allow banks compound interest but in the case of money-lenders you deem it excessive and consequently unlawful? Similarly to fix a rigid limit for rate of simple interest is objectionable. A rigid limit would be impracticable, for the rate of interest always depends on the need of the debtor and his capacity to pay back the sum due from him. When the money-lenders themselves cannot get money from the banks at 8 per cent. per annum interest, how can they advance money to the zamindars at that rate?

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair and it was occupied by the Deputy President.)

I may point out that sub-clause 2 of clause 5 is so stringent and so harsh as will stop all dealings in money matters when it is acted upon. Perhaps it has not occurred to my friends on the opposite benches that there is difference between one immovable property and another immovable property, between one movable property and another movable property. One immovable property can reasonably be expected to pay interest on loans advanced on the pledge of such property, from its rent, etc., and similarly one movable property which is worth much more than the loan advanced, about the price of which there is no fear of great fluctuation and which is not perishable. On the pledge of such properties it is possible to give or get loans at the rate of interest prescribed. But on the security of an immovable property which cannot pay the interests from its income, or the movable property where there is fear of great fluctuation of price or which is perishable, it is too much to expect any money-lender to lend money at 8 per cent. interest, at such a rate and on such a security which even banks are not prepared to advance any loan as I have already said. Hence it is clear that by insisting on the retention of this provision you will stop in future all such business and instead of helping the poor agriculturist, you will increase his difficulties. There is another point in this connection which the House may like to take into consideration. It happens in not a few cases that an immovable property is pledged to one person for a loan taken at a particular rate of interest. Then the same property is pledged to another person for another loan and it cannot be reasonably expected that this second loan will be advanced at the same rate of interest at which the first loan is advanced. If you were to keep all such cases in mind you will be forced to the conclusion that it will not be in the interest of the debtor to fix such a rate of interest as has been fixed by this clause.

Coming to clause 6 I shall be content with saying that it is very unjust and iniquitous as it interferes with lawful contracts already entered into. Proceeding to clause 7 of the Bill re debt conciliation boards I find that there are many serious objections against it. In this clause the banks have been placed beyond the reach and operation of the Bill. In other words this Bill is a direct attack on money-lenders alone. It is apparent that it is intended to crush that institution of money-lending which has undoubtedly proved very useful for such a long time and which has been rightly described as the back-bone of rural economy. I am sure that the House will not permit things going to such a pass. While on this point, I may also say that the definition of the word 'debtor' is too wide. I should think that in this category only those persons should be included who till lands with their own hands or who are labourers and who have no other source of income or means of livelihood. No vakils, no barristers, no Government members and such other big men who have other sources of income besides lands should be afforded protection by this Bill. It will be most unreasonable to do so. I may also be permitted to submit that it is highly improper and unjust to give the conciliation boards final authority to decide on a question of such nature arising whether a person is a debtor or not. Again the definition of "Agriculture" in the same section or clause of this Bill is very wide, elastic and indefinite. In the presence of the words "and the like" in this clause nearly all professions can be safely included in the profession of agriculture. As an illustration I shall refer the House to tea making industry. According to the definition given in the Bill this industry is sure to be included in the profession of agriculture, although it is really an industry. Government itself consider it as an industry and not as agriculture as income derived from it is assessed to income-tax (A voice: Over and above land revenue), yes over and above land revenue as in the case of some house property. I may hazard a suggestion in this connection and that is that all professions which are assessed to income-tax should by an implicit provision in the Bill, be placed on a different footing. That will make the position very clear. To further illustrate my point I may submit that according to this definition such a person will also take advantage of it who grows only 50 maunds of wheat but who also purchases thousands of maunds of wheat with a view to selling the same at a profit. To make it impossible for men like these to benefit by the provision of the Bill the definition of the word 'agriculture' should be made more clear and explicit.

Now with regard to the setting up of debt conciliation boards, the select committee have not given weight even to the opinion of the Honourable judges of the High Court. I think I shall do well to quote here the relevant portion of that opinion and it is as follows:—

Nine of the Judges are of the opinion that the proposal is unworkable. If the members of the proposed Boards are salaried officials, the burden imposed on the tax-payers would be excessive, if they are non-officials working on an honorary basis, there is almost a certainty of in-efficient working and abuse of powers, owing to that same party feeling which has so often prevented Panchayats from functioning satisfactorily. If, however, Government insist on the experiment eight Judges consider that the important safeguards contained in clauses 12 and 13 of the Central Provinces Debt Conciliation Bill should be introduced. These safeguards—concurrence in the settlement by creditors to whom a minimum of 60 per cent. of the debts are due and recovery of the sum decreed as arrears of land revenue are, they hold, essential features of the Central Provinces Bill and without them the whole scheme fails.

It is not necessary for me to say that unless it is made known as to what kind of men will be nominated to these boards, it is useless to expect that they will command the confidence of the debtors and creditors alike.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri Fazl Ali : If it has been easy to secure the services of capable men as judges of the High Court from the agriculturists, it will not be very difficult to find men as members of these boards from the same class. The honourable member, therefore, need not worry over it.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra : I say like High Court judges they must be men with sufficient judicial experience and further none of them should be in debt, nor any of them should be related to or interested in persons who are in debt.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : As if no judge of the High Court is related to any person following the profession of money-lending.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra : Another thing that is open to serious objection in regard to these boards is that they are being vested with powers to settle cases of the value of Rs. 10,000 and even more in the very beginning. I should say that at this experimental stage, that ought not to be. When we have yet to see how these boards will function, it is not very safe to entrust them with such vast powers. I may as well say in this connection that the deletion of the proviso to clause 11 of the original Bill has made it still worse. Now the boards will have no choice or power to dismiss application for settlement even if it were to consider in the case of any such application that it was not desirable to attempt to effect settlement between the debtor and his creditors. What an absurd proposition it is ! It is clear from this that the intention of the supporters of the Bill is to add to the sufferings of the creditors and nothing else.

Further it may be submitted that sub-clause 2 of clause 13 of the Bill affords another illustration of the fact that the interests of the creditors are no longer safe. To consider all or any such debt of which a statement is not submitted within a fixed period to have been discharged for all purposes and for all occasions is injustice, pure and simple. In many cases it happens that a person is rendered unfit to give such a statement of a debt and in such cases this drastic provision will doubtless work hardships. It will certainly amount to denying justice to a section of the population if this provision is not materially modified in the interest of the creditors. Particularly the interests of the widows and orphans will be jeopardised by the retention of this provision as it is. Similarly the change that has been introduced in section 19 of the Bill is also very drastic because according to it the boards will have no power to dismiss an application for settlement in cases where an amicable settlement between the parties has not been arrived at. It may be added here that certification of an amicable settlement by the boards in respect of debts due to non-consenting creditors will be most unfair and this is borne out by the opinion expressed by the Honourable Judges of the High Court which is as follows :—

Without the safeguard in clause 12, the 'amicable settlement' would be highly unjust to non-consenting creditors, and, in the absence of any provision for speedy and effective recovery of the amount decreed, the agreement would merely substitute one piece of paper, namely, a decree which still remains to be executed in the ordinary way, for another, namely the instrument proving the debt due.

I now come to a very strange and unheard of provision of the Bill according to which it will not be in the power of even the highest court in the province to question the illegalities and invalidities of the conciliation boards. Not even that. According to another provision of the Bill no appeal or application for revision shall lie against any order passed by a conciliation board. It means that these boards are being granted a status which even the High Court does not enjoy. Because the law of the land provides that against the judgment of the High Courts the Privy Council can be moved in appeal, but the orders of the conciliation boards will be final. It has been and is even now a very healthy and good feature of British justice that a decision in a case in dispute is not left to the whims and idiosyncracies of one person or one court and the dissatisfied person or persons are at liberty to seek justice against that decision in second and even in the third court by way of an appeal. In some cases the persons aggrieved can go up to the Privy Council. I wonder why that healthy and sound principle has been ignored in the case of this Bill and why the boards have been placed beyond the reach of even the highest court in the province. It is a point which requires a serious thought by the Government and the honourable members of the House.

The principle of Damdupat which is intended to be introduced by this Bill will further complicate matters. Now the creditors do not generally go to courts for the recovery of their loans if they are assured that they will be paid as soon as possible. Not unoften, they taking pity on the helpless condition of their debtors, prefer to wait and thus do not increase the burden of their debtors by adding to it the expenses of the courts. But when they come to know that the money advanced by them must cease to accumulate interest at a certain point, they will always take the first opportunity to seek the assistance of the courts. That means, you will though unwittingly help to increase litigation and the sufferings of the poor debtors for whose welfare you seem to be so solicitous. Before I come to make any general observations I may be permitted to add that it will again go against the interests of the creditors to allow the debtors, as provided in section 90 of the Bill, to deposit the money due from them in courts, for in that case the creditors will have to bear so much expense to receive payment of such sums deposited in the courts. They will also lose interest as according to this clause it will cease to run from the date the money is so deposited in a court. If you are inimical to the interests of the creditors I will offer one suggestion which will achieve the end in view of the framers of the clause and which, if acted upon, will save the creditors from undergoing any inconvenience or loss. That is that such sums of money instead of their being deposited in the courts, should be deposited in the Imperial Bank to be paid to the creditors on the presentation of the cheques. That I think is a very plausible suggestion and I am sure that the House will have no objection to accept it.

I shall now proceed to make a few general observations in regard to this Bill for what they are worth. It is evident and it has been proved beyond doubt that this Bill, if passed into law, will impair and lower the standard of morality of the people in general and debtors in particular. In this country where according to religious precepts of all religions everybody always considered it his sacred duty to pay all his debts. The dishonest and evil-minded persons have lately begun to take advantage—an undue advantage—of the complexity of the law, to evade payment of the debts due from them. This Bill will not only assist such persons to cheat their creditors, but will lower the general business morality of the people, of this province. I must admit that I am not as sure of the religious precepts of other religions, but according to Hinduism a man who does not pay off his debts in his lifetime is reborn as a donkey to pay off his debts in the form of service that it has to render to the master. If I do not make a mistake Islam also lays down some strict injunctions in this matter of payment of debts. At least I can guess that there is some such injunction because the noble example of a noble Muslim, who was a Pathan and who came from a territory where this so-called civilisation has not so far penetrated, is before me. His name was Pastak Shah. He was a trader by profession and he once came to Amritsar with a consignment of mulathi. He came to me and asked me to sell his mulathi in the bazar. I told him that I had no experience in that line of trade and that, therefore, he should seek the assistance of some expert in that line. But he said that he had faith in me and in our firm alone and that he was not prepared to rely on any other person. I had therefore to take that consignment. But when the actual thing came before us, we found that it was a very inferior and coarse mulathi and so unsaleable in the market. We tried our best and we went so far as to cut those long sticks into small pieces so that it should become marketable, but it could not be sold at any price and this took us so long that the time came when the noble Pathan had to go back to his country. Having been unable to realize his money by sale of mulathi, he asked me for a loan against his goods so that on his return he should take some merchandise with him to his country to sell it at a profit. I willingly advanced what he wanted. After that four years elapsed and that Pathan did not turn up nor did he send the money due to me. But one day after that long interval a Pathan called at the office of our firm and asked whether we could give him a copy of Pastak Shah's account. As it was an old and petty account I did not remember the state of the account. I told the man offhand without referring to the accounts that as I did not know him I would not pay him any amount which will be found in credit of Pastak Shah. I further enquired where Pastak Shah was and why he had not come himself for such a long time to this province. The man said that he wanted to know only the state of Pastak Shah's account. On referring to our books we found that Pastak Shah owed us Rs. 34 which information we gave to him. The Pathan then told me, that Pastak Shah had died and that he had called him, his neighbour at his death-bed and had said to him that he had borrowed some money from our firm in Amritsar. That debt, he said, he must pay otherwise he would not be able to face his creator. Before his death Pastak Shah gave him money, and took a promise from him that he would pay his debt which promise he had come to discharge. He paid the money then and there. This is the business morality of persons who are not yet affected by this civilisation. Such I believe is the teaching of Islam. Such men will never ask for a Bill of this kind, I am sure. I know of the case of another noble Musalman belonging to a very high family in this province, a big official who paid the debts due from his father because his mother told him that if he was a true son of his father, he must pay off those debts to the sahukar who had helped them in their hour of need. But such cases are few and far between in this country and in these days. Now there is a majority of such people who would not like to pay their debts even if many of them may be in a position to pay. We at least know of one such case which the honourable member for Gujranwala cited in his speech at Simla while he was supporting this Bill. He said that he knew of a zamindar who owned as much as ten thousand acres of land and who was in debt only to the amount of Rs. 2,500. But instead of paying it off, which he could easily do, he was prepared to go to jail and did not like to pay back the money. You will certainly increase the number of such people by passing this Act. I therefore, ask my friends on the opposite benches to pause and consider before they take a final step in this direction. I know that the zamindars have fallen on bad days and that it is imperative that some relief should be afforded to them. But this is not the remedy that will cure their ills. If you want to really help them, you should help them in starting cottage industries like Japan so that the peasants may have a side income by working in their spare hours and to further help them you should provide that the landlords are not permitted to take more than one-fourth share of the produce from the lands given by them on lease. This and other similar steps should be taken to safeguard the interests of the poor agriculturist. Without taking such steps you cannot hope to help them. Measures like the one under discussion will not go a long way to help him although it may do a good deal of harm to him and to another section of His Majesty's subjects. With these words I oppose the motion for consideration, and request the Government to withdraw this Bill and to come before the House with a more suitable measure.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari (Baluch Tumandars, Landholders) (Urdu): Sir, I was surprised to see, in the agenda, this motion standing in the name of my honourable friend, the representative of the Punjab Landholders, General. I could never believe that a politician with such vast administrative experience and ability could be influenced by sentiments in the field of practical politics. I had expected to find some cogent reason in the speech of my honourable friend in support of his motion but I must confess that my expectations met with disappointment. It was argued that the amendments made by the select committee were beyond the scope of the Bill and that new clauses had been inserted which did not form part of the original Bill. It has been said that it is necessary to elicit public opinion on the new provisions which had not been circulated already. The select committee, no doubt, inserted certain new clauses in the Bill which did not appear in the original Bill, but these were certainly within the scope of the Bill. On the advice of the Honourable Finance Member our party has agreed to drop these new clauses in order to expedite the passage of the Bill. After the deletion of these new clauses there remains no fresh point on which public opinion has not been ascertained. I can confidently say that no legislative measure has been more widely circulated, and has been more thoroughly discussed than this Bill. It has been discussed threadbare in the Press and on the platform by every section of the population. A study of the opinions received will convince the House that no aspect of this measure has been left untouched.

It has never been our intention to rush through this measure on the strength of our majority in the Council. We wish to steer this Bill through calmly and in a compromising spirit. We have tried to accommodate our friends as far as it was reasonable and we expected the same spirit of goodwill and conciliation from that section of the House. After listening to the statements made by the Honourable Finance Member and the honourable leader of the National Unionist Party there remains no ground for doubt that the object of this amendment is not genuine. Its only object seems to be to delay unnecessarily the passage of the Bill. If it is so, I wish to sound a note of warning to those who are using these tactics, that this delay would result in very serious consequences and that they are making a great mistake in undermining the importance and emergent need of this measure.

It is conceded even by the bitterest enemies of the debtor classes that the agriculturist population of the province is in a miserable plight and that the rural credit has received an unequivocal blow on account of the unprecedented economic depression and the sudden fall in the price of agricultural products. The value of the agricultural debt has, in the term of agricultural commodities, increased to more than threefold and their paying capacity has been decreased in the same proportion. In the existing circumstances the agriculturist debtor finds it beyond his capacity to discharge his liabilities even if he wants to do so. The agricultural debt is estimated at two hundred crores of rupees and the annual interest thereon at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum comes to thirty crores of rupees. Now let us see what the net annual income of the agriculturist class is. We have no accurate material to calculate correctly this income except to base our calculations on the land revenue. The land revenue is generally assessed at the rate of 33 per cent. of the total net assets. So three times the amount of land revenue will approximately give us the figure of the net agricultural income of the province. The land revenue being about four crores the total net income cannot be more than fifteen crores. This shows that even if the total net agricultural income of the province is paid towards the interest
