of agricultural-debt it can only redeem half the amount of annual interest. But one should not forget that out of this net income Government dues and bare necessities of life are also to be met with. The burden of debt in many cases far exceeds the value of agricultural holdings. This shows that it is impossible for the agricultural debtor to pay even the interest, what to say of the principal. If the amount of debt is reduced to his paying capacity it will give him an impetus to discharge his moral obligations. I must say that it would be in the interest of the creditors to keep alive the goose that lays the golden egg rather than to kill it. It would be suicidal to press for the realisation of the entire paper debt which is far beyond the means of agricultural debtors to pay. It will only result in their refusal to pay their liabilities. A lesson should be taken from the lead given by the Government in this connection who keeping in view the limited capacity of the agriculturists have been remitting a substantial amount of land revenue, abiana and tagavi dues every year since 1929. The result of this gesture on the part of the Government has been, that the agriculturists have striven to pay the Government dues even at the point of starvation.

The agricultural indebtedness is the gravest problem of the province and it requires very serious consideration. The economic horizon of the province is covered with dark clouds which tend to threaten the peace of the country. It would be unwise to force the debtor to the extent that he may refuse to pay his debts and may be driven to take the law into his own hands. Such steps have been taken before, and the history of the world is not lacking in such examples. It will be within the memory of some of the honourable members that such a course was taken by the indebted peasants in 1915 in the districts of Muzaffargarh, Jhang and Mianwali. I need not narrate the tale of atrocities which resulted in the loss of lives, honour and property. Order was restored by the Government with the help and healthy influence of the law-abiding and peace-loving gentry. We sent from Dera Ghazi Khan long-bearded, fierce-looking Baluchas to fight the furious dacoits who were creating havoc in the villages.

The increase in the prices of agricultural produce resulting from the Great War changed the phase of the problem and it became possible for the debtors to meet their liabilities for some time. Most of the benefit of high prices went to the sahukars. This temporary prosperity proved harmful to the agriculturists. It resulted in unlimited credit and unthrifty habits. The mockery is that the benefits of the high prices went to the sahukars whilst the after-effects of those prosperous years added to the miseries of the agriculturists. The debtor to-day is in a much worse position than he was in pre-war days. To-day he finds it impossible to discharge his financial liabilities. The darkness of disappointment prevails around him and he does not see even a single ray of hope in the darkness of debt which oppresses him.

I know this Bill is most inadequate to remedy the evil of indebtedness, but it is certainly a step to keep the situation under control. Its effects will be more psychological than practical. I fail to understand that such an innocent measure which is more to the benefit of the creditors than the debtors is being opposed and delayed. It would be unwise to oppose this measure only because it happens to come from the Government without paying any regard to its merits. The honourable members sitting on those benches have unfortunately cultivated the habit of opposing every motion that is made by the Government. They oppose the Government measures for the sake of opposition even if they are based on good intentions and sincere motives. This shows the irresponsible character and lack of administrative knowledge and experience on the part of those who pursue this policy. This destructive policy acts as a stumbling block in the way of the country's advancement and is a poor contribution towards nation-building. I am sure we can ill-afford, at this stage of constitutional progress, to risk the peace and tranquility of the province. The attitude of our critics will lead us nowhere. It will result in discontent and chaos. Their short-sighted policy and narrow-mindedness will prove harmful not only to the classes they represent but will also be detrimental to the wider interests of the country. I appeal to them in the name of the peace and prosperity of the country and the classes which they represent that they may take a broader view of things and look at the problems from a higher angle. In the interest of innocent lives, and the peace and progress of the country they should act in a more responsible manner and pay the same amount of serious consideration which the gravity of the situation deserves. They should try to create goodwill between debtors and creditors, agriculturists and non-agriculturists and one community and the other which alone can lead us to the goal which all of us have in view. Before I conclude I would like to reply to the remark made by the honourable member from Hoshiarpur accusing the Government and the National Unionist Party of entering into an unholy alliance. The position as I have already explained, is this: The Honourable Finance Member told the leader of our party that the Government was keen to pass the Bill in the present session but in view of the new clauses which had been included in the Bill by the select committee the Government considered it necessary to support the motion for re-circulation. But if these clauses were deleted the necessity for re-circulation would not arise and the Government would be prepared to move for the consideration of the Bill. The National Unionist Party realised this difficulty of the Government and agreed to the suggestion of deleting the new clauses. This is a clear indication of goodwill, co-operation and also of the spirit of conciliation on the part of the majority party. We foresaw the consequences of delay and so we decided to make this sacrifice in the wider interests of the country. I wish the same view is taken by other sections of the House and the same spirit of conciliation is displayed by them. Our friends only know how to criticise and are unfortunately in the habit of taking a dark view of everything. I consider the re-circulation unnecessary and in opposing this amendment I request the honourable mover to withdraw his motion and advise his party to refrain from these tactics of delaying this important measure.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the chair.)

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I stand up to make a few observations before the House. Fortunately I have been returned by a constituency where the zamindars as well as the sahukars are the electors. Consequently I represent the interests of both these classes. As such I am in a difficult position for I have to represent these antagonistic interests at the same time.

[Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan.]

This as the House knows, is very difficult and makes it incumbent on me to say what I can say conscientiously. It has been admitted on all hands in this House that the condition of the zamindars is pitiable and they find it very difficult to make both ends meet. Their means have become so scanty that they cannot meet the ordinary necessities of daily life. Their present pitiable plight is due to the tremendous fall in the prices of the land produce and failure of crops during the last few years. I, who know the rural conditions, am constrained to remark that if the zamindars are having a wretched time the sahuikars living in the villages are also not better off. This slump in the market has also affected them and they have also been reduced to penury. The small sahuikars run their business by borrowing money from the big sahuikars residing in the cities and then lending it to the zamindars in the villages. They charge from the zamindars interest a little higher than what they pay to big sahuikars from whom they themselves borrow for the purpose of lending it to the zamindars. Now the village sahuikars are in a very difficult position for they have to pay interest on the sums they have borrowed from the big zamindars of the cities and at the same time they themselves fail to realise the capital or its interest from the zamindars. These small sahuikars even hesitate to approach the zamindars to demand the sums lent to them or the interest. They dare not do it because they fear lest the zamindars who are so hard pressed should become desperate and harm them. There is every likelihood of their being insulted or beaten by the zamindars if they demand the payment of the debts. It is the wish of these sahuikars that some third person may now intervene and help them to arrive at some settlement. So far as their debts are concerned they are fully conscious of the inability of the zamindars to pay. It is very necessary that some third person, it may be the Government, should now intervene and approach the parties to settle their differences in some cordial way. The sahuikars are willing to give every reasonable concession and facility so far as the discharge of their debts is concerned. If the Government fail to intervene and no settlement is arrived at, the peace of the province is sure to be endangered. The cases of murder as have already happened will increase. Some honourable members have pressed the necessity of re-circulating this Bill. I can only say this much that those honourable members who are in favour of re-circulation are blind to the interest of the sahuikars. If the enactment of this law is delayed it will result in much harm to the sahuikars, for by the time this Bill is re-circulated and opinions invited many cases of murder of sahuikars will have occurred. On the one hand these honourable members complain that the sahuikars are being murdered and on the other they are trying to delay the enactment of a measure which is expected to stop such crimes.

The only provisions that are worthy of notice are those relating to—

- (i) the rule of damdapat;
- (ii) the conciliation boards; and
- (iii) the lower rates of interests.

These are the things which are really necessary and beneficial both in the interest of the zamindars as well as of the sahuikars. But notwithstanding these beneficial principles the provisions of this Bill are still not sufficient to meet the requirements of the case.

The remedy for the present day evils does not lie in the enactment of such measures only. The Government should also try to find out the root causes of this trouble. Government should try to know why the zamindars fall into debt. The habits of the zamindars are required to be changed. They should be taught to live economically and not to spend their money on unnecessary things. If a zamindar finds that the crop which is growing in his fields is excellent and rich, he will at once go and borrow money in order to purchase a mare to ride on. He will not wait until the crop is reaped and sold so that he may be able to escape the payment of interest on the money he has to borrow for the purchase of the mare. The customs of the zamindars are expensive. They spend too much on births and marriages. It is high time that they should be taught the value of economy.

The next thing which is ruinous to the zamindars is the present system of realisation of land revenue. At present the land revenue is realised after the crops have passed from the hands of the agriculturists. The zamindars in order to pay the Government demand borrow money from the sahu-kars for which they have to pay interest. If the Government realises its demands when the crops are still in the hands of the zamindars they would be saved the payment of the interest on loans which are advanced to them by the sahu-kars, in order to facilitate the payment of land revenue. This alone will not be very helpful. The co-operative banks used to charge 12 per cent. interest on the loans they advanced to their members but now they have reduced their rates to Rs. 9-6-0 per cent. This has not in any way helped to decrease the burden of indebtedness. The zamindars should on principle cease to borrow. They should in no case be tempted to take loans whether for the purpose of sending their sons to the colleges for education or for the purpose of buying luxuries like drink, etc. By this bad habit of the zamindars the sahu-kars are benefited. We are thankful to Mr. Brayne that he is interested in the zamindars and is doing the rural uplift work. But all his propaganda is connected with hygiene and health. He tells the zamindars that they should increase their income but the method he suggests for the purpose is in itself very expensive. For example, he says that the zamindars should use mosquito nets, they should live in well ventilated houses, and should purchase strong bulls. These methods are expensive, in other words, all this means that the zamindars should waste whatever is left with them on these things. This propaganda is good but only for those who can afford to purchase all these things. Our zamindars are poor; they cannot afford to accept his proposals. It would give a great pleasure to me if the Government were to form a committee to find out the causes of the hasty plunge the zamindars take into indebtedness. By lowering the rates of interest the indebtedness of the zamindars will not decrease. It will only decrease when the real causes of this disease are found out and removed.

The rule of damdupat, the conciliation boards and the lower rates of interest are really beneficial things and to find fault with them is very unreasonable. The honourable members who have criticised them have been very inconsistent in their behaviour. They have admitted that the plight of the zamindars is pitiable and they have also criticised these provisions which have been incorporated in the Bill. If it is not inconsistency what else is it? They have suggested a remedy and it is also very inconsistent. They want that the Government should pay back the debts of the zamindars on their behalf to the sahuks and then realise the amount so paid from the zamindars in easy instalments. Every one knows that every year Government grants taqavi loans to the zamindars and very often it becomes difficult for it to realise these loans, and it has to suspend them or remit them. Now, if the Government were to accept their proposal it would only mean that the Government will have to pay it from its own pocket without any hope of its realisation from the zamindars on whose behalf it would be paid to the sahuks. This proposal is neither for the benefit of the zamindars nor for that of the Government. By this proposal only the sahuks will thrive. The provision for the establishment of conciliation boards is very beneficial both from the point of view of the debtor and the creditor. At present a zamindar will never go to an insolvency court to apply that he may be declared insolvent, for his self-respect stands in his way. But according to the provisions of this Bill even the creditor can apply that such and such a man who is his debtor should be declared insolvent, for he is unable to pay off his debts. At present a man who has to pay Rs. 10,000 will never go to a court to apply that he should be declared insolvent. For, a person whose credit is so much that he can borrow so much money, must be a very influential man and as such he will not go to a court to be declared insolvent. Such a proceeding would be against his self-respect and below his position. But at the same time the creditor will never dare to approach such an influential man to demand payment. Consequently he has either to remain silent or go to a court and bring a suit against him. The latter course will be very expensive and, therefore, he will hesitate to adopt. But according to the provisions of this Bill he can apply to a conciliation board that such and such a man may be declared insolvent. He can apply against a debtor who has to pay Rs. 10,000 as well as against one who has to pay only Rs. 500. It is very difficult for any sahuks to realise his debt from an influential man, and if any sahuks ever tries to approach such a debtor to demand the payment of his debt there is every likelihood of the case of shah of Kesri being repeated. The honourable members who have opposed the original motion fear that the sahuks will not be accorded impartial treatment by the conciliation board. But I may assure them that their fears are unfounded. The sahuks advance loans to the zamindars in order that they may be able to meet their necessities. It is very kind of them. But what if the zamindars find that they are unable to pay back the loan. They in such cases can only offer all their assets so that the debts may be satisfied to the extent of the value of those assets. Before the conciliation boards the zamindars will place all their assets for the satisfaction of the debts they owe. I am sure if ever any concession will be made it will be made for the benefit of the sahuks. No leniency will be shown to the zamindars. In cities if a sahuks who is also under debt to other sahuks becomes unable to pay his liabilities the case is not taken to the court but is settled privately. The debtors of that creditor assemble and agree to get whatever it is possible for each of them to get from his assets. Cannot they do the same so far as the zamindars are concerned? As I have already said at present the zamindars regard it a disgrace to go to a court to be declared insolvent but according to this Bill the sahkars will be entitled to apply to the conciliation board to declare a debtor insolvent and to help him in taking from him whatever it is possible for him to pay. You complain that the lives of the sahkars are in danger and many of them have been murdered at the hands of the zamindars but still you are unwilling to accept the services of the conciliation boards. A conciliation board will consist of at least three members who will be appointed by the local Government. There is no likelihood that these members of the board will show any kind of partiality towards the zamindars. The fears of the honourable members are quite unfounded and imaginary. They should welcome the idea of these boards instead of resenting their appointment. With these words I oppose the motion now before the House, and say that there is no need for the re-circulation of the Bill. I associate myself heartily with all that has been said by the honourable members in support of the Bill.

[Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan.]

Lala Bhagat Ram (Jullundur-cum-Ludhiana, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, since the introduction of this Bill in this Council there has been much hue and cry in the province raised by those whose interests this Bill affects. It has been criticised in the Press and on the platform. The sahkars have called it Hindukush. They have regarded it a death blow. The financial condition of the sahkars has become unsound on account of the present economic depression. They have borrowed money from the big sahkars of the cities in order to lend it to the zamindars so that the latter may be able to meet the Government demands. Now Government wants to ruin these sahkars who have helped the zamindars by making themselves liable to the big sahkars of the cities. This is how the Government wants to make a return of the kindness which the sahkars have shown to the zamindars. The sahkars gave loans to the zamindars so that they might be able to clothe their children and save them from the cold. They gave these loans in order to save the zamindars from starvation. For all this kindness and help the Government wants to make a return by passing a Bill which is so injurious and harmful to their interests. The sahkars borrowed the money from the big sahkars of the cities in order to advance loans to the zamindars. They pay interest on these sums which they have borrowed from the big sahkars and also they pay income-tax to the Government. The Income-Tax Department causes much botheration to these small sahkars. The department asks them to show them their account books and other papers. The sahkars' business has failed. They have got few account books and papers. They show these to the department and the department is not satisfied with them. It suspects that they have kept back some accounts. Consequently they levy high rates of income-tax. Now the poor sahkar on the one hand pays interest to the big sahkars of the cities and on the other they also pay income-tax. The amount which they have advanced to the zamindars has become difficult to be realised. The zamindars are unable to pay it. If the sahkars bring suits against them and get decrees against them the decrees are not satisfied. The zamindars' assets do not yield enough to satisfy the value of the decrees given against them by the courts. This burden of indebtedness which amounts to Rs. 2,000,000,000, also includes the large sums which the petty sahkars have borrowed from the big sahkars of the cities. Thus a large amount of this sum of indebtedness has been included twice. In my opinion the burden of debt is not more than 80 crores. If the zamindars pay only 60 crores out of this amount the sahukars would be glad to effect a compromise. But the zamindars do not want to make any payment. They are in reality incapable of paying anything. They cannot even pay instalments of Rs. 10 each. If you care to find out the mutations that have been effected during the last few years in favour of agriculturists money-lenders you will know, that many have been made for sums below Rs. 50. By these mutation entries you can guess very well that the agriculturists debtors can very easily get the land of the agriculturists for very small sums. This is because the zamindars are unable to pay anything and consequently they agree to give their lands to their agriculturist debtors in lieu of very small sums.

[L. Bhagat Ram.]

The mutual confidence between the sahukar and the zamindar has received a severe blow by the proposed Bill. The small sahukars think, and they are right in so thinking, that now it will be well-nigh impossible for them to recover their debts. So, they have ceased to advance any money. This has greatly impaired the credit of the zamindar.

There is one provision in this Bill which satisfies me considerably, and that is with regard to practically doing away with the court-fee system. I myself at one time gave up the idea of recovering my debts amounting to about 40,000 rupees for I did not want to take the risk of losing money on court fees especially when there was practically little chance of securing decrees from the civil courts. Now, it has been proposed that the money-lender will be able to claim his debts on a paper worth one rupee only and the amount of the debts may be anything. This is a salutary provision, and much in accordance with the temperament of the people of this province. I am glad to declare on the floor of this House that our people are honest by nature. Only our laws have made, and are further striving to make, them crafty and crooked. Otherwise, they are a plain and honest set of people. Those who come here and claim to be the representatives of zamindars are not so in the real sense of the expression. They are big men, at least most of them, and live in cities and they know very little about the rural life and its problem. But we who live amongst them are fully aware of the habits and conditions of the villagers. They are unsophisticated and honest people. It is not very long ago when people used to take loans and the signing of an agreement or deed took the shape of the borrowers' touching the body of the creditor. "I swear by thy body O' dada," declared the simple peasant debtor, "that I shall pay thee back all the money together with the stipulated interest." And thus the transaction was concluded. If a debtor refused to pay back the money borrowed, he was told to pluck a leaf from the pipal tree and lo! he came to his senses and declared on his knees that he was prepared to pay his dues lest he should incur the wrath of gods by plucking the leaves of the sacred pipal tree. And even to-day you will find in villages many people who will lay down their lives gladly rather than refuse to pay the money which they owe. But times are rapidly changing and the Government is making people more and more dishonest and crooked by offering them the opportunities to be dishonest by sponsoring and supporting measures like the present Bill. It will be possible under the proposed law for a zamindar debtor to prepare fictitious promissory notes showing that he owes money to some relatives of his. After that the relatives will be covered by the "to whom 60 per cent. of the debtors' debt are due" and easy settlement will be arrived at by the mutual consent of the relatives. In this way the poor creditors' chances of recovery will be reduced. I, for one, have no objection to this provision also. But whereas the Government have considerably curtailed the claims of sahuks, it is but fair that ample provision should be made to facilitate the recovery of the remainder of his debts. It is not proper on the Government's part to reduce the money-lender's demand on the one hand and to put restriction on the recovery of the remainder on the other by imposing such stringent provisions like the one embodied in clause 32. I take this opportunity of informing the Government that this Bill has caused consternation in the sahuks' circles. These people have fear of life, fear of property and in fact they have no sense of security left. The Bill has created such hostile feelings between the zamindars and money-lenders that it is not safe now-a-days for Khatri young men to walk about alone. Wherever they go they go in bands because their white clothes excite the hungry villagers' sense of jealousy and they are always ready to loot their houses. Such are the shadows which this Bill has cast over our rural society. I do not say that the Government is in league with the rural party of the Council. But all I can say is that the zamindar benches ought to have given a better proof of their fair mindedness. The time is soon coming when there will be a majority of zamindars in the Council and the Government benches will be packed with zamindar members.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : They are even now packed with zamindar members. (Laughter).

Lala Bhagat Ram : I would ask my zamindar friends to think for a while whether this attitude of theirs will convince any sensible man living that life and property of money-lenders will be safe in the hands of the future zamindara Government. Our impression is that the Government and the rural party are committing a day light robbery in the houses of money-lenders by rushing through this legislation.

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah : Is the honourable member supporting the Bill or opposing it ?

Lala Bhagat Ram : The honourable member can judge for himself. Various causes have been explained of the terrible indebtedness of the zamindars. All may be equally correct. But to me the greatest cause of indebtedness seems to be the presence on the Statute Book of the Land Alienation Act.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Is there no rural indebtedness in the United Provinces where there is no Alienation of Land Act ?

Lala Bhagat Ram : This Act has done great harm to the zamindar. The zamindar cannot sell his land in the open market on account of this Act. If he wants to pay off a debt of Rs. 500 he has to sell 10 bighas of his best agricultural land to his brother agriculturist who is always prepared to swallow him up. If the money-lender were there to purchase the land its price would have gone up to, say, Rs. 5,000 and the zamindar debtor would have saved much of his land. This is a simple thing. Cannot our friends the zamindars understand it ? After all what is the good of passing such a law which satisfies none? Money-lenders are angry over it; zamindars are dissatisfied with it, and every body is sorry for it.

[L. Bhagat Ram.]

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah : We are happy. We are not sorry.

Lala Bhagat Ram : The honourable member may be happy but there are many in his party who are not. We have always been thinking that the English people are honest business men. They manufacture chabi ka lathha and knives of Joseph Rogers & Co. Both of these articles of trade are very popular in our markets. Their price has varied from time to time but their quality has been the same throughout. This is what honest business men always do. But I am sorry to remark that English men on those benches have not given any proof of their being good business men. I do not think that they can ever pass such a law in their own country. Such things can never be tolerated there. They have sought by this law to benefit one class at the cost of another. This is most objectionable. All religions teach us that we should not accept any advantage at the cost of others. The famous saying of the Sikh Guru beginning with !K3U (2) حق points out the same truth. I need not quote the whole of it. Muslim law givers have also clearly laid down that paying of debts is a duty so much so that one cannot inherit the property of his father without paying his debts. The Hindu sages have also emphasised the same thing and have said اَدْرَار نه اُترے دُتیاں باجہ نہ اُترے

My honourable friend from Amritsar rightly pointed out the belief of the Hindus in this respect when he said that unpaid debts in this life will have to be paid in the life hereafter. In these circumstances it will not be proper for the Government to insist on providing opportunities for those who do not want to pay their debts. I agree that the provision which makes it impossible for the money-lenders to advance ten rupees and enter a hundred in their account books, is reasonable. But when all is said and done to put this check on the money-lender what guarantee is there that the conciliation boards will help the money-lenders to realise the sums actually advanced by them? The Government have not provided any remedy for that. In this connection I am reminded of the case of three mirasis. They, it is said, went to the battle-field and killed three enemies. When they returned to their homes they told their friends that they had killed thirteen of the combatants. When it was pointed out to them that they had been responsible for the death of only three they promptly retorted, "We include in this number ten of our relatives who died in our homes before our own eyes." The Government have made it possible for the debtors to refuse to pay a part of their debts by legislation. And it does not take any responsibility to help the money-lenders in realising the remaining of their dues. It seems to be thinking like those mirasis that the money-lenders will consider the remaining debts as paid by their own relatives and in their own homes. The Government should take upon themselves the responsibility of paying the debts of the zamindars, if they are really honest. They may realise their dues from the zamindar in whatever manner they like. Will they accept my suggestion? It was said in Simla by some members that if the zamindars' debts are not cleared they will be forced to turn the money-lenders out of the country as has been done in many other countries of the world.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Hitler has done so in Germany.

Lala Bhagat Ram : But I am sure this cannot be done in this province. We in the Punjab can never be turned out of our homes. We will live here in spite of the opposition of the people who want to follow in the foot steps of men like Hitler. Conditions here are very different from those in Germany. Here big zamindars want to swallow the petty zamindars just as the crocodile swallows up the small fishes in the river. Then there is no clear line of demarcation between the zamindar and the non-zamindar in this country, thanks to the ingenuity of the sponsors of the Land of Alienation Act. We are tillers of the soil and we own vast tracts of land yet the Government refuse to admit that we are agriculturists. And all this is due to the fact that our names do not appear on the pages of that Revealed Book, the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. The fact of the matter is that we are as good agriculturists as any other zamindars. We have also to depend on agriculture for our livelihood. We have also to feed and educate our children. The Government which is so very anxious to safeguard the interests of the zamindars and to help their children should not be unmindful of the interests of our children too.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : May I suggest that in view of the fact that there are still several honourable members who wish to speak on this motion, a time limit may be fixed.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Not now.

Mr. President : I am in the hands of the House. Under the rules, however, no time limit is fixed for speeches on Bills and budget.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : May I suggest that a fairly liberal limit may be fixed, say, half an hour. Even that would have some restraining effect.

Mr. President : Personally I have no objection but the rules in force are against this and I do not wish to suppress the voice of the minority.

Lala Bhagat Ram : I was saying, that the Government should not be unmindful of the interests of the money-lenders. These people have great difficulties. They are groaning under huge burdens of taxes. Whether they realise anything from their clients or not, the Government realises income-tax from them most surely. To say the least of it that is not fair. After all the tax is to be levied on the income of the money-lenders. When there is no income, there should be no tax.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I am very sorry to interrupt the honourable member but he has repeated his arguments several times. He has been speaking for nearly 35 minutes now and I have not heard a single argument which has not been repeated about half a dozen times. If it is being done merely to delay the Bill, I do not think these tactics are fair to the House. (hear, hear).

Mr. President : The honourable member should not repeat his own arguments or the arguments of other speakers.

Lala Bhagat Ram : All this is being done by our kind Government. If this is kindness, Heaven alone knows what wrath would be like. Here I am reminded of another anecdote. A mendicant was beating his breast with iron chains. "How do you do?" asked a man in the street. "All right, Lord, is kind to me" replied the mendicant. His questioner was dumbfounded because he could not think of what kind the wrath of that Lord would be whose kindness had besmeared the mendicant all over with blood. We on our part wonder what would be the tyranny of our benign Government if its kindness has taken the shape of the Bill now before the House. May be, the zamindars are convinced of the fact that they will be able to turn us out of this country. I assure them once again that they should turn out these idle notions from of their heads. We can never leave this country. We will live here and we will guard our interests with our lives. (Cheers from Hindus benches). God is our true helper. We need not fear anybody, least of all the sponsors of this Bill. Moreover, the atmosphere of cities has a peculiar characteristic of filling the people's minds with distrust and hostility. We in our villages live amicably and peacefully. Several times the Sikhs and the Mussalmans have made me their arbitrator. They trust me and in fact they trust every good Hindu. Recently, a Khan Sahib in our ilaga convened a meeting to do propaganda for the Indebtedness Bill. But the people would not co-operate with him. They refused point blank to pay heed to his exhortations. "Our debts are our own affair," they cutly replied, "you will not be called upon to pay them." This is the attitude of honest villagers. They are ever ready to meet their liabilities. There is a Sanskrit sloka which means that there are five things in this world the pain of which is like a consuming fire; first, the elopement with another's wife, second, quarrel with a good person, third, serving a worthless fellow, fourth, pennilessness at a time when one's friends have come to see him, and last but not the least, the arrears of debts. So we can depend upon the villagers to pay our dues only if the Government do not advise them to the contrary.

[L. Bhagat Ram.]

A
If the Government had brought forward this Bill two years ago they would not have realised any of their own dues. The zamindars have been paying Government dues throughout these years of depression with the help of the sahuکار. Now the Government wants that the sahuکار should not get his money back. But what will be the attitude of the Government, I ask, if the money-lenders refuse to pay income-tax? Will they give up their income-tax demand? I do not propose to go on speaking till to-morrow and I will finish after making a few observations more. I would request the Government and the rural party to allow this Bill to be re-circulated. No fresh troubles will crop up during the next six months. No sahuکار will hasten to send their debtors to prison. After all sending a debtor to prison entails a good deal of expenditure and the sahuکار cannot spend money in these days of depression if he is a sound business man. The Government has given certain facilities to the debtors to become insolvent little knowing that in this country the word insolvent is treated like an abuse. If you call a person insolvent he will take it as a foul abuse. I think the Government is not aware of the feelings and susceptibilities of our people and therefore they have sought to make insolvency an easy affair. (Interruption). Furthermore, if this measure is passed it would be setting the whole province ablaze with communal strife. The debtors should smilingly pay up their debts, otherwise I wonder with what face they would appear before God on the day of judgment. With these words, I resume my seat because some of the honourable members want me to finish.

The Council then adjourned till 2 P. M. on Tuesday, 30th October 1934.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Tuesday, 30th October 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2 P. M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq (Hoshiarpur-cum-Ludhiana, Muhammadan, Rural): I have listened very attentively to the speeches that have been made by so many members. I have also read the reports of the last session and heard the speeches made then. But I cannot say that any honourable member has made any concrete suggestion and pointed out the remedy as to how we can ameliorate the condition of the rural people. Every one knows that two crores of rupees of interest on debt is not an ordinary affair. Not only that but the purchasing power of the people has gone so low that we cannot ignore it. Only 25 per cent. of prices is being realised now. There is yet another trouble and that is that on account of hunger people have begun to commit suicide. What is the root cause of all this? Everyone says and Government admits that the rate of interest on loans should be low. I say that that is not the real remedy to root out the trouble. My submission is, however much you may think that it is an extremist suggestion, I say that unless you try to think extreme you cannot get out of the difficulty. Unless Government and the people do away entirely with the institution of interest you cannot improve the situation of the province. In Bavaria, as the Honourable Finance Member said, the experiment of total redemption was tried and it failed. In Yugoslavia the same experiment was tried and it failed. Why did it fail? Once you redeem debts and make a clean slate, people have the same trouble again. The social structure is such that people never offer help without getting a return. Our whole social structure is rotten. Some say that sahukars are very good people, that they offer money when one is in need. I agree. But that is no help. It is only deriving benefit out of the trouble of others. Unless the spirit of real disinterested help has gained ground you cannot progress and you cannot honestly say that one helped another. What is interest? Its definition is very simple. It is the benefit got out of the trouble of others. If I have the spirit, if any country has the spirit of offering help where help is needed with the simple motive of offering help to our countryman, the institution of interest will die. Some say that Government should take upon its shoulders the burden of paying back the debts which the zamindars have incurred. If any Government dare to pay all such debts what will happen again? People will still be needy and they will go to the sahakar for loan and the same process will go on again. Unless you completely remedy the evil it will crop up again and again. I have gone through the suggestions made by honourable members but I find there is hardly a practical suggestion. The only practical suggestion is that if Government agree and the sahuکار agrees that the present burden of debt may be reduced somehow or other, by legislation or even by executive order, to one-fourth of its present magnitude, and Government take upon themselves the responsibility of paying back the loans bit by bit and after that engender a spirit of help in the people, it will come to stay and people will begin to act with a spirit of qarza-i-hasna. This term, qarza-i-hasna is a very famous term meaning offer thy brethren money when they need money without getting any interest in return. Unless we work in such religious spirit we can never hope to be prosperous once again. The system of getting interest and offering capital on interest has failed in Europe, has failed in America and there is yet only one country in the world which has tried without it, and that is Russia. Even there it is only on its trial. But if there was a country which had tried it successfully it was the Muslim countries. We often say that man is the image of God. Unless we imbibe this altruistic spirit, no laws can be successful in this respect. Time and again we have tried many a legislation. All legislation has failed. This is perhaps the fifth legislation that has been tried to relieve the indebtedness of the people. I am sure that this legislation is also bound to fail. Because the root cause of indebtedness is not removed even now.

[Chaudhri Afzal Haq.]

Next to this reform of ourselves, I would put as a means to tackle with the problem the encouragement of industries in the country. What is the present state of affairs? In this big province only a sum of Rs. 2 lakhs is being advanced to help industries while three crores of rupees represents the interest on the total debt. Can we hope to fight the problem of indebtedness in this situation? No, certainly not. But the difficulty of it is that England and India are in conflict in this respect. Our rulers have first to look to their own interests and to the interests of their country; after that, they have to look to the interests of their colonies and this poor country which is the best supporter in the time of need, the best co-operator in the time of war and peace, its turn comes the last. And no one cares to help in return those who helped them. No one dares to help those who always help themselves. Unless this spirit is gone and our rulers come forward with a sympathetic heart our position cannot improve. We cannot possibly compete with the industry in England because the sympathy of our rulers is always with their home industry. I say in the circumstances unless we are courageous enough to do away with the institution of this interest unless our Government comes forward to help the industries of this province and devotes a bigger sum for that purpose our people cannot be prosperous and there is no remedy.

The third point on which great stress has been laid is that we must look to our expenses and try to curtail them. That is a very plausible suggestion. But how can we curtail our expenses? All the beneficent departments are quite hungry. There is not sufficient amount of money available for the beneficent departments. There is absolutely no question of curtailing our expenses. If there is need of our curtailing expenses in one direction, there is also need of spending more in another. So, people, of whom only 3 or 4 per cent. are literate, cannot afford to say that there are certain departments where they can curtail their expenses. If we can.

curtail a pie from the reserved side, I can say spend it on education, spend it on industries. But I say there is absolutely no remedy in this legislation. The only remedy lies in two facts. The first is that you should do away with this institution of interest. The second is that Government should help the industries of this country. If you cannot help us in this way, you cannot help us by any legislation. Really after two or three years you will meet with the same sad experience that was met in Bavaria and Yugoslavia. Without doing away with the institution of interest they tried an experiment and you are trying the same experiment now here. After these few remarks I must submit that I have absolutely no belief in such legislation, because this legislation takes us nowhere and it is not a sufficient help to the people. You may try it. I will be very keenly watching what the Government does and what the people do. I hope that Government will try in the light of my remarks and the remarks of other members to see that if they are going to help the people they cannot help them without doing away with the institution of interest.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I find myself in a very difficult predicament. کے وہ مشکل دیکھ کر کہہ رہا ہوں The position is really very difficult. I have listened to the speeches that have been made from the other side in support of the Bill. Most of these speeches were really in condemnation of the measure as it is now before us. The party in whose interest and for whose sake this Bill is being propounded are dissatisfied with it, and the Government benches, so far as I can gather from the amendments that have been tabled by them, appear to be equally dissatisfied with the measure. The question is, where lies the difficulty? How has this position been brought about? I am afraid there has been some sort of muddling somewhere. Some one has bungled.

When this Bill was originally brought up and a motion was made to commit it to a select committee, we protested that the select committee was practically a packed committee on which only one side of the House was preponderantly represented, and that the other side was hopelessly outnumbered. I moved that the name of one of us be added to the list of members of the select committee. That motion was about to be rejected, but on reconsideration Government benches entertained it favourably, but added to it a rider, namely that they would accept that amendment provided another name from the Unionist Party was also added, and the result was that we had only three persons on this side who could possibly place their views before them. It was understood that the measure was a Government measure. That was perfectly clear. And they knew also what the views of the Unionist Party were. And yet the Government permitted the select committee to be so constituted as not to admit of a dispassionate consideration being given to the provisions of the Bill. We made our protest and there we had to rest and could not do any more. What is the result? The result is before us, namely that the provisions of this Bill do not satisfy us, they do not satisfy the Government and they do not satisfy the Unionist Party. That is not all. My grievance is much more fundamental and that is this. This is an economic measure of very far reaching importance. It will have its repercussions on the entire credit system of our province, not only the rural credit system but also the commercial credit of the province. It was extremely necessary that the Government should have given to it a dispassionate consideration. They should have brought about conditions in which dispassionate consideration was possible. That was not done, and the result is as we see to-day. For a measure of economic reform only political considerations were taken into account. Was the Government really prepared for launching on a measure of this kind intellectually? It has been said so often in this House that the debt under which the agriculturist is groaning is to the tune of 300 crores. I have heard these figures, but I do not attach any importance to them. Why, because I am convinced that the Government have not instituted any satisfactory inquiry into this matter. What are the data on which we are to build a measure of economic reform of this description? Can the Government enlighten me, can they place on the table any data which would help me in coming to correct conclusions? Are they sure that the debt is really 300 crores or 3,000 crores? Who collected the data? When was the data collected?

[Mr. Labh Singh.]

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh: The Banking Inquiry Committee had certain estimates made.

Mr. Labh Singh: Yes, I want to know further an exact analysis of the position.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: You can never find out an accurate figure. I am perfectly sure of that.

Mr. Labh Singh: I want as accurate a figure as possible. I perfectly agree that it will not be possible to get at an absolutely correct figure, for the figure varies from day to day, it may vary from month to month and from year to year, and even during the process of the inquiry it may change. It may go up or it may go down, but some honest attempt should have been made to discover what the actual burden of the debt in this province was, so that we should have been wiser while tackling the problem, and formed an accurate estimate of the position.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh: Has the honourable member read the Banking Inquiry Committee Report?

Mr. Labh Singh: I must have read it more often than the Honourable Minister could have found time to do. I am certain that I know more about the report of the Banking Inquiry Committee than the Honourable Minister interrupting me is ever likely to do. I am repeating further that the nature of this debt should have been inquired into. We should have inquired into this matter more fully. How much of this debt consists of smaller value, say of Rs. 100, or Rs. 200 or Rs. 300 or Rs. 500, so that we may know how many persons are in debt, say to the extent of Rs. 500 and how many there are who are in debt, say to the extent of Rs. 1,000.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: Perhaps in making my reply I might be able to explain that the Co-operative Department have very nearly accurate figures of the indebtedness of their own members and that forms a very good basis for an estimate.

Mr. Labh Singh: May I know what is the amount of debt and how many individuals are involved whose total debt does not exceed Rs. 500?

These are the details on which we should build this Bill so that it may be open to us to say that only such persons may be given relief whose debt does not exceed Rs. 500 or that relief should be given only to those poor people and small peasants whose debt does not exceed, say, Rs. 1,000. All these are questions which we should go into and they cannot be gone into unless the necessary data are collected by some responsible commission or committee appointed either by this House or by the Government. All that I see is that we are groping in the dark. We do not know where we are.

Next, we have got to see how much of this debt is productive and how much unproductive. If productive and non-productive debts are put in the same category I am afraid we will not be able to tackle the problem before us in an intelligent manner. We have got to make this vital distinction. If we do not make this distinction, that will prevent people from borrowing money for productive purposes or prevent people paying back money borrowed for productive purposes. It will not be fair to proceed in the dark, in the absence of the necessary data. It will not be fair to the House nor will it be fair to the Government nor to the country at large. This is my main grievance against the procedure which is being adopted in connection with this Bill. I am certain the Government a generation ago, or even a few years ago, would not have dared to tread the path along which we are being rushed through now. The present Government is rushing headlong along the path which their predecessors would never have dared to tread.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : What about the Governments of self-governing colonies ?

Mr. Labh Singh : I am agreeable to adopting their legislation in toto. But the Honourable Minister for Agriculture will be the first to get up and protest against it, because he wants caste measure and not only a class measure.

I listened to the speeches which were delivered by the members of the Unionist Party the other day and I found that they were either references to certain threats which have already been executed, that is, the murders of sahukars that are taking place, or they were threats of future action in the same direction. I do not think this argument of theirs is either here or there. That line of reasoning is absolutely beside the point. Some worthy gentlemen including the leader of the Unionist Party have told us that their position has become precarious and that they are dissatisfied with their lot because they cannot protect their own interests with their own hands ; the British Government comes in the way and so they cannot have justice as they would like to have it. In their minute of dissent they say—

We sincerely fear that if the insistence of money-lending interests on their pound of flesh under the bond is allowed to stand in the way of legislation securing all necessary relief to the debtor classes, peace and security of life and property will have to face a very serious menace.

This is the threat which is being held out to Government and to us if legislation is not proceeded with in the way in which they want that it should be done. It is true that murders have taken place. It is true also that murders may again take place. But the question is what part these gentlemen have played either in the murders that have been committed or in the threatened murders and what part they propose to take. (An honourable member: We shall try to avoid them.) Will these gentlemen try to avoid them or instigate them by telling Government and all over the country that if this legislation is not proceeded with murders would be rampant and that murders would take place? They are inviting people, they are instigating the people to commit these excesses. This is not the responsible way of dealing with the situation. This is not the responsible way of arguing the case. I submit very respectfully that this argument should not have been trotted out. It really betrays a mentality that is deplorable, absolutely deplorable from the point of view of propriety from the point of view of justice, from the point of view of fair dealing and from every other point of view. This is not an argument at all. Then, there was a gentleman representing the zamindar class who recalled to us the doings of 1915 and also threw out threats saying that if this piece of proposed legislation is not enacted into law then excesses of 1915 in the district of Muzaffargarh are likely to be the order of the day. He also repeated the argument of the leader of the Unionist Party, namely that somehow or other it was the British Government which was standing in the way of their securing for themselves proper justice or in the way of their administering the law as they understood it with their own hand, with the help of their own strength of arms. That is an argument trotted out not only in connection with this Bill but with regard to all questions affecting the zamindars. So far as this argument is concerned, I may say at once that whatever their ancestors might have done or whatever their kith and kin might do in troubled times, these gentlemen ought to make a distinction between what we call شیر ذی‌نکاح اور شیر ناکاح They cannot possibly appropriate to themselves credit for the doings of persons who although they may be their own in caste, yet are not theirs in spirit. Here these gentlemen are attempting to fight a battle for the people whom they claim to be their kith and kin. As I said in my speech at the last session, it is not the battle of those poor people that they are fighting, but they are fighting their own battle. They want that the privileges which accrued to them under the special legislation known as the Land Alienation Act should not only be kept up, but further strengthened. This is the exact position. If this measure is to be honestly conceived as an economic measure my request to Government as well as those gentlemen opposite is this: Let us proceed in a scientific way. If you want to give succour or relief to small peasants, by all means give them the relief. But then give a definition which will not be a caste definition. Let it be a class definition—a definition depending on vocation and not on birth. I am not afraid of class legislation. Class legislation in some form or another is bound to come. It is the order of the day in most civilised countries. But then there is the distinction between caste and class. I welcome class legislation, but, then, it should be so drafted that everybody who is outside that class should have a possibility of finally entering the class. It should not be a water tight thing. That is the chief distinction between class legislation and caste legislation and it is the caste legislation that we are standing against. We are prepared to examine every proposal which aims at class legislation on its merits. But if a caste legislation is brought forward in the garb of class legislation we must take fullest exception to that. There are hundreds and thousands of matriculates going about the country and swelling the ranks of the unemployed. There are graduates and others also in their ranks. In the name of goodness why should you prevent them from settling on land? Now, if we enact a definition of an agriculturist as a person who tills the land with his own hand and whose holding does not exceed say ten acres, would these gentlemen opposite be prepared to subscribe to that?

[Mr. Labh Singh.]

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh: We have reserved two chaks for graduates.

Mr. Labh Singh: Perhaps you will settle Sikhs and Mussalmans in those chaks.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh: No, other classes also.

Mr. Labh Singh: Has that solved the problem? It does not even touch the fringe of the problem of unemployment.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh: But it is only an experiment.

Mr. Labh Singh: Giving a few acres of land to some few friends does not solve the problem, nor does it constitute even a fair experiment.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh: It is only a beginning of the solution.

Mr. Labh Singh: My submission is this that if we are going to have economic measures, we do not want to have legislation of this type in which class privileges are to be guarded. If certain class disabilities are to be removed, then, by all means let them be discussed on economic lines, on scientific lines and not on the basis of a rigid caste system. Let no new castes be created. We are already suffering from too many castes and if new castes are added that will mean indefinitely postponing the day of redemption. We will be adding to our difficulties. That is to my mind the main objection which we have against this measure.

Further I may submit that no data have been furnished on which a measure of this kind can be based. The draft gives indications that the whole thing is crude in the extreme. So far as the rate of interest is concerned, only yesterday a paper was placed in my hands which contains as many as five amendments with respect to a single clause, and all these amendments are from the Government. On the first page of the Revised List of amendments to the Bill circulated to-day there are four amendments which relate to only a single clause which means either that the Government has got more information now or that it is changing its mind from hour to hour and from day to day with respect to this single clause or that certain interests are representing to it their views and in the light of those views Government is tabling these amendments. Anyhow all this shows that adequate thought had not been bestowed on this measure. It will therefore be fair and just that an attempt should be made to either circulate this measure so that public opinion may be elicited or in the alternative the Bill should be recommitted to a select committee so that all aspects of the question may be considered and gone into in a non-partisan spirit, so that all aspects of the question will be considered. The proposal to recommit it to a select committee is not before us and so that may be considered as out of the question. But the other point that the Bill be re-circulated for eliciting public opinion may be adopted. After all this is one of the funniest reports of a select committee that one has ever come across. The question is who is its father? Who is responsible for this report? Who owns to be the author of this report? Out of the 18 members who have appended their signatures to this report everybody's name is starred, and everybody reserves to himself the right to move whatever amendments he wants and everybody has appended a note of dissent. It is difficult to conceive a piece of legislation like this. It seems to be an unheard of legislative monstrosity. What is it? Who is the author of it? Nobody. It is not fair to the House that a report should be submitted which nobody in the select committee is prepared to father or sponsor. It is not treating the House with respect or courtesy. A report of the select committee should be a report at least by a majority.

[Mr. Labh Singh.]

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It is signed by all the members.

Mr. Labh Singh : Signed by all and yet signed by none. Everybody says that he has signed it for conformity's sake. It is signed only in a pickwickian sense, as one might say. While I was reading the report the other day a line or two from Dryden came to my mind which I had read as a school boy.

The lines are—

Got when his soul did huddled notions try
And born a shapeless lump like anarchy.

This Bill is absolutely shapeless, absolutely deformed and unowned by any of its alleged authors. This is the position in which this Bill finds itself. It will be but fair, fair to the Government, fair to the House and fair to everybody concerned, if this Bill is considered dispassionately, is reconsidered and redrafted so that all aspects of the question are gone into, all interests are consulted and all views are co-ordinated. To take only one instance, the Bill says that the rate of interest should not exceed 8 per cent. simple interest. Had you taken the trouble to consult the managers of the local banks they would have told you that the normal rate of interest in the case of best securities available is 9 per cent. per annum with six-monthly rests. It is the lowest rate of interest charged by the Punjab National Bank and by all other respectable banks in the province. (An honourable member : 8½ per cent.): I do not think it is correct. I for one will be satisfied if the Banks are lending money on the security of immoveable property at the rate of 8½ per cent. All this, however, shows that not the least attempt has been made to find out facts, to consult all the interests involved and that we are proceeding with a measure of the most far-reaching economic consequences in a crude manner and without adequate thought. That is my protest against the procedure that is being adopted and I would submit that it will be in the interests of everybody if more thought is given to it, if we collect all the necessary data and information from every quarter and invite the opinion of all parties concerned.

After the data has been collected and collated a measure can be drafted which will be of some use. With these remarks I submit that there is a strong case why this Bill should be re-circulated for eliciting public opinion.

I would have liked to repeat all that I said at the last session, but I refrain from doing so for good reasons. I do not want to waste the time of the House. One thing, however, I cannot refrain from remarking and that is that I am unable to understand the real attitude of the Government in this matter. Are they proceeding unthinkingly or are they proceeding thinkingly? (The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: The latter.) Then so much the worse for the Government. If Government are proceeding unthinkingly there may be an excuse but if they are proceeding thinkingly, it is difficult to characterise their conduct. Are the Government giving us a sort of foretaste of what would happen when the Reforms come? This is all that can be said if they are proceeding thinkingly. I trust that the Government would certainly be not so Machiavellian as that. I believe in their good intentions and I hope that the procedure they are adopting will be changed as soon as they come to realise what they are doing. I therefore urge upon them the necessity of collecting more data and examining the whole situation more carefully and then to come out with a measure which would meet with the needs of the case and be acceptable to all. I have nothing to say to the proposition which has been urged by the honourable member from Hoshiarpur, Chaudhri Afzal Haq. He says that the institution of interest should be abolished altogether. I do not think that position needs to be seriously controverted. That would be considered even by his section of the House as too medieval for consideration. He wanted the garza-i-hasna to come into play. It is known to all what it means. It means borrowing money to be payable when one is able to pay. This is the term which is used by certain people who do not want to accept bribes as such and desire somehow or other by a verbal legerdemain to satisfy their conscience. When they want bribes they say, lend us money as garza-i-hasna. So, I do not think that institution can be possibly brought into universal use or can serve any purpose. It is too late in the day to think of abolishing interest altogether or replacing it by any other means. With these words I would ask the House to vote for the amendment moved by Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq (Amritsar City, Muhammadan, Urban): The funniest thing that we hear from the speeches of the opposite benches is that they always want to postpone a measure which is for the betterment of zamindars. They want to circulate it and then they say that they will give their best consideration. The Money-Lenders Act was circulated twice or thrice and even after that when it came back it never had the support of the other benches. Rather the position became more and more fierce every day. So, are we to understand now that this Bill when it comes back from re-circulation will be accepted and the old game will not be repeated in some new roll? I want to bring to the notice of the House that when the Money-Lenders Act was passed they said that money-lenders will run away from the country if the Bill was passed and yet can they quote one instance where a single money-lender has left his village? So this wailing and weeping will go on always. Whenever a privileged class sees that some of its privileges are being taken away, they say that the world is coming to an end. When earthquake comes people think that the world is coming to an end and yet the world goes on. Now what is the object of this Bill or of similar Bills in the past? The object is to protect the zamindar from the rapacity of the money-lenders and also give relief. The object is not repudiation of debts, but only reduction of debts. Money was taken from the money-lenders at a time when wheat was selling 6 seers a rupee. Now it is selling at 20 and 22 seers. Is there any sensible person who can expect the peasants to pay all the debts at once and with compound interest? The whole of India does not possess enough cash to repay the debts contracted by these unfortunate zamindars. Even if you ask the zamindar to sell his land, there will not be enough money with which to buy. The only thing would be to transfer the land not by sale but by an Act of Parliament or of this legislature, to the money-lenders and the result will be that all people who are peasant proprietors will be dispossessed of their land and the land will fall vacant, so that like the once smiling lands of the United Provinces it may become the den of wild beasts and breeding place for mosquitoes. Do you want the same sort of thing in the Punjab? That will be the result if you are not going to take measures now and to bring the thing under proper control. When our friends say every day that they have sympathy with the zamindar, it is as convincing as if the cat should start pleading for the rat. Get as much as they can. That is their policy. I do not say this of all, but of a majority of them. The poor zamindar does not keep accounts. He does not know what accounts are. He gets money and day by day he gets entangled in debts. Are we not going to follow the other civilised countries in this matter? See Rumania, see America. They have come to the rescue of the debtors. Is there a nation in the world which has not come to the rescue of the peasants? Nine-tenths of the population are in the clutches of the money-lenders, both Hindus and Muslims. It is the duty of every person to come to the rescue of these poor people who are born in debt, live in debt and die in debt and save them from the misery of usuary.

[Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq.]

What do we want? We do not want repudiation of debt. What we want is its reduction under this Bill. We want to bring the debtor and the creditor together. There will be three gentlemen whom Government will appoint and I hope that they will be honest men. Honest men, inspite of what the honourable members opposite say, are still to be found in this country, and we try to ask them to meet together presided over by a sub-judge, an officer who tries cases worth lakhs of rupees every month; and if the offer is a good offer to certify it. Well, there is no question of repudiation at all. My friends when they were sitting in the select committee never at that time thought of improving the Bill. Their whole endeavour was to smash the Bill. I am sure that if they had given one-tenth of their time that they are spending in fighting the Bill for the improvement of the Bill I am sure their efforts would have met with success if they had impressed the committee with the reasonableness of their demands. They want to create and do create a screen of smoke just as they do in naval battles by smoking vehement speeches and extensive propaganda and want, behind that wailing and weeping, to torpedo this Bill.

3 P. M.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I think, Sir, I will only be fair to say that my own impression was that both sides were very fair and reasonable indeed.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : The impression of the Honourable Member for Finance is of one kind and the impression of the honourable member there opposite is of a different kind. It was said by him that the majority of members were not reasonable and impartial at all. I do not know whom to disbelieve. By believing one I will have to disbelieve the other party, because they say that fair chance was not given to them. One of these must be incorrect. They are talking so much of repudiation. Look at the party led by the venerable Raja Sahib. What did they do with the poor Udasis under the Gurdwara Act? They handed over thousands of acres of land and immense amount of property to the other party without bringing the matter before the select committee. They were led by the honourable friends opposite and supported by their party. Did they not have any idea at that time that this principle will apply to them? They have handed over thousands of acres of land without asking the Udasis their opinion. I think the curse of the Udasis is following them now that they are in a similar position. They at that time allowed a big area of land to pass from one hand to the other without circulating the proposal for opinion. Where was their sense of justice then? Where was their conscience? Their conscience evidently is under their own control and they can make it sleep or awake whenever they like. They may forget but the world cannot forget. I found those poor Udasis sitting udas (sad) before their door when the Gurdwara Act was being passed and they never looked at their grievances. Did it not occur to them that they might have to pass through the same Bill. These are the people who allowed at that time a thing being done, against the repetition of which they are complaining.

Mr. Labh Singh : What is the honourable member referring to?

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : The Sikh Gurdwara Bill.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The honourable member's party passed it. Sir Fazl-i-Hussain passed it with the help of the honourable member's party, inspite of our support to the Udasis. We were opposed to its consideration.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : Certainly not. The Bill became an Act with the support of the party opposite. It is now too late to say that a legislature has no right to touch personal property of an individual. We helped in passing that Bill, though we must admit it was a very stiff measure. We did it because the whole Sikh community wanted it. We are consistent but you are not. Now, these gentlemen want to circulate this Bill. As has been pointed out before, those amendments which my friends opposite deem objectionable and which had been added in the select committee, have by agreement been taken away and the Bill stands in a greater degree exactly as it went to the select committee. I, therefore, want to know the reasons for its circulation. They are wedded to the idea that a capitalist has a right to extract his maximum profits out of the foolish debtor by fair means or foul. In every civilized country capital is in the hands of the persons who possess it at the will of the legislature. If the people in England were to-day to decide that there shall be no capitalist and that every building and every penny is to be confiscated though it is unlikely, there will be nothing to stop it, and it will be done, though the results may be disastrous. Capital may be in temporary possession of the person who possesses it, but it really is at the disposal of the people of that country. When a man dies in England the State takes away 50 per cent. of the money he leaves as death duties. According to my friends this is confiscation. A man earns lakhs of rupees and the Income-tax Department takes away 50 per cent. of his profits, is it not confiscation? A man lends to a person some money and if he does not ask for its return within three years, he cannot sue him. Is it not confiscation? You will never find any country where this is not done. The ownership of capital is always and everywhere restricted in certain directions. If you lend two thousand rupees to a friend and do not ask for it for three years, the courts will not allow you to get it back. Money must remain under the control of the nation. What does the nation want? We in this House, not only Muslims, but Hindus and Sikhs are also supporting this Bill and so also are the Europeans. The British Government with their eighty years' experience in this country have come to this conclusion that time has come when they must move in this direction. For eighty years they did not move in that matter and they were wrong in not doing so. The Sikh party is supporting the Bill, the Hindus are supporting this Bill and you will find that at the time of voting there will be only a few of the money-lending classes to oppose this Bill. It is so just that we should regulate the accounts that people cannot refuse it. My friend from Lyallpur every day asks questions about how many banias have been murdered and how many of them have been looted. How can you stop a man who has been fooled out of all his property from taking the law in his hands? You may punish him, but in exasperation he forgets everything. In a province like the Punjab where Sir Edward Maclagan said that action was quicker than thought, if through exasperation he loses temper it is no wonder at all. If the Government has to carry on the Government of the country, they have to think of these things and for the safety of banias and money-lenders themselves, they have to make laws which give protection to the poor zamindars by forcing money-lenders to be fair in their dealings and thus give no provocation and temptation to the debtor. We should try to check these murders and plunders which sometime occur and by measures like this Bill we want to alleviate the sufferings of debtors and at the same time bring all parties together. If the Act is passed and if my friend wants to improve it, let him come forward with reasonable proposals and I am sure this party will meet the honourable member half way, because our object is not to destroy capital but to restrict the use of the capital. The agriculturist should not be permitted to borrow heavily because his son is going to marry, and in so doing he should not be allowed to give a pronote for Rs. 1,200 or Rs. 1,400 when he has taken only Rs. 800, and thus ruin the whole of the family. That we cannot allow. What we want is that the borrowing power of the peasant should be restricted for necessities only. He should not be absolutely free to go into the market and borrow heavily at ruinous rates and then come back in distress to us when his land is being taken away. In England people who have no work get their food from Government, but this is not the case here, so if our people were to become landless, the things will become very serious and there will be millions of people who will have no work. What will happen, then? There will be burekha gardi, as they used to say in the later times of the Sikh Raj. They will be workless, landless and will start looting the people. If, therefore, law and order is to be maintained, it is necessary that we should go and tell the peasant and the money-lender that there is going to be a limit imposed by the legislature that on the one hand you shall not borrow money beyond your means and that on the other hand you shall not lend money indiscriminately beyond a certain limit to the borrower, and that at not more than a specified rate of interest. We are bringing this Bill to discourage litigation. When the British Government came to the Punjab, there used to be only one court functioning in the Ram Bagh at Amritsar, now you find, three hundred lawyers, twenty sub-judges, ten honorary magistrates and ten extra assistant commissioners, all working day and night. So the time has come to encourage settlements by conciliation. I do not say that these conciliation boards that we are proposing are the last word in that idea, and cannot be improved upon; we can improve upon them and we can come to the House and to the public and say we want to stop this thing that is going on and I am sure every member of this House will rise to the occasion and we will pass a Bill to effect those improvements and then we shall be happy. But as soon as a Bill comes before the House, they start crying on communal lines and trying to sacrifice the interests of millions of Hindus in Hissar, Rohtak, Kangra and Hoshiarpur districts, for the sake of a few money-lenders. Do you mean to say that a Hindu money-lender will show any mercy to a Hindu debtor? Certainly not. Do you say that a Muslim money-lender will show any leniency to a Muslim debtor? There are pathans sitting with their daggs at the doors of their debtors trying to break their heads. These money-lenders in Muhammadan areas are just as unpopular as the Jews were in Germany. These money-lenders are a class by themselves. There is no difference between a Hindu, Muslim or a Sikh money-lender. If I became a money-lender, probably I will be as bad as any other money-lender. The temperament of a money-lender is the same. Anybody can be a money-lender. A Jat can be a worse money-lender than a bania. A pathan is a worse money-lender still, though under the Muhammadan law he is not supposed to lend. When he takes interest he takes with a vengeance and with ghasuns, mukkas and hooras. It is, therefore, not a class measure or a caste measure. It is a measure to protect a certain section of the population and I think my friends should welcome this measure and simply tell us what they want. I agree with Mr. Nanak Chand and others who said that that Government should take up the debts of the poor peasant and I think that that time may come when the Government may say, "All right, we will do what you say if you make a reasonable reduction in debts." But the difficulty is that some of the money-lender friends probably will make up documents by lending only one thousand and making the debtors to sign seven thousand, and we will have to sell the whole of the Punjab to satisfy the decrees of one-tenth of the bania creditors. The money that will be realized will be used for the benefit of the industries of the Punjab and it will be a great boon. But we know that these gentlemen do not try to lend money to banks because they can get only two or three per cent. interest, but they are always coaxing the poor zamindars to borrow for they may get 80 per cent. interest. For, these people never keep accounts. I know a friend of mine who is a money-lender. I asked him to tell me honestly how he keeps his accounts and he replied that there is no doubt that sometimes money-lenders do not 'remember' to put down a certain item. But where is the wrong he said. So many times the zamindars take away our money and never pay back and it is only a matter of exchange, if we forget to enter items in our books. It is only a matter of bhai chara. There is no question of not keeping account. It is simply a matter of befooling or being befooled.

[Sh. Muhammad Sadiq.]

[Sh. Muhammad Sadiq.]

That is the thing. We are trying to stop it by this Bill. Yet there are bound to be so many loopholes in a piece of legislation like this. And these gentlemen will always try to wriggle out of the position. Nevertheless we should try to pass legislation which is as perfect as possible. Simply because we are having a law of this kind we do not believe that we are going to root out indebtedness altogether from the province and stop dishonesty. It would be like saying that because we have so many penal laws and imprisonment we have successfully prevented people from going to jail. The jails are still there. In a similar way by this enactment some loopholes will be created. It was three years ago that we passed the Regulation of Accounts Act. Because of the loopholes that were found in that Act it has not worked to our advantage. Very few cases have been decided under it. By this Act probably there will be new loopholes coming to light. We need not worry about that. There is nothing perfect, nothing free from flaw in this world. There will always be loopholes for individuals like the honourable member from Gujranwala and his friends. Let us take it from the honourable member that there are in the provisions of the Bill as it stands, many loopholes. Yet we have to try to fill up as many loopholes as we can. There would still be many left but we cannot help it. But what object will be served by circulating the Bill once again, especially when we find communal excitement among the people at large? Does the honourable member want that more excitement should be caused? Does he want to make this an election issue? They have always used this in connection with the Assembly elections. Does my honourable friend want that it should be used at elections to this Council as well? It would serve very well for members to come into the Council on this issue but it does not conduce to the peace and prosperity of the province. If you use every such legislation for your own aggrandisement for your coming to the Council through the election, it is good luck to you, not to the people who are to suffer. Such a contentious measure should, therefore, be finished as soon as possible. The sooner the contest is settled the better for the country. The honourable member said that the select committee to which the Bill was referred was packed. When was a select committee not packed? Have honourable members forgotten the Municipal Amendment Bill? Was not the select committee on that Bill a packed committee? Ask the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government what happened then. Ask him if he was once the leader of a party and if he did not pack his committee with his own men as tight as he would pack sardine of his own brand. Government wanted to bring in a measure. They should not be in the minority. The Bill should be passed and it should be helped by a majority. We kicked up a row. Government did not hear. Chah kan ra chah dar pesh. Government said they could not waste a minute, that the Punjab wanted an immediate reform of municipal administration. We had to yield. And now there is a tit for tat. It is not we who are doing it but you have started it and Government is taking advantage of it. Honourable members on the other side cannot therefore complain now like innocent lambs that they had never done this. This has always been the case in this House. I do not want to go through the provisions of the Bill in detail as they are coming before the House. But I appeal to my honourable friends with all humility and ask them not to shed crocodile tears for the fate of the poor zamindar but if they really want to help him, to come forward even now and present before us their real difficulty. Let them tell the House sincerely and honestly what they feel. If they convince us we are all in favour of modifying the law in such a way to meet them and to help the zamindars who form the backbone of the country, who are the real country itself. It is not we urban people who are living in comfort and luxury that form the mass of the people but it is the rural people. If they are happy we will be happy. But destroy the rural area, you destroy the backbone of the country. If you let the poor peasant be destroyed, there will be misery in the country. We see what is happening in America and in Germany. The Government of the next generation may be forced to bring in a legislation much more severe than this one if we do not remedy the situation even now. We are going to force Government (if we happen to be here) to force the money-lenders to keep regular accounts, to keep honest accounts. If they do this, if no budmashi is done by these money-lenders we shall see that the money-lender gets a fair deal. As it is we cannot claim that we are civilised unless and until we put a bar against the cooking of accounts unless we prevent the dishonest practices against the poor peasant. We want to allow every individual his liberty for that is our first duty as civilised people but we cannot allow the lender the liberty to destroy the peasantry of the country. We do not want to see our Punjabi countrymen roaming about distant lands in search of bread like the poor Purbias from the United Provinces driven by the usurious money-lenders. We want to see our province populated and smiling with peace and prosperity. With all respect to the honourable mover I ask honourable members on the other side to see the sense of the House and not simply to the opportunity of talking the public that they opposed the Bill, that they made the best speeches against the measure. The sense of the House is, and I am convinced that the Bill as it stands is in the best interests of the country and I appeal to honourable members to help in putting it on our statute book.

Mr. F. B. Wace (Registrar of Co-operative Societies): I shall be very brief in addressing the House for I wish only to correct one or two statements which have been made by recent speakers. One of these was that the Government had no sufficient basis for proceeding with this Bill and that much further investigation was really required before a measure of this kind could be put into force. The speaker called in question the estimate of the total volume of debt. Nobody would claim that that estimate is an absolutely accurate one. It was made in the first instance by Mr. Darling and formed the basis of his description of debt in his "Punjab Peasant." It was based on an examination of mortgage statistics of the province and it was checked by statistics maintained by co-operative societies on debts owed by members of those societies. It has been accepted as a generally approximate estimate in other provinces and it was also accepted.

[Mr. F. B. Wace.]

and checked by the provincial Banking Enquiry Committee, on which, I may remind the House, the urban interests were very fully represented. Therefore I do not think that it can be said that Government is proceeding on an arbitrary estimate of rural debt. To propose that Government should now enter upon an investigation of the number of people who owe Rs. 100, Rs. 200 or Rs. 500 would mean the setting up of a machinery far more elaborate and far more expensive and would take far more time than the machinery proposed for conciliation in this Bill. Indeed to propose the institution of any such enquiry would be simply to postpone this Bill to the Greek kalends. And that, in the present situation of rural debt, would be a thing which Government could not possibly accept.

There was also a suggestion that some attempt should be made to find out how much of this debt is productive and how much unproductive. That again is an impossible proposition. The debt, as it is, stands and the best that could be hoped from any measure now is, I think, that we should set up machinery to bring the debtor and the creditor together, to come to an agreement as to what the debtor really can pay and to give the creditor the hope that he would pay. It is a difficult question to go back into every debt and discover which is productive and which unproductive and to lay down that unproductive debt shall be wiped out. We all agree that unproductive debt should as far as possible be wiped out and it is the ideal of any system of rural credit that that should be done. But it is not now possible to go back into all the debts which have already been incurred and try to find out which is productive and which not.

One further point. It was said that Government by this measure was stampeding money-lending interests into accepting the measure as it stood now, and it was suggested that Government had no right to take action at present. It is really difficult to know exactly what is meant, for from the same benches yesterday we were told that Government was bound to take action because certain other Governments had taken action. While at the present time there is hardly a Government in the civilised world which has not found itself bound to take action, in view of the present depression, to make some adjustments of the relations between town and country, agriculturist and industrialist, debtor and creditor, it is impossible for this Government to stand by and allow things to go on as they are now, knowing as they do the situation of the agriculturist debtor. It is not a question of what a particular Government has succeeded and what it has not succeeded in doing. Hitherto, I think I am right in stating that, no Government has found a full solution of this problem. But that does not absolve the Government from trying to find the best possible solution and from applying it. And I think it is for this reason that Government is trying to get this measure through as quickly as possible, at least to apply the remedies which it thinks can be applied in the present circumstances. (Cheers).

Mian Nurullah (Lyallpur South, Muhammadan, Rural): This Bill and its principle have been discussed threadbare at Simla and in the last few days here too. Many points of view have been expressed. But I want to express the point of view of a zamindar whose mainstay is agriculture, who has got some experience of banking and business, who has had the advantage of a special knowledge of banking and finance and who incidentally is a creditor as well as a debtor. I am very glad to remark that the principle of the Bill has been accepted all over. But when I put myself the question how far the Bill takes us, whether it is going to achieve the object for which it is being brought, and I look round for an answer, the answer when it comes does not satisfy me. It makes me a little pessimistic.

The problem of indebtedness is a chronic one and we have been trying to find a remedy for the last few years. When we consider it deeply it divides straightaway into two portions. One is how far this Bill is going to affect past debts and another, how far it is going to help in future. A few clauses of this Bill do affect past debts and there is some hope of relief there. But on the other side when we look to the future, the Bill, I think, is practically a failure, as it stands. The main causes that have reduced us to our present position, are still there. I do not want to dwell on any of them in detail. They have been mostly touched by other honourable members. But a short reference from me would not be out of place and I would suggest to the honourable members of Government to look around all these sides to find the proper solution of the great problem before us.

I take first of all the incidence of land revenue. It is at present very high, in some districts it is crushing and if the prices remain as they are for some time, the land revenue must be reduced. Apart from that, other matters of land revenue and land taxation remain to be considered. I may remark that when I drew the attention of this House in 1930 that the land revenue should vary with some index number with the rise and fall in prices, the proposition was probably laughed at, but I am glad to see that the principle to some extent is being accepted as you see in the last Montgomery settlement and in the settlement at Lyallpur. Apart from this, the question whether land revenue should be realised in two big instalments remains to be considered. If it is realised by more instalments, by, say four instalments, then that will bring still more relief. It will not throw the zamindar right into the hands of the money-lender. Secondly, there is the problem of exchange. It is a very delicate problem, and it is one that concerns the Government of India and I need not dwell on that either. I am glad to remark that one of our very competent, talented and distinguished members is going to the Reserve Bank. I am sure that he will see to our interests there. Thirdly, there is the method of giving taqavi. Taqavi is a very useful thing, but the method of giving is very defective. Many a time taqavi is given when the need is over and the method of realisation of taqavi again needs elastic rules. Next, I would like to touch the question of marketing. That has been engaging the attention of the Central Government for some time, and I am glad that some action is being taken, but some agency, whether Government or private, is necessary to tide over the difficult time when the harvest is coming and the zamindar is too busy to go anywhere to borrow money. Some agency must be found to give him about 75 per cent. of his produce to meet revenue and other necessities at that time.

Mr. F. B. Wace : Is this relevant ?

Mian Nurullah : All these things affect the principle of the Bill. These are the causes that have reduced us to this present position and I must draw the attention of Government to them so that they should proceed in these lines apart from the provision of the Bill. Therefore the question is quite irrelevant.

[Mian Nurullah.]

Next, I proceed to the question of subsidiary industries which has been touched upon by many members. Every zamindar should have a second string to his bow. He must be able to do something in his spare moments and all those persons, male or female who are free all the time should be able to do something, and that is the only way to increase the national output too.

The next thing that strikes me is that we should educate the public to formulate a sort of family budget and last but not the least thing is that the civil and criminal procedure should be so amended as to reduce litigation and its cost.

I leave all these points and come direct to the problem because my honourable friend is getting anxious. It is well-known everywhere that indebtedness has grown enormously. It is a dead weight, a crushing weight and we must tackle it straightaway. Here I would like to analyse how this has grown into such a huge volume. We borrowed a certain amount of capital. We have to pay it and we want to pay. But that borrowed capital was to be paid back in instalments, with some interest yearly, quarterly or monthly. Interest we want to pay but we want to pay within limits and the limits are being chalked out by this Bill. Thirdly and the most important that strikes me is the abnormal rise in the indebtedness due to the rise in the value of money. That is a problem very technical though scientific and I, as a business man, want to suggest certain solutions of the problem based on it.

Now, this rise in the value of money that has been taking place for a number of years must be checked. Not only should we try to check but reverse the policy. We should try to make money as cheap as possible. During the last few years the price of debt as compared with the assets that we owe or the commodity we grow has grown enormously. We should try to reverse the monetary policy in such a way that the ultimate effect is to reduce the value of indebtedness by the same amount. And here I want to make the matter clear by a particular example. If a zamindar borrowed in the year 1929 Rs. 100, he could then pay back that debt by selling 25 maunds of wheat at the rate of Rs. 4 per maund. The debt is there. The zamindar has been paying the interest. Now unfortunately the price of wheat is Rs. 2 per maund. The same zamindar to pay back Rs. 100 has to sell 50 maunds of wheat. Why should he pay the extra 25 maunds? I want to ask the greatest exponent, our honourable lady member from Ambala who is the greatest exponent of the sahukar—to convince me why these 25 maunds extra should be paid to a creditor who only gave a certain amount which could be paid back by selling 25 maunds of wheat?

Therefore we must take away the artificial means of payment. To find out a solution the question can be solved by a highly technical method. If we could ask the Government of India to follow a policy of exchange and monetary policy which is to try inflation instead of deflation and make the money cheaper naturally our debt would be lightened. But if unfortunately we cannot persuade them to do that, then the Punjab Government should take courage in both hands and revalue all the debts. Many suggestions have been made that these debts should be paid to the extent of 4 annas in the rupee or 6 annas in the rupee. That again is not scientific. The scientific basis is this, reduce the value of money according to the index number of prices. If the price of money has doubled and the price of commodity halved, the debts should also be halved. This is the only way, and once the debt is revalued then a good beginning can be made. Then if the debtor can pay he must be forced to pay. If he cannot, then another reduction might be necessary according to his capacity to pay. I have an alternative to suggest. When the debt has been revalued, then the Government should float a loan as suggested by my honourable friend and take over the debt and realise it by instalments, in the shape of land revenue. These are the main problems that remain to be tackled. As regards the Bill itself, I think its provisions are inadequate but as it stands, I see no harm in it and welcome it in spite of its drawbacks and give it my full support.

Mr. E. Mayadas (Nominated, non-official): Sir, we have been listening to this debate and a great many facts have been placed before us, but I tried to find out if anybody would explain whether such a crisis ever occurred in the history of the Punjab before this. The money-lender and the zamindar have been living in the Punjab since time immemorial and I wonder whether history has anything to say about it. Therefore, we naturally look for an explanation as to why this crisis has now come about. It would appear that the Great War has had something to do with it. During the war prices of all grains rose very high. Cotton went up to about Rs. 30 per maund, wheat went up to Rs. 12 per maund and similarly other agricultural produce. The result of this was that the zamindar was rolling in wealth, and he got in the way of spending lavishly. His credit also went up and he was able to borrow money easily. The sahukar was also very willing to lend him because he knew that if the zamindar had spent a lot of money, at the next harvest he would probably repay him. But those golden days did not last long. Prices fell and then the zamindar found it so difficult to make the two ends meet. But he had got into the way of living to a higher standard of life, more or less lavishly, and he continued to borrow money and both he and the sahukar had hopes that good days would soon come back again, but it was not to be so.

I think that this is partly the reason why the debt has piled up so fast and the figure has risen so very high. But if the methods of calculation had been normal we would not have felt bad about it but we know that the methods employed by the sahukar are really abnormal. There is not only the exorbitant rate of interest but the accounts are put down in a way as to make the actual amount borrowed many times of what it should be. Within the last few days I have heard of a case in Lahore of a pathan money-lender who lent Rs. 100 at the rate of 25 per cent, not per annum but per month. If money-lenders can go to that extent how will it be possible for the borrower to repay? Of course it can be said it is the fault of the borrower. Why should he take loan and not understand what he was doing? But all borrowers are not alike. I think in a great many cases these transactions might be likened to a transaction between a wolf and a lamb. The wolf has the cunning and strength on his side and the lamb is simple and powerless. But at the same time it should be stated that many a lamb is fast learning the arts of a wily and evasive fox. Be that as it may, we have got to face the situation. The situation is that here is the zamindar who is ill, he is so ill that he cannot get up and walk. Over and above that there is the great burden of about 200 crores crushing him. There is the fear of his very existence being brought to an end. Apart from this weight of 200 crores, there is the additional weight of about 8 crores per mensem being added. Unless something is done to immediately succour him what can be expected? What if he dies, and many zamindars are dying every day. It means then that nothing will be repaid. What will the sahukar get when the zamindar is dead? There is no doubt that the sahukar at one time owned a goose that at regular intervals used to lay a golden egg. The sahukars used to tell the zamindars, "Well, the harvest has come, pay your debt" and the zamindar paid the debt along with interest. But that cannot be done now.

[Mr. B. Mayadas.]

I had hoped that the representatives of the sahukars in this Council would come forward with a suggestion that they would go out to the sahukars and ask them immediately to stop charging interest on this loan of two hundred crores; that is to say, no further interest should accrue on this debt. By this means they would have infused some hope into the hearts of the zamindar that at least further increasing of his debt had been arrested. I also expected another suggestion from them that they would speak to the zamindars, "Look here, in every district we are going to hold an enquiry. Let any zamindar who has any grievance come before our committee with any complaints that his accounts have not been properly prepared by the sahukars or that an exorbitant rate of interest is being charged." If such a gesture had been made by the representatives of the sahukars I think it would have gone a long way to make for better relations. Similarly, I would have expected the representatives of the rural classes that are in debt to come forward with the following suggestion that they should have said to the sahukars, "Look here, tell us what man there is who you think, has the ability to repay his loan but is not willing to do so. We will make an enquiry, we will put pressure on him and we will arrange for re-payment in such a manner as we think that the circumstances permit." I think there is reason to believe that amongst the representatives of the sahukars and the representatives of the rural classes these suggestions have been discussed and thought out. Probably there are many who would like to put forth these suggestions but they have got obstacles in their way at present and that is why they have not been able to make those suggestions.

Just one word with regard to the proposed protection to be given to those big zamindars who do not require protection, who have plenty of property and big assets out of which they can meet their liabilities. In this connection I am reminded of an event. I once heard about a certain Indian State. That Indian State had an army, but all the men in that army had been recruited from outside the State. The people of the State went to the ruler and begged him saying, "Why is it that you get all your recruits from outside? Why don't you give us an opportunity to serve you? We will also serve you as well as any of those you have got." To this the ruler agreed and he ordered an army to be recruited from inside the State. After some time it was reported that the army was ready to take the field. The ruler ordered that the army should camp at a place about ten miles from their headquarters and that he would go there and inspect the army. These people marched to the camp and towards the evening some men came to the commanding officer and said, "Sir, we have made the biggest mistake that we ever did." "What is that?", he asked. "Sir, we have come but we have not brought any chowkidars with us. Who is to look after us in the night?" "What a wonderful army that stood in need of protection by chowkidars! I know that amongst the representatives of big zamindars there are great many who look upon this as a slur, that they should be given protection. But they are unable to speak against this measure because they have got obstacles in their way, and at present they are not able to do so."

I cannot help thinking of one more matter. In the future what is likely to happen? Are our courses going to be entirely separate, or are our paths going to cross again? If our paths cross, how will we meet, in friendship or in hostility? A few months hence the wheat harvest will be ready. The zamindar will be bringing his grain into the market nearest to his home. Supposing the sahukars are in an overwhelming majority at the market who is to purchase the wheat, etc., and supposing they combined and said, "Well, now these people have treated us shabbily over this Indebtedness Bill, we are going to worry them. We are not going to buy their wheat at any rate not at market rates." Several men will have come with their cart-loads of wheat, the carts will be standing there in the market and there will be no purchasers. What will those men do? This is likely to raise many complicated questions if this feeling of hostility exists between the money-lender and the zamindar. This is but one possibility that I can think of. I am inclined to think that many more such difficulties can occur. We must not forget that we have got to live together and the more we live in friendship the better. I think with calm thinking on both sides there are great hopes of our finding a solution. The one solution of the problem I suggest is this, that until there is another war or until prices rise there should be no addition to the interest on the debt which has already accrued.

Let us not forget for whom we are doing all this. We are taking all this trouble for the future generation. What legacy are we going to leave for them? Is it going to be one of friendship or of enmity, of love or hatred? Let us remember that nothing that was built upon force or hatred has ever lasted for any length of time. Let us try to remember the words of Napoleon Bonaparte a short time before he died. He said, "I laid the foundation of my kingdom on force, and look where it is to-day."

These are the few observations that I wished to make, but as to how I will vote on this question of recirculation of the Bill I am as yet undecided.

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah (Jhang, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): A large number of members have spoken on this Bill. They have discussed its provisions from every point of view. All parties have presented their point of view on this Bill. I wanted to congratulate the Government for bringing in such a Bill but now I find that the Government does not deserve any congratulations for this Bill. The reasons for this are many. The zamindars who expected to be benefited by the passage of this Bill into law have been greatly disappointed to find that the remedy of their ills is not contained in this Bill. The remedy which has been suggested in this Bill is not commensurate with the ill from which the zamindars are suffering. It is only a half-way measure. The hope that was given to the zamindars by the news that a measure to save them from indebtedness is under contemplation vanished after the Bill was drafted and circulated. Those provisions which were really helpful have been cut down by the Government. The Government in alliance with the leader of our party removed those provisions from the Bill.

[Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah.]

Sir, there are many causes of the increase of the burden of indebtedness. The main cause of this indebtedness lies in the enhancement of the credit of the zamindars during the war days as well as after it. There was a sudden rise in the prices of agricultural produce during the Great War. The zamindars rolled in gold. The prices rose four times. By this the credit of the zamindars also went up. The zamindars on account of their ignorance and shortsightedness believed that these prices would permanently remain at this pitch and increased their expenditure. They raised their standard of living. They borrowed in the hope that the loan could be easily paid back as soon as the crops had been gathered and disposed of in the market. This process continued for some years and then suddenly the prices fell to the present level. Unrest ensued. The Government also noticed it, and the Government officers thought of taking some steps to relieve the distress. The first step which was taken was the appointment of the Banking Enquiry Committee. This committee made enquiries all over India. It made enquiries in the Punjab also. As a result of these enquiries it was found that the burden of the rural indebtedness was so much and the figures of this heavy indebtedness sent a thrill through every heart, for every one felt that if the burden of the rural indebtedness was not relieved the agricultural classes would be destroyed. Then, the Punjab Government appointed an indebtedness enquiry committee. The zamindars who were groaning under a crushing burden of debt heaved a sigh of relief, and their disappointment changed into anxious waiting. The committee submitted its printed report which came under discussion in this House also. But there was no end to the disappointment of the zamindar members when they saw that there was practically nothing in that report which could benefit the rural population. On the other hand, there were some recommendations which were totally against the interests of the zamindars. And the zamindar members of the committee did not append any note of dissent to the report but acquiesced in its recommendations. Anyhow we discussed that report and thereafter we learned that the Government proposed to draft a Bill on the basis of the recommendations of the Indebtedness Enquiry Committee. Again, the hearts of the poor zamindars were filled with hope and they thought that the days were not distant when the burden of their debts would be considerably lightened. The condition of the zamindar at that juncture had a striking resemblance to the case of a patient who on the verge of death sees a ray of hope in the bottle of medicine sent to him by an able doctor. After that the present Bill was introduced in this Council. It was, I think, in the last Budget session. Then it was circulated to elicit the public opinion. After a few months a special session of the Council was called at Simla where the Bill was referred to a select committee. Meanwhile the anxiety of the zamindar and his disappointment increased with the lapse of every day. The Government, I am constrained to remark, kept the zamindar too long in suspense. It was this unaccountable abeyance in the consideration of the Bill which fanned the flames of discontent in the rural Punjab. If the Bill had been passed a few years ago such deplorable events as have recently occurred in certain villages of the province would not have occurred at all. Those events have really sullied the fair name of the peaceful Punjab peasant but their root cause was the inability of the Government to rise equal to the occasion and to pass the Indebtedness Bill into law at a time when its need was most acutely felt.

Now, after the Bill emerged from the select committee we hoped that it would be passed into law in its present form. But now our respectable and revered Raja Bahadur has moved a motion the purpose of which is nothing else but to put unnecessary obstacles in the smooth passage of the Bill. All I can say about his amendment is this that it has come from a quarter from which it was least expected. Raja Sahib is a notable representative of zamindars. He himself is a big zamindar and knows the conditions of the zamindars fully well. Moreover, he has held responsible positions in life and has been the preserver of law and order. I never expected that he, of all people, would come forward to oppose a Bill the passage of which is bound to contribute to the peace and prosperity of this province. I wonder what reasons have induced a prominent representative of zamindars of Raja Sahib's position to oppose this measure. Anyhow he knows his reasons best. I need not try to guess them. My duty is to acquaint this House and most particularly the Government with my own feelings and the feelings of my party on the matter under discussion.

Personally I think that if this Bill is delayed for another four or five months the zamindar will no longer be able to put up with this abeyance. When he finds that there is no way out of his difficulties and it is totally impossible for him to get rid of this crushing burden of indebtedness in the near future, he will jump at the throat of his creditor just as a furious lion pounces at his hunter. I am not an alarmist nor is it my habit to give meaningless warnings but these are facts which should not be ignored by the Government. The accusation of Mr. Labh Singh that Nawab Jamal Khan was referring to the Jhang and Muzaffargarh events with a view to create bitterness in the minds of the people was baseless. I am sure nothing was farther from his mind. If we ever refer to these events we do so in order to show to the Government and the people at large that it is not far from probability that the fears expressed by us may assume tangible shape and our forebodings may come out true.

I come from Jhang. I know that the root cause of the troubles of 1915 was economic difficulty.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: They said they were Germans.

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah : I am coming to that. The party that was aggrieved did try to give the affair a political complexion. But the fact is that the real trouble was due to difficult economic situation. The fault was of the sahukars and the Government agents who were in league with each other and proceeded to pass and execute decrees against the zamindars in large numbers. We are arraigned for making inflammatory speeches and reviving sad memories. But people in our ilaga know it full well that it was we who protected the afflicted sahukars. We gave shelter to their womenfolk and they lived in our houses like our own sisters and mothers till succour reached from district authorities and the trouble subsided. When they left our houses we gave them clothes and money as is the custom in the houses of zamindars. People of our ilaga know these things and the sahukars there will fully bear me out in this respect.

Mr. President : Will the honourable member please speak to the motion before the House ?

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah : I have to explain my position. My submission is that the delay in the passage of this Bill will be injurious to the interest of both the zamindars and the sahukars. I am afraid that if its passage is delayed any further we will have to face a repetition of the Jhang and Muzaffarpur events all over the province. In that case the sahukar and the zamindar will suffer alike and even the Government will not remain immune from the after effects of such a scuffle between its subjects.

This is a Bill, the passage of which has kept us waiting for a sufficiently long time and now we are tired. After all what remedy has the Government offered in this Bill for the very difficult problem of indebtedness ? If any remedy has been offered at all it is quite insufficient. The Government have administered the same medicine to a patient who is suffering from the inflammation of the brain which is ordinarily given to one who has a slight headache. They have given one grain of quinine to a patient suffering from chronic malaria. And even this prescription is being delayed. In these circumstances God only can save the poor patient. The Government should act like a good doctor who unmindful of the amount of fees he is likely to get, puts his heart and soul into his work and thinks that the greatest recompense for his labours will be the recovery of the patient.

The conciliation boards which are proposed to be set up in order to effect a settlement between the debtor and his creditors should be constituted of honest and well-meaning gentlemen.

Mr. President : Order, order. The honourable member is not speaking to the motion. When the Bill is actually taken into consideration he may rise and speak to the clauses and discuss the personnel of the conciliation boards. This is not the stage to discuss these points.

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah : I would appeal to the Government and this House that no further delay should be allowed in the passage of this Bill. If it is passed into law very soon it will improve the relations of the debtors and the creditors in the long run. I am afraid if it is delayed any longer some trouble may crop up in the province. With these words I would request Raja Sahib to withdraw his amendment and thus save the situation in the province which is threatening every hour to ruin the peace of this country. I hope he will accede to my modest request and will collaborate with us in an attempt to better the conditions of the zamindars of the province.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): Sir, the discussion on this motion has proceeded on general lines of relations between the creditors and the debtors or on the necessity of giving some kind of relief to debtor classes on account of agricultural depression, rather than upon specific provisions of a Bill which the Government is now asking the Council to consider. I propose, with your permission, Sir, to confine myself to the specific provisions of the Bill and to point out, if I can, that these proposals have not been considered properly, they are inequitable and the Government has not devoted to these specific proposals the attention which their importance deserved. No Bill in recent times has elicited so much criticism as the present Indebtedness Bill. Apart from the expression of opinion of creditors or debtors or of partisan organizations on one side or the other it was a European deputy commissioner who described this Bill "as an unfortunate experiment in party legislation which would permanently antagonize one class." Another European deputy commissioner pointed out that the problem could not be solved "without dealing a shattering and unjust blow at one section of the community." This was the criticism from the point of view of this legislation being a class legislation. On the merits of the proposals, the opinions were no less definite and emphatic and it was again a European deputy commissioner who pointed out the futility of fixing rates of interest by legislation and further pointed out that "the Bill was vitiated by an inner contradiction inasmuch as it attempted to reduce rates of interest and at the same time decreased facilities for realization." Again it was a European district and sessions judge who characterized the whole legislation in the following words:—

That the Bill embodies neither sense, policy nor justice, that it was intrinsically unworkable, morally iniquitous and juristically an outrage.

Mr. President: At what stage were these opinions expressed? Was it not when the Bill was circulated first?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Yes. And these opinions, as I am going to show presently, apply with added force to the Bill, as it has now emerged from the select committee.

Mr. President: After the receipt of these opinions the Council referred the Bill to the select committee and thus committed themselves to the principles of the Bill. Therefore, the honourable member is not strictly speaking entitled to go back to the stage before committal. The question at the present stage is whether the Bill should be taken into consideration or whether it should be re-circulated.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: This criticism applies à fortiori to the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee, because, as I am going to point out to the House, the bad features of the Bill which elicited those criticisms had been made worse and therefore this is the time when the House should consider whether it has not gone too far and whether it is not yet too late to stop. Sir, such was the general line of criticisms on the Bill as a whole.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

With respect to one of the most criticised portions of the Bill, the proposals with respect to conciliation boards, no less a person than Sir Henry Craik, while introducing this Bill, had said,—the provision was of so novel and extraordinary a character—that “the Government only intended to try this measure in one or two selected areas as an experimental measure.” That was the stage when this Council was pleased to refer this Bill to the select committee. We sitting on this side of the House thought that the Government being in possession of these opinions, would certainly do something to modify its original proposals in the light of the criticism received. But, Sir, it appears that the Government had to contend with people who were in no mood to listen. And one of the features of the Bill which had been criticised was that the attempt to reduce rates of interest for the future could not go on logically at the same time with attempts to reduce security for the loan and facilities for realization of the debts. It was expected that the select committee would amend the Bill to meet that criticism, but, Sir, as you would find from the actual amendments of the various portions of the Bill, far from doing anything of the kind, the select committee has ended by considerably decreasing further even the existing facilities for realization of debt, so much so that from the heading of the Bill, the words that the Bill was intended “to improve agrarian credit” were removed for the reason as given in the report of the select committee, that the provisions of the Bill are inconsistent with this object which the Government had originally set out to achieve. Therefore, it is clear that at least one of the principal objects which the Government had in view in introducing this legislation has been knocked on the head by the select committee. I wish to take this opportunity of explaining my own position and that of the minority in the select committee. The constitution of the select committee was such that even the Government found itself unable to carry any proposal, howsoever reasonable it might be and we members of the minority party found that it was impossible for us to put forward any suggestion with any chance of acceptance, howsoever proper, useful and desirable the proposal might be.

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : Question.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : As a party, we definitely decided that we should support the Government in passing an equitable and reasonable measure of relief. We decided to support the Government in any proposals that it put up. That was our attitude and in reply to the criticism of the honourable member from Amritsar I may be permitted to say that Honourable Finance Member, Mr. Boyd, who presided over the committee was very fair and reasonable and used all his powers of persuasion and reasoning to induce the members of the majority party to accept his suggestions and in fact on certain occasions he had to point out that if reasonable proposals were not accepted, the Government would have to consider the desirability or otherwise of proceeding with the Bill. But this had no effect.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : On a point of order. Is the honourable member in order in referring to what happened in the select committee?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am in general entitled to refer to our attitude in the select committee. The reply that was vouchsafed to these importunities was that they would not be cowed down by these threats. Therefore, we supported the original proposals of the Government in the select committee inspite of the adverse criticism which they had elicited from officers of Government themselves, and inspite of the fact that they needed amendment in the light of this weighty criticism. Not only were the Governments' proposals to improve the original Bill turned down by the majority, but the Bill was drastically amended so as to emphasise the worst features of the Bill, against the opinion and vote of the official members of the committee. Therefore the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee, is not the Bill of the Government. It is a Bill which has been dictated at the point of the bayonet by the leader of the indebted classes at the head of a majority. For the sake of illustration take the two provisions of the Bill which are most inequitable. One is the provision with respect to Usurious Loans Act, sub-clause (4) of clause 5, which fixes the rates of interest, abolishes compound interest, and makes rates of interest operative with retrospective effect. The specific proposals on these points were passed inspite of the opposition of the official members. Again look at the new provisions relating to the conciliation boards. The sine quo non of conciliation boards according to the Central Provinces Act and the original Bill was that 60 per cent. of the creditors should agree. Official members were again defeated on this matter and the committee has substituted one creditor instead of sixty per cent., in the teeth of official opposition. We naturally thought that on these two matters at least the Government would stick to its opinion. The Government when it brought forward its original proposals had definite opinions on the subjects and stuck to them at any rate up to the select committee stage. Even in the select committee, they insisted on their view and we understood that there were matters of fundamental importance and the Government would not compromise on these matters of principle. And therefore we naturally thought that the Government would either withdraw the Bill or re-circulate it for eliciting opinion and that was the impression which was created on us, and that was the impression which the public also shared. But it appears that something has occurred which has made the Government change its opinion. It appears that the Government at the back of the minority members of the select committee has entered into certain negotiations with the leader of the Unionist party and has yielded on most of the points. I want to ask the Government, is that a proper method of dealing with the matter? If any negotiations were being carried on with the leader of the debtor classes and the majority party, it was only fair that the substance of those negotiations should have been communicated to one member at least of the minority party, with the object of enabling us to put our point of view on the new proposals before the Government, before it finally made up its mind. It was very necessary that those new proposals should be considered from all points of view. As I have stated, we could never hope to carry any legislation except by appealing to the reasonable attitude of the Government, except by beseeching the Government to hold the scales even, except by imploring the Government to stick to an equitable view of things and all that we wished was, that before the Government gave up its original position, or the one which it had taken at the select committee, before the Government changed its entire front, it should allow us to make a representation to the Government on the new position. But that has not been done. In view of these facts, is it not proper that proposals that Government has now sent up should be circulated for eliciting opinion so that the Government may be acquainted with all the points of view with respect to those proposals? It may be that expression of opinion by me on particular proposals may not appeal to the Government, but it may be that the same opinion expressed by its deputy commissioners, its judges and other experts might help the Government in arriving at a more equitable and correct position. Why is the Government depriving itself of that chance? Has the Government devoted sufficient time to the matter? Is it in possession of the opinion of the experts on its new proposals? I respectfully submit that the Government in acting in this manner is certainly not acting in a judicious or a wise manner.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

You, Sir, were pleased to point out that the changes in the Bill are of such a character as to make it practically a new Bill. And this, I submit, is so not only because of proposed legislation on new topics but also because of drastic amendments to the provisions in the original Bill. The Honourable Finance Member says that he has entered into some kind of understanding with the Leader of the Opposition that he will not insist upon clauses 36, 37 and 38 of the Bill. And therefore he thinks, so I take it that this prevents the Bill from being a new Bill. I ask, what about clause 32? What about part VII which contains amendments to certain sections of the Redemption of Mortgages Punjab Act, 1913? Both these clauses or the subjects dealt with by these clauses were not ever mentioned in the original Bill. The latter is certainly an amendment of an entirely new Act. Again what does the Honourable Finance Member say to section 84 which deals with amendments to section 60 (1) (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. That is an entirely new topic and a very difficult subject. That section deals with certain kinds of property which are exempt from attachment and there are about twelve or thirteen classes of them. This clause proposes to amend a provision of the Civil Procedure Code which was never contemplated by the original Bill and on a most important point and in a manner which I would submit decreases the security of the creditor and decreases his facility for realization, topics on which the opinions of officials had expressed itself in unambiguous terms. Again clause 35 deals with the amendment to Order XXI, Rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This again is an entirely new clause, amending a very important provision of the Civil Procedure Code, which was not in the original Bill. Its provision was enacted by the original framers of the Code with a view to expedite execution proceedings. The effect of this amendment would be to hold up execution proceedings interminably. Did anybody contemplate either when the Bill was introduced or when it was circulated that this provision of the Civil Procedure Code would be amended in this fashion? Simply because out of the six new amendments of previous Acts which are now embodied in this conglomerate part of the Bill, three are intended to be withdrawn, it does not follow that the Bill ceases to be a new Bill. Then, can anybody say with respect to the amendments made to the Usurious Loans Act by the select committee that they do not make the Bill practically a new Bill? Do not the amendments relating to conciliation boards make the Bill a new Bill? If the Government is not satisfied with your opinion Sir,—and your knowledge of constitutional procedure, I may be pardoned for saying, is second to none—would it not be proper for the Government to consult its own law officers, the Legal Remembrancer, or to consult any other lawyer in whom it has confidence? I respectfully suggest, that under these circumstances the Government should not be a party to laying down a constitutional precedent which is fraught with dangerous consequences. With respect to clauses 32, 34 and 35, three amendments of other Acts than those mentioned in the Bill I may state that the select committee of which I was a member was not even aware that these specific amendments were at all going to be put forward till the last day of its sitting. If a member of a select committee wishes to put forward amendments, and amendments of a far-reaching character, on a matter unconnected with the original Bill, he should, in my opinion, circulate the amendments to other members a day or two before they came up for consideration. What happened in this case was that on the last day these amendments were put forward and were hurried through. As a member of the select committee, I asked Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram on the preceding day whether he would kindly let me have a copy of the amendments to the other Acts which he proposed for the committee to consider. But a copy was not made available to me in spite of a definite request for the same. Therefore, even in the select committee we were not in a position to go into these amendments carefully or to give that close attention or considered thought to them which their importance deserved. An amendment of an all-India legislation like the Civil Procedure Code is a very important matter. The provisions of the Code have been subjected to judicial interpretation by the highest courts, the Privy Council and the High Courts for a very long time. Section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code is not only applicable to the Punjab but it is applicable to all the provinces and no other province has thought fit to amend it. Again, in all the provinces, in all the various attempts at legislation which have been or are being made to deal with the problem of indebtedness, has anybody except Chaudhri Chhotu Ram suggested the desirability of amending such a useful provision as Order XXI, Rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code? There is neither weight of authority nor any rhyme or reason for it. Is that the hasty manner in which the Punjab Government wishes to rush through legislation, a legislation which attempts to amend all-India enactments of this type? Leave aside the technical objections. Let us look at the matter from a practical point of view. The select committee unanimously reported that the Bill has been so altered as to need republication. When a select committee says so it does not only mean technical republication. The idea underlying republication is that people who are likely to be affected by that legislation might become aware of it so that they may be in a position to place their point of view before Government. Has the present republication had that practical effect. In fact it was only on the 18th of this month that the report of the select committee was presented. (The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: Republication has been done but re-circulation has not been done. That is another matter entirely.) I say that the formality of republication has certainly been gone through but has that republication attained its object, i.e., served its purpose, i.e., of really informing the people concerned of the changes. Technically the provision has no doubt been complied with but that republication has not gained its object. I wish to bring to the notice of the House that I have made enquiries in this matter and I know that even now the astounding provisions of the new Bill are not familiar even to educated persons and that for obvious reasons, because the report of the select committee was not presented to this House till the 18th of October. Nobody reads the gazette. It is only when things appear in the vernacular and English Press that they come to the notice of educated persons. It was two or three days after the presentation of the report of the select committee that report of the committee was published in parts in the press. A few days after the report had been introduced I happened to meet persons connected with Joint Stock Banks and I asked them what they thought of the present legislation. They said that it did not affect them at all for banks were excluded. I asked them to read the report of the select committee, which does not exclude them. It only excludes banks with respect to the provision for compound interest. It does not exclude them with respect to other provisions, for example, of the Usurious Loans Act. They did not know this till I brought it to their notice. And that was the information possessed by educated people of Lahore, people connected with Joint Stock Commercial Banks, people getting Rs. 1,000 as salaries and who should know if anybody knows about this legislation. There is nothing strange in it, because it is impossible to become aware of provisions of a complicated Bill in a week's time. This was three days after the report of the select committee had been presented to the House. It was after I pointed out to them that it affected them—I happen to be connected with one of the leading Commercial Banks here—that they took notice of the matter and brought it to the attention of the authorities. If bankers connected with Commercial Banks here know only that much about the Bill, you may take it that the provisions of the Bill are not even known to those persons with respect to whom you are attempting to legislate.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Again, it was stated by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram that they tried to remove the stigma as far as they could of this Bill being a class measure. You ask any one as to whether this Bill is to apply to rural indebtedness only or whether it is of general application. The average man will tell you that it has got nothing to do with borrowings between a townsman and a townsman or a trader and a trader but that it is confined only to rural indebtedness. That is the impression which is created by the speeches here bringing to the notice of everybody the difficulties of the zamindars. But this Bill as the people of the province ought to know, affects equally the trader as well as the agriculturist. It affects dealings between a commission agent and a commission agent, between one townsman and another. And that point of view as the dissenting note of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram will show, has been emphasised in the Bill as it has emerged out of the select committee. Therefore, is it proper that if you are going to affect the dealings of a class which has not asked for protection, if with a view to remove the reproach of partiality, the reproach of its being a class legislation you have brought within the ambit of the legislation classes which were not previously affected by it, is it proper, I asked the Government, not to recirculate the Bill and elicit the opinion of those persons who are affected by it? That is the point of view which I wish the House to consider very carefully. It is claimed by certain people, although they are in my humble opinion utterly mistaken in their view that the restriction of credit of agriculturists works to their benefit. However they are entitled to their opinion. I am not here to question that. But a trader might very well say, this restriction of credit is not good for me. I wish to borrow money at 10 per cent. with a view to invest the same and make 24 per cent. and if you restrict my credit you practically take away my means of livelihood. If you fix unnatural rates of interest in the case of a trader his credit is restricted and you are not doing anything to benefit him. (The Honourable Revenue Member: Which portion of the Bill is the honourable member referring to?) The honourable member wants to know which provisions would affect a trader. I reply, all the provisions of the Bill, all the 38 clauses with the exception of the provisions relating to conciliation boards affect everybody in the country, trader, agriculturist, non-agriculturist and all. That point of view should therefore not be ignored. The trader should be asked if he wants this protection. Is it really a protection for him? With respect to the question by the Honourable Revenue Member I make bold to say that with the exception of conciliation boards and some other provisions which are of no consequence, the Bill deals with everybody. Under the guise of giving relief to agriculturist debtors on account of agricultural depression here is a piece of legislation which is going to affect the dealings of everybody. Is it or is it not a fact that with the exception of conciliation boards, everything in the Bill is of general application? As the honourable member still persists in questioning this matter I shall go through the provisions of the Bill to show that my contention is absolutely correct. Insolvency procedure refers to every one. That is part II. Part III—Usurious Loans—refers to every one. Part IV which deals with debt conciliation boards applies to the debtor. Part V dealing with damdapat applies to the debtor. Parts VI and VII apply to every one. Section 33 applies to every one. Section 34 applies to every one, so do sections 35, 36, 37 and 38. So that the only provisions which apply to agriculturist debtors are the provisions relating to conciliation boards and damdapat. Every other provision is of general application. With respect to compound interest—a proposal that Government has now dropped—there was a provision that it may not apply to banks and traders. There was no other exception. They apply to every one. The Government has sent a new amendment fixing minimum rate of 7 per cent. compound interest on secured mortgages. Do you think, can any member of Government say, can any member of this House say, that it is possible to secure in Lahore a loan on 7 per cent. compound interest on immovable property?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: I believe the honourable member is under some misapprehension.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: Clause 7 (1) does not include everyone.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: Even in other parts except part III everybody is exempted except the debtor.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I am afraid if this is the state of knowledge of the Honourable Leader of the House, then the other people in the Punjab can be pardoned for their lack of knowledge.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Even in part III banks are excluded from the operation of the clause.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : They are only excluded from the clause as to compound interest. They are not excluded from the clause as to the rates of interest, which applies to everyone.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : They are not excluded even now as the Act stands. This Bill does not introduce anything new.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : My submission is this. I wish to point out that in spite of what has been done people in this province imagine that it does not affect the relations between a trader and a trader.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : We are not making any changes. So far as the Usurious Loans Act is concerned their position will remain unaltered.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : But with this modification that you are fixing the rates of interest between a trader and a trader and you are laying down that beyond those rates any trader who borrows from another trader will be borrowing at excessive and unconsionable rates and it will not only be permissible but it will be obligatory on the courts to open up all those transactions for a number of years and make deductions for the payments which have already been made and if necessary pass a decree in favour of the debtor—

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It is specifically excluded under clause (e).

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I wish to bring it to the notice of the Honourable Revenue Member that the exception only relates to compound interest, that compound interest between a trader and trader will not be objected to but the objection does not extend to fixing the rates of interest which have been now fixed under the Act. Now, the Act lays down that any one who has borrowed money at a rate in excess of 8 per cent. simple interest on a mortgage of house property that interest shall be considered to be excessive and by virtue of the provisions of the Usurious Loans Act it shall be now obligatory upon the court to open up that transaction for a number of years. I put it to the honourable member, is it possible for any person to borrow money at 8 per cent. simple interest on a mortgage of property situated in Lahore? If that is not possible, is it not time that Government reverted to its original proposals? The original proposal was 12 per cent. compound interest. It is here published on page 2. I wish the Council to pay a little attention to what I am saying because it is a matter on which Government would have been well-advised in asking for information. The Government has not at all realised the import of their new proposals. They could have got the necessary information from the registration offices in about two days. But Government in its anxiety to rush through the legislation in this very session has not devoted any attention to this matter. The original motion of Government was that the court shall deem interest to be excessive if, on loans advanced on the security of immoveable property or pledge of moveable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest. That was the original proposal of Government. Now, we may take it that when the Government made this proposal it certainly acted with some information in its possession and it certainly proceeded, rightly or wrongly, on certain definite data. I ask the Honourable Finance Member to take the House into his confidence and let us know what has led him to reduce 12 per cent. compound interest to 7 per cent. compound interest which he has done in the new amendment which he has sent to the Council. Have any new facts been brought to his notice? Has he instituted any new inquiry or is it simply because Chaudhri Chhotu Ram put forward in the select committee certain rates of simple interest and he has more or less tried to approximate to the same the basis of compound interest? If the Honourable Finance Member can say that he has done so as a result of the Provincial Banking Inquiry Committee report or the Central Banking Inquiry Report or the reports of the various commissions or the report of the Calvert Committee or as a result of inquiry from the registration offices from where the rates of interest on secured loans can be ascertained without any trouble or much expense, I would bow to the opinion of the Punjab Government, and I would accept it, bearing in mind that the Government is responsible for this legislation. But if no information is vouchsafed to me, am I not right in asking the Honourable Finance Member to let us know why in making the new proposal he has now adopted an attitude utterly different from the provisions of his own original Bill relating to Usurious Loans Act and even from the attitude which the official members took up in the select committee? Am I not entitled to ask him what enquiry or information has led him to abandon the Government's original proposals of 12 per cent. compound interest on secured loans and to reduce it to seven per cent.? And he did it only during the last week. (A voice: The committee recommended no compound interest at all.) May I remind the Honourable Finance Member that in this matter he was not without proper guidance? After all, the question of the rate of interest has been dealt with by committees before, in the first instance, by the Punjab Banking Inquiry Committee. It is a very recent report. Does he find any warrant, I respectfully ask, in the report of the Punjab Banking Inquiry Committee in support of his present proposal regarding rates of interest on secured loans, which, in my opinion, are uneconomic, unnatural and unreal? After that the Punjab Government appointed the Calvert Inquiry Committee of which I was a member and the duty which was imposed upon us was that we should study the reports of the Royal Commission on Agriculture, the report of the Indian Banking Inquiry Committee, the reports of the Labour Commission and other reports and suggest legislation for the relief of indebtedness. We put forward our proposals. On the question of rates that report was unanimous. That report was signed by all the zamindar members—Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah, Mr. Nurullah, Mr. Anderson, our Legal Remembrancer and Mr. Calvert, S. Sampuran Singh and others. (A voice: They are out of date.) The report was presented only last year. Your present proposals entirely go against the unanimous recommendations of the Calvert Committee. They fixed $8\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. simple interest as the rate beyond which the transaction must be treated as unconscionable and that these provisions should not have retrospective effect. Again I was reminded yesterday by the honourable member from Gujranwala (Chaudhri Riasat Ali), that after all we in this province are not the only ones that are dealing with this legislation.

[Mr. Mutand Lal Puri.]

There are other provinces too which are dealing with it, and when other provinces are dealing with this legislation why is this cry being raised here? It is being raised here because you would not follow the reasonable proposals of the other provinces, and for your reference I will quote chapter and verse to show that the proposals of the Punjab Government are outrageous, outrageous not only because of their unfairness, not only because they give more to the debtor but because they are so unreal. What did the United Provinces Committee do? The United Provinces select committee consisting as it did of zamindar members proposed certain rates. I am not at present taking other rates, but will confine myself for the sake of illustration to one rate, i.e., interest on secured loans. What was the report of the United Provinces Committee? The United Provinces Committee put up certain rates. They fixed a certain rate for loans up to Rs. 500 and another for Rs. 5,000. A person who borrowed Rs. 20,000 had to pay a certain other rate. Let us for the sake of comparison take the lower rates on secured loans which were recommended by the select committee of the United Provinces for higher loans and you will find that up to Rs. 20,000 they recommended 9 per cent. interest on secured loans. What was the comment of the Honourable Finance Member supported by all the members of the United Provinces Government on that suggestion? I shall presently place it before you.

They had proposed—I am confining myself to the rate of interest—
 5 P.M. on secured loans they had proposed 9 per cent. interest up to Rs. 20,000. Of course they had fixed 12 per cent. up to Rs. 500 and 10½ per cent. up to a loan of Rs. 3,000. But I am taking Rs. 20,000 as a very fair average. What is the comment of those gentlemen on this suggestion? I shall read from the minute of dissent signed by Mr. E. A. H. Blunt, D. L. Drake-Brockman, J. J. W. Allsop, A. A. Waugh and R. F. Mudie.

In the case of secured loans the security may be so poor as not greatly to reduce the risk. It may be a second or a third mortgage of land already heavily encumbered or it may take the form of goods for which there is no ready market.
 * * * * * We are not prepared at present to go further than to lay down rates that would be applicable to loans secured on a first mortgage.

Then, in paragraph 6 they say—

We do not consider that the rates proposed by the select committee are fair. During most of the period to which these rates will be applied with retrospective effect rates of interest were high and, if allowances be made for the fact that some loans were issued income-tax free, the Government itself borrowed at over 6½ per cent. It would be absurd to suppose that the general public were wiser and even more absurd to suppose that those who subscribed over one lakh were usurers while those who subscribed only Rs. 500 were not.

In our opinion no transaction can be held to be usurious unless the ordinary fair-minded man would consider it unfair and no rate which approximates to the rate for gilt-edged securities could possibly be considered unfair in any circumstances whatever.

* * * * *
 In view of the rates at which money is frequently borrowed in the open market we do not consider that the maximum rate can be put lower than 12 per cent.
 * * * * * These rates would only be applicable to loans secured on first mortgages.

This is what these five members of the select committee including the finance member and other official members of the United Provinces Council say on the subject. When I said that the Punjab Government had a definite basis for its original recommendation I was referring to this and to the provisions of the Bengal Money-Lenders' Act. What I submit now is this. If the Punjab Government had originally come forward with its present proposal and it had been subjected to criticism and the Government in spite of that criticism had persisted in that opinion, I would have nothing further to say. But when the Government's original proposal was beyond what the United Provinces Government thought it would be absurd to go and what the Bengal Government had actually enacted in the Bengal Money-Lenders Act, and again after discussion in the select committee the Government did not move from its position, what has happened during these four or five days that it should come forward with such unnatural proposals? It must be remembered that we are not legislating only for the past debts. If we are legislating only for past debts it may reasonably be said, "We have to scale down the debts and this is one of the ways in which we propose to act." That position would have been intelligible. If Government had come forward with that proposal and confined this reduction of rates to periods of depression or confined these reduced rates to loans advanced during the time of boom one could appreciate that point of view, whether one agreed with it or not. But what the Punjab Government is now proposing is that for all future times to come it is illegal for anyone to borrow money at the rate of $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. compound interest on the security of property which may be second or even third mortgage. Is that legislation in consonance with the existing state of market in the province or with any rates which may have prevailed any time during the last twenty years. Why again has the Government selected seven per cent. as a standard rate? That shows utter lack of information on behalf of Government on the subject of rates of interest which prevail in this province. Has the Government heard of the prevalent rate of 7 per cent. in the Punjab? There is a prevailing rate of 6 per cent. which comes to eight annas a month or $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. which comes to ten annas a month or 9 per cent. which comes to 12 annas a month. How has the Punjab Government evolved 7 per cent.? What I submit to the Government is this: This is really a complicated measure. If it were only a matter of giving relief that would be different. (Interruption.) Government has sent in an amendment to substitute 7 per cent. compound interest instead of 6 per cent. simple interest which is the recommendation of the select committee.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: I shall be delighted to explain it at the proper time.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: The Government has changed so soon from 12 per cent. compound interest to 7 per cent. compound interest and that too at such a short notice that it is not possible for the Government to appreciate the points of view different from those which have been communicated to it by private communications between the leader of the opposition and the Honourable Finance Member. I wrote letters to certain banks in Lahore enquiring the usual rate of interest they charged on the security of property. Usually the Banks obtain the security of immoveable property by the deposit of title deeds. I received replies from some and the others did not reply because they were under the impression that Government had moved an amendment which excluded them from the operation of the Act and therefore, they were not in a position to assist me in this matter.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

But two banks have replied and their replies are here. I am sure everybody knows that the rates charged by banks are the lowest and that customers consider themselves fortunate if they can get loans from banks instead of having to go to money-lenders or sahukars, who usually charge higher rates. One of the biggest joint stock banks has written to me—

I beg to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of your letter, dated 23rd October, 1934. The Bank has been charging compound interest at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum, with half-yearly rests in the case of fixed loans and with monthly rests in the case of cash credit and overdraft accounts against the security of immoveable properties. In a good few cases, especially where the amount advanced is small and labour involved is proportionately large, the rate of interest has gone up to 10½ per cent. per annum with monthly or half-yearly rests, according to the nature of the account.

Another bank writes to me—

With reference to your enquiry of date I beg to inform you that our usual rate of interest is 9 per cent. per annum and we make very few exceptions in this matter.

(An honourable member : What are the names of those banks ?) The first letter is from the Punjab National Bank, Limited, and the second from the Punjab Co-operative Bank, Limited. (An honourable member : Are you a director of any of these banks ?) Yes, I am. The honourable member may rest assured that I will not divulge any information that I have in my possession, with respect to loans of individual members of this House and any attempt on the part of the honourable member to heckle me to blurt out that information will be unsuccessful. Now, this is the rate at which banks are issuing loans. The Government may as well ask the Registrars of its various registration offices to go through the mortgage deeds which have been registered in their offices in January 1930 or January 1931 or January 1929 and find out the usual rate of interest charged on the security of property in towns and on the security of property in villages. The Government can obtain the information in about a week's time. Government will be thus in a position to ascertain definitely the prevalent rate of interest and the Government can then fix a proper rate of interest, instead of groping in the dark. Why not follow the reports of the Banking Committees, Calvert Committee or even the Acts of other provinces? However, if you legislate on the lines of your amendment, without confining these proposals to past transactions, you would be enacting an unreal legislation; you will be making it practically impossible for the honest debtor to borrow and for the honest creditor to lend. A dishonest man will always be able to get Rs. 500 and sign the bond for Rs. 1,000 at 6 per cent. compound interest. I, therefore, submit that Government has not given sufficient thought to this matter. Government should not lay down a rule which takes no note of existing market rates and which it is practically impossible to adopt in the existing circumstances. I ask any member of this House to attempt to borrow in the bazar at 7 per cent. on the security of immoveable property, if they are ignorant of market rates. Again these are exceptional times and the rate of interest is fortunately very low. I would, therefore, ask the Honourable Finance Member to split his proposals into two parts. If he wants to give relief to certain loans borrowed in certain years, let him lay down the rate of interest with respect to the loans of those years. But he is not justified in applying abnormal legislation really designed to meet abnormal conditions for all normal transactions. This is what the Punjab Government is doing. This is not what the United Provinces Government has done. The United Provinces Government has wisely split up this legislation into four Bills, one of which is definitely restricted to loans advanced in certain years, and the operation of the other is confined to two years. Therefore in asking Government most respectfully to circulate this Bill for eliciting public opinion I am only asking it not to deprive itself of the opportunities which it may get for forming more considered opinion on that point. If as a result of that enquiry Government still sticks to its opinion I shall be content, because from the very start and even in the select committee we have been suggesting that the responsibility for this measure is that of the Government. Our only hope lies in asking the Government to accept our point of view based on argument and reason. If the Government will not be convinced I will not be sorry. But I submit that I have brought to the notice of the Government the history of the matter and how Government has sprung a surprise upon the province which to me appears to be utterly inconsistent with the state of affairs in the province.

In this connection I also wish to draw the attention of the Government to the minute of dissent recorded by another English gentleman, a member of the select committee on the Usurious Loans (United Provinces Amendment) Bill, Mr. E. M. Souter. He says, remarking on the rate of interest fixed by the United Provinces Committee, to which I have already referred—

During this period the "Bank Rate" has very frequently been 8 per cent. and at one time went up to 9 per cent. On loans taken from the larger Banks on an easily convertible gilt-edged security the rate of interest charged is usually 1 per cent. over Bank rate and the rate of loans secured against immoveable property is considerably higher. The proposal of the select committee would permit the re-opening of all these transactions and this would be intolerable, and the passing of such a Bill would be considered by India in particular and the world in general to be an Act of complete irresponsibility.

This is the view of an Englishman who on the proposals of the United Provinces select committee, which fixed rates of interest on secured loans, far higher than that fixed by the Punjab select committee and that now proposed by the Government. Our only hope lies in the fact that the Government experts might tell the Government that there is another point of view which should not be neglected, that in attempting to give relief on the lines now proposed you are doing something which may practically sap the credit to its foundations. In its present form I do not consider this Bill a Government Bill at all. The Government at the last moment has chosen to father it; the ways of the Government are, however, inscrutable, it may be because it could not stand the pressure from inside the Government. It may be due to the fact that our Honourable Revenue Member has recently returned from England and the attack which was only previously from outside has also commenced to be made from inside the Government. (The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: Thank you for the compliment.) The Government ought to know the intention of the persons who are responsible for the amendments in the select committee which were not those of the Government and which were not even supported by the Government. Their avowed object, the object expressed by them, was this. "We want to start with a clean slate." I am using the exact expression. It was conveyed to us in answer to a question asking for the reason for a particular provision in the Bill. The Government should understand that the cumulative effect, not of one provision, but of all these provisions, is to start with a clean slate, i.e., to wipe out the entire existing debt, at least the debt of agriculturists. If that is the policy of the Government, Government should adopt it and pursue it with open eyes but should not be led into it by oversight or by inadvertance. My own opinion is that if these provisions are rigorously enforced, they will lead to practically wiping out the entire agricultural debt. Again, what are the methods by which this clean slate process is attempted to be achieved by its protagonists? There is no doubt about them. They have been given in black and white to us by no less a body than the majority of the members of the select committee and I wish just to read out the methods which they propose to adopt. Before the Punjab Government is led into them, let them know the methods which are to be applied in achieving 'the clean slate' condition. I will read from the minute of dissent recorded by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and other members of the majority party—

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

This is in fact the same idea in a different garb. Thus the amendments which we have urged are no more than a plea for a reversion to the practice of pre-British days or the abolition of the advantages which the sahukar has obtained owing to the introduction of a more "civilised" system of law than is good for a society not sufficiently advanced for the application of British notions of law, equity and contractual obligations.

They want to definitely revert to the less civilised system of administration than we have been used to under the British rule. They want to throw to the winds, the British notions of law, equity and contractual obligations. There should be no mistake on this point and the Government before gathering the provisions of this Bill, should calmly consider the necessary implications of the various provisions of the Bill. Let me illustrate. Look at the provisions regarding conciliation boards for instance. I respectfully invite the attention of the House to these provisions and I ask if these do not bear out what they have done in the committee. Turn to clause 17. Now the previous clause 16 had a provision that if all or 60 per cent. of the creditors or to be more exact, "the creditors to whom not less than sixty per cent. of the total amount of the debtor's debts are due" were agreed on accepting a method of settlement of the debts, the conciliation board shall give effect to it and that will be carried out in spite of the protest of the other 40 per cent. and those 40 per cent. will be postponed till after the debts of the 60 per cent. are realised. Now whatever might have been said against this provision, there was a certain basis of conciliation, i.e., consensus of opinion of a certain number of creditors, be it 60 per cent. or 40 per cent. That was the sine qua non of the functioning of the conciliation boards. Now what has been done to this provision by the select committee. Instead of the 60 per cent. the select committee has substituted, "if the debtor and all or any of the creditors come to an amicable settlement, the board shall forthwith reduce such settlement to writing in the form of an agreement setting forth the amounts payable to each creditor." That is, if Rs. 10,000 are due and a creditor be he a relation or a friend wishes to collude with the debtor, he may come to an agreement with the debtor and there is no jurisdiction in the board to reject that claim. And then what are they to do? That is laid down in sub-clause (2) "An agreement thus made shall take effect as if it were a decree of a civil court having jurisdiction in the area." So that all that a debtor requires is that he has to find out one creditor with whom he can agree and then get a decree passed in his favour. There is no jurisdiction in the board to refuse this, howsoever unfair the board might consider the proposal to be. The board cannot dismiss the application. The board might think, here is this fellow colluding with the other side and here are these 99 creditors who are helpless. But the board has no jurisdiction to interfere. Now what are these 99 creditors to do? There is clause 24 which lays down, "When an application has been made to a board under section 8, no civil court shall entertain any new suit or other proceeding brought for the recovery of any debt for the settlement of which application has been made to the board and any suit or other proceeding pending before a civil court in respect of any such debt shall be suspended until the board has dismissed the application or an agreement has been made under section 17." Now, sir, the sine qua non of the other Bill was that there should be a consensus of opinion whether 60 or 40 per cent., to give a guarantee of fair-play. That has been entirely taken away and no power is left to the conciliation board to dismiss that application howsoever reasonable they might find the other creditors to be and it is left to one creditor to fix the terms of settlement. Now, what has the Government done? Government has tabled an amendment. I respectfully wish to invite the attention of the Government to this matter. It has tabled an amendment to the effect that the other debts will only be certified if 40 per cent. of the creditors have accepted the proposal. That would be no relief to any creditor because supposing the conciliation board is definitely of opinion that no fair offer has at all been made, and it is not a case for certification at all, even then, under the provisions of the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee, it is possible by collusion between one debtor and one creditor to compel everybody else to accept that settlement. Let the Government kindly ponder over it. Is this or is this not the effect? You will be pleased to observe, Sir, that when the entire property of a debtor has been taken by one creditor under an agreement made between a debtor and a colluding creditor, which must be recorded as a decree there is nothing else left with the debtor which the other 99 creditors can take howsoever just and righteous their case may be. I must say the Government—Mr. Boyd is not here—should stoutly oppose this suggestion as it was by a majority that this change was made, and in the teeth of opposition of official members. What has happened to induce the Government to accept a proposal with respect to conciliation board which is so ridiculous? The effect of the proposed amendment is that the decision does not depend upon any agreement between the creditors, not even upon the decision of the conciliation board, but it will be dictated by one creditor and a debtor and it is given the force of a decree even when the conciliation board thinks that the other creditors are perfectly right in their refusal to agree and their debts need not be certified: If this is conciliation, I respectfully ask what would be spoliation? Are you setting up spoliation boards or conciliation boards? Even the Government amendment does not meet the point at all. If the Government wishes to achieve the object which it intended then it ought to substitute 60 or 40 per cent., or whatever proportion it wants in clause 17.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

One part of this Bill which was more criticised than others was the provision with respect to conciliation boards. The Honourable Finance Member also gave a very halting support to that portion of the Bill. Our sad experience with respect to the assessment of haisiyat tax and with respect to panchayats does not justify us in assuming that 'super men' would be forthcoming in this province to settle these disputes, men whom we found to be non-existent on former occasion, but in spite of that difficulty which was pointed out by very responsible officers, the provisions as to the conciliation board have been so altered as to be made absolutely unworkable. Again, we have been told by various members that there has been legislation on indebtedness in other provinces. I have gone very carefully through all the legislations on this topic which have been enacted in other provinces or which are proposed to be enacted. I respectfully ask the Government instead of chalking out new lines let them accept and follow the Act which have been passed in other provinces and let the zamindar party also in addition enjoy the privileges which they enjoy under the Land Alienation Act and which are unique and without parallel. If any of these Acts conflicts with the Land Alienation Act, let the debtor classes continue to enjoy these privileges, although the Calvert Committee definitely recommended that some of these privileges should be cut down. I wish to make Chaudhri Chhotu Ram an offer, just to show the unreasonableness of his position. Let the Punjab Government adopt any Act which has been passed by any other province. I go further, let them have all the Acts which have been passed in the Central Provinces and Bengal and also those which are proposed to be passed in the United Provinces and I would not grudge them. But the proposals of the select committee and now supposed to be fathered by the Punjab Government are highly inequitable, and in some respects absurd. The proposals which have been now embodied in the Punjab Bill go much further than has ever been enacted in any other province or even contemplated by any other province. I have carefully read all these enactments and I measure my words when I say that even if you bodily adopted all the Acts and Bills of all other provinces on this subject you would not be going half as far as the select committee proposals. You would have something definite to follow and not the hasty and ill conceived suggestions of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram. These I submit are not the proposals of the Government but have been thrust upon the Government by certain persons. I shall wind up my speech by again imploring the Government not to shut out avenues of inquiry which are still open to it. After all we are only asking Government to circulate the Bill, we are not unaware that we can only postpone it for a few months, we do not hope that the constitution of this Council will change in these months, nor do we hope that the opinions of those members led as they are by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram are likely to be changed, nor are the creditor classes likely to gain anything by a delay of two months. All that we wish is that the Government which has changed its position so recently and so suddenly should not deny itself further opportunities for consideration because the legislation which is proposed is not a temporary piece of legislation but is intended to be a permanent feature of the constitution and also because it is really of a complicated and far reaching character, on which no one should refuse an expression of opinion (hear, hear).

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, my speech will mostly be confined to an answer of the criticism that has been offered by one member or another and I will take all the points one by one. I make a beginning with the speech of my honourable friend Mr. Labh Singh. One of his complaints was that the very composition of the select committee made it impossible that the Bill should emerge from it in a reasonable form and he said that one party was hopelessly under represented and the other party was very much over-represented. So far as I have been able to gather from a study, very cursory study certainly, of constitutional practice I feel that the select committee must reflect the strength of parties in the House itself. If I am correct, then I can show conclusively by figures that the composition of the select committee was entirely reasonable. This House consists of 91 members. There were 13 members of the select committee, that means that every unit of 7 members was entitled to one member on the select committee. So far as I can recollect from memory the strength of the parties in this House is as follows : Unionist party 37, National Reformist 23, Sikhs 14 and Government benches 18. This means that the Unionist party ought to have had 5 members on the select committee for 35 members and the Reformists ought to have 3 for 21 and Sikhs 2 for 14. Thus the only party which was slightly over-represented was the party represented by Government benches and that party so far as the proceedings of the select committee were concerned was more frequently in harmony with the urban members of the select committee than with the rural members of the committee.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I certainly like to ask your ruling on this point. The honourable members have been referring to actually what has been going on in the select committee and I think you will give a ruling as to whether the proceedings of the select committee ought not to be divulged.

Mr. President : After the report of a select committee has been presented to the House, the proceedings of the committee can be referred to in debate.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Thus it appears that the complaint made by Mr. Labh Singh is really groundless. As a matter of fact 5 or 6 of the members belonging to Mr. Labh Singh's party represent debtor classes and, if anything, money-lenders' interests were over-represented on the select committee rather than under-represented. Another complaint made by Mr. Labh Singh was that the members of the select committee representing rural interest had indulged in holding out threats that unless this legislation was passed according to their wishes certain very ugly things would happen. I repudiate that charge entirely and completely. The passage that has been quoted from the minute of the majority party does not hold out any threat. It merely makes a reference to ugly events that may in certain circumstances be expected to happen, and I think they would have been failing in their duty if they really believed that there was a reasonable possibility of any ugly incidents happening and had not given expression to that belief. The members of the rural party do not say anything more than was said by Sir John Maynard himself, a gentleman who certainly cannot be accused of being in any way hostile to the urban population. He was the very soul of justice and fairmindedness according to us all. I will just quote one sentence of what he wrote in the London Foreign Affairs, December 1927 issue. He says :—

✓[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

The exaction of usurers were limited by the dangers of popular justice.

What we have said is no more than a variation of the same idea in slightly different words. Now the situation according to our belief is really desperate and as would be indicated by the number of questions that have been put in this House there have been many cases of violence committed by debtors against their creditors long long before this legislation was contemplated. As the economic position has become very distinctly worse than it was even two years ago, it is obvious that if attempts are made to execute decrees in a manner which is harsh or which seeks to eject debtors from their houses, from their hearths and homes, from their lands there is a reasonable apprehension that violence may break out. Having that belief, that reasonable apprehension of such incidents, it would have been wrong on the part of the representatives of rural classes, if they had failed to express that belief. Another complaint that has been made by Mr. Labh Singh is that the Bill as it emerged from the select committee is in a very crude form. Well, after all, there are so many members present and judging from what we have been able to do during the last three days, it appears that this Bill will take at least ten or twelve days, and Mr. Labh Singh and his colleagues would have sufficient time to lick the Bill into a proper shape. Another complaint that was made was that the select committee's report is one of the funniest reports that Mr. Labh Singh had come across so far. I may refer my honourable friend to 5 reports made by a select committee of the United Provinces Council. Of these 5 reports all have been signed by as many as 23 members and each of these 23 members has signed it subject to a minute of dissent. So this document is not half so funny as the documents that have been produced by the legislature of a neighbouring province. I will not deal with the criticism that has been offered by Mr. Labh Singh in respect of the specific provisions of the Bill for that would be anticipating the discussion on those provisions when they come up for consideration on the floor of the House.

I will now take up the points that have been made by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri. So far as his criticism of specific provisions is concerned, I will not undertake to answer him, but those of the criticisms which are of a general character will be dealt with by me here and now. My honourable friend says that the attitude of the rural members on the select committee was so obstinate that no amendments howsoever reasonable were listened to by them. Without indulging in any lengthy defence I will just draw the attention of the House,—my honourable friend, Mr. Puri, happens to be absent at present—to clauses 10, 13, 14, 17, 18 and 25. There are very substantial additions under these clauses and those additions were made at the specific instance of the urban members of the committee. Therefore the complaint that rural members refused to listen to reason is entirely groundless. Another very serious charge was made by Mr. Puri to the effect that rural members acted in a highhanded manner—in a way dictated their terms at the point of the bayonet, that this Bill was nothing but a draft to which Government had been forced at the point of the bayonet to agree. Fortunately we had no bayonets there, and I must say that Government is sufficiently strong to resist any fear that may arise from bayonets. But there is one type of fear which Government is very seldom able to resist and that fear is that of the bania, that of the bania press, that of the bania agitation. In fact Government has always shown a greater tendency to fear banias and their noise than listen to reason or fear any bayonets from any quarter whatsoever whether they come from across the Indus or from any European country, or from China or Japan. I think Government is sufficiently strong to withstand any pressure that any section of this House may seek to bring to bear upon it. And, therefore, the charge that this Bill has really been dictated by rural members at the point of the bayonet is not only baseless and futile, but positively mischievous. There was another misstatement for which Mr. Puri made himself responsible and that misstatement was that the Bill as it stood originally, as it was introduced in the Council, did not at all contemplate any amendment of the Civil Procedure Code. He is entirely wrong. The Bill as it was originally introduced in the Council, contained two clauses which sought to amend certain provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to the arrest of a judgment-debtor. Therefore it cannot be stated that in seeking to amend the Code of Civil Procedure in certain other respects we have gone either beyond the scope of the Bill or beyond the principle that underlay the Bill. Again a grievance was sought to be made out of the fact or fiction that the Bill as it stands at present, affects townsmen also, that it affects transactions between commission agent and commission agent, between one trader and another trader. If my honourable friend had gone carefully through the provisions of this Bill—he claims to have gone through them more carefully than anybody else in the House, but I fear he has not done so—he would have found that the definition of the word “debtor” excluded any transaction between a trader and a trader, a shopkeeper and a shopkeeper. Further on, under clause 7 (1) it has been definitely stated that the word debt will not include any loans made for purpose of trade. Therefore the complaint that was put forward by Mr. Puri on this score was entirely wrong. He also made a reference to the rates of interest. But this matter I do not wish to touch here because these rates will come under discussion when the relevant clauses are reached. There was one aspect of this question, however, in relation to which Mr. Puri made himself responsible for an inaccurate statement. He thought that the proposals of the United Provinces Government contained rates of interest in certain schedules which still stood. He is entirely wrong. The fresh proposals that have been made by that Government—I am sure I am right—have dropped those schedules. Those schedules are no more part of the proposals which were submitted by the Government of the United Provinces to the Council.

Mr. Puri also instituted a comparison between the rates of interest allowed under the proposals in the United Provinces, under the proposals of Bengal, Central Provinces and so on. I must make it absolutely clear that the economic conditions, social conditions and other conditions which prevail in the Punjab are materially different from the conditions which prevail in the United Provinces or in the Central Provinces or in Bengal. Here you have to deal with a sturdy independent peasantry which is self-respecting, which is owner of its own lands and which certainly occupies a position in society which the ordinary cultivators of either the United Provinces or the Central Provinces or Bihar or Bengal do not occupy. Then there is another very important factor which distinguishes the Punjab population from the population of other provinces and that factor is that the Punjab earns a good deal from service in the Army which is not open to the population of other provinces. And that raises the economic and social position of the Punjab peasant and places him in a much stronger position, economically speaking, than men of the same type in other provinces. He enjoys a much higher credit than a man of corresponding position in other provinces does. Then there is a third factor which is so liable to be ignored by many people, that is, the Land Alienation Act. As a matter of fact, an entirely perverse view is taken of the effect which the Land Alienation Act has had on credit. The representatives of the money-lending interests have always decried the Land Alienation Act on the ground that it has sought to interfere with the credit of the land-owners. It may have been designed to produce that effect. But the effect that has actually been produced is different from that which was intended. It has not restricted the credit of the peasant proprietor or any land-owner. The reason is obvious. Every money-lender in the Punjab knows that so far as agricultural land is concerned, it cannot be snatched away from a land-owner and therefore he is permanently in possession of a source of livelihood which may be destroyed under similar circumstances in other provinces. This assurance, the assurance that an ordinary land-owner in the Punjab will continue to be owner of his land and will continue to have a source of income which is so unreliable in other provinces, really places the land-owner here in a much stronger position than he is in other provinces. Therefore to institute comparisons in respect of the rates of interest between Bengal or the United Provinces on the one hand and the Punjab on the other is both fallacious and misleading. The rate of interest in the Punjab has always been distinctly lower than the rates which prevail across the Jumna in the United Provinces. Therefore any rates that may have been adopted by the United Provinces Government are no guide, should be no guide, to the rates which ought to be adopted in the Punjab. Mr. Puri also made a reference to the rates of interest which are charged by banks of very good standing in Lahore on secured loans and he said that no member of this House can obtain a loan on the security of very good immovable property at less than 9 per cent. Well, if these are the rates charged by respectable banks, banks of very good standing in Lahore, I can only say that they are very, very usurious indeed and ought to be lowered. If men in the position of members of this House on the security of immovable property are unable to raise loans except at a minimum rate of 9 per cent. I should certainly consider that rate very usurious, unconscionable, and it ought to be brought down. In private life individuals not perhaps half so rich or not half so respectable and not possessing half the property which many members of this House possess can secure loans at 6 per cent. without offering any security. If this is the condition, if this is the state of things in private life in other parts of the Punjab I think ✓ Lahore banks ought to be brought round to a more reasonable frame of mind.

[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

The honourable member, Mr. Puri, also made a reference to a remark which he thought had been made by some of us to the effect that what we wish to achieve by this legislation is to start with a clean slate. I think he is under a misapprehension. I remember having used that expression but that expression was not used by me as from myself, but I quoted a few sentences from a resolution of the Bar Association of Rohtak, a unanimous resolution of a bar association of which the president is a bania, and the secretary is also a bania. It was from that resolution that I quoted just a couple of sentences. It is there that the expression occurs. At least I do not remember having used that expression myself nor do I remember any member of my own party having used this expression.

There was some criticism of the methods which Mr. Mukand Lal thinks we have advocated in order to secure that state in which 6 P. M. we can make a beginning with a clean slate. He quoted a sentence from our report which I will read over again.

In pre-British days the arrest of a judgment-debtor and the sale of his land, or house or bullocks were practically unknown.

(A voice: Who told you?) I know it myself. I have heard it from those who are better informed than you are or you can possibly be—

Moreover, the need of the good-will and sympathy of his clientele to the sahukar in troubled times acted as a very strong and effective sanction against rapacity or undue harshness on his part. Writing in the December (1927) issue of "London Foreign Affairs," Sir John Maynard observes that 'the exactions of the usurer were limited by the dangers of popular justice.' This is, in fact the same idea in a different garb. Thus the amendments which we have urged are no more than a plea for a reversion to the practice of pre-British days or the abolition of the advantages which the sahukar has obtained owing to the introduction of a more 'civilised' system of law than is good for a society not sufficiently advanced for the application of British notions of law, equity and contractual obligations.

So far as my information goes—and I think it may be regarded as fairly accurate—it is this that there was no system in pre-British days to have anybody's land or houses or bullocks sold (A voice: Question) and even in actual practice no money-lender sought to deprive any of his debtors of his house or of his land or of his liberty. It is true that cattle were some times sold by the debtor to the sahukar himself or somebody else and the money paid to him. But in pre-British days this inequitable system of depriving debtors of the means of their livelihood in execution of their decrees was not recognised either in law or in practice, and we simply want that those old relations between the debtors and the sahukars may be restored in which the debtor will make every possible attempt to pay and the money-lender will not be heartless and devoid of all feeling as the introduction of the present 'civilised' system has tended to make him. (Mr. Labh Singh: You are drawing upon your imagination).

At this stage the Council adjourned till 2 P. M. on Thursday the 1st November 1934.

828

PRINTED BY

THE SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRINTING, PUNJAB.

156 PLC-525-29-11-34-SOPP Lahore.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Thursday, 1st November 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2 P. M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Mr. President : The Council will now resume discussion on the motion of Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath for the circulation of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill as reported by the select committee for eliciting public opinion.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadian, Rural) : Sir, one of the defects which was pointed out by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri was that under the Bill as it stands, if a bogus creditor comes to a collusive settlement with the debtor it may have the effect of depriving all the other creditors of any chance of getting their decrees executed against the debtor. He stated that if a bogus creditor to whom say about Rs. 500 are owed by the debtor comes to an agreement with the debtor that this money will be paid by instalments of Rs. 50 a year, spread over a period of ten years or by the alienation of the whole of his property, the remaining creditors are entirely deprived of any chances of getting anything from the debtor. No doubt that may be a defect in the Bill. But that is also a defect of the law as it stands to-day. Suppose a bogus creditor files a claim against a debtor and the debtor confesses judgment. The courts have absolutely no discretion to refuse to make a decree in favour of the plaintiff.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : But the other creditors can also obtain decrees. They are not estopped under the present law.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : If I am to be interrupted at every sentence, I fear I may not be able to finish my speech as soon as I would wish to. I was saying that so far as the law of compromise is concerned, it is exactly the same now as it will be under this Bill. The courts have absolutely no discretion to refuse to pass a decree if judgment is confessed by the defendant. I will quote a very funny instance of this law. I do not remember the exact details but there was a case in which an illegitimate person desired to have the land of his father mutated in his favour. That case somehow went up to the Financial Commissioner who held on facts that the claimant was born three years after the death of his supposed father, therefore he was an illegitimate child and the land belonging to the father could not be mutated in his favour. He went to the civil court and filed a civil suit. The other party came to some sort of a settlement with him out of court and confessed judgment. The court passed a decree upholding the status of legitimacy claimed by the person.

[R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.]

who was born three years after the death of his father. This is an instance of the law as it stands to-day. This Bill does not do anything approaching that. In certain cases this Bill gives a fair amount of discretion to the board to refuse to accept any arrangement if the board believes that it is intended to defraud other creditors. I will just draw the attention of the House to clause 17. The proviso reads—

Provided that if the Board is unanimously of the opinion that the period fixed for payment is excessive, the Board may refuse to authenticate the agreement.

Here in spite of the agreement having been reached between the debtor and the creditor the board has discretion to refuse to authenticate that agreement, while the general law as it stands gives no discretion to the court if a defendant comes into court and confesses judgment, however anomalous the results of that confession of judgment on the part of the defendant may be.

Mr. Puri indulged in a very severe tirade against the official members in connection with the change in the rate of interest from 12 per cent. in the original Bill to 8 per cent. in the amendments which have been tabled by Government. He asked, "What had happened in between to induce the official members to change their angle of vision so violently within such a short time?" I am not in the confidence of official members but some facts may have come to their notice which induced them to make this change. I will draw the attention of this House to two or three instances which may very well have the effect of inducing the members of any Government to make the changes sought to be made by the Government by means of their amendments. One instance was quoted by Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit in which, as he stated, a Jat creditor had been able to secure a decree of nearly Rs. 7,000 for an original amount of Rs. 23, or Rs. 223, it does not matter which. I may give another instance of an unfortunate zamindar who struck a balance of Rs. 500 in respect of his debts in the bahi of a creditor in the Attock district in 1882. In lieu of this balance that zamindar mortgaged nearly 3,000 kanals of his land with the creditor with the stipulation that the profits from land would be regarded as equal to interest on Rs. 200 and the remaining Rs. 300 would carry interest at the rate of 25 per cent. per annum. Neither this unfortunate zamindar nor his successor in interest was able to redeem this land, until two or three years ago when a suit for redemption was filed in court. The mortgagee insisted that he must have his pound of flesh under the bond and that pound of flesh gave him no less than 2 lakhs of rupees in interest alone. The subordinate court gave a decree that the successor in interest of the zamindar who had mortgaged his land in 1882 would be entitled to redeem the land mortgaged only on payment of Rs. 2,10,000 and no less. The man thought that the decree was given, perhaps, under some misapprehension of law by the subordinate court and went up to the High Court in appeal. The High Court decided the case only two or three days ago. The decision was to the effect that the plaintiff could not redeem his land unless he was prepared to pay Rs. 2,10,000. That is how the law stands at present. Nobody can say that the law has been interpreted wrongly. After all the High Court is the highest authority on the interpretation of law. The law as it stands has enabled a creditor to exact as much as Rs. 2,10,000 for a sum of Rs. 300 which was in its turn a remnant of an old debt. When such intolerable things happen under the law, I think any sane Government would try to see that the rates of interest are so regulated that they will not produce such heartless results. I do not know whether the official members had any instance of this character in view when they tabled their amendments. But their amendments would seem to be perfectly justified by the instances which I have quoted to the House.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri also took very dire offence at my attempt to get section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code amended suitably. One of my amendments relates to this section. By this amendment I have tried to define the word "occupation" in a manner which I think would result in safeguarding the interests of the judgment debtor effectively. Whether it will have that effect or not remains to be seen, but my object is clear. The reason why I have been induced to insist upon that amendment may also interest the House. There have been cases in which it has been held that a widow because she cannot cultivate or till her land with her own hands, is not to be regarded as an agriculturist under section 60. On the same analogy a minor or an infant who is unable to till his land with his own hands will not be regarded as an agriculturist under section 60. I am not drawing simply upon my own imagination for such a happening. To illustrate that the interpretation of the present section 60 produces such queer results, I will draw the attention of the House to a ruling of the High Court of 1926 or 1927. In this ruling it was laid down that a man belonging to an agricultural tribe who had no other source of livelihood than agriculture would not be regarded as an agriculturist for purposes of section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code if he did not till his land with his own hands. In this particular case the reason why he was not able to till his own land was that he was a cripple. That is admitted in the judgment. In spite of the fact that the judgment-debtor was a cripple and had no other source of livelihood than agriculture, the law as it stands compelled the judge to hold that the judgment debtor could not be given the benefit of section 60. I quoted this ruling in the select committee and one of the urban members of the select committee exclaimed, "a judge of that type should be dismissed." Of course he did not know who the judge was. But that was an exclamation which came from him involuntarily, almost instinctively.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What is the number and page of that ruling ?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am afraid I cannot give the number and page just at present. I left my papers at my place and if the honourable member so desires I can supply him this information later.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I asked for the reference in the select committee and was not given any information although I did not express that hasty opinion.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I had this ruling with me when this point came up before the select committee. It was never challenged by anybody then. I may be able to get hold of it to-morrow.

Then there are other instances. If an agriculturist has two houses then the courts generally say that two houses are not necessary for him and, therefore, one of the houses may be sold. If a judgment-debtor owns only one house, then the court says, the house is too big for his needs and, therefore, half the house may be auctioned.

[R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.]

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Have you got an instance of that type?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Many, not one.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Quote chapter and verse.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : It is difficult to get hold of copies at a minute's notice. If my honourable friends care to go to Rohtak I can give them any number of copies of such orders. Now I happen to be armed with the details of at least one case where I shall be able to satisfy the curiosity of my friends representing moneylending interests. Everybody knows that whatever the number of houses owned by an agriculturist, if they are occupied by him as an agriculturist, they are immune from attachment under section 60. His bullocks are also immune from attachment under the same section. His land is not immune from attachment, but it cannot be sold. Here I have got in my hand a notice in original in which a learned sub-judge of my own district has seen fit to issue an injunction restraining the defendant from alienating the property specified here :—

” دو منزلہ مکان - اراضی زرعی - در اس بیل ”

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What does it mean?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I think if my honourable friends just wait, I will tell them what this notice means. The meaning is clear. There is no doubt in the mind of anybody about the meaning. It is that pending the result of the case against him, the judgment-debtor should not be in a position to alienate his houses; he should not be in a position to alienate his agricultural land; he should not be in a position to sell his bullocks. So far as agricultural land is concerned, I admit that if a court issues a notice of that character, it is justified. But so far as houses are concerned, so far as bullocks are concerned, courts should certainly not issue any injunction because these things are exempt from attachment under section 60. If subordinate courts take this view of the law will it be anything wrong if the representatives of the debtor classes desire to see that law amended.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It is a perfectly correct order which any sub-judge can pass and should pass.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Yes, under the law as it stands, and we want to see that that law is changed.

Mr. Labh Singh : What happened in that case eventually?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I do not know. Here is an indication of the temper of subordinate judges at present. That temper must be curbed in some way or other. If nothing else will succeed let the law be changed in such a manner that these gentlemen will not have the kind of discretion which they think they have now and which they have so glaringly abused. (Interruption.) Nothing can satisfy my friends.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What has the learned sub-judge done?

Mr. President : The honourable member has no right to make a second speech and he should not make these interruptions.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am merely asking him a question. The honourable member is criticising the conduct of a sub-judge who is posted in his district of Rohtak. What has the sub-judge done more than asking a party to a suit not to alienate his property for a short time pending the disposal of the suit? Has the sub-judge done anything more than this?

Mr. President : Does the honourable member contend that he has done anything more? If so, this is his second speech, which I cannot allow.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Any way I have given an answer which ought to satisfy a normally minded person. I am sorry to find that the occupants of those benches seem to suffer from some sort of abnormality which prevents them from seeing the view point of the other party.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : May I draw the attention of the honourable member, through you, Sir, to Article 59, sub-clause (2) (ii), which says :

The matter of every speech shall be strictly relevant to the matter before the Council.

(2) A member while speaking shall not—

(ii) reflect upon the conduct of any court of justice in the exercise of its judicial functions.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am very sorry.

Mr. President : The honourable member should withdraw all that he has said.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : And more especially with respect to the judge in whose jurisdiction he is himself practising.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : That makes no difference at all. However, I am sorry for having infringed the rule quoted whether the infringement is in respect of a judge of my own district or in respect of any other judge. I am very sorry that I seem to have offended against the rules, I withdraw my observations with the greatest pleasure and with apologies to Mr. Puri and to the judge who issued this notice.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am much obliged for your attitude.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I was coming to the other points of criticism offered during the course of the debate. Now one of the points of criticism related to the agreement of our party to the deletion of clauses 86, 87 and 88. I will explain the reasons which induced me to agree on behalf of my party to a deletion of these clauses. I understood from the Member-in-Charge that the terms in which sanction of the Government of India had been received were such that it was advisable for us not to insist upon an incorporation of these clauses in the Bill at present. In fact any such insistence would have meant re-circulation or in other words indefinite postponement, if not death, of the Bill. Secondly, the consideration of the new clause on which the High Court had had no opportunity of expressing its views, would appear like an act of discourtesy to the High Court. Well, Sir, we had no desire to give any legitimate cause of offence either to the High Court or to place the Member-in-Charge in a position which would seem to militate against the terms in which the sanction of the Government of India was couched. Along with these things there was a further consideration which induced me to come to this arrangement. A quid pro quo was offered to us in so far as Government agreed to provide us all the necessary facilities for a private Bill incorporating these clauses and any other clauses which we may think necessary. Of course the Government was careful to make its position clear by saying that the promise of provision of facilities did not mean that Government would support the clauses which may be incorporated in the new Bill. Those clauses would naturally be discussed on their own merits when they came before the Council. These were the considerations which induced me to agree to a deletion of the last three clauses.

✓[R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.]

There seems to have been also a good deal of misapprehension with regard to the exact scope and character of the Bill. It has been hinted that it is a Bill which may have a communal back-ground. I am glad to say that that particular accusation has not so far been brought forward by the members of the National Reform Party. One or two members of my own party thought that an attack of that kind might come from the benches opposite and in their impatience to meet that attack and to anticipate that charge they made a reference to it. But I am glad to note that no such accusation has proceeded from the other side. We may therefore, assume, that there is nothing communal about it. However, one unpleasant notion which seems to have been troubling the occupants of the benches opposite is that this measure has been conceived in the interests of zamindars as against non-zamindars. There I differ from my friends. This measure has not been conceived in the interests of zamindars as such or against the interests of non-zamindars as such. If a zamindar happens to be indebted he gets the benefit of this Bill all right, but not as a zamindar, he does so because he is a debtor. Therefore, it is a measure which has been conceived in the interests of a debtor as distinguished from a zamindar. Mr. Labh Singh trotted out another grievance that this measure was a caste measure. We tried to anticipate this objection also. While we were sitting in the select committee we tried our best to make the Bill one of general application so that all distinction of zamindar and non-zamindar, Hindu and Muslim, urban and rural, may be eliminated, and every debtor whatever his residence, whatever his religion, and whatever his caste, may have the benefit of the Bill within the limits prescribed therein. But our proposal was fought tooth and nail by the representatives of urban interests in the select committee. So, if it remains a caste measure—which I am far from admitting—it is not our fault. It is the fault of those who represented moneylending interests on the select committee. However, I admit that it is a class measure in that it affords some relief to those who are indebted against moneylenders. But it would be impossible to pass a legislation with the object of benefitting the hard pressed debtor classes and yet to take it out of the category of class legislation. Class legislation sometimes becomes necessary. The present Bill is an offspring of sheer necessity, necessity for the protection of those who are heavily indebted. But it is not a caste measure at all. My friends' complaint was that it was a caste measure, not a class measure which he could tolerate. But it is not a caste measure as I will show presently. It is not a caste measure because in the first instance moneylenders are not drawn from a single caste. There are money-lenders who are Muslims, there are money-lenders who are Hindus, there are money-lenders who are Sikhs, there are money-lenders who are Pathans, there are money-lenders who are Khojas, there are money-lenders who are beoparies, there are money-lenders who are jats, there are money-lenders who are gujjars, and there are money-lenders who are Gaur Brahmins.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What is the number of Muslim and Hindu money-lenders ?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : But the law in principle seeks to protect those who are indebted against money-lenders' rapacity, irrespective of the caste of the debtor or the creditor. Therefore, it cannot be said that this measure is a caste measure. It is certainly a class measure as I have freely admitted. He also made a reference to the amendments which have been tabled by us and from those amendments it seems he has assumed that it is going to be a caste measure. But the Bill, as it stands, is not a caste measure. Whether it will be a caste measure after these amendments have been carried, if they are carried, at all, that is a different thing. What we are at present concerned with is to decide whether this Bill as it has emerged from the select committee, should or should not be taken into consideration. We cannot take at this stage, cognizance of any amendments that have been notified. They may or may not be moved, and if moved, they may or may not be passed by this House. There are amendments which have been notified by the members representing money-lenders' interests or urban interests in this House. If these amendments are carried it would cease to be a caste measure or a class measure or even a measure of the slightest relief to anybody. Therefore, we can take cognizance of the Bill only as it stands and not of the Bill as it may be after it has been passed. We do not know whether it is going to be passed at all.

Mr. Labh Singh : Any understanding ?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : There has been no understanding. My friend is over-suspicious and he thinks there must be some sort of understanding about everything. There has been no understanding of any sort or kind.

I was making a reference to amendments. We have sent in notices of amendments requiring that if the definition of the word "debtor" is not improved so as to make the Bill one of general application then in order to remove ambiguity, vagueness and indefiniteness which give courts a discretion which has proved disastrous to debtor classes, certain specific classes may be mentioned in the body of the Bill so that in respect of those classes at least there may be no room for vagueness or doubt or indefiniteness. But these amendments will come in only if the amendment for making the law of general and universal application fails. The only object which we had in view in giving notice of these amendments was that if we fail in our first attempt, we may have specified a certain number of classes with respect to which the courts may not have any discretion at all which is so liable to be misused. Those classes consist of statutory agricultural tribes about which there can be no doubt and depressed classes which I think have already been specified by Government or will be specified very shortly. Apart from this we have one general provision in the Bill, that, is, anybody who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture will be a beneficiary under this measure. Therefore, the mere fact that we shall try to specify certain tribes in respect of whom the element of doubt of indefiniteness may be removed does not make the Bill a caste measure at all.

[R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.]

Now I may come to the question whether it is desirable, whether it is necessary, that this Bill should be re-circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion. An argument was built upon a suggestion of the select committee that the Bill should be republished. So far as that recommendation of the select committee is concerned it has already been carried out.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: I want you to go a step further.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath wanted to go a step further and based his recommendation for that further step on the recommendation of the select committee, that the select committee had thought it necessary that the Bill be republished in order to give the public an opportunity of expressing their opinion on the Bill as it had emerged from the select committee. My answer to that criticism is that if those three clauses had not been in the Bill as it emerged from the select committee, the select committee would certainly have refrained from making any recommendation for republishing the Bill, because any republication would have been considered entirely unnecessary at all.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: What about clauses 35 and 36?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: I have already stated that in view of the deletion of the three clauses which were entirely new, recirculation becomes unnecessary. Then, again, let us not forget what would be the result of recirculation. Do we really wish that there should be another period of bitter controversy in the Press? Does it really help anybody, either the creditor or the debtor, that this bitter controversy should be going on in the Press and on the platform once again? I am glad that so far as the creditors and debtors are concerned they do not really care for this bitterness. They would try to avoid it if it could be avoided. But those who know nothing about the conditions which prevail in the countryside, those who know very little about the wishes of the exact people who deal in money-lending, are pressing for a recirculation so that there may be another period of bitter controversy. This motion if carried may satisfy the desire or itching of a certain type of people for making speeches or writing in the Press for which I myself have a great weakness, but it will not really do any good to anybody whatsoever. If an interval is allowed, even an interval of two months or six weeks, then, as one of the honourable members representing rural interests pointed out, courts would be simply flooded with new suits. Will it do any good to encourage an abnormal increase in litigation at a time when both the creditor and the debtor are feeling the pinch of economic depression? (An honourable member: What about the lawyers?) Let them die out. Then, relief in order to be of any value ought to be immediate, ought to be as quick as possible. We have been waiting, waiting and waiting until the creditor and the debtor are both disgusted with the delay that has already occurred. The creditors feel that there should be some decision, it does not matter what it is, whether to their interest or to their detriment, but it is much better that they should know what is going to happen than the suspense in which they have been placed owing to the dilatory tactics employed by some among ourselves. Any further delay would make the debtor in particular feel very impatient. He has been hoping that Government would intervene and there might be some mitigation of his economic troubles. If the Government were again to agree to a motion for circulation, he would get discouraged, disappointed and such slight faith as he still has in the goodwill of the Government would be weakened further if it does not disappear entirely. That result again is one which should be deprecated by all of us.

I have not been able to understand the reasonableness of the opposition. Such capable men, men with a vision, men with a very clear understanding, men with talents of a high order, have been opposing the Bill in a manner which does not reflect any credit on their mentality. I personally feel that it is nothing short of prostitution of talent to offer such opposition to a Bill of this character. After all, what are the issues involved? Whom are they fighting for and whom are they trying to injure by their fight and bitter opposition? If this Bill harms anybody it will harm only the money-lenders. The money-lenders are only 40,000 in number, of whom, according to the admission of urban members themselves, as many as 19,000 are zamindars and agriculturists. Thus so far as their own class is concerned only 21,000 individuals are affected. Is it worthwhile, is it appropriate, that in the interests of 21,000 men or even in the interests of 40,000 individuals there should be this determined opposition to this Bill? Have they ever cared to estimate the effect which their opposition would have on the feelings of those 90 per cent. of the population who are groaning under this burden of debt? Let them not forget that they are not the only people who are Hindus. They are not the only people who have a fellow feeling for the creditor classes. But even those who are in sympathy with money-lenders favour an early measure of relief. I was able to quote certain opinions which went to show that even those who were themselves creditors or had the interests of creditors at heart had supported this Bill. But suppose there had been no support of that character, is it wise, is it sane, is it politic on the part of these few urban members to oppose a Bill which has been conceived in the interest of roughly 90 per cent. of the population? At the present day I do not think less than 90 per cent. of the population is in debt. The percentage may be a little higher, it is certainly not lower than that. Ninety per cent. of the population—what does that mean? The population of the Punjab is 235 lakhs. Ninety per cent. of this would be 212 lakhs. Is it fair, is it consistent with the dictates of humanity that in the interests of 40,000 individuals there should be this incessant fight, this determined opposition in preference to the interests of 212 lakhs of people? Let us not forget that our duty is first to the weak and not to the strong. Our duty is first to the poor and not to the rich. What are these gentlemen doing? They have been trying to promote and safeguard the interests of those who are strong enough to safeguard their own interests. They have been trying to help those who do not stand in need of their help and they have been trying to frustrate the object of a legislation which is meant for the benefit of 90 per cent. of the population which has been groaning under a crushing burden of debt, which cannot get two square meals a day. How they have been able to persuade themselves to oppose the motion for consideration I have simply failed to understand. It has been admitted on all hands that the burden of land revenue is too heavy to be borne by the agriculturist under present conditions. This is a point which has been conceded by all the members who have spoken from the benches opposite. Some of them, either here or in the press or on the platform, have advocated that the burden of land revenue should be decreased by at least fifty per cent. Just compare the burden of land revenue and the burden of the interest that accrues annually. The burden of land revenue annually is about Rs. 3 crores. On the average of the last four years I have calculated that it is a little less than Rs. 3 crores, in land revenue proper. Just imagine what the burden of annual interest alone is. We are all agreed that the total debt burden in the Punjab is not less than Rs. 200 crores. It may be more. (An honourable member : How much of it on agriculturists ?) This Bill, as I have stated over and over again, does not make any distinction between agriculturists and non-agriculturists. It is a Bill meant for the protection of debtors, and debtors include both agriculturists and non-agriculturists. (An honourable member : But land revenue applies only to agriculturists). Anyway, my friend, can ask somebody when he gets an opportunity, to contradict me on this point. There is no getting away from the fact that the burden of land revenue is Rs. 3 crores only and there is no getting away from the fact that the annual burden of interest is at a modest rate of 15 per cent. no less than Rs. 30 crores. We are fixing this 15 per cent. rate of interest as one which will be perfectly legitimate. Anything higher than that may be regarded as excessive according to our amendments and according to the view of Government a rate which is anything up to 18½ per cent. will not be regarded as excessive. So on an average if we calculate interest at 15 per cent. per annum the total annual burden on interest alone will be no less than 30 crores of rupees. If a burden of Rs. 3 crores is too high to be borne can anybody seriously suggest that a burden of as much as Rs. 30 crores can be borne easily ? And if there is need for a reduction of at least 50 per cent. in the burden of land revenue can anybody deny that there is a far greater need of reducing the deadweight of interest in a far greater degree ? If land revenue must be decreased by 50 per cent. what should be the measure in which a burden of Rs. 30 crores annually should be reduced ? Let honourable members calculate for themselves. Only an anna and a half in the rupee, of this burden should be allowed to stand. If you apply the principle of reduction to the Government dues there is no reason why you should not be prepared to apply the same principle to your own dues. Then, again, Government gave remissions to the extent of Rs. 6 crores during the last four years in various ways. Government has also agreed to an annual reduction of over Rs. 37 lakhs in abiana. Have the money-lenders or their representatives in this Council come forward with any offer, even approaching what has already been done by Government ? No. Then, again, Government has a formula under consideration which I understand has already been applied to the settlement in the Montgomery district. That formula is that prices of agricultural produce should be reflected in the annual land revenue. If that formula is accepted by Government and also receives the sanction of this House—I hope and believe that that formula will be placed before this House—then I think the zamindars will have another advantage allowed by Government in view of the existing economic conditions. So far as money-lenders are concerned or their accredited representatives are concerned they have not said one word in what way they are going to give relief to the debtors. It is all very well to say that this provision is wrong, or that provision is wicked, or a third provision is nefarious. But have they made a single constructive suggestion in order to show in what particular manner they want that this debt burden should be reduced? Their position has been as usual one of a negative character, barren, sterile. They have not put forward any constructive proposal with regard to the manner in which this burden should be reduced. There was just one suggestion by Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit, which I will examine when I come to his speech. (A voice: When will you finish? You took two hours the other day and to-day you have already spoken for an hour.) Probably to-day and possibly to-morrow. If I say anything irrelevant then it will be time for the honourable members to stand up and draw the attention of the Chair. I think I have every right to reply to the criticism which was so copiously offered by the representatives of urban interests.

✓ [R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.]

S P. M.

Sir, may I add that the Punjab is not the only province which has undertaken this legislation, and the Punjab is not the only place where the people have been compelled by economic conditions to plead inability to pay their debts in full. Most powerful nations, most prosperous countries have had to plead their inability to pay their debts. Even in international affairs countries such as England, Germany, Italy and France have expressed their inability to meet their obligations to the United States or other countries. If such powerful nations, if such prosperous countries as I have named have been compelled to plead inability to pay, it should not surprise anybody if the Punjab debtor also pleads the same.

Again, the Punjab is not the only province where legislation to afford relief to the debtor classes has been undertaken. Bengal has already passed some sort of legislation. The Central Provinces have already passed some sort of legislation, and I understand another legislation is now under contemplation. The United Provinces legislature has as many as five Bills under consideration. They will be taken up on the 12th and will be passed before Sir Malcolm Hailey leaves the shores of this country.

Again, the province of Madras passed a law in order to afford protection to the debtor classes about a week ago and I may give an unpleasant bit of news to my urban friends here that among the five Bills which will be considered by the United Provinces legislature one is the Land Alienation Bill.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : It is very different from our Act.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Because conditions are so materially different in the two provinces.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : We will welcome that Bill. By all means substitute that Bill for our present Act. We shall gladly accept it.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Now let us take the instance of countries which are more free and more independent than we are.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Do you mean Zanzibar ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I mean British Colonies and British Dominions. Seven of the colonies and dominions of the British Commonwealth have passed legislation to give protection to the debtor and relief, in some cases relief of a kind which possibly may startle Raja Sahib. (Interruption.) A restriction has been imposed upon the rights of creditors or upon the powers of courts to attach land. (Interruption.) I was saying that as many as seven colonies of the British Commonwealth have already passed legislation in order to afford relief to debtors and they are Victoria, New South Wales, South Australia, Tasmania, Western Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. (A voice : We will follow their example in full.) If Raja Sahib is powerful enough to reproduce the economic conditions which prevail in those dominions, I have no objection to having that legislation, but if Raja Sahib is unable to reproduce those conditions here I am afraid legislation in this province must conform to the conditions which prevail in this province. We cannot copy South Australia, we cannot copy South Africa because we are not in a position to establish here economic conditions which prevail there. I will read just one sentence from a booklet which I have in my hand which, if my interpretation of that sentence is correct, ought to startle Raja Sahib.

Hire purchase implements or chattels when used are to be paid for on the basis of 20 per cent. of value or 20 per cent. of amount owing whichever is less, with interest of 5 per cent.

This is in New South Wales. If it means, as I think it does, that only 20 per cent. of the face value should be paid to the man who sells goods on hire purchase system, then I think it is much more generous than anything contemplated here so far. If Raja Sahib accepts 20 per cent. of the amount of debts that are owed by the people, perhaps there may be a fairly large proportion of debtors who may be agreeable to pay. (An honourable member : I doubt it, Chaudhri Sahib.)

Another objection which was raised by more than one member was that this Bill is intended really to benefit big landholders. I do not know whether those gentlemen were entirely ignorant of the contents of this Bill or they were aware of the provisions of the Bill and yet thought it fit to put forward this argument. If they had just looked at certain clauses of the Bill they would have found that the object of this Bill is not to benefit big land-holders but to help those who are comparatively small landholders or those who are entirely landless. I will draw the attention of the honourable members who put forward that objection to clauses 3 and 4 of the Bill as it stands. Do they seriously think that these two clauses are intended to benefit big landholders ? They are restricted in their application to those whose debts amount to Rs. 250 or more and the value of whose property does not exceed Rs. 1,500. Can anybody suggest that this is a provision which is intended for the benefit of big landlords ? Certainly not, and yet in spite of the presence of these provisions in the Bill member after member arose from those benches and said that this Bill was designed to benefit only big landholders and that there was some sort of a conspiracy or an alliance, holy or unholy, between Government members and big landholders.

I may, in this connection, also draw the attention of the House to a limit of debts which can be dealt with by the conciliation boards. Government has proposed that a debtor in order to be able to come before a conciliation board should not owe ordinarily more than Rs. 10,000. Can it be said that this provision is intended to benefit big landholders? Certainly those people who own Rs. 10,000 or less cannot be classed as big landholders. Do any of these gentlemen really believe that any man occupying any respectable position in life would care to come before a conciliation board for a debt of Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 15,000 or even Rs. 20,000? No. (An honourable member: Are you really serious?) Absolutely. I am sure that respectable people will not go before these conciliation boards for debts of Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 15,000. Do you really think that a respectable man occupying a high position and claiming to be a big land-lord will ever go before a conciliation board for the settlement of a debt of Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 15,000? Certainly not.

Then, again, there is a provision relating to the amendment of the Redemption of Mortgages Act. There the amendment seeks to ensure that if the land mortgaged does not exceed 50 acres and the amount of mortgage money does not exceed Rs. 5,000 then a mortgagor can claim the benefit of summary proceedings for purposes of redemption. This, again, is an indication that the Bill is not meant for the benefit of big landholders. With these provisions contained in the Bill it should not have been difficult for the representatives of money-lending interests in the House to understand that the Bill was really intended for the benefit of comparatively smaller landholders and smaller people.

Another general objection which was put forward by many members was that if this Bill is passed into law it will inflict a shattering blow to the credit of debtor classes. They drew the attention of the House to the omission of the words "and the improvement of agrarian credit." These words were omitted in the select committee deliberately and not accidentally. We insisted that those words should be removed because so far as our intention was concerned we were not out to improve the credit of the agriculturist classes by this Bill. We wanted this Bill and we still want this Bill to have the effect of restricting credit. An agriculturist, generally speaking, enjoys a credit which should not be extended to him. His credit, for some reason or other, has been artificially inflated and that has proved his ruin. That has proved his curse. Therefore, so far as rural members were concerned their object was by this legislation to secure a curtailment of the credit of agriculturist classes. (Interruption.) Now, in order to save the agriculturist or other people of his class, other people who are in a similar position, from the clutches of the money-lender it is absolutely essential that their credit should be further restricted. It was pointed out by certain members that the Land Alienation Act had already had the effect of restricting the credit of the agriculturist and that if the agriculturist members of this House were so foolish as to have this legislation passed, the credit of their class would be entirely gone. Whether the credit of the agriculturist would disappear entirely or partially, and if partially to what extent, it is very difficult to predict. But we wish that there should be some further curtailment of his credit. The Land Alienation Act has had the effect of enhancing the credit of agricultural classes. I do not know whether the original sponsors of that measure intended or did not intend to restrict the credit of agricultural classes, but the effect is that this legislation has very considerably enhanced the credit of statutory agricultural classes. I will tell the House why. The result may appear as paradoxical, but it is there. This alienation of Land Act, as I submitted day before yesterday, gives an element of stability to the economic position of an agriculturist in the Punjab which is lacking in every other province. On account of this element of stability in the economic position of the zamindar he enjoys an amount of credit which should not have been extended to him. Therefore a curtailment of the credit of the zamindar class has become necessary, and if this Bill results in that curtailment, as we wish that it should do, it would be quite welcome to the members of agricultural classes who occupy these benches.

✓[R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.]

Again, I heard from our opponents two sets of arguments which seem to me to be destructive of each other. The two are incompatible with each other. On the one hand Raja Sahib, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, Mr. Labh Singh and Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit, each one of them said, "What is the use of passing this legislation? Suppose you are able to relieve the debtor of his debts to-day, to-morrow he will run into debt again." This was one argument. The other argument was that if this Bill was passed into law, it would entirely shatter the credit of agricultural class. If this Bill has the effect of entirely shattering the credit of agricultural classes, how can that class run into debt again? The credit of the class is gone! Therefore one of these arguments must necessarily be unsound. Either one is sound and the other is not or both are unsound, but both cannot be sound.

Another controversial point was introduced by Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit who stated that the agriculturist members of this House wish that the agriculturist money-lender should come to the fore and that if this legislation is passed, in some inscrutable way the agriculturist money-lender will gain. Having made that untenable assumption, he came out with a further argument that the agriculturist money-lender was an absolutely callous being. In order to lend support to this preposterous proposition he quoted the authority of Mr. Darling. No doubt Mr. Darling is a very senior officer, but when he attacks my class unjustly I must take up cudgels on behalf of my class. I have no hesitation to say that his remarks are ill-considered, ill-judged and ill-advised. I will show that he is wrong in suggesting that the agriculturist money-lender is a heartless being as compared with a non-agriculturist money-lender. It has been stated that if we give relief to a debtor who owes money to a bania then we are really handing a lamb to a butcher after rescuing it from the wolf. That is entirely wrong. An agriculturist money-lender may not, as alleged, agree to remit any portion of his debt, and although I do not admit it, suppose for the sake of argument that an agriculturist money-lender is unwilling to forego any part of his debt or interest, does it mean that he is harsher than a bania money-lender? Certainly not. The non-agriculturist money-lender has certain collateral and dishonest advantages which an agriculturist money-lender has not and will not care to have. I will tell the House presently what those collateral advantages are. An agriculturist money-lender fortunately has not learned so far to make false entries in his account books. (Hear, hear). He does not lend Rs. 50 and enter Rs. 100 in his account book. Fortunately also he has not learnt so far to omit to give credit to a debtor for payments which the latter makes. That is another feature which seems to have escaped the attention of urban members and also of official members. Again, an agriculturist money-lender is not a shopkeeper, he is not a trader, he is not a middleman, while unfortunately an ordinary non-agriculturist money-lender is a trader, a shopkeeper, a middleman and also a creditor. This combination of various capacities gives a non-agriculturist money-lender an advantage of immense value which is not availed of by an agriculturist money-lender. The latter does not use false weights; he does not use a tricky beam; he does not use short measures. He is not in a position to do all these things. He has no occasion to, because fortunately he has not resorted to the profession of shop-keeping. If he resorts to that profession, then his instincts after two or three generations will become exactly what they are now of the trader class money-lenders. But as things are, an agriculturist money-lender has not so far thought it fit to avail himself of these advantages. Therefore an agriculturist money-lender cannot be expected to be so ready for remission of interest as a non-agriculturist money-lender. But it is wrong to conclude from this that the agriculturist money-lender is harsher than the non-agriculturist money-lender. Only the non-agriculturist money-lender has a better control of his feelings and perhaps a better control of his facial muscles than a Jat. If a Jat gets angry he will show it in his face; but if a bania gets angry there will be no show of his anger at all. That is only the difference. But it is entirely wrong to suggest that the agriculturist money-lender is heartless. I am afraid Mr. Darling seems to have formed this estimate of an agriculturist money-lender on wrong data and on wrong information. (Interruption). I personally feel that Mr. Darling has been misled and having been misled he recorded his erroneous impression in his book. That dictum having once been incorporated in a book written by an I. C. S. officer everybody is ready to quote it as authority. But that authority is wrong. It is entirely misleading as the information on which it is based is erroneous.

Next I will draw the attention of the House to a certain proverb which was quoted by Mr. Darling in order to show that a Jat money-lender was a heartless creature. That Punjabi proverb was—

جے۔ سڈا سنسار قبیله گالدا
کان۔ کمبو۔ کلال قبیله پالدا

That proverb was quoted by one of the members in order to prove his claim that a Jat money-lender is a heartless creature from Mr. Darling's book. If Mr. Darling has understood this proverb to delineate the features of a Jat's character as a money-lender, then he has entirely missed the significance of this proverb, and that shows the extent of his knowledge. He does not know what this proverb is meant to convey. Somebody might have given him an erroneous interpretation of the proverb and being a foreigner he might have concluded that the proverb described the Jat as a money-lender. His views are thoroughly unsound both in this respect and in respect of the Land Alienation Act, and unfortunately he has been appointed on a special duty in respect of a problem in which the Land Alienation Act may come in for a good deal of criticism on his part.

✓[R. B. Chaudhri Chottu Ram.]

A very strange suggestion was made by one or two opponents of the Bill. It was said, "Suppose the money-lenders refused to advance money to debtors and refused to purchase their agricultural produce when land revenue became due." Do they expect this House to take this argument seriously? If a lawyer says he will not accept cases from his clients or if a doctor says he will not treat his patients, will anybody take such a lawyer or such a doctor seriously? Certainly not. The lawyer derives all his income from the conduct of cases. The doctor derives all his income from the treatment of his patients and unless he is prepared to commit suicide or say good-bye to the means of his livelihood he is not going to give up his practice. A money-lender cannot simply afford to give up money-lending. He cannot afford to refuse to buy agricultural produce. He simply cannot. He is not pursuing his profession from altruistic motives, nor for the sake of agricultural classes. That is a profession which gives him his riches; that is a profession which gives him his status; that is a profession which gives him his means of livelihood.

A very tempting promise was made by Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit that if this Bill had been confined to the protection of the peasant proprietors or the smaller men, he would have lent his support to this Bill and possibly that of the other members of his party. This was an argument which was meant probably for the gallery. I have been watching very carefully the attitude which Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit and other members of his party have adopted on very important occasions in respect of the smaller peasant, in respect of the smaller people, and I propose to give a few instances of that attitude. In April 1924 water rates were enhanced. In November 1924 a zamindar member of this House brought in a resolution requesting the Government to restore the old level of water rates. To a man the non-zamindar members of the National Reform Party opposed that resolution. I have Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit's speech before me now. If he had been present here now, I would have quoted one or two sentences from his speech. But as he is absent I would refrain from doing this. In 1925 the same resolution came up again for discussion and the attitude of the whole National Reform Party minus the zamindar members certainly was that of opposition. Then, again, in 1927 a resolution was moved by the honourable member who is now the Leader of the House in order to have a special fund to help agriculturists when the need for help arose. He made a particular reservation in favour of barani tracts. His request was that out of the last instalment of the remission of our provincial contribution, 50 lakhs should be laid aside in order to form a nucleus of a fund which may be drawn upon for lightening the burden of agriculturists of barani tracts, and what was the attitude of Mr. Nanak Chand and his party? It was one of unqualified opposition. I may be allowed to read one or two sentences from the Council debates. Pandit Nanak Chand says:

Sir, the resolution under discussion says that a sum of rupees 50 lakhs, out of the remission made by the Government of India, in the annual contribution from this province be set apart annually for ten years and that for ten years at least no relief in any shape or form be given to the zamindars of barani tracts...

The resolution, if accepted, would stop all progress of the province and as such we should reject it.

Here was a resolution which was intended for the poorer parts of the province, the barani tracts and here is the help which was rendered by Mr. Nanak Chand himself in affording the recommended relief in these poorer tracts. I may be allowed to quote just one sentence from the speech of the leader of his party.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I may say at the very outset that I am in full sympathy with the subject matter of this resolution.

As he always is.

I am aware that the zamindars of certain parts of this province are very poor and are in urgent need of relief, but the way of affording them relief, as proposed by the honourable mover of this resolution, is in my opinion not the right way.

No way that any member of our party has been able to suggest has ever appealed either to the Raja Sahib or to any member of his party. That is the history of the attitude of the party of Mr. Nanak Chand and its leader the Raja Sahib as disclosed in this House.

Now I will come to another very important matter which throws light on their attitude. In 1928 a Bill was introduced in order to amend the Land Revenue Act and when that amending Bill was under discussion a member of the zamindar party moved an amendment that a holding of 2 acres in irrigated areas and 5 acres or perhaps, a little more in non-irrigated areas might be exempted from assessment. That amendment was opposed strongly by the Raja Sahib and all his followers minus the zamindar members. Then we came down to a more modest proposition and that was that any holding which if assessed would yield only Rs. 5 in land revenue should be exempted from assessment. There again the reply of the Raja Sahib and his party was the same. They were opposed to it, consequently we lost that amendment.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Impractical proposals have to be opposed.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : There are always some difficulties in the way of the Raja Sahib helping even the poorer section of zamindars. Sometimes they are administrative, sometimes they are financial, and sometimes they are fiscal or political, at other times they are of a communal or class complexion. But I have come across no case when Raja Sahib and his followers have given any help to our party in order to get much needed relief not for big landholders, but for the poorer section of the zamindar community. However, let me resume my topic of the Land Revenue Act Amendment. We came down to a still more modest proposition and proposed that the local Government should be empowered to exempt certain classes of holdings if and when it thought fit. The Raja Sahib and his followers minus the zamindar members came to the conclusion that it would be very dangerous indeed to invest the local Government with a discretionary power of that character and they threw their weight against us, with the result that the motion was defeated. This is the measure of help which the poorer section of the Punjab population has been receiving from Mr. Nanak Chand and his party. It is, therefore, wrong to say that if this Bill had been confined to the smaller people Mr. Nanak Chand and the other members of his way of thinking would have supported it. (An honourable member : Try it). This Bill will furnish that trial because this Bill is chiefly intended to help the smaller zamindar only. I have been saying that Pandit Nanak Chand and his friends have always failed to respond to any proposition put forward by this section of the House for helping the zamindar. He says, "you are all wrong; I am the only person who can understand the interest of the zamindar class. I represent a rural constituency; I am returned to this Council by the votes of zamindar voters; who are you to question my authority? I can speak with authority when any matter relates to the welfare of the zamindar class. I have been returned by the Hoshiarpur rural constituency three times in succession in spite of the opposition of many elements including the Akali Dal." He is, I think, perfectly justified in flourishing his success in our face. He has been able to get himself elected in spite of opposition that was offered to him by many people including myself. We failed to help the rival candidate in coming out successful. But does that really mean that Mr. Nanak Chand's view can be accepted as authoritative where zamindar interests are concerned? Certainly not. Here there are other 50 members belonging, according to Mr. Nanak Chand's own admission to statutory agricultural tribes. They also represent rural constituencies. They have also been returned by the votes of agricultural classes. If their view is not accepted on matters relating to the welfare of the zamindar class, how can the view of one single person be accepted as authentic? My view of his return to the Council in spite of opposition is entirely different from his. His return, successful return, three times in spite of opposition, is pregnant with meaning. That meaning is very clear to me. It is that the poverty and indebtedness of zamindars have a very great coercive effect on the zamindar population, and this is the strongest argument in favour of this Bill. The extent of the poverty and indebtedness of the zamindar class is so great that they are not in a position to exercise their right of vote freely. That explains the return of the honourable member to this House three times in succession in spite of the opposition that was offered to him by Akalis and some zamindar members of this House. Therefore I beg to submit that his presence in this House, the presence of an opponent of the Land Alienation Act in this House as a representative of a rural constituency, is the strongest argument in favour of this Bill.

✓[R. B. Chandhri Chhotu Ram.]

I will now come to the remedies suggested by Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit. His suggestions may be divided into two classes. Those which will do good in the future and those which may do good at present. I will take those which he expects will do some sort of good in the future. He says that cottage industries should be promoted. I am absolutely at one with him. In this respect Government has been guilty of a gross omission. Government has not been doing anything to encourage cottage industries.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I deny that absolutely and I protest very strongly against statements of that kind being made when the debate is not about cottage industries. I will defend that charge any time a proper debate is raised on the subject.

✓Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : In spite of the outburst of the Honourable Finance Member I feel that I am correct.

Mr. President : The honourable member ought not to have discussed the attitude of any individual member or members. Impersonality is one of the first principles of a parliamentary debate.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Here was a point on which fortunately I find myself in agreement with my friend Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit and if the Chair rules that I should not bring out any point on which I may possibly be in agreement with Mr. Nanak Chand I will not. But as he has made a definite reference to this question I have a right in one bare sentence to say that I agree with him.

Mr. President : But is the criticism of Government relevant ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : He had stated that Government had not done anything. I do not know what the exact words used were.

Mr. President : Then the honourable member is repeating his argument.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am only expressing my agreement with him. I am not putting forward any substantive argument.

Mr. President : Granting that the subject is a very vast one and that an able lawyer, as the honourable member is, can make irrelevant things relevant, I think there is a limit to everything.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I have been feeling that he has been irrelevant for the last half an hour.

Mr. President : My opinion with regard to all speeches, made on the motion before the House, is that more than 80 per cent. matter was irrelevant.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I hope you will enforce the rules of relevancy.

Mr. President : Yes, I will, but it is the duty of the honourable members, as well, to help the Chair in enforcing the rules of debate, etc.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : One is liable to be misunderstood.

Mr. President : And likely to be misrepresented.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand was entirely silent when Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit was speaking.

Mr. President : He has been silent even now.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : That was why I was silent in your case.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I wish somebody had provoked him then to break his silence.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit also made a reference to reduction of salaries. I have been trying to do my little bit to get salaries reduced but in some cases even if Government were inclined to reduce salaries it has no power to do so. Therefore so long as the constitution is what it is we are mostly helpless. So nothing very substantial can be done in that way. He further suggested the redemption of the total amount of debt by Government itself. That Government should take over the entire debt of the debtors, pay it itself and then recover the amount paid from the debtors. At one time I put forward a suggestion of that character myself that four annas in a rupee may be paid by Government and in the case of land-holders it may be recovered from them along with land revenue. But on further consideration I found that that suggestion was impracticable and would land Government in difficulties from which it would be almost impossible to extricate itself (hear, hear). Therefore I do not stick to that suggestion. If Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit gave a little more careful thought he would find as I did that this suggestion was not one of any practical value. If nothing else, it is bound to lead to artificial inflation of debts. I owe to another person Rs. 500, the bania says well, I am prepared to advance you another Rs. 50 provided you say you owe me Rs. 1,000. In this case at four annas in the rupee Government would have to pay Rs. 250 instead of Rs. 125 if only the creditor and the debtor came to a collusive arrangement to share the excess. So, there will be no end of bogus arrangements of this character. Therefore on this ground alone among others this suggestion is impracticable. Then, he also made a suggestion that land revenue should be reduced. Well zamindar members have been doing something in this direction and Government has responded to some extent, but if we were to go on pressing this suggestion over and over again, for more and more remission and permanent remission, I think some members can very legitimately say that zamindars are not behaving in a responsible manner. I have very good grounds to believe that Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit while in England made a good deal of capital out of the two or three cut motions which were carried here during the Budget Session. He is reported to have said, "look here, see what these people have done when out of power; if you place them in power, you can imagine what they will do in regard to land revenue and abiana. They have passed in a single session two or three cut motions urging reduction of land revenue and water-rates." That ought to be a sufficient warning to zamindar members of the House against any further pressing of permanent reduction in land revenue or abiana. I may now come to the Land Alienation Act.

✓[R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.]

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan : If any member has made an irrelevant speech, is it necessary for succeeding members to reply to that unnecessary criticism?

Mr. President : No.

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : Can any member rise on a point of order when he is not sitting in his own seat?

Mr. President : No.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I should like to hear the views of the honourable member for Rohtak about the suggestion made by Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit for following America.

✓Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I seem to have missed the nature of that suggestion, but there is just one point to which I should like to draw the attention of the Chair. Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit made a very detailed criticism of the Land Alienation Act and its reactions on the representation of various classes in the House. I have very good grounds to believe that this propaganda was carried on by him in England also while he was there. He also stated in this House that he was going to forward the proceedings of this debate to the Secretary of State. We protested not once but twice or thrice that he should not be allowed to drag in the Land Alienation Act but he was allowed to go on and I think it would be only fair under the circumstances to allow me to give a reply.

Mr. Labh Singh : Not after the ruling that has been given.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Is there any authority vested anywhere to order the expunging of that portion of Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit's speech which related to the Land Alienation Act and which was irrelevant ?

Mr. President : Why did not the honourable member take exception to it then ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : We did, not once but twice or thrice and the object which we had in view in protesting was that when our turn came we should be allowed to reply to these criticisms.

Mr. President : Do the honourable members of the House wish to hear the honourable member on the point ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I definitely stated that there are certain portions of Pandit's speech which have political reactions and I must be allowed to give a reply on those points.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The report of the select committee is coming out.

Mr. President : Irrelevancy should be avoided. If the honourable member can make his speech relevant to the subject before the House, he can say anything, otherwise he may proceed with other points.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan : My point of order as decided by you, was out of order having been raised while I was not in seat, it is therefore not binding.

Mr. President : Is that the honourable member's ruling ? (Laughter).

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : That is the power of review exercised by a judicial or executive officer.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : An ex-executive officer.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit stated in this House that it was wrong on the part of the Government to espouse the cause of a section of the population which was already powerful in this province and which was already powerful in this House. He stated that as many as 50 out of 71 elected members of the House were members of statutory agricultural tribes and he thought that it was wrong to place another law on the statute book to help the same class of people. He forgot that so far as the present Bill is concerned it is meant for the benefit of not only statutory agricultural tribes but also others. In fact the word "agriculturist" as it existed in the original Bill, was allowed to cover classes which are agriculturists by profession though not agriculturists in the technical sense of the Land Alienation Act. Therefore in reply to his criticism of the composition of this House or of the object of this legislation I must draw the attention of the House to the fact that the population of agricultural classes is much larger than the population of statutory agricultural tribes. That is to say the honourable member was wrong in including in the term agriculturist only those tribes which have been declared under the Land Alienation Act as agricultural. The Land Alienation Act was passed with a specific object, for a limited purpose. For that limited purpose and in order to serve that limited object a certain number of tribes were declared under that law as agricultural tribes. But that does not mean that there are no other classes which are agricultural by profession. The object of the Land Alienation Act was limited in character. Its object was that the hereditary land-owning classes must be saved from the process of expropriation which was in progress when that Act was passed. There are many other classes which pursue the profession of agriculture, but which are not land-owners, much less hereditary land-owners. Therefore the limited scope of the Land Alienation Act should not be brought in in order to prevent another section of the agricultural population from being counted as agriculturists. I beg to submit that in the ordinary sense of the word, the wider sense of the word 'agriculturist', that is, in the sense that all those who depend for their livelihood primarily on agriculture should be regarded as agriculturists, the agricultural population is not less than 80 per cent. of the total population of this province. That is a fact which has been borne out by figures collected at the time of the census. (An honourable member: Not statutory.) I have made it perfectly clear that the word 'agriculturist' in its ordinary sense, apart from the limited and technical sense of the Land Alienation Act, is much wider than the familiar expression "a member of a notified agricultural tribe." I was submitting that the total agricultural population of the province exceeded 80 per cent. It is certainly not less than 80 per cent. From that point of view the object of this legislation ought to be regarded as laudable even if this legislation were confined to the benefit of those classes alone. As a matter of fact it goes even beyond them. It comes to this then that the agricultural population of the province is at least 80 per cent. And apart from that section of the population there is another section of the population which is covered by this Bill. Therefore we may accept it as a correct proposition that this Bill if passed into law will benefit as many as 90 per cent. of the population. The duty of safeguarding the interests of this 90 per cent., of the population under the present constitution rests entirely with the zamindar section of the House. The zamindar may be taken as a symbol, as an embodiment of indebtedness, as a true representative and as a true champion of the debtor classes. Therefore the frequent use of the words zamindar and agriculturist in our own speeches may be regarded as symbolical and does not mean that the benefit of this law is confined only to those classes which are regarded as agriculturist under the Land Alienation Act. Again, how can Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit claim or other members of his party claim that they are better representatives of the interests of non-statutory agricultural classes than statutory agriculturist members who suffer the misfortune of indebtedness along with the rest? We know the honourable member belongs to a class which exploits debtors, which exploits them not only as creditors but also as shopkeepers, not only as shopkeepers but also as middlemen. And those who exploit non-statutory agricultural classes by acting as middlemen, shopkeepers or traders cannot claim to be as good or even half as good representatives of those classes as we can. Therefore the criticism either with regard to the object of the Bill or to range of the beneficiaries under the Bill was entirely groundless. The number of those members in the House who belong to statutory agricultural classes is certainly not larger than what it ought to be for the reason among others that they are in a far better position than the party of Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit to safeguard the interests of non-statutory agricultural and other indebted classes.

✓[R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.]

✓

It would be wrong on my part if I omitted to make a reference to certain observations of the lady member of the House. I have already been inexcusably unchivalrous in wishing to keep her sex out of the House. I must pay her the compliment of taking some notice of what she said. Apart from the fact that she is a lady member she is also the president or patron or something of the "Indebtedness Bill Crusade Committee." She happens to be, I am told, the Secretary of that committee which was appointed by the Traders' Association at Lyallpur. She holds a very responsible office in that committee and therefore it is only right that I should pay her the compliment of replying to her observations. She was pleased to hold out a threat that the trading classes were going to set up a very, very powerful agitation which Government would find very difficult to cope with. She was perfectly right in taking advantage of the ordinary weakness of Government. Government is very much afraid of agitation and she thought that if she held out that threat that would have a great influence with Government. But agitations have been set up before, agitations will be set up in future. There has been a good deal of agitation during the last four or five months, but agitation in itself does not add to the weight of authority of any views sought to be expressed thereby. What will that agitation be like? She gave a hint of at least one feature, that is, that traders may boycott British goods. I wonder whether it is the boycott by traders which is more effective or a boycott by purchasers and consumers. Suppose an agitation is set up that traders will not import British goods, and suppose the consumers insist that out of foreign goods they will purchase only British goods. My impression is that in that event the trader will have to come down from his pedestal. It is the consumer whose voice is effective and not that of the middleman or the trader. (Interruption.) If that agitation for boycott of British goods is based upon the attitude of Government in respect of this Bill it may very reasonably have that reaction. I do not say this from unpatriotic motives, I assure the House that I am not saying this in order to humour the British, in order to humour Government. I know the British far too well to base any faith on such slender grounds. What I wish to convey is that if a movement for the boycott of British goods is based upon the favourable attitude of Government in respect of the Indebtedness Bill it may have a reaction in consuming classes which will be the exact opposite of what the lady member desired to achieve. Purchasers and consumers may refuse to buy non-British goods and if they make up their minds to do that I think their voice will carry weight and not the voice of the middlemen or traders. (An honourable member: Do you promise to carry on that agitation?) Yes, if a movement for the boycott of British goods is based on the favourable attitude of Government in respect of this Bill I will certainly do it. I will certainly oppose that movement of boycott and I may be able to support a movement in another direction.

✓[R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.]

I come to my last point. Suppose this Bill is not passed what will happen? The creditors will have to secure decrees. They will have to pay court fees; they will have to pay counsel's fees, they will have to pay for other expenses incidental to litigation, and after having paid a large proportion, a fairly large proportion, of the claims on getting a decree, what will be the worth of that decree? Decrees which have already been passed by courts can be had in any numbers at 25 per cent. of their face value. If there are any members in this House who can start a banking company in order to take up these decrees I promise to supply them as many decrees as they like at 25 per cent. of their face value. Does the House believe that creditors are likely to throw their good money after bad? They can at best get decrees which it will be very difficult to realise. Therefore in the first instance I fear that creditors will not like to spend money on getting decrees. In some cases creditors may not be in a position to incur the expenses incidental to litigation. But suppose by some cheap method, for instance, by resort to private arbitration creditors are able to secure decrees, the execution of those decrees will require a good deal of money. I think that all those who are in any way connected with courts know that it is with the passing of decrees that the trouble of a creditor really commences. He has to pay a good deal in order to be able to secure even a partial satisfaction of his decrees. Therefore it is best that some law should be passed which will bring the debts within the paying capacity of debtors and will encourage them to pay whatever they can. If the debtors think that they cannot wipe off their debts their feeling will be somewhat like this. "What is the use of making any payments at all, after all we cannot possibly pay up the whole amount." If these debts are brought within their paying capacity, it will encourage them to make a genuine effort to repay their obligations.

It has been suggested that so far as this Bill is concerned it makes no provision whatsoever for Government helping in the recovery of the debts. I understand that Mr. Wace is engaged in hammering out some sort of a scheme under which the Co-operative Societies may be able to come to the rescue of debtors within certain limits. Of course it will not be easy or practicable for the Co-operative Department to take over all the debts but what I understand is that Mr. Wace is thinking of some sort of a scheme which may enable his Department to come to the rescue of debtors and help the creditor in the realisation of a certain proportion of his debts. In the circumstances the best thing would be to pass this legislation and not to insist on the motion for circulation. We have already wasted a good deal of precious time. I have wasted a good deal of the precious time of the House myself. I hope the House will now proceed to dispose of the present motion, and will dispose it of in the right way.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): The last member has talked for 2½ hours, I propose to talk for 2½ minutes. I did not want to talk at all but there are one or two statements that I am absolutely bound to refute. The first is the allegation which has been made several times, especially from the benches of the National Reform Party that there is some kind of an unholy alliance between Government and the National Unionist Party, that there have been some secret negotiations and I think it was Mr. Puri who claimed that his party ought to have been consulted on the subject. We have heard from the Leader of the National Unionist Party that nothing whatever has occurred beyond what is known to the House, and I would like to repeat the statement which I made at the very beginning of this debate that all that has happened is this. The local Government naturally wish to see this Bill passed into law. They did not draft the Bill for fun. They drafted it with the object of passing it into law and that as soon as possible. The main provisions of the Bill have been circulated for opinion and have been fully criticised and Government are anxious that its main provisions should become law without any unnecessary delay. They were unable to accept the last three clauses of the Bill because they made serious changes in the civil law. They were unable to accept the last three clauses without ascertaining opinion and especially the opinion of the judges of the High Court. For that reason they suggested to the Leader of the National Unionist Party that his party should drop the last three clauses on the understanding that facilities would be given later on for a private Bill embodying these clauses provided that they were previously circulated for opinion. That is all that has been done. All those suspicions about underhand negotiations are entirely unfounded. I wish to make that very clear indeed.

Both parties have suggested that Government is partial on one side or the other. If you read the ~~minute of dissent of the members~~ of the National Unionist Party, I think you will see ~~between the lines~~ their complaint that Government members had not supported them. The real truth is, I think, expressed in the story told by one of the members while the select committee was sitting. It is the story of the weavers and the mosquitoes which, I suppose, every Indian member knows and which I need not repeat.

The only other thing to refute was the suggestion which has recurred time after time about the burden of the land revenue in this province. When it was mentioned again this afternoon, I took the trouble of sending for the last Season and Crop Report. I find from it that the average harvested area of the province in the last ten years is 258 lakhs of acres. That is not the cultivated area but the harvested area. The land revenue last year was Rs. 4,26,64,000. You will find that the land revenue in the province falls at an average rate of Re. 1-12-0 per acre matured.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill as reported by the select committee be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon by the 15th February, 1935.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill as reported by the select committee be taken into consideration.

The motion was carried.

The Council then adjourned till 2 P.M. on Monday, the 12th November 1934.

1. Phragmites australis (Cav.) Trin. ex Steud.

PRINTED BY

THE SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRINTING, PUNJAB.

161 PLC-525-29-11-34 - SQPP Labor.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Monday, 12th November 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2 P.M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

OATH OF OFFICE.

The following members were sworn in :—

Mr. P. Marsden (Secretary, Transferred Departments).

Sardar Sahib Sardar Beant Singh (Deputy Registrar, Co-operative Societies).

Chaudhri Muhammad Husain (Inspector of Vernacular Education, Punjab).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

OCCUPIERS' RATES ON SUTLEJ VALLEY PROJECT CANALS.

3925. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : With reference to the Press Communiqué issued by Government some time ago, modifying the occupiers' rates on the Sutlej Valley Project Canals, will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

- (a) the area, in round numbers, of the cattle breeding farms in the Multan district ;
- (b) whether he is aware that the greater part of the area of the farms is sown each year with fodder crops to secure fodder for the cattle ;
- (c) the ratio of the area sown with fodder crops to that occupied by other crops during the year 1933-34 in the farms ;
- (d) whether the managers of the farms have applied for reduction of occupiers' rates on the fodder crops ;
- (e) if the answer to (d) is in the affirmative, what action Government intends to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) 8,000 acres.

(b) According to the conditions of the grant 45 per cent. of the total area is to be cropped and only two-thirds of this is expected to be under fodder crops.

(c) Not available.

(d) No. Such applications could not well have been submitted considering that these farms pay only Re. 1-8-0 per acre while on the rest of the Lower Bari Doab Canal the present rate for fodder crops is Rs. 2-8-0 per acre.

(e) Does not arise.

HINDU ASSISTANT DISTRICT INSPECTOR, DERA GHAZI KHAN.

3926. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the District Inspector, Dera Ghazi Khan, is a Muslim gentleman ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that out of the 5 Assistant District Inspectors there is not a single Hindu Assistant District Inspector ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that since 1930 not a single Hindu Assistant District Inspector has been appointed in the district ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the Hindus constitute about 16 per cent. of the total population in the district ;
- (e) if replies to (a), (b), (c) and (d) are in the affirmative, what Government intends to do to remove this grievance ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c) No. One Hindu Assistant District Inspector has recently been appointed.

(d) No. According to the last census the Hindus form 11 per cent of the total population and 7 per cent. of the rural population in the Dera Ghazi Khan district.

(e) Does not arise.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION, LOWER JHELUM CIRCLE.

3927. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

- (1) whether it is a fact that the Executive Engineer, Head Clerk, 2nd Clerk, Despatcher, Head Munshi and Head Draftsman in the Shahpur division, Lower Jhelum Circle, are all Muhammadans ;
- (2) whether it is a fact that the Executive Engineer, Head Clerk and Camp Clerk in the Sargodha division, Lower Jhelum Circle, are all Muhammadans ;
- (3) whether it is a fact that out of four divisional Head Clerks, in the Lower Jhelum Circle, three are Muhammadans ?

If the replies to Nos. 1, 2, 3, are in the affirmative, what the Government intends to do to remove the grievances of other communities in this respect ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (1) and (2). Yes, except the head clerks who are Hindus.

(3) No. Two are Muslims and two are Hindus.

There is no reason to suppose that any of the communities have a grievance.

GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOLS, AMBALA DIVISION.

3928. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education kindly give information required in the statement enclosed herewith regarding the Government High Schools in Ambala division :—

Name of the teacher whose work was endorsed as 'Not satisfactory' by Mr. J. L. Wilson and the year of endorsement.	Pass percentage in the subjects of teacher in the University or school promotion Examination in that year.	Which subject was made the basis of the 'Not satisfactory' endorsement and why.	In which cases Mr. J. L. Wilson revised the endorsement on the basis of good pass percentage.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : As the officer concerned has not resumed duty on return from leave the answer cannot be given. It will be given as soon as he resumes duty.

REVOLVER LICENCE TO LALA ARJAN DEVA.

3929. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Will the Honourable Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

- whether Lala Arjan Deva, B.A., Editor and Proprietor, The Sunday Times, Lahore, was holding a revolver licence for the last nine years ;
- whether it is a fact that his licence has not been renewed without stating any reason ;
- whether he has abused this licence during this period of nine years in any way ;
- whether there is anything against the gentleman which warrants that his licence which he was keeping as a peaceful citizen for self-protection should be cancelled ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes. It is the policy of Government that revolver licences should be issued or renewed only in cases of the strictest necessity. It was not shown that such necessity existed in the case of Lala Arjan Deva, and renewal was refused on that ground.

(c) and (d) Do not arise.

MR. SALLY, SUB-DIVISIONAL OFFICER, SUBRAON BRANCH.

3930. Chaudhri Faqir Husain Khan : Will the Honourable the Revenue Member kindly state—

- for how long Mr. Sally, Sub-Divisional Officer, Subraon Branch, has been working in the Jandiala division ;
- how far Raya, the headquarters of the Sub-Divisional Officer, is from Amritsar and Jullundur City, respectively ;
- whether the father of Mr. Sally is working as Principal of some college at Jullundur ;

[Chaudhri Faqir Husain Khan.]

- (d) whether any complaints have been made against him since his appointment in this division ; if so, how many, and what was their nature ;
- (e) the action, if any, taken on the complaints mentioned in (d) ;
- (f) if up to this time no action has been taken on those complaints, what action Government proposes to take now ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Since 15th November 1981.

(b) 22 miles and 25 miles, respectively.

(c) Yes.

(d), (e) and (f) Complaints, anonymous and otherwise, are often lodged against officers, but in the case in question no unusual number have been received. Those that were susceptible of investigation have been enquired into, and have been shown to be unfounded.

The honourable member has not mentioned any particular complaint and I am sure that he will agree that it would be most unfair to the officer concerned if details of all the complaints made against him were published especially when they have not been substantiated or have been proved to be unfounded. The honourable member's attention is, however, invited to the reply given to Council question No. *3491¹ of 1984 in connection with the subject of which various complaints were made against the officer in question. Investigation by the Police and Deputy Commissioner proved the allegations to be unfounded.

ADMISSIONS IN deMONTMORENCY COLLEGE, SHAHPUR.

3930-A. Raja Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) how many students out of those who failed in the last Intermediate Examination from deMontmorency College, Shahpur, were re-admitted in the II year class in the same institution ;
- (b) whether there are any instances when the students applied for re admission and were refused ; if so, on what grounds ;
- (c) whether the Principal of the Shahpur College was influenced by political considerations in admitting students ;
- (d) whether Government is aware of the fact (i) that some students were admitted in the College even after the usual time for admission was over, and (ii) that another student was refused admission, if so, the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Nine.

(b) Yes. Three students were refused admission, two for failing twice from the college and the third, because he was sent up for the examination only on the condition that admission would be refused in case of failure.

(c) No.

(d) (i) No.

(ii) Does not arise.

¹See Appendix.

IMPERIAL CHEMICAL INDUSTRIES.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether in considering the applications of the Imperial Chemical Industries Government have taken into consideration the recommendation of the Tariff Board to protect the heavy chemical industry in India and whether they are perfectly satisfied that in granting the lease to the Imperial Chemical Industries, the interest of the indigenous chemical industry will not be affected in any way ;

(b) whether they are prepared to accept conditions and recommendations laid down by the Fiscal Commission and External Capital Committee and whether in granting any concession to the Imperial Chemical Industries, they are not going away from the policy recommended by the Fiscal Commission as the sole guiding principle in fiscal matters ;

(c) whether in granting concession to the Imperial Chemical Industries they will lay down conditions precedent that the Company will issue rupee capital in India and have majority of Indian directors in the Board for management of the Company in India ;

(d) whether they have ascertained that the so-called waste minerals for which concession is being granted are really waste products and have no economic value and whether Government consulted any experts and took their advice and opinion on the point to find if better terms might be offered in open market ;

(e) whether the concession applied for is on private lands or Government property ; if it is on private lands, whether Government have brought pressure and influence on the tenants to part with these lands?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) In dealing with the application of the Imperial Chemical Industries for a lease, the local Government did not pay special regard to the protection of the heavy chemical industry in India. They do not understand how the question of tariff protection is relevant to the case.

(b) I would refer the honourable member to paragraph 80 of the report of the External Capital Committee, which was expressly taken into consideration in connection with the lease. The local Government are satisfied that the arrangements made are likely to be of great benefit to the province.

(c) As the agreement in question has already been signed on behalf of the Punjab Government, the question of imposing further conditions does not arise. I may, however, add that the Company is registered under the Indian Companies Act and has one Indian Director.

(d) The Punjab Government have not entered into agreement regarding any waste mineral.

(e) The agreement has reference to Government as well as private lands. In regard to private lands Government have undertaken to apply, if necessary, chapters VI and VII of the Land Acquisition Act in certain specified areas, provided they are satisfied that such action will not inflict unreasonable hardship on the owners and tenants concerned.

UNSTARRED QUESTION AND ANSWER.

GRIEVANCES OF THE SUBORDINATE EDUCATIONAL SERVICE.

1054. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Education kindly state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the Punjab Subordinate Educational Service Association submitted in January 1932, a memorandum dealing with the main grievances of the Subordinate Educational Service; if so, what action has so far been taken on it;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the Punjab Subordinate Educational Service Association has denounced the present system of promotion and has requested the Department to frame definite rules of promotion and whether any rules have been made;
- (c) whether he will refer to the observations made on page 1 of the Memorandum of the Association and state if it is a fact that at the present rate of promotion in the Subordinate Educational Services a teacher has on an average to wait for about 12 years to secure the next grade;
- (d) what relief has been afforded to the Subordinate Educational Service since 1924 when a resolution on time scale for Subordinate Educational Services was moved by Professor Ruchi Ram Sahni;
- (e) whether it is a fact that the real increase in pay arising out of the general revision of grades of all services in 1920-21, in the Provincial Educational Service was 76 per cent. while in the Subordinate Educational Service it was 37 per cent. only;
- (f) what grades were proposed by the non-official members of the Education Committee of the Council to which the question of time scale was referred in 1924;
- (g) whether Government is aware that there is a general discontent among the teachers in the Subordinate Educational Service owing to the absence of any progressive time scale; if so, what steps Government proposes to take to redress the grievances of the Subordinate Educational Service;
- (h) the figures relating to Anglo-Vernacular and Vernacular Sections of the Subordinate Educational Service, separately for the last 2 years together with the total number of posts in each grade in respect of the following :—
 - (i) Number of promotions from Rs. 140—10—190 grade.
 - (ii) Number of promotions from Rs. 110—5—135 grade.
 - (iii) Number of promotions from Rs. 80—4—100 grade.
 - (iv) Number of promotions from Rs. 55—3—70 grade.
 - (v) Number of promotions from Rs. 35—3—50 grade.
- (i) whether it is a fact that the Government has created some scholarships for the sons of members of all Provincial Services; if so, what share is to go to the Subordinate Educational Service?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes. The general question of promotions in the anglo-vernacular section is under consideration of the Department.

(b) The Secretary of the Association has expressed satisfaction with the last batch of promotions in Rs. 80—4—100 and Rs. 110—5—135 grades of the anglo-vernacular section of the Subordinate Educational Service. The Association, however, does not appear to be satisfied with promotions in the two higher grades, which are largely made by selection. As regards rules of promotion the honourable member is referred to the reply to Council question no. *2825.¹

(c) Promotion is no doubt slow in the Department though it is not true that a teacher has on an average to wait for about 12 years to secure the next grade.

(d) The number of posts in the higher grades of the Subordinate Educational Service, Anglo-vernacular section was increased to permit flow of promotion.

(e) Yes.

(f) Selection grade	Rs. 200—10—300.
Senior teachers	Rs. 100—6—190.
Junior Anglo-Vernacular teachers	Rs. 55—3—100.

(g) Government is not aware of any such discontent though it is true that promotion is rather slow under the existing system, but the honourable member must realise that if Government changed the present system and introduced a time scale such a course would prove very expensive. The finances of the Punjab can hardly bear extra expenditure at the present moment. Certain district boards introduced a time scale but they are finding it very difficult to meet the annually increasing charge on this account. With this experiment in view the Punjab Government will be very reluctant to introduce the time scale for Subordinate Educational Service.

(h) Number of posts in the Subordinate Educational Service on 30th October 1934—

Anglo-vernacular.			Classical and Vernacular.
	100			10
	228			40
	817			126
	262			409
	224			429
Number of promotions made in the Subordinate Educational Service, Anglo-Vernacular Section, during the last two years.			Number of promotions made in the Subordinate Educational Service, Classical and Vernacular Section, during the last two years.
Class I
Class II	4	3	..
Class III	10	9	..
Class IV	24	18	..
Class V	58	47	..

[Hon. Sir Firoz Khan Noon.]

(i) Yes. A few scholarships have been created for the sons of members of all the provincial services, who die before retirement. No such scholarships have been created for sons of members of subordinate services.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Mr. President : The Council will now proceed to consider the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill as reported by the select committee. The amendments to clauses will be taken up after the new clauses are disposed of.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move—

That at the end of clause 4 the following be added as a sub-clause :—

“ The following be added as further proviso to the section :—

‘ Provided that all property belonging to a debtor and exempt from attachment or sale in execution of a decree shall be excluded from his assets, and agricultural land, in all cases in which it is not so exempt, shall be valued at thirty times the land revenue assessed thereon.’ ”

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerjee : Sir, I rise to a point of order. I have given notice of an amendment urging the deletion of clause 4. If, fortunately, that amendment is adopted, the present amendment will automatically fall through and there will be no point in moving it at this stage.

Mr. President : An amendment to delete a clause is not an amendment of the clause.

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerjee : My contention is that if my amendment as it stands on the order paper is accepted by the House, I do not understand how there can be a new proviso to a clause which will not exist.

Mr. President : The honourable member's motion is to omit clause 4, while the proviso is a new clause. As new clauses have to be taken up before the clauses as reported by the select committee, the honourable member's amendment will be taken up when, after the disposal of new clauses, the Bill is considered clause by clause. I do not think that the deletion of clause 4 can be taken up at this stage. If the new clauses have to be dealt with before the consideration of clauses, the course is clear. But if the new clauses have to be taken up after the disposal of clauses, the honourable member's amendment will certainly get priority.

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerjee : There is another point of order. If we take up clause 4 first and dispose it of, does it not mean that it will be taken for granted that the previous clauses are passed ?

Mr. President : No. After the disposal of new clauses the Bill as reported by the select committee will be taken up from the beginning.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Would it not be better if we take up the Bill from the very beginning and take it clause by clause ? Those clauses which are not objected to may be passed without discussion and those clauses for which notice of amendments are given and the new clauses may be discussed as they occur on the agenda.

Mr. President : Does the honourable member mean that clauses must be taken up first and new clauses afterwards ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Yes.

Mr. President : When the proviso, which is the first on the list of new clauses, is brought under discussion, the honourable Mr. Mukerjee will be welcome to argue that clause 4 be deleted. And if, after hearing his arguments, the House decides to accept the proviso, the inference will be that the Council is not in favour of the omission of clause 4. At any rate, whether the proviso is accepted or rejected by the House, the honourable Mr. Mukerjee will get an opportunity to move deletion of the original clause when new clauses are disposed of and original clauses are taken up.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Before we discuss the merits of a proviso we ought to know to what it is a proviso. The real effect of the proviso cannot be understood unless we know what the substantive proposal is.

Mr. President : The original proposal is clause 4 of the Bill.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Suppose the original clause is amended or is deleted, then what would happen to the proviso?

Mr. President : I have tried to explain. If, despite the arguments which the honourable member, Mr. Mukerjee, may advance in favour of the deletion of the clause, the House decides to pass the proviso, the inference shall be that the House has impliedly agreed to the retention of the clause.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Notices of amendments have been given by the various members of the House to the original clauses also. Should not the original clause be settled first before we decide what the proviso should be?

Mr. President : The point is whether the subject matter of the proviso is that of a new clause.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I think in this case it is a new clause because it extends the scope of the original clause by putting in a proviso.

Mr. President : That is the reason why it is a new clause.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The effect of the proviso is to vary the terms of the original clause.

Mr. Muhammad Din Malak : If the proviso is passed and the original clause is deleted, what would happen?

Mr. President : Then the proviso also might go if standing alone it is defective, meaningless or inconsistent with other provisions.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Is there anything in our rules and standing orders about this?

Mr. President : No. But where our rules and standing orders are not inconsistent with parliamentary practice or where they are silent, parliamentary practice may be followed.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, I must bow to your ruling whatever it is. But I certainly object to parliamentary practice being invoked one day and discarded on another day.

Mr. President : Order, order. Will the honourable member make himself clear? This is a charge which I did not expect from the honourable member.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I do not want to make any charge against you or any member of the House. But I merely wish to remind the House of what happened the other day on my motion to circulate the Bill for eliciting public opinion. You would remember that it was decided not to follow the parliamentary practice on that occasion.

Mr. President : There was no such decision so far as I can recollect.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It was put to the vote of the House.

Mr. President : Yes. And even according to parliamentary practice it ought to have been put to the vote of the House.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Would you now put it to the House whether parliamentary practice should be followed in the present case?

Mr. President : I did not put it before and I do not propose to put it to-day, unless necessary.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : May I say a few words with regard to the point raised by Mr. Mukerjee? Logically speaking the deletion motion ought to be taken up first because if that motion is carried, then my proviso and all the numerous amendments notices of which have been given will drop automatically. If the deletion motion is defeated it will then be time to take up those amendments and my proviso.

Mr. President : If the proviso is not a new clause, it may be discussed when the original clause is taken up.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It is not a new clause. But, would you decide the question whether it is a new clause or not or would you leave it to the House? I think it is for you to decide.

Mr. President : Yes. But I shall be delighted to follow the procedure which the honourable members of the House consider convenient.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I think it will be better to take the Bill clause by clause. Before the clause is disposed of and before you even take up the amendments to the body of that clause as contained in the Bill, you may dispose of the new clause relating to it or additions to that particular clause. Take for instance, clause 1, there is nothing in connection with it. There is nothing with regard to clause 2 and there is a small amendment with respect to clause 3 and it is to the body of the clause. Then we come to clause 4. It is here that the question arises. Before we actually deal with this clause, the amendment of Mr. Mukerjee for the deletion may be discussed and if that is passed, then no question arises at all. But if that amendment is not passed, then before we consider the amendments to the body of clause 4, we can consider the additions suggested. The same procedure can be followed with respect to each of the other clauses. You can first take up the additions proposed and then the amendments proposed to a particular clause. By adopting this practice, I do not think we will be going against either our rules and standing orders or the parliamentary practice. I suggest that you will first call upon Mr. Mukerjee to move the deletion of clauses 3 and 4. For if that is passed there is no question of the addition of the proviso.

Mr. President : And if the deletion is not carried?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Then deal with the addition of the proviso first, because that is a new clause.

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Minister suggest that the question whether clause 4 should be deleted or not should be disposed of first ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Yes, because deletion means negation and afterwards no proviso or amendment can be moved.

Mr. President : Suppose the deletion is rejected and the proviso is moved. Then members who had spoken to the deletion may speak again to the proviso and thus have two speeches.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : But that happens even now. First a member speaks to the motion whether the clause should be deleted or not and when it is disposed of in favour of the retention of the clause, then he speaks in favour of the proviso and thus makes two speeches.

Mr. President : No, I allow them the right of making two speeches because I treat the proviso as a new clause. They can first speak to the proviso and then to the clause.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : There are two speeches anyhow.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : May I suggest that we follow our past practice ?

Mr. President : In the case of a Bill, which emerges from a select committee, our practice is to take up new clauses first. But if the House agrees to the proposed procedure I have no objection. Perhaps in view of the fact that the Bill to be considered is of an exceptional importance and a very large number of new clauses and other amendments have been received, it will be convenient to take up the original clauses with correlative new clauses and verbal amendments together.

Question is—

That sub-clause (2) of clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : Question is—

That sub-clause (3) of clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 2.

Mr. President : Question is—

That clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 3.

Mr. President : Question is—

That clause 3 stand part of the Bill.

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerjee (Punjab Chamber of Commerce and Trades Association, Commerce) : Will you permit me to take up both the clauses 3 and 4 together, because my arguments will be the same for both of them ?

Mr. Manohar Lal : In what sense can deletion of clauses be called amendments ?

Mr. President : I called clause 3 by its number and as no amendment was offered I proposed the question "that this clause stand part of the Bill." At this stage it is open to any member to urge that the clause be omitted or deleted.

Mr. Manohar Lal : It is not a formal amendment to say that I oppose it.

Mr. President : There is no objection to the deletion of a clause being moved formally. In that case it will be an amendment to the Bill.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer) : I move—

That in clause 3 after the figures and brackets 10 (1), the words 'of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920' shall be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerjee : Sir, the amendments for the deletion of clauses 3 and 4 standing in my name are the result of the discussion that the Punjab Chamber of Commerce had with the Northern India Chamber of Commerce in considering the various provisions of the Bill. So far as the present amendment is concerned the note of dissent of the minority in the select committee clears the position. What the mercantile community feel about the insolvency procedure is that it lends itself very largely to the devices of dishonest debtors and the experience of lawyers of standing and of long practice is that the fraudulent debtors try to take the greatest advantage of these provisions. The considered opinion of my constituency is that the Provincial Insolvency Act requires radical changes and they have been pressing the Government for it for a considerable time. In the circumstances no further relaxation of the Act which clauses 3 and 4 of this Bill contemplate is desirable and it is, therefore, that I oppose them.

Mr. President : Question is—

That clause 3 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 4.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 4 for the words 'fifteen hundred' the words 'three thousand' be substituted.

The object which I have in view in moving this amendment is that if the figure that has been adopted in the select committee report is adhered to, then a very large number of those debtors who deserve relief will be excluded. The present proposal is that the benefit of this clause should be given only to those the value of whose property does not exceed Rs. 1,500. I propose that in place of Rs. 1,500, Rs. 3,000 should be substituted in order that the scope of this clause may be enlarged and those who stand in need of relief should be able to claim relief. If we stick to the present figure the result will be that a very large number of debtors—and small debtors—will be excluded from the scope of this clause. Just take the instance of a landowner who owns say ten acres of land. The present figure will rule him out. If the value of land per acre be taken as Rs. 200 then the result will be that a man who owns more than $7\frac{1}{2}$ acres will be excluded from the benefit of this clause. If the value of an acre be taken as Rs. 250 then an owner of more than six acres of land would be excluded from the benefit of this section. Nobody can deny that an owner of six or seven or ten acres of land is certainly a small owner and if there is anybody who deserves relief being given under this Bill it is the man with a small holding. Therefore, the necessity of amending the present clause as it stands in the direction which I have indicated is very real in order to meet the object of this Bill in respect of small landholders.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 4 for the words "fifteen hundred" the words "three thousand" be substituted.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : My amendment reads :—

That in clause 4 for the words "fifteen hundred" the words "one thousand" be substituted.

Section 74 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of which the original clause is an amendment provides a simplified procedure for insolvency. The special provisions of section 74 apply to all cases where summary procedure in insolvency is permissible. Under section 74, no notice of an application for insolvency need be published in the official gazette, no official receiver is appointed but the court itself acts as a receiver, a discharge should be applied for within six months and the insolvent must be discharged within that period, and further the assets of the insolvent must be distributed in one dividend. Section 74 is purely optional and it confers a discretion upon a court to proceed in a summary manner or not as it considers expedient. I wish the House to take note of the fact that by merely increasing the value of the property you cannot make a court do what in fact may be impossible. All the other provinces are agreed that summary jurisdiction in insolvency should not be resorted to except in cases where the assets of the insolvent do not exceed Rs. 500, where as a matter of fact a court would be able to dispose of the case in say a couple of hearings. If, however, the value of the property is increased to such a limit that it is absolutely necessary to appoint a receiver, that it would be impossible that the assets could be distributed in one dividend, that further prolonged proceedings have to be taken which for instance necessitate the setting aside of fraudulent transfers, then this summary procedure cannot be ex-necessitate applied. Therefore it is necessary that if an experiment is to be made in the Punjab to increase the jurisdiction of insolvency courts with respect to summary procedure, we should move cautiously so that this summary procedure may have a trial. If your object is not to give it a trial you may put the jurisdiction at any limit you like. It was with this object that the Calvert Committee recommended that this jurisdiction might be extended from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,000. That is my chief reason for insisting upon one thousand as the limit. In my opinion that value would give a fair trial to the summary procedure in insolvency proceedings. With these words I oppose the amendment of Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and propose the amendment which stands in my name.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 4 for the words "fifteen hundred" the words "one thousand" be substituted.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): The original proposal of Government was that the value of property mentioned in section 74 of the Provincial Insolvency Act should be amended so as to make it Rs. 1,000 only. The select committee increased that sum to Rs. 1,500. I think we may fairly take the price of land at what the leader of the Unionist Party has put it namely Rs. 200 an acre. That I fancy is more the ordinary price of an acre of irrigated than that of an acre of unirrigated land. At that rate Rs. 1,500 would be the value of $7\frac{1}{2}$ acres and I admit that that is distinctly a small holding. At the same time to double it and bring it to Rs. 3,000 is a very long step indeed, the present sum under section 74 of the Provincial Insolvency Act being Rs. 500. If the party opposite find their way to accept Rs. 2,000, Government would be ready to accept that figure.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: We are prepared to accept the compromise.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah (Lahore, Muhammadan, Rural): If you will allow me to move it formally, I shall move—

That in clause 4 for the words "fifteen hundred" the words "two thousand" be substituted.

Mr. President: The question is—

That in clause 4 for the words "fifteen hundred" the words "two thousand" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural): I beg to move—

That at the end of clause 4 the following be added as a sub-clause:—

"The following be added as further proviso to the section:—

'Provided that all property belonging to a debtor and exempt from attachment or sale in execution of a decree shall be excluded from his assets, and agricultural land, in all cases in which it is not so exempt, shall be valued at thirty times the land revenue assessed thereon.'

This proviso divides itself into two portions. The first portion relates to the exclusion from his assets of that part of the property of a debtor which is exempt from attachment or sale in execution of a decree. The second portion relates to the method which should be adopted for the valuation of agricultural land which belongs to a debtor. With regard to the first portion of the proviso I beg to submit that when a man comes before a court and applies to be declared an insolvent it is not reasonable that those parts of his property which, under the law as it stands, are exempt from attachment or sale in execution of a decree should be considered as his assets. After all, if a creditor were to go to a civil court and obtain a decree against a debtor and then seek the execution of that decree there are certain items of the property of a judgment-debtor which would be immune from attachment or sale or from both. Why should that man be deprived of his right of being declared an insolvent on account of property which is not liable to attachment or sale in execution of a decree? Therefore, the proviso aims at the exclusion of this particular class of property from the assets of one who applies for being declared an insolvent.

The second portion of the proviso relates to a method of calculating the value of land which belongs to the petitioner. As the clause stands at present it leaves everything to the court. There is no definite standard laid down in the present clause as to the manner in which the value of a petitioner's land is to be judged. Wherever the law can be made definite and precise an attempt should be made to make it definite and precise. In some cases the presiding officer may adopt a standard of Rs. 300 per acre. Another officer may adopt a standard value of Rs. 200 per acre and a third may adopt Rs. 250 per acre. In the absence of a definite standard in one court the standard adopted may be 300 times the land revenue; in another court it may be 200 times the land revenue and in yet another court it may drop down to 100 times the land revenue assessed on the land in question. This may happen not only in different parts of the province or in different parts of the same district or in respect of different qualities of land, but this may very frequently happen in respect of the same part of the province, or in respect of the same part of the district or in respect of the same class of land. Therefore, it is only reasonable that courts should be supplied by the law itself with some sort of a definite standard. Even as things are at present a definite standard is already in vogue in respect of another important matter. In calculating the value of land for purposes of jurisdiction we are definitely required by the law to value agricultural land at thirty times the land revenue. Therefore, I am not putting forward an unreasonable proposition when I say that whenever it is necessary to calculate the value of land belonging to a petitioner for insolvency the standard adopted for valuing that land should be thirty times the land revenue. With these remarks I commend this proviso to the favourable consideration of the House.

Mr. President : The new clause moved is—

The following be added as further proviso to the section :

‘ Provided that all property belonging to a debtor and exempt from attachment or sale in execution of a decree shall be excluded from his assets, and agricultural land, in all cases in which it is not so exempt, shall be valued at thirty times the land revenue assessed thereon.’

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I rise to support the motion under consideration. As there is no fixed standard at present in our estimating the value of land, it will be very safe to put down a certain fixed standard, for in that case it will lead to uniformity of practice in all courts and will act as a deterrent against each court having its own discretion. Besides, this standard has been tried and found to be exact. Government has based jurisdiction of courts on this very estimate. In all civil suits whenever the question of jurisdiction comes the value is always put down at thirty times the land revenue. That shows that it is very exact, and I think it is very reasonable that this standard should be adopted now. The opposition to this Bill is that this amendment of the Insolvency Act will bring in a greater number of people within its scope than at present. This estimate is after all a modest one and is much lower than if the price is based on the actual market value of the land. For this reason I think there will be no opposition to the second part of the motion. As regards the first part of the motion the honourable member has said enough and I do not want to supplement his remarks, but I should advise him that if any opposition is shown to the first part it may be dropped and the second part should be allowed to be passed as it will be useful not only to the honourable members who are supporting the Bill but to those who are opposing it. I commend the second part of the motion to the consideration of the House and submit that it may be passed.

[Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan.]

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): We have already extended the scope of the Provincial Insolvency Act by the amendment which Government has just accepted by raising the value of property from Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 2,000. I am afraid Government cannot go further and extend the scope of the Bill by accepting the amendment which has just been moved. There are obvious objections I think to the amendment. The first is that in considering what property should be included in judging a debtor's assets surely we should look to the property which really is an asset. Now, it is true that land belonging to a member of an agricultural tribe cannot be sold in execution of a decree, but there is not the slightest doubt that the owner of land even if he is a member of an agricultural tribe can sell that land to another member of an agricultural tribe in the same group. There is no prohibition against doing that. The land, therefore, should be considered as part of his assets. He can raise money on it within the limits of the Land Alienation Act and it would be a purely artificial move to exclude land from the assets of a debtor merely because it cannot be sold in execution of a decree. There is another matter. It must be remembered that a creditor is not necessarily always a person who is not a member of an agricultural tribe. There are many money-lenders now-a-days who are members of agricultural tribes and a creditor of that description will be able to acquire the land of his debtor. I think it would be very illogical to exclude such land from the assets in connection with an application for insolvency proceedings.

With regard to the valuation of land there is a certain amount of attractiveness in the proposal that we should reach certainty by valuing the land at so many times the land revenue. The last speaker I understand said that the fact that it is valued for purposes of court fees at thirty times the land revenue shows that Government thought that that was the real value of the land. What it actually does show is that Government is exceedingly soft, because the actual value of land just now is 108 times the land revenue. I am taking the figures which the Leader of the Unionist Party gave us as the value of an acre of land—Rs. 200. The land revenue per acre is Re. 1-13-5. If you divide 200 by Re. 1-13-5, you get 108. To value land which is really worth about 100 times the land revenue at 30 is clearly absurd. I do not think Government can accept that.

Mr. President: The question is—

That at the end of clause 4 the following be added as a sub-clause:—

“That the following be added as a further proviso to the section:—

‘Provided that all property belonging to a debtor and exempt from attachment or sale in execution of a decree shall be excluded from his assets, and agricultural land, in all cases in which it is not so exempt, shall be valued at thirty times the land revenue assessed thereon.’”

The motion was lost.

Mr. President: The question is—

That clause 4 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 5.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): Sir, I move—

“That sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5 be omitted, and in their place the following be substituted:—

‘The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds ten per centum per annum simple interest or seven per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests, and if on other loans it exceeds eighteen and three-quarter per centum per annum simple interest or fourteen per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests.’”

There are notices of several amendments to delete sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, and I need hardly say anything in support of that proviso. The effect of course will be that the clause “Provided that the courts shall deem——” will be deleted.

With regard to the actual rates of interest proposed by Government as I said when the Bill was first introduced, Government was not wedded to any particular rates and it has only been by a process of what I might call “feeling about” that we have come to the rates which at present have been fixed. I think I may reserve anything else I may have to say till the debate has proceeded further.

Mr. President: Motion moved—

“That sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5 be omitted, and in their place the following be substituted:—

‘The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds ten per centum per annum simple interest or seven per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests, and if on other loans it exceeds eighteen and three-quarter per centum per annum simple interest or fourteen per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests.’”

Several gentlemen have given notice of almost identical or similar amendments or amendments which deal with different aspects of this amendment. All these amendments will be discussed together and voted upon separately, if necessary.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders General): My amendment only proposes to restore the rate of interest which was originally fixed in the Bill but which was objected to by the representatives of agriculturists. Since then some negotiations had been going on which I described as “objectionable” and my meaning was—

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: On a point of order. I expressly explained to the House very carefully just as the Leader of the Unionist Party did that the only negotiations that had gone on between Government and the Unionist Party were those that I explained at the beginning of this debate. I explained that fully and I think my word ought to be accepted.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: It is in view of the fact that it was because of the extreme demands made by the rural party that these concessions were made that I use the word objectionable. I say that this sort of procedure puts a premium on extremism and discourages moderation in our demands. That is why I call that negotiation objectionable. The rate of interest that has now been proposed by Government is lower than the rate of interest which has been accepted in Bengal and which is even proposed in the United Provinces. I need not remind the House that the agriculturist in the Punjab already enjoys an ample degree of protection and the lowering of the rate of interest to the extent to which the Government has now come down will materially affect the agriculturists' credit and will be injurious to their interest as well as to the interest of the people in general. This amendment is not confined to agriculturists alone. It applies to the whole of the lending and borrowing public. I say nothing as to the proviso because I have no objection to it as proposed by the Government. I confine my objection only to the rate of interest. I think the rate of interest proposed by the Government is too low and is lower than even what was proposed in the original Bill. As one of my friends pointed out the other day the Government has not given to the measure that amount of thought that it deserves, so much so that sometimes it comes forward with one proposal and then changes that proposal later in order to meet the demands of our rural friends. What has happened in the Council to-day? The Government has accepted the amendment of the learned representative of the rural party and raised the amount from Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 2,000 in respect of the value of property (Interruption.) In any case the Government has met the demands of the rural party. We are, therefore, condemned for our moderation. I think the rate of interest proposed might have been higher. With these words I move—

[D. B. Raja Narendra Nath.]

That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the following be substituted :—

“ The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 15 per cent. simple interest, and if on other loans it exceeds 18 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 24 per cent. simple interest.”

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the following be substituted :—

“ The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 15 per cent. simple interest, and if on other loans it exceeds 18 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 24 per cent. simple interest.”

Mian Nurullah (Lyallpur South, Muhammanadan, Rural) : Before I move my amendment I would like to refer to what Raja Sahib has just now said that Government in their original Bill had put rates different from what they have now put. After considering all the rates proposed I have come to the conclusion that the rates proposed by Government are very moderate, and if anything, rather high. I had the pleasure, a couple of days ago, to meet one of our very eminent bankers—eminent because of his life-long experience and recent position as chairman of a certain committee—who is well-known throughout India—I refer to Sir S. N. Poochkhanawala, the Managing Director of the Central Bank of India. The other day Mr. Mukand Lal, Puri, remarked that no bank would lend on mortgage of movable or immovable property a loan at anything less than 9 per cent.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I said immovable property. I have got with me the letters from the Lloyds Bank and the Central Bank of India.

Mian Nurullah : Then I will restrict myself only to immovable property. I can say that at Lyallpur and Jaranwala many customers have come to the Bank and mortgaged their houses and secured loans at 8½ per cent. As regards movable property, the rates fixed by Government under this Bill is 10 per centum. Sir Poochkhanawala was surprised to learn that the rates were fixed so high and he offered to lend at a lower rate of interest, at 3 per cent. I can, therefore, challenge Mr. Puri to bring security of gold and I can get him any amount of loan, 10 or 20 lakhs at 3 per cent. That is as regards movable property. Further Sir Poochkhanawala was astonished at the rate of 18½ per cent. where there was no security. On that basis even my amendment supporting the Government rates is very fair, very modest and reasonable. I want to add the proviso—Provided further that where rests short of yearly rests are fixed these rates will be reduced by one per centum each.

When I gave notice of my amendment the Government had not put in the words 'annual rests'. It is as a safeguard that annual rests should be enforced. If the annual rests are not enforced, then three-monthly or six-monthly rests would mean higher rate of interest than is actually proposed in the Bill. Having discussed the matter with the eminent banker I consider it to be fair to make a difference of about one per cent. in each case. That is not reducing the rate very much. Therefore, I suggest that each rate be reduced by one per cent. in case the rests are less than yearly.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : It is necessary to realise the import of the various proposals for change in the Usurious Loans Act which have been made by the Government. You will be pleased to notice, Sir, that before the recent attempts to amend the Usurious Loans Act, section 3 of the Act ran as follows :—

Notwithstanding anything in the Usury Laws Repeal Act, 1855, where, in any suit to which this Act applies, whether heard ex-parte or otherwise, the Court has reason to believe—

- (a) that the interest is excessive; and
- (b) that the transaction was, as between the parties thereto, substantially unfair, the Court may exercise all or any of the following powers, namely, may—
 - (i) re-open the transaction, take an account between the parties, and relieve the debtor of all liability in respect of any excessive interest,
 - (ii) notwithstanding any agreement, purporting to close previous dealings and to create a new obligation, re-open any account already taken between them and relieve the debtor of all liability in respect of any excessive interest, and if anything has been paid or allowed in account in respect of such liability, order the creditor to repay any sum which it considers to be repayable in respect thereof;
 - (iii) set aside either wholly or in part or revise or alter any security given or agreement made in respect of any loan, and if the creditor has parted with the security, order him to indemnify the debtor in such manner and to such extent as it may deem just.

Thus, before the Usurious Loans Act could be applied two conditions were necessary to be fulfilled, first that the rate of interest should be excessive and secondly that the contract between the parties should be unconscionable or unfair. Now by substituting the word "or" for the word "and" and the word "shall" for "may" the House has made it obligatory on courts to re-open the entire transaction from 1918 making the creditor even repay what has actually been paid to him, even if only one of the two conditions is fulfilled. The transaction may be perfectly fair between the parties, the transaction may not be unconscionable at all, but even if only the rate of interest is excessive the court will be bound to re-open the transaction and in some cases make the creditor pay what he has realised from the debtor. If the amendments stopped here the courts could only act if they found the rate to be excessive, but the present amendments propose to lay down what the courts must regard as "excessive," howsoever, lower than the prevalent rates the interest charged may be. The effect of this change in the law is that the court has no discretion at all but is bound to re-open the transaction, even if the rate charged is such to which no reasonable man could take exception at the time when the loan was advanced. It is now proposed to artificially lay down that if the rate of interest exceeds a particular rate, it shall be deemed to be excessive. And these rates are proposed to be applied with retrospective effect. One of the Government amendments lays down that the rate of interest shall be deemed to be excessive if for secured loans it exceeds 7 per cent. compound interest. Now, who can say that 7 per cent. compound interest was excessive at the time when the Government itself borrowed at that rate, or would be regarded as excessive even to-day when the Bank rate is as low as $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. I wish the House to realise what the effect of the proposal of the Government is. Even if the rate of interest is not shown to be excessive, even if the rate of interest is such which every one including the debtor himself would regard as fair or even lenient, the courts are bound to declare it to be excessive, and on that basis re-open the past transactions, and make the creditor in certain cases repay to the debtor amounts which have been willingly paid to him in the past under a contract which was quite fair and perfectly reasonable. That is not fair. Again the effect of the substitution of the word "shall" for the word "may" has not been sufficiently recognized. Previously, even if both the conditions were satisfied, if the Court felt that the matter was too trivial and the debtor had really benefitted by the transaction, it was discretionary with the courts to take any action or not. Now, a statutory obligation has been laid on the court that even if the creditor has behaved most sympathetically and magnanimously, even if the court is satisfied that the debtor has immensely benefitted by the transaction, it must re-open the transaction, declare that the rate of interest is excessive and take action under the provisions of the Usurious Loans Act. Raja Narendra Nath has more than once said that the desire on our part, the desire on this part of the House to assist the Government in passing a reasonable legislation has prevented us from opposing the proposals of the Government. Therefore, when the proposals of Government to substitute the word "or" for the word "and" and the word "shall" for the word "may" came up before the House we did not raise any objection. We did not raise any objection to the proposal to re-open the accounts if the transaction was unconscionable or if the court found the interest to be excessive. But the further amendments laying down that courts shall hold such exceptionally low rates of interest to be "excessive" with retrospective effect entirely change the nature and complexion of the previous amendments substituting "or" and "shall" for "and" and "may". The present amendment makes the previous amendments also ridiculous and oppressive, which otherwise were not open to serious objection.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

The present proposals do not lay down any standard of reasonableness, any test of excessiveness of interest, any measure of fairness or propriety. They lay down an arbitrary test, a most unjustifiable standard applicable to all times, both to past and future transactions, and regardless of actual circumstances of the parties, of the time and of the place. I have no desire to go into a detailed criticism of the proposals of the Government beyond pointing out to the Government that after all the Punjab is not the one place in the world whose legislation should take a line entirely different from the line adopted by the rest of the world or even the sister provinces in British India. No one, much less the Finance Member, would deny that this subject of fixing rates of interest is a difficult one, as Sir Edward Blunt in making his speech on this subject in the United Provinces Legislative Council remarked, that the matter before them was one of the most complex subjects which any legislature had ever dealt with. Its range whether in respect of transactions or persons was almost infinite and for any Government or human being to say once for all that what he held about the subject was correct would be to arrogate to himself the infallibility of the Almighty. Therefore, the Government, I hope, would not deny that the matter is not such which can be treated lightly. It is a matter which touches infinite number of people, which affects every village, every town, which affects industry, trade and commerce, which affects the relations existing between innumerable persons which may have continued happy and undisturbed for a very long number of years and which this legislation will surely upset. This is a matter not only of a difficult and complicated character but of a very far-reaching nature. Then again this is a legislation on a subject on which the best economic opinion and past experience of most countries is that attempts to regulate rates of interest by legislation have invariably failed. That is the opinion one finds expressed in most of the text books and also in the various reports which have recently been issued, and this is the conclusion which we the members of the Calvert Committee unanimously reached "that attempts to regulate rates of interest have not so far been successful". Therefore, Sir, this is a matter on which legislation should be passed, if at all, on some definite data. I submit, Sir, that every enquiry about rates of interest, which has been made by the Imperial Government or by the Punjab Government or by any other provincial Government, runs absolutely contrary to the present proposals of the Punjab Government. Now, the Punjab Government cannot say that it has not made any enquiries. It appointed the Calvert Committee inter alia to consider this matter. The Punjab Banking Enquiry Committee also reported on this matter. Is the Punjab Government unaware of their recommendations or the definite data on which they are based? Why run counter to those reports or their recommendations? It should be remembered that Usurious Loans Act is not merely a measure of relief for the agriculturists; it is a law which applies to the entire community and is a law which is directed against usury. Therefore, the main objection to which the Council ought to address itself is to propose the particular law with regard to usury for this province. The Calvert Committee unanimously recommended that a higher limit of rate of interest might be fixed beyond which all interest will be usurious and below which the courts should determine whether it is excessive or not. After all we did not arrive at that recommendation by a rule of thumb. It was the result of the study of literature which we were asked to study by the Punjab Government, the reports of the Punjab Banking Enquiry Committee, of the Royal Commission on Agriculture, and of the Labour Commission and a good deal of other literature on the subject, and we made our unanimous recommendations in the light of that study. Therefore, in those recommendations there was one definite data for the Punjab Government to follow. But the Punjab Government has thought fit not to follow the unanimous report of its committee. Perhaps it thinks that although that recommendation of the committee was unanimous, the committee consisted of a pack of fools who did not know what they were talking about and, therefore, it does not care for their report. I submit, Sir, that if the unanimous recommendation of a committee like that has to be upset, it should be upset by further enquiry. On that committee there were three able members of the agricultural tribes, my friend Mian Nurullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah and Sardar Sampuran Singh. They all signed that report and concurred with the official members and with us, who were in a minority, to make recommendations on this subject. Mr. Calvert, who had made a special study of the subject, who has read and written extensively on the subject, and who was a member of the Banking Enquiry Committee, and who was a great friend of the zamindars, was the President of the Committee along with our present Legal Remembrancer. We all agreed in recommending that if you want to amend an all-India enactment amend it on the lines of our report. The original proposals of the Government no doubt accepted parts of the Calvert Committee's recommendations regarding the fixing of the higher rate but they have absolutely gone counter to those recommendations with regard to rate. This report was published in 1933. It is not out of date and we spent about 8 months over this matter. Mian Nurullah was particularly keen in acquainting us with his views as an economist and we did all we could as an expert body with whatever expert knowledge we could claim.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Then again this matter came up before the Bengal Legislative Council and I will place before you the provisions of the Bengal Act, Act VII of 1933. This is a very recent legislation. Section 3 of the Bengal Money Lenders Act deals with this subject. It is provided there—

Where in any suit in respect of any money lent by a money-lender after the commencement of the Usurious Loans Act, 1918, it is found that the interest charged exceeds the rate of fifteen per cent. per annum in the case of a secured loan or twenty-five per cent. per annum in the case of an unsecured loan, or that there is a stipulation for rests at intervals of less than six months, the Court shall, until the contrary is proved, presume for the purpose of section 3 of the Usurious Loans Act, 1918, that the interest charged is excessive and that the transaction was harsh and unconscionable and was substantially unfair.

This is what has been enacted in Bengal. I am reading from the official copy of the Bengal Act, VII of 1933. Why don't you not adopt this, as your model for the Punjab? Again take the United Provinces. I read out to the House at the last meeting of the Council the opinions of Sir Edward Blunt, Mr. Mudde and other European members from their minute of dissent to the report of the select committee. I wish to place before the House to-day what has been passed by the United Provinces Legislative Council, only last week. The number of zamindar members of debtor classes was no less in the United Provinces Council than in the Punjab. But the Government showed greater stamina there, and did not yield to the threats of the representatives of the debtor classes, some of them, no doubt, debtors themselves as here. They could be no party to the spoliation of the minority even though a vast majority stood to gain by it. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram says, this legislation is not in the interests of the Hindus. Ninety per cent. of the Hindus are debtors.

But I wish to point out—(Interruption) Let me revert to the main theme. I say this is not a matter on which the Punjab Government, if it wishes to do the right thing, is without a precedent or proper guidance. It can refer, if it likes, to the United Provinces amendment which has been passed. It was moved by a member at the instance of the Government and it was accepted by the Government. It is to the following effect and I may mention that I have also given notice of an amendment to-day on this subject, in identical language, to enable the Government and the House to adopt the United Provinces Legislation on this subject :—

Provided that in the case of loans secured by a first mortgage the court shall deem the interest excessive if—

- (1) the rate exceeds 12 per cent. per annum, or
- (2) the amount of interest that might become due at any time exceeds the amount that would become due at that time if the rate were 12 per cent. per annum and the interval between rests were six months ;

Provided also that in the case of loans secured otherwise than by a first mortgage the court may, if it considers that the nature of the security warrants it, deem that the interest is not excessive even though the rate exceeds 12 per cent. per annum or the amount of interest that might become due at any time exceeds the amount that would become due at that time if the rate were 12 per cent. per annum and the interval between rests six months :

Provided also that in the case of unsecured loans the court shall, unless the contrary is proved, deem the interest excessive, if—

- (1) the rate exceeds 24 per cent. per annum, or
- (2) the amount of interest that might become due at any time exceeds the amount that would become due at that time if the rate were 24 per cent. per annum and the interval between rests were six months :

Provided also that in the case of secured loans the court shall not deem the interest excessive, if—

- (1) the rate does not exceed 7 per cent. per annum, and
- (2) the amount of interest that might become due at any time does not exceed the amount that would become due at that time if the rate were 7 per cent. per annum and the interval between rests were six months :

Provided also that in the case of unsecured loans the court shall not deem the interest excessive, if —

- (1) the rate does not exceed 9 per cent. per annum, and
- (2) the amount of interest that might become due at any time does not exceed the amount that would become due at that time if the rate were 9 per cent. per annum and the interval between rests were six months.

Now, Sir, the provisions of the United Provinces Bill which have now been accepted by the House are that the outside limit for secured loans is 12 per cent. compound interest with six-monthly rests, for unsecured loans 24 per cent. compound interest with six-monthly rests and it is further provided that interest on secured loans below 7 per cent. shall not be considered excessive and interest on unsecured loans below 9 per cent. compound interest shall not be considered excessive. They have maintained on the lines of the original proposals of the Punjab Government the two limits, one the lower limit below which interest shall not be considered to be excessive and the other the higher limit beyond which interest shall be considered excessive, and between the two limits discretion is given to the courts of law to hold interest excessive or otherwise. The amendments of which the Punjab Government have now given notice do not have any lower limit at all. What they propose is that in case of secured loans more than 7 per cent. compound interest shall be considered excessive, but below 7 per cent. it is still open to the courts to hold that interest is excessive. It will be open to courts in the Punjab to hold for instance that 6 per cent. compound interest or 5 per cent. compound interest as excessive. What has been accepted by the United Provinces Legislature is certainly more in consonance with facts than the amendment of the Punjab Government, and there is no reason why the Punjab Government, if it wants to discard the report of its own committee, should not accept these proposals. Then, Sir, apart from that, the Punjab Government's own original proposals are given in clause 5 of the Bill and, the amendment which stands in the name of Punjab Government now, is absolutely at variance with its original proposal. In clause 5 of the original Bill it was provided—

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Provided further, that the court shall deem interest to be excessive, if, on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 15 per cent. simple interest, and, if on other loans, it exceeds 18 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 24 per cent. simple interest.

These were the original proposals of the Punjab Government in which the rates of interest were lower than those laid down in the enactments of the Bengal Legislature in the 1933 Act, of the proposals which the United Provinces Government and Legislature have ultimately adopted only last week. These proposals were sent for eliciting opinion and I wish to draw the attention of the House to the opinion of the High Court on these proposals of the Government. These proposals of the Government, I may submit, were accepted or endorsed by practically all the Judges of the High Court. The report of the judges is on page 9 of the opinions received on the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill and a brief extract of this I shall place before you :

The Judges support the proposal to amend the Usurious Loans Act by substituting "or" for "and" in section 3 of the Act. As regards the fixing of a definite rate beyond which interest shall be considered excessive, one Judge is opposed to any change in the existing law. Four support the proposals of Government in section 4 (b) of your letter under reply. Nine consider that once the principle of the courts' entire discretion in the matter of presuming interest to be excessive is abandoned, a definite limit should be fixed above which interest should be deemed to be excessive and below which it should not; and that there should not be any gap between the upper and lower limits. They propose that this limit should be 12 per cent. compound interest where there is security of property, and where there is not, 18 per cent. compound interest with annual rests, or 24 per cent. simple interest.

Therefore, you have the opinion of 14 Honourable Judges of the High Court who agree with the original proposals of the Punjab Government.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Except that they do not want two limits.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Yes, except that they do not want two limits, but unfortunately the Government has not accepted the opinion of the High Court even on this point. The opinion of the High Court judges was that the Government if it is fond of fixing rates of interest should fix a rate of interest beyond which the courts should consider the rate to be excessive and below which the courts should hold the rate to be fair. What the Government has done is contrary to the advice of the High Court judges.

They have fixed the outside limit beyond which the rate shall be excessive, below that rate they have still left it to the court to determine whether the rate is excessive or not. The failure to accept the advice of the High Court will lead to unnecessary prolongation of litigation and waste of time of the courts, but that is not the precise matter which I wish to emphasise at this time. The Honourable Finance Member has in answer to my request the other day as to what led him to propose these new and abnormally low rates, took us into his confidence and stated that these were the result of "feeling about the matter." Now, Sir, what I wish to know is that with these precedents before them the report of the Calvert Committee, the Bengal Money-lenders Act, 1933, the United Provinces legislation recently passed, what was the inquiry, what was the data on which the Honourable Finance Member has based his new proposals? I say that the rates for secured loans are abnormally low, but do not take my word for it. This is a matter which can be definitely and correctly ascertained without much difficulty. The Punjab Government can get its registration offices searched by issuing a circular letter and be in possession of the current rates on secured loans, or mortgages of property within a week. If information of that kind is obtained I make bold to say you will hardly find five per cent., if any at all, cases where loans have been advanced against house property on less than 7 per cent. compound interest as is proposed in the Government amendment. Why does the Punjab Government not make this simple enquiry. I wrote to the Registrar, Lahore, to supply me that information, but he has not been pleased to do so. Kindly imagine what will be the effect of your legislation. People who are so far perfectly satisfied with their transactions, people who have thanked their stars for getting accommodation at 8 or 9 per cent. compound interest against mortgages, people who have been discharging their obligations, people who had no reason for or no intention of going to courts, you are asking them, inviting them in fact, to go to courts. And you are doing so, by a piece of retrospective legislation laying down that anything more than 7 per cent. compound interest with yearly rests on secured loans is excessive. A debtor who thought himself fortunate to have secured money at $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. against house property is being invited to repudiate a transaction, which judged from all possible standards is very fair and equitable. I can assert, without fear of contradiction that to have secured money at that rate of interest, at $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. compound interest in those days, I am talking of the last six years, was indeed a luxury in this province. Now if the Government proposal is accepted all those transactions would become unconscionable. You are introducing elements of strife where there are none at present; you are asking people to quarrel who were perfectly satisfied with the transactions between them. The subject is no doubt difficult, but are you basing your legislation on any enquiry into the past or existing conditions of the province? Is there a member of Government who has the courage to assert that $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. compound interest with six-monthly rests would not be a very fair and in fact lenient rate of interest on mortgage of house property in this province? And yet you are compelling all the courts of this province, including the Privy Council, to hold that this rate is excessive and usurious! Only the Punjab Government can claim credit for such monstrous proposals.

4 P.M.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Mian Nurullah said that some banker told him that the rate of interest in these days was so much. I should point out that those rates of interest may be possibly true against Government securities, and against gold, and against marketable goods which can be at once transformed into money at any time. A loan may be secured against such first class securities, or again it may be secured against the first or second mortgage of property situated in towns or villages. The rates of interest vary with the several kinds of securities. Rates of interest against movable property, against marketable goods in the possession of the borrowers have always been low; the rate against Government securities is again low. A letter has just now been shown to me by a member of this House who is a wealthy and a very respectable businessman from the Lloyds Bank, one of the leading English banks in India offering him to advance money against wheat at 7 per cent. compound interest with monthly rests, insurance and godown charges to be paid by the customer. This would work out at 8 per cent. and this is the rate charged by a respectable bank these days when the bank rate is 3 or 3½ per cent. and when it is lent against readily marketable goods like wheat with 25 per cent. margin and to a respectable party. Those who have dealt with Banks on the security of marketable goods know, what a good security the goods are. They can be sold as soon as the money is not paid or requisite margin not kept up, and debt realised. If Lloyds Bank lends money against such security, and to such party at this rate to-day, with what grace can the Punjab Government declare the transactions of money-lenders against house property at this rate usurious? According to the amendment of the Punjab Government, this transaction of the Lloyd's Bank would be, but for exemption in favour of the Banks, usurious. This means that according to the proposals of the Government all transactions in the Punjab on secured loans would be usurious. The Government has not given us any reasons for their new proposals, which appear to me to be unreasonable. Speaking for myself, unless the Government benches give us some further information I have no justification in drawing any conclusion except this—I have tried to be very charitable on this point—that Chaudhri Chhotu Ram the leader of the debtor classes made some most unreasonable proposals and he did so as the Honourable Raja Sahib pointed out, following the Persian proverb which means "Ask for death so that the fever may leave you", and the Government alarmed by them met him by saying that if he would drop some of these preposterous proposals, they would accept his other proposals, which were equally unreasonable. On what basis, otherwise, may I ask, have the Government arrived at these rates? Do they think that this is an economic rate? I have in my amendments before the House placed several alternative amendments. As I have said I have tabled an amendment identical with the provisions of the Act passed by the Bengal Legislative Council in the year 1933. If that is not acceptable to the House, I have tabled another amendment which is identical with what has now been accepted by the Government and the legislature of the United Provinces. If that is again not acceptable, I say let us accept the original proposals of the Punjab Government itself, endorsed as they were by no less than 14 Judges of the High Court, who naturally must have spoken from their experience on this point. The Punjab Government should proceed in a matter of this kind, on some enquiry or precedent, and if these enquiries or precedents do not satisfy them, let them institute a fresh enquiry. They cannot legislate as a result of "feeling about," groping in the dark. I commend to the notice of the Government the speech of the Finance Member of the United Provinces Government, Sir Edward Blunt, and of the Home Member in the United Provinces Council last week, when they were discussing the amendment of Usurious Loans Act in their Council last week. I ask the Government of the Punjab to dispaly that spirit of regard for all the classes of the population of this province which the United Provinces Government have evinced for their own and not be a party to a piece of legislation which is inequitable and which is being dictated by an unreasonable majority. With these words I move the following amendments :—

1. That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the following be substituted :—

"Where in any suit in respect of any money lent after the commencement of the Usurious Loans Act, 1918, it is found that the interest charged exceeds the rate of 15 per cent. per annum in the case of a secured loan or 25 per cent. per annum in the case of unsecured loan or that there is a stipulation for rests at interval of less than 6 months, the court shall, until the contrary is proved, presume for the purpose of section 3 of the Usurious Loans Act, 1918, that the interest charged is excessive."

2. That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the following be substituted :—

"The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on a loan advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 15 per cent. simple interest, and if on other loans it exceeds 18½ per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 24 per cent. simple interest."

3. That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the following be substituted :—

"The court shall not deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it does not exceed 9 per cent. compound interest with six months' rest or 10 per cent. simple interest, but the court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of the immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with half-yearly rest or 15 per cent. simple interest, and if on loans it exceeds 18 per cent. compound interest with half-yearly rest or 24 per cent. simple interest."

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendments moved—

1. That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the following be substituted :—

"Where in any suit in respect of any money lent after the commencement of the Usurious Loans Act, 1918, it is found that the interest charged exceeds the rate of 15 per cent. per annum in the case of a secured loan or 25 per cent. per annum in the case of unsecured loan or that there is a stipulation for rests at interval of less than 6 months, the court shall, until the contrary is proved, presume for the purpose of section 3 of the Usurious Loans Act, 1918, that the interest charged is excessive."

2. That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the following be substituted :—

"The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on a loan advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 15 per cent. simple interest, and if on other loans it exceeds 18½ per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 24 per cent. simple interest."

[Mr. President.]

3. That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the following be substituted :—

" The court shall not deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it does not exceed 9 per cent. compound interest with six months' rest or 10 per cent. simple interest, but the court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of the immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with half-yearly rest or 15 per cent. simple interest, and if on loans it exceeds 18 per cent. compound interest with half-yearly rest or 24 per cent. simple interest."

Professor W. Roberts (Non-Official, nominated) : I move—

That sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5 be omitted and in their place the following be substituted :—

- (1) The Court shall deem interest to be excessive if it exceeds the bank rate fixed by the Imperial Bank of India by more than a percentage which shall vary according as to whether the loan is secured or unsecured and whether the interest on the loan is simple or compound.
- (2) For the purposes of sub-section (1) the court shall deem interest to be excessive if on secured loans it exceeds the bank rate plus 4 per cent. simple interest per annum or the bank rate plus 2 per cent. compound interest per annum with six-monthly rests, and if on unsecured loans it exceeds the bank rate plus 8 per cent. simple interest per annum or the bank rate plus 5 per cent. compound interest per annum with six-monthly rests.
- (3) For the purpose of determining the rate of interest the court shall assume that the bank rate for the period from the 1st of January to the 30th of June in any year shall be the bank rate fixed by the Imperial Bank of India on the 15th of December of the preceding year, and that the bank rate from July 1st to December 31st in any year shall be that fixed by the Imperial Bank of India on June 15th of that year.

This amendment is being brought forward mainly to try and make this Bill as far as the rates of interest are concerned, workable under the varying conditions of the money market. It is not necessary to go back more than three years when the Imperial Bank rate was 8 per cent., as late as September 1931. If we fix now rigid rates we shall find that a change in the bank rate which may again come to 6, 7 or 8 per cent. might preclude all agricultural borrowings. And, therefore, I am very insistent that this part, the first one in the amendment, should be accepted as a general principle. With regard to the other parts of the amendment, if I may speak on them now, that is about the rates of interest, the method which I suggest here, I know is one which is open to differences of opinion. But I must say I have been amazed at the complacency with which some of the leading members to our left have quoted rates given by well known banks, commercial banks both Indian and British, and the Government co-operative banks. The complacency with which the rates, 8, 9 and 10 per cent. are mentioned is an amazing thing to me. I cannot understand how this province can possibly progress, quite apart from agriculture, if such rates of interest are going to be accepted by this House as a normal thing. They must end. We must try to bring the rates of interest in the province to some relation with the bank rate. After all, what is the bank rate in India? It is now $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. here when it is 2 per cent. in England and similarly very low in the United States of America and France. The bank rate in this country should be lower than it is now. And yet we have members of the House calling rates of interest two-and-a-half times the present Indian bank rate as being reasonable. It is absolutely unreasonable. My own private opinion is that before this Bill was introduced we should have had some kind of moratorium. The condition of the agriculturist and the debt question is so serious that I wish this Bill really got to the bottom of it. My friend, the honourable member Chaudhri Afzal Haq referred to the Muhammadan system of no interest being charged and my friend, the honourable member, Mr. Puri, said it was mediæval. My reading of history is that the present system is more mediæval, more ancient and that the no-interest system was probably introduced later. Certainly that is quite reasonable. At the present rate of interest I cannot imagine the agriculture of this province even in prosperous days being able to support the rates of interest which are being claimed at the present day. And I think that this part of my amendment which aims at reducing the rates of interest is in the interests of the general progress of the province, in the interest of every member of this House in the long run and makes the security of capital and the security of the basis for progress both in agriculture and industry more certain in the future. (Cheers).

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5 be omitted and in their place the following be substituted :—

- (1) The court shall deem interest to be excessive if it exceeds the bank rate fixed by the Imperial Bank of India by more than a percentage which shall vary according as to whether the loan is secured or unsecured and whether the interest on the loan is simple or compound.
- (2) For the purposes of sub-section (1) the court shall deem interest to be excessive if on secured loans it exceeds the bank rate plus 4 per cent. simple interest per annum or the bank rate plus 2 per cent. compound interest per annum with six-monthly rests, and if on unsecured loans it exceeds the bank rate plus 8 per cent. simple interest per annum or the bank rate plus 5 per cent. compound interest per annum with six-monthly rests.
- (3) For the purpose of determining the rate of interest the court shall assume that the bank rate for the period from the 1st of January to the 30th of June in any year shall be the bank rate fixed by the Imperial Bank of India on the 15th of December of the preceding year, and that the bank rate from July 1st to December 31st in any year shall be that fixed by the Imperial Bank of India on June 15th of that year.

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerjee (Punjab Chamber of Commerce and Trades Association, Commerce) : The amendment of Mr. Roberts and the one of which I had given notice¹ are almost the same. In fact Mr. Roberts spoke for my amendment as well. I would therefore withdraw my amendment in favour of Mr. Roberts. We have here a good deal of discussion about the proper rates of interest. To determine what is a fair rate of interest is a problem which bristles with difficulties. To-day the bank rate

¹In clause 5, sub-clause (iv), sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) be omitted and in their place the following be substituted :—

The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds ten per centum simple interest. When compound interest is charged on secured loans interest shall be deemed to be excessive when it exceeds by over two per centum the Imperial Bank rate prevailing on the day of the transaction. On other loans interest shall be deemed to be excessive if it exceeds eighteen and three-quarter per centum simple interest and fourteen per centum compound interest.

[R. B. Mr. P. Mukerjee.]

may be three per cent. But any day the rate may go up and I do not think honourable members have forgotten the time when in a period of boom the bank rate was as much as 8 per cent. At that time businessmen and traders made a good deal of profit by taking loan even at 15 per cent. and more. But since this Bill is restricted to small landowners and not to the business people I believe the rate fixed by Mr. Roberts in his amendment is fair and I would support his motion.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural) : I think the only objection that was taken to the motion of Government was that the rates proposed therein were very low. Government have made their position quite clear by remarking that they themselves were not very definite as to what to do in deciding what rate of interest should be considered moderate or reasonable. It is thus clear that Government are open to conviction, they have an open mind in the matter so that both the parties might put their case before them. I would submit that the choice they have made after hearing both sides, after this much deliberation, errs on the wrong side and I should say that the rate proposed by Government is excessive and too high.

As regards the amendment of Mr. Roberts I think his brief speech has made a definite and categorical reply to all the points that have been raised by honourable members on the other side. They asked that data should be collected and said that because there has been legislation in different provinces like Bengal and the United Provinces we should adopt a like measure here. Mr. Roberts has told us "why go so far. The rates that have been suggested by our friends on the other side are two or three times the rates of the Imperial Bank of India." Therefore in the circumstances I support the amendment of Mr. Roberts.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq (Amritsar City, Muhammadan, Urban) : The speech of my learned friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri came as a shock to me. Whenever the time comes honourable members of the party opposite (Hindu Urban) always try to pose as friends of the Hindu community but here they are condemning 60 lakhs of Hindus of this province perpetually to misery by proposing these high rates. When the time comes they show their bania mind, their money-lending mind. It is to the real interest of the Hindu community that the rates of interest should be reduced. For serving the interest of 10 per cent. of the population he is sacrificing the interest of 90 per cent. of the Hindus of the province. For what he is doing or attempts to do here he will have to answer his own community, not only that, but to the people of the Punjab. My honourable friend says that other Governments have not lowered the rates to the extent the Punjab Government proposes. My reply is that those Governments have not got the courage of their convictions. If only the Government of the United Provinces had the courage of their conviction they should have risen to the occasion and admitted that 25 per cent. is absolutely a usurious rate which no zamindar or as a matter of fact, any debtor can ever pay. Then the honourable member spoke in a vein of scorn that there was a compromise in the matter between two parties, viz., the Government and the Unionists. I ask where is anything wrong in compromises? Is compromise a crime? It was the duty of Government to protect the interests of the public.

Mr. President : Will the honourable member please speak to the motion?

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : I have to answer why Government is right in reducing the rate. I have to answer honourable friends on the other side word for word spoken on this motion. The average holding of the zamindar in the Punjab is 15 bighas and I think my friend will agree with me that the average income per bigha is Rs. 4 or Rs. 5. That is to say, a zamindar who owns 15 bighas of land has an annual income of Rs. 60. Suppose he borrows Rs. 100 to buy a pair of oxen. At the rate of interest now proposed by the honourable member, he will be paying Rs. 25 a year as interest alone, and he will be paying that debt all his life out of his income of Rs. 50 or Rs. 60. Is that conseionable? Is there a civilised Government that can allow that sort of thing? They say that England has abolished slavery. Slavery is not abolished from the world, so long as any Government allows such a high rate of interest, because it means that the man sells his whole family. If he borrows Rs. 100 from a money-lender, and his pair of oxen die and he has to buy another pair for Rs. 100 in that case he has to work all the life, and pay every bit of his income to the money-lender, in order to satisfy the interest on Rs. 200 because interest on Rs. 200 will be Rs. 50 per mensem, three-fourths of his total annual income. In proposing the amendment my friends want to sacrifice the interests of the 90 per cent. population of the province for the sake of the 10 per cent. population. If such a high rate of interest is allowed to be perpetuated, it will ruin the people of the Punjab. What is the use of asking for self-government when you are going to sacrifice 90 per cent. of your population and allow them to live in perpetual misery? Let there be no self-government. We do not want it if we cannot have the power to protect the poor people. Where is the protection of those people who simply for Rs. 200 are to sell all their lives to the money-lenders? My friend says, convert 'shall' into 'may.' As a lawyer I would like to support him but my conscience does not allow me to do so, because 'may' will mean so many appeals. One judge will interpret it in one way and another in another way and thus give chance of appeals to the High Court and cause endless litigation. It may mean a bad business for lawyers if a limit is placed, otherwise where is the harm if you say that a definite sum should be taken from the debtor. Both sides will in that case know their position. The debtor will know that he is not to pay more than $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. and the creditor will know that he cannot take more than $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. If no limit is fixed, the judge will fix a certain amount. The dissatisfied party appeals and says that the judge has wrongly interpreted the word 'may' with the consequent result that there will always be inducements to try luck in courts.

My friend said that because the rate of interest is high in Bengal, because it is high in the United Provinces, therefore it must be high in the Punjab also. What a piece of reasoning! What a piece of logic! He wants that the Punjab Government which has the interests of the Punjab at heart should follow what was done in 1933 in Bengal. Why should we follow other provinces? I would like Bengal to follow the Punjab. I ask, is there anybody in the House who can pay 18 per cent. for a debt which is secured ? That is too high a rate of interest and it will be impossible for any debtor to get out of his debt. I assert that even 18 per cent. is too high for unsecured debts. Then my friend quotes the bank rates and says that the interest charged by banks is 8 per cent. or 7 per cent. It is funny that the banks should charge 3 per cent on a hundi but 7 per cent. on deposit of wheat or against Government security. It is unreasonable. But because the banks do it, it does not follow that we are going to allow the present system to continue for a long time.

[Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq.]

Then my friend said that Government of the Punjab had not followed the recommendation of the commission. The Simon Commission came and after due deliberation they made recommendations, but my friend sitting here did not accept the decision of the British Government. Commissions are sent out as 'feelers,' to see if they can find out anything. We are not to follow the decisions of the commissions. We have to see to the interests of the public. From every day observations we have to see how things are going on, and act accordingly. We find to-day that the position of the tenantry is becoming impossible. It is the same thing that happened in Russia. The money-lenders and the aristocrats never cared for the interests of the peasant, so much so that there was a revolution in 1917. Where are those money-lenders ? Where are those aristocrats ? They are nowhere. Similar was the case in Germany. Everybody knows that the money-lenders there are all scattered to the four corners of the globe.

The honourable members should come forward and make concrete proposals to stop litigation because it is very expensive and the burden on the zamindar is very heavy. How can a poor zamindar pay 11 per cent. to Government as stamp duty and 5 per cent. to lawyers and munshis and incur other charges when a decree is passed against him. It is impossible for a man who cannot even make a living to spend so much on litigation, and it is only right that we should make definite proposals that no money-lender should take interest at such a high rate and that all cases should as far as possible be settled out of courts. Mr. Puri says, why should a bania lend money at a lower rate than he desires and that rate should not be fixed for interest. I ask the honourable member, why are rates of tonga-hire fixed ? If Mr. Puri were to go to the bazar and the tongawala asked a rupee as his hire, Mr. Puri would have him challaned. Why, I ask, were the tonga rates fixed ? Why, I ask, were the rates of electric supply fixed ? Why were they recently reduced to 4 annas per unit ? The honourable member has perhaps some interest in the Electric Supply Company. Why did he not say, take electricity at six annas a unit, or do not take our current ? If the British Government were to levy a death duty of 50 per cent., the banias will cry. Capital has to be controlled by the legislature. It has to be controlled by the people.

My friends always cry that murders of banias are taking place and that so many banias have been robbed and killed. Much of the looting is the result of the poverty of the people. As soon as you lower the interest to a reasonable limit, there will be less likelihood of robberies and there will be no murders. So the fixing of the rate of interest is in the interests of the bania. It is in his own interest that he should not take so much interest; he should take a reasonable rate of interest as it is to his own protection. These Hindu urban members are fighting for the so-called protection of money-lenders by raising the rate of interest; they are not paying any heed to the interest of the poor misery stricken people. And these are the people who call themselves nationalists? I most respectfully say that time has come when we must fix the limits in the interests of the money-lender, in the interests of the zamindar and in the interests of capital. After all capital is necessary for the government of a country. We do not want to pass any Confiscatory Act, but we do want that interest should be so regulated that the debtors should be expected to pay as much as they can afford and is reasonable. I think we should not make the lives of debtors miserable. It is our duty to fix a limit and I think we are doing our duty in restricting it to this limit.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani (Non-official, nominated) (Urdu): Sir, I rise to support the amendment moved by the Honourable the Finance Member. The rate of interest suggested in the amendment is excessive no doubt, but I think it is a fair compromise between the rates of interest suggested, by the Leader of the Unionist Party and the Leader of the Hindu Party in their amendments respectively.

Sir, I have listened to the spirited speech of my honourable friend, the representative of Industries with interest. He has given true expression to the innermost feelings and mentality of the money-lending classes. It is regrettable that this important economic measure should have been looked at from a narrow and communal point of view. My Honourable friend has accused the Government and the Unionist Party, of having joined hands to crush the interests of the money-lending class, but let me tell him that the Government has brought this measure more in the interest of money-lending classes than of the debtor classes. It has been remarked that the economic depression was not a special feature of this province which should have necessitated such a drastic action on the part of the Government. I agree with my honourable friend that this economic depression is world-wide and not limited only to the Punjab. I would like to tell him that every country in the world has felt the pinch of this depression and has taken action according to its needs and requirements. A study of the history will support my view that whenever such economic conditions developed in a country, action was taken either by the Government or the masses themselves. The reasons of French Revolution were more of economic nature than political. The overthrow of Russian monarchy and the introduction of Bolshevism in Russia was due to economic unrest more than to anything else. Wherever a Government has failed to take adequate action to improve the economic situation of a country the results have been disastrous. It is not very long ago that the German Government took a very strong action to relieve the debtor classes of their country from the clutches of the dynasty of Shylocks. Every one is fully aware of the fate of the Jews in Germany. This is an action taken by a civilized European Government in modern times. Not only this but Germany has refused to pay its national liability, the war debt, to America and England. England and France pressed the American Government to declare a moratorium on war debts, and to suspend interest until the economic conditions improved. They have suspended the payment of debt instalments to America. Such examples are not wanting in India itself. The Government was forced to bring forward a relief measure in Deccan to improve the distressed condition of indebted agriculturists of that part of the country. Do my honourable friends, the representatives of money-lending classes want that state of affairs to develop in this province? If the conditions take such serious turn here, a stronger action will be necessary than what the Government is proposing to do now. In Kashmir, Bhawnagar and other Indian States stronger actions have been taken in this direction. In other provinces of British India also, relief measures have been introduced. It is not practicable to take uniform action everywhere. An action which is desirable in Germany cannot be necessarily suitable for England. Similarly action taken by the United Provinces Government may not be adequate in the Punjab. It is very wrong to accuse the Government of unduly favouring the rural classes. The prosperity of the province mainly depends on the satisfactory condition of the agricultural classes and in the wider interests of the province it is essential to protect their interests and to give them relief when it is necessary. This measure, as I have already said, is in the interest of the money-lending classes. At present the debtor classes realising that it is beyond their means to pay up their debts, have suspended their efforts to discharge their liabilities. If the rate of interest and the amount of debt can be brought to the paying capacity of the debtors they will make an honest effort to discharge their moral obligations. This measure will help to revive hope, in the hearts of the debtors, of being able to clear their debts and the realisation of the debts will be made possible. If an obstinate attitude is taken, by the representatives of money lenders, to keep the rate of interest high and beyond the paying capacity of the debtors it will result in a deadlock and the realisation will be made impossible. It has been suggested by the champions of the cause of the money-lenders to fix the interest at $37\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. and the leader of their party has suggested a rate of 24 per cent. Now let us examine whether it is at all possible for the rural debtors to pay this interest. The estimated amount of agricultural debt of the province is 200 crores and the interest at the rate of $37\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. and 24 per cent. per annum will come to 75 crores and 48 crores, respectively. The total net agricultural income of the province can be estimated on the basis of land revenue. The land revenue is assessed at 25 per cent. to 33 per cent. of the net assets of an agriculturist. The land revenue of the province is about $3\frac{1}{2}$ crores. Basing the assessment of land revenue at 25 per cent. of the net assets the annual net agricultural income of the province comes to 14 crores. How can it be possible to pay up the suggested rate of interest even if all the agricultural income is devoted to this purpose? If my honourable friends wish to bring the crisis to a head it is open to them to oppose such a reasonable proposal or if they want to oppose this because it happens to be a Government measure they may please themselves, but let me warn them that in doing so they will be injuring the interests of the classes they represent. If the economic outlook of the country remains gloomy as it is to-day the results will be disastrous. If this measure is allowed to pass, it will relieve my friends sitting on those benches of asking Council questions at every session of the Council as to the number of sahu-kars murdered every year. It will also help to improve the relations between rural and urban classes which is most essential for the political and social advancement of the country.

[K. B. Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani.]

It has been suggested that if the rate of interest is lowered it will adversely affect the rural credit and the agriculturists will not be able to raise money at times of need. The expansion of rural credit has reached such a stage that a strong check is necessary. We shall be more content if our credit is restricted than groan under an unbearable load of debt. The money-lending system in the province has been an obstacle in the way of industrial development. In the days of prosperity a bania found it more profitable to invest his money in money-lending than in industrial purposes. He could start money-lending even with a small capital. No effort was, therefore, made to form joint stock companies to develop the industries of the country. If a check is brought on money-lending the savings of the sahukars will have to find another outlet and these will be invested on industrial development which will naturally bring more prosperity to the province. I hope my honourable friend from Hoshiarpur who suggested a new use of Mr. Gandhi's brain after his retirement from Congress politics, will agree with me that this is one way to help the development of the country's industries. He remarked that he will send a copy of the debate on this Bill to the members of British Parliament to show how the majority party in this Council oppresses the minority. I wish he does so. The British public will be able to judge for themselves as to what the real conditions are in this country. They will be able to judge the outlook of the minority community which rejects every reasonable proposal and is only well versed in the art of destructive criticism. Their sense of proportion will be evident by their proposing a rate of interest at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. at a time when the Imperial Bank is charging $8\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. interest. The speeches made by them will adequately show their narrow outlook and communal trend of mind for which they always unjustly accuse the majority. On the other hand it will fully demonstrate the attitude of the majority. In a matter of such vital importance as this Bill they have, as usual, showed a spirit of conciliation and good will and have accepted every suggestion of a reasonable compromise which has been made to them. They agreed to delete the new clauses from the Bill, which were of a controversial nature. Only this morning they accepted a compromise suggested by the Honourable Finance Member to limit the benefit of simplified insolvency procedure only to those debtors, the value of whose assets does not exceed Rs. 2,000 instead of keeping the limit at Rs. 3,000 which the leader of the Unionist Party had proposed in his amendment.

It has been remarked by my honourable friend the representative of Industries that if the rate of 7 per cent. compound interest on secured loans is fixed, it will encourage litigation, because people who had borrowed money at the rate of $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. or more will try to get the benefit of this Act and go to courts. I do not see any weight in this argument as it will happen in any case if a limit is to be fixed. If the limit is fixed, say, at 12 per cent. the people who had borrowed at a higher rate of interest than that will try to get the benefit of this Act and go to courts. We have after all to fix the same limit and we cannot avoid this even by fixing a higher rate of interest. The very object of this Bill is to afford relief to debtors.

[K. B. Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani.]

My friend has objected to sub-clause (i) of clause 5. Section 3 of the Usurious Loans Act of 1918 says—

Notwithstanding anything in the Usury Laws Repeal Act, 1855, where, in any suit to which this Act applies, whether heard ex-parte or otherwise, the court has reason to believe—

(a) that the interest is excessive; and

(b) that the transaction was, as between the parties thereto, substantially unfair, the court may exercise all or any of the following powers, namely, may, &c., &c.

At present the court cannot take action under this section unless both the conditions mentioned in section 3 exist. If the rate of interest is excessive but the transaction between the parties is not proved substantially unfair or vice versa the court has no power to interfere. It is, moreover, left to the discretion of the court to take action under this section. This gives a loophole to the money-lenders to charge exorbitant rates of interest and unless a substantially unfair transaction is also proved they escape action. The past practice has shown that the courts have very seldom exercised their discretion in favour of debtors under this section and this section of the Usurious Loans Act has been a dead letter. The amendment of this section proposed in sub-clauses (i), (ii) and (iii) of clause 5 gives the court power to take action under section 3 in either case whether the interest is excessive or the transaction between the parties is substantially unfair. It further makes it compulsory for the courts to take action, instead of leaving it to their discretion to take action. I think it is quite evident that the proposed amendment is of a technical nature to remedy the defect which exists in the phraseology of the law and it does not in any way extend the scope of section 3. It does not give any extra benefit to the debtor which was not intended at the time of passing the Usurious Loans Act.

I would not take any more of the precious time of this House but before I sit down I wish to appeal to my honourable friends sitting on those benches to show the same spirit of goodwill, conciliation and co-operation which has been exhibited by other sections of the House. Our critics would be better advised to look to this question of vital importance more calmly and not to take an obstinate attitude which will not only be injurious to the interests of the classes which they represent but will be equally harmful to the general interests of the province. They should consider this problem with a cool head and foresight.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, when comparing the rates of interest prevailing in the various provinces of this country I think we should not lose sight of the special circumstances which are prevalent in our own province. I think my honourable friend might have read the article which I sent the other day to the Civil and Military Gazette. I would very briefly refer to certain portions of that article which are relevant to the present discussion:

The figures collected in 1925 show that the agricultural debt in this province was 90 crores. During the decade 1925—35 that amount of provincial debt had risen by 30 crores. Mr. Darling has said in his valuable book, "The Punjab Peasant" that no decade in the history of this province has seen such an amount of increase in debt. He says that between 1895 and 1925 this debt had swelled by 50 crores. This has never happened not only in any other province in India, but not even in any other part of the world. When coming to the reasons for this increase he says, that the only reason is that the rate of interest prevailing in this province is very high as compared with any other country. He says that 60 per cent. is neither considered a very high rate of interest nor is even an uncommon rate. On that basis he proceeds to show that an agriculturist who is once in debt is always in debt. It is true that an agriculturist is born in debt, he lives in debt and he dies in debt. The reason for all this is the most usurious rates of interest prevailing in this province.

Another special feature of this province is this. The number of money-lenders is three times as great in the Punjab in proportion to the population as in the rest of India. This is another reason which forces us to fix a certain rate of interest in order to protect our people who are living in this province. In 1925 it was estimated that the land revenue of the province was 4½ crores and it was estimated that the net agricultural income of the province was five times the land revenue, that is 22½ crores. Now there is an unprecedented fall in the prices of all agricultural products. After accounting for this fall in prices we may estimate the present total agricultural income of the province at 15 crores, at the utmost. The debt as the report now shows has swelled to 200 crores. If we consider the prevalent rate to be 18 per cent. simple interest on this debt which is surely an under-estimation, the interest alone comes to 36 crores annually. This means that the interest alone on debt in this province at the low rate of interest of 18 per cent. is more than twice the total agricultural income of the province. That is to say, even if the agriculturists do not pay a single pie to Government towards land revenue and other dues, even if they do not spend a single pie on their own selves, even then they will be able to pay only less than half the amount of interest which is due on their debts during a year. If this is the state of affairs, I do not think anybody here should oppose our fixing the rate of interest at any reasonable sum which we might agree upon.

Now coming to the remarks of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, as has already been said, in this House he objected to the insertion of the word "or" in place of the word "and" in sub-section (1) of section 3 of the Usurious Loans Act. I see no harm in this change especially when it is very difficult or rather impossible to make both the conditions exist. Under one pretence or other, even when the rate of interest is admitted to be excessive, the courts deny that it is an unfair transaction. If a transaction is held unfair, it is rejected on the other ground. It is totally impossible that both the conditions may be admitted to be present and therefore it stands to reason that we should make the law as has been suggested now that even if one of the conditions is present we should interfere with the rate of interest. This reminds me of an Urdu proverb:

نہ نو من تیل ہوگا نہ رادھا ناچگی

(Neither anybody will be able to supply nine maunds of oil nor anybody will be able to see the dance of Radha.)

[Chaudhri Riasat Ali.]

These two conditions will never be fulfilled and what will be the result? The result will be that the rate of interest will never be held to be excessive by the courts. Personally I think that all transactions where the rate of interest is excessive, are unfair transactions and so it does not make any difference if we retain the word "or" in place of "and" because every transaction which bears an excessive interest is unfair so far as I can see.

The next point mentioned by the honourable member was that the word "may" should be introduced in place of "shall." To tell the truth the word "may" has already sufficiently run its course. We are tired of this word "may" because our sad experience is that wherever this word "may" occurs in enactments, it is always interpreted in favour of the party other than the debtor. We do not want to give the courts discretion and one reason why we want the word "shall" to be there, is that we want to incorporate everything in the provisions of the Act itself. We want to be definite and we do not want to give any discretion to the courts as it may happen that they may misuse the word or misinterpret it. Unless the word "shall" is inserted, no relief is possible and the Act will remain a dead letter as it has remained so far.

The honourable member has been quoting from the United Provinces Council proceedings and for his information I would say that the Usurious Loans United Provinces Amendment Bill of 1933, sections 3 and 4, do make the same changes which we intend making here to-day. They say that in place of the word "and" the word "or" shall be substituted and for the word "may" the word "shall" shall be substituted in the same way. These words do exist in the Bill to which he has made reference and the United Provinces Government of which he is so much enamoured even more than his own Government, has committed the same offence which the Punjab Government is committing, it has committed the same mistake which our own Government is going to commit.

He has also referred to the Bengal Money-Lenders Act, 1933 and has quoted that the rates of interest fixed in that province are very high as compared with the rates of interest suggested here. But he omits to read sections 4 and 5 of that Act. He has confined his whole attention to section 3. But if we go through the provisions of sections 4 and 5, I do not think there is any need of fixing any rate of interest. Section 4 says that even in case of debts raised before the commencement of the Act no interest should be allowed which is more than the originally lent sum. If a similar provision is made then there is no need for fixing any rate. If the Bengal Government has fixed a higher rate of interest, it has also enacted this provision, namely—

Notwithstanding anything in any other Act, where in any suit in respect of any money lent by a money-lender before the commencement of this Act it is found that the arrears of interest amount to a sum greater than the principal of the loan, the Court, unless it is satisfied that the money-lender had reasonable grounds for not enforcing his claim earlier, shall limit the amount of such interest recoverable in the suit to an amount equal to the principal of the loan.

This is section 4. Section 5 says—

No money-lender shall recover by suit interest of any kind at a rate exceeding ten per cent. per annum in respect of any loan made after the commencement of this Act under a contract which provides for the payment of compound interest.

If these provisions are there, there is no harm if they provide in section 3 that the rate should be 25 or 30 per cent. or any higher rate. If Mr. Mukand Lal Puri is prepared to accept these, then we might accept his position. (Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I certainly accept those provisions.)

Then again, the case of the Lloyds Bank was quoted in which a certain person had asked for a loan at 7 per cent. compound interest with monthly rests. To this I would make the answer that there are debtors and debtors. Some may be very needy, who have to give security and who may accept any terms offered. There may be others whose estates are not already encumbered and who have got a higher credit in the market. I can quote an example in which people are prepared to advance money to some people without any security and at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. rate of interest.

Another objection has been that Government has been favouring the 90 per cent. of the population of the province totally forgetting the interests of the remaining 10 per cent. If 90 per cent. of the population are suffering from a very dangerous disease and the other 10 per cent. happen to be disease proof, I think it is reasonable that Government should look to the interests of the majority who are suffering. It will be in point to quote the case reported the other day in the Tribune in which a Muslim zamindar of Attock District who had originally raised a loan of Rs. 500 in 1882, had a decree passed against him for an amount of Rs. 1,96,900. This means that there has been excessive rate of interest, compound interest, annual rests, interest on interest and all the rest of it in this case. If we do not fix the rates of interest here, I think we will be running into a state of chaos so far as the economic conditions of the country are concerned. With these words, I beg to support the amendment.

Lala Bhagat Ram (Jullundur-cum-Ludhiana, non-Muhammadian, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, time after time this argument has been repeated that the zamindars are unable to pay off their debts as their income is too small even to make it possible for them to pay the annual interest of their debts. By fictitious facts and figures it is tried to prove to the world that the zamindars are insolvent. So many times it has been stated by the honourable members that the annual income of the zamindars is not more than 10 crores while the interest on their debt is 36 crores annually. From this it is inferred that the bare interest on the debt cannot be paid. As I stated before in this House, the figures of the debt as placed before the honourable members are incorrect. The amount of the rural indebtedness is not two arbs of rupees. It is far less than this sum. It in no case exceeds 80 crores. This sum of two arbs includes not only the figures for rural indebtedness, but also the figures of the debts which are mutually due to and owed by the sahukars amongst themselves. It includes also the figures of loans advanced by the different banks to different classes of the public whether Hindus, Muslims, agriculturists or non-agriculturists. The sahukars would welcome any move on the part of the agriculturists towards the payment of their debts. They would be willing to accept interest even at the rate of 8 per cent. provided the zamindars sincerely desire to discharge their liabilities. For the last so many years they have borrowed and have not paid anything. This complaint that the rates of interest are too excessive is also meaningless. In other countries of the world the rates of interest are the same as are prevalent in this country. For example, in Java the rates of interest are no less than 50 per cent. per annum. But we are willing not to charge such high rates of interest. Let the zamindars pay us an interest of one rupee a month for a loan of Rs. 100. This is the ordinary rate of interest which even sahukars pay to each other for their own debts. In the market this rate of interest is prevalent amongst the sahukars. The zamindara banks when they borrow from the Central Bank pay in no case less than 7 per cent. and then these loans advanced to the zamindara banks are secured. The members of the co-operative societies stand as sureties and the loans are secured by their properties. Each of the members of the society is responsible for the payment of the loans, even if the amount is not more than Rs. 200. If the payment of this loan is delayed even by a day the Central Bank is empowered to take action prescribed by law in case of default. In the case of the banks so many facilities are provided, but in the case of an individual to whom the debt is due no such facility is granted. All the banks pay at $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on deposits and charge at no less than Re. 0-12-0 per cent. monthly. Different companies and different factories borrow at these rates. In these circumstances it is unreasonable to reduce the rates of interest charged by the sahukars to any lower figures than those at which the banks advance loans.

[Lala Bhagat Ram.]

Things, in short, have come to such a pass that even the sahukar is utterly impoverished. There is not a penny to be found in his erstwhile full-to-the-brim money-bags. Now, you are putting obstacles in his way and making it impossible for him to realise even a pice out of his debts. Is it fair, I ask, for you to adopt this course? Do you treat money borrowed from the sahukars as money looted? Do you think that you are under no obligation to pay? Half a pice per rupee is a rate of interest which should be accepted by all reasonable business men. Even the banks and co-operative societies are realising interest at the rate of $9\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., although their money is safe on account of a veritable hedge of securities round it. It would, therefore, be in the fitness of things if the Government and members on those benches agree to the proposal of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri. Furthermore, we should not lose sight of the fact that now-a-days there is practically no business of money-lending going on in villages. Why? Simply because the proposed legislation has filled people's minds with suspicion and mistrust. I hope the Government will not deal a death blow to all rural credit by its intransigent attitude of which it has afforded ample proof by sponsoring this measure. With these words, I lend my whole-hearted support to the amendment of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): The debate about the limits of rates of interest has been a very interesting one indeed and I admit that many of the arguments used have been weighty and deserving of full consideration. I was very much impressed by what Mr. Roberts said and by the apparent reasonableness of his amendment and I might have agreed to accept that amendment if it had been made clear that the rates in his mind were the rates prevailing at the time when the loan was made, but for the fact which has been brought to light in Mr Puri's speech that banks to-day demand 7 per cent. compound interest with monthly rests on security as good as wheat with 25 per cent. margin. If we applied the test proposed in Mr. Roberts' amendment we would find that a rate of 5 or 5½ per cent. was the maximum that could be taken without incurring the certainty of having it ruled excessive. When banks like Llyods Bank demand 7 per cent. on excellent security with a 25 per cent. margin and with monthly rests, I am afraid it would not be reasonable to hold that a rate of 5½ per cent. is excessive. For that reason I think Government must stick to the rate mentioned in the amendment which I have moved. Mr. Mukand Lal said a great deal to show that that rate was too low. He said that few mortgages were registered at a rate of less than 7 per cent., so that a large number of mortgages, after the Government amendment was passed into law, would be held to have been made on excessive rates of interest. But I think a little too much is being made of the rate of interest. It is of course very important now that too low rates should not be fixed. In the present circumstances I do not think it can possibly be contended that ten per cent. simple interest on a secured loan is a low rate. And if you are going to fix a similar limit for compound interest, you must take the corresponding amount worked out in view of the principle of damdapat. That is how we have arrived at our rate of 7 per cent. compound interest. I do not think it is too low a limit. One fact that practically all speakers have forgotten is that the importance of the question is greatly diminished by the proposal which is embodied in the Bill and which is the principle of damdapat. Within a very short period of years, in ten years, as a matter of fact, the debt will have doubled at the rate of 7 per cent. compound interest or ten per cent. simple interest. I fancy most zamindars' debts began a good deal more than ten years ago and for every year beyond the ten years, the permissible rate of interest becomes less, if this principle of damdapat is adopted. Therefore the importance of the rate of interest is very greatly diminished by the fact that it is proposed to adopt that principle. I come now to other considerations. Owing to the existence of the Land Alienation Act, zamindars can seldom get loans secured upon their land and the rate for compound interest on unsecured loans is 14 per cent., which is sufficiently high. So, the importance of this question once more is very greatly reduced by the fact that it is hardly possible for the zamindar to give his land as a security unless he is borrowing from another member of an agricultural tribe in the same group. Again such secured loans as the average zamindar can get are borrowed on the security of jewellery which is actually in the hands of the lender and is absolutely full security for the loan. Now, if a man has in his hands, as an average sahukar has, jewellery which covers the loan with a very wide margin and which he can realise with the greatest of ease surely the rate of 7 per cent. compound interest is ample and as much as should be allowed. There is another argument. It has been mentioned by one or two speakers and that is about the limiting of credit. A man with poor credit has to pay a very high rate if he wants to get any loan. A spendthrift, not endowed with any foresight or prudence, is always willing to pay any high rate. I think it is a very sound thing indeed to clip his wings and prevent him from getting loans on excessive rates. That is really all I need say about it. The great consideration is the laying down of the principle of dandapat and the rate which we have adopted will prevent the accumulation of any further interest after ten years (hear, hear).

[The Hon. Mr. D. J. Boyd.]

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah (Lahore, Muhammadan, Rural) : May I suggest a compromise? If that can be arrived at perhaps the position would be solved. I understood the honourable mover of the Bill to say that there are certain points to be cleared in the amendment put forward by Mr. Roberts and if that can be cleared—

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Compromise between whom?

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : Compromise between the mover of the amendment and his party. If in No. 1 line 2 of Mr. Roberts' amendments after the words 'Imperial Bank of India'; the words 'and in force at the time when the loan was advanced,' were added, we may have a general support of Mr. Roberts' amendment and I hope the honourable mover of the Bill will kindly consider these words. The next is in the proviso and I will submit it when you are considering the proviso.

Mr. President : And not in part (3)? Otherwise part (3) will be inconsistent with the alteration that has been suggested.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : How would it be?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Perhaps I might clear the matter. There was some consideration of adopting Mr. Roberts' amendment with the amendment now proposed by Sardar Habib Ullah, but when the rate now demanded by the Lloyds Bank was brought to my notice, I saw that we should not adopt that amendment and therefore Government are adhering to the amendment that I have moved.

Mr. Labh Singh : There is just a possibility of a compromise between ourselves and the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition in this respect. We may agree that the rates of interest as fixed may apply exclusively to rural areas.

Mr. President : I propose to put the question in the form, whether these sub-clauses stand part of the Bill. This is the proper form; but if the House prefers, I shall put it in the words of the amendment. (An honourable member : The latter way would be more clear). As the House wants the amendment to be put in the form in which it appears in the agenda, I shall do so. The question is—

That sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5 be omitted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following clause take the place of the omitted clause :

The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds ten per centum per annum simple interest or seven per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests, and if on other loans it exceeds eighteen and three-quarter per centum per annum simple interest or fourteen per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests.

The Council divided : Ayes : 33 ; Noes 34.

AYES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
Chetan Anand, Lala.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable
Malik Sir.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honour-
able Dr.
Grindal, Mr. A. D.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable
Sardar Sir.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib
Lala.
Labh Singh. Mr.
Latiff, Mr. A.

Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Marsden, Mr. P.
Mayadas, Mr. Earnest.
Mohan Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sar-
dar.
Muhammad Husein, Chaudhri.
Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Mukerji, Rai Bahadur Mr. P.
Murphy, Mr. A.
Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan
Bahadur Mian.
Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur
Raja.
Ramji Das, Lala.
Ram Singh, 2nd-Lieut. Sardar.
Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Shave, Dr. (Mrs.) M. C.
Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur
Sardar.
Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

NOES.

Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan
Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab
Chaudhri.
Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib
Sardar.
Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sar-
dar.
Haibat Khan Daba, Khan.
Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
Kesar Singh, Rai Sahib Chaudhri.
Mohindar Singh, Sardar.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan,
Chaudhri.

Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan
Bahadur Malik.
Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja.
Muhammad Hassan, Khan Sahib
Makhdum Shaikh.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan
Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani,
Makhdumzada Sayad.
Muhammad Sarfaraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur
Captain Malik.
Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib
Mian.
Nurullah, Mian.
Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Roberts, Mr. W.
Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.

Mr. President : The question is—

That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the following be substituted :—

The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 15 per cent. simple interest, and if on other loans it exceeds 18 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 24 per cent. simple interest.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5 the following be substituted :—

Where in any suit in respect of any money lent after the commencement of the Usurious Loans Act, 1918, it is found that the interest charged exceeds the rate of 15 per cent. per annum in the case of a secured loan or 25 per cent. per annum in the case of unsecured loan or that there is a stipulation for rests at interval of less than 6 months, the court shall, until the contrary is proved, presume for the purpose of section 3 of the Usurious Loans Act, 1918, that the interest charged is excessive.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5 the following be substituted :—

The Court shall deem interest to be excessive if on a loan advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 15 per cent. simple interest, and if on other loans it exceeds 18½ per cent. compound interest with annual rests or 24 per cent. simple interest.

The Council divided : Ayes 35 ; Noes 36.

AYES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
Beant Singh, S. S. Sardar.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
Chetan Anand, Lala.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable Malik Sir.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.
Grindal, Mr. A. D.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.
Kesar Singh, Rai Sahib Chaudhri.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.
Labh Singh, Mr.
Latifi, Mr. A.

Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Marsden, Mr. P.
Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
Mohan Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Muhammad Husain, Chaudhri.
Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Mukerji, Rai Bahadur Mr. P.
Murphy, Mr. A.
Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Ramji Das, Lala.
Ram Singh, 2nd-Lieut. Sardar.
Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Shave, Dr. (Mrs.) M. C.
Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

NOES.

Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
 Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan
 Bahadur Mian.
 Akbar Ali, Pir.
 Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
 Arjan Singh, Sardar.
 Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
 Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sar-
 dar.
 Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chau-
 dhri.
 Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
 Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab
 Chaudhri.
 Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib
 Sardar.
 Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sar-
 dar.
 Haibat Khan, Daba, Khan.
 Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
 Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.
 Mohinder Singh, Sardar.
 Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
 Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan,
 Chaudhri.

Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan.
 Bahadur Malik.
 Muhammad Eusoof, Khawaja.
 Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib
 Makhdum Shaikh.
 Muhammd Hayat Qureshi, Khan.
 Bahadur Nawab.
 Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani,
 Makhdumzada Sayad.
 Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
 Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
 Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan
 Bahadur Mian.
 Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur
 Captain Malik.
 Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
 Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib-
 Mian.
 Nurullah, Mian.
 Pancham Chand, Thakur.
 Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
 Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
 Roberts, Mr. W.
 Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
 Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan.
 Bahadur Malik.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in place of sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5 the following be substituted :—

The court shall not deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of immovable property or pledge of movable property it does not exceed 9 per cent. compound interest with six months' rest or 10 per cent. simple interest, but the court shall deem interest to be excessive if on loans advanced on the security of the immovable property or pledge of movable property it exceeds 12 per cent. compound interest with half-yearly rest or 15 per cent. simple interest, and if on loans it exceeds 18 per cent. compound interest with half-yearly rest or 24 per cent. simple interest.

The Council divided : Ayes 88 ; Noes 87.

AYES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
 Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
 Bhagat Ram, Lala.
 Bourne, Mr. F. C.
 Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
 Chetan Anand, Lala.
 Fazl Hahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
 Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
 Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable
 Malik Sir.

Garbett, Mr. C. C.
 Gokul Chand Narang, The Honour-
 able Dr.
 Grindal, Mr. A. D.
 Hearn, Mr. J. W.
 Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.
 Labh Singh, Mr.
 Latifi, Mr. A.
 Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
 Marsden, Mr. P.

[Mr. President.]

Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
 Mohan Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
 Muhammad Husain, Chaudhri.
 Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
 Mukerji, Rai Bahadur Mr. P.
 Murphy, Mr. A.
 Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
 Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.

Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
 Ramji Das, Lala.
 Ram Singh, 2nd-Lieut. Sardar.
 Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
 Shave, Dr. (Mrs.) M. C.
 Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
 Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

NOES.

Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
 Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
 Akbar Ali, Pir.
 Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
 Arjan Singh, Sardar.
 Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
 Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
 Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
 Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
 Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.
 Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
 Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar.
 Haibat Khan Daba, Khan.
 Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
 Kesar Singh, Rai Sahib Chaudhri.
 Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.
 Mohindar Singh, Sardar.
 Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
 Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan, Chaudhri.

Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
 Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja.
 Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.
 Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
 Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani, Makhdumzada Sayad.
 Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
 Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
 Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmami, Khan Bahadur Mian.
 Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
 Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
 Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
 Nurullah, Mian.
 Pancham Chand, Thakur.
 Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
 Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
 Roberts, Mr. W.
 Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
 Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur, Malik.

Mr. President : The question is—

That for sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of sub-clause (iv) of clause 5 the following be substituted :—

6 P.M.

- (1) The court shall deem interest to be excessive if it exceeds the bank rate fixed by the Imperial Bank of India by more than a percentage which shall vary according as to whether the loan is secured or unsecured and whether the interest on the loan is simple or compound.
- (2) For the purposes of sub-section (1) the court shall deem interest to be excessive if on secured loans it exceeds the bank rate plus 4 per cent. simple interest per annum or the bank rate plus 2 per cent. compound interest per annum with six-monthly rests, and if on unsecured loans it exceeds the bank rate plus 8 per cent. simple interest per annum or the bank rate plus 6 per cent. compound interest per annum with six-monthly rests.

- (3) For the purpose of determining the rate of interest the court shall assume that the bank rate for the period from the 1st of January to the 30th of June in any year shall be the bank rate fixed by the Imperial Bank of India on the 15th of December of the preceding year, and that the bank rate from July 1st to December 31st in any year shall be that fixed by the Imperial Bank of India on June 15th of that year.

The Council divided : Ayes 37 ; Noes 11.

AYES.

Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.	Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.	Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja.
Akbar Ali, Pir.	Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.	Makhdum Shaikh.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.	Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.	Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani,
Bishen Singh, Sardar.	Makhdumzada Sayad.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.	Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.	Muhammad Sarfaraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.	Mukerji, Rai Bahadur Mr. P.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.	Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.	Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar.	Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
Haibat Khan Daba, Khan.	Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Jawahar Singh, Dhillon, Sardar.	Ram Singh, 2nd-Lieut., Sardar.
Kesar Singh, Rai Sahib Chaudhri.	Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Mohindar Singh, Sardar.	Roberts, Mr. W.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.	Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan, Chaudhri.	Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
	Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.

NOES.

Bhagat Ram, Lala.	Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Chetan Anand, Lala.	Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.	Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Labh Singh, Mr.	Ramji Das, Lala.
Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.	Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.

The Council then adjourned till 2 P. M. on Tuesday, 19th November 1934.

PRINTED BY

THE SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRINTING, PUNJAB.

133 PLC-350-8-12-34-SGPP Lahore.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Tuesday, 13th November 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2 P. M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Clause 5.—(concluded).

Mr. President : The Council will now resume consideration of clause 5.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): Sir, I move that the following proviso be added at the end of the amendment to clause 5 which was passed yesterday :—

Provided that the courts shall not deem interest in excess of the above rates to be excessive if the loan has been advanced by the Imperial Bank of India or any banking company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or the law relating to companies for the time being in force in British India.

There is one thing about this particular proviso that may look a little ridiculous in view of the fact that yesterday it was decided to make excessive any interest which was more than two per cent. above the bank rate. The bank rate that has been adopted is the rate of the Imperial Bank of India and it may sound absurd to mention the Imperial Bank of India in this proviso when its own rate obviously will never be excessive. However, I do not really know whether the Bank ever charges more than its nominal rate or not, so I prefer to leave the proviso as it stands.

Mr. President : Proviso moved is—

Provided that the courts shall not deem interest in excess of the above rates to be excessive if the loan has been advanced by the Imperial Bank of India or any banking company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or the law relating to companies for the time being in force in British India.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : May I ask the Government to consider the advisability of adding the word "Insurance" to the proviso? Most of the long term deposits and loans are given by insurance companies.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I am sorry the Government cannot accept this proposal. It might open the door to a great many other exceptions and it is preferable to leave the proviso as drafted.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Sir, I move that the words "The Imperial Bank of India or" be omitted from the proviso, as it stands at present.

Mr. President : Does the honourable member consider the amendment necessary? In any case the members who have given notice of identical or slightly different provisos will speak before any other amendments can be taken up.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : The amendment which I wish to move has become necessary on account of the form in which the main clause has been passed. Having once passed that the rate fixed by the Imperial Bank of India shall be the measure of other rates being excessive or not, I do not think we can possibly repeat the words, 'Imperial Bank of India' in the proviso as it stands. Therefore, with your permission, Sir, I beg to move that the words "the Imperial Bank of India or" be omitted.

Mr. President : Amendment moved is—

That the words "the Imperial Bank of India or" be omitted in the proviso.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : May I suggest to the honourable member that he should not press his amendment because there seems to be some doubt about the omission of these words. The bank rate is regulated by several factors and sometimes as the honourable members are aware, the Imperial Bank charges a higher rate than its own bank rate. For instance on wheat, it normally charges more than the nominal bank rate which is largely meant for day to day loans. I, therefore, think that on the whole it would be safe to leave the proviso as it stands. In any case it can do no harm.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : In that case I beg leave to withdraw the amendment.

(Leave was not granted.)

Mr. President : Question is—

That the words "the Imperial Bank of India or" be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the following proviso be added to clause 5 (iv):—

Provided that the courts shall not deem interest in excess of the above rates to be excessive if the loan has been advanced by the Imperial Bank of India or any banking company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or the law relating to companies for the time being in force in British India.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What about my amendment that the words "or Insurance" be added after the word "banking" in the proviso?

Mr. President : Had the honourable member given notice of his amendment he would have been able to move it.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Notice was given by me and it is printed as No. 16. I pointed ~~to~~ out at the time when you were going to put the proviso of the Government. I thought you were going to put my proposal independently.

Mr. President : But, did I not say that every gentleman who had given notice of a proviso covering the same or slightly different ground had the right to speak?

Mian Nurullah : On a point of order. You were kind enough to suggest that all these things should be taken up together. But how can a member who had to proceed to amendment No. 12 or 8 not speak on amendment No. 13 after it was moved, because when he spoke, No. 13 or 14 was not moved and unless it is moved he cannot have a right to speak.

Mr. President : It is a fact that Mr. Puri got up to move his amendment before the proviso was put to the vote of the House.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I believe what he actually said was that Government should include his amendment in the proviso.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Because it is really a formal amendment and instead of asking the House to accept it, I thought I had better ask the Government to incorporate it in their proviso.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : But if the honourable member wants it to be put to the House, we will not object.

Mr. President : It appears to be a purely verbal amendment.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It is not a purely verbal amendment.

Mr. President : Does Government object to it ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : We cannot accept it.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the words "or insurance company" be added after the word "banking" in the proviso which the House has just accepted.

The Council divided ; Ayes 11 ; Noes. 29.

AYES.

Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Labb Singh, Mr.
Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.
Manohar Lal, Mr.
Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.

Mukerjee, Rai Bahadur Mr. P.
Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur
Raja.
Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Ramji Das, Lala.

NOES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan
Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur
Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur
Chaudhri.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab
Chaudhri.
Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib
Sardar.
Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar.
Haibat Khan Daha, Khan.
Jaswant Singh, Guru.
Mohindar Singh, Sardar.
Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan,
Chaudhri.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan
Bahadur Nawab.

Mahammad Jamal Khan Leghari,
Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Sarfaraz Ali Khan,
Raja.
Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan
Bahadur Mian.
Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur
Captain Malik.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib
Mian.
Nur Khan, Khan Sahib Risaldar
Bahadur.
Nurullah, Mian.
Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Ram Singh, 2nd-Lieut. Sardar.
Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Roberts, Mr. W.
Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur,
Malik.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : The effect of the amendment that this Council was pleased to pass yesterday is that in the Punjab loans advanced on security at $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. compound interest are usurious. If the bank rate is $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. as it is to-day and it has been $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. for the last year-and-a-half, the loans on the security of property, on the security of grain, on Government security, in fact on any security whatever, on the third mortgage of a house which is already heavily encumbered, for instance, will be at the same rate of interest and if it exceeds $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. in any case the loan will be held in the Punjab to be at a usurious rate. That is the rate which this Council has been pleased to fix. I say that is a unique position which the Punjab legislature has adopted. I wish to suggest to the Council that they should agree to confine these abnormally low and economically impossible rates only to loans secured against a first mortgage. In the United Provinces they have made a distinction between the first and the second mortgages. What was laid down yesterday was not that the rate of interest shall be $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. but that at the present bank rate, $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. is usurious and the courts have still a discretion on proper facts being brought to their notice, to hold rates below $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. to be usurious also. Therefore, I place my suggestion before the House for their consideration. With these words I move—

That the following sub-clause be added to clause 5 :—

“ Provided that no loan shall be considered secured unless it is secured on a first mortgage.”

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That the following sub-clause be added to clause 5 :—

“ Provided that no loan shall be considered secured unless it is secured on a first mortgage.”

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East. Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir the honourable member for Industries has just moved an amendment to the effect that no loan should be considered secured unless it is secured on a first mortgage. Obviously he wants that the rate of interest decided upon by the House yesterday should be made applicable to those loans alone which are secured on first mortgages. In support of his amendment the honourable mover has said that because the House adopted an unprecedented attitude in accepting $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. rate of interest as a reasonable rate and any higher rate as excessive, it is only just and fair that this amendment should be accepted. In reply to this I would submit that the House has never decided that any rate of interest in excess of $5\frac{1}{2}$ or $7\frac{1}{2}$ or $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent shall be considered to be excessive. In fact what the House has decided is that the rate of interest shall be considered to be excessive if on secured loans it exceeds the bank rate plus 4 per cent. per annum simple interest or the bank rate plus 2 per cent. per annum compound interest and if on unsecured loans it exceeds the bank rate plus 8 per cent. per annum simple interest or the bank rate plus 5 per cent. per annum compound interest. Further, the economic condition of the country at present is very bad, the money is lying idle in banks and there are no avenues for investment. Consequently the bank rate is as low as $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. In these circumstances, how can you expect a debtor to pay more than $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. compound interest with half-yearly rests on secured debts ?

The rate of interest will naturally go up when avenues for investment open up or when the money market is tight. I, therefore, see no reason why the House should not consider this rate of interest, which is to vary with the varying rate of interest in the Imperial Bank, as reasonable and workable. I am told that the banks in this country charge the same rate of interest on loans, whether secured on a first mortgage or on a second mortgage. They have no different rates on loans secured on first and second mortgages. If that is so, I think that there is no reason why this amendment should be accepted. The rate of interest decided upon yesterday is the only reasonable rate which a borrower can be expected to pay and my friends on the opposite benches have no justification whatsoever to ask for a higher rate of interest on secured loans whether they are secured on a first mortgage or on a second. I may remind them once again that this rate of interest is not to remain for ever at a figure of $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. as it is to-day. It may go up to $7\frac{1}{2}$ and even to $8\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. at some future date as it actually went up to $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. in 1933. And if they consider that they are not to be satisfied even with such high rates, they will do well to ask the sahukars not to advance any loan to agriculturists even if the latter were to ask for it. That will finish the matter and neither party will have a cause of complaint in that case. Such a course will, at the worst, limit the credit of the agriculturist. But that is what we want. If this measure helps to lower the credit of the agriculturist, which has helped to bring ruin upon him, we shall think that the object of this measure has been achieved. I, therefore, say once again that this amendment should not be accepted in any case.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following sub-clause be added to clause 5 :—

Provided that no loan shall be considered secured unless it is secured on a first mortgage.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 5 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 6.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : Sir, I beg to move—

For clause 6 the following be substituted :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall only apply to loans advanced after coming into force of this Act.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : May I rise to a point of order. The object of this Bill is to afford relief to indebted people, and that relief cannot be given unless the provisions of this Bill are given retrospective effect. After all the burden of debt cannot be reduced automatically. The provisions of this Bill ought to apply to transactions that have gone before and it is only in that case that relief will be possible. Therefore the House having once accepted the principle of affording relief the present amendment seems to me to cut at the root of the principle of the Bill.

Mr. President : I think there is some force in the objection. Will not the provision, if accepted, affect the object of the Bill ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Is that your ruling, Sir ?

Mr. President : No. I wish to hear the honourable member.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : This is the unfortunate situation created by the measure in which the Punjab Government has combined a number of distinct subjects in one Bill. This Bill does not deal with one subject, it deals with half-a-dozen different subjects.

Mr. President : Will the honourable member confine his speech to the point raised and say how far his amendment will affect the object and scope of the Bill ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It will not affect the scope of the Bill at all. I was submitting that this Bill does not deal with one topic alone, and that there are some topics which stand by themselves. The amendment to the insolvency law has no direct connection with the relief of indebtedness. It only deals with the subject of more expeditious disposal of insolvency proceedings. Similarly it is a mistake to think that the amendment of the law relating to usurious loans deals necessarily with any relief to the debtor. This is a provision which defines what usury is and it is not necessarily intended to give any relief to debtor except against usury, and, therefore, it is not necessary that the provisions of this Act necessarily afford relief to debtors. Similarly there are other provisions which have absolutely nothing to do with the relief of debtors. There are half-a-dozen other provisions as to the onus probandi with respect to exemption from attachment which do not deal with that subject. So, this amendment of the Usurious Loans Act deals only with the subject of usury, i.e., what in this province would be considered to be usury.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It seems to me that the Usurious Loans Act has always had provisions for dealing with usury. All we have to do is to define clearly what usury is. We are not introducing any new penalty against usury and, therefore, I think the Bill should have the effect which it is intended to have.

Mr. President : I think the honourable member will admit that he wants to postpone the operation of clause 5 for a certain number of years.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : No. I wish the Act to apply to all loans advanced immediately after the Act comes into force.

Mr. President : Only with regard to loans which may be advanced after the coming into operation of this Bill.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It appears to me that the argument put forward by the Leader of the opposition is not sound. Although the House has accepted the principle of this Bill which is to give relief to debtors, the extent and the method by which that relief should be given are matters of detail which it is for the House to discuss and settle. The principle has been accepted and we have now to decide the extent to which and the method by which the relief should be given. I, therefore, submit the honourable member is within his right in moving his amendment but it is for you, Sir, to give a ruling on the point.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : Sir, it is necessarily an emergency measure as we all realise and as pointed out by the Chair itself. If my learned friend's amendment is accepted the effect would be this. Supposing a mortgage of land is entered into to-day. There is sixty years' limitation as my friend knows for redemption of mortgage. The result would be that after sixty years or more a suit would be brought and it is only then that the provisions of this Act would be provoked and as a matter of fact, it will appear as if we are sitting here legislating for the generation that is to come. If it is not mockery—this whole show—then I fail to understand what it is.

Mr. President : The honourable member should not go into merits.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : With due respect to your ruling I consider that we are going beyond the principle of the Bill. We are legislating for our difficulties and embarrassments that exist to-day. As a matter of fact, the amendment which is suggested would be operative after generations and the result would be that time of the House, money and all the ill-feeling that has been generated in the country will be sheer waste. If the honourable member is in real earnest he should come forward with amendments which would improve the Bill and not destroy it.

Mr. Labh Singh : I need only invite your kind attention to the scope of the Bill and the principle to which we have committed ourselves, namely that this Bill is intended to provide for the relief of indebtedness and the improvement of agrarian credit in the Punjab. That is the principle to which we have committed ourselves. If the select committee has altered the provisions or even altered the preamble we are not concerned with that.

Mr. President : Will the postponement or suspension of the reduced rate of interest for a number of years relieve the debtor ?

Mr. Labh Singh : It would certainly improve the agrarian credit. (Laughter.)

Mr. J. D. Anderson : I submit that the view already expressed by the Leader of the House is correct. The purpose of the Bill, as Mr. Labh Singh has pointed out, is to provide for the relief of indebtedness in the Punjab. Clause 5 has been passed by the House. It provides for the amendment of a section of the Usurious Loans Act. Whether immediate effect is to be given to this provision or whether retrospective effect is to be given or whether effect is to be given from some date to be fixed by the House is a matter of degree and not of principle. With respect I submit that the amendment is within the scope of the Bill.

Mr. President : Mr. Mukand Lal Puri will proceed with his amendment which I hold to be in order.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : It has been decided to make a change in the substantive law of this province which declares to be illegal, unfair and unconscionable what everybody in the land had so far regarded as fair and equitable. The legislature has now laid down that a very low rate of interest for secured loan is excessive and unconscionable. I ask the House, is it fair to compel the courts to hold that such rates of interest were unconscionable at the time when the Government of India itself was borrowing at 6½ per cent. and the other provincial Governments too borrowed at the same or higher rates of interest ? Further, changes in substantive law are never made with retrospective effect. If it were only a change in the procedural law, it can be framed with retrospective effect. But here we are effecting a change in the substantive law. It is like laying down that all blue-eyed persons are to be considered bastards not only those who will be born hereafter, but even those who have been in existence in this world for the last twenty years. I do not mind if the House reduces the rate of interest to any extent it likes. It may lay down that taking of compound interest is illegal. If any such law is enacted, law abiding citizens will not in future go against that law. If it is enacted that to charge interest at more than 4 per cent. is illegal, people will know what the law is and will cease to lend at interest which is forbidden under the law. But to lay down now arbitrarily a provision like the one which was laid down by the House yesterday and then to say that all transactions since 1918, the date of the Usurious Loans Act, will be treated in accordance with the standard which the House was pleased to lay down yesterday, is hardly fair.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Again, I should like to bring to the notice of the House the fact that the amendment of the Usurious Loans Act is not confined to agricultural debtors alone. It extends to all transactions, whether the loan was borrowed by the urban people, and by persons engaged in trade or industry. There may be some reason, as some people seem to think, that on account of the fall in agricultural prices some kind of relief in interest should be given to those classes. But, what reason is there that you should amend the Usurious Loans Act with retrospective effect with respect to all transactions about which the House has had no complaint? I know—I hope I would be pardoned for saying that—that it is useless in this House to appeal to reason, but sheer decency demands that if the rate of interest is cut down to a limit which nobody would ever call usurious, it is but fair that it should not be made to apply with retrospective effect. If it is sought to give relief to debtors there are other ways of doing so. The insolvency law has been amended so as to give relief to all debtors whose assets do not exceed Rs. 2,000 and that would bring in at least 95 per cent. of the agricultural population of this province. I say that with a fair amount of confidence because when we fixed Rs. 500 as the value of assets, opinion was divided as to whether it would cover 80 per cent. or more than 80 per cent. Further, in the matter of relief of indebtedness there are provisions relating to conciliation boards. The Usurious Loans Act was enacted to give relief against usury and not to cut down fair and equitable rates of interest. Do not spoil an all-India legislation by adding amendments which do not fit in with the scheme of the Act. There is no reason why an unnatural, uneconomic and an inequitable rate of interest should be fixed under the law and that law should be made applicable with retrospective effect to persons who have been acting most fairly and honestly. There is neither logic nor sense nor propriety in calling a person a usurer who lent money at rates which no court has ever called excessive and no legislature has so far declared to be usurious. It is hardly fair to call a transaction unconscionable and a person usurer, when this was not so at the time of the transaction. I would, therefore, ask this Council to accept this amendment of mine. We have proposed a novel enactment and to make this retrospective, I submit, would not reflect great credit on the House.

Mr. President : The new clause proposed is—

That for clause 3 the following be substituted :—

“ The provisions of this part of the Act shall only apply to loans advanced after coming into force of this Act.”

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala Division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural) : I rise to oppose the amendment under consideration. The object of the Bill, there is no doubt, is to lighten the huge burden of debt that has been weighing upon the zamindar. It is not to lighten the debts that will be contracted in the future. If we look at the statement of objects and reasons it will be found that the main object of this Bill is to abate the rigour of the debt on the zamindars which it has been estimated now to be 200 crores. Now, if this amendment is accepted, the result would be that the old debts will remain as they are and they will be renewed over and over again. If, as has been said, the credit has been shattered and no new credit will be allowed to be incurred, even then the old debts will be renewed year after year. In that case it would be ridiculous to say that this Bill will lighten the burden of debt in any way. Therefore I submit that though the present amendment has been allowed by you, Mr. President, I think it defeats the very object of the Bill. The present debt is heavy not because of the principal amount borrowed but because of the high rate of interest. It was said by the honourable member that the Government itself borrows at the very high rate of interest of $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The Government can afford to borrow at that rate and at even a higher rate. It is very easy for the Government to pay that rate of interest and even a higher rate of interest. But that is not the case with the poor zamindars. What happens is that at the time of harvest these creditors take the grains of the zamindars at half the market price and further, whenever they pay to the creditor something towards the payment of the loan, full credit is not given for that payment. So, I submit that there is no comparison between the rate which the Government offers to investors and the interest which the money-lenders charge to the zamindars. Therefore, I submit that if this amendment is accepted it will defeat the purpose of the Bill. With these words I oppose the amendment.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, the arguments advanced by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, though they may seem to be plausible, do not seem to be correct. The object of the Bill, if this amendment is accepted by the House, will be frustrated. The amendment will cut at the very root of the principle of the Bill, which is, as the title says, to provide for the relief of indebtedness in the Punjab. Indebtedness means indebtedness existing in the country and not indebtedness which is to come into existence in future. You have to provide relief for the present indebtedness and if the Bill is not to have retrospective effect it will be no relief at all. It has been said that if these provisions are adopted there will be no credit in the country, but if there is no credit then there will be no indebtedness in future. It is in order to give relief to the existing indebtedness that this Bill has been brought forward by the Government and unless we adopt it there will be no relief to the existing indebtedness in the country. I do not see the object of this Bill if it is not going to have a retrospective effect. If this is not done it will be a piece of mockery of legislation. With these words I oppose the amendment of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.

3 P. M.

[K. B. Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan.]

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi Division and Lahore Division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): We are in a strange vicious circle in this Council. Every honourable member gets up from the Unionist benches and claims that this Bill is intended to give relief to the agriculturist, (An honourable member: Indebtedness) and to give relief exclusively to the agricultural debtors. This has been the chief line of argument which we have been hearing ever since this Bill has been introduced in this Council. My submission is that if this is so, let the Bill in so many words be confined in its operation only to the agricultural classes. Let it give relief to the agricultural debtors to any extent they like, in any manner they like and for any length of time they choose. Let it have a retrospective effect, let it have an immediate effect or a prospective effect, according as their fancy dictates.

Pir Akbar Ali: May I know on what motion the honourable member is speaking? (An honourable member: On the motion before the House). My friend is speaking on agriculturists versus non-agriculturists.

Mr. Labh Singh: So let them give it a retrospective effect if they like, but let it be confined only to agriculturists. Then in that case I for one will have absolutely no quarrel with the scope of the measure, with the extent of it or the time limit embodied in it. But let nothing be done which would do anything by way of hampering commerce or the business of the province. I had the hardihood to suggest the other day that we were really rushing along lines which are not correct and which if we were properly advised we would hesitate to adopt. I feel that the agricultural representatives in this Council seem to be obsessed with the power of vote that they possess in this Council constituted as it is at present. That power is going to be immeasurably increased in the future. Let them use that power to help themselves to any extent they like provided that whatever they do is restricted in its operation only to themselves. We do not subscribe to their views on economics and finance. As a matter of fact, just a minute ago when the representative of the debtor classes was on his legs I felt inclined to ask a question whether the Government was taking its notions on economics and finance from the honourable member, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram or whether Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram was following the Government's notions of economics and finance. This is a question which has been exercising my mind all these days that I have been sitting here. It is absolutely impossible to subscribe to the jumble of miscellaneous things which this Bill embodies. It is an omnibus measure transgressing on so many departments of law, on so many relations of business, of trade and of commerce. My submission in one word is this: that whatever mischief this Bill may possibly do, in all conscience do not give it a retrospective effect. We are making a radical change in the substantive law of this province. Is it fair, just or conscionable that we should give it a retrospective effect? I submit not. If you really want to give a retrospective effect, by all means confine the Bill to the agricultural classes only. It will be an act of expropriation, but then we shall understand where we are. Let us not interfere with our business, our commerce and our trade. If the agriculturists want to curtail their credit, let them. They will soon discover that it is not to their good. If they think it is to their good, let them do so. But let them not do anything which would in any way interfere with the normal operations of business life of this province.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Jullundur, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, the underlying idea of the motion of my honourable friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, is that the provisions of the Act should only apply to the future loans and should have no retrospective effect. This is a funny idea. The complaint that has arisen is due to the debt that was incurred in the past and the member is suggesting a remedy for the future further development of the evil. He means to say that the disease may be tolerated as it exists at present but only its future development may be stopped. I remember a story which will illustrate his position clearly. A marasi found that the character of the wife of a man was not good. He brought it to the notice of the husband who promised him a reward, if he would go to the parents of the wife and relate his story before them, and also take the wife with him. The marasi started for the woman's parents' village and also took her along with him. On the way the woman found out the purpose of their going to her parents' house. She promised him a reward of Re. 1, if he desisted from bringing her bad character to the notice of her parents and relatives. He agreed not to inform her parents about her bad character. But when they reached the village he told the whole story that he had witnessed before all the relatives of the woman and in the end added this sentence, "After this my eyes opened and I awakened to find that it all had happened in a dream." This amendment would have no better effect on the whole Bill and all our efforts than the effect that the last sentence had on the whole story of the marasi. All our labour would be lost if we accepted this amendment. After this Bill was circulated and opinions received regarding it, what sense is there in accepting an amendment which would have the effect of reducing this Bill to a mere jumble of words with no effect or meaning.

The cause of the present indebtedness is this that the loans were contracted during the War time when the prices of land produce were very high. At that time wheat sold 20 seers a rupee. Now it sells 40 seers a rupee. This fall in the price has doubled the amount of the loans. Then add to this factor the system of compound interest with the sahukar's natural tact and cunningness. At present our case is similar to the case of a man who has a load of one maund on his head and has to reach Amritsar from Lahore. The nature of the load is that it increases with every step. Now if the man who is responsible for putting that burden over his head uses force for making him walk towards Amritsar, it is natural that first he would try to walk then after some time his legs will begin to shake and then in the end he will fall down unable to get up again under the increased weight of the load. At this stage if the man behind him uses force and coercion in order to make him get up it would be of no avail. Our complaint is regarding the past indebtedness and the honourable mover is talking of a future evil. It is a matter of surprise that the honourable member did not bring in an amendment to the effect that the provisions of the Bill should only be made applicable to those who are born after the enactment and enforcement of this measure. The indebtedness is ruining the whole country and the honourable member has selfishly brought this amendment to be incorporated in the body of the Bill in order to perpetuate the evil. The whole world is groaning under the weight of debt. Germany is groaning, England is groaning and France is groaning, and these are very rich countries of the world. On account of this indebtedness there is every likelihood of a war breaking out. Here the agriculturist classes are being crushed under this indebtedness and there is every fear of their becoming exasperated. The Government wants to relieve the situation but the honourable Hindu members blindly offer opposition. This Bill is not the proper remedy of the evil of indebtedness. It is only a half-hearted measure. It would only have the effect of narrowing down the guttural passage of the sahukars who are swallowing the zamindars. This Bill will only delay the impending ruin of the zamindars, but will not absolutely avert it. I appeal to the Government that they should extend a helping hand to the zamindars who are their friends in need. The zamindar who is the backbone of the whole country should be saved. The sndkhors are in reality mardumkhors. The money-lenders are cannibals. Save us from them. We will be of great use to you. If you would save us from their hands we will continue to be the backbone of the country, we will pay land revenue and also form your armies. With these words, I resume my seat.

[Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan.]

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, there seems to be a good deal of misapprehension on one or two points, or rather I may say that things have been said on the floor of this House which may produce that misapprehension. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, the mover of this amendment has repeated over and over again that the rate of interest will be $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. and anything over and above that will be regarded as unfair, unconscionable and excessive. That is not the position. When I spoke on the last motion, I made it perfectly clear that what was decided in this House yesterday was that a rate which is in excess of the Imperial Bank rate on secured debts by more than 2 per cent. will be regarded as excessive. Now, the Imperial Bank rate may be 3 per cent. to-day, may be 4 per cent. to-morrow and may be 6 per cent. next week. It has been varying in the past and it will continue to vary in the future and, therefore, it is wrong to suggest that we should accept this $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. as a permanent rate and anything in excess of it as unfair. That is one type of misapprehension which exists in the mind of Mr. Puri; probably it does not exist, but he has said things which may very well produce that misapprehension in the minds of others.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : May I get one thing quite cleared from the Leader of the Unionist Party? Is it his interpretation of the amendment that was passed yesterday that if a loan were raised say, in 1931, the 1931 bank rate plus so much per cent. will be the rate of interest under the Bill?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I will come to that point later. What I was suggesting was that the apprehension or the suggestion that the rate of interest will always be $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. is entirely wrong.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : He never said so.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Another point on which some light may be thrown is that this $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. applies only to secured debts with compound interest at half-yearly rests. These are two incidents of the amendment which has been passed which seemed to have escaped the attention of Mr. Puri and the attention of many others. Even this excess of 2 per cent. over the Imperial Bank rate applies to transactions which are secured and on which compound interest is allowed with half-yearly rests. That makes a tremendous difference. Therefore there should be no misapprehension on the point as to what rate will be regarded by courts as excessive, and as to what particular class of transactions that rate applies to. The rate which will be regarded as excessive will be that which is in excess of the Imperial Bank rate by more than 2 per cent.—this is a thing which requires very carefully to be borne in mind—and then it applies only to transactions which relate to secured debts and which carry compound interest with half-yearly rests.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : All transactions carry compound interests.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : With regard to other transactions the rates are different. In the case of simple interest on secured debts the excess is as much as 4 per cent. In the case of unsecured debts and compound interest the excess is 5 per cent. and while in the case of unsecured debts and simple interest, the excess is as much as 8 per cent. Now, can anybody say that these rates do not give a sufficient margin of profit to those who are in the fortunate position of advancing money to others? Certainly not.

Then, another point on which the Honourable Member for Finance asked for my view was whether the clause as it stands at present means that the rate of interest to be allowed by courts will be the rate which prevailed on the date of the transaction or will it be to-day's rate. I think any court will hold that the rate which is to apply to a particular transaction is the rate which prevailed at the time when that transaction was entered into between the debtor and the creditor (hear, hear). That is the normal view, that is my view and that is the view which is shared by all the occupants of the benches on my side.

Having cleared this point, I may now proceed to reply to certain criticisms that have been offered by Mr. Puri and Mr. Labh Singh. Mr. Puri suggested that it would be entirely wrong to give this law a retrospective effect in respect to the transactions of those who have never made any complaint about the interest which they have been paying. Well, the attitude of the members of my party who represent indebted classes is that there should be no class distinction whatever. All debtors and creditors, whether they belong to one class or another should be treated alike. That is our attitude, but if the attitude of those who represent money-lending interests is that the operation of this Bill should definitely be confined to certain classes, even then we shall be prepared to meet them in that direction provided they come to some compromise with regard to the whole of the Bill. As a matter of fact, if we all put our heads together and come to some sort of a compromise it might be easy to pass this Bill and avoid a good deal of friction (Interruption). If this offer is made on behalf of the party as a whole, it should not be difficult for us to come to some sort of a solution which will be acceptable to the members of the Hindu Sabha group as well as the members who represent indebted classes in this House. But it should not be said, as it was said when this Bill was first introduced that an attempt was being made by the representatives of agricultural classes to pass a legislation specially for their benefit. That was not our attitude at that time and that is not our attitude now. But if the representatives of money-lending classes have thought better now and if they feel that it would be a proper course to restrict the application of this Bill to certain classes only, I think they will find us prepared to meet them more than half way. Mr. Labh Singh also suggested that zamindar members seem to be obsessed with the power of vote. Sir, when the motion for recirculation of the Bill was under discussion I made it clear by quoting concrete and definite instances that even in the select committee where we zamindar members were in an absolute majority, we were prepared to meet the representatives of money-lending interest at all points where reason seemed to lie on their side. (An honourable member: Question). There were five or six instances in which we in deference to the wishes of Raja Sahib and his party agreed to accept certain amendments.

✓ [R. B. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram,]

Mr. President: Will the honourable member please speak to the motion?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: The honourable member had, while speaking said certain things which were regarded by the Chair as having some relevance to the point under discussion and I am only replying to them. If the Chair thinks that I should not reply to that criticism I will drop the matter. I will pass on to another remark which was made by Mr. Labh Singh. He took exception to the propriety of a suggestion on my part that so far as the representatives of indebted classes are concerned, they would welcome a curtailment of the credit of these classes. He thinks that that is a very heterodox view of economics and that that is very unsound financially. I do not know whether or not it is unsound financially, but as a man who has been born in the classes which are born in debt, which live in debt and which die in debt, I know better whether the credit which indebted classes at present enjoy is abnormally high or is not abnormally high. I know that this inflated credit, this artificially inflated credit of zamindars is a curse, has been a curse to their prosperity and unless it is suitably curtailed it will continue to be a curse to these classes. And, Sir, I am not alone in this view of economics. Mr. Calvert definitely stated that the inflated credit of zamindars was the bane of that class. I am not quite sure, but I think Mr. Darling who has been so often quoted in this House by the representatives of money-lending interests has also expressed his agreement with Mr. Calvert, and he has also stated that zamindar classes are enjoying a credit which they should not have and that that credit is proving their ruin. Then again, there is the report produced by the Royal Commission on Labour. I remember definitely that there is a paragraph in that report in which the members of the Commission say that they are amazed at the ease with which labouring classes are able to borrow money and that they would prefer to see their credit curtailed. Therefore it should not be said that the view that the credit of zamindar classes should be curtailed is peculiar either to me or to the occupants of these benches. That view has been shared by very eminent persons. Whether they were also experts in economics and finance, I am not in a position to say.

Mr. President : May I once more request the honourable member to speak to the motion ?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Sir, the motion before the House is that the provisions relating to usurious loans should be applied only to those transactions which take place after this law comes into force. I beg to submit that the Government introduced this legislation to afford relief to debtors. I do not think that the Government really contemplated that it was providing a law to prevent future indebtedness. The chief object, which the Government must have had in view was that relief should be afforded in the existing indebtedness.

I think future indebtedness will probably take care of itself. What is urgently needed is relief in regard to existing indebtedness. I cannot believe that Government undertook all this trouble in order to prevent high rates in the future. The object must have been that rates which have been very high in the past and which have had the effect of swelling the obligations of the indebted classes to an unusual extent should be brought down. That object can only be fulfilled by making this law retrospective in its effect. If this law is not allowed to affect past transactions the result would be that the crushing burden of debt under which the indebted classes are groaning at present will continue at the level at which it stands to-day, and if it is really crushing as has been admitted by everybody not only in this House but outside this House also, then the only remedy that could be applied would be a law with retrospective effect. It is very difficult to believe that the honourable mover of this amendment did not know that Government was in earnest about giving relief to debtors in respect of past transactions. When he says that the application of this law should be restricted to future transactions he is going right against the wishes of Government and also against the very object which this Bill has in view. Therefore if it is really intended that relief should be given, if it is really meant that relief ought to come, then there is no getting away from the fact that this law must have retrospective effect. If retrospective effect is not given, I should think that it would be all labour lost. In fact if I knew that this law was not going to be given retrospective effect I would have been the first person to say that this Bill should be withdrawn. The House does not probably know the amount of mischief that this Bill has done. The controversy in the Press, the lectures from platforms have done a great deal of mischief so far as the mutual relations between creditor and debtor classes are concerned. And if at this late hour it is decided that this law should not have retrospective effect I can only say that the mischief which has already been done would be out of all proportion to the relief which will be given if this Bill extends to future transactions only. I, therefore, urge that my honourable friend will reconsider his position and will withdraw his amendment and if he does not withdraw it the House will reject his amendment.

Mr. President : Question is—

That for clause 6 the following be substituted :—

“The provisions of this part of the Act shall only apply to loans advanced after coming into force of this Act.”

The motion was lost.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Land-holders, General) : The amendment which I propose is—

That in clause 6, the words “pending on or” be omitted.

My amendment is neither in the interests of the lender nor in the interests of the borrower. It is in the interest of administration. I say it is wrong policy to increase immensely the amount of litigation and it will also increase delay in litigation if my amendment were rejected. There may be many suits which are mature for judgment. As soon as this Act comes into force and the law is passed by the Council the courts will have to rehear the case in order to discuss all the points which might be raised by debtors or creditors under this law. I am not quite sure if even after the decree is passed and the appeal is before the appellate court, the new points cannot be raised by the debtors. This may be done even on revision, because I think suits cover both appeals and revisions. I wonder why Government did not anticipate this. Surely they are not going to put the progress of litigation so far back as to begin again in suits which have nearly been finished. These are only the few arguments I have to advance and I am sure, Government benches will accept my amendment.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 6, the words “pending on or” be omitted.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : The Council having decided to make this part of the Bill applicable with retrospective effect, the question is what is meant by that retrospective effect. Is it intended to unsettle adjudications which have already been made by the courts, or is it only to apply to past loans about which suits may be instituted after the coming into force of this Act? The amendment moved by Raja Sahib is that from clause 6 the words “pending on or” be omitted. The effect will be that the provisions of this part shall apply to all suits instituted after the commencement of this Act. Thus it will cover all transactions which have taken place before this time but with respect to which relief is sought after the coming into force of this Act. If this clause is passed as it has emerged out of the select committee, the effect will be that if a sub-judge has decreed a claim the district judge or the High Court will not only have a discretion to re-open that transaction but will be bound to accept the appeal, re-open the case and order a fresh trial. Again even if the district judge disposed of the appeal and the dispute is pending in second appeal before the High Court, or even if the matter is pending before their Lordships of the Privy Council eight years after the institution of suit that case will have to be remanded and a new enquiry made under the provisions of the new Act inasmuch as the word suit is usually taken to include not only proceedings in the trial court but the proceedings in appeal and revision are treated to be a mere continuation of the suit. Of course, if the idea of this House is that transactions which have been settled by decrees of courts, even including those of the highest court, should again be re-opened, it is a different matter. But I submit it would be hardly fair to carry the retrospective effect of a legislation like this to that extent.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban)
One obvious reason why I stand up to oppose this amendment is that supposing you pass this Bill into law and it is there with Government under consideration, say for a certain number of months before final sanction is accorded, what would be the result in the country? Everybody, especially the money-lending classes are well aware of the provisions of this Bill and knowing full well that the Bill will have no application to suits that were pending before sanction is accorded to this Bill, they would all rush into courts of law and there will be a multiplicity of suits and the debtors would almost be ruined. There would be so many decrees, so many suits and so many cases pending before Government gives final sanction to this measure that the debtor whom we want to save would be destroyed. He would be a ruined man and he will thank his benefactors here in the Council who have been talking so much about giving him relief but have ultimately failed to do it in time. That is one objection.

In the next place, I do not think there is any harm if the Bill were to cover appeals, that are still pending in courts. After all, appeals could not be more than three or four years old. Every one of us knows that there has been a slump all round and that the agriculturist has been suffering not for the past two or three years only but for the past many years. All arguments that have been advanced on this side would apply with equal force to all debts contracted three, four or five years back and I do not think there would be any harm if a suit includes appeal and if the provisions of this Bill were to apply to pending appeals whether they are in the High Court or in any other courts subordinate to the High Court. Moreover, as you will observe, supposing after the passing of this Bill a suit is brought by a creditor against a debtor, and there is already a suit proceeding against that very debtor brought by that very creditor under a different cause of action, both the suits would be proceeding side by side after the passing of this Act. The court will necessarily be deciding the same sort of transactions inter partes by two different sets of principles and rules. In the first case the court will be guided by the contract that is actually there between the parties while in the second instance, the court will be guided by the provisions of this law. That would be courting anomaly. Why not place all the suits which are still sub judice in any way and at any stage on the same footing and lay it down here that they should be judged by the same legal principles? With these words I oppose the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 6, the words "pending on or" be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 6 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

New Clause.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): I think, it is realized by the members of the House that the amendment of the Usurious Loans Act is meant to apply to past transactions as well as to future transactions and further that these provisions apply to loans to traders as well as loans to agriculturists, to loans advanced to residents of towns as well as to loans advanced to persons living in rural areas. I have already pointed out that the bank rate at the present time is $8\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. and it has been the same for the last year and a half, and it is likely to continue to be the same or even to be less in future. The effect of the amendment of the Usurious Loans Act as passed by this House is that it is not possible for a person in the Punjab who has got a house to offer as security to borrow money at 6 per cent. compound interest. It is no use taking rates of simple interest into consideration because by a uniform practice of business men who make their accounts after six months or a year it is usual to charge compound interest and the rates of interest which are prevalent in the province amongst the commercial community as also amongst others are invariably compound interest rates. The point which I am trying to put before this House is this. Are you not really making it difficult for a trader to find money to invest in his business which is his only source of income? Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram on behalf of the agriculturists can say: "We do not want any money, restriction on credit is good for us because land, a substantial thing, is in our possession and from the profits of land or on the rent of land we can live." A trader lives on business and his business depends upon the capital that he possesses. A portion of it, and you will find invariably a very small portion of it, is his own; the other is invariably borrowed capital. If you make it impossible for that man by enacting this provision to borrow money from the market, you are practically ruining his business. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram is perfectly straightforward and honest inasmuch as he realises that no trader or business man can afford to make a living if he is not allowed to borrow money at proper rates and invest it in his business. He would be prepared to exclude traders from the provisions of this Act but what he proposes is this: "I am perfectly agreeable to allow you to carry on your business provided you come to an agreement with me, on my terms with respect to agricultural debt." He says in effect, "wipe out the agricultural debt by accepting my terms"—which are most unreasonable—"and it is really on these terms that I would allow you to carry on your business." That is what he means by his terms. He says: "I am perfectly willing that this Bill be only confined to rural areas provided of course you accept the term that I offer that the agricultural debt is wiped out." I say that is a most improper way of the use of vote. If you think that a thing is fair and equitable for a trader or any other section of the community, you should say: "Yes, I shall accept it irrespective of what your opinion might be with respect to rates for agricultural people." If that is the kind of compromise he offers, certainly we are prepared to accept that compromise. Judge each proposal on its merits and if you think that a proposal is good on its merits you should vote for it.

I emphatically assert that it is not to the interest of the trader, that he should be prevented from borrowing money, quietly without any fuss without any information to his neighbours and without any information to his creditors at rates which are economic and fair. If you lay down that 6 per cent. compound interest with six-monthly rests is unconscionable, no trader in this province can borrow money. You are perfectly happy because you have got your land to fall back upon, while this poor trader has not anything else on which he can depend. Even a temporary shortage of money or a temporary shrinkage of credit might be his entire ruin. If you had conformed to the standards which had been laid down in other provinces, if you had fixed fairly reasonable rates of interest so that no trader would be put into difficulty it would not have been necessary to ask for these exceptions, but if you put down a very low rate presumably with a view to give relief to yourself for past transactions it is necessary that you should safeguard the means of livelihood of a very large class of population of this province, if not the means of livelihood of this province, at any rate the credit of the province and the requirements of trade. There are some honourable members who are directors of co-operative banks or mortgage banks. Some of them have occasion to borrow money for their trade. I put it to them that to-day with the bank rate at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. can any one of them go anywhere and borrow money on the security of their house or land at $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.? Anything above that rate is now usurious in the province. If they cannot borrow money at that rate they will find that a petty trader without their influence will find the doors of his business closed. Therefore I say that whatever you might like to legislate to meet the difficulties of the agriculturists, it is but fair that you should not in attempting to get relief—perhaps a well deserved relief—for yourselves do anything which will not only wipe out the trade and industry of this province but also the means of livelihood of a considerable portion of its population. Therefore I beg to move—

That the following be added to part III :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to a trader, contractor or shopkeeper, or to a loan expressly borrowed for purposes of trade or industry.

I have intentionally put the word 'expressly' so that it may not be open to anybody to contend that a loan which was not really borrowed for purposes of trade was actually spent for that purpose. That is why I have used the word 'expressly' to safeguard the possibility of a person who is not a genuine trader taking benefit of these provisions. (An honourable member : Their fear is that the borrowers will be made to write in the deed that the loan is raised for commercial purposes). I have put in the word 'expressly' with a view to prevent persons who are not genuine traders taking advantage of the exception. I am quite prepared to omit that word if the word 'expressly' is taken by some people to convey exactly the opposite of what I intended. That is with respect to traders.

Then, Sir, the other amendment of which I have given notice is—

That the following be added to part III :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to persons residents of or carrying on business within the limits of a municipal committee, notified area or small town committee.

The object of this amendment is to confine the operation of this Act to the agriculturist alone, so that persons who do not suffer from this agricultural depression should not come within the purview of this Act. Besides, the persons who are living in towns are in no sense dependent upon agriculture and it would certainly not go against the wishes or the desires of the rural party who are out for some kind of relief for themselves.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

The third amendment of which I have given notice practically covers the same point and runs—

That the following be added to part III :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall only apply to loans advanced to agriculturists who are residents of rural areas.

If you accept my first two amendments, the third need not be accepted, but if you reject the two I would ask Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram to accept the third amendment which is practically in language suggested by him, that he would be prepared to confine the operation of this Act to agriculturists living in rural areas.

Mr. President : New clause proposed—

The following be added to part III :—

A. P. M. The provisions of this part of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to a trader, contractor or shopkeeper, or to a loan expressly borrowed for purposes of trade or industry.

The provisions of this part of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to persons residents of or carrying on business within the limits of a municipal committee, notified area or small town committee.

The provisions of this part of the Act shall only apply to loans advanced to agriculturists who are residents of rural areas.

Sardar Sampuran Singh (Lyallpur, Sikh, Rural) : I rise to make a few observations on these three amendments. I have had an opportunity of discussing these provisions, with people of all communities, classes and trades living in this province both in this division and in the districts of Lyallpur and Jhang of the Multan division. There are several people who do not come within the definition of agriculturists, but they live in villages and carry on business on a small scale. They are suffering more or less from the same disabilities and disadvantages from which the agriculturists in those parts are suffering. They took loans when money was cheap and credit was great and these loans have now become multiplied three and some times four times the amount they borrowed on account of interest and the low prices of agricultural products which is the chief cause of the accumulation of these debts. There is no reason why those people who do not happen to come within the strict definition of agriculturists should not be allowed to take advantage of the provisions of the present law. Complaint has been made several times by the other side that this is a sort of class legislation. At this stage I do not propose to meet that objection, but I would like to submit that there is no reason why these people who do not happen to belong to the agricultural classes should not benefit by this wholesome and healthy provision of law which we are now legislating. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri has tried to make out much out of the point that the trade will suffer. I do not agree with him. Credit either in trade or in agriculture depend to a great extent on the capacity of the borrower to meet his liabilities and I may say that each person has his own credit. A man may be very wealthy and yet may have no credit while another may be without any property and yet command great credit. It all depends upon the dealings of each person and on the general soundness of the work that he is carrying on. Judging from actual experience of the countryside I may say that the idea that credit depends upon how many acres of land a man possesses is totally wrong. With these few observations I may sum up my point by saying that we want to extend the privileges of this wholesome legislation to all classes of the Punjab. I know that a very large number of those classes really do require the help of this legislation. (Cheers).

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I rise to oppose all the three amendments moved by my honourable friend, the member for Industries. The main reasons why the amendments are not acceptable have already been given by the last speaker. I will confine myself only to a few points which have not been touched by him. The amendment refers to agriculturists who are residents of rural areas. Now, what is a rural area? It has to be defined. If the honourable member means by rural area the area known as rural area for purposes of elections to this Council, I may point out that this definition will not be constant, but ever changing. Thus, for instance, under the new constitution rural area will undergo complete transformation. If the honourable member fixes the population as the basis for determining the rural area, that basis also is liable to change, so much so that what is rural area at one time will become urban and what is urban will become rural. Therefore by accepting the amendment we will fall into difficulties and the courts will find it difficult to decide the issue whether a certain area is rural or urban.

Then, again, what is the justification for depriving a man who carries on agriculture and yet resides in a town of the provisions of this measure? Further, the amendment refers to persons carrying on business within the limits of municipal committees, notified areas and small towns. Generally speaking people living within these limits are worse off than those living in small villages, and they are mainly agriculturists. For instance, there is a tahsil, named Kharar in which the agricultural or rural element is more than 80 per cent. of the total population. There may be a few shops in that tahsil, still the character of the whole population is rural. What is the justification for depriving those people of those advantages which this measure proposes to give?

Thirdly, if we accept this amendment, we will be creating class distinction. The traders, contractors and shopkeepers will be exempted from the operation of this measure. How is it possible for a person to determine whether a loan was taken for the purpose of business or for the purpose of agriculture? Generally whenever a loan is taken the purpose for which it is taken is not mentioned. When that is the case it will always be open to money-lenders to bring in evidence to prove that the loan was taken for the purpose of trade while as a matter of fact the loan might have been taken for the purpose of agriculture. That will mean additional burden to courts to find out for what purpose the loan was taken. I have never seen such a discriminating provision in any enactment which has been passed up to this time. It was with the object of removing all such distinctions that even the framers of the Bill changed the provisions so as to make them applicable to all sorts of people. When the motion for reference of the Bill to a select committee was before the House the honourable opposition members complained that Government was enacting a class measure. Now, when the Government has altered the provisions so as to make them applicable to all classes, the honourable member brings in an amendment which will have the effect of making this Bill a class measure. It is clear that the effect of the amendment is to defeat the object of the Bill. I do not think the honourable member intends to press his amendment seriously. With these words I oppose the amendment.

[Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan.]

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural): Sir, I rise to give not what is called whole-hearted support to what Mr. Puri has said, but some support. If all these three amendments are taken separately I think there is an apprehension that they may defeat the object which the framers of this measure have in view. But if the honourable mover of the amendments had taken trouble to frame his amendments in such a way as to remove those fears which are in the minds of honourable members representing rural areas, I think there will be much to commend them to the House. For instance, it would be admitted, it cannot be contended, that everybody in this House wants that this legislation should have no adverse effect on trade or industry which is being carried on in areas within the jurisdiction of municipal committees. It would also be conceded that there might be some fear that some fictitious entries might be made by money-lenders to the effect that a certain loan was advanced for the purpose of trade. This fear can be avoided if some provision is made to prevent such false entries and also if there is some limitation to the areas. Of course we find that most of the people inhabiting these notified areas and small town committees are members of agricultural tribes and I for one, would not sacrifice the interests of those people who are inhabiting those areas. But I do not think that the people living in municipalities and carrying on trade and raise loans for that purpose need protection. As a matter of fact I do not think the Government had those people in view when they framed this legislation. Therefore I would request the mover of these amendments to so frame them that something might be done for the protection of trade and industry in areas which are within the jurisdiction of municipalities and not notified areas or small town committees.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I am grateful to my friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for having brought these three amendments. As a matter of fact the idea underlying all the three amendments is one and the same. The difficulty which some of my friends on the other side seem to feel will be met by these amendments. It is really an olive branch from this side of the House to the other side and practically forecasted by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram that something should be done to relieve indebtedness without hitting industry or trade. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri consulted me also with regard to these amendments and to the idea underlying them and I gave my whole-hearted support to them. I wish to protect the agriculturist by every means in my power and here is the time when Chaudhri Chhotu Ram can test my honesty of purpose which he sometimes doubts. There was one member who raised certain objections with regard to the agriculturists who are residents of small town areas, I think it was Sardar Sampuran Singh. He said that there were certain people in these rural areas who were not agriculturists, but who deserved protection in the same way as agriculturists. I agree with him and if necessary I would frame the amendment in the following terms. "The provisions of this part of the Act shall only apply to loans advanced to residents of rural areas." In the word "residents," everybody is included. But there is the difficulty pointed out by Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan that rural areas are difficult of definition. You cannot say what a rural area is, though one has defined municipal committee or notified area or small town committee. The underlying idea is that while protection is given to the agriculturists, people who are engaged in trade or shopkeeping or those who are industrialists should not in any way be hampered by the law of supply and demand. Therefore if the House adjourns for a short time with your permission, a compromise may be arrived at on this point and I do not think it will be difficult. I am sure there would be complete unanimity on this point because the underlying idea is in the minds of everybody and there is fear that by not accepting either of these amendments we might be hitting the people whom we do not want to hit or protecting people whom we do not want to protect. That is the point which is really responsible for these three amendments which are not of course identical. It is not a very easy matter to frame laws without exceptions. If you frame laws certain people are bound to suffer and there are bound to be some exceptions. If it really pleases my friends on the other side, I would be prepared—I have not consulted Mr. Puri—to keep the 2nd amendment with notified areas and small town committees. These small town committees and notified areas are bound to develop and in a very short time become centres of trade and commerce but if you keep them out by your action, that chance would be gone for ever because in order to improve trade and agriculture it is essential that there must be no laws which prevent the flow of capital or regulate the law of supply and demand. Honourable members must have read Mr. Darling's words quoted in the Tribune the other day. He brought out this point very forcibly. If I were one of the other party I would certainly accept the words "notified area or small town committee" because to my mind you cannot possibly develop trade and commerce only in the big cities. Trade, commerce, and industries by means of hydro-electricity and other power must be protected and increased in these notified areas and small town committees. I happened to hear a very interesting lecture given by the late Finance Member of the Government on board the ship Victoria. He was of the opinion that India should have factories and places of industry in these small towns and should not follow the west in having them in large towns like Manchester and London where people live in slums. He gave this advice in very good spirit and if you really wish to see that your industry rises in small towns and notified areas you must adopt the amendment of which notice has been given by Mr. Puri. If you do not want to agree, there is no desire on this side to keep these notified areas or small town committees along with municipal committees. Then it is said that there are certain agriculturists living in municipal committee areas and they should be protected. I submit there are bound to be hard cases. You cannot make law for all. It would be impossible. I can quote thousands of instances to show that people have suffered from certain laws. This is really an olive branch held to the other side. If you really want to protect the agriculturists

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

there is no one on this side who will not agree to give him protection. But on your part you should be equally vigilant and careful of the industrialists, the traders and members who are engaged in commerce. You must not forget them. There are a large number of educated classes who cannot possibly take to agriculture and cannot do anything but take to industry or shopkeeping or business of that kind. Why impose difficulties in their way? The result of the Bill when passed into law would be that capital will flow away from the Punjab.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : May I know how excessive rate of interest is in the interest of trade and industry?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Unfortunately I have to teach the elements of economics to the Honourable Minister. If a person can lend his money at the rate of 10 per cent. in Allahabad or Delhi he would prefer to advance his money there instead of in the Punjab where the interest is very low. That is simple logic. It is common-sense and it does not require any explanation. Here you lay down a rule that in the Punjab nobody can lend at a rate which is more than 5 per cent. What would be the result? There would be thousands of people who would be going out of the Punjab and investing their money in factories and industries outside the province. I said here on the floor of this House that knowing that the Punjab is going to be ruled by zamindars people are trying to carry all their money to other provinces.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : But is this relevant to the question I asked?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I am trying to reply to your question. If you fix a small rate of interest as the maximum, say 5 or 6 per cent.—

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : Has any rate of interest been fixed as the maximum? My question is how excessive rate of interest would help trade and industry. What the honourable member is pleading is, that the provisions of the Usurious Loans Act should not apply to traders, that is to say, that the traders whose interests he wishes to protect should be subject to excessive rates of interest. If that is so, how is he going to promote trade and industry?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Excessive rate of interest would be, if the law is passed and accepted by the Government, anything above 5 or 6 per cent.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : No.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : It is hopeless to argue with the Honourable Minister. The bank rate is 8 per cent. at this time. If the Honourable Minister still wants to explain, he will please do so. I will then reply to him.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : I have nothing to explain.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : The question is, what is the excessive rate of interest according to this law if it is passed? It is anything above 5 per cent, if the bank rate is 8 per cent. on secured debt. If the bank rates is 3 per cent., add 2 to it and it becomes 5 per cent. and anything over that would be excessive in the Punjab. Now in a town quite close to the Punjab, say Delhi or in any town in the United Provinces, a person can go and get 9, 10 or 12 per cent. on his money. Why should he not go there and lend money? The capital is thus bound to fly away from this province and the result will be that the benefit of capital which would otherwise accrue to the Punjab would be denied to it. This is simple logic and common-sense. If Sardar Sahib thinks that 200 per cent. or 180 per cent. which is sometimes the case, is the excessive rate of interest, then I am not accepting that definition. I am accepting the definition that excessive rate of interest in future is anything above the Imperial Bank Rate plus 2 per cent. on secured debt, compound interest of course. If people can invest their money in a better way in a neighbouring province or in a neighbouring town where this Act will not be applied the natural result will be that the money would flow from the Punjab to the other province and will not help our industry.

Pir Akbar Ali : If the money goes the rate of interest will become low.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : There are several members of the same mind as Sardar Sahib. They can make their speeches and explain themselves. But this is a simple thing, common-sense and mere logic.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : He says all the provisions of part III. should be excluded from application to these places. That means insolvency laws and other things.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : People do not study things at home and they put questions. I cannot reply to all of them. I thought this was merely confined to rates of interest and nothing else. My submission is this. Your idea is not to destroy trade and commerce and industry. Our idea is not to destroy agriculture. Your idea is to give relief to the agriculturist. Our idea is to give relief to the agriculturist. Now, can you not find some method by which we can attain these objects? There are three amendments by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri. He says that everything should be done to give relief to the indebted agriculturist or people living in rural areas and other small people with small means. My submission is that now is the time when the Government and the other members should come to an understanding that so far as people who are engaged in trade, shop-keeping or industry are concerned, they should be excluded from the operation of this Bill and the application of this legislation should be confined to those people who are either agriculturists or are dependent on agriculture. I was submitting that there is a large number of educated youngmen who are going from door to door and if only we could help them to settle in small areas in villages, they would be a great help. I submit this especially to Sardar Arjan Singh who I am very glad has spoken in favour of the amendments. This is the underlying idea of Mr. Puri's motion. Every effort should be made to give protection to agriculture, but no harm should be done to those people who come under the definition of trade and industry. I hope that a genuine attempt would be made to come to some sort of understanding so that we may not be quarrelling in this matter. My friend over there grew eloquent that it would be said that we are making class legislation. But nobody will say that when the whole province is in favour of a motion of this kind. There would then be no danger of anybody bringing this charge. Moreover, it is not a caste or class legislation which we are asking for. It has got a double idea namely to give protection to the indebted agriculturists or persons dependent on agriculture and not to bring within the ambit of this law those people whose main source of income is trade and similar other professions. I therefore beg seriously to request my friends on the other side to look to the idea and the spirit and the basis of these three amendments. Of course they can pick holes in one or the other or the third, but it should not be difficult to come to an understanding on that point.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra (Non-official nominated) (Urdu): Sir, according to clause 5 of the Bill which was passed yesterday, in the presence of the present prevalent bank rate it will be illegal to take more than $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum compound interest on loans advanced against security of any movable or immovable property. It matters not for what purpose the money is borrowed. The clause applies equally to loans borrowed by an agriculturist or a trader borrowed for the purpose of agriculture, industry or trade. The honourable Leader of the Unionist Party said that there was a misunderstanding regarding the rate of interest. I hope I have explained the effect of the clause clearly, and if the honourable member still thinks that my interpretation is wrong I would request him to say so.

Now, let us examine how far this rate of interest is fair and workable. The question is whether it will be at all possible to secure loans at this rate. My belief is—and it is based on actual experience and on enquiries made in this connection—that it will not be possible at all to obtain loans at such a rate of interest. I am sure that this rate will not induce any money-lender to lend money on any security. Take the case of a borrower who needs money for his business (trade) in which he thinks he can earn 18 per cent. or 24 per cent. profit. He cannot get money from banks against security of immovable property, as big banks do not advance against property and those who advance charge much higher rates. The sahukars who are his only source will not advance at such low rate of interest as $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. What is he to do? How is he to run his business? He can afford to pay more interest. He is prepared to pay more, because by doing so he can earn his livelihood but your law prohibits him from doing so. Is it not absurd and cruel to crush his spirit of business and to snatch away his means of livelihood by a legislation of this kind? Under such circumstances it will be only fair to allow him to borrow and the creditor to advance at a higher rate of interest.

I say again that the rate fixed in this Bill is very low, so much so that even the banks will not be prepared to advance any loan at this rate. This I say on the strength of the replies that I received only yesterday from two well-known banks to my letters in which I enquired from them as to what their usual rates of interest were on loans advanced by them on the security of grain and such other property. One of these two banks is the Central Bank of India, Limited, which writes as follows:—

With reference to your enquiry I may inform you that the big banks in the Punjab are charging interest at the rate of 7 per cent. on advances against wheat with monthly rests. The rate for advances against property is a little higher and depends upon the amount and the standing of the borrower.

Now this is not a small bank. It is on the other hand admittedly one of the biggest Indian banks. The case of foreign banks is not different. Here is a letter from one of the five biggest banks of England, I mean the Lloyds Bank. The Manager of its Amritsar Branch writes as follows :—

With reference to your letter of date we shall be pleased to make advances against the stocks of wheat up to 75 per cent. of the market value with interest at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum subject to monthly rests including insurance.

I ask the honourable members to please note particularly the words "monthly rests" in these two letters. These banks, it is obvious, are not content with charging 7 per cent. per annum compound interest, but they must have this rate with monthly rests. There is another important point to note in this connection. As you will have found from these letters, the banks are prepared to advance loans on the security of stocks of wheat up to 75 per cent. of the market value of wheat and not more. Then these banks reserve to themselves the right of selling such stocks at 24 hours' notice, in case of the price of the wheat is falling, in order to realise their capital and interest. This is another stringent condition that these banks impose. These are the terms and rates of banks, so well organised, and having ample money in their coffers, and against such a good security as wheat. Now in the face of this evidence it is certainly unreasonable to expect any individual money-lender to advance loans at this rate against every sort of security and without the advantages which the banks enjoy, what to say of $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. the rate that you have fixed.

It is also wrong to say that 2 per cent. more than the bank rate has been allowed by the Bill as I will presently show by facts and figures. According to an amendment moved yesterday by Mr. Roberts and adopted by the House, the bank rate for the period from the 1st of January to 30th of June in any year shall be assumed to be the rate fixed by the Imperial Bank of India on the 15th of December of the preceding year and for the second half of the year, the bank rate shall be assumed to be the rate fixed by that Bank on the 15th of June of that year. Now if you were to take the exact facts and figures and try to find the average rate of interest for the first six months or for the second six months, you will find that the average always differs from the rate on the 15th of December or the 15th of June. For purposes of illustration I shall take the rates of the Imperial Bank in 1930 and 1931. On the 15th of December 1930 the actual bank rate was 6 per cent. But the average rate of interest for the following six months came to about 6.735 per cent, meaning thereby that there was a difference of about three-quarter per cent. between the rate on the 15th June and rate that was charged in the following six months. Similarly on the 15th of June 1931 the rate of interest fixed by the Imperial Bank was only 6 per cent. but the average for the following six months came to 7.53 per cent., that is to say that there was a difference of about $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. between the rate on the 15th June 1931, which is to be assumed as the standard rate, and the rate in the following six months. These figures prove beyond doubt that in actual practice sometimes only half a per cent. or at the most one per cent. extra will be allowed to be charged. But that is not material. What I want to show is that everything is being done haphazardly, without going into facts and figures, without giving the consideration that such a serious subject deserves, and without taking into consideration the far-reaching effect it will produce on the economic condition of the province. I will not be wrong if I say that blinded by the power that the majority party in the Council possesses it is riding roughshod over the interests of the trading and the money-lending classes. Very unjust and retrograde provisions are being passed one after another without caring to see what harmful effect they will produce. Is this what my friends on the opposite benches call justice? Is this the way in which they propose to behave when provincial autonomy comes? I wonder how they can say with all their intellect and wisdom that the rate of $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. will tempt any money-lender to make advances of money. I challenge any of them to get a loan on the security of such a good property as stocks of grain at the rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. from the Imperial Bank of India even in these days. If they can get me a loan on these terms, I shall admit defeat. But I am sure that the Bank will refuse outright to make any advance on such terms and conditions. It is only on Government bonds that we may get a loan at this rate from the Imperial Bank because these bonds can be converted into money at any time and the interest is collected regularly every six months from the Government. There is not the least inconvenience felt in realising money advanced against such bonds. Therefore it is abundantly clear that if we stick to this rate of interest, as has been decided upon, for all sorts of securities and in regard to all loans whether they are taken by a trader or taken expressly for purpose of trade or industry it will be unworkable. We shall be certainly placing insurmountable difficulties in the way of the growth of trade and industry. Let my friends pause and consider and let them not give this impression that they are believers in the theory of 'might is right'. If they continue to adopt this attitude, they will surely kill trade and force it out of the province. I wonder who has appointed them to protect the interests of the traders and shop-keepers. I would request them to please let these classes alone. They can themselves take care of their interests. They do not want the zamindars to help them in this matter at all. Before I close my speech I would request the honourable members on the opposite benches to exercise their judgment and to consider this question in a calm and dispassionate manner. And if they persist in this attitude of theirs, they will lead the whole province to a state of bankruptcy (hear, hear). With these words I give my whole-hearted support to the motions before the House.

[R. S. Lala Labh Chand Mehra,]

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non Muhammdan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, in the course of his speech on the motion before the House the honourable member for Industry made one or two statements which have no basis in truth and which, I think, must not be allowed to go unchallenged. In the first place he was pleased to say that it was my desire that a sort of moratorium should be declared and that all debts of agriculturists should be wiped out with one stroke of the pen. This charge, I need hardly say, is entirely unfounded and I challenge the honourable member to substantiate it if he can. The other charge that he laid at my door is that I and my party are prepared to enter into any negotiations for a reasonable compromise with the opponents of this measure only on our own terms. That charge is also equally baseless and untrue. I have no hesitation in saying even at this late stage that we are prepared to meet half way the representatives of the money-lending classes if th latter make up their mind to come the other half way with reasonable proposals for an honourable compromise. I shall go so far as to say that we shall be only too glad to meet our friends even more than half way if only we are assured of their readiness for an amicable settlement of this vexed problem. We must know that they are prepared to face this problem with the spirit of give and take. But if they are prepared to enter into negotiations with us only with the object of taking all they can and giving nothing in return, I am afraid we must fail them and we cannot make them realise their hopes. And I am sure that we cannot be blamed for this attitude of ours which we are compelled to adopt. I may also assure my friends on those benches that our demands are very simple and they can be very easily met if they only disabuse their minds of deep-rooted prejudices. What we want is to protect the interests of the agriculturists who are weak and helpless as against the sahkars and if that point is conceded I think, we can come to an understanding at any time. This makes our position clear and I think, after what I have said, it will not be difficult for any one to judge who is to blame and who is not.

I was a little surprised to hear the honourable member for Hoshiarpur, Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit, saying that he and his party were prepared to give their support to any and every measure intended to protect the interests of the agriculturists. May I point out to him through you, Sir, that the manner of their voting yesterday on some of the amendments to this Bill told a different tale ?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I did vote with the zamindars yesterday.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : There are some measures or some provisions in a measure which go to benefit those people also who are strictly speaking not zamindars in the ordinary meaning of the word and if my friend did vote for such a provision, he cannot claim any credit for it. He cannot say on that ground that he is always prepared to help the zamindars. Another astounding statement that he made was that if a measure like this were placed on the statute book, all the money in this province would go out of it to find its place in some other province of the country. I remember and I am sure that it will be within the recollection of other members too, that a similar statement was also made when the Regulation of Accounts Bill, now an Act, was being discussed. But we find that no such thing has happened and all the money is still where it was.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It has actually left this province, at least a large portion of it to find its place in a neighbouring province.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am aware that a part of the money of this province has been invested in the sugar factories beyond the Jumna river. But it is certainly not the Regulation of Accounts Act which has forced this money out of this province. I am sure that if sugar-cane could be had here in the Punjab in the same quantity and of the same quality and at the same price at which it can be had in Muzaffarnagar or Meerut to run sugar factories, that money would never have gone out of the province. That would have remained here for ever. Therefore, we need have no fears on that score. But even if it were supposed for the sake of argument that the Regulation of Accounts Act has forced and that the proposed lower rate of interest will further force the money of the province to leave the Punjab to go beyond the Jumna or the Ganges or even beyond the Hughli, a majority of the population of this province will not be sorry, I am sure, for this exodus. They will be rather happy to see this money—which has proved so baneful for them and which has reduced them to the position of economic serfs and slaves—going out of the province. They will be better rid of it for ever. The same honourable member was further pleased to say that the rate of $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. will never promote trade and industry. It will rather retard their growth. I ask how many times I have to reply to this objection. You will remember, Sir, that I have replied to this objection more than once and if I were to cover the same ground over again, I shall certainly be only wasting the time of the Council. If Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit and his friends have decided to behave in this manner I can only liken them to those men who have eyes to see but who will not see, who have ears to hear, but who will not hear. It is no fault of mine.

✓[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : But the rate may be even less than $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

✓Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : The possibility of this rate of interest going down is very remote, but the chances of its going up are much greater. Therefore it is no use harping on the same tune again and again and saying over and over again that the rate will be $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. It certainly is not to remain stationary and as I have said there are greater chances of its going up.

This brings me to the question whether the amendments now before the House should be accepted or not. The main reason that has been urged in support of these amendments is that trade will suffer if clause 5 is made to apply to all loans advanced to traders or shop-keepers. I admit that it should be the concern of us all to see that trade does not suffer by any act of legislation. I may assure my honourable friends on the opposite benches that we on this side are as anxious to see the trade flourish as any one can be. We do not want that we should do anything by which trade should receive a set back. Such an intention, I need hardly say, is farthest from our minds. We shall be only too glad to help in removing all handicaps in the way of trade. What we want is that in our solicitude for trade we should not create any loopholes in this measure and thereby frustrate the avowed object with which this measure has been brought forward. My fear is that if the provisions of this part of the Bill is not to apply to a trader, contractor or to a shop-keeper or to a loan expressly borrowed for purposes of trade or industry, a very serious loophole will be created in the Bill. To illustrate my point I may say that if a person requires a sum of Rs. 100 or Rs. 50 and asks for a loan of that amount from a money-lender, the latter will very likely ask the borrower to write in the bond that the money is required for running a shop or for trade in cattle and the like although the money was in fact required for ordinary agricultural purposes. Thus it will be very easy for money-lenders to evade the provisions of this Bill. And as you are aware, Sir, it will not be very difficult for any money-lender to have such a condition inserted in the ✓ bond. The borrower too will readily bind himself to such a condition because of his need for money. It is for this reason that I cannot persuade myself to accept the first amendment. It is our desire to do all that lies in our power to guard against any such misuse of the provisions of this Bill and we do not want to let in anything which should nullify the effect of any of the provisions of this Bill.

I object to the second amendment on the same ground. I know that it will not be very difficult to find out whether a man is a resident within the limits of a municipal committee, notified area or a small town committee. But the question is how he will resist the demand of a money-lender for the insertion of an admission in the bond that the money required by him is for business and trade. Therefore, it is advisable that we should refuse to accept this amendment as well. As to the third amendment my objection is that in the absence of any clear definition of the word 'agriculturist' in any clause of this Bill, it is not safe to accept this amendment. We have not yet decided as to who will be given that status and who will not and what considerations will weigh with us in conferring that status on any individual. Besides there are other grounds on the basis of which this last amendment can be reasonably opposed. One of these reasons is that we do not want to create, by accepting this amendment, any class or caste distinction. I wonder how my friends on the opposite benches can move for the acceptance of such an amendment.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: But how does that question of class or caste distinction arise here?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: Is it not a fact that the Hindu Sabha group has raised an objection many a time against the attitude of some of the members of this Council and said that in nearly every session of the Council the question of affording relief to the agriculturists is raised and that occupies most of the time of the Council? Is it not a fact that the members of that group have insisted that steps should be taken to end the controversy between agriculturists on the one hand and non-agriculturists on the other? It is not only a fact, but a glaring fact and in the face of it it does not lie in the mouth of my friends to ask the Council to accept this third amendment.

Only a few days back these very honourable members argued that as the problem of indebtedness is an all-India problem, the Government of India should take steps to bring in some such measure and not the Punjab Government. They wanted a law which may be applied to the whole of India and to all classes of Indian people. They said that as the Usurious Loans Act was applicable to the whole of India its amendment should be undertaken by the Central Government. In other words, it meant that the provisions of such a Bill should be made applicable to all the provinces and to all the people. I wonder at this change in the attitude of the honourable members opposite. Now they want that the application of the provisions of this Bill should be limited to agriculturists only.

Then, there is the question of the uniformity of the law. Here in the Punjab, it is not only the agriculturists who are groaning under the crushing weight of indebtedness, but there are other classes also who are equally suffering at the hands of the money-lending classes. The honourable members opposite want us to believe that these classes of non-agriculturists are not indebted, while as a matter of fact, they are. I want to read a few sentences from a letter which I received some time back. But would it not be better if instead of reading it I hand it over to Pandit Ji so that the time of the Council may not be wasted?

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : If the honourable member gets this letter mounted and presents it to me I might condescend to read it.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I have lost all respect for the personality of Pandit Nanak Chand as a Brahmin. So it would be futile to expect me to get this letter mounted in order to present it to Pandit Ji. This letter reads :—

گزارش ندوی کی یہ ہے کہ آجکل قرضہ بل کی مخالفت

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It is not a forged letter I suppose.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I knew the suspicious nature of my friend. So I have preserved the envelope with the postal seals on. I will read one more sentence from this letter which is :—

مذا ہے کہ ڈاکٹر گوگل چند نارنگ بھی اس کے مخالف ہیں۔ میں ان سے
پوچھتا ہوں کہ جو کوئی ہے۔

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Why do they write to Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and not to other members?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Because they know I am in favour of this Bill and some other members are not. This gentleman told me that he would go to Doctor Sahib.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : But he has not come to me.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Perhaps he thought the Honourable Minister was very hard-hearted. Sir, I was saying that my learned friend was in favour of a law which may be uniform all over India, but now he has changed his attitude.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Sir, he has no business to write anything about me.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Sir, I was saying that my honourable friends have changed their attitude. (Interruptions). Here is the letter. The honourable member can read it after 6 P. M., when the Council adjourns.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : This document should go into the proceedings. I think that is the practice. I am asking you formally to have the document laid on the table. I think this request of mine should be complied with for another reason also, so that no people may have the temerity to write to any member against any individual without having seen that individual at all. That may amount to defamation in certain cases.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : This letter was written by one Sohni Lal c/o Seth or Lala Pars Ram, Magistrate, Multan city, in June last.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : You mean in the previous joon (birth) ?

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : No, in this joon in which were born in the Punjab men of distinction like the Honourable Minister. Coming to the point which I was explaining, I would like to say that some honourable members who are so fond of the uniform application of this Bill and who repeated so many times the argument that as the Usurious Loans Act was an all-India law its amendment should be undertaken by the Central Government and not by this local Council, have now changed their attitude and say that the application of this measure should be limited to agriculturists alone and all other classes should be excluded from its benefit. (Interruptions). Is my religious belief under discussion at present? The Honourable Dr. Sahib believes in caste by birth although in theory he does not.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I only tried to explain that caste legislation was objected to and I explained that distinction depends upon birth. Any one can be a trader but under a certain Act no one can be an agriculturist unless he is born so.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Sir, with these words I resume my seat.

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerjee (Punjab Chamber of Commerce and Trades Association, Commerce) : Sir, I have always listened with great interest and attention to what the Leader of the Unionist Party has said, but in this particular instance I must express a disappointment. The only argument that he has adduced against the amendment proposed by the honourable member for Industries is that the party to which he belongs has not accepted his previous amendments and that it is, therefore, that he will not accept it. He has not advanced any other argument in favour of his proposition. The present amendment to my mind is a very innocuous one. When I was speaking in respect of Mr. Robert's amendment as to the interest that should be applicable I made it perfectly clear that the operation of this Bill as I understood it then would be restricted to a certain class of people, meaning thereby the agriculturists. I think that since lawyers of standing like the honourable the mover of the amendment and the honourable member from Gujranwala did not agree with my view I am convinced now that the operation of the Bill is not restricted to the agriculturist alone but would be wider in its application. This view is confirmed by the fact that the term "debtor" as it appears in the preamble of the Bill is not defined, but the definition of the word "debtor" comes later on, and that definition cannot by any means apply to the entire provisions of the Act. This being the case I must say with respect that what the Council has passed so far in the matter of interest, in the matter of insolvency procedure and other matters will tend to hamper trade and industry of this province and I cannot in any case be a party to it. With these remarks I think it is essential that the amendments, at least the first one, should be passed.

Sardar Sahib Sardar Ujjal Singh (Sikh, Urban): Sir, I only want to say a word or two on the second amendment of Mr. Puri. I would say at the outset that I am in full sympathy with the provisions of the Bill and I do not want anything to be done by which the object of the Bill is defeated, but at the same time I do wish that in our zeal to protect the indebted classes we may not do anything by which trade and industry of the province is crippled. Sir, yesterday we passed an amendment limiting the rate of interest on secured debts to 2 per cent. above the bank rate. At present the bank rate is $9\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. I fully understand the implication of calculating that rate of interest on previous loans which will have to be calculated on the then prevailing bank rate of interest, but it cannot be said that the rate of interest at which loans will have to be raised now will be higher than $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. interest unless the bank rate goes up. It is common knowledge that no man with even good credit is able to raise loans from banks on the security of immovable property at less than 9 per cent. (Hear, hear). All traders and business men in these days do raise loans at 9 per cent. in order to make more money and in order to promote industry and business in this province. If we limit this rate of interest to business men also, the result will be that those business men who have not sufficient credit to enable them to raise loans from banks will not be able to carry on business. There is a large number of such people who have not sufficient credit at their back that they can at all times raise loans through banks. They have therefore necessarily to fall back upon private individuals who have sufficient capital and who at times are willing to advance capital to bond fide business men. If this amendment is limited to residents of municipalities, I think the object of the Bill will not be defeated and yet we will not be putting hindrance in the way of trade and business. I will therefore appeal to the honourable leader of the opposition to accept this amendment in that spirit so that there may be a way for genuine business men to do their business. It is always said that our province is poor not because agriculture is backward, but because business is poor, because industry has not been sufficiently developed. Let us not do anything further by which the development of industry and trade is retarded.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain (North-East Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, it was my intention not to speak on this motion. But a few words that were uttered by the honourable member Chaudhri Chhotu Ram pinched me and I was forced to make a few submissions before the House. The honourable member said that the money advanced to the zamindars as a loan in the long run ruins them. Other honourable members also said similar things. But I want to remind them that this money regarding which at present they are saying such poignant things is the means by which they have become Rao Bahadurs, Nawabs, and Kanwars. All the zamindar members who are here today occupying their seats got admission to this House as honourable members by the help of the money lent to them by the sahu-kars. The sahu-kars' money makes them members of the provincial councils and the Assembly. Still the honourable members say that that money strangles them. When these honourable members seek election to the district boards or other local bodies, they go to the sahu-kars, request them to advance loans so that they may be able to fight the election.

campaigns. They also take along with them other gentlemen who recommend their case to the sahukars and assure them the safe return of their money. Had there been no sahukars the sons of the zamindars could never have become barristers, and members of responsible posts like those of the I.C.S. They could not have even dreamt of these things. If these members could have the courage to forego all the facilities which they enjoy by the help of the money of the sahukars, there would have been no necessity for bringing this Bill before the House. The Bill has been brought before the House because the honourable members on the one hand do not want to forego all the privileges which they have earned by the help of the sahukars' money, and on the other do not want to pay it. If the honourable members really want that the zamindars should stop borrowing from the sahukars then they should bring forward a Bill providing that the zamindars, if found borrowing, should be hauled up before courts and punished. Let them make borrowing a crime in order to stop the zamindars from taking loans. But they do not want that. They want to continue to borrow but do not want to pay back. Another member of the Unionist party said that the sahukars were not sudkhors but mardumkhors, that is, cannibals. These very honourable members, when they require the help of the sahukars, become very submissive, as submissive as sons, but later on when the work is done and they no longer stand in need of the help of the poor sahukars, they change their attitude. When in need, they would go to the sahukar and tell him "look here, shahji, the land revenue is to be paid, the abiana is also due, please do give some money and save us from the impending ruin". The sahukar takes pity and advances the loan. But as soon as the need is fulfilled the zamindars turn against him and call him a blood sucker. All that is being done today in this House is done on account of the strength of the majority, but the majority cannot succeed in things which are illegitimate and against all notions of law and justice. A majority cannot succeed by a crime. The honourable members will surely get this Bill enacted as law, but later on this very crime which they are enacting now will turn upon them. They will themselves realise their mistake. At present they are only feeling jubilant for they think they are being rescued from all responsibility, and being set free from all liabilities and encumbrances. But later on they would rue for this. I am reminded of an anecdote in this connection. Once all the parts of the body became jealous of the stomach and agreed to non-co-operate with it. The hands refused to lift food towards the mouth. The mouth refused to swallow any food or drink. This strike on the part of the body against the stomach went for some time but then the parts began to feel weakness. This made them realise the whole position. They found that the starvation of the stomach was in reality their starvation, for the stomach passed the food on to them in order to keep them in condition. If the zamindars are the back bone of the country the sahukars are the heart of the country. If you ruin the sahukars, their ruin would mean the ruin of the zamindars. With these words, I resume my seat.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the question be now put.

The Council divided: Ayes 56; Noes 12.

AYES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.	Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.	Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.	Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Akbar Ali, Pir.	Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.	Muhammad Husain, Chaudhri.
Anderson, Mr. J. D.	Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.	Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.	Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani, Makhdumzada Sayad.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.	Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.	Muhammad Sarfaraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.	Murphy, Mr. A.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.	Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.	Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.	Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.	Nur Khan, Khan Sahib Risaldar Bahadur.
Fazl Hahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.	Nurullah, Mian.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.	Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable Malik Sir.	Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.	Ram Singh, 2nd-Lieut. Sardar.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.	Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Grindal, Mr. A. D.	Roberts, Mr. W.
Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.	Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Haibat Khan Daha, Khan.	Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.	Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.	Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.
Kesar Singh, Rai Sahib Chaudhri.
Latifi, Mr. A.
Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Marsden, Mr. P.
Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.

NOES.

Bhagat Ram, Lala.	Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Chetan Anand, Lala.	Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Labh Singh, Mr.	Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.	Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.	Ramji Das, Lala.
Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.

Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Perhaps before the question is finally decided—

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member wish to reply ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President : But the Honourable Member has no right of reply unless the mover of the amendment gives a reply.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : In the case of amendments who has got the right of final reply, the mover of the amendment or the Government member ?

Mr. President : After the passing of a closure motion it is in the discretion of the Chair to allow any member any right of reply which he may have under the standing orders in force (see the proviso to Article 66 of Business Manual). In the case of amendments proposed to Bills, the mover of an amendment has a right of reply (proviso to Article 64 (3)). So if, after a closure motion is carried the Chair allows the mover of an amendment to give a reply, under Article 64 (3), the Government member, to whose departments the matter relates, shall have the right of final say, but not otherwise.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I have no desire to make a lengthy speech but I wish to refer to one or two remarks which the honourable member from Rohtak made. He said that at the time when the Punjab Regulation of Accounts Act was being discussed it was asserted that the capital would become scarce in this province and that therefore credit would be impaired, whereas nothing has happened. I am surprised that he is so ignorant of the evil effect of this Act. I assert with a full sense of responsibility and after careful study that the effect of the passing of the Regulation of Accounts Act has been to impair rural credit a great deal, perhaps even beyond redemption. Some of the present day troubles with which we are confronted are due to that Act which has done absolutely no good to the zamindars except to impair their credit. I am afraid the contention of Mr. Labh Singh that capital would find more remunerative avenues of investment has not at all been met by the leader of the debtor classes. The chief ground on which he opposes my amendment is that some portions of it leave a loophole for evasion. That is hardly a ground on which a salutary provision should not be accepted. Fixing of rates, as is the universal experience all over the world, has always led to evasion. But has it prevented my honourable friends from insisting on the fixation of rates or has it induced any member of the House not to insist upon fixing of certain rates on the ground that they might be evaded ? I am prepared to meet my honourable friend on his own ground and I say minimise the chances of evasion as far as you can and as far as is humanly possible. Now the first amendment which I propose is that part of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to a trader, contractor or shop-keeper. So far he even did not find any loophole for evasion. The further words, "or to a loan expressly borrowed for purposes of trade or industry" seem to him to be capable of being evaded. In my opinion they are not and they are expressly designed to lessen the chances of evasion. The word "expressly" is specifically put in there to minimise the chances of evasion. But if there is any objection to them I am prepared to omit these words, so that my present amendment will only read :—

[Mr. Mukand Lal Pari.]

The provisions of this part of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to a trader, contractor or shop-keeper.

My next amendment is, that part III of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to persons residents of or carrying on business within the limits of a municipal committee, notified area or small town committee. Sir, people have expressed a desire that the exclusion of notified areas and small towns might bring in some agriculturists. I have no apprehension of this kind and as just pointed out by Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit, they are included because trade and industry deserve special encouragement in those places. But if those words are objected to I omit the words "notified area or small town committee" also from the amendment.

My third amendment is that part III of the Act shall only apply to loans advanced to agriculturists who are residents of rural areas. I submitted to start with that this is only an alternative to the first two amendments. If you accept the first two amendments, the need for the third does not arise. But if you have any objection to the first two amendments, the third is comprehensive enough to include every agriculturist who is dependent upon agriculture. Of course it would exclude people who live in towns and who may be only agriculturists in name but whose main occupation may be something else. (An honourable member: What about Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah?) If it excludes Sardar Habib Ullah or Chaudhri Zafrulla or even Mian Nurullah, these are not the persons for whom relief is intended and our main grievance is, that you intend to give relief to those who do not need relief. Does Sardar Habib Ullah need any relief? A man who has got any commercial or industrial interests would find himself considerably hampered and embarrassed by being a member of a notified tribe. Sardar Habib Ullah may have greater assets than a person who is not a member of an agricultural tribe but the latter's credit may be higher. He can borrow from a bank or a sahukar at a much cheaper rate than Sardar Habib Ullah even though possessing land ten times those of a non-agriculturist because they will not be available for security while everything that a non-agriculturist possesses is available as security for loan. Therefore no harm is done if people of that description are excluded. My submission before this House is that this amendment has been drafted to extend the operation of this part of the Act to bona fide agriculturists alone. But as I have already said, I am prepared to omit the words "or to a loan expressly borrowed for purposes of trade or industry" from my first amendment. This I think should meet with the approval of the majority party in the House, if their object is, as expressed by some of them to exclude traders and urban people from the operation of this part of the Act, and to confine it only to bona fide agriculturists.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): I think it is quite obvious that Government cannot accept these amendments in their present form. The very fact that the honourable mover has agreed to make several amendments in these amendments shows that they are not in a form which is immediately acceptable. The question then is, is it worth while to adjourn the meeting to come to a compromise? Personally I think the hopes of a compromise are very slender indeed, not merely because of the bias or the attitude of the members towards what is proposed, but because of the inherent difficulty of defining agriculturists, for instance. The difficulty is so great that the select committee had to abandon it and try an entirely different line of approach. They had to invent the term "debtor" in order to get rid of the difficulty of defining agriculturists. That difficulty will be as strong as ever, if negotiations are entered upon in order to come to some settlement on the amendments now before the House. Again an amendment of this kind will give rise to difficulties which are not easy to foresee. For instance, the honourable mover himself in good faith put in the word "expressly". That was at once taken hold of by members of the various parties who said that by merely making an entry in a bahi or bond in the terms of this amendment the debt would escape the provisions of the amendment of the Usurious Loans Act. I foresee that there will be very great difficulties, possibly insuperable difficulties, in reaching any workable agreement. But apart from that I think we should look at this question from a broader point of view. The Usurious Loans Act is an Act of absolutely general application and amendments to it, if passed, should be kept of a general character. It may be objected at once that I have myself moved an amendment excluding banks and banking companies from the scope of the Act. I think you will remember that in the original Bill no such exclusion was made and Government had not the slightest intention or desire to make any exclusion whatever, but in the select committee when the rates of interest that should be considered excessive were considered and the banks made an appeal to Government to be exempted from these provisions, it was then that the Government agreed to do so. It is a very exceptional exception and I think it is surely undesirable to extend the exceptions and make further exemptions. If longer notice had been given of this amendment it might have been possible to consider them fully and to consider them as a Government, but we had no such opportunity. In such circumstances, I must give my voice for the status quo ante. That is another reason why it is impossible at such a short notice to commit Government to any negotiations or to any change in the Bill as it was originally drafted. (Hear, hear).

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I think time might be given to members of the Council to come to some understanding. If an understanding is arrived at, it would be very good for all of us. There is a desire to come to some sort of understanding. If it is possible, I shall request that the question of adjournment be now put.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : There can be an amending Bill if we come to a compromise later on.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : After having heard the Government point of view, I do not think there is any need to adjourn for the purpose of a compromise.

Sardar Jawahar Singh Dhillon : In my opinion time should be given and if there is any possibility of arriving at any compromise, we should not miss it. We can again discuss this question day after to-morrow.

(Mr. President then ascertained the opinion of the House by asking those in favour and those against the adjournment to rise in their places. Twenty five were for and 25 against it. Upon this the Council was adjourned till 2 P. M. on Thursday, 15th November 1934.)

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Thursday, 15th November 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2 P.M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

New clause to part III.—concluded.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the following be added to Part III :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to a trader, contractor or shop-keeper, or to a loan expressly borrowed for purposes of trade or industry.

The motion was lost.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : May I be allowed to correct a statement I made in the last meeting. Owing to the short notice given of these amendments which have been passed by us, it was impossible to prepare properly for them and I regret to say that I did not notice the provisions of sub-section (3) of section 1 of the Usurious Loans Act which lays down that the local Government may by notification direct that this Act shall not apply to any area, class of persons or class of transactions which have been specified in that notification. I said that the Act is of general application and I want to correct that statement by drawing attention to that sub-section of the Act.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the following be added to added part III :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to persons residents of or carrying on business within the limits of a municipal committee notified area or small town committee.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the following be added to part III :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall only apply to loans advanced to agriculturists who are residents of rural areas.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I seek your permission to move the two amendments¹ which stand in my name.

¹The following be added to part III :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall apply to a person who is a debtor as defined in the Act.

²The following be added to part III :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall not apply to loans advanced to persons residents of or carrying on business within the limits of a municipal committee.

Mr. President : Very many amendments relate to the definition of the word "debtor" and none of these has been moved and disposed of yet. Thus the word is not defined yet finally; while the honourable member's motion depends upon the definition of that word. Does the honourable member mean that whatever the definition of the word "debtor" his amendment will fit in?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Whatever is ultimately passed.

Mr. President : I am afraid I cannot agree.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : So far "debtor" is defined in clause 7.

Mr. President : The honourable member is assuming that the definition of the word "debtor" as given in the Bill will be accepted by the House. His amendment is probably based on that assumption.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : The provisions of the Bill shall apply to a person who is a debtor as set below. Debtor means a person who owes debt or debts—

Mr. President : But that is a question for the decision of the House.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : This is how I define it. I do not say as defined in this Bill, but I say this is the definition which I adopt.

Mr. President : The honourable member may move his amendment at a later stage.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Very well, I will move it later.

Mr. President : Provided he is in order. I do not commit myself.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I know how to make it in order next time.

Mr. President : As regards the second amendment, it is the same as Mr. Puri's amendment minus the last six words.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : It is not an amendment. I can move any amendment when Mr. Puri's amendment has been disposed of.

Mr. President : After the House has decided that a certain clause stand part of the Bill, a member may move the addition of certain words to the clause, but he cannot move the deletion of any words from that clause.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : What prevents me from moving this as a substantive clause?

Mr. President : Which is exactly the same, with the exception of last six words. The honourable member could have moved that these words be left out from Mr. Puri's amendment when it was being discussed.

Mr. Labh Singh : Perhaps the difficulty does not arise. The term debtor has been defined in part III.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : What I am submitting is that there is nothing to deter me from moving it as an amendment.

Mr. President : Will not the same arguments be advanced in support of his amendment?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Let me make myself clear. I will show that not one argument applies to it.

Mr. President : If the honourable member were allowed to move his amendment, it shall have to be proposed from the Chair and once it is before the House, every member will be entitled to discuss it. Then with the exception of the last six words it will be the same motion as was discussed on the last day.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : That makes the whole difference.

Mr. President : I am afraid I cannot allow it.

Part IV.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I beg to move—

That the provisions of Part IV of this Bill be deleted.

Mr. President : The honourable member's motion is out of order. I will call the number of each clause separately.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Will you not propose from the Chair that part IV of the Bill be passed ?

Mr. President : No. A Bill reported on by a select committee is considered in two ways: (i) by amending some or all of the clauses of the Bill and (ii) by adding or deleting clauses. An addition or deletion of a clause is an amendment of the Bill, while verbal amendments are amendments to clauses. So, the first thing we ought to do is to amend clauses, amendments to which have been received. After amendments to clauses are disposed of, we will proceed to take up amendments to the Bill, that is to say, after the amendments to each clause are disposed of, the clause will be put to the vote of the House and accepted or rejected according to the decision of the House. I may repeat that the deletion or addition of a clause is an amendment of the Bill, not of the clause.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : I only want to ask for my information. Supposing you say that clause so and so stand part of the Bill, and it is carried, is it open to any one to say that it be omitted ?

Mr. President : No.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : How can you then say that first of all the amendments should be considered ?

Mr. President : If no notice is received of an amendment or amendments to a clause or clauses or if amendments though tabled are not moved, or are moved and rejected, that is to say, if a clause or a series of clauses are unaltered by the Council, it is open to a member to oppose the passage or move the deletion of such clause or clauses. But once the motion that a clause or certain clauses stand part of the Bill is carried, a motion to delete that clause or clauses cannot be allowed. Further, the proposed motion, if allowed, will affect the principle of the Bill.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I submit that the principle of the Bill will not go. Part IV is not the real part of the Bill. For, it will be seen that Government have reserved for themselves the right to apply the provisions of part IV to certain areas as a sort of experiment and if you will just permit me to explain to the House the amendments which have been carried, Professor Roberts' motion, clause 6 of the Bill which has been passed, those really are at the bottom of the Bill. The main object of the Bill is to give relief in the rate of interest and to apply that relief to all pending suits. Part IV is merely in the nature of an experimental measure which Government wishes to try in certain areas. It may succeed or it may not. The real principle of the Bill is that which underlies part III and not part IV at all because it is open to Government not to apply this part to any area. And in view of the fact that so many clauses have been passed which cut down the rates of interest, which modify the Usurious Loans Act and which make the Bill applicable to pending suits, the entire principle of the Bill has been covered already.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Our opinion is that the omission of part IV would destroy the principle of the Bill.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : There is no question of opinion. It is a point of order.

Mr. President : For reasons already stated and also because if allowed the motion will destroy the principle of the Bill, I rule it out of order.

Mr. Labh Singh : As it is a very important point, I shall with your permission just read one sentence which will clear up the issue from the speech made in Council by the Honourable Finance Member. Remarks were made in the same tenor by Sir Henry Craik.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : If I am able to remember the words which have been referred to by Mr. Labh Singh in the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member, they were that if the House came to the conclusion that this portion of the Bill should be omitted then the Government would not regard it as absolutely essential.

Mr. Labh Singh : I have got the report here. The lines to which I wish to draw attention are at the bottom of page 82 of our Debates. The Honourable Finance Member says:—

So also with regard to conciliation boards. Government themselves do not regard this as a solution of the problem. They are frankly not able to form an estimate of the benefits that may result from them. They consider that they may provide a possible means of relieving the problem in some districts. If, however, the Council considers that they will not serve any useful purpose, Government will not regard them as an absolutely essential part of the measure. (Punjab Debates, dated 26th June, 1934, pages 82-83).

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Now with the exact words of the Honourable Finance Member before us I think we are in a better position to form an estimate of what the Honourable Finance Member meant. He said that if the House considered that this part of the Bill would not serve any useful purpose then Government would not regard it as an absolutely essential part of the Bill, meaning thereby that if the House came to the conclusion that this part should be deleted, Government would not refuse on that ground to proceed with the rest of the Bill.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : May I also put an interpretation on the words of the Honourable Finance Member? The definite opinion of Government is here, without any kind of modification. The honourable member says, Government themselves do not regard this as a solution of the problem. There is nothing said about the opinion of the Punjab Legislative Council. The opinion of the Government is given here in these words.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : There is no complete solution of the problem.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I am reading from the official report of the speech. There is no word "complete" here. Government are frankly not able to form an estimate of the benefits that might result from conciliation boards. If the Council considers that they will not serve any useful purpose, Government will not regard this part as an essential part of the Bill. That certainly is complete by itself. It is an emphatic declaration on the part of Government. But you cannot get over what was stated in the first part of the quotation, that Government themselves do not regard conciliation boards as a solution of the problem.

Mr. President : As notices have been received of a number of amendments to each clause, each clause has to be taken up separately. Had no amendments been tabled to the various clauses any number of such clauses might have been taken up together and their retention or rejection decided on a single motion. The case now before the House admits of each clause being dealt with separately.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : That is certainly one method. But that takes a longer time. That means objection to every clause in this part. But if that appeals to the House we have no objection to adopting that course.

Clause 7.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I move—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (1), the words "secured or" be omitted.

I raised this question in the select committee as to what the conciliation boards are expected to do with respect to secured debts. Would it be possible for them, would it be permissible for them, for instance, to entirely disregard the security and proceed to some kind of settlement between the debtor and the creditor? We find from the various provisions of the Bill that the conciliation boards are not given any guidance in this matter.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I am very sorry to interrupt the honourable member but with your permission I want to make the position of Government quite clear with regard to the point of order raised by Pandit Nanak Chand. So far as we on these benches are concerned, we will have no objection to the whole of this part being put to the Council together. If it is omitted by the Council, Government will not drop the Bill. We would be perfectly willing to proceed with it and go on with the consideration of the remaining parts of the Bill. It was important that I should make the position of Government quite clear and I am grateful to you, Sir, for allowing me to do so.

Mr. President : I have given a detailed ruling on the point. I am not aware of any law under which a motion that twenty, thirty or forty clauses of a Bill be omitted. Each clause has to be taken and not the whole Bill nor a part of it comprising so many clauses.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I am not questioning your ruling Sir, I merely wanted to make the position of Government clear.

Mr. President : Had no amendments to the various clauses comprised in this part of the Bill been tabled, I would have gladly put the whole part and the motion under discussion would have been in order. But the difficulty now is that there are amendments to almost all clauses and I am obliged, therefore, to put each clause separately, so that its amendments may be disposed of.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : What is now before the House?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : My amendment that in clause 7, sub-clause (1), the words "secured or" be omitted. These conciliation boards have been constituted and they have not been given any guidance in the matter whether they are to follow the rules of contract law or whether any principles of transfer of property are to be followed by them or whether any rules of Hindu law or Muhammadan law or customary law are to be observed by them, or whether they are to be guided by any rules of equity or whether they are to be left entirely to common sense. The point which I raised before the select committee was, what would the conciliation boards be permitted to do with a secured loan? If a person has got a mortgage of the house, would he be able to realise the full amount from that security and would only the balance of the security be available for being dealt with by the conciliation board or would it be open to a conciliation board in a particular case to disregard the security altogether? On that point so far as I am able to remember, the select committee was not able to come to any conclusion. Although I thought that the secured loan would not be dealt with by the conciliation boards, still as a doubt was raised on that point I think it is best to clear our position on that point. I, therefore, suggest that the debts which should be placed before a conciliation board should only be unsecured debts. The secured creditor should be free to realise his security. I, therefore, move that the words "secured or" be omitted from the definition of debt.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (1) the words "secured or," be omitted.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer) : Sir, I hope that the House before coming to any conclusion about this amendment and other amendments of the same kind will consider the whole principle which underlies this part of the Bill—part IV. To make my meaning clear I fear that I must repeat certain truisms which we ought to know. The Punjab's basic industry is agriculture. The bulk of the land is under the ownership of a multitude of small cultivators. Those small cultivators for certain reasons—economic, climatic and social—required credit and have been encouraged to take credit. That credit has been based largely on the value of the produce of the holdings. While prices were high, while wheat was selling at anything between Rs. 4 and Rs. 6 per maund, the amount of debt expressed in terms of money though not in terms of produce increased enormously. Both debtors and creditors miscalculated. The price of agricultural produce has now fallen and wheat is selling somewhere about Rs. 1-12-0 a maund. As soon as prices fell, it became impossible for the ordinary cultivator to keep on terms with his creditors. In actual fact there has been something like a moratorium for the last three years or so. Meanwhile interest has continued to be credited on paper to the account and the result is that the debts of the agriculturists have now swollen to fantastic figures. Every one knows that no one can pay in full—the debtors know and the creditors know. But because we live in a human world where people consider their own advantage first, every one wants to get what he can. It is not always possible for creditors even when they realise the hard facts of the situation, to come to an amicable agreement. To help them Government has now introduced this measure to appoint conciliation boards and under clause 15 the duty of these boards is to do their best to encourage debtors and creditors to come to an amicable settlement of their problems. If they are to come to an amicable settlement it becomes absolutely essential that all debts should be before the board. If once there are privileged classes of creditors, then we may just as well not try this experiment of having these boards. If you are keeping out secured creditors, if you are keeping out creditors who hold decrees, then the whole of this part of the Bill is of necessity infructuous.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, I do not wish to press my amendment. My only object was to know the position of the Government on the point and that I now understand to be that the secured debts will not be considered as secured by the conciliation boards.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : My next amendment is—

That in clause 7 sub-clause (1), the words “payable under a decree or order of a civil court or otherwise, whether mature or not”, be omitted.

My object in placing this amendment before the House is to prevent these conciliation boards from dealing with adjudications of our highest courts. Even without meddling with the decrees there is a considerable amount of indebtedness in this province which can be legitimately relieved and with which the conciliation boards can deal and to which they can direct their attention and energy. If they confine themselves to cases between creditors and debtors who have not gone to the court it will be both to the interests of the creditor and the debtor to come to a settlement. The creditor to start with is saved the payment of heavy court-fee and heavy court expenses which including those of the appellate courts almost amount to 60 or 70 per cent. of the claim which may be due and in the circumstances the creditor would be willing to accept much less than he would be if he has already undergone heavy expenditure in obtaining a decree. Again, it seems hardly fair that a person who has obtained a decree from the highest court in the land after a strenuous fight and a considerable expenditure should be compelled under our new procedure to have that decree reviewed or at least scaled down and the realisation of that decree postponed. These are my reasons for excluding the decrees or payments due under orders of courts, from the purview of these conciliation boards. The scope of these conciliation boards should be limited in this manner. It would be a very good thing if they first started by attempting some sort of settlement between persons who have not gone to court, instead of trying to unsettle matters which have been finally decided by courts.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (1), the words “payable under a decree or order of a civil court or otherwise, whether mature or not,” be omitted.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): In my reply to the amendment which was last moved by the honourable member, I endeavoured to cover some of the ground which has to be passed before a decision can be reached on this amendment. There is, however, one new thing which the honourable member has said. He has stated that the boards will be in a position to go behind the decisions of the highest court in the province. They will not be able to do anything of the kind. There is provision made in the Bill that a decree shall be proof of the existence of the debt. What, however, the boards will in fact be doing will be to execute decrees. There must be many decree-holders in this province who would be very glad to have two annas in the rupee even of the decree which they have received from the High Court and if the boards can possibly help them towards realising even that small amount, the boards will have served their function. I think myself that it is possible that this part of the Bill—if practicable at all—will be found in practice to be for the benefit of the decree-holder rather than for the benefit of the judgment-debtor.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I am not convinced by the argument of the Honourable Legal Remembrancer that this portion of the Bill will work to the advantage of the creditor. What will happen will be something like this. A suit is filed. It is hotly contested, all conceivable false pleas are raised and ultimately a decree is obtained. It is then taken to the appellate court and again let us assume, the suit is decreed. It is then taken to the second appellate court where again, let us hope, the appeal fails and the suit is again decreed. Thus, after prolonged litigation extending over several years a creditor obtains a decree and is in a position to realise the fruits of the decree, and puts in an application for the attachment of the house of the judgment-debtor or for the attachment of his salary or for his personal attachment. All that the debtor need do, to nullify and indefinitely postpone the fruits of the decree is just to put in an application before the conciliation board and the effect of that will be automatically to stop the execution of that decree and nullify the result of a prolonged litigation which has involved the decree-holder so much expense. What will be the effect? What he had failed to achieve by litigation in the court of the sub-judge or in the highest appellate court, he will achieve by the simple act of putting in an unstamped application before the conciliation board. Now the effect of putting in an application before a conciliation board is that all proceedings against him whether by way of suit, or execution or insolvency are ipso facto stopped. That application may be the most frivolous application imaginable; the applicant may not be entitled to the benefit of the provisions of the conciliation boards at all, yet the effect of the provisions of the Bill as they have emerged out of the select committee is that the mere putting in of the application automatically operates to stay all proceedings. It is not possible for a conciliation board to dismiss any petition, howsoever foolish or ridiculous the petition might be, or even if the debtor on the face of the petition is not entitled to put in a petition at all. As soon as a petition is filed, a notice must be issued and a date fixed for the hearing, and that date may be a month or two or more later. There is no provision for the examination of the debtor by whose examination the position may possibly be cleared up and the true state of affairs brought to light. Again on the adjourned date the conciliation boards have no discretion to consider the application, but they must issue a registered notice to each and every one of his creditors and again give time for two months. The provisions which existed in the original Bill about the examination of the debtor and the dismissal of the petition in cases where the conciliation boards thought conciliation not desirable were omitted in the select committee by the majority party, in spite of the opposition of official members. Thus the execution proceedings are stayed for a year or so even on an untenable petition. The only grounds on which a petition can be dismissed are (1) if the debtor has not been diligently prosecuting it, or (2) if there is no compromise. With respect to the latter, after six months, or more when all creditors have been served, a debtor has to find one creditor only with whom he can compromise. Of course the poor decree-holder finds it difficult to compromise. The debtor will never compromise with the decree-holder with whom he has been litigating and who is not his friend. The debtor would like to spite the decree-holder who has dragged him to court and unless the debtor consents, there can be no compromise. Besides, the decree-holder who has spent so much money in obtaining a decree is naturally anxious to realise a portion of his decree or at least the court fee which he has spent. But there can be no settlement unless the judgment-debtor consents and the judgment-debtor is not in a mood to listen to the reasonable proposals of the judgment-creditor. The judgment-debtor will compound with one creditor collusively on most unreasonable terms which the decree-holder cannot accept and transfer his entire property to him. This will have the force of a decree. Apart altogether from the injustice of it, by sending the decree-holder to the conciliation board you are bringing the administration of justice in this province into contempt. Under such circumstances, who would go to a civil court when he knows that after a lengthy process of litigation extending over several years even if he gets a decree the execution of that decree can be stayed for 8 or 10 months merely by filing a petition before the conciliation board? And further all that is necessary for the debtor to achieve his object, to nullify the decree altogether, is to find one creditor with whom he can compound and to whom he can convey his entire available assets, because compromise even with one creditor must be given effect to by the conciliation boards and is to have the force of a decree. A decree must be passed conveying the assets permanently for a number of years to the colluding creditor. And all this time, the hands of other creditors including decree-holders are stayed and they cannot proceed against the debtor. What is the discretion vested in the conciliation boards according to the present Bill? They have no power to revise the terms of the compromise. They have only to ratify the agreement that has been arrived at between the debtor and one creditor however absurd that agreement may be and then that agreement has the effect of a decree of a court. The other day Rao Bahadur Chhotu Ram stated that it was quite easy to obtain collusive decrees in courts and, therefore, this was not a matter peculiar to conciliation boards. But he overlooked that in case of decrees by conciliation boards, they are immune from attack in civil courts while collusive consent decrees by civil courts can be set aside by suits as fraudulent transfers. In case of consent decrees by courts, the remedies of other creditors are in tact by law. Other creditors' hands are not pinioned. They can also obtain decrees and get the property of the debtor attached. They can get collusive decrees set aside as fraudulent transfers. But this is prohibited with respect to decrees by conciliation boards. No suit can be instituted or decree executed or any other process issued against a person who has put in an application before the conciliation board. Meanwhile the debtor has only to find one accommodating creditor who is willing to compromise with him and transfer his entire property to him. Therefore, if this part of the Bill is made applicable to the decrees of the civil courts also, it is most unlikely that any one would institute a suit in any area to which this Bill is extended with respect to any matter which is within the purview of the Bill. Unless the decrees of civil courts are excluded from the purview of this law I respectfully submit that this Bill, if passed into law, will bring the civil courts into disuse and expose their adjudications to contempt.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (1) the words "payable under a decree or order of a civil court or otherwise, whether mature or not," be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Pir Akbar Ali (Ferozepore, Muhammadan, Rural) : I move—

That in sub-clause (1) of clause 7, lines 5-6, the words "debts incurred for the purposes of trade," be omitted.

In moving this amendment I need not make any lengthy speech in view of the remarks made by the Honourable Finance Member day before yesterday. My object is that no loophole should be left in this law which will enable its provisions being evaded. If my amendment is not adopted, it will be very easy for a creditor to get the debtor enter in the bond or other deed the words "for the purposes of trade" when the latter actually borrows from the creditor for the purchase of bullocks or for some other agricultural purpose. I, therefore, submit that these words should be omitted.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (1) of clause 7, lines 5-6, the words "debts incurred for the purposes of trade", be omitted.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan (Revenue Member) : Sir, the apprehensions of the honourable member from Ferozepore may be justified, but I may draw his attention to the other side of the picture also. For instance, it is possible for a big zamindar to put up a sugar factory and borrow money for the purpose. (Interruption). I may inform the House that my honourable colleague the Minister for Education has recently put up a factory. (Interruption). If his income is mainly from agriculture, he will come within the definition of an agriculturist like every one else. I, therefore, suggest that the House should not ignore this aspect of the question when considering this amendment.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : May I urge that it seems to me that this amendment credits the conciliation board with remarkably little intelligence in suggesting that they will not be able to discriminate between debts for purposes of trade and for purposes of agriculture. (Hear, hear).

Pir Akbar Ali : The argument put forward by the Honourable Finance Member supports the motion for the deletion of the words referred to in the amendment. It will be very difficult for the members of the conciliation boards to make a distinction between debt incurred for purposes of trade and debt incurred for purposes of agriculture. That is a strong reason why these words should be omitted. Otherwise every transaction will be considered to be a transaction for the purpose of trade. So, I submit that these words should not remain in the clause.

Mr. President: The question is—

That in sub-clause (1) of clause 7, lines 5-6, the words "debts incurred for the purposes of trade," be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Lala Chetan Anand (West Punjab Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban) :
I move—

That in clause 7 (1) the words "or debts due to co-operative banks and societies or to commercial banks", be omitted.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 7 (1) the words "or debts due to co-operative banks and societies or to commercial banks", be omitted.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I must make one submission at the very outset. We will not be able to give any relief unless we include co-operative banks and societies in the provisions of this Bill. In fact these banks have been more harmful for the zamindars than the sahukars themselves. I am sure that they are shylocks of the worst type. (Hear, hear). These banks will put a zamindar in jail even before 20 bantias combined together can do it. (Hear, hear). If we fail to include these banks I think we will be rescuing the sheep from the wolf only to place it before the butcher, i.e., we will save the debtor from the clutches of the sahukar and put him in those of co-operative societies. If we study the various provisions so far as these banks are concerned in other provinces, we will be more convinced that we are right. In the first place I will quote the Central Provinces Debt Conciliation Act of 1933. If we read the definition of the word "creditor" in section 2 of that Act it will be found that it means a person to whom debt is owing and includes a co-operative society. So far as this Act is concerned, the legislature there has not thought proper to exclude these co-operative banks. Next if we take the report of the select committee on the Usurious Loans United Provinces (Amendment) Bill we read under clause 2 the following :—

3 P. M.

We did not consider that a definition of co-operative societies is necessary as we do not propose to exclude co-operative societies from the provisions of this Act. We do not say that the rate of interest charged by these societies is usurious; but if co-operative societies did charge a usurious rate of interest it is clear that that rate would not cease to be usurious simply because it is charged by a co-operative society.

Take again the report of the select committee, under section 4 of the other Bill, the Temporary Regulation of Execution Bill. This is also of the United Provinces. Here it is again stated, "We have deleted sub-section 2 as we considered it important to liquidate the bad or doubtful debt of a co-operative society and to give relief to the debtor whether or not his creditor is a co-operative society."

[Ch. Riasat Ali.]

Again, if we come to the various opinions expressed on our Bill here we find that many of them are to the effect that we should include these banks so far as the provisions of this part of the Bill are concerned. The first opinion is that of Mr. Macnabb, the Commissioner of Rawalpindi division. He says, "The Legal Remembrancer should find it easy to draft a suitable definition which should certainly include a co-operative credit society." The next is the opinion of the zamindars of village Batawala, district Ferozepore. The zamindars themselves have been clamouring against this so-called most beneficent department. Even they say, that "the loans advanced by co-operative credit societies to the agriculturist should not be exempted from the operation of this Act." Then there is the opinion of the zamindars of Badamoli, district Sialkot. These people have greater experience of the working of these societies and we must give great credit to their opinion. They say, "The provisions of this Bill should be extended to the co-operative banks also."

Then there is the opinion of my honourable friend Lala Jyoti Parshad, M.L.C., of Hissar. He says, "There is no reason why the agriculturist is not given protection at the hands of the co-operative banks who have even the authority to sell the land without having to go to court for obtaining a decree." All this literature quoted on the floor of this House clearly shows that these societies must be included in the provisions of this Bill if we want to give any relief to the debtor. Again, if we take into consideration the easy way of realisation of debts due to these co-operative societies as compared with the very hard and lengthy procedure open to the sahuکار in order to realise his debts, I think everybody here will agree with me that we must include these co-operative societies in the Bill. In the case of the sahuکار he has to spend money on court-fee, then he has to engage a lawyer, he has to cite witnesses and after many years he gets the decree. After he gets the decree he gets a warrant against the property or against the person. When the bailiff and the sahuکار go to the place to effect execution, they are beaten, they do not get anything and a case under section 332 or 333, Indian Penal Code, if there is a partial dislocation of the thumb $\text{ਥੰਮ੍ਹ ਦਾ ਖਰਾਬ ਹੋਣਾ}$, has to be registered and the sahuکار has to fight out that criminal case. This case is only an offspring of the major suit. Then what is the result? The poor money-lender cannot get any witnesses in the village where Chaudhris are in large numbers and he is himself convicted under section 182. But what has the co-operative bank to do? Only a salsi decree has to be obtained. The bailiff of the department goes to the court and puts it into execution at once without any lawyer or anything of that sort. If we give this benefit to the other class of money-lenders and if they (sahukars) think it will be easier to realise the money, they may lend at lower rates of interest than these societies. I have a sad experience of these societies,—one of the co-operative societies of my own district, I refer to the co-operative society of village Kot Ishaq. The original sum due to this bank was Rs. 6,769 but the amount realised was Rs. 16,500. Look at the way in which these banks are working. These people say that they have issued circulars now not to charge interest more than Rs. 9-3-6. As regards the case I was quoting no less than 200 acres of land were sold for the realisation of the money. They say that they have to charge liquidation fees and all that sort of thing and under this pretext the people are ruined. They will still be ruined if we exclude these banks from the operation of this Bill. With these words I support the amendment.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri Fazl Ali (Gujrat East, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I am sorry that I have to differ from my honourable friend over there in regard to the matter under discussion. I am sure that had the amendment been proposed by the honourable member himself the position and result would have been quite different. At present he is supporting an amendment, therefore our position is different and I am compelled to say what I am going to say which is that his criticism of the co-operative movement does not appear to be at all justified as I shall prove by placing certain facts connected with it not at all with the spirit of a debator as is likely to be mistaken but out of mere conviction.

It is hardly necessary for me to say that all human institutions must have some inherent defects in them. We cannot claim perfection for them, as we can do in regard to God-made things. The Co-operative Department being a human institution we cannot say that it is free from all defects. I am free to admit that there have been found some flaws in the working of the co-operative societies, particularly in the beginning, but that does not mean that these societies are altogether useless or that the defects in them are irremovable. That is not the case as most of the honourable members will bear me out. These societies have, on the other hand, brought so many blessings to us all and particularly to the zamindars that the defects in them, if any, appear as of little importance. And I shall be excused if I say that many of the defects that may be found in the working of some of these societies are due to the carelessness of those who are responsible for their working. Otherwise I am sure that the law under which these societies have been brought into existence has nothing to do with these defects (Hear, hear). I can say with a certain amount of certainty that if we all make up our minds to do our duty by these societies honestly and diligently, there is no reason to suppose that many of the complaints against these societies will not be removed. The difficulty is that we are not prepared to do our duty. We find it so very easy to complain but we are not prepared to do anything that is demanded of us. If we had been more careful in our affairs Shrimiti Lekhwati Jain would have had no justification to say that we zamindars enjoy and make merry at the cost of the sahukars. I ask her, what was the position of all these sahukars before they came to live amongst us? Who made them so rich if not we? She should know that they came to our villages with nothing but with a pair of scales and a few stone weights. She should bear in mind that —

ہمیں سے کہہ دین تہیہ سیکھ کر آئے

Mr. President: The honourable member will please speak to the motion before the House.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri Fazl Ali: I wanted only to show that it is more or less our own fault that we have to listen to these charges to-day.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: And what did the co-operative societies bring with them to the villages?

Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri Fazl Ali : They have brought so many blessings to us as I have already said. We can now fix our own rate of interest on loans taken from these societies. And if any profit accrues to these societies that we can divide amongst ourselves. In the absence of these societies we had entirely to depend upon the mercy of the sahukars who used to fix the rate of interest and who used to dictate their own terms and then all the profits were retained by them and went to fill their pockets. According to a recent circular of the Registrar these co-operative societies which have 75 per cent. of their own capital, have been permitted to charge only 4 per cent. rate of interest and those which have 50 per cent. of their own capital have been allowed to charge only 5 per cent. rate of interest on loans advanced by them. I challenge any one in the House to point out any case of a sahukar who is prepared to lend money at such low rates of interest. You will, I am sure, not be able to point out such a case and if that is so we shall have to admit that these societies are really a blessing to us. Moreover, these societies are competent to allow the concessions incorporated in the proposed legislation in case of debts paid up during the last two years as well, and the money paid in excess of the legitimate rate of interest now fixed can be credited towards capital.

It has been said by my friend Chaudhri Riasat Ali that in the case of one debtor a co-operative society realised Rs. 16,000 whereas the original sum advanced was only Rs. 6,000. But he has not told us the period for which the loan remained unpaid. He has, I should say, concealed from our view the other side of the picture. We can very well guess that the debtor must have slept over the transaction and must not have made any effort to discharge his liability. Such persons must suffer and I may tell my friend that if the creditor of this debtor had been some sahukar, the sum would have mounted up to lakhs as actually the principal amount of Rs. 500 mounted up to two lakhs in the case of another debtor. But we are apt to ignore these things. I may further state for the information of my honourable friend that the Registrar, Co-operative Department, has given another concession to the debtors. That concession is that if any debtor pays or rather repays his debt in time, he should be allowed a reduction in the rate of interest to the extent of $8\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. for the last four years also. Now, that is a concession that no sahukar will grant. Of course the case of persons who are not prepared to repay or who are not prepared to make any effort to repay their debts must be dealt with differently. They can be shown no concession. Why is it that people borrow readily, but when the time for payment comes, they feel like avoiding payments? Is it some defect in human nature that borrowing is so easy and paying back is so difficult even if the accounts of the amounts due may have been kept in a thoroughly honest manner? I am compelled to admit that my experience points out to this direction that many of us feel a sort of pinch when paying back the amounts due from us (Hear, hear). My experience also tells me that people in general do not feel so much aggrieved when their cattle and other things are being sold in execution of a decree of an individual as they do feel when their cattle are being sold in execution of a decree of a co-operative society. Such feelings are certainly unjustified and they should not lead us to decide that the co-operative movement is bad in itself.

My honourable friend opposed this movement on another ground as well. He said that the co-operative societies have not to pay any court-fee, have not to engage any lawyer and have not to bear other expenses of the courts which the sahuksars have to pay and, therefore, it is so very easy for them to realise the money due to them. But he has forgotten that all these expenses go to increase the burden of the debtors and if the societies do not incur these expenses, it is so much the better for the debtors. Consider this question from any point of view, you will be forced to the conclusion that these societies are a real blessing to us. This is not a small thing that we can fix ourselves the rates of interest, we can appoint our own liquidators, we have our own agency to realise money and then we can divide amongst ourselves all the profits that these societies gain. A time may come in the life of these societies when we can expect that they will charge no rate of interest and all the people whether Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs will equally benefit by them. I understand that there are already some such societies which charge no rate of interest and do not even charge anything by way of incidental charges that they have to incur in correspondence in the Gujrat district. These are not very small advantages that we derive from the co-operative societies and it is only reasonable that we should do all to encourage this movement. No one will call us wise if we decide to give those powers which we now possess to the courts where there are always so many difficulties experienced in the interpretation of the words like may and shall. We must retain those powers as it is in our own interest to do so. I, therefore, see no reason why this amendment should be accepted. I oppose it with all the force that I can command.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muhamadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I rise to support the motion before the House. The question is whether the burden of debt of the co-operative societies weighs heavily on the debtors and whether the way in which the money is being realised from these debtors is being felt as very inconvenient and obnoxious or not. If the answer to these questions is in the affirmative—and I have no doubt that it is in the affirmative—then there is no reason why the co-operative societies should be exempted from the operation of this provision. If of course it can be proved that the burden of debt of these societies is not very heavy and that the debt is being repaid without any difficulty being felt by the debtors, I am at one with those who are against this amendment. But I am sure that this cannot be proved and under the circumstances there is no course open for us but to adopt this amendment. This Co-operative Department has been in existence for a very long time and it cannot be said that it is still in its infancy. It cannot also be said that in the course of another four or five years things will radically change so far as these societies are concerned. We have already made sufficient experiment and seen for a sufficiently long time the working of these societies and I think there is nothing more left to be seen about their working. And from what we have seen we may conclude that it will not be safe to leave them to themselves as before. We must, therefore, bring them to face the conciliation board like an ordinary creditor.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: I rise to a point of order. I should be glad of your ruling on a point about which I have some doubt. My view is that the wording of the amendment, as it stands, is not in order because it is in conflict with another law in force, that is, the Co-operative Societies Act. If this amendment is passed it will either result in dual jurisdiction or will create legal difficulties as it goes counter to an existing enactment. If you will permit me I will read out that portion—

[The Hon. Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan.]

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Is not this whole Bill a modification of other enactments ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : There it is said, "notwithstanding anything contained in other Acts." You have not said that in this amendment. Section 43 of the Co-operative Societies Act, sub-section (2) (i) says :—

Provided that any dispute touching the business of a society between members or past members of the society or persons claiming through a member or past member or between a member or a past member or person so claiming and the committee or any officer shall be referred to the Registrar for decision or, if he so directs, to arbitration, and prescribe the mode of appointing an arbitrator or arbitrators and the procedure to be followed in proceedings before the Registrar or such arbitrator or arbitrators, and the enforcement of the decisions of the Registrar or the awards of the arbitrators.

My submission is that the amendment as at present worded is not in order.

Mr. President : If an express provision existed on the point in the Co-operative Societies Act, where was the necessity for inserting these words ? The law was there. Why were these words inserted in clause 7 ? The amendment is that these words may be omitted. The amendment is quite consistent with the law which the Honourable Member is relying upon.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Yes, Sir, these words were not included in the original draft of the Bill. I believe the select committee put them in.

Mr. President : Has Government moved an amendment ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Do you think they are helping the Government ?

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Before I was interrupted I was trying to show, Sir, that the burden of debt on the agriculturists who owe to the co-operative societies is as heavy as the debt that they owe to the sahkars or to their agriculturist brethren and if it is intended to afford relief to the debtors, it is essential that this amendment should be adopted. I have, and in fact many others have, got so many complaints against the working of these societies, but this is not the place to give vent to them. There is, however, one thing that I must say while on this point. These liquidators that are appointed by the Registrar are like wolves let loose on the public at large in the villages. Whenever a society goes into liquidation and a liquidator is appointed, the latter begins to realise money from any and every person he can catch hold of whether that person is or is not a member of that society at that time. The worst of it is that no proportion is fixed in realising this money. The law allows him to realise this money in any proportion he chooses to fix and also from the relatives of the members and even past members. Supposing I have been a member of a society for some time and after a few years' experience I see that things are going from bad to worse. I resign from that society as the best course to save my interest. Within two years of my resignation also suppose that the society goes into liquidation. Yet I can be made to pay in order to discharge the liabilities of that society in any proportion that the liquidator may fix. Not only I, but my relations can also be made to pay if I am not available. This is why I say that any and every person can be caught hold of to pay the liabilities of a society that has unfortunately gone into liquidation. And it is not after long intervals that one or the other society is heard to have gone into liquidation. Such things are of daily occurrence and for this reason the people for whose benefit these societies have come into existence are tired of them.

The circular No. 327-S. recently issued by the Registrar also proves my contention. It says that the societies which have 75 per cent. of their own capital can advance loans at the rate of 4 per cent. and others which have 50 per cent. of their own capital can advance loans at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. It gives another concession also and that is that the debtors who may pay their debts in time may be allowed reduction in the rate of interest from $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. to $9\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. That also goes to show that the debts due to these societies are not being paid and there is no hope of their being paid at least for a long time to come. This is the condition of the societies that have been taking loans from the central banks which are now pressing for the return of their money.

Mr. President : Will the honourable member please speak to the motion before the House?

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : I was submitting, Sir, that the accumulated debts due to these societies have become unbearable and impossible of repayment. I, therefore, see no reason why we should exempt these societies from the jurisdiction of the conciliation boards?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh (Minister for Agriculture) : I could easily understand Mr. Chetan Anand having a fling at the co-operative movement. It is a matter of regret that people in the towns have so far refrained from taking advantage of the co-operative movement. I have absolutely no doubt that if the intelligent members of towns organised and managed co-operative banks they would provide the strongest support in favour of co-operative movement. (An honourable member : Are they permitted?) Yes. It is only we zamindars, who fail to realise what is good for us. I can recall poignant words which the leader of the opposition used, in his little book, pointing out, how even in this House when questions relating to zamindars came for discussion, the zamindar members hesitated in voting in the right direction. We have had to-day an example, a sad example. Chaudhri Riasat Ali who is a zamindar himself, and who ought to be the strongest supporter of the co-operative movement and who may at no distant future be called upon to administer this department, stood up to revile the co-operative movement. (Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : What has he done?) The honourable member, Pandit Nanak Chand has a way of interrupting.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I only put the question just as the honourable member puts a question to me.

Mr. President : Questions must be asked through the Chair.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Yes. I ask through you, Sir, what is it that the Honourable Minister objects to in the speech of Chaudhri Riasat Ali? Does he mean to say—

Mr. President : The honourable member is making a speech. Will the Honourable Minister please proceed?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : I was saying that if we zamindars cannot realise the meaning of self-help, associated effort, co-operation and work for our good, how can we hope in any other sphere to realise the meaning of self-Government? Perhaps the action which the Co-operative Department has already taken in relieving the burden of those who are heavily indebted is not known. I regard myself in this House as an ambassador of the agriculturists, to watch and promote their interests. How then could the interests of agriculturists in the Co-operative Department which I have the good fortune to administer suffer? In a circular which was issued not long ago the Registrar clearly laid down—

Interest on loans to members shall be charged at a rate, or rates, to be fixed by the general meeting with the previous sanction of the Circle Registrar. The general meeting shall accept such variations in this rate as the Circle Registrar may from time to time direct. It is, however, proposed, that measures should be brought into force at once in anticipation of the adoption of the amendment and of the general meeting's sanction of the new rates.

Only yesterday when Professor Roberts moved his amendment, objection was taken as to the rates which he desired to be fixed on loans.

The minima rates fixed by the Co-operative Department are as follows:—

- (a) societies having 75 per cent. owned funds .. 4 per cent.
- (b) societies having 50 to 75 per cent. owned funds .. 5 per cent.
- (c) societies having less than 50 per cent. owned funds 7 per cent.

In no case may the minimum rate be allowed, unless it yields the margin prescribed above. This concessional rate—should apply (subject to conditions given below) to all existing loans and should have a retrospective effect for two years; it will continue to apply for a period of two years from the date on which it is sanctioned by the general meeting. The retrospective effect of two years may be extended, with the previous sanction of the Deputy Registrar, in societies or areas in which the causes of deterioration (e.g. famine or water-logging) have extended over a longer period. The concession will also benefit good payers in bad societies, as the interest due from them during the past two years according to the new rates should be calculated and any amount paid in excess of this sum credited to their capital account, or, where they have cleared their debts, entered as a deposit in the society.

mark my words—

If in this Bill any member ventured to make such a provision I am sure it would have been objected to in any case by one side of the House.

The circular then proceeds:—

For new loans a rate must be fixed in accordance with business principles, to give some return on owned funds, but reduced to correspond with money conditions now prevailing. These rates should not, without the Deputy Registrar's sanction, be less than 5, 7 and 9½ per cent., in the classes of society as defined in paragraph 4 above.

In addition to the above concessions, in particularly hard hit areas where arrears of interest are exceptionally heavy, Circle Registrars may permit societies for a period of two years only, to credit 50 per cent. of their members' repayments to principal and 50 per cent. to interest.

Can any one say that the conciliation board can go any further than the Co-operative Department has already gone in this direction ?

The question has been asked, why not refer the matter to conciliation boards. The answer is simple : The advantages for members of co-operative societies under the Co-operative Societies Act are greater than they are likely to be under the conciliation boards. Then again in the case of co-operative institutions debtors and creditors are both members of these institutions and have really no conflicting interest to reconcile. Then again, conciliation boards will be constituted in a few districts as an experimental measure, while co-operative movement is operative all over the province. It is my considered opinion that this distressing problem of agricultural credit and relief can only be solved through co-operation and by no other means.

The honourable member, Chaudhri Riasat Ali, who talked a great deal about the oppressive measures which the central bank took against a particular society—I think he mentioned only one society—I am sure, would admit, that credit needs of the province are being gradually met by co-operative institutions. Rates of interest are being gradually lowered ; every measure is taken to fix the sums to be realised according to the present paying capacity of the debtors.

The co-operative movement is in the interests of the agriculturists and there does not seem any reason why we should subject this movement to an Act, specially designed to afford relief in the case of usurious loans. The one fact, which is not fully realised, is that co-operative societies are run and managed by the zamindars themselves. The debtors are also the administrators and creditors and they know what is in the interests of both, the debtor and the creditor. Under these conditions I do not think there will be any advantage in including co-operative banks and co-operative societies under this Act.

Rao Bahadur Captain Rao Balbir Singh (Gurgaon non-Muhammadan, Rural), (Urdu) : Sir, since the last so many days the condition of the zamindars is being described in this House by the zamindar members in pathetic and heart-rending words. As a matter of fact, it has been for the last so many years a continual practice adhered to by the zamindar members to place before the House the condition of the zamindars in a moving manner. They have been telling us that the zamindars are depressed, they are poor, hungry and famished. No doubt it is true. I endorse all that they have described. I also say that it is our duty to sympathise with the zamindars. They are men and as such deserve every consideration on our part. The money-lending classes are rich and well-to-do. They have stately mansions to live in whereas the zamindars have not got even humble huts to live in. The shukars enjoys every luxury of life and the zamindars have not got even the means of supplying their bare necessities. They are underfed and under-clothed. (Interruption). Yes, I know in this House some have not got even hair on their heads. (Laughters). In view of this financial depression of the zamindars, Act XIII was passed, so that some relief could be given to the zamindars. The present Bill has also been introduced with the same end in view. But this amendment which has been moved and the discussion on it has amply proved that the zamindar members' intention is anything but praiseworthy. It has shown that they are not even willing to pay anything at all. The insistence on the exclusion of the co-operative societies from the application of the provisions of the Bill has shown their intention. They only want to get money but do not want to return it. The co-operative societies were started and every facility was granted to them for the safe return of their loans. Such facilities as are enjoyed by the co-operative societies are not given to any other person. These concessions which are already given to them are more than sufficient. There is no need of conferring another concession on them by excluding them from the application of this measure. This attempt on the part of the zamindar members to exclude co-operative societies from the application of the provisions of this Bill is unjustifiable. With these words I resume my seat.

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh (Multan Division and Sheikhpura, Sikh, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I have very attentively heard the speeches of three or four members who have criticised the Co-operative Department. I think the mover of the present motion has not got any argument to advance against the co-operative societies. He did not say a word in support of his amendment. The honourable member Chaudhri Riasat Ali could not be expected to have said anything against the co-operative societies. All the poignant things which he said against the co-operative societies reminds me of an Urdu couplet:—

شہلی نے پہل مارا مکرر دیکرا

A member of the community of the zamindars should not have uttered such things against a department which has done so much for his people. This statement of the honourable member that the co-operative societies have done nothing but harm to the zamindars was unbelievable and when he was asked to quote any instance of any society which he thought had done any disservice to the cause of the zamindars he could only refer to one lonely instance of a society which somehow or other had the misfortune of incurring his displeasure. He quoted the instance of this society at Simla, and again here-to-day. From this single solitary instance of one society you cannot generalise that all the co-operative societies are bad and doing harm to the agriculturists. An exception proves the rule. Look at the advantages that have been conferred by these societies on the zamindars and then say whether the zamindars have profited by their existence or not. The situation in which the zamindars were placed by their indebtedness was so embarrassing that we could not think of any way by which to get out of it. The sahukars were swallowing the zamindars. They were being expropriated and day by day misery was being heaped upon their heads. The sahukars were taking all the land from their possession. I remember many families which were ruined by the sahukars. The sahukars advanced a loan of a few rupees to the agriculturists and then as time passed this loan continued to increase in amount until a stage was reached when it became possible for them to get the whole property of the agriculturist debtors auctioned and sold. Seeing this ruin which was overtaking the zamindars the Government took action in the form of the passage of the Land Alienation Act. But this Act was not sufficient to meet the necessities of the case. Consequently it was thought to take some other step for the safeguarding of the interests of the zamindars. This step was taken and the co-operative movement was started. It was a movement for self-help, and contained the element of self-government. The co-operative societies are managed by the zamindars themselves. The zamindars are the creditors and the zamindars are the debtors. These societies of self-help protect them from the sahukars, and the profits that they make are divided among the members who are zamindars. These societies are very considerate in their dealings. As the Honourable Minister for Agriculture has stated the societies whose reserve fund has been accumulated to as much as 75 per cent. of their capital have reduced their rates of interest to 3 or 4 per cent. If the society finds that a member has fallen on evil days and is unable to pay his debt it makes every concession that it can. The honourable member Kanwar Mamraj Singh said that reduction of rates of interest from a higher to a lower figure is not any substantial help to the zamindars. I wonder that he has failed to appreciate this principle of elasticity in the charging of interest on the loans advanced by the co-operative societies. If a zamindar is in a flourishing condition he is charged the full rates of interest and if he is in a bad condition he is charged lower rates of interest. The honourable member's criticism was not well-informed. When he was asked what grievance he had against the system of co-operative societies, he said that if a member becomes insolvent his debt is recovered from the other members. This is the principle of unlimited liability of economics. The societies are careful not to advance any loans to persons who want to waste it on pleasure pursuits. A co-operative society would never advance a loan to a person whose father has recently died and has property to squander away by taking loans. A sahukar might tempt such a person to take a loan from him in order to get his property but a co-operative society will never do that. The co-operative societies are very considerate. In the case of a man who fails to pay his debt, the society would first give him a warning to make the payment of his debt. If he desists from making the payment the society would give him a second warning, and then a third and then a fourth. These notices are given at the harvesting times when the debtor has got the means to make the payment of his debt. This means that the societies wait for at least two years before taking legal proceedings against their debtors. Does any money-lender show so much consideration? In addition to this, these co-operative societies also write off the debts when they find the debtor has actually become unable to pay it. These are the advantages of co-operative societies over the sahukars. Sahukars charge compound interest but co-operative societies do not. If you conscientiously compare the sahukars with the co-operative societies you will find glaring differences between the sahukar system and the co-operative system. The co-operative societies do not accord the same harsh treatment to their debtors as the sahukars offer to their victims. Then there is the system of audit. The auditors check the accounts of these societies twice a year. Is there any system according to which the accounts of the sahukars are checked? The sahukar is free to make any entry he likes in his account books. A co-operative society cannot do so. The accounts of a co-operative society cannot be expected to make false entries in its account books. A sahukar's accounts can be fictitious. It is open to him to take any sort of liberty with his account books. Then the debtors of a co-operative society get receipts for the payments made. The co-operative societies never go to the zamindars to bring things like fodder, etc. The sahukars go out to the villages and take

[S. B. Sardar Buta Singh.]

from their debtors things like fodder, canes, sugar, etc., in addition to the interest they charge for their loans. I do not think that any lengthy speech is necessary at this stage. (Laughter). I

A. P. M. have only to add that my friends on the opposite benches should carefully weigh the suggestions I have put forward. I am sure that if they are carried out they will bear good fruit. My honourable friends may ridicule our suggestions and mock at our proposals but the fact remains that we make them in good faith. If we praise the work done by the co-operative societies we have sufficient reasons for doing so. These societies have really done a lot to ameliorate the condition of poor zamindars. The agricultural population throughout the province is deeply indebted to them. Now they are extending their activities to urban areas too, and I am confident that the cities will not remain long out of the beneficent pale of these societies. Urban people have merely to make a request to the co-operative authorities and work will be commenced for the uplift of the urban population in right earnest. It is not proper, therefore, for the urban members to ridicule the beneficent activities of the Co-operative Department.

Mr. President : What has that to do with the question before the House?

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : I am submitting reasons why the Co-operative Department should be exempted from the operations of the law we are now considering.

Mr. President : Is that department performing rural uplift work in the province?

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : That is one of the reasons. Taking all these arguments together one comes to the conclusion that the Co-operative Department is already doing a lot to ameliorate the condition of the zamindars. That is why the Co-operative Department should be exempted from the operation of this law. If I am irrelevant I am prepared to bow to your ruling, Sir.

We require every beneficent department of the Government which is doing good work for the zamindar and we wish that all such departments should be allowed to do their work unhampered and freely. We know that the zamindar is greatly in need of help. Poverty, want and misery, in short, everything is staring him in the face. I, therefore, strongly oppose this amendment. I will ask all my honourable friends to support me in rejecting the amendment under consideration. I have every hope that even Chaudhri Riasat Ali, who has been somehow or other misled will be good enough to vote with me.

Lala Bhagat Ram (Jullundur-cum-Ludhiana, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, it is all very well to say that the co-operative societies should not be brought within the purview of this Act although they are carrying on identically the same business as the money-lenders. The fact seems to have escaped the notice of the opponents of the present amendment that it was mainly with the sahukars' money that the co-operative societies were started. Now our friends are anxious to stifle the same sahukars' business.

It is not fair, to say the least of it. Everybody in the countryside knows that the zamindars have greater reason to complain of the tyranny of the Co-operative Department than they have to complain of the hardship meted out to them by the village money-lenders. The Punjabi adage—affords an appropriate description of the swiftness of the action taken by the co-operative societies to realise their debts. The house, the cattle and in fact all belongings of the agriculturist debtor are mercilessly attached and nobody can come to the aid of the afflicted zamindar because the societies have at their back the strong hand of law. And then the rate of interest charged by these societies too is not much below the rate of interest charged by the sahukars. As my honourable friend Kanwar Sahib pointed out just now Rs. 9-8-0 advanced as a loan by a co-operative society rises to Rs. 12-8-0 within an incredibly short period of six months.

چہت روٹی پت دال

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : It is wrong.

Pir Akbar Ali : He says what he has heard.

Lala Bhagat Ram : The real trouble began like this. When zamindars found that co-operative societies advanced loans on comparatively easy terms they borrowed huge sums of money little knowing at that time that whereas interest charges of the societies were low their methods of recovery were troublesome enough. Moreover, money borrowed at the time of inflated rates is being recovered by the co-operative societies at a time of great trade depression. Matters have come to such a head, that many well-to-do people in villages have gone bankrupt. The number of those who have really benefited by the activities of the co-operative societies is very insignificant. So it is not difficult to see that the zamindars in general do not make much difference between the societies and the sahukars. It is immaterial to them who devours them, a wolf or a tiger. If trouble is to come to them it is alike if it comes from this quarter or that. And it is admitted by all reasonable men that Co-operative Department has also added to the difficulties of the zamindars to a great extent. But in spite of all this many of us are still adamant to emphasise in glowing terms, the little good that has accrued to the province from the so-called beneficent activities of the department, it is the same thing, as thanking the stars that the fall of a friend though it has resulted in his death has broken no limb of his. Under these circumstances it does not behove the Government to accord a step-motherly treatment to the money-lenders as opposed to other banking agencies of the country. We do not want to lengthen the proceedings of the Council as we know that what has to come will certainly come. What we want to urge upon the attention of the Government and this honourable House is that we should refrain from taking such legislative action which may be unfair and unreasonable according to all canons of equity. With these words, Sir, I support the amendment now before the House.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadian, Rural) : I have not the slightest desire to waste a single minute of this House by covering the ground which has already been covered by so many speakers. It will be absolutely wrong to place co-operative societies on the same footing as private money-lenders. Grounds for making a distinction between money-lenders and co-operative societies have been very definitely and clearly stated by previous speakers. I know that the speech made by Chaudhri Riasat Ali was very much welcomed by a certain section of the House. I can also quite understand why that was so. But let me say that to some extent the Honourable Minister himself has misunderstood the real spirit of Chaudhri Riasat Ali's speech. It was painful to him to find that zamindar members who ought to have readily appreciated the co-operative movement had begun to condemn it. I think that is a wrong interpretation of the speech of Chaudhri Riasat Ali. I know that he is as staunch a supporter of the co-operative movement (hear, hear) as the Honourable Minister himself. What he really wished to convey was that certain abuses had crept into the administration of the Co-operative Department and that the mentality of officers who at one time used to exhibit a missionary spirit had developed a spirit of hakimi. I think these are the two grounds which have been causing uneasiness in the minds of those who are great supporters of and great believers in the beneficent character of this movement. If the Honourable Minister or his lieutenants had been prompt enough to ascertain the real reason for the resentment that has been displayed, I think that speech would not have been made. I need not dilate upon this aspect of the question any longer. This gentle hint ought to suffice.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

I would just say one sentence in the end. We are trying to pass this Bill into law. I hope that it will pass into law. But when this Bill has been passed into law, let us hope and even pray that it will result in some further curtailment of the credit of the zamindar. When that curtailment has come, let us not forget that we must have something upon which we can fall back. When credit becomes curtailed, we ought to have some agency which will be in a position to fulfil the legitimate requirements of the agricultural population. The only agency which can supply the legitimate requirements of the credit of the agricultural population is the Co-operative Department. With that idea in front of us we should not make a mistake in supporting the amendment moved by Mr. Chetan Anand. As a matter of fact I may make the position of my party quite clear on this point. There was no intention at any time to support this motion at all. The only object was to draw, rather emphatically, the attention of the Honourable Minister to some of the abuses that have crept into the administration. (Hear, hear).

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural): I regret very much that the object of the motion has been entirely misunderstood by people who have spoken against the amendment. The motion covers two institutions, the co-operative societies and the commercial banks. The debate here has largely centred on co-operative societies. Those who have opposed the amendment have sung the praises of these co-operative societies and those who supported the amendment have carefully confined themselves to the very same societies. But really there are two institutions which are covered by this amendment, the commercial banks and the co-operative societies.

Before I take up the argument put forward by the Honourable Minister for Agriculture and the member for Sahikhupura who was also a member of the Joint Parliamentary Committee (Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh). It is essential that I must point out that we are at present dealing with a Bill which has got one object. The Honourable Minister, Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh and Nawab Fazl Ali made it absolutely clear in their speeches that the Bill was really aimed at the sahu-kars. Therefore they were anxious that these co-operative societies should be kept out of the purview of this Bill, because otherwise it would destroy these societies. (An honourable member: No, no). The words actually used by the Nawab Sahib were that we should not play the na dehtid to our own people. It was said that the co-operative societies must not be brought within the purview of this Bill, because after all we must pay to somebody, we must not be dishonest. That was the remark made by Mr. Balbir Singh who sits on these benches. He said definitely, "Well, after all it is not safe that you are not to pay any debt. You may not pay the debt to the sahu-kar; but surely, why object to the payment of debt lent to you by co-operative societies?" That is the underlying idea that I find emphasised in the speech of the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, of the honourable member who just preceded me (Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram), of Nawab Fazl Ali and of all the other members who have spoken against the amendment. Therefore, what we fear and what the public at large, which is not called agricultural, fear is that the intention of the Bill is not to pay back the loans advanced by a particular class of people. That has been made absolutely clear. That fear has really been responsible on the part of honourable members opposed to this amendment for not bringing the co-operative societies within the purview of this Bill. (Interruption). When co-operative societies have been brought within the purview of a Bill of this kind in the Central Provinces there is absolutely no reason why they should be exempted for the law which we are now considering. At the outset we were not aware exactly what was in the mind of those who were sponsoring this Bill. Now the cat, as they say in the proverb, is out of the bag. (Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: It was never in the bag).

Now, why should those who uphold the cause of co-operative societies—and I am one of them—why should they be afraid of these co-operative societies being brought within the purview of this Bill? (An honourable member: The reasons have already been given.) Quite so. I am now going to examine them. It is stated that the co-operative societies have already got a certain amount of concessions which they give to debtors. If debtors who get these concessions are not fools they will not go and take shelter behind these conciliation boards. They will be satisfied with the concessions given by the co-operative societies. There will therefore be no need for this exhibition of anxiety on the part of the supporters of co-operative societies to exclude the societies from the operation of part IV of this Bill. They say, we have got a clean hand, we are here to protect the agriculturists, we are here to protect the debtor; our concessions are far beyond those that are dreamt of under this part. Do you think that debtors are foolish? If they get concessions from the co-operative societies, why should they go to the conciliation boards? The argument is absurd on the very face of it. If your rates are favourable, if your terms are more favourable than given under the conciliation board, then no fool would go to the conciliation board and the co-operative societies can come with clean hands and say, place us by all means under the boards; we have nothing to fear, it is the sahukar that does these tricks, but we are not afraid of anything. No reply can be made to this argument. The object of the Bill and the conciliation board is to relieve indebtedness of the peasant proprietor or the agriculturists or certain other classes of people. That is all. Now we know from our own experience that if an agriculturist has to get relief he must get from all people, from all classes and from all societies. What does it benefit an agriculturist if instead of being in the clutches of a sahukar he goes and takes loans from the co-operative societies? How is he benefited if instead of taking Rs. 2,000 from Ram Narain he goes to a co-operative society and is unable to repay it and the society does not deal leniently with him? So far as the debtor is concerned, it matters not to him. He wants relief, and if it is your intention to give relief and if it is the intention of the co-operative society to give relief, you should give these people the facilities that they need, the facility of conciliation board, if it is a facility at all, and other things. Then we can know that as a matter of fact, so far as these agriculturists are concerned, their main object is not merely to take debts, but their main object is to be relieved of the debt that hangs heavily upon them. Therefore, my submission is—I am now dealing with commercial banks—people should not be allowed to organise themselves into commercial banks. By organising like that and evading the provisions of this Act, these people will again fall into their clutches. This point has not been dealt with up till now. Supposing 5 or 6 sahukars join together and start a commercial bank and instead of carrying on their business in one particular manner they now carry on their business in a different way. How is that a matter of relief to these agriculturists or to the people who have borrowed? I, therefore, say that the object in the minds of those who are opposing this motion is clear, namely, that it is to destroy a particular class of people and to save others and the co-operative societies. That is their main object, and this has been made absolutely clear by the various speeches delivered here. I just want to say one or two things before I sit down, and this is with reference to the speech of the honourable member who has left his seat (Sardar Buta Singh), who spoke about the Alienation of Land Act and Delhi being converted into Haveli. If these people have to pay the price of these things by their blood, murders do take place and you cannot blame the sahukar. That is an important point which must not be missed. He is paying with his life, and these murders are quite common. Therefore, my submission very briefly and very strongly too is, if you are really serious and earnest in affording relief to the debtor you must bring within the purview of this Bill, if this is an honest Bill, if this is a good Bill, if this is a good law, all those persons and classes of societies which lend money to people. There must be no loophole left and the relief must be genuine and real.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

Mian Nurullah (Lyallpur South, Muhammadan, Rural): After the speech of the leader of my party I feel that I need not speak and emphasise the point which he has clearly mentioned. But hearing the honourable member Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit and the insinuations that he has made against the very object of the Bill, I feel that I must say a few words. In the first place it should be very clear that this business must go on ; zamindars must be financed during the harvest operations, and we need certain kinds of institutions. We want all sorts of institutions to live but to live honourably and deal with us fairly. We only want to cut the knot where it is unjust, where it is objectionable and where it is not fair. We do not want to kill anybody ; we want to help and want them to do things in an honest way.

As regards the second point which the honourable member has mentioned regarding the exclusion of these banks from the provisions of the conciliation boards, I might reply him in a word. As has been stated by the Nawab Sahib, provisions for arbitration do exist in the co-operative societies. Then, why create another body to duplicate and prolong the thing ? As regards commercial banks, I may mention that this is a world of credit and finance. The more civilised the country, the better organised, the better effective and efficient this machinery of credit is. Therefore, at this stage when our societies and banks are being built up, we can ill-afford to cut off the arteries of supply open to the zamindars. The only fear that comes to our mind is when we read the newspapers, and see so many resolutions being passed to boycott the zamindars and not pay them a single rupee, and so on. Now, Sir, they want to destroy us. They want to hit us. But we want them to live fairly and deal with us fairly and take advantages in a fair and straightforward way. Being afraid of these resolutions expressly stated in newspapers, we want to keep other institutions alive. We do not want to cut ourselves outright. I, therefore, oppose the motion.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I do not want to enter into any lengthy discussion at this stage of the debate. The speeches that have been made on the floor of this House against this amendment and the anxiety which is displayed by the zamindar members, some of whom are directors of these co-operative societies and the co-operative banks to their inclusion within the purview of the provisions of the conciliation boards, is the greatest condemnation that could possibly be made of the provisions which are contained in the part of the Bill before us. It is recognised, Sir, that submission to the jurisdiction of these conciliation boards means the death knell of the creditor, be he an individual or be he a society or be he a bank ; and it is urged that we are not prepared to run the risk of our co-operative societies, of our co-operative banks where the zamindars themselves are creditors, of being liquidated. The simple proposition is this. Is this exclusion of co-operative societies and banks being claimed in the interest of the agricultural debtor or is it being claimed in the interest of these co-operative societies and banks ? If it is claimed in the interests of the debtors, the co-operative societies are identically the class which should be included because the outcry is against agricultural indebtedness, and the co-operative societies lend exclusively to agriculturists. The outcry is against debts borrowed during a period of inflated prices being realised at a time of agricultural depression, and the debts advanced by co-operative banks and societies are identically the debts against which relief is pre-eminently called for, and which should be included within the purview of the Bill, if the outcry for relief is at all genuine. Therefore when these banks and societies are attempted to be excluded by the agriculturists from the operation of the provisions of this Bill, you may take it, Sir, that the exemption is not being claimed in the interest of the debtor, but the exemption is being claimed in the interest of these societies and banks. Otherwise if you look at the interests of the debtor alone, is it not to his interest that all his debts whether he owes to a commercial bank or a money-lender or a co-operative society, ought to be liquidated all together? Is it at all in his interest that a provision should be made to liquidate all his debts except the debts due to a particular society or a particular bank? Is a partial settlement in his interest? Would this be at all to his interest? The only argument which member after member from the other side has advanced is that they want exemption of the co-operative banks in the interests of these banks because these banks are likely to be useful to them in future and also because they have proved useful to them in the past. I particularly draw the attention of the House to the remarks made by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, who said that the result of these conciliation boards is likely to be to kill—that has been the expression he used (Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: I did not use that word.) I beg his pardon, 'destroy' is the word that he used—their other sources of credit and therefore let them not run the risk of destroying this source of credit also, which has been of service to them in the past and which is likely to be useful to them after the other sources of credit have ceased to exist or give credit. Therefore I submit, Sir, that the greatest condemnation of the provision of the conciliation boards is to be found in the attempt to exclude these institutions which belong to the zamindars and in which they claim to be themselves creditors, from the baneful jurisdiction of these boards. I am reminded of the words of Nawab Fazl Ali. He said, "why do I want these co-operative societies to be excluded? It is not because their exclusion would work to the advantage of a particular debtor, but because in these co-operative societies 'we ourselves are the creditors and we are borrowers also.' Therefore where you yourselves are the creditors you would not like to submit these institutions to the jurisdiction of conciliation boards, although you would insist on this novel procedure where other people are the creditors. No doubt you can do so with a light heart because the creditors are people who are not of your class, but do you call that fair or just or equitable? You do not need any relief where you yourselves are the creditors, but where other people are creditors, every measure of expropriation is legitimate. All the other creditors may go into liquidation but your credit institutions must not be allowed to run the remotest risk of harm. Therefore to me the course of the debate has demonstrated that these provisions as to the conciliation board are veritably believed by these gentlemen, the zamindar and the Government themselves to be calculated to sound the death knell of any creditor who will have to submit to their jurisdiction, and therefore I say that if you want to arrive at a fair and equitable piece of legislation relating to these boards, legislate equally for all. Kindly do submit your banks and societies also to the provisions of this Bill. I will ask my friend Sardar Bahadur Buta Singh, he is a director of a co-operative bank, to submit his own decrees, and his own debts also to the superintendence of and to the fatherly and brotherly help of these conciliation boards, when he is so keen that the debts and decrees of his neighbour, another creditor, should be so dealt with. And if you do that I shall be glad. I am for commercial banks,

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

I am for co-operative banks. I take this opportunity to state publicly that co-operative movement, inspite of its drawbacks, has done a lot of good, it is good for the zamindars, it should be encouraged and it should receive every support (hear, hear). But my reason for not excluding the co-operative societies is this that if you applied this legislation to co-operative societies also, you are likely to legislate properly and not make the provisions relating to these boards as ridiculous as they have emerged out of the select committee. I have before me a document written by one of the persons connected with the co-operative movement, by a person who is practically the head of the department. He is afraid of uncertainty and other inconveniences of these boards, and is apprehensive that if the co-operative banks are included there is a great danger of all these institutions being liquidated. You are prepared to run the risk of every other creditor and credit institution in the country being liquidated, but you would not like to take that risk for yourself and your government institutions. I want their inclusion not with the desire of causing any injury to them, but with a view to induce you to legislate fairly and equitably for other creditors as well. It is with this object that I wholeheartedly support the amendment of Lala Chetan Anand.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, a good deal of heat has been generated in the House by the speeches made from our side as well as the other side. But the gist of the whole thing has been overlooked. As regards the speeches from the Unionist party side, what they meant was that there were certain defects in the administration of the co-operative societies which should be mended or removed, otherwise as regards the principle of the co-operation there could be no question from their side. The reason why I think these societies should be excluded from the purview of this Bill is that the Bill which we are introducing in the Council is a relief Bill. Relief is wanted in cases in which there is pain or distress. In cases where there is no pain or distress, no relief is wanted. Already these societies are giving the needful relief, and the reason why these were brought into existence was that after the passing of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, there was an impression that there will be no credit left for the zamindars with the sahukars. It was only to provide that credit that these societies were brought into existence, and as regards their benefit and the reason why they should be excluded from the operation of this Bill I would submit that the rate of interest charged by them is simple and there is no compound interest. Secondly, there are arbitration boards amongst them. With these bodies existing within these societies where is the necessity of duplicating the work of the officers and the members? Surely the conditions of these societies are not hard like those of the money-lenders. If a harvest fails, then the society or its members postpone all the executions of their decrees and the recoveries of their dues. As regards commercial banks it has been said that not a word has been said by any member of the Unionist party. It was only the other day that it was said that commerce should be not hampered. If you bring these commercial banks within the purview of this Bill, then you will curtail the chances of development of commerce.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: It is only when a man cannot pay that you go to the conciliation board.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan : All the other provisions of the Bill will apply to these commercial banks. Then there is another mistaken idea about the co-operative societies. These are not confined to zamindars. Societies have been started throughout the province for carpenters, artisans, smiths, weavers, clerks and every sort of people, in the towns as well as countryside. You cannot say that these societies are meant only for the benefit of the zamindars. All classes are being benefited by them. For these reasons I oppose this amendment.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : I move—

That the question be now put.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Lala Chetan Anand (West Punjab Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I would like to make one or two observations. It has been said that co-operative societies have been dealing very leniently with the debtors. When that is the case it becomes all the more essential to make the provisions relating to conciliation boards applicable to co-operative societies so that no undue leniency may be shown to the debtors. It has also been urged that since there are auditors to check the work of co-operative societies, they may be excluded from the operation of the provisions of the Bill. But the same can be said of money-lenders because you know that the Punjab Regulation of Accounts Act is in force according to which every creditor is bound to submit a statement of accounts to each of his debtors after every six months. Besides, there is another aspect of the question which has been lost sight of. Suppose a debtor who owes a certain amount to a co-operative society also owes some money to a private creditor. In that case if special facilities are provided to the co-operative society for recovering its debt and the private creditor is left to himself without means of recovering his debt it will create serious difficulties. With these words I submit that debts due to co-operative societies and banks or to commercial banks should not be excluded from the operation of the provisions of the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 7 (I) the words "or debts due to co-operative banks and societies or to commercial banks" be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer) : I move the following amendment :—

That in sub-clause (1), of clause 7, instead of the words 'commercial banks' insert the words 'the Imperial Bank of India or any banking company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or the law relating to companies for the time being in force in British India.'

All I have to say is that the term 'commercial banks' is not a term of art and is not capable of exact definition. I suggest that the House should adopt the words which have already been accepted in clause 5.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in sub-clause (1), of clause 7, instead of the words 'commercial banks' insert the words 'the Imperial Bank of India or any banking company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or the law relating to companies for the time being in force in British India.'

The motion was carried.

Mr. J. D. Anderson : I move the following amendment :—

That in clause 7 (2) the letter and brackets '(a)' shall be omitted.

The motion was carried.

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair, and it was occupied by the Deputy President.)

—Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I move—

That in sub-clause (2) of clause 7, all the words following the word "debts" in line 2 be omitted.

I further move, if this amendment is not carried—

That for sub-clause (2) (i) of clause 7, the following be substituted :—

- " (i) who is a member of a tribe notified as an agricultural tribe under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, or
- (ii) who is a member of a class declared by the Local Government as depressed among Hindus, or
- (iii) who is a member of a class among Muslims or Sikhs corresponding to a depressed class among Hindus, or
- (iv) who is a tenant of agricultural land or servant engaged in agricultural pursuit under a person falling in any of the categories specified in (i), (ii) and (iii) or under a tenant of agricultural land, or
- (v) who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, or "

Existing sub-clause (ii) be re-numbered as sub-clause (vi).

The scheme which I had in view in tabling these amendments was that if possible this legislation should be made one of universal application. That was the reason why, in the first instance, I had tabled an amendment that the whole of sub-clause (2) be omitted. That amendment, under the ruling of the Chair, cannot be taken up at the present moment. Therefore I have to pass on to the other two alternative amendments. If my first amendment is carried the effect would be that all debtors of whatever class and wherever resident, will be able to claim the benefit of clause 7. There would be no need to specify any particular classes who will be entitled to the benefit of this clause. Naturally a good deal of anxiety is shown by a certain section of the House that as far as possible no legislation should be enacted which will proceed on the basis of caste. Therefore my anxiety was to remove all possibility of that criticism being levelled against this measure as passed by this Council. Consequently I tabled this amendment so that if the other section of the House also agrees, it will be easy to make this legislation one entirely of general application. I have thus placed the broader amendment first. If it is passed this law will apply to all classes irrespective of their caste or creed or their residence. But if there is any opposition to that broader amendment, then I have necessarily to fall back upon my second amendment under which I have had to specify certain classes or castes which should be given the benefit of this legislation. I do not know whether the broader amendment will be opposed by honourable members who represent money-lending interests in the House. If they do not raise any opposition to that broader amendment, then all fear of this legislation being characterised as caste legislation or class legislation would be gone. If there is any opposition then of course the other amendment specifies a certain number of classes or castes which should be given the benefit of this legislation, and in that case this legislation could be called a caste legislation. But the fault of making this legislation a caste legislation will not lie upon our shoulders, but it will really rest upon the shoulders of those who oppose my broader amendment. We have made our position entirely clear from the very beginning, namely, that we wish this legislation to be one of universal application. If, however, in consequence of the opposition of those who profess the greatest possible objection to any caste legislation it is impossible to make the legislation one of universal application, we have no alternative but to specify certain classes or castes which will be given the benefit of this clause, of course, along with the general provision that those who live mainly by agriculture should be able to claim the benefit of this legislation.

[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

The definition of a debtor as it stands at present is vague and indefinite. The principal sub-clause of the definition is that those persons who earn their livelihood mainly by agriculture will be able to claim the benefit of clause 7. It will be an impossible task for courts to ascertain whether a defendant or an applicant before a conciliation board lives mainly by agriculture or not. I think it will increase the work of courts immensely, and not only will the present form of the Bill increase the work but it will make the task extremely difficult. In every suit, whatever the value of the suit may be—it may be a suit for the recovery of Rs. 200; it may be a suit for the recovery of Rs. 2,000, the application of a man who comes before the board may be an application in respect of debts which amount to no more than Rs. 200—in every single case it will be an obligatory issue to be decided by the court or the board whether a debtor lives mainly by agriculture. I think this is casting an unbearable burden upon courts. It is inviting courts to do their work either in a haphazard or perfunctory way or in the alternative to necessitate a very much larger number of judicial officers being engaged than are at present serving under Government. If in every petty case the court has to go into the question whether a person is or is not an agriculturist, whether he lives mainly by agriculture or does not live mainly by agriculture, the result will be an unbearable strain upon courts. That is one reason why I have tabled this amendment. (An honourable member: It is not going to the court at all). I mean, before conciliation boards. It comes to the same thing. The boards will also be a class of courts.

Then again, it will be extremely difficult for an applicant to prove the various items of his income. After all, these conciliation boards will be dealing with a class of people who are very ignorant, who are, in 99 cases out of 100, illiterate. They do not keep any accounts; they do not maintain any documents which will enable them to prove whether in any particular year they derived more than half of their income from agriculture or from sources other than agriculture. It will be very difficult for people, in certain areas of the province at least, to prove that their main source of income is agriculture in its narrow sense, the only sense in which they understand it. Take the instance of Hissar district. I think, on the average, people in that district get one crop in four harvests and that is all the income derived by them from agriculture in its popular sense. They may derive their income, say, by the selling of ghee or by the selling of their cattle or by engaging in manual labour or by working as servants under others. Now, are we going to deprive people, who have a very precarious income from agricultural sources, in spite of the fact that they are agriculturists, of the benefit of this legislation? Will courts look at the average income calculated over a number of years or will they calculate the agricultural income of an applicant for a particular year, for the year in which the loan was taken, or for all the years during which the debt remained unpaid. All these difficulties and all these complications will arise in the way of debt conciliation boards, the applicant debtor and creditor. Therefore unless we specify definitely what classes of people will be entitled to relief under this Bill the object of this legislation will, perhaps, be more than half defeated. In more than 50 per cent. of cases it will be open to courts to hold that a bona fide agriculturist has not been living mainly upon agriculture. The removal of these difficulties was one of the main objects which I had in view.

Again, I may draw the attention of the House to the constant complaint that has been made by the representatives of the debtor classes that either the law is too strict, too stringent, too unfavourable to agriculturists or the composition of the present judiciary is such that the interpretation of law in all matters where discretion can be used by courts goes against debtor classes. That has been our sad experience for many, many years.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I think I must ask that no reflections be made upon the courts in this House.

✓ Kao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am casting no reflection upon any particular court, in respect of any particular case. It is a general criticism of a certain feature of the administration of justice in general terms. Therefore this reflection, not being capable of localisation, does not offend against our rules of business. Still in deference to the wish expressed by the Honourable Finance Member I will drop that argument. Any way you will be making the task of courts much easier if you specify particular classes.

I have given here the classes which should be regarded as debtors. The first class is that of statutory agriculturists. The second class is that of depressed classes. The third class is that which represents depressed class people among Mussalmans and Sikhs where there are no recognised depressed classes. The fourth category consists of people who are tenants on agricultural land or servants of agriculturists or servants of tenants, and so on. The fifth class is the one which is already mentioned in the clause as it stands at present. As a matter of fact class number four also is practically the same as one of the classes specified in the present clause 7. I have simply added three classes. I will try to anticipate some of the objections that may be raised.

It may be said, as it has been said fairly frequently in this House in the course of this discussion, that there are cases in which a statutory agriculturist is not entitled to the benefit of a legislation of this character, one who has been either rolling in wealth or has been spending his money on undesirable objects, a man of that type also would be able to claim the benefit of this legislation. My answer to this criticism is this. There is a clause in this Bill which says that only those persons will be able to claim the benefit of this legislation whose debts do not exceed Rs. 10,000. Therefore to suggest that very big people will be able to claim the benefit of this legislation, if statutory agricultural classes are specified in this clause, is wrong and ill-founded.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

Again conceding that a man of that type may in certain circumstances be able to claim the benefit of this clause, will it really do any serious harm if out of 1,000 cases there is just one case in which a man whom our friends representing money-lending interests regard as undeserving of relief under this clause, should be able to claim the benefit of this Act? Will it really be any very serious objection even if the present amendment has the barely possible effect of including one undeserving person along with 999 other persons who are in fact entitled to relief and who may be deprived of this very necessary relief unless we make the law definite and precise? You have to look at both sides of the picture. On the one hand, you may possibly have one man out of a thousand who undeservedly claims the benefit of this legislation; on the other hand, by leaving the clause as it stands we run the risk of depriving a very high proportion of deserving persons of the chances of securing relief under this legislation. After all the object of this legislation is to afford relief to those who are very heavily indebted, who are not in a position to clear off their debts under the ordinary law, and if those heavily indebted people are to be deprived of that relief on the exiguous ground that by specifying certain classes under this clause you run the risk of enabling just one man out of a thousand to get undeserved relief, will that be fair or desirable? I beg to submit that having fixed a limit beyond which relief will not be given by these conciliation boards, that is, if the liabilities of an individual exceed Rs. 10,000 he cannot go before a conciliation board, we cannot maintain that the Bill covers the cases of big men. Thus it is obvious that really big men, really big landholders whom certain friends of ours do not regard as deserving of relief are clearly excluded. As a matter of fact, I feel personally that that limit has been fixed low. The limit of Rs. 10,000 will be excluding a large number of persons who may otherwise legitimately be regarded as deserving of relief. Therefore, while on the one hand I feel that that limit has been fixed low, on the other hand I claim that within that limit there will be no cases of undeserving people getting the benefit of this legislation. But suppose there is just one case out of a thousand, for the sake of that one individual we should not grudge relief to others who are deserving of it.

So far as the second class is concerned—the depressed class people—there, I think, we can proceed easily upon the assumption that cent. per cent. of them are indebted and cent. per cent. of those who go before the boards will be entitled to relief under this legislation. The same can be said with regard to class 3, that is, men who belong to classes not technically depressed but who are Muslims or Sikhs and correspond to depressed classes among Hindus. They have not been recognised under any specific name, but so far as Hindus are concerned depressed classes have already been recognised as definite classes and they are going to be specified by Government if they have not been specified already. Therefore so far as these three classes are concerned you place before your conciliation boards definite and precise information which will guide them and which will not allow them to go astray. The advantage of definiteness and precision is really very great, and in order not to sacrifice that advantage we should lay aside our sentiment against what we call class legislation. If this legislation results in the good of 99 deserving persons and furnishes just a slight possibility of one undeserving person taking advantage of it, we should not deery it on the ground of this bare possibility.

So far as the other two classes are concerned I have already submitted that they correspond to the classes which are already mentioned under the clause as it stands at present. Therefore, I commend these alternative amendments to the House in the hope that the representatives of urban Hindu classes will not oppose the broader amendment, so that it may be a legislation of equal and uniform application to all the classes. If they oppose the broader amendment then we fall back upon the narrower amendment. The narrower amendment if carried will certainly give a character of class legislation to this Bill, but even the narrower amendment has certain advantages which I have already explained.

In view of these advantages I think our freinds should not object to this clause being passed in the shape of—(An honourable member : What is it exactly that is proposed ?) In the first place, make the Bill of universal application so that all debtors of whatever religion and whatever caste shall be able to claim the benefit of this legislation.

Mr. Labh Singh : Which is the exact proposition you are moving ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Amendment No. 9, namely:—

That in sub-clause (2) of clause 7, all the words following the word "debts" in line 2 be omitted.

If we adopt this amendment, then there will be no class or caste distinction whatever, and every debtor of whatever class or faith or residence will be able to come before a conciliation board and try to secure relief. If that amendment fails then my next amendment is No. 11. One advantage which will result from the adoption of either of my two amendments will be that this Bill will benefit those people also who reside in urban areas and who belong to labouring classes. There is no reason why the poorer section of the urban population should not receive the same benefit as we are claiming for the rural classes or for classes who follow purely agricultural profession.

I think those of the members of the House who represent urban constituencies owe a duty to those poorer sections of the urban community who stand in need of relief. Is there any reason why they should think only of the interest of 40,000 money-lenders ? It is not going to affect every Khatri, Bania or Arora ; it is going to affect only just 40,000 among whom are also included Khojas, Beoparis, Pathans, Jats, Brahmans and many other classes. Therefore I think it is only fair that the representatives of the urban population, the members who have been returned by urban constituencies, should think first of the interest of those 90 per cent. of the people who cast their vote in their favour and not of that just 1 or 2 per cent. of the population represented by money-lenders. With these words I commend my amendments to the favourable consideration of the House.

Mr. Deputy President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (2) of clause 7, all the words following the word "debts" in line 2 be omitted.

And again—

That for sub-clause (2) (i) of clause 7, the following be substituted :—

- (i) who is a member of a tribe notified as an agricultural tribe under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, or
- (ii) who is a member of a class declared by the Local Government as depressed among Hindus, or
- (iii) who is a member of a class among Muslims or Sikhs corresponding to a depressed class among Hindus, or
- (iv) who is a tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuits under a person falling in any of the categories specified in (i), (ii) and (iii) or under a tenant of agricultural land, or
- (v) who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, or.

Existing sub-clause (ii) be re-numbered as sub-clause (vi).

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerjee (Punjab Chamber of Commerce and Trades Association, Commerce) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (2), part (i), be omitted, and in its place the following be substituted :—

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a landowner or a tenant holding not more than fifty acres of land or a servant of a landowner or a tenant, or.

The object of my amendment is very simple. It seeks to restrict the benefit of this measure to small land-owners or peasant proprietors. During the general discussion that followed after the Bill was moved in the Council at Simla, there was a general impression—at least I carried it with me—that the Bill sought to give protection to those who were needy. I think this view was agreed to by all sections of this House. My amendment is an acid test of the bond fide of those who seek relief under this Bill. I consider that 50 acres is a very fair quantity that an average land owner may hold. I think that those who hold beyond fifty acres should not get the benefit of this section of the Act. With these few remarks I commend my amendment for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. Deputy President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (2), part (i), be omitted and in its place the following be substituted :—

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a landowner or a tenant holding not more than fifty acres of land or a servant of a landowner or a tenant, or.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (2), sub-clause (i) be omitted, and in its place the following be substituted :—

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a land owner or a tenant of agricultural land or a servant of a landowner or a servant of a tenant of agricultural land.

I think it is only necessary for me to point out that 'tenant' is a very wide term, and if the intention of this part of the Bill is not to be defeated, it is necessary to limit it. If 'tenant' is left without a qualification, which I have ventured to suggest should be added, then the tenant of urban property will receive the concessions which are denied to the owner of the same property.

Mr. Deputy President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (2), sub-clause (i) be omitted and in its place the following be substituted :—

‘ (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a landowner or a tenant of agricultural land or a servant of a landowner or a servant of a tenant of agricultural land.’

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra (Non-official, nominated) (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (2), part (i) be omitted and in its place the following be substituted :—

‘ (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a landowner or tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuit of a landowner or a tenant of agricultural land.’

Sir, my amendment can be divided into two parts. The first part is covered by the amendment moved by the Legal Remembrancer, and I should think it is acceptable to the Government and the House. I have added the second part because I want that only those persons should benefit by the provisions of this measure whose only pursuit is agriculture, and that such persons as private secretaries or accountants or persons in other ways dependent on the landowners should not come in because the object of the Bill is only to help those who have no other pursuit except agriculture. With these few words I commend my motion for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. Deputy President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (2), part (i) be omitted and in its place the following be substituted :—

‘ (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a landowner or tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuit of a landowner or a tenant of agricultural land.’

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural) : I support the amendment moved by the leader of my party, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram. Since the introduction of this Bill into the Council it has been argued in all parts of the House as also in the Press and on the platform that this is a ‘class measure’, and that Government is creating a ‘privileged class.’ It is to remove this impression that I have got up to support the amendment of my leader. We want to put everybody in the same boat so far as redemption of indebtedness is concerned. (Hear, hear). It has been commented upon by the Tribune that we are giving a communal tinge to this measure. I shall read just one sentence from yesterday’s issue of this paper—

The only ground on which this extension of the original scope of the Bill can be defended is that a large majority of the Muslim members of the Council, who style themselves as Unionists, are anxious to legislate in such a manner as to restrict money-lending in all spheres of economic life.

It is only with a view to save ourselves from this sort of accusation that I want to support this amendment. Moreover, it should not be lost sight of that among our friends who cannot be termed agriculturists there might be some people who may be suffering even more than the agriculturists. There is no reason why we should withhold our sympathies from those people

[Ch. Riasat Ali.]

They might be poor labourers living in urban or rural areas. They might need our help so far as their financial position is concerned. Therefore, it is necessary that we should extend our help even to those people though they may not be called agriculturists or though they may not be defined as debtors as mentioned in this section. Further, if we examine the language of this clause it will be clear why we should omit the words referred to in the amendment. In sub-clause (2) (i) there is the word 'mainly' in the line 'who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture.' This word 'mainly' might bring in very nice points for decision. It might raise various questions of interpretation. Consequently the work of the conciliation boards might be increased and a lot of confusion might also arise. It is to avoid all this, that we want to support the amendment of Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram.

In the second place, the words 'whose work is connected with agriculture' may give rise to nice distinction and interpretation as to whether a certain man, say, a carpenter, or a blacksmith who repairs carts is doing work connected with agriculture or not. Take, for instance, the case of a man who repairs carts. Carts are used in connection with agriculture as well as for hire purposes. In such a case it would be very difficult to define whether he does work connected with agriculture or not. It is to avoid such distinctions that this amendment is proposed. Government itself is not very definite so far as this clause is concerned, because it has been pleased to put as many as three explanations to this clause of the Bill. It is clear therefrom that they themselves cannot make up their mind in this matter.

Then there is another point. The Bill as it is says that "a debtor does not lose his status as such if he joins the military or naval service of His Majesty." That seems to exclude a person who joins the civil service of His Majesty. Why should they be so excluded? If, therefore, we adopt this amendment we will be avoiding, as I have just pointed, the ambiguities and complications of different interpretations which may be put on these words as they stand in the Bill now.

Another reason I should like to urge in this connection is, that we are already fixing a limit so far as jurisdiction as regards money is concerned; why should we put another restriction on this definition? So far as the amendment of Mr. Mukerjee goes, it limits the application, and this Act shall only be applied in this case to those who possess not more than 50 acres of land. That will be unworkable on the very face of it. Suppose there is a man who owns 50 acres of barani land; there is another who owns 50 acres of chahi land and there is a third who owns 50 acres, part of which is barani and part chahi; there is a fourth man who owns 50 acres which are nehri (Interruption). I am just reminded of a fifth class, namely, those who own 50 acres which are banjar or ghair-mumkin. Now where is the distinction? We are dealing with all of these men in the same way. A man who has 50 acres of nehri is much better than a man with 50 acres of barani land and a man with 50 acres of barani land is much better than a man with 50 acres of banjar. So it will be very difficult if those who earn their livelihood in a particular way are brought in the same category as those who earn their livelihood in another way. Some will be benefited more than others. Some will be earning less and others nothing. It is difficult to make this distinction and to make these classes. Another thing is that there is already a provision in clause 9 of the Bill, and according to the proviso to that clause the monetary value of the jurisdiction is already fixed. When we are fixing the jurisdiction to Rs. 10,000 or more in terms of money where is the need of fixing jurisdiction in terms of the possession of land? We are fixing a jurisdiction so far as the extent of the debt is concerned. I think that is sufficient, and when we have fixed that limit, it is totally unnecessary to fix another limit in respect of the area of land which a certain man might possess or might not possess. With these words I support the motion moved by my leader and oppose that moved by Rai Bahadur Mukerjee.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the chair).

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural): There are six motions now before the House, because you were absent when these motions were put forward. These are from No. 9 to 14. The first one, that is, No. 9, makes no distinction of any kind so far as the debtors are concerned. So far I am in sympathy with the motion moved by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram. Now supposing that is lost, I shall not be given another chance of speaking and, therefore, it is essential that I should say something about amendment No. 11 standing in the name of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram. I may say at once, and Chaudhri Chhotu Ram will appreciate it, that I am fully opposed to the spirit underlying this amendment. This purely and simply refers to castes, and it is worse than class amendment. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has brought to his aid the Punjab Alienation of Land Act which defines agriculturists on the caste basis. It has nothing to do with any other basis. There are, as you are very well aware, a large number of castes in the various districts which have been notified as agricultural tribes. The man may or may not be owning any land, he may or may not be carrying on the profession of agriculture. He may be purely a Government servant or a pleader or a doctor, but still he will be regarded as a member of an agricultural tribe. That is a very vicious distinction which is sought to be made in this Act. When the Punjab Alienation of Land Act was passed and later also on various occasions, the Government gave the distinct promise—some time ago I was here when the Honourable Revenue Member made a promise—that its scope would not be widened, it would be restricted for the purposes for which it was passed. Now the attempt has all along been to amend the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. But now this distinction is sought to be made again by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram. Otherwise he should have steered clear of this amendment and should have given proof of his large-heartedness of which he claims in a large measure. (Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: I promised not to press the other at all). But I must give my reasons why I am opposing amendment No. 11, in case the other is lost. I must say here that even the amendment of the Secretary to Government, Legislative Department, is a little broader than the one given notice of by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, because it says :

Who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a landowner or a tenant of agricultural land or a servant of a landowner or a servant of a tenant of agricultural land.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

All these members of agricultural tribes who carry on their profession of agriculture or are landowners or agricultural tenants or agricultural labourers come in in spite of this definition. Not only these, but other people who do not belong to this class but who are carrying on the profession of agriculture or are tenants of agricultural land also come within the purview of the amendment of the Government Member. So this amendment is really a broader amendment than the one based on caste which Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has moved. The second part of the second sub-clause is to be attacked on the same ground, "who is a member of a class declared by the Local Government as depressed among Hindus." Now certain classes have been declared as such under the rule which shall work during the Reforms. But there are other classes which have been excluded, and those classes among the Hindus will not have the benefit of the provisions of the Act. There are a large number of such classes which are not declared to be depressed. That is an important point so far as the Hindus are concerned. Then take the proposed clause (iii) to sub-clause (2) : "who is a member of a class among Muslims or Sikhs corresponding to a depressed class among Hindus." Let me warn the other classes that we are suffering from a disease and the disease should not spread among the Sikh or Muslim communities. You will be creating castes among your communities. You will have to go out and find out who are the Muslim Bangis, and so on, and they will be clamouring to have the same castes. You have been saying all along that Muhammadans do not recognise any castes, Sikhs do not recognise any castes, and therefore it was that times out of number it was pressed before the authorities who frame the new constitution that these depressed classes do not exist so far as Muslims and Sikhs are concerned. You have got nothing like the Poona pact or other wretched pacts of that kind among you. But I may tell you quite frankly that this may divide the various communities, as our wretched community is already divided. This is a warning which I give. There are parts (iv) and (v) to this sub-clause which are undoubtedly not based upon any caste. If the first 3 parts are removed, I would be prepared to support (iv) and (v). But a legislation framed on the basis of birth or religion—and this is admitted by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram himself—must be resisted by the Council by every possible means. If Chaudhri Chhotu Ram's amendment No. 9 fails I am bound to give support to the Government amendment No. 13.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I rise to make a few submissions, and I would like to make them in Urdu so that all the honourable members may fully understand them. Amendment No. 9 which stands in the name of Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram is very necessary. (Interruption). I specially request the honourable the Hindu members to listen to my submissions very attentively. It is very regrettable that there are only representatives of the capitalist classes in this House to take part in the discussion of the Bill. They criticise the provisions of the Bill only from their point of view and not from the point of view of the classes whether Hindus or Muhammadans, who are groaning under the burden of debt. The result of this is that the newspapers are carrying on a one-sided propaganda against the present Bill, and this is injurious to the interests of the province at large. The newspapers only publish the ideas which are expressed by these honourable members who are representing their capitalist interests. They never take the trouble of reading the provisions of the Bill and the amendments proposed to be made in them and their effects on the Bill as a whole. They, on account of the adverse criticism which proceeds from these benches never try to form an independent opinion about the Bill. On account of this the newspapers are carrying on an adverse propaganda against the Bill. They have painted the Bill in dark colours, and have conveyed to them that the Government is partial towards the zamindars. Through the agency of newspapers it is conveyed to the public that this Bill is being passed for the benefit of the agricultural classes and the people connected with agriculture. The honourable the leader of the zamindar party has now brought forward an amendment in order to make the application of this Bill general so that all classes of people, whether agriculturists or non-agriculturists, Hindus or Muslims may be benefited by it. The honourable member representing Hoshiarpur has also very generously supported this amendment. But there are some other honourable Hindu members who are opposing it. I submit that I belong to Sargodha a place where one gets every opportunity to meet the zamindars freely and to study their condition. (Interruption). Sargodha is a place where one can study the condition of the zamindars. There are many grain markets in the vicinity of this town. The business in these markets has become very slack. The condition of these grain markets is not prosperous. Nearly all the people who are carrying on business in these markets are Hindus. The low prices which have made the condition of the zamindars deplorable have also affected these Hindu dealers in grain. They are also in debt like the zamindars. About 90 per cent. or at least 75 per cent. of these grain dealers have applied to be declared insolvent. This amendment will have the effect of extending the benefit of the provisions of the Bill to them also. It is very necessary to save these small businessmen. (Interruptions). Honourable members who interrupt me are rich people. They have large amounts deposited in the banks. A lakh of rupees which they deposited in a bank some twenty years ago must have become by now 20 lakhs. They are capitalists, and have shares in many business concerns. They own many firms and factories, and they have got so many other means of income. They have got small businessmen under their thumb. They profit at the expense of these small people, and do not want to relax their hold over them. By this amendment it is proposed to help the small businessmen to stand on their legs, whether they are Hindus or Muhammadans. But they do not want to safeguard their interests. They only care for their own interests. And in order to safeguard their own capitalistic interests they have started an adverse propaganda against this Bill. They are carrying on a campaign of invectives against this Bill. All their criticism, propaganda and railing against this Bill are only to safeguard the interests of a few capitalists. The Sikh, Hindu and Muhammadan agriculturists and small businessmen have been ruined by these capitalists who want to increase their own power. It is very necessary to save the masses from the clutches of these people. The big capitalists claim to be the protector and saviour of the large numbers of small businessmen and small dealers, but they want to exploit them by keeping them in darkness. They by their vociferousness never give the people a chance to understand their benefit and the purpose underlying this Bill. At present by supporting this amendment they have got a chance to show to the people their sincerity to protect their interests. By the present amendment all classes of people will be able to have the benefit of the conciliation boards which will be constituted under this Bill when passed into an Act. By taking their cases to these boards for decision people would be saved from expenses which they incur when they take their cases to civil courts. Supposing, Sir, a creditor has to recover sums from 15 different men. If he wants to take action against them all, it means he would have to bring 15 suits against them. For 15 suits he will have to engage lawyers. He will pay them their fees. Then he will also have to pay stamp fee. All this means a large amount of money. But if he is given the choice of taking his case to a conciliation board he would be saved all this huge expenditure. (Interruption). I have sent an amendment to the effect that the cases should not be allowed to be conducted by lawyers before the conciliation boards in order to save the parties from every sort of expenditure. I request the occupants of these benches to take pity on the condition of the people who are under the crushing weight of debt. It is necessary to save them from ruin. If the present state of affairs continued any longer the zamindars will be ruined, and the small businessmen will also be ruined. The whole business will come to a stand-still. To save commerce it is necessary that the small businessmen should be given relief. For the welfare of business and the prosperity of the province this amendment should be accepted and the benefit of the conciliation boards extended to all classes of people. Let all people without any distinction derive benefit from this measure. If honourable member will think seriously they will find that there is no harm in accepting this amendment.

[Shaikh Abdul Ghani.]

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : To which amendment is the honourable member speaking ?

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : I am speaking to amendment No. 9 that this Bill should be made of general application. There is a certain section of the House which is interested in limiting it to a particular class. I submit that the amendment moved by the honourable Chaudhri Chhotu Ram should be accepted, and in this way the Bill should be made of general application so that the business of the province may be saved. If the small traders and businessmen are allowed to run into bankruptcy the trade of the country will be affected and it is very necessary to protect trade.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Sir, the question may now be put.

Mr. President : Question is—

That in sub-clause (2) of clause 7, all the words following the word "debts" in line 2 be omitted.

The motion was carried.

The Council then adjourned till 2-30 P.M. on Friday, 16th November 1934.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Friday, 16th November 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2-30 P.M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUTAB ICE FACTORY, LAHORE.

3931. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : With reference to the answer to starred question No. 8441,¹ asked on the 28th June 1934, will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the Qutab Ice Factory on the Railway Road, Lahore, has been working during 1933-34 in spite of the fact that the factory's licence was not renewed for that year ;
- (b) if the answer to the above be in the affirmative, what action was taken or is now intended to be taken by Government or the Lahore Municipality against the factory owners for running the factory without a licence ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes.

(b) The owner of the factory was prosecuted. The case is still pending.

DUST NUISANCE IN POLICE LINES, QILLA GUJAR SINGH.

3932. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the roads and lanes inside the District Police Lines, Qilla Gujar Singh, are all kacha and are full of dust which is affecting the health of the police staff occupying the barracks ;
- (b) if so, what action is proposed to be taken to remove the dust nuisance from the police lines ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) All the pathways in the District Police Lines, Lahore, are kacha. There is nothing to indicate, however, that the health of the police occupying the barracks in the lines has been affected.

(b) I regret that lack of funds prevents an improvement in the amenities of these and other police lines.

LORRIES BETWEEN NAROWAL AND ZAFARWAL.

3933. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that motor lorries plying for hire between Narowal and Zafarwal in the Sialkot district are generally overloaded by the drivers thereby causing great trouble and inconvenience to the travellers ;
- (b) whether it is also a fact that there is no agency to check such irregularities ;
- (c) if the answer to (b) above be in the affirmative, why no arrangements have been made to check such irregularities ;
- (d) if the answer to (b) above be in the negative, the name of the agency appointed to check these irregularities and the names of the lorry drivers who have been challaned by this agency in this connection during the last two years ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Overloading undoubtedly takes place to a certain extent, but no complaint of general overloading has been received.

(b) The local police at Narowal and Zafarwal thanas are responsible for checking breaches of the Motor Vehicles Rules along this road.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) (i) The agents responsible are the police officers in charge for the time being of each of the thanas.

(ii) Ghulam Muhammad, Hans Raj, Mahbub Alam, Muhammad Shafi, Dawarka Nath.

PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Clause 7 (concluded).

Mr. President : The amendment that in sub-clause (2) of clause 7 all the words following the word " debts " in line 2 be omitted, was carried yesterday. I have, therefore, to put sub-clause (4) of clause 7 to vote.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali : There is an amendment of mine that sub-clause (3) be deleted and unless I formally move its deletion I am afraid it will stand part of the Bill.

Mr. President : Sub-clause (3) becomes redundant in view of the amendment which was passed yesterday. If an amendment becomes unnecessary in consequence of a previous amendment, it is the duty of the Chair not to put the subsequent amendment. I do not, therefore, propose to allow sub-clause (3) to be moved. I shall now put sub-clause (4) of clause 7 to the House.

Mr. Labh Singh : I think that this sub-clause would be very much out of place here. The definition of a term should properly be relegated to the first chapter.

Mr. President : That is a matter which will be gone into by the committee which will suggest consequential amendments at the last stage of the Bill. If this sub-clause is misplaced that committee will give it its proper place.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : There is also another thing. This sub-clause reads :—

“Prescribed” means prescribed by rules made under this part of the Act.

There may be rules made under other parts of the Act and the word “prescribed” may be defined better in general terms to mean prescribed by rules made under this Act.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is right, but the drafting committee will set it right.

Mr. Labh Singh : It is very doubtful—for that is not a verbal point at all—if the drafting committee would be empowered to so change the definition as to allow the term to be either relegated to the first or the last part of the Bill

Mr. President : The question is—

That sub-clause (4) of clause 7 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : I may point out before putting the clause that the definition of “debtor” as passed by the House yesterday, i.e., “debtor means a person who owes a debt or debts,” is exactly the dictionary meaning of the word. Besides, the word “debtor” is defined in sub-clause (2), that is, after the term “debt” which is defined in sub-clause (1). Will it not be proper to change the order of the two sub-clauses? That appears to be a more natural order, but I leave it to the member in charge of the Bill.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : These consequential amendments could be made later by the drafting committee.

Mr. Labh Singh : Before we exercise our vote, will it be competent for me to put a question to the Legal Remembrancer about the meaning of the clause as it stands and its legal implications?

Mr. President : At this stage the Legal Remembrancer, like the honourable member himself, is one of the law makers and not an interpreter of law.

Mr. Labh Singh : I only want to know whether a mortgage made in the city of Lahore would be safe if the Act is extended to that city.

Mr. President : If there are defects they may be remedied by an amending Bill. This is not the stage at which we should interpret the law. I have received notice of the following amendment from Rao Bahadur Chandhri Chhotu Ram :—

That in sub-clause (2) of clause 7, line 2, after the word “debts” the following words be inserted “as defined in sub-section (1).”

This is an amendment for the addition of words. But I may point out that it is unnecessary to allow the word “debts” to remain where it is, as the singular includes the plural. I think the words “or debts” should be deleted.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : There is no harm in emphasising that the word is used in its ordinary dictionary sense.

Mr. President : That is the reason why I have ventured to suggest that the words "or debts" be deleted ; but if the House wishes to retain them, there is no harm. If the words "or debts" are omitted and Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram's amendment is accepted the clause will become quite clear.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I beg to move—

That in sub-clause (2) of clause 7, line 2, after the word "debts" the following words be inserted : "as defined in sub-section (1)."

Mr. President : There are two objections to this amendment. The words "or debts" do not fit in with it. Besides, the House has passed an amendment in the latter part of the clause and, therefore, we cannot go back and move an amendment to an earlier part.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Is the honourable member not going to move that amendment then ?

Mr. President : Article 68 of our Standing Orders runs as follows :—

A motion must not, except with the permission of the President raise a question substantially identical with one on which the Council has given a decision in the same session.

So we cannot re-open to-day what we decided yesterday.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am quite satisfied with the ruling. I beg leave to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. President : If the whole House wishes me to allow the amendment to be moved as a special case, I will have no objection.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 7 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 8.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): Sir, I beg to move—

That for clause 8, the following clause be substituted :—

"8. (1) (a) The local Government may for the purpose of amicable settlement Setting up of Debt Con- between debtors and their creditors establish debt ciliation Boards. conciliation boards.

(b) The local Government shall define the local limits of the area in which any board shall have jurisdiction.

(c) The local Government shall determine the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the board, provided that no board shall have jurisdiction to make a settlement between a debtor and his creditors if the total debts of the debtor exceed Rs. 10,000 or such larger amount as the local Government may prescribe for any area.

(d) Such board shall consist of a chairman and two or more members to be appointed by the local Government.

(e) the chairman and every member of a board so established shall be appointed for a term not exceeding three years, but shall be eligible for re-appointment on the expiry of his term.

(f) The quorum of a board shall be prescribed by the local Government.

(g) Where the chairman and members of a board are not unanimous, the opinion of the majority shall prevail, and if the board is equally divided, the chairman shall exercise a casting vote.

- (2) The local Government may cancel the appointment of any member of a board or dissolve any board.
- (3) The local Government shall notify in the Gazette—
 - (a) the establishment of a board and the appointment of its members; and the board shall be deemed to have been established and its members appointed from the date of such notification or notifications;
 - (b) the cancellation of the appointment of any member of a board; and from the date specified in such notification the member shall cease to be a member of the board;
 - (c) the dissolution of a board; and from the date specified in such notification the board shall cease to exist.
- (4) When a board is dissolved or ceases to exist otherwise, the local Government may at any time establish another board within the same local limits in which the former board had jurisdiction and may declare this board to be the successor in office of the first board and may confer on it power to dispose of such applications under section 13 (2) and section 22 as the local Government may direct."

The amendment is mainly one of drafting to make clear certain points which before were not obvious. It also provides in clear words for the establishment of a board in certain cases to act as successor to the original board.

Mr. President : New clause proposed—

That for clause 8, the following clause be substituted :—

- " 8. (1) (a) The local Government may for the purpose of amicable settlement between debtors and their creditors establish debt Setting up of Debt Con- conciliation boards.
 ciliation Boards.
- (b) The local Government shall define the local limits of the area in which any board shall have jurisdiction.
- (c) The local Government shall determine the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the board, provided that no board shall have jurisdiction to make a settlement between a debtor and his creditors if the total debts of the debtor exceed Rs. 10,000 or such larger amount as the local Government may prescribe for any area.
- (d) Such board shall consist of a chairman and two or more members to be appointed by the local Government.
- (e) the chairman and every member of a board so established shall be appointed for a term not exceeding three years, but shall be eligible for re-appointment on the expiry of his term.
- (f) The quorum of a board shall be prescribed by the local Government.
- (g) Where the chairman and members of a board are not unanimous, the opinion of the majority shall prevail, and if the board is equally divided, the chairman, shall exercise a casting vote.
- (2) The local Government may cancel the appointment of any member of a board or dissolve any board.
- (3) The local Government shall notify in the Gazette—
 - (a) the establishment of a board and the appointment of its members; and the board shall be deemed to have been established and its members appointed from the date of such notification or notifications;
 - (b) the cancellation of the appointment of any member of a board and from the date specified in such notification the member shall cease to be a member of the board;
 - (c) the dissolution of a board; and from the date specified in such notification the board shall cease to exist.
- (4) When a board is dissolved or ceases to exist otherwise, the local Government may at any time establish another board within the same local limits in which the former board had jurisdiction and may declare this board to be the successor in office of the first board and may confer on it power to dispose of such applications under section 13 (2) and section 22 as the local Government may direct."

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): I am opposed, as I said

3 P. M.

yesterday, to the entire principle of the conciliation boards as they have been proposed by the select committee. I had given notice of a motion to delete the entire provisions relating to conciliation boards embodied in part IV of the Bill. You, Mr. President were pleased to rule that the discussion on that motion might very well take place when the particular clauses relating to conciliation boards came up for discussion. I think the best time for discussing the subject is the present when it is proposed to constitute conciliation boards. We are dealing here with the question of relieving indebtedness in this province and we have been told that similar legislation is being attempted in other provinces also. I like to remind the House of what the Calvert Committee unanimously reported. There is no precedent for the appointment of these conciliation boards, in any of the reports which they were asked to study, i.e. the Report of the Labour Commission or of the Agricultural Commission or of the Banking Enquiry Committees or in any other report which has dealt during the last few years with this vexed question. The only justification which the Calvert Committee had for suggesting the experiment of the conciliation boards was the Bill which at that time had been introduced in the Central Provinces Legislative Council and which was placed in the hands of the members of the Calvert Committee practically towards the end of their deliberations. As the committee was naturally anxious to find any means by which this problem could be tackled, it made a very halting recommendation that the provisions relating to conciliation boards as laid down in the Central Provinces Bill might be given a trial in connection with their recommendations relating to Petty Insolvencies Bill made in the report. That, I submit, is the only precedent which the Punjab Government had for entering upon this thorny and doubtful piece of legislation. But the fundamental basis of the Central Provinces Act was the provision which it enacted for better realisation of scaled down debts, and enforcement of agreements arrived at between creditors and debtors under the influence of conciliation boards. That provision is to be found in section 16 of the Central Provinces Conciliation Boards Act which lays down that once the conciliation boards have functioned and an agreement has been arrived at between the creditor and the debtor, the amount so settled will be treated as a decree of the court and will be realised as arrears of land revenue. Now, the Punjab Government, if they want to proceed on the basis of what has been laid down in the Central Provinces Act, should have taken that Act in its entirety and enacted it bodily for this province. If they had done so, they would certainly have one precedent for creating such conciliation boards, and I, for one, would have no grievance.

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair, and it was occupied by the Deputy President.)

But the Punjab Government have carefully omitted the basic provision of that Act, that is, section 16 of the Central Provinces Act (An honourable member: Deliberately), yes have deliberately omitted that provision for the realisation of debt as arrears of land revenue. That is why I submit that there is no precedent in any legislation outside this province for the creation of conciliation boards of the kind which is now contemplated in this measure. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram in his written opinion which is to be found in the printed list of opinions circulated to us, while dealing with this matter himself suggested that he would in course of time suggest a method by which the scaled down debts would be realised. He has not done so, nor did he ask the select committee to include any such provision in the Bill. Every member of the House knows that similar proposals for reducing debts in the United Provinces Legislative Council were not assented to by the Governor. Sir Malcolm Hailey in returning the Bill to the Council said that any attempt at scaling down debts must necessarily be accompanied by providing greater facilities for the realisation of the debts. In fact our new member, Mr. Zaman Mehdi Khan, while speaking only the other day on this subject said that once the debts were scaled down greater facilities must be provided for their realisation. It was expected therefore that when this Bill was circulated and opinions on those lines had been expressed by the public as well as by officials and when opinions on those lines had been even ventilated on the floor of this House before this Bill went to the select committee, the select committee before it proceeded to consider these provisions should have attempted to find some solution of the difficulty which had been suggested with respect to these conciliation boards. At the very early stage of our discussions it was made clear to us that the Government were not in a position to accept the underlying principle of section 16 of the Central Provinces Act, nor were they in a position to try or suggest any other ways by which the scaled down debts could be realised. Therefore it was not possible to enact any legislation on any proper lines. In those circumstances the proper course for the committee was to drop these provisions and not to proceed with them. But unfortunately, it will be noticed that the select committee not only did not embody that salutary provisions which has been embodied in the Central Provinces Act, but have made the Bill absolutely one sided which no right minded person should be prepared to accept.

With respect to the other provisions of the Bill, the original Bill introduced by the Government had left everything to the agreement between a debtor and majority of his creditors and the decision of the conciliation boards. Every one who considered the question of the personnel of the conciliation board found himself faced with the difficulty of finding proper persons who could be invited to become members of these boards. Our failure in the matter of panchayat officers, the complaints which have repeatedly been made and are being made in almost all the districts with respect to the assessment of hatsiyat tax, and the working of the various district boards and municipalities, do not encourage us to hope that we will be able to find the right type of men. In fact Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram himself gave expression to the same view in the select committee and said that he was really very apprehensive in this matter. I am quoting from the proceedings of the select committee which have been placed in our hands. He was apprehensive as to the personnel of the conciliation boards. When everybody feels doubtful on a matter like this, when it is difficult if not impossible to find men who would in these circumstances be expected to deal out fairly and squarely, is it not proper to drop these provisions? Is it proper to proceed with this part of the Bill? Now, what is the solution? Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram having felt that it will not be possible to find the right kind of men, what was the method by which he proceeded to solve this difficulty? What is his solution of the problem? I have submitted that the Bill had left the decision of the question as to whether there should be conciliation or not to the conciliation boards. Rao Bahadur Chhotu Ram's solution of the difficulty was, since it is not possible to rely upon the conciliation boards, make them subservient to the debtor. The effect of the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee is not to make the decision dependent upon the will of the conciliation boards but to make the decision dependent upon the will of the debtor whether the conciliation boards like it or not. When I use these words I measure every one of the words and I am prepared to demonstrate to the House that whatever views the Government had about the conciliation boards the amendment made in the select committee makes the conciliation boards absolutely subservient to the debtor. It does not allow the conciliation board to bring about a conciliation.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the chair.)

It makes the debtor dictate the conciliation to the conciliation board which the conciliation board must accept. That has been the effect of amending one or two provisions of the Bill and I may be permitted to point out that all those amendments were made even against the views of the official members of the select committee. Clause 11 of the original Bill was as follows:—

The board may at any time dismiss the application if, for reasons to be stated in writing, it does not consider it desirable to attempt to effect a settlement between the debtor and his creditors.

Mr. President : What is the honourable member discussing now?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am trying to impress upon the House that the provisions relating to conciliation boards should be deleted and I am showing that the provisions with respect to conciliation boards as they have emerged out of the select committee make the institution of the conciliation boards absolutely hopeless and ridiculous and therefore this Council ought not to enact this clause 8 which authorises the Government to institute conciliation boards.

Mr. President : The honourable member is violating the rule of anticipation.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I was only adducing it as an argument why the provision in clause 8 should not be accepted. I am not at present asking that clause 11 should be amended. I am showing that the provisions relating to conciliation boards as now proposed are so hopeless and ridiculous that the Council should not waste its time in discussing them any further. I earnestly ask the Government members to go through the provisions of the Bill again and to see whether the effect of the conciliation boards as now proposed by the select committee is not to make them entirely subservient to the debtor, and whether the conciliation boards have any power or jurisdiction to conciliate at all and whether the present provisions do not enable the debtor with the consent of one creditor to impose his decision upon the conciliation boards even when these boards feel that the particular decision is unjust and inequitable. That is my reason for craving your indulgence in asking the members of the zamindar party to listen to me as most of them have not carefully read the provisions as amended by the select committee and to ask them, if they think that the proper way of conciliation is that the will of one party should be imposed upon the other. If that is their view they are quite welcome to it, but the Government should realise its responsibility, and should do things with open eyes. I respectfully submit that this is the only effect of the provisions even with the additional security of the Central Provinces Act taken away. I submit that under clause 11 it is not possible for the conciliation board, when an application is put before it, to dismiss that application on the ground that the application does not fall under clause 8, that it is not even a proper application.

Mr. President : Is that a reason for not constituting the conciliation boards ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Yes.

Mr. President : The honourable member will please speak to the motion. His discussion relates to the powers of the board, while the question under discussion just now is whether the board should be constituted or not.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Do you want to constitute the board without powers ? Do you wish me to confine myself—

Mr. President : The honourable member should not go to provisions which are not yet under discussion.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I use them as illustrations in support of my arguments.

Mr. President : Illustration is one thing and discussion another.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Again you see in section 12 the first six lines have been omitted.

Mr. President : I cannot allow discussion of clause 12.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am not referring to these provisions in detail. But I wish to submit that the powers of dismissal of the petition have been taken away from the boards by the select committee which existed in the Central Provinces Act and which were originally in the Punjab Bill. The only power given to the conciliation boards by the select committee to dismiss the petition is where the petitioner does not prosecute the petition with due diligence or where no amicable settlement has been arrived at. The amicable settlement which the select committee has accepted as conclusive is an amicable settlement even with one creditor.

Mr. President : That matter will be discussed later.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Therefore the conciliation boards as proposed by the select committee against the opinion of official members, but now recommended by the Punjab Government are such that they leave the decision of the matter entirely in the hands of the debtor. That will be a matter for discussion at a later stage if you so please. But I wish to emphasise at this stage that it is not merely the injustice which is likely to be perpetrated by these provisions which should induce this Council to drop the idea of constituting conciliation boards but also the uncertainty which they will introduce in our economic life and in relations between creditors and debtors and their effect upon courts and their decisions. In a district to which this part of the Bill is extended, what would be its effect? No person would bring a suit which would come within the purview of the conciliation boards against any person because the Bill provides that as soon as an application is made by a debtor to a conciliation board, all proceedings against him in all courts will be ipso facto stayed. A person would be a fool indeed who would waste his money on court fee, etc., when he knows very well that those proceedings can be stopped and effectively stopped without even the orders of a court, or a conciliation board, by the simple expedient of putting in an unstamped application.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Mr. President : Again the honourable member is speaking about the exercise of powers by the conciliation boards. He is not discussing the question of constitution or establishment of boards.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What I am submitting is that the setting up of these conciliation boards will introduce an element of uncertainty and confusion to which this House ought not to be a party.

Mr. President : The honourable member's objection is that the conciliation boards should not be established because the powers proposed to be conferred upon them might result in injustice to certain people, is that so?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Yes.

Mr. President : That is not the matter under discussion now and if the honourable member wishes to advance it as an argument one sentence is quite enough.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I was trying to show what the effect would be in areas where the conciliation boards are constituted.

Mr. President : That I cannot allow to be discussed at this stage. When the other provisions are taken up the honourable member will be well within his rights to discuss that question. On every amendment I cannot allow the whole Bill to be discussed. I have allowed every sub-clause to be taken up and discussed separately so that every honourable member may have an opportunity to have his say. I cannot allow on every sub-clause the whole Bill to be discussed.

Mr. Labh Singh : Most of the sub-clauses of this major clause now under discussion are procedural and ancillary. Thus sub-clause (a) embodies the principle under which these boards are to be constituted and if a member when discussing it and opposing it is not permitted——.

Mr. President : All clauses or sub-clauses are not under discussion.

Mr. Labh Singh : I am referring to clause 8 (1) (a) and that refers to the constitution of the conciliation board.

Mr. President : Is the honourable member making a speech?

Mr. Labh Singh : I am only putting it to you, Sir, that a member is well within his rights when he is defining the powers of that board. What is a board without powers? Is it a bouquet, a bucket?

Mr. President : The powers of the board are to be discussed under subsequent clauses and sub-clauses. Am I to understand that honourable members wish all sub-clauses to be discussed together? If so, I have no objection.

Mr. Labh Singh : Not at all. But in discussing this sub-clause (a) it is absolutely unavoidable that the principal features of these boards should be brought to the notice of the House, for that is what constitutes the board.

Mr. President : No. Those features need not be discussed now. Every member is supposed to have read the Bill. When the whole clause is put, then the subject matter of every sub-clause will be open to discussion.

Mr. Labh Singh : Can we discuss this when the discussion of the entire clause takes place?

Mr. President : Of course.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It would be convenient to discuss the principle at this stage rather than leave it to a later stage.

Mr. President : My fear is that when the following sub-clauses are taken up there will be a discussion again and a lengthy discussion too on each sub-clause, though it is discussed now. Otherwise I do not mind. If the honourable members wish to discuss together all sub-clauses relating to conciliation boards I shall gladly allow them to do so.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I bow to your ruling and I will finish up in two sentences. The effect of the appointment of conciliation boards in any district would be to suspend the work of the civil courts in that district, while it will create unnecessary alarm and anxiety in districts to which they have not been extended and persons likely to be affected by them would be in constant fear of their being extended to them. Besides, this House ought to bear in mind that the conciliation boards are proposed to be a permanent feature of the Punjab statute book and are not, as should be the case and as is usual with such legislation constituted to tide over a temporary difficulty which is alleged to have been created by exceptional circumstances. Under these circumstances I am strongly opposed to the constitution of conciliation boards.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri has trotted out arguments which he has used more than once on the floor of this House and my inclination was not to make any reply whatever to the speech. As a matter of fact, I had advised my party not to take any notice of his speech at all.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : But you cannot help.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : But he has introduced two or three things which call for a reply. He has suggested that it would be practically impossible to find suitable men to sit on these conciliation boards. In proof of this suggestion he said that panchayat officers had proved a failure. He further suggested that the assessment of professional tax had shown that suitable men were not forthcoming for this purpose either. When he had made these allegations I thought it would be only right to make some reply, because I feel that allegations of this type are an insult to the intelligence of the province and a most undeserved slur on the character of the Punjabis.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

I refuse to believe, that a province which is able to produce commissioned officers serving under the Crown in the army—

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: On a point of order. I quoted a report of the select committee where Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram is recorded to have entertained grave doubts with regard to the personnel of these conciliation boards. I am quoting from the proceedings of 29th August.

Mr. President: Does the honourable member wish to correct the facts of the honourable member's speech?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: He himself pointed this out.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: I remember distinctly that he stated that it would be practically impossible to find suitable men to serve on the boards. What I pointed out was that the usefulness of these conciliation boards really depended on the personnel. That suggestion is perfectly sound. So much will depend on the personnel that it was only right that I should give a caution that the personnel should be very carefully selected. Because if unsuitable people are selected to serve on these boards, then they may at times proceed in a manner which may be very detrimental to the interests of the debtor. At other times they may proceed in a manner which may be very detrimental to the interests of the creditor. That is what I wished to convey by the words which Mr. Puri has referred to. But there is no justification for Mr. Mukand Lal Puri to suggest that suitable men will not be available. I am entitled to submit that this province has been able to supply men to fight for the King and the country and fight in a most creditable manner whether as a private soldier or as a King's commissioned officer (hear, hear).

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang: Are they going to fight?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: The Honourable Minister can very well understand that there is no paucity of men suitable for any class of work in this province. This province has been able to produce Governors, produce members of the Executive Council of the Governor, produce members of the Executive Council of the Viceroy and produce Ministers like my honourable friend. There is thus no reason to suppose that this province will fail to produce men fit to serve on these boards. That is the suggestion which I wish to make. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri also suggested that panchayat officers did prove a failure.

Mr. President: That point the honourable member may leave.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: I certainly thought that it was absolutely irrelevant, but as an irrelevant suggestion has been made, I may be allowed to reply. Such a suggestion shows the rank ignorance of the honourable member. He does not know what a panchayat officer is and what his functions are, or whether he has been a success or a failure. He probably thinks that these panchayat officers were discharged because they had proved a failure. But the truth is different. These panchayat officers formed a cadre which had come into existence last of all and was, therefore, the first to go when the scheme of retrenchment was given effect to. That cadre was not abolished because it had proved a failure at all. As a matter of fact, their work was very highly appreciated by the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government, and in abolishing this cadre he did not wish to cast any reflection on the manner in which these panchayat officers had behaved or discharged their duties.

There was another very unhappy expression used by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri when he said that it is the injustice of these conciliation boards or unjustness of these conciliation boards that compelled him to oppose their institution. I do not know what he meant, whether he meant that these conciliation boards when constituted would prove unjust or whether the proposal to institute these boards was unjust in itself. If he had made his meaning clear I would have been in a position to reply to that part of his criticism.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Why take the trouble ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Because his party asked him to do so.

✓Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : In order to show that he has been reckless in his criticism and adopted an irresponsible line of attack on these conciliation boards.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : You do not understand it.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : It is very difficult for me to understand you.

Mr. President : No personal remarks, please.

✓Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : What exactly he meant by saying this, I have already submitted, I was unable to follow. If he simply wanted to say that the institution of these conciliation boards is an act of injustice, I beg to differ from him very violently. If he suggested that these conciliation boards when formed would prove unjust, I beg to submit that this is a very uncharitable estimate of an institution which has not yet come into existence and which has given no cause whatsoever to anybody to draw hostile inference about their future conduct. There was just one more remark which was made by Mr. Puri. That was that we had failed in this province to copy the example of the Central Provinces in that we had failed to make any provision for the realization of debts as arrears of land revenue. Now those who are in any way connected with land know very well that when any due has to be realized as an arrear of land revenue then the land belonging to a landholder is liable to be sold. Now, so far as the Punjab landholders are concerned, they were given a very necessary protection against their expropriation by the Punjab Land Alienation Act. The honourable member probably wishes to nullify this protection. Unfortunately whenever any question is under discussion the members who represent urban interests in this House somehow or other must drag in the Land Alienation Act and try to say something in denunciation of that very wholesome measure. As usual they have again succumbed to the temptation of having a fling at the Land Alienation Act. The object of the present Bill is to give relief to landholders and not to dispoil them of the property in respect of which they enjoy a certain amount of protection under the Land Alienation Act, and if my friend really meant that either official members who served on the select committee or members representing land-owning classes should have agreed to a proposal to amend or repeal the Land Alienation Act, in order to recover debts as an arrear of land revenue he was very much mistaken. That was an invitation on his part for us to walk into his parlour and we are not going to accept that invitation (hear, hear).

✓ [B. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi Division and Lahore Division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): I wanted just to correct an impression given expression to by Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram when he was controverting what Mr. Puri had said. He had characterised that the provision was unjust and that it was only likely, to quote the words of the honourable Rao Bahadur, that there were grave apprehensions regarding the personnel of the boards. He has quoted before you the words which he himself employed and he expressed very grave apprehensions as to the success of these boards and presumably he was opposed to the constitution of these boards on the grounds mentioned by him. Mr. Puri, I think, used the word "unfair" or he might have used the word "unjust." But I chanced to go through these opinions and I find that very competent persons whose opinions were invited and notably some of the officials expressed themselves much more vigorously. I do not propose to quote all the opinions against the constitution of these boards which are in our hands, but I have just glanced through the first 5 or 10 pages and I discover at page 5 the opinion of the Deputy Commissioner, Multan, who says—

I am opposed even to experimenting with boards, which, so far from conciliating, are likely to lead to protraction of litigation, to a fresh out-crop of tricks and stratagems designed to delay payment and defeat justice and to a not inconsiderable waste of time and money.

This is the opinion expressed by an experienced Deputy Commissioner, Mr. E. P. Moon.

Mian Nurullah: With how many years' experience?

Mr. Labh Singh: I pass on to page 11.

Here is the opinion of a district and sessions judge. He says—

The establishment of the proposed board strikes me as a pompous futility. The provisions of section 10 contemplate that only those cases will come before the board where the debtor is unable to pay his debts.

I am referring to these two or three opinions, and opinions very much to the same effect were expressed by the High Court although in language which was much more moderate and subdued. The sessions judge goes on—appears to me to be iniquitous in the extreme, especially in view of certain other sections of the Bill which are considered below. To lay down that a man should be permanently debarred from claiming his rightful dues merely because his adversary has succeeded in keeping him from putting his case before the board is an absolute denial of justice, and is bound to lead to all sorts of grossly underhand tactics in keeping creditors from placing their case before the board.

This sub-section,
(referring to section 12 (2))

I need not go on reading from the opinions of private gentlemen or associations. There is one point on which all opinions whether expressed by officials or non-officials agree and that is this, that some sort of arrangement for payment should be a necessary feature of these conciliation boards. If these boards are to be constituted without making any arrangement for payment, it may be 25 per cent. 30 per cent, or it may be to the extent of one half of the property of the debtor, in the way in which the Central Provinces Act provides, the whole thing would be purely unjust, and unjust is certainly not a very strong word to use in this reference. You postpone the remedy, you allow the debtor to defraud the creditor to the fullest extent and you reduce the nominal amount which stood in the books of the creditor without giving him any compensation, without allowing him to proceed against even the property of the debtor. What sort of conciliation this is I fail to understand. It is a wholly one-sided affair. I do not refer to the other features of these conciliation boards, namely, that you do not permit lawyers to appear, nor do I refer to that other odious feature that you allow no appeal, no revision, no standard of evidence or anything of that kind. Two or three gentlemen chosen perhaps haphazard whose qualifications are not defined in the provisions of this clause are to constitute the board. I fully endorse the remarks made by my friend on my left (Mr. Mukand Lal Puri) and oppose the constitution of these boards unless their features are brought into line with the Central Provinces Act or with the demands of fairness and justice.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : One very small matter. The last speaker said the constitution of the conciliation boards did not admit of the appearance of a legal practitioner. According to the Bill as it has emerged from the select committee there is a provision for the appearance of legal practitioners before the boards.

Mr. President : The question is—

That sub-clause (1) (a) of the proposed clause 8 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That sub-clause (1) (b) of the proposed clause 8 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Mian Muhammad Hayat Qureshi (Shahpur West, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c) for the words "Rs. 10,000" the words "Rs. 25,000" be substituted.

It has been provided in the clause that the conciliation boards shall have jurisdiction to make settlement between the debtors and creditors only in cases where the total debt of a particular debtor does not exceed Rs. 10,000. This pecuniary limit of the jurisdictions of these boards is not fairly high, for I believe that in various colonies there are many agriculturists who own one or two squares of land but whose debts in each case exceeds Rs. 10,000. In the Central Provinces Act also the pecuniary limit of jurisdiction of such boards is fixed at Rs. 25,000. I, therefore, do not see any reason why in this Bill also the pecuniary limit of jurisdiction should not be raised to Rs. 25,000. With these words I commend my amendment for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c) for the words "Rs. 10,000" the words "Rs. 25,000" be substituted.

Lala Chetan Anand (West Punjab Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban)
(Urdu) : Sir I beg to move—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c) for the words "Rs. 10,000 or such larger amount" the words "Rs. 5,000 or such smaller amount" be substituted.

It has always been urged on the floor of this House that the petty cultivators or the petty debtors in this province badly stand in need of a measure like the one now before the House. But if the maximum pecuniary limit of the jurisdiction of the conciliation boards as is provided in the Bill, is allowed to stand, it will on the one hand increase litigation and will on the other hand benefit the big bellied zamindars to whom none of us would like to afford any relief. I, therefore, suggest that Rs. 5,000 or such smaller amount as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf should be fixed as the maximum pecuniary limit of the jurisdiction of these boards.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c) for the words "Rs. 10,000 or such larger amount" the words "Rs. 5,000 or such smaller amount" be substituted.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi Division and Lahore Division North, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I beg to move—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c), for the figures Rs. "10,000," the figure, "Rs. 1,000" be substituted, and for the word "larger" the word "smaller" be substituted.

There is no doubt that we are bound to be guilty of repetition to some extent in discussing these various amendments, but it is equally clear that to some extent it is unavoidable. It has been said over and over again that this Bill is designed principally to give relief to the petty agriculturists. But if you place a limit of Rs. 10,000 or even go beyond it, or even fix the lower limit at Rs. 25,000 as suggested by the honourable member, Khan Bahadur Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, it is obvious that we are not out to afford relief to the petty debtor or petty agriculturist but we are really anxious to wipe off all debts by a surreptitious method, by a method which on the face of it is not sufficiently open, sufficiently honest. If the legislature is to enact a Bill by which all debts are to be wiped off that would be a position which would be intelligible. In this indirect method to wipe off large debts even to the tune of Rs. 25,000 does not strike one as fair or reasonable. Various economic authorities have from time to time tried to estimate the income of individuals in India. Estimates were made by Dadhabhoy Naoroji, Mr. Digby, and others a long time ago and their estimates were that the average income of an individual in India did not exceed an anna or half an anna a day which means Rs. 12 a year. (Interruption.) That was in 1890, as the honourable member opposite says. Let us take that things have since improved. I am prepared to accept the figure which may be furnished to me by the honourable member interrupting. Will he say if things have improved a hundred per cent. or two hundred per cent. ? (Interruption.) I am prepared to take it on his authority that things have improved 500 per cent. and let us assume that the average income of an Indian to-day is Rs. 60 and not Rs. 12 as it was in the year 1890. If the average income of an Indian is Rs. 60 or in its neighbourhood, what could be the idea in giving relief to people whose debts amount to Rs. 25,000 or Rs. 10,000 or for the matter of that Rs. 5,000 ? I would submit that there is then really no sense in enacting this Bill if it embodies figures like this. It would be plausible, it would even be clearly just, it would be assented to by everybody if we give relief to people, say whose debts do not exceed Rs. 500. But if we go to a larger figure, then really the entire measure becomes one of pure and simple spoliation. Supposing this amendment is carried, namely that the lower limit of Rs. 25,000 be substituted in place of Rs. 10,000, what would be the effect? Have you cared to enquire the number of cases in our courts whose value is in excess of Rs. 25,000? The number of such cases must be very few indeed. If an analysis of the figures of the money suits which are now pending in the various districts of the province is made properly, after due inquiry we will find that courts are mostly occupied with cases the value of which is much less than Rs. 10,000. It has already been explained that if once this provision regarding the constitution of these conciliation boards is brought in the Bill, our courts would cease to function, but if this provision places the limit of the jurisdiction of these courts at Rs. 25,000 or anything like that the net result of that would be that all our courts would cease to exist. I am not here to defend the existence of the courts, but I only want the House to contemplate the implications of the proposal which is under discussion. It would mean that more than 90 per cent. of our courts will have to shut their shops. It may not be perhaps a very bad thing from some people's point of view, but what I am anxious to bring to your notice is this that this implication of this amendment should be kept in view when we are voting for or against it.

4 P.M.

It is really a matter of extreme regret that the House is not in a mood to give a dispassionate consideration to the measure which is before us. It is really to be regretted that the Government is really too much under what I might call the "debtor influences." There are debtor influences everywhere. There are debtor influences to the right of them, there are debtor influences to the left of them, there are debtor influences in front of them and there are debtor influences behind them. (Laughter). (An honourable member: And volley and thunder!) (Laughter). Government to my mind is, partly in this case, for the time being at any rate helpless. It is being pulled by the nose from the front propelled from behind by a vis a tergo, and elbowed out of position from either side.

Mr. President: There is no such motion before the House.

Mr. Labh Singh: That is the only point. We are in full agreement with the avowed object of the Bill, namely that relief may be given to the petty agricultural debtors. But when people who have borrowed to the tune of thousands or people who have borrowed to the tune of lakhs come forward and in the guise of this Bill they want to help themselves, we must raise our voices in protest. We must invite the attention of Government to the inequity of the entire procedure and we must caution them against the way in which they are proceeding and we must respectfully ask them to steer clear of the influences which are being brought to bear upon them and which are warping their judgment in the wrong direction. With these few words I would propose that my amendment may be put to the House and I would ask the House to accept it.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c), for the figure "Rs. 10,000" the figure "Rs. 1,000" and for the word "larger" the word "smaller" be substituted.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General) : Sir, I move—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c), the word "larger" after the words "Rs. 10,000 or such" be omitted.

In the first place, I do not understand the meaning and object of fixing a limit when it is to be exceeded. It is a contradiction in term and I do not understand why the honourable Legal Remembrancer has allowed this sort of defective draft to be incorporated in the Bill. Government fixes a limit and then says, well it may be exceeded.

My honourable friend from Sargodha has proposed to raise the limit of Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 25,000 and in support of his view he quotes the Central Provinces Act. I do not understand why if the Central Provinces Act and the Central Provinces procedure has to be followed, it should be followed only in certain aspects, and not in others. The present Bill is a strange combination of sense and nonsense. You borrow something from the Central Provinces Act and you borrow another thing which is altogether inconsistent; you incorporate something which is absolutely inconsistent with what is to be found in the Central Provinces Act. The Central Provinces Act allows debts to be recovered as if they were arrears of land revenue. Whenever any proposal of this kind is made, the honourable leader of the opposition or the honourable leader of the rural classes simply stands up and says that the question should not be entertained for a minute. If no means are to be found for the recovery of the debt what is the use of raising the limit of the board's jurisdiction.

Sir, I would invite your special attention to the fact that marked contrast should not be allowed to exist in the legislation having its force in this country. In the case of ordinary courts you allow appeals to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in London when the value of the suit is Rs. 10,000 or more and here you allow suits of the value of more than Rs. 10,000 to be heard by a board about the impartiality of whose members you have great doubt; yet you say that from the decrees of that board there will be no relief, no appeal and no revision. Please do not allow such grave inconsistencies to come on the statute book. It is with a view to removing the inconsistency found in the draft that I have moved the amendment and I hope it will be accepted by the Government benches and the honourable members opposite.

Mr. President : May I ask the honourable member to explain how his amendment, if accepted, would affect the sub-clause as it stands ?

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : If the word "larger" is struck off, then the sense will be all right. The sub-clause will then read : "....no board shall have jurisdiction to make a settlement between a debtor and his creditors if the total debts of the debtor exceeds Rs. 10,000 or such amount as the local Government may prescribe...."

Mr. President : If the word "larger" is omitted, the purpose of the amendment will not be served; on the other hand the clause will get quite a different meaning.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : My amendment was with reference to the original clause as it existed in the Bill when it emerged from the select committee. I did not pay sufficient attention to the wording of the present clause.

Mr. President : Even the original clause had the same words.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : My meaning will be clear if the word 'smaller' is substituted for the word 'larger.'

Mr. President : That is a new amendment of which I have received no notice. Again, if the honourable member's amendment is at all accepted the result will be that the words 'Rs. 10,000' must also go.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, you will notice that in amendment No. 2—

Mr. President : I am not concerned with that amendment. I am concerned with the amendment moved by Raja Narendra Nath. It is not for the honourable member to reply. Speeches by proxy cannot be allowed in this Council. Raja Sahib is the Leader of the Party and can speak better than any one else.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I think the clause should read—

...no board shall have jurisdiction to make a settlement between a debtor and his creditors if the total debts of the debtor exceed Rs. 10,000 or such smaller amount as the local Government may prescribe for an area.

Mr. President : I have received no notice of such amendment.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I have made my meaning clear and I leave it to the honourable Legal Remembrancer to redraft accordingly if the amendment is accepted.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I rise to support Mr. Labh Singh's amendment. The honourable members who have moved amendments asking the House to accept Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 1,000 do not know the effect that the amendments will have on the situation in the country. I wish to make it absolutely clear that, so far as the present litigation is concerned, in the case of suits above the value of Rs. 5,000 direct appeals lie with the Honourable Judges of the High Court. The Honourable Judges of the High Court, as every one is aware here, are recruited from the most intelligent and the most experienced class of people.

The Honourable Mr. J. D. Boyd : It might cut things a little bit shorter if I were to tell the honourable members that we are not dealing with suits: suits are not in question at all.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I am not talking of suits. I am talking of the present day machinery of dealing with suits of large value.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It is not a question of suits at all.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : If the honourable member had waited a little I would have made my meaning clear.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Your predecessor said the same thing and he did not make his meaning clear.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Appeals in the case of suits of the value of Rs. 5,000 lie directly to the High Court Judges who are recruited from the most intelligent and the most experienced class of people, and their appointment does not rest with the local Government, their appointment really rests with the Secretary of State, who makes these appointments on the recommendation of the High Court Judges.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Not by the Secretary of State, but by His Majesty the King-Emperor under a Royal Warrant.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Very well. So you will see that the possible safeguards are utilised for the appointment of those gentlemen who deal with cases above the value of Rs. 5,000 and the result of that is that not only they are competent to give the final decrees but in cases where the value involved is Rs. 10,000 or above an appeal is permitted under the Civil Procedure Code to the Lordships of the Privy Council. Here we have a constitution to deal with cases of this kind where the appointment of the conciliation boards is to rest with the local Government. What sort of experience are these gentlemen going to have? Are they to be recruited from the class of people from among whom the High Court Judges are recruited? Are they to be recruited from the class of people from which district and sessions judges are recruited? Are they going to be recruited from among the great lawyers who make large amounts of money? If so, it would be a very expensive machinery if that system were to be adopted for the appointment to these posts on the conciliation boards. What I wish to point out is that naturally these people would be men of ordinary ability, men without experience to deal with cases of this kind and possibly open to bribery and corruption as people with little ability and less experience generally are. The wording of clause 7 as passed by the Council itself shows that people are not expected to have any confidence in these men. What is the constitution of the conciliation board? It is to consist of one representative of the debtor class, one representative of the creditor class and the third will act as a sort of umpire or arbitrator. Naturally the representative of the debtor class will uphold the cause of the debtor and the representative of the creditor class will uphold the cause of the creditor. These two will, therefore, be fighting between themselves and it will be for the third member to give the final decision. Therefore, the very constitution of this board stands condemned. The result of such a constitution of the conciliation board will be to lay the axe at the root of the present-day civilised system of disputes being decided in a court of justice that has been functioning ever since the advent of British Government into this country, and to introduce a new revolutionary method of deciding disputes. This method is proposed to be tried by those people who dominate this Council because they are face to face with a problem which really affects a small class of people and not a very large class. This method is proposed to be tried by people who are regarded as very big landowners who have large amount of money to pay and in the garb of giving protection or relief to small debtors they want to protect themselves. They do not want to go to courts.

Mr. President : Will the honourable member please say which sub-clause he is now discussing?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I am submitting that the amendment of Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi raising the amount to Rs. 25,000 or above really means that it is desired to nullify the effect of the whole Bill, that it is desired to make the Bill as absurd as possible. It is evidently desired to bring within the purview of this Bill people that really should be honest and pay their debts honestly. This Bill is really meant to afford relief for those people who have nothing in their pockets to pay. Just consider how the constitution of these boards is likely to affect their judgment or their desire to help these big landlords. The constitution will be really in the hands of the local Government.

Mr. President : But constitution of the board is not under consideration at present.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Quite so. But I am referring to that to show that the board would be incompetent to deal with cases amounting to Rs. 25,000 or even Rs. 10,000. Once the board is constituted on class, caste or religious basis—and they will be appointed by Ministers who in their turn will be dependent for their stay in the Government on the votes of the majority class in the Council—the result will be naturally that there will not be fair and impartial decision. The consequence of this will be ruinous to the country at large. There would be no justice at all. Therefore it is high time that honourable members who are very anxious to see the ordinary small peasant proprietor or small debtor relieved from his heavy burden of indebtedness that they do not seek to relieve the indebtedness of big landowners who can afford to repay the loan. Otherwise the whole thing will look ridiculous and the courts will be brought into contempt and people will suffer greatly. It is the duty of the Government to see that the Bill gives fair treatment to the needy only. It should, therefore, make up its mind absolutely clear that it is going to cut down even this amount of Rs. 10,000 to a much smaller figure. It is only in the fitness of things that the amendment moved by my honourable friend on my right should be accepted and relief given only to small peasant proprietors.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East, Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I will try to confine my remarks to the amounts mentioned in the various amendments, but I shall also answer certain criticisms which have been made, in my view, unjustly. The first point which I wish to make is that members seem to have misunderstood the exact meaning of this clause. This clause does not say anywhere that Government will not be in a position to fix a lower limit than Rs. 10,000. The clause as it stands does not prevent the Government from fixing a lower limit, say, of Rs. 5,000 in any local area that it likes. It can even lay down a limit of Rs. 100. The figure Rs. 10,000 seems to have been adopted as a sort of an index and it is in that light alone that this figure should be viewed. If my friends had cared to go through the wording of this clause they would have come to the conclusion to which I have come. The sub-clause runs as follows :—

The local Government shall determine the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the board, provided that no board shall have jurisdiction to make a settlement between a debtor and his creditors if the total debts of the debtor exceed Rs. 10,000 or such larger amount as the local Government may prescribe for any area.

✓[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

It is as plain as anything possibly can be. (An honourable member : Does the local Government consist of zamindars and debtors ?) That is an entirely different point which I am not at present discussing. If my friend cares to wait I shall come to that point also. This figure of Rs. 10,000 has been suggested as the outside limit except in very exceptional circumstances. Therefore the fear of my friends that in every district the limit will be fixed at Rs. 10,000 is entirely groundless. That will really depend upon the peculiar conditions prevailing in any particular area.

Then again, there was a good deal of misapprehension as to the effect of this clause. The last speaker seemed to argue that by passing this legislation we shall be replacing the present civilised system of judicial administration by another system which is uncivilised, uncouth and something worse. My answer to that criticism is that this legislation does not purport to be one for permanent use. This law is being enacted in order to tide over a particularly difficult time. When the particularly difficult situation has been negotiated this law will not remain in force at all. Again, Government is not going to appoint conciliation boards for all districts at the same time. As an experimental measure Government will set up a certain number of conciliation boards in selected areas and if those conciliation boards prove successful in those areas, then they may be appointed in other areas. The impression that Government will appoint these conciliation boards simultaneously in all the districts and that all the courts which are at present functioning will become functus officio is entirely erroneous and could not have been formed by anybody who had cared to read this clause carefully.

Reference was made to the limit fixed in the Central Provinces. There the outside limit adopted is Rs. 25,000. It cannot be said that the Punjab is less prosperous and, therefore, the amount of debts which may have to be dealt with by the conciliation boards should be lower than that fixed in the Central Provinces. I think everybody here will admit that the level of prosperity in the Punjab is decidedly and distinctly higher than in the Central Provinces. (Hear, hear). Therefore it is not unreasonable to expect that the outside limit adopted in the Central Provinces should also be adopted here.

The previous speakers have also made reference to zamindars and agriculturists. I had hoped that they would not repeat this argument now because we have already decided by passing yesterday's amendment that the law will be one of general application. This Bill is no longer one which will be applied only to agriculturists or petty peasants or any other smaller section of the population. Therefore any reference to agriculturists or to the desire of agriculturists to be unjust to creditors is really irrelevant and unjust.

Mr. President : What about the jurisdiction of the conciliation boards ? Has not the Government power under this sub-clause to determine the pecuniary limits of every conciliation board ?

✓Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Yes.

Mr. President : What these limits are to be is entirely left to the Government to fix, is that not so ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Exactly.

Mr. President : Then, what does the latter part of the sub-clause mean? When it is left to the Government to determine the pecuniary limits of a board, what does the proviso mean, "provided that no board shall have jurisdiction to make a settlement between a debtor and his creditors if the total debts of the debtor exceed Rs. 10,000 or such larger amount as the local Government may prescribe"? It is entirely left to the local Government to fix the limit whether it is Rs. 10,000 or less. Does the sub-clause express that meaning clearly?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : So far as I have been able to judge the meaning of this clause, it is clear. The meaning of the clause minus the proviso is, that the Government will be in a position to fix any pecuniary limit it chooses. It may be one lakh, it may be one rupee. This proviso was added in order to set at rest the apprehensions which were felt both by the representatives of creditors and the representatives of debtors while this clause was being considered in the select committee. It is, as I submitted before, a sort of an index figure, a sort of guidance to the local Government as to the limit to be fixed.

Mr. President : Is any maximum limit fixed in this case?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : No.

Mr. President : That is to say, neither the maximum nor the minimum limit is fixed and it is left to the Government to fix the limit in each case. Is not that the case?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Exactly. Logically the proviso is not at all necessary. But as I submitted, this proviso was added in order to allay the apprehensions felt by the representatives of both creditors and debtors and though it may not be logically necessary, the insertion of a sort of a guiding figure is certainly not undesirable. If the Government goes too far in cases of this kind, people naturally can say, there was a guiding figure inserted in the Bill itself and the Government seems to have gone too far ahead.

Mr. President : Then the best course would be to say, "The local Government shall determine the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of each Board, provided that they shall in no case exceed Rs. 20,000, Rs. 50,000 or one lakh."

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : So far as logic is concerned, as I have already stated, the words of sub-clause (c) up to "provided" are quite sufficient to give the Government the power required for the purpose.

One of the previous speakers made a reference to the Government being surrounded on all sides by debtor influences.

Mr. President : I think Government can defend itself on this point. It is true that Government has been attacked in season and out of season. But it can defend itself.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : If the implication or the attack had not affected the agricultural classes, I would not have uttered a word.

Mr. President : I do not say that the honourable member is irrelevant. If he wishes to answer he may do so. But he need not take the trouble, unless he feels advised to do so.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I will say just one word. Both on the floor of this House and during the select committee stage the zamindar members showed a greater deference to the wishes of official members as well as to the wishes of members representing creditor classes than the members of creditor classes will care to admit. Therefore any criticism on the part of the members of creditor classes to the effect that Government has in any way been influenced by the members of agricultural classes or debtor classes is entirely wrong and unjust. On the contrary our complaint has always been, that Government is more bania-fearing than zamindar-fearing.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) : With respect to the remarks just made by you, Sir, I submit that it may not be very logical to add these words in the clause. But the mention of Rs. 10,000 is not without its meaning or significance. For instance, if the local Government after full consideration of the relevant facts were to issue a gazette notification that such and such areas would have conciliation boards without defining the pecuniary limits, then it would be understood that the limit will be Rs. 10,000 neither more nor less. In that way it would be a very useful figure. So, if the House ultimately agrees to substitute Rs. 25,000 or a lower amount in place of Rs. 10,000, it would be a sort of guidance to the local Government when appointing the conciliation boards. In that way it will serve, as my leader has remarked, as a sort of index figure and unless there are very special circumstances to reduce or limit the jurisdiction of the conciliation boards and unless there are grounds calling for the conferment of a higher jurisdiction on the boards, that index figure would be a sufficient and sure guide.

Mr. President : Then the honourable member agrees that the second part of the sub-clause beginning with " provided " serves only as an index ?

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : Yes, and in a way this interprets the meaning or the sense of the House.

Mr. President : The honourable member is aware that we are legislating. What about the first part, " The local Government shall " ? Is it not imperative and mandatory ? Shall not Government fix some limit under this part ?

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : If it does not, it will be taken to be this Rs. 10,000. Our only security if it is retained is this, that Government will take into account the fact that we persisted at the time when the Bill was on the anvil of legislation that Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 25,000 or whatever it is, should be fixed as the standard amount so that it may guide the future administrators and governments while appointing the conciliation boards in any local area.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : Sir, you have been pleased to observe that under the proposal of the Government it is permissible to the Government to fix any limit, may be Rs. 25,000 or Rs. 30,000 or even ten lakhs, as a limit in certain specified areas. Our object in asking the legislature to fix a definite limit which the Government cannot exceed, is to prevent the Government from being compelled to fix higher limits under the influence of persons whom it may find it impossible to resist.

Mr. President : This question can arise only when pecuniary limits are proposed to be fixed.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am asking the House to fix a limit of Rs. 5,000 or less. It should not be possible to the local Government to appoint a conciliation board for settlement of debts of persons whose debt exceeds Rs. 5,000. My object is really not to limit the pecuniary jurisdiction of these boards. My object is to save the Government from extending the Act to areas under the influence of powerful debtors whom the Government might find it impossible to displease. Take the proposal of the Government which is that the conciliation board can conciliate debts incurred up to the extent of Rs. 10,000. The proposal of the Government is, that they can confer an unlimited jurisdiction on any board. We may, however, take it as Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has said that normally the Government would not go beyond Rs. 10,000 and in most cases it would fix lower limits. I wish to remind you that you are practically bringing in the entire debt of the province both agricultural and urban within the limits of the conciliation board. This is certainly a matter for statistical enquiry. But speaking broadly one may say that if you take a census of debtors of this province, small and large, out of 10,000 debtors you will find only 4 or 5 whose total debts exceed Rs. 10,000. We have no statistics on this subject but work before our courts is a fair indication of the nature of indebtedness prevailing in the province.

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair and it was occupied by the Deputy President.)

If you take the number of cases disposed of by small cause court judges or by judges invested with small cause court powers and by judges whose jurisdiction does not exceed 5,000, you will find that these cases exceed two hundred or three hundred times, the cases which exceed Rs. 5,000. Therefore, Sir, it may be taken as true that debtors in this province whose debts will exceed ten thousands will be very few indeed compared to the total number of debtors. Therefore, Sir, I have no apprehension that the conciliation boards will be doing something extraordinary, if they were given jurisdiction to deal with debts beyond ten thousand rupees, but what I am afraid of is, that persons whose debts amount to ten thousand rupees or whose debts exceed ten thousand rupees are persons who are influential in district boards and who are influential in this Council and who can bring to bear upon the Government influence legitimate or illegitimate to extend the operation of the Act to districts which the economic circumstances of those areas may not at all justify. As has been pointed out by Mr. Labh Singh, the present Government even is not at all immune, as at present constituted, from debtor influences of these higher limits and when the time for the constitution of these conciliation boards would arrive the Government, minus the official element, would consist entirely of persons some of whom may be debtors and, therefore, I say, the legislature should prevent the Government—it is our duty to prevent it—from being influenced consciously or unconsciously by influences which may not relate to the merits of the question, but which may have personal factors in them. Now supposing the Act is extended to the Muzaffargarh district, the Government may have some special reason due to economic circumstances to extend it to that district. Merely because it has been extended to Muzaffargarh, a claim may be advanced to extend it also to say Rohtak and it may be that the person who is interested in this matter, may be a Minister, or a member of the Legislative Council or more likely a person who is the principal supporter in the district of the minister without whose influence the member may not have been elected at all.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : Why particularly to Rohtak ? Why do you not mention Ambala or Sargodha ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Certainly, say Ambala or Sargodha. As a matter of fact in Rohtak debts are not of any high limits at all. It may be necessary in the interests of future members to extend it to Sargodha. The object in fixing the lower limit is apparent. One cannot shut one's eyes to existing facts, which are patent and blatant. We know that members of this Council, and Government are indebted. We know that some of their biggest supporters who make it possible for them to come to the Council are indebted and generally we know that it is not possible for us members to resist their influence. Can the Government say that they can always discard this influence ? Is it not, therefore, necessary that the judgment of the Government should be prevented from being influenced by these sinister influences ? If you accept the proposal of Mr. Chetan Anand of which I had also given notice, I submit you will not exclude from the operation of this Act and from the advantages of the conciliation boards any classes which deserve this consideration and whose misery should excite your sympathy or any large class of person who if left unrelieved would matter at all. As I have said, you will, perhaps, be leaving out of consideration 1 or 2 or 5 out of ten thousand debtors. Should not Government, therefore, be saved from the possibility of being influenced by a sinister influence ? And should not the honourable members led by Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram remove the possibility of misapprehension on this point ? Should they not offer the best defence they can to this by accepting this amendment and saying, look here we are not asking for ourselves, we are asking for the poor ? It has been stated on the floor of this House that every effort to increase the limit of the jurisdiction of these conciliation boards is an attempt on the part of the richer classes of zamindars to bring their own personal debts within the purview of the conciliation boards where they hope to be represented by their own representatives and by means of which they hope to get their debts wiped out. Is it not, therefore, fair, if they are honest, that they should free themselves from this reproach and say, "no, we the members of this House and richer classes do not wish to take advantage of these provisions ? It is meant for poorer people." Why do they insist on raising it from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 25,000 ? One reason that I can find is this. You were pleased to point out that that proposal is absolutely unnecessary because in the proposal of the Government itself, it is open to the Government to fix a limit of Rs. 25,000 for any area. That question was pointedly put to Chaudhri Chhotu Ram from the Chair to find an answer and no answer was given. The answer is obvious and the answer illustrates the whole course of the debate with respect to this unfortunate legislation and that is this. The Government are responsible for the legislation. They come forward so far as they themselves think, with honest proposals. They fix the limit of Rs. 5,000 or even less to start with in the Bill but in the select committee the proposal of ten thousand or a larger amount was fixed. Now these gentlemen, the gentlemen of the zamindar party are naturally apprehensive that the Government might insist upon their proposals in the original Bill and might reduce that limit. Therefore this proposal of Rs. 25,000 has been put forward so that the Government might stick to the position taken in the select committee which was an unreasonable position. That is the real answer. That is what has happened with respect to every proposal. That is what has happened with respect to rates of interest, the rates of interest which were proposed by Government in this House. The Government amendment was identical with the rate of interest put forward by Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram in the select committee and which the Government strenuously opposed there. The Government for some reason, which I do not know gave up their position of the original Bill, gave up their position of the select committee and without any reason accepted the proposal of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram which it had opposed strenuously in the select committee. Take any clause. It has been modified from stage to stage and it has been modified at the point of the bayonet, because the Unionist Party suggested unreasonable amendments under the influence of Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, and the Government in its desire to placate these members accepted even the foolish proposals emanating from that quarter. They have been making half a dozen unreasonable proposals and the Government has been compromising by accepting some of them, if the others were dropped. What would you think of a proposal emanating from a gentleman like Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and which was printed and circulated among us but which quietly disappeared? The proposal was this. That no courts shall decree a debt exceeding hundred rupees unless it is evidenced by a registered deed. That was the proposal which was sent in by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and nobody in his senses, would consider that proposal practicable. But it was sufficient to alarm the Government. The Government has been coerced by these extraordinary proposals. The zamindar members of the Government tell the member in charge that they have persuaded the zamindar members to drop some of the new unreasonable proposals and, therefore, Government should stick to the unreasonable proposals already adopted by the select committee. The unfortunate position is this, that Government is doing things at the dictation of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, but responsibility is not of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram but that of the Honourable Finance Member and I respectfully submit that if Chaudhri Chhotu Ram were himself in the position of the Honourable Finance Member, I have sufficient faith even in him to say that he would not maintain the proposal which he as leader of the opposition proposes and to which the Government succumbs. I respectfully submit that these conciliation boards having been extended not only to agricultural debts but to all debts.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : You wanted it.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: No, no. The provision of conciliation boards have now been extended to all debts and a great deal of apprehension has been expressed about their work. The boards have been subjected to a great deal of legitimate criticism from all quarters and the policy of the Government itself is merely to try them as an experiment in some selected areas, when that is the case is it not desirable that the limit of their jurisdiction should be so laid down as to extend their operation to really poor districts and classes and not to complicate the economic issue of relieving poverty by political influences of debtors owing larger amounts and whose influence would not be wholesome? (Hear, hear).

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Khan Bahadur Nawab Mian Muhammad Hayat Qureshi (Urdu): Sir, my motion has been opposed on two or three grounds. The first ground that has been stated is that if the pecuniary limits of jurisdiction of the conciliation boards is raised from Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 25,000 the work of these boards will increase. This fear has been shown to be quite baseless. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and Mr. Labh Singh have shown it during the course of their speeches that in a majority civil cases the amount of debt has not exceeded in each case Rs. 500 or so.

The second argument that has been advanced against this motion is that in these cases the parties will not have right of appeal. Only those cases will be taken to these conciliation boards in which the parties will be willing to effect a compromise and seek the help of the boards. Hence the question of appeal does not arise. When the parties have sought the help of the conciliation boards with each other's consent the question of appeal does not arise.

The next argument that has been advanced is that if my amendment is adopted the proposal of Mr. Puri will fall through. In the select committee I wanted to move this amendment but since I was in a minority my amendment was not accepted, so I had to move it here in the House to-day. The Government will have power to fix the limit of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the boards at any sum. There is not much difference between Rs. 10,000 and Rs. 25,000. It is known to all that even those agriculturists who own one square or two squares of land are indebted to the extent of Rs. 15,000 or Rs. 20,000. I can give definite instances to illustrate my point if the Government or the House wishes that I should do so. I would submit, therefore, that I have made a genuine suggestion and I should like to press it. I hope the House will readily accept my proposal.

5 P. M.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the Chair.)

Mr. President: The question is—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c), for the words "Rs. 10,000" the words "Rs. 25,000" be substituted.

The Council divided: Ayes 23: Noes 42.

AYES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.

Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.
Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja.

Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.	Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani, Makhdumzada Sayad.	Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.	Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Muhammad Sarfaraz Ali Khan, Raja.	Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.	Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Zaman Medhi Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.	Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.

NOES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.	Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.	Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.	Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.	Marsden, Mr. P.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.	Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.	Muhammad Husain, Chaudhri.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.	Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Chetan Anand, Lala.	Murphy, Mr. A.
Fazl Hahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.	Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.	Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable Malik Sir.	Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.	Nurullah, Mian.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.	Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Grindle, Mr. A. D.	Ramji Das, Lala.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.	Roberts, Mr. W.
Jaswant Singh, Guru.	Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.	Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.	Shave, Dr. (Mrs.) M. C.
Labh Chand, Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.	Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Labh Singh, Mr.	Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.
Latifi, Mr. A.	Ujjal Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c), for the words "Rs. 10,000" or such larger amount", the words "Rs. 5,000 or such smaller amount" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in the proposed clause 8, sub-clause (1) (c), for the figure Rs. "10,000", the figure Rs. "1,000" be substituted, and for the words "larger," the word "smaller" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That sub-clause (1) (c) of the proposed clause 8 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That sub-clauses (1) (d) to (3) of the proposed clause 8 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I beg to move :—

That in clause 8, after sub-clause (4), the following sub-clause be added—

“ The Chairman and at least one-half of the members shall be persons having at least five years’ experience in the administration of civil justice.”

When a threat of some sort of a guillotine is being held out I shall be extremely brief in commending this amendment to the acceptance of the House. The proposition is almost self-obvious. We are going to invest these boards with jurisdiction extending up to Rs. 10,000 to begin with and later on up to any limit. It is but proper that the personnel of these boards should be such as would inspire confidence. Courts whose pecuniary jurisdiction does not extend beyond Rs. 1,000 have certain qualifications and the senior sub-judges who deal with cases of Rs. 10,000 and upwards are gentlemen of special judicial experience and their decisions are subject to an appeal and subject also to many other safeguards. It is but just and proper that people who are appointed to these boards should be such as would have some sort of a minimum qualification and the qualification which I have proposed in this amendment is extremely low, that these gentlemen should have at least five years’ experience in the administration of civil justice, and must have some sort of minimum education and training. I think this provision is most salutary and wholesome and hope there will be no objection to this motion being adopted.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 8 after sub-clause (4), the following sub-clause be added :—

“ That the Chairman and at least one-half of the members shall be persons having at least five years’ experience in the administration of civil justice.”

The Council divided : Ayes : 12. Noes : 52.

AYES.

Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Chetan Anand, Lala.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.
Labh Singh, Mr.
Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.

Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur
Raja.
Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Ramji Das, Lala.
Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.

NOES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan
Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Anderson, Mr. J. D.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.

Bourne, Mr. F. C.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur
Chaudhri.
Faqr Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab
Chaudhri.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.

Ferguson, Mr. J. A.	Muhammad Husain, Chaudhri.
Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable Malik Sir.	Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.	Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.	Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Grindal, Mr. A. D.	Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.
Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar.	Murphy, Mr. A.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.	Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Jaswant Singh, Guru.	Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.	Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
Kesar Singh, Rai Sahib Chaudhri.	Nurullah, Mian.
Latifi, Mr. A.	Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Macfarlane, Mr. D.	Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Marsden, Mr. P.	Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Mohindar Singh, Sardar	Roberts, Mr. W.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.	Shave, Dr. (Mrs.) M. C.
Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan, Chaudhri.	Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.	Sikander-Hyat Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.
Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja	Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
Muhammad Hassan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.	Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.

Mr. President : The question is—

That sub-clause (4) of the proposed clause 8 stand part of the clause.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the proposed clause 8 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 9.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 9 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 10.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 10 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 11.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I want to draw your attention, Sir, to sub-clause (1) (d) of clause 11 which reads—

“ A statement that he is unable to pay his debts, and that they do not exceed ten thousand rupees or the prescribed amount.”

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

I submit that the words "ten thousand rupees or" should be omitted in view of the fact that Government can prescribe any limit.

Mr. President : I have received no notice of that amendment.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : In view of the fact that we have given power to fix the limit in regard to any conciliation board, I move the following amendment—

That in clause 11, sub-clause (1) (d), the words 'ten thousand rupees or' be omitted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That sub-clause (1) as amended stand part of clause 11.

The motion was carried.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra (Nominated non-official) (Urdu) :
Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 11, sub-clause 2 (c) be deleted.

In sub-clause 2, clause 11 it is provided that every application presented by a creditor shall, besides other particulars, contain a statement that his debtor owes not more than ten thousand rupees. I ask, how is the creditor to know that his debtor owes not more than ten thousand rupees? He may owe one thousand or thirty thousand rupees and the creditor may not be aware of it. The creditor cannot submit a wrong statement for fear of his application being rejected. I would therefore submit that the provision being absolutely useless should be deleted.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 11, sub-clause (2) (c) be deleted.

The motion was carried.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra (Nominated non-official) (Urdu) :
Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 11, sub-clause 2 (d) for the words "is unable to pay" the words "does not pay" be substituted.

My object in moving this amendment is to show that it is very difficult for a creditor to know that his debtor is really unable to pay his debt. The words "is unable to pay" are meaningless. If the creditor admits in his application that his debtor is unable to pay his debt, it would probably adversely affect his interests afterwards. I would therefore submit that a creditor instead of stating in his application the inability of his debtor to pay his debt should state that his debtor does not pay his debt.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 11, sub-clause 2 (d), for the words "is unable to pay" the words "does not pay" be substituted.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, in connection with the amendment now before the House there is one point which deserves consideration of the House. If the creditor states in his application that his debtor is unable to pay his debt that would adversely affect his interests at a later stage when execution proceedings are taken. Probably that statement being in an affidavit will be binding on him. (Continued in English). Because the honourable member had not this in his mind, I wanted to make it clear so that everybody might grasp it if they want to fix this liability upon the creditor. Speaking broadly it is not fair to him. As we are legislating and this is a clear mistake I wholeheartedly support the amendment.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): I oppose this amendment. I think it was a mistake to have passed the previous amendment. I did not realise its full effect at that time. In so readily accepting the proposal made by the honourable member from Amritsar I think, the House has made a mistake because the effect of putting in an application has not been realised. As soon as an application is put in the effect is that all civil process against that debtor is stopped. If it is an execution proceeding pending against him it is stopped; if it is a civil suit, it is stopped, an insolvency petition, it is stopped. And it may happen that debtor is able to pay his debts. It may happen that the debtors do not fall within the prescribed limit and he cannot with any conscience put in an application before a conciliation board. He has only to get hold of a creditor who can put in an application and thus put an end to all civil process against him. After all when petitions are verified, they are verified to the best of belief of a person. No creditor should put in a petition unless he is able to say that it is to the best of his belief. Suppose you have fixed a limit of Rs. 1,000 for the conciliation board in Muzaffargarh and a debtor is fully aware that he has a decree of Rs. 8,000 outstanding against him. He cannot very well go and put an application before the conciliation board and stop the execution against him. But he has only to get hold of a creditor and on his statement the whole civil process will be suspended. Ordinarily a creditor is fairly conversant with the state of indebtedness of his debtor and to the best of his belief he makes his statement. The apprehension which exists in the mind of Mr. Labh Chand Mehra is entirely far-fetched and I ask him to withdraw his amendment. In the first place no creditor is likely to go to the conciliation board, that is my conviction, unless he puts that petition at the instance of a debtor. Even supposing it is a genuine petition, he is not likely to get into any trouble. After all he is making a serious allegation against another citizen and he should not make that allegation without enquiry. He should make an enquiry with reference to the circumstances of the debtor in putting an insolvency petition for instance. Do not creditors make such allegations in insolvency petitions and do they not suffer by having to verify? I therefore oppose this amendment.

Mr. President: The question is—

That in clause 11, sub-clause 2 (d), for the words "is unable to pay" the words "does not pay" be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President: The question is—

That sub-clause (2) as amended stand part of clause 11.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): I move—

That in clause 11, the following be added as a new sub-clause:—

"A debtor making an application under section 10 shall deposit with his application a sum equivalent to 25 per cent. of the amount due from him. Such amount shall be rateably distributed among such of the creditors as are parties to an amicable settlement."

[Mr. Labh Singh.]

The grounds on which this amendment is founded are two. Firstly, it will be a test of the good faith of the debtor. A person who is prepared to pay as much as he can may be given relief. Even if the remaining 75 per cent. of the debts due from him are to be wiped off he will get a very substantial relief and the creditors will not mind it. The second ground is that it will be an incentive to all the creditors to join in the compromise. From these two points of view I press this amendment for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. President : New clause proposed—

That in clause 11, the following be added as a new sub-clause :—

“ A debtor making an application under section 10 shall deposit with his application a sum equivalent to 25 per cent. of the amount due from him. Such amount shall be rateably distributed among such of the creditors as are parties to an amicable settlement.”

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : After all, these conciliation boards are being constituted to effect a conciliation between the creditors and the debtors. It is only desirable to effect that conciliation if the debtor wishes to pay at least a reduced amount and an amount which he can conveniently afford to pay. If it is the intention of the debtor not to pay, then it is not a case of conciliation at all ; it is a case which should proceed according to the law of the land. If a person has assets, movable assets, which can be easily concealed and which are concealed, he is in a position to pay but he does not want to pay; then it is not a case of conciliation. There may again be a case in which a person is really unable to pay, has absolutely got no assets, even then it is not a question of conciliation because a debtor cannot place at the disposal of the board anything which would conciliate any creditor even though he may be willing to come to terms. Therefore if there is no chance of recovery the conciliation boards need not function at all. Again it is necessary that before the special machinery appointed by the Government functions in favour of a debtor, that debtor should give some proof of his bona fides, that he is coming to them with a desire to liquidate according to the best of his ability and according to the best of his resources the whole debt or a portion of the debt and the best proof is that he should place at the disposal of the conciliation board a certain portion of the amount due from him. It is not necessary to insist upon a very large amount. The proposal of my friend on my right insists upon his depositing a sum equal to one-fourth of the debts due from him. If that is thought to be too high, a smaller deposit should be insisted upon and that is a matter which the Council can decide. Again this is not a proposal without precedent. In the United Provinces where a similar legislation was being considered with respect to temporary stay of execution of decrees, a similar clause existed in the Bill introduced by the United Provinces Government and I wish to place the provisions of that clause before you for the consideration of the House.

At this stage the Council adjourned till 2 P. M. on Monday, 19th November 1984.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Monday, 19th November, 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2 P.M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

OATH OF OFFICE.

The following members were sworn in :—

Mr. A. V. Askwith (Officer on special duty).

Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi (Assistant Director of Public Instruction).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

GONDAL TRIBE.

3934. Khan Bahadur Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

- (a) the population of the Gondal tribe of the Bhalwal tahsil of the Shahpur district and of Phalia tahsil of the Gujrat district, the amount of land owned by them and the land revenue paid by that community ;
- (b) the number of men of the tribe of Gondal in the service of the Government ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It is regretted the information is not available. Seeing that appointments are not made on a tribal, much less a sub-tribal basis it is considered that the collection of the information would not serve any useful purpose.

PANDIT GIAN CHAND, INSPECTOR, INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES, AMBALA.

3935. Thakur Pancham Chand : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that Pandit Gian Chand, Inspector, Industrial Co-operative Societies, Ambala, was put under suspension on 20th January 1933 ;
- (b) whether he was on the permanent cadre of the Department or on probation ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that he was discharged from service on the 12th December, 1933, by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies who treated his case as that of a probationer ;

[Thakur Pancham Chand.]

- (d) if the reply to (c) be in the affirmative, when was he appointed on probation and what were the conditions of probation laid upon and communicated to him as required by Rule 6-A, clause (b), in Chapter II, section 1 of the Manual of Audit Instructions (1926) ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that he was shown on the permanent cadre in the Annual Detailed Statement of the Permanent Establishment (vide Article 62 of the Civil Account Code) sent by the Registrar to the Accountant-General, Punjab, in the years 1930, 1931 and 1932 ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that during the tenure of his office the Registrar granted him some privilege leave under Fundamental Rule 81 ;
- (g) whether it is a fact that the Registrar refused him, on the return of his Service Book, the supply of copies of the entries therein even on payment, and also disallowed him to see his service book—the sole property of an employee—when requested by him ;
- (h) whether it is a fact that he applied to the Financial Commissioner, Development, seeking permission either for an interview, or, failing this permission, to submit an appeal in writing on 3rd April 1934 ;
- (i) whether it is a fact that the Financial Commissioner, Development, permitted him to file an appeal in writing on 20th April 1934 ;
- (j) whether it is a fact that the appeal was filed on 3rd May 1934, but was withheld by the Registrar on 10th May 1934 in contravention of the aforesaid permission of the appellate authority ;
- (k) whether it is a fact that he represented against this order of the Registrar on the basis of certain rules overlooked in this case ;
- (l) whether it is a fact that the Financial Commissioner, Development, declined to entertain the same unless received through the Registrar who withheld it when resubmitted ;
- (m) whether it is a fact that he represented to the Financial Commissioner, Development, to interfere and call for the relevant records in the interest of justice, but this request was also whittled down ;
- (n) whether it is a fact that he has submitted a petition to the Honourable Minister for Agriculture himself, stating inter alia the bare facts and the various legal flaws committed, to the detriment of his interests, by the inquiring officer during the progress of his inquiry having acted with a biased mind ;
- (o) if so, what action Government intends to take ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) Yes.

(b) On probation.

(c) Yes.

(d) He was appointed on probation on 4th March 1929. The conditions of probation are that, after passing the examination and completing the required training, a candidate is eligible for appointment on probation as an inspector and he remains on probation until he is confirmed. These conditions were known to Pandit Gian Chand.

(e) Yes, due to a mistake.

(f) Yes.

(g) Yes. He was not in service when he applied for the copies and documents mentioned.

(h) Yes.

(i) On receiving a petition from Pandit Gian Chand, the Financial Commissioner ordered that, if he desired to file an appeal, he must do so in a regular way.

(j) The appeal was withheld, as under the rules no appeal lay.

(k) Yes.

(l) Yes.

(m) Yes. The request was not granted, as no appeal lay in his case.

(n) Yes.

(o) The petition has been rejected.

ALIENATION OF AGRICULTURAL LAND IN PIND DADAN KHAN TAHSIL.

3936. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : With reference to question *8826,¹ asked in October 1934, will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total area covered by the alienations?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : About 110 acres.

OFFICIAL RECEIVERS IN BANKRUPTCY.

3937. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state the present strength of each community among the Official Receivers in bankruptcy stating for each community the number of agriculturists and of non-agriculturists?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : A statement furnishing the information is placed on the table.

Statement showing the present strength of Official Receivers community-wise and the number of statutory agriculturists and non-agriculturists among each community.

Community.	Agriculturists.	Non-agriculturists.	Total.
Hindus	1	9	10
Muslims	3	3	6
Sikhs	1	1

¹Pages 656-57 ante.

MALIARS.

3938. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : With reference to part (d) of the answer to question No. *3559¹, dated the 24th October 1934, will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state any district of the Punjab where Maliar is not a synonym for Arain?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : All the information Government possesses on this question is that contained in the articles on "Arains" and "Malis" in Rose's "Glossary of the Tribes and Castes of the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province," to which the honourable member is referred.

ALIENATION OF LAND TO NON-AGRICULTURISTS IN MIANWALI AND CAMPBELLPUR DISTRICTS.

3939. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state for the districts of Mianwali and Campbellpur for each of the years from 1920 up to date the number of sanctions given for the sale of land belonging to members of the statutory agricultural tribes, in favour of non-agriculturists, giving—

- (a) the total area in respect of each year for which the sanction was given;
- (b) the number of cases in which the area under sale was 100 kanals or more?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It is regretted that the information is not available; and its collection would entail expenditure that would not be in the public interest.

ALIENATION OF LAND TO NON-AGRICULTURISTS.

3940. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state in respect of the whole province for each of the years 1920 up to date the number of sanctions for the sale of land belonging to members of statutory agricultural tribes in favour of non-agriculturists, in which the area under sale was 100 kanals or more?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It is regretted that the information is not available; and its collection would entail expenditure that would not be in the public interest.

UNSTARRED QUESTION AND ANSWER.

INDIAN CHRISTIAN CONSTITUENCIES FOR LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

1055. Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that in order to frame the two Indian Christian constituencies for the Legislative Council election, it was at first proposed to include all districts having a population as low as 3,000 Indian Christians, but that later the idea appears to have been given up and a much higher figure has been substituted instead of 3,000;

(b) the reasons for making this change ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) The suggestion to include all districts with an Indian Christian population of 8,000 or over in the one or the other special Indian Christian Constituency was first made by the Provincial Franchise Committee.

(b) The suggestion amounts to extending the Indian Christian Constituencies to more than half the province in areas widely scattered and distant from one another not only making them unwieldy and administratively difficult to manage but also troublesome for candidates. It is not practicable to give effect to this suggestion. Attention is in this connection invited to paragraph 10 of the Communal Award.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Clause 11—(concluded).

Mr. President : The Council will now resume discussion on the amendment to clause 11.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : Yesterday I was referring to section 7 of a Bill of the United Provinces, i.e., section 7 of a Bill to make temporary provision for the regulation of the execution of civil court decrees for the debts of agriculturists in the United Provinces. That provision is as follows :—

7. Any person making an application under section 6 shall pay into court to the credit of the decree holder either on the date of the application or on some other date within a period to be fixed by the court and not exceeding thirty days a sum equivalent to 25 per cent. of the amount due under the decree if the decree is for payment of money or under the preliminary decree if the decree is a final decree for sale.

Therefore some payment of such a kind would be a test of the bona fides of the applicant. It would prevent bogus applications being put in calculated merely to hold up execution proceedings. I have already stated before the House that the conciliation boards, according to the present provisions, cannot function until the debtor gives his consent. Therefore you are giving the debtor a highly privileged position and you are making him the arbiter of all proceedings. Should you not take some guarantee from him that the debtor means business before the conciliation boards begin to function, proceed to fix a date of meeting, summon creditors and ask them to prove their debts and bring their account books and so on ? If at the last moment the debtor says, thank you, please do not proceed further, the conciliation boards at once become functus officio, they have absolutely no jurisdiction to proceed further in the matter and the debtor can retire from the proceedings with impunity. He is not liable to pay any costs, his position is not made any the worse for having put the conciliation boards or the creditors to so much trouble and expense and he would have, during the period of 6 or 8 months which would be the normal period before the final agreement is arrived at, derived all the advantages from the stay of civil processes against him. It is not only fair that before he is permitted to make this machinery function he should give some test of his bona fides, some indication that he genuinely desires conciliation and he does not want to initiate proceedings simply with a view to stay civil process against him. Therefore it is necessary that he should be asked to deposit some amount. You are no doubt aware that in insolvency proceedings when a debtor comes to an insolvency court and applies for insolvency, the court as a rule takes possession of the whole of his assets for distribution amongst his creditors. In any case, as soon as an order of adjudication is made, the assets of the insolvent vest in the official receiver and an insolvent is at once deprived of the possession of his property.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : May I rise to a point of order? This section is about particulars to be stated in the application by the debtor and the creditor and nothing else, but the provision which is sought to be passed by the amendment goes beyond the scope of the section and if it is adopted it will make the Bill look grotesque and will also make the other provisions inconsistent with each other.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : This is just the proper place where this should go. I am suggesting what should be the minimum requisites of an application.

Mr. President : The honourable Mr. Mukand Lal Puri is moving a new clause. The place where the clause, if accepted by the House, will be inserted in the Bill, will be determined by the member in charge of the Bill and the Secretary to Government, Punjab, Legislative Department.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I was pointing out before I was interrupted that even in insolvency proceedings after the adjudication the entire estate of the debtor is transferred to the court or the official receiver. And further, before civil processes are stayed against him, the insolvency court has to pass such order. The mere fact that an insolvency application is filed is not enough to stay execution of decrees against him or stay the continuance of other suits against him. Before that is done an order of insolvency court is necessary. The effect here of merely putting in an application to a conciliation board is to place him in a much more advantageous position than he is placed by putting in an application before insolvency courts. You do not require any security from him or any guarantee of his bona fides. As I have already stated, after 6 or 8 months he has merely to say, 'I do not agree to your most reasonable proposals,' and neither the conciliation boards nor the creditors have any jurisdiction over him or can make him change his attitude. Therefore with the object of protecting these conciliation boards from the machinations of such debtors who really do not intend to settle, it is necessary either that they should be made to hand over and place at the disposal of the conciliation boards all the assets of which they are possessed as in insolvency courts or if that is not liked, then they should deposit with their application at least 25 per cent. of their debts. I have sent in a notice of amendment that it need not be 25 per cent., it may be only ten per cent. It is very necessary that the Government should insist upon some such deposit being made. With these words I support the amendment.

Mr. President : Does the honourable member wish to move his alternative amendment for ten per cent. deposit?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I have sent up an alternative proposal to 25 per cent. deposit that is insisted upon in the United Provinces. But if that is thought too high let it be ten per cent.

I beg to move—

That in clause 11 the following be added as a new sub-clause—

Any debtor making an application under section 10 shall deposit with his application a sum equivalent to 10 per cent. of the amount due from him. If this is not done the application shall be rejected.

Mr. President : The motion moved is—

That in clause 11, the following be added as a new sub-clause—

Any debtor making an application under section 10 shall deposit with his application a sum equivalent to 10 per cent. of the amount due from him. If this is not done the application shall be rejected.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East Muhammadan, Rural) : I rise to oppose the amendments moved. It is indeed very difficult in these hard times to find 10 per cent. or 25 per cent. of the debtor's dues. If the debtor is unable to find it, it means that all the provisions of this chapter will remain a dead letter. They will not be of any use to him and the chief object of the whole chapter is gone. All that we want is that there ought to be relief afforded from the huge burden of debt and this is one of the best means of doing that. When a person has very little resources he is compelled to make a deposit in advance before seeking relief. The board may make a settlement and after the settlement is made having regard to the debtor's estate and his means, the debtor will of course try to find the money due in the hope that if that amount is paid he would be absolved of all his obligations. If in the beginning he is asked to dispose of his property at a low price in order to be able to seek relief and then if a settlement is not effected because there are so many conditions before a settlement could be effected, then the amount of his suffering will be far greater than his present position of indebtedness. As far as the example of the United Provinces from which the honourable member, Mr. Puri, has been drawing inspiration, is concerned, the circumstances here are quite different from those in the other province. In the United Provinces there are very big landholders and small landowners are non-existent. People there can somehow or other find money to deposit beforehand. It would be easy for them to borrow money for the purpose. But here seeing that there is a very heavy debt burden and there are many small landholders we can well realise how difficult it would be to procure money in the beginning and then go to the conciliation board for a settlement. Again, I am told that this clause was not adopted by the United Provinces Council. There was such an opposition to it there. That being the case, how can you expect a thing to be possible here which was not possible in the United Provinces in spite of the favourable circumstances prevailing there? Unless the Council wants to take away by one hand what it offers by the other, I do not see how this amendment can be supported. It seeks to put things in a topsy-turvy manner. It will be absolutely no good to the debtor class and I do not think any honourable member will be disposed to support this amendment. With these words I oppose the amendments moved.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): I should explain that the Government must oppose this amendment mainly because zamindars before the harvest may not be able to deposit anything. As a rule they borrow before the harvest and pay back after the harvest. This amendment, if adopted, would preclude zamindars from making any use of conciliation boards just at the time when they most need them.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North non-Muhammadian, Rural): I want to say just a few words. The honourable member in charge of the Bill has thought fit to oppose both the amendments proposed, that which was proposed by me to the effect that an application should be accompanied by a 25 per cent. deposit as also the other amendments of the honourable member to my left, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, to the effect that there may be a ten per cent. deposit. This ten per cent. need not necessarily be in cash. Let assets of the value of such amount as would amount to ten per cent. of the entire debt or 25 per cent. of the entire debt, as the case may be, be handed over to the board for rateable distribution among the creditors. The difficulty pointed out by the honourable member in charge of the Bill is only an imaginary one and has no force. As regards the difficulty raised by the previous speaker he only confirmed the impression that this Bill is taken by them as a machinery to write off all debts. Otherwise what is the test of good faith? The only relief that they can claim and the only way that that relief can be claimed and given to them, according to their way of looking at the matter, is that the entire debts should be wiped off by the process of writing them off. Otherwise we propose these amendments with a view to redeem the procedure as well as the substance of this Bill from being thoroughly infructuous. We want to redeem the measure from being a cruel mockery. It is clear from its provisions that a person who makes up with a creditor of even to the extent of 1 per cent. of the total debts and agrees with him to some mode of composition may also collusively arrange that that one per cent. of the entire debt shall be paid over a course of 12 years. Now during this period of 12 years the entire judicial process, the entire civil process of execution would be suspended. It would reduce the Bill to a mockery and it is our intention that this Bill should be redeemed from that position. That is the reason why we have put up these amendments. If the Government think that the Bill as thus interpreted can be anything less than a mockery or more than that, it is for them to say.

Mr. President: The question is—

That in clause 11 the following be added as a new sub-clause—

A debtor making an application under section 10 shall deposit with his application a sum equivalent to 25 per cent. of the amount due from him. Such amount shall be rateably distributed among such of the creditors as are parties to an amicable settlement.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President: The question is—

That in clause 11 the following be added as a new sub-clause—

Any debtor making an application under section 10 shall deposit with his application a sum equivalent to 10 per cent. of the amount due from him. If this is not done the application shall be rejected.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 11 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 12.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General) : I beg to move—

That the following proviso be added to sub-clause (1) of clause 12—

Provided that the Board may at any time dismiss the application, if, for reasons to be stated in writing, it does not consider it desirable to attempt to effect a settlement between the debtor and the creditors.

There are two possibilities under which this provision can be made use of and which show how important this provision is. In the first place we have provided for verification of the applications. Supposing the verification shows that statements are made in the application which are false, the only thing that can be done is that the board has discretion to prosecute the debtor under the proper sections of the Indian Penal Code. It is not obligatory on the boards to prosecute the debtor : they may prosecute him or they may not prosecute him. However that is quite a different matter. But what would be the effect on the proceedings pending before the board ?

Another possible case in which this provision will be useful is that when there has been a collusive transfer, only a short time before the application is put in, of the property belonging to the debtor in favour of a relation in order to defraud the creditor. The Insolvency Act makes a clear provision for cases of this kind. The insolvency petition is rejected. But what would be the consequence here if the board is not given any power of dismissal. The only power that has been given to stop proceedings is in cases in which the creditor or debtor does not show proper diligence in dealing with the proceedings. Where the debtor puts in a statement which is false or where he makes a collusive transfer of property shortly before the application is put in what has the board to do ? The board cannot dismiss the application. Such debtors and such creditors who are guilty of this kind of fraud should certainly be deprived of the privilege of appearing before the conciliation board and claiming those advantages which the conciliation board gives. I believe I have made the case quite obvious and I hope that the Council will accept this amendment with the support of the official benches.

Mr. President : New clause proposed—

The following proviso be added to sub-clause (1) of clause 12—

Provided that the Board may at any time dismiss the application, if, for reasons to be stated in writing, it does not consider it desirable to attempt to effect a settlement between the debtor and the creditors.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : This amendment reproduces what was in the original Bill as clause 12, but which was omitted in the select committee by a majority. It also finds a place in section 7 of the Central Provinces Act. I do not wish to add to the reasons which have been given by Raja Sahib in support of this amendment. If you are copying any section of another Act, you ought to copy it in its entirety unless there are some special reasons for the change. By taking away this power of dismissal from the conciliation boards you are making them useless, in fact wiping them out of existence except as instruments of debtor's will.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): As the House is doubtless aware this proviso was in the original draft of the Bill. It was to my mind a very wholesome proviso indeed as it gave conciliation boards powers which courts to a certain extent enjoy and which in my opinion they were in need of, and the Government benches will support this amendment.

Mr. President: The question is—

That the following proviso be added to sub-clause (1) of clause 12—

Provided that the Board may at any time dismiss the application, if, for reasons to be stated in writing, it does not consider it desirable to attempt to effect a settlement between the debtor and the creditors.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President: The question is—

That clause 12 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 13.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 13, sub-clause (1), for the words 'on the date fixed' the following words be substituted—

If after examining the debtor the Board is of opinion that it is desirable to effect a settlement between him and his creditors.

After the last amendment has been accepted it is necessary to insert in clause 13 some such provision as the one I now propose. It found a place in the original Bill and it is practically in effect the amendment which has already been accepted by the House.

Mr. President: Does not the honourable member wish to move the amendment?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Our present clause 13 corresponds to the old clause 12 and if my amendment is passed, clause 13 will read—

(1) If, after examining the debtor the Board is of opinion that it is desirable to effect a settlement between him and his creditors it shall publish—

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan: How does it come in? It is again out of place. If this amendment is carried, then the clause will become meaningless.

Mr. President: But the inconsistency in the two amendments is apparent. In the amendment which has just been passed the words are—

Provided that the Board may at any time dismiss the application if, for reasons to be stated in writing, it does not consider it desirable to attempt to effect a settlement between the debtor and his creditors.

while here the amendment reads:—

If after examining the debtor the Board is of opinion that it is desirable to effect a settlement between him and his creditors.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I am asking the House to restore what was in the original Bill. The original Bill contained the proviso which the Council has just passed. The original Bill also contained these words. If the present amendment is inconsistent, then both the Central Provinces Act and the original Government proposal were inconsistent, which I submit, is not the case. Besides, I am introducing the examination of the debtor, that is, the conciliation board should further satisfy itself that it is desirable to effect a settlement. There is nothing inconsistent.

Mr. President : What I meant to say was that this amendment is covered by the previous one which has just been passed.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : In a way it is ; not in all its provisions ; but to a great extent it is covered. These words were omitted from clause 12 because of the omission of the proviso to clause 11. They practically stand or fall together.

Mr. President : If the honourable members do not feel that this proviso is covered by the one which has just been passed, I have no objection to its being discussed.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Section 12 provides that the board may at any time dismiss the application. After the date has been fixed, the present amendment provides, the debtor should be examined and if as a result of the examination they do not consider it desirable to proceed, they need not proceed.

Mr. President : May I take it that under the previous clause if a board after examining the debtor is of opinion that the application should not be proceeded with, it will not be entitled to act ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : In the previous clause examination of the debtor does not come in at all. What I am emphasising is that after the application has been put in and the date has been fixed, the conciliation boards shall examine the debtor and if after examining the debtor they come to the conclusion that it is not desirable to proceed, then they need not proceed.

Mr. President : I have already expressed the opinion that this sub-clause is entirely covered by the previous clause ; but if the lawyer members and the member in charge of the Bill feel that it is not covered, I will have no objection to its being discussed and passed.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : If the board is of opinion that it is desirable to effect a settlement—

Mr. President : But the words 'at any time' in the previous clause do not leave any possible doubt in my mind that even after the examination of the debtor the board has power.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I do not for a moment doubt that once power has been given it can be exercised at any stage, but my amendment will give a direction to the board to proceed in a particular manner. There is absolutely no inconsistency in it.

Mr. President : I concede that instead of calling it inconsistent I should have said that the previous clause covers this amendment.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The entire amendment is not covered by the previous clause; a portion of it may be covered, but the draft can be improved. I am merely suggesting that sections 7 and 8 of the Central Provinces Act contain both the provisions, the one which has been passed and the one which I am suggesting now. They would correspond with our sections 12 and 13.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 13, sub-clause (1), for the words "on the date fixed" the following words be substituted—

If after examining the debtor the Board is of opinion that it is desirable to effect a settlement between him and his creditors

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): To my mind, as you have been pleased to remark, this proviso is redundant; of course, there is some slight difference. If you read the two provisions together—for instance, the proviso that was proposed by Raja Sahib and adopted by the House just now and the proposed amendment—you will see that reasons are to be recorded as already passed by the house. According to the amendment now proposed, after the debtor is examined, process may not issue. And herein lies the difference and that is perhaps the hidden meaning why it is being pressed. Here the board need not record the reasons, they need not dismiss the application at that stage, they might keep it pending, they might ask the debtor to do some act, they might ask the creditor to do some other act. The object of this new proviso is that when a debtor is examined it is not obligatory upon the conciliation board to record any reasons for the purpose of dismissal. They may keep it pending and that without recording any reasons. If you retain it you will be going a step further and giving the conciliation boards still more power. To my mind there is some difference and it is for the House to decide whether they are going to keep it or not. But it must be conceded that there is some difference between the two provisos. The meanings are quite different.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Medhi Khan (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural): There is no doubt that the conciliation board can proceed with the application, but then here there is no direction to the conciliation board what to do. Therefore there is no objection if this proviso is accepted, but in a different language. The language now used leaves much to be desired. It says that if the board thinks it desirable. There is no question of desirability or otherwise. The language should be to the effect that if after examining the debtor the application is not dismissed, then the court will publish a notice and so on.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: What does the Leader of the Unionist Party say?

Mr. President: The question is—

That in clause 13, sub-clause (1), for the words 'on the date fixed' the following words be substituted—

If after examining the debtor the Board is of opinion that it is desirable to effect a settlement between him and his creditors.

The motion was lost.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): Sir, I beg to move—

That in the proviso to sub-clause (2) of clause 13 for the words 'if the Board has ceased to exist' the following shall be substituted—

if no Board is vested with jurisdiction by the Local Government.

This amendment is really consequential on the new clause 8 (4) which the House has accepted.

Mr. President: The question is—

That in the proviso to sub-clause (2) of clause 13 for the words 'if the Board has ceased to exist' the following shall be substituted—

if no Board is vested with jurisdiction by the Local Government.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 13, proviso to sub-clause (2), line 5, for the word 'and' occurring between the words 'him' and 'that' the word 'or' be substituted.

The proviso as in the Bill reads—

Provided that if a creditor proves to the satisfaction of the Board, or, if the Board has ceased to exist, to the satisfaction of a civil court, that the notice was not served on him and that he had no knowledge of its publication, the Board or court may revive the debt.

This proviso as it is worded is really harsh and lays a double burden on the person to prove two things, namely, that the notice was not served on him and secondly that he had no knowledge of it. The service of notice may include one of two things. It may be a personal service or it may be a service, for instance, in the manner provided for in order 5, Rule XX of the Civil Procedure Code. In that case although the law would say that a notice has been served upon certain persons because of the substituted service, yet the persons concerned may have no knowledge of it whatsoever. It will be very difficult for a person to prove the negative. It will, therefore, be but fair and proper that the word "and" should be substituted by the word "or" which would mean that a person would be debarred from reviving his debt if the notice was served on him or if he had knowledge of the proceedings before the conciliation board. I hope the House would see its way to accept this amendment.

Mr. President: The question is—

That in clause 13, proviso to sub-clause (2), line 5, for the word 'and' occurring between the words 'him' and 'that,' the word 'or' be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President: The question is—

That clause 13 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 14.

Mr. President: The question is—

That clause 14 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clauses 15 and 16.

Mr. President: The question is—

That clauses 15 and 16 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 17.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 17, sub-clause (1) for the words 'or any of the creditors' the words 'creditors to whom not less than 60 per cent. of the total amount of the debt is due' be substituted.

In clause 17 the select committee made one of the most fundamental changes with respect to the procedure of the conciliation board. The original

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Bill provided in clause 16 as follows :—

If the debtor and creditors to whom not less than sixty per cent. of the total amount of the debtor's debt are due come to an amicable settlement, the Board shall forthwith reduce such settlement to writing in the form of an agreement setting forth the amounts payable to each creditor and the manner in which and the times at which they are to be paid.

Clause 17 of the present Bill as it has emerged from the select committee provides—

If the debtor and all or any of the creditors come to an amicable settlement, the Board shall forthwith reduce such settlement to writing in the form of an agreement setting forth the amounts payable to each creditor and the manner in which and the times at which they are to be paid.

Sub-clause (2) of clause 17 provides—

An agreement thus made shall take effect as if it were a decree of a civil court having jurisdictions in the area.

Thus it will be observed that the entire basis of the proceedings of conciliation has been changed. I may submit again that this change was effected by the votes of a majority against the opinion of the minority supported by the official members in the select committee. By this change, these provisions cease to be a procedure for conciliation and become a procedure for spoliation in as much as it is not necessary that the general body of creditors should agree. All that is necessary is to get one creditor to agree to the settlement and if that is done, then the agreement must be given effect to even though the conciliation board acting unanimously thinks that the arrangement is not fair. The effect of this change in the law effected by the select committee would be that a debtor in collusion with one creditor would be able to deprive the entire body of creditors of any chance of recovering their dues.

Mr. President : How ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It would happen like this. Supposing a debtor is quite well off and is able to repay his debts. A suit is filed against him and a decree is obtained by the creditor. The decree holder wishes to execute the decree. The debtor will put in an application before the conciliation board. The effect of that will be to stay the execution of the decree. After the decree has been stayed, the judgment creditor as well as other creditors will be given notice. They all come and, let us assume, protest against the application of the debtor. Now, suppose the debtor colludes with one of the friendly creditors and proposes to give him, or rather agrees to give him his entire property in lieu of the settled amount. It is also possible, very probable, that the debtor will have in such a case concealed his other assets or transferred them to his son or daughter or any other near relative, but that may, for the time being, be left out of consideration. Now the creditor who colludes with the debtor will assert that he has come to an agreement with the debtor, that he will take for instance the entire property of the debtor in lieu of the sum due, on a lease for twenty years. The other creditors will say that this should not be done. But the conciliation board will have no option but to register the settlement arrived at between the debtor and colluding creditor and transfer to him the available assets. Even if all the other creditors protest and even if all the members of the conciliation board unanimously consider that this is a dishonest arrangement, they cannot interfere. This clause provides that as soon as an arrangement is entered into the conciliation board has no option but to give effect to it and execute it as if it were a decree of a civil court. The result of substituting "all or any of the creditors" for sixty per cent. of the creditors is to substitute the judgment of one creditor which in fact will invariably be the decision of the debtor for the general sense of the entire body of creditors or of a majority of them. This provision will deprive all the other creditors of all remedies against the debtor. That is why I submit that this is one of the most revolutionary changes effected by the select committee. In the Central Provinces Act instead of 60 per cent. they have put down 40 per cent. (An honourable member: When was that Act passed?) Last year. In the original Bill of the Central Provinces 60 per cent. of the creditors was considered necessary, but when the provision came up for consideration the legislature reduced it to 40 per cent.

On general grounds also it appears reasonable that when there is conciliation there should be give and take from both sides. On the one hand, as far as the debtor is concerned, you give him absolute discretion to refuse the compromise. Thus, if all the creditors combine together and ask unanimously that they may be given two annas in the rupee and the conciliation board thinks that the request is a reasonable proposal, the debtor can refuse to consent to that compromise. There is no power to compel the debtor to accept this compromise nor have the conciliation boards any power to give effect to any proposal which they consider reasonable. Thus the entire machinery of the conciliation board is made subservient to the will of the debtor. On the other hand all the creditors are not taken into consideration. At one time it was thought that instead of 60 per cent. Government ought to substitute all the creditors. If you look up the opinions which were published before the Bill went to the select committee it will be found that a fairly influential section of opinion including the opinion of certain officials was in favour of substituting "all" for "sixty per cent." Now, of course, that is gone. What I now submit is that if conciliation is wanted, that necessarily implies that there is a fair amount of consensus of opinion, of persons who are affected by it and who accept the conciliation.

After all, if nothing is to be had from a debtor, the creditors are not fools.

3 P. M.

Therefore, it is very necessary, if you want to make these conciliation boards effective or work with any sense of fairness or equity, that you must not make them subservient to the wish of the debtor altogether. If you permit conciliation with one creditor to be treated as a decree, you practically make all the other creditors subservient to the will of the debtor because it is the easiest thing in the world for a debtor to get hold of one creditor who would collude and accept most unreasonable terms. I, therefore, move my amendment.

Mr. President: Clause under discussion, amendment moved—

That in clause 17, sub-clause (1) for the words "or any of the creditors" the words "creditors to whom not less than 60 per cent. of the total amount of the debt is due" be substituted.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General): I support this amendment. There is an amendment standing in my name to clause 19 which is much in the same words as the amendment just moved by my friend to the right. I find that Government is also not satisfied with the change made by the majority of the members of the select committee in the original draft, but they have adhered to the old draft and they have introduced some change in order to accommodate and pacify some of the rural members. What I wish to point out is this. At the present stage it must be necessary to point out that this question of the proportion of the debt which is going to be settled ought to be made part of clause 17 rather than of clause 19. If the major portion of the debt is settled then the creditors of the minor portion are to be compelled to accept that settlement and if they refuse to do so, there are certain consequences which follow, namely, in case they bring a civil suit they will not be allowed costs and if they get a decree they will not be allowed interest at more than 6 per cent. These are the consequences involved ; but these consequences should be made to follow where the creditors of the smaller proportion are recusant ; but not where the creditors of a larger proportion are not satisfied. What I wish to explain is this ; that the change which Government propose in clause 19 ought to be made in clause 17. Clause 17 is to the effect that " If the debtor and all or any of the creditors come to an amicable settlement, the Board shall forthwith reduce such settlement to writing in the form of an agreement setting forth the amounts payable to each creditor " and so on. I say that according to the terms of clause 19 which Government is going to propose if only one creditor accepts the settlement, there is practically no settlement. Therefore that proportion which Government wishes to fix ought to come in clause 17 and this was the previous arrangement. In the original clause 16 the very first reference to settlement was made and the proportions were fixed. Surely the creditors of the major portion of the debt should be reconciled before other creditors can be compelled to the consequences which their refusal involves. With these words I support Mr. Mukand Lal Puri's amendment.

[D. B. Raja Narendra Nath.]

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): Sir, the honourable member who has just spoken urges that the proportion of creditors to a settlement should be fixed in clause 17 rather than in clause 19. He pointed out that in the original draft of the Bill this proportion was inserted in clause 17, but that now the Government have proposed an amendment to clause 19 so as to provide for a definite percentage of creditors in that clause. As explained, the reason for Government's attitude in the matter is this. When the select committee omitted the 60 per cent., originally inserted in clause 17, their reason was that it was unwise to prevent a single creditor from coming to an agreement with the debtor and that conciliation boards should help, as far as they possibly could, all or any of the creditors to come to an agreement with the debtor. That was a very cogent argument and after considering this argument Government decided that they would not try to re-insert the proportion in clause 17 so that as this clause stands any number of creditors may come to an agreement with the debtor and have their agreement registered by the conciliation board. That, I think, is quite a right and fair provision. But the penalties attached to the refusal to join an agreement will be found in clause 19 and these are the penalties attached either to creditors whose debts have been certificated or to creditors who have been foolish enough to advance money after the agreement has been concluded. In the case of the latter,

I do not think they deserve any consideration at all, because what they do they do with their eyes open. In the case of the former, certification is a very serious penalty indeed and the Government do not think that any loophole for fraudulent collusion should be left in cases in which the severe penalties entered in clause 19 (3) still operate and for that reason the Government have proposed an amendment to clause 19 and I should say, with all the seriousness that I can possibly command, that Government mean to insist, as far as they possibly can, on this amendment.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The Honourable the Finance Member had been pleased to suggest that it is unwise to prevent any creditor from coming to terms with his debtor and it was with that object that they did not object to the omission of the 60 per cent. of creditors and the substitution in their place of one creditor. But he says that where the question of penalties comes, where as a result of this compromise other creditors are likely to be penalised, they would insist upon a provision preventing the imposition of the penalty unless 40 per cent. or a certain percentage of the creditors have agreed to that settlement. I consider the attitude of the Government in this respect to be very reasonable and if the Honourable the Finance Member could assure himself that as a result of a compromise between one creditor and one debtor, other creditors will not be penalised in any way, I will certainly not object to the amendment that he proposes. But I respectfully submit that this is not the effect of the legislation to which the Government is giving its concurrence. The effect of the legislation to which the Government is now lending its support is that the other creditors, howsoever reasonable their claims, howsoever proper their point of view, stand to be penalised. The Honourable the Finance Member has not paid sufficient attention to the other provisions of the Bill which penalise other creditors by this agreement. The first provision to which I wish to draw his attention is the provision that "an agreement thus made shall take effect as if it were a decree of a civil court having jurisdiction in the area." Now, if the agreement was only this: "Rs. 100 are due from him and I agree to take Rs. 25" and if a decree were passed to that effect no other creditor will be penalised, such an agreement and a decree will not penalise any other creditor. But I am not quite sure if the decree which is contemplated by sub-clause (2) of clause 19 is only a simple money decree of that kind and is not intended to include transfer of property of that debtor to his creditor. Supposing, instead of saying that he accepted Rs. 25 or Rs. 10 for the Rs. 100 due to him, an agreement were entered into by which the debtor's land is transferred either for ever or for twenty years in lieu of the debts due to this single creditor, will the conciliation board be bound to pass a decree of that type or not? If the conciliation board is not permitted to pass a decree of that type, but merely a decree of scaling down the debt, or a simple money decree it would not harm other creditors. But if it involves the transfer of the property of the debtor to the creditor, then by this agreement between one creditor and one debtor you penalise all the other creditors beyond any possibility of relief. A member wishes to know how this will be done. You have done it in this manner. There is another provision in the Bill which lays down that "all proceedings against the debtor or his estate shall be stayed during the continuance of the proceedings of the conciliation boards." All this time, while the proceedings before the board continue, the hands of other creditors are tied. They cannot sue him, they cannot execute decrees against him and as soon as their hands are free, there is a decree of a civil court in existence by which the property of their debtor has been alienated in favour of another creditor, which decree, again, according to another provision in the Bill is not liable to be attacked in any further civil proceedings. A decree of an ordinary civil court, of even the Privy Council can be attacked on the ground of fraud or that it has been collusively obtained, or that it has been obtained with a view to defraud the creditor or that it is a decree which comes within the purview of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, but in the case of a decree obtained under sub-clause 2 of clause 19, the courts are debarred from questioning the decree. Therefore I say if the object of the Government is, as the Honourable Finance Member was pleased to say, not to penalize other creditors unless a certain percentage of the creditors consider the agreement to be reasonable, the Government has not been able to achieve its object. I earnestly ask the Government to reconsider their position in this matter whether they feel sure of the interpretation of the provisions which they are asking this House to enact that other creditors are not likely to be penalized by any collusive settlement which would be treated as a decree under sub-clause (2) of clause 19. I would have absolutely no grievance if they are right in their interpretation. I would request the Honourable the Finance Member to consider with the assistance of the Legal Remembrancer this question and if he comes to the conclusion, as he would, that the other creditors would be penalized, then I submit the Government should accept this amendment and restore the provision which existed in the original Bill and which find a place in the Central Provinces Act also.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

The [Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, I have listened very carefully to what the honourable member has just said, but I remain of the same opinion still. We cannot possibly assume that our conciliation boards are going to be composed of fools who will not see through the collusive tactics described by him. I still maintain that where penalties are concerned Government are providing that a sufficient proportion of creditors should agree before any penalty can come into operation.

Mr. President : Question is—

That in clause 17, sub-clause (1) for the words 'or any of the creditors' the words 'creditors to whom not less than 60 per cent. of the total amount of the debt is due' be substituted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : Sir, I beg to move that—

That in the proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 17 the word 'unanimously' be omitted.

The clause as originally proposed by the Government did not contain the word 'unanimously' and it has been added by the select committee. You would kindly see that this proviso to section 17 gives jurisdiction to the boards to refuse to authenticate the agreement. This is the only occasion on which a board may refuse to recognize the agreement. I say that the boards have no power to refuse to accept the agreement on any ground except what is given in this proviso. Now, there is no reason why, if all the other decisions of the boards have to be by majority, this decision alone should 'be 'unanimously'. Why do you even allow the conciliation boards to function? If they have to come to a decision against the debtor they must be unanimous, but if they have to come to a decision against the creditor, or if they have to come to some other decision, they may act by majority. Now, what is the reason, I wish to know, for putting in the word 'unanimously'? The proviso reads as follows:—

Provided that if the Board is unanimously of the opinion that the period fixed for payment is excessive, the Board may refuse to authenticate the agreement. The Board shall also pass an order dismissing the application so far as it relates to the creditors who have not come to an amicable settlement.

Therefore I submit that the word 'unanimously' should be omitted. I wish to point out that except in the case where the board considers the period of payment to be excessive, they have no jurisdiction to refuse, but they have to authenticate an agreement which has been arrived at between the debtor and even one of his creditors. I submit that, howsoever unfair the proposal may be, the agreement has to be authenticated. Supposing one debtor agrees with the creditor to sell his entire property to him in lieu of the fact that he owes some debt, the conciliation board has no power to refuse because the agreement has been arrived at, although that might work to the entire expropriation of the other creditors. They have been given power only to refuse to authenticate when the instalments fixed are such which in their opinion are not fair. When you have given such limited jurisdiction to the conciliation boards to interfere with an agreement when the decision is to be against the debtor, is it fair to couple it with provisions that decision will only be binding upon them if all the members agree. This is expressing a distrust in the conciliation boards (hear, hear).

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in the proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 17 the word 'unanimously' be omitted.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, I entirely agree with the honourable member who has just spoken in regard to this matter. I do not think we should retain this word 'unanimously.'

Mr. President : Question is—

"That in the proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 17 the word 'unanimously' be omitted."

The motion was carried.

(At this stage Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath wanted to move his amendment.)

Mr. President : The honourable member's amendment does not appear to be in order.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I wish to submit that the Council has changed the provisions of the Insolvency Act which is an Act of the Imperial Legislature without any reference to the Government of India. The Government of India agreed to one thousand rupees but the select committee raised it to fifteen hundred and then the Council raised it to two thousand by mutual agreement. I hope the same indulgence will be shown to me.

Mr. President : It goes beyond the clause as well as the Bill. The Bill does not deal with execution of decrees.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The sub-clause says that the agreement will take effect as if it were a decree of a civil court.

Mr. President : It may be so, but the passing of a decree is different from its execution.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Is it not within the province of the Council to lay down how the execution should be made or at least to make a specific provision about it?

Mr. President : Government of India's sanction is a separate matter. My objection is that the amendment of the honourable member goes beyond the clause and the Bill.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I am quite convinced that the Bill is a measure for the relief of indebtedness and it is for bringing about a settlement between a creditor and a debtor. The creditors will be easily won over and will come round to settle if this provision is allowed to remain. I do not think that the conciliation boards will find it an easy work if there is no prospect of the recovery of the amount which is agreed between the parties.

Mr. President : I agree but that can be done by a separate Bill.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I am dealing with that part of the Bill which deals with conciliation boards and it is very important to make this amendment.

Mr. President : The honourable member's amendment does not relate to decrees but to the execution of decrees.

Mr. Labh Singh : Execution with reference to a decree.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : The amendment appears to be perfectly in order. The select committee and the Government have said that the agreement should be treated as a decree of a civil court. Can anybody be prevented from suggesting further modifications of the proposals of the Government? Are the proposals of the Government final on that point that it has to have one effect and no other? It may have a full effect or a modified effect. Further, I want to appeal to the Chair that there is one very strong argument in favour of the amendment. After all the Chair need not rule it out of order because I know the amendment will not be accepted. Let me, therefore, have the satisfaction of saying what I want to say.

Mr. President : I am simply doubtful. That is all.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : There will be no difference practically if I am allowed to move my amendment. I know I am putting a ball on a dome. It will slip down.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Apart from the merits of the point raised by him, I may remind the honourable Raja Sahib that Government has given an undertaking, not once but repeatedly and definitely, that they will not allow the Land Alienation Act to be restricted or extended in its scope. Therefore even if the amendment is ruled in order, Government will not and cannot support it.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : It will simply relieve my conscience and it will not be of any practical consequence to the Bill. I know its fate but if you will allow me I shall just say a few words.

Mr. J. D. Anderson : I have given my best consideration to this question and frankly I find it of such difficulty that I am not prepared at the moment to express a definite opinion. I regret my inability.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I respectfully suggest that the honourable member may be allowed to move his amendment.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General)
I move—

That in clause 17, sub-clause (2), the following words be added at the end :—

and shall be executed regardless of the provisions of section 16 of the Land Alienation Act.

There is no need of attempting a settlement if that settlement is not to be followed by payment. In every other province there are provisions as to how the final decree of the conciliation board will be executed. In the Central Provinces Act which our Government is following there is a clear provision that the amount which will eventually be found due from the debtor will be realised as Government revenue. That is to say in realising the dues there will be no exemption of any particular kind of property from sale. Then, we have the example set by the Indian States. We received a very big pamphlet from Bhawnagar where there was a lengthy report submitted by the committee and it was stated that creditors readily accepted reduction of their debts and reduction of their interest when money was to be paid in a lump sum, either the State agreeing to pay or the debtor paying it. We need not go very far to look for instances in point. In Kapurthala State in which a Land Alienation Bill has been recently introduced on the model of the Punjab Act there is a regulation issued by the Maharaja that all old debts are guaranteed by the State and will be paid out of State funds, the amount paid being recovered by the State from the debtors as taqavi. There must be some means of payment. We have been hearing of land mortgage banks. But nothing has yet come to the surface. We do not know whether it is possible to introduce land mortgage banks in a province like ours where all land is exempted from sale. I do not see how land mortgage banks will be in a position to play the part of the agriculturist money-lenders who can easily take their neighbours' land without recourse to a court. I do not know whether a land mortgage bank as an incorporated body will be treated as a member of an agricultural tribe or of a non-agricultural tribe. It seems to me that it will be impossible to treat land mortgage banks and companies which are formed with the object of promoting land mortgages as members of an agricultural tribe. With regard to co-operative societies I remind the Council of the valuable speech made by my honourable friend, Chaudhri Riasat Ali from Gujranwala. He has related to us how difficult it is to get money out of co-operative societies, how onerous are the conditions and how little the banks differed from ordinary money-lenders. Where then will the money come from? If the decree is passed it will merely be a blank paper. In order to achieve the object with which conciliation boards are proposed to be instituted there must be some provision for payment and there must be some way found when the amount of money due by the creditor is finally paid, or that amount is guaranteed to the creditor and is paid to him. Without this I think I can prophesy that the conciliation boards will either prove to be instruments of oppression or they will fail altogether in their duty and Government will not be in a position to try the experiment in more than one area.

[D. B. Raja Narendra Nath.]

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (2) of clause 17 the following words be added at the end—and shall be executed regardless of the provisions of section 16 of the Land Alienation Act.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram South-east Rohtak, Non-Muhammadan, Rural : I stand here as a representative of very small landowners. Rohtak is essentially a district with small holdings. And if the amendment which has been moved by Raja Sahib were to be adopted I am absolutely sure that within a year 80 per cent. of these small landowners would be expropriated and conditions resembling those in Oudh would be reproduced in the Punjab. I do not wish that Government should help in the concentration of all lands in the hands of a few and make the present landowners landless. The effect of the amendment moved by Raja Sahib cannot but be that of rendering the small landholder entirely landless. The amendment has been held to be in order by the Chair. Otherwise I feel that it is really inconsistent with the object of the Bill. This Bill was introduced in order to afford relief to the debtor, not to despoil him of the property of which he is now possessed. That will be adding to his burden, not taking anything off his shoulders. Anyway now that the amendment has been held to be in order I am opposing it on its merits. If we had been writing on a clean slate perhaps things might have been different. The instance of the Central Provinces has been quoted, but as I have stated over and over again, conditions in the Central Provinces and conditions in the United Provinces and those in Bengal are entirely different from those which prevail in the Punjab. (An honourable member : In what way ?) The details have been given by me more than once, at least twice, and I will not be drawn into a repetition of those details. Why, my honourable friend himself knows quite well that conditions are very, very different in the Punjab to those that prevail either in the Central Provinces or in the United Provinces. (An honourable member : How does that affect the point ?) One very great difference is that there is no Land Alienation Act in the Central Provinces. They had a clean slate and they wrote whatever they pleased on it. Here you have a legislation which has been on the Statute Book for the last 34 years and has been hailed as the magna charta of the landowning classes and in respect of which in this very House solemn declarations have been made by Government at least three times that Government is not going either to restrict or extend its scope. That makes a very big difference between conditions here and conditions in the Central Provinces. Therefore I oppose this amendment with all the vigour I can command.

The execution stage is not reached under this section and, therefore, execution might be left to take care of itself in civil courts. The business of the conciliation boards is to try to secure an amicable settlement between creditors and debtors and if there is an amicable settlement, to recognise it as a decree and leave it there. If there is no agreement between the creditor and the debtor then the conciliation board has to see whether reasonable offer has been made by a debtor to the creditors and if a reasonable offer has been made and that reasonable offer has been rejected by creditors then it is for the conciliation boards to certify those debts. After the board has done one of these two things it becomes functus officio. Therefore, I oppose this amendment.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq (Hoshiarpur-cum-Ludhiana, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): I am really surprised to see that Raja Sahib has thought it fit to move an amendment like the one now before the House. In fact it shows that the honourable mover has not studied the present day conditions of this province. In his speech he has referred to Kapurthala State but he did not care to see that the conditions prevailing in that State are entirely different from those obtaining in this province. For years together the debtor class in the State has been pressing the Government to relieve them of their indebtedness but their bewailings have proved a cry in the wilderness. When all their attempts failed they decided that their debts should be wiped off and in case that was not done they should either give up their profession or fight out issues both with the Government and the sahuksars till their object was attained. Besides they decided not to co-operate with sahuksars who had come to possess their lands. People from British territory now go there and till lands in possession of sahuksars but the people of the State refuse to work for them.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Is the honourable member in order in referring to the administration of States in friendly relations with India?

Mr. President: Mere reference is not objectionable.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq: I was submitting that we should not try to create in this province conditions similar to those obtaining in the State. The Bill, in whatever form it may be passed into law, would not help the sahuksars in realising their debts. If Government take steps to help the sahuksars in realising their debts they will be traversing on delicate grounds. Leaving aside the interest, the zamindars cannot pay up even the principal. In fact they are unable to pay their debts. One hundred rupees borrowed ten years ago are only as good as twenty-five rupees to-day. The honourable member for Industry has rightly remarked that in these days only 25 per cent. decrees granted by courts are with great difficulty executed. Five years ago 393 persons were sent to jail for non-payment of land revenue and during the last three years the number of such persons amounted to 1,000. What do these things indicate? They clearly indicate that matters are going from bad to worse and that we should, therefore, consider the matter from a purely non-communal point of view. Raja Sahib has moved this amendment with a view to benefit a particular class of people but he has ignored the fact that in the Punjab there are already thirteen districts where the average holding of a zamindar is uneconomic.

Mr. President: What is the honourable member driving at?

Chaudhri Afzal Haq: I am submitting that when the zamindars of these districts already cannot make their two ends meet, any attempts at realising their debts are not likely to succeed. (Honourable members: Please finish soon). With these words I oppose the amendment.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Sir, I move—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : If expropriation were to justify repudiation of debts there ought to be no insolvency procedure. Why is insolvency allowed in civilised countries? The civilised countries allow insolvency in the sense that if the debts have become too heavy and if the property of the debtor is not sufficient to cover the debt, the debtor comes to court and says: Here is all my property before you, you settle the matter. Expropriation is no justification for the repudiation of debts. (Interruption) I do not consider the Land Alienation Act to be sacrosanct. I do not subscribe to the policy which underlies the law in the manner in which my friends do and, therefore, it is no use saying that the Land Alienation Act is attacked. It is a human measure and like all other human acts, as human beings are fallible, it is liable to be attacked.

Then in season and out of season I have heard the remark, in fact ad nauseum that conditions of this province owing to the Land Alienation Act are different from the conditions of the other provinces and, therefore, what holds good in other provinces need not be adopted. Why do you enact this law? Why are you afraid of not doing anything which will not meet the demands of the debtors? You want a measure for the relief of debtors because other provinces have it. Then follow the other provinces in every respect. I know, as I said at the very beginning, that this amendment is not likely to be accepted but I moved it to relieve my own conscience. With these words I resume my seat.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 17, sub-clause (2), the following words be added at the end:—

“ and shall be executed regardless of the provisions of section 16 of the Land Alienation Act.”

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 17 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

New clause.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the following be added after clause 17—

“The board shall in all cases allow a secured creditor to realise his dues from the security and shall only treat him as a creditor for the purposes of this part for any amount due in excess of the value of the security.”

This amendment is almost self-explanatory and I am not going to waste the time of the House in lengthy argument. I would only add that since the House has been pleased to endow the conciliation boards with a jurisdiction extending over Rs. 10,000 or even amounts exceeding that figure and also to extend the scope of these boards to urban areas, it is but proper that a clause of this kind should be added. How unfair would it be that monies advanced on the security of property for the last, say, twenty years should be unsettled and creditors should be deprived of their security. This fact alone is sufficient to carry home the inequity of the law which is being adopted. I would only draw the attention of the House to the utter inequity involved in the matter and stop at that.

Mr. President : New clause proposed—

That the following be added after clause 17 :—

“The Board shall in all cases allow a secured creditor to realise his dues from the security and shall only treat him as a creditor for the purposes of this part for any amount due in excess of the value of the security.”

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : The Government cannot accept this amendment, partly because of its wording. The amendment says “the board shall in all cases allow a secured creditor.” What business has the board to allow anything ? The business of the board is to register the agreement which has been come to between various parties. It passes no decree, it does not say that people shall do this or may do this, or shall not do this or may not do this. Therefore the form of this amendment seems to be wrong. Its intention seems to me to be already served by the drafting of the Bill and I think that a secured creditor is in a perfectly safe position. I admit that this is a question on which the Legal Remembrancer is much more competent to speak than I, but so far as I am aware the law is this. From clause 19 (8) it will be observed that a secured creditor is not prevented even by a certificate from suing in a civil court. By clause 20 (a) (i) it is true that civil courts may not question the validity of any procedure or the legality of any agreement made under this Act, but I take it that it does not in any way affect the rights of a third party who is not a party to an agreement made under section 17. Therefore the secured creditor in accordance with the wording of clause 19 is entitled to come into court to enforce his claim against the security. I am further informed that it does not matter in law whether a mortgage is merely a collateral mortgage or a mortgage with possession. On this subject I am considerably ignorant and I am open to correction. But I understand that the difference between collateral mortgage-ar-rahn—and mortgage with possession is purely incidental, that is to say, possession is simply an incident of a mortgage ; so that, while the mortgagee in possession can most obviously assert his rights against third parties, so, equally can a mortgagee with merely a collateral mortgage assert his rights against third parties. It seems to me therefore, if the law has been correctly explained to me, that the secured creditor will retain his secured position and there is no need to amend the Bill in order to make him safer.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following be added after clause 17 :—

“The Board shall in all cases allow a secured creditor to realise his dues from the security and shall only treat him as a creditor for the purposes of this part for any amount due in excess of the value of the security.”

The motion was lost.

Clause 18.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 18 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

New clause.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I beg to move—

That the following clause be added after clause 18—

If once an application has been made by a debtor and disposed of no second application shall lie within three years of the date of dismissal of the first application.

Honourable members will remember that the conciliation board is competent to dismiss applications only in very rare cases, only in cases where the board is satisfied that the application is not made in good faith. I propose this addition to the clause in order to provide against a debtor abusing his right to go to the conciliation board again and again after his application has once been dismissed. He should not be allowed to file another application within three years after his first application has been dismissed. The clause is intended as a safeguard against frivolity.

Mr. President : New clause moved is—

If once an application has been made by a debtor and disposed of no second application shall lie within three years of the date of dismissal of the first application.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : If the honourable mover of the amendment will agree to make it 'two years' I think Government can accept it.

Mr. Labh Singh I accept the change suggested by Government as non-acceptance would mean the rejection of the amendment.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): I think the object of the Bill is to encourage people to seek the assistance of the conciliation boards. By fixing a time limit in this way, that is, by providing that no second application will lie within two or three years after the first is dismissed, we would be shutting the door of the conciliation board. Supposing to-day the creditors and the debtor cannot come to a settlement before the conciliation board, it is possible that after three or six months or a year the debtor by some fortuitous or other circumstance be in a position to come to some settlement with the creditors. He may be prepared to make a greater sacrifice and be prepared to offer better terms to the creditors. Would it not then be detrimental both to the creditors and the debtor if we fix this period of two or three years within which no second application to the board can lie? I think that by adopting the amendment we would rather be putting a block in the way of conciliation and I would, therefore, request the Honourable Finance Member to reconsider the Government position. There should be no obstacle put in the way of the creditors and the debtor coming to a settlement at any time. The amendment will not help either the debtor or the creditors. It will be an absolutely useless provision. I hope Government will, therefore, reconsider its position and oppose this amendment.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): I may perhaps reply to the honourable member from Sargodha even now. The position is this. As soon as an application is put before the conciliation board all pending suits are stayed. Now it would be possible for a fraudulent debtor to put in a succession of applications before the conciliation board and keep all civil suits from being heard for ever, unless we have some provision limiting the power to put in successive applications. In order to meet the point raised by the honourable member opposite we have fixed the limit within which no second application can be filed as short as possible. I think two years is a sufficiently short period.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East, Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural): There is just one thing to which I may draw the attention of Government members. We have passed the addition of a new clause to-day, to the effect that conciliation boards will be in a position to dismiss any application at any time they please. I fear the addition of this new clause has escaped the notice of honourable members and of the Government. Having invested conciliation boards with that power, is it reasonable to put any further obstacles in the way of an amicable settlement being arrived at before these boards? After all, if a debtor puts any further application and is unable to disclose any valid grounds, is there any reason to suppose that a conciliation board will accept that application? It can and will dismiss it at once. On that ground the addition of this clause becomes entirely uncalled for. Personally I feel that Government has not been able to take a comprehensive view of the Bill as a whole as it stands at present. Probably the attitude of the member in charge of the Bill is based upon his views of the Bill as it was before to-day. Having once inserted a clause that conciliation boards will have power to dismiss applications at any stage, the addition of the new clause now proposed becomes entirely redundant. (Interruption). There is just one thing I may be allowed to add to explain the true meaning of Government's attitude—

مردم کو نباید نار از قوت است

دعوی او به نیاز از حجت است

Government knows that by adding 20 or 25 of its own votes to the other side it is absolutely sure of a victory. But it ought to listen to reason. Probably it is on account of the weight of numbers on that side that the Government is not prepared to listen to reason.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang (Minister for Local Self-Government): One thing that seems to trouble the honourable member from Sargodha (Shaikh Abdul Ghani) is that if once the application of a debtor is dismissed he should not be prevented from going to the conciliation board if he likes after three months or six months when he comes to good fortune or wins some lottery or something of that sort. But I may point out that if he has a genuine case like that he can ask a creditor with whom he wants to settle to put in an application to the conciliation board. That will solve his difficulty. This power sought in the amendment is only against the debtor going to the conciliation board again and again.

Pir Akbar Ali (Ferozepore, Muhammadan, Rural): I may submit that if Government agrees to be neutral in this respect, the two parties can settle between themselves whether the period should be six months or one year. But if Government wants to interfere in this respect I think it would be impossible to have a compromise between the two sides. I, for my part, would submit that one year would be a fair period of interval.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: Will one year be acceptable?
The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: It is too short an interval and three years a bit too long. Two years is a fair compromise.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following clause be added after clause 18—

“ If once an application has been made by a debtor and disposed of no second application shall lie within two years of the date of dismissal of the first application.”

The Council divided: Ayes, 35 ; Noes, 28.

AYES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
Askwith, Mr. A. V.
Bansi Lal, Chandhri.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
Chetan Anand, Lala.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable Malik Sir.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.
Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.
Grindal, Mr. A. D.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.
Labb Chand, Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.
Labb Singh, Mr.

Latifi, Mr. A.
Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Mamraj Singh Chohan Kanwar.
Manohar Lal, Mr.
Marsden, Mr. P.
Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
Nur Elahi, Khan Bahadur Shaikh.
Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Ramji Das, Lala.
Roberts, Mr. W.
Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Capatin Sirdar Sir.

NOES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar.
Haibat Khan, Daha, Khan.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja.

Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani, Makhdumzada Sayad.
Muhammad Sarfaraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
Nurullah, Mian.
Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
Ujjal Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Zaman Mebdi Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.

Clause 19.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : I move :—

That to clause 19, sub-clause (1), the following words shall be added :—

Provided that the board shall not grant a certificate unless the board is satisfied that creditors to whom not less than forty per centum of the debtor's debts are owing have come to an amicable settlement with the debtor.

Sir, the reason for this amendment is, I think, fairly obvious. Clause 19 of the Bill contains very severe penalties indeed against creditors whose debts are certificated and these penalties should only apply under proper safeguards. The possibility of a collusive agreement was mentioned in connection with clause 17 of the Bill and while I think that conciliation boards will be on their guard against such things as collusive agreements, we must at the same time see that the penalties which are provided by our legislation shall not be liable to imposition in an unfair way. If a few creditors come to a collusive agreement with a debtor which might be an agreement of a very specious kind and which would look to the board to be a very fair and reasonable agreement, then the possibility, if not the probability, is that the board would consider that the creditors who had refused to join in a similar agreement were acting unfairly or unreasonably and would certify their debts. The only guarantee against such collusion is to provide that creditors to whom a sufficient percentage of the debtors' debts are owed shall join in the agreement. The percentage which Government originally provided was 60. After hearing what the select committee had to say on the subject, Government was ready to reduce this percentage somewhat and we are now prepared to accept 40 per cent. But I should make it very clear indeed that unless creditors representing 40 per cent. of the debts owing join in an agreement, Government can never consent to this process of certification without which I think the working of conciliation boards is going to be very difficult and if this amendment is not carried somehow or other, I very strongly doubt whether this Bill will ever become law. I am not saying this by way of threat but so that the position of the Government may be perfectly clear and members may act on that understanding.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved :

That to clause 19, sub-clause (1) the following words shall be added :—

Provided that the board shall not grant a certificate unless the board is satisfied that creditors to whom not less than forty per centum of the debtor's debts are owing have come to an amicable settlement with the debtor.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General) : Sir I beg to move :—

That in clause 19, sub-clause (1) the following be added :—

Provided that the board shall not grant a certificate unless the board is satisfied that creditors to whom not less than sixty per centum of the debtor's debts are owing have come to an amicable settlement with the debtor.

If penalties are going to be imposed, I think it is only fair that a major portion of the debt should be settled and creditors of only a minor portion should be penalized. That is the only argument that I have got to advance and I think that this is strong enough. The amendment which I propose is exactly a repetition of the provision as it existed in the original Bill.

[D. B. Raja Narendra Nath.]

If recusant creditors are going to be penalized creditors of a major portion of the debt must be settled with before the penal provision is enforced.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved :

That in clause 19, sub-clause (1), the following be added :—

Provided that the board shall not grant a certificate unless the board is satisfied that creditors to whom not less than 60 per cent. of the debtor's debts are owing have come to an amicable settlement with the debtor.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : In order to encourage the debtors and creditors to come to a settlement the present Bill provides two incentives. One is that if an agreement has been authenticated by a conciliation board it takes effect as a decree and when once it has taken effect as a decree the result is that any other decree that may be outstanding against the debtor or any decrees that may be obtained in a civil court at some future time will be deferred for the purpose of execution till the execution of the agreement which has been arrived at between a creditor and a debtor. The second incentive to bring the parties together is that under certain conditions a conciliation board will issue certificates in respect of certain debts. The conditions of issue of these certificates are that a debtor should have made an offer which would appeal to a conciliation board as a reasonable offer and that offer must have been rejected by creditors. In that event the conciliation board will proceed to issue certificates in respect of the debts owed to creditors who have refused to accept a fair offer. Now with these two incentives before them, creditors may be expected to come to a reasonable settlement with debtors. But if the force of either of these two incentives is weakened to the same extent the usefulness of the Bill will be reduced. In clause 17 a proviso has been added to the effect that if the period fixed in an agreement arrived at between a debtor and a creditor for payment of the money due is excessive in the opinion of the conciliation board the effect of the postponement of execution of decrees will not follow. Therefore one of the incentives has been definitely and deliberately weakened by the addition of this proviso here. As a result of this in the place of there being two incentives to induce a creditor to come to terms, there is now left only one and-a-half, one in full and the other weakened and diluted. Now a conciliation board may hold an ordinary settlement fixing a certain number of years for payment to be long, when it is really not long. A good deal will really depend upon the individuals who compose a conciliation board. The personal factor is really the determining factor in these matters. A chairman drawn from the central parts of the province may regard a period of even 4 or 5 years as unduly long for the payment of a debt of Rs. 1,000 while in the south-eastern districts this period will not at all be regarded as excessively long. There may be certain districts in which it is not customary among the creditors and debtors themselves to regard a period of ten years as excessive. Therefore if you empower conciliation boards to reject agreements arrived at amicably between debtors and creditors on the ground of a certain period being excessively long then there is a very serious danger of this legislation being thwarted unless the composition of boards is very satisfactory from the debtors' point of view. There is a real danger of this part of the Bill becoming nullified. Now, I can reasonably maintain that by giving this power we have deliberately and definitely weakened the incentive with regard to postponement of execution of decrees. The second incentive was, however, intact. It was that if a conciliation board certifies a debt then the creditor who refuses to accept a fair offer will lose his cost of suit and will not be able to claim interest from that date in excess of 6 per cent. We are going to weaken this incentive also by inserting the present clause that unless creditors to whom not less than 40 per cent. of debts are due come to a settlement with a debtor no certificate will be issued. By these two changes we shall have practically run through the wholesome provisions which Government originally meant to make for the effective functioning of these conciliation boards. I really fail to understand how a conciliation board is going to function at all if we insist upon this provision being inserted in the Bill. No less than 40 per cent. of the debts must be proved to have been owing to creditors who have come to a settlement. What will happen is this. A debtor will make an application before a conciliation board, notices will be issued to the creditors on the next day of hearing the debtor will be examined, the creditors will be examined, and then there would probably be a further date for the production of account books. The debtor will say I owe Rs. 50 to one of my creditors, Rs. 100 to another and Rs. 200 to a third. The non-consenting creditors in order to oust the jurisdiction of these conciliation boards will say, "No, he is wrong". The man to whom the debtor admits being indebted to the extent of Rs. 50 will say, that the debtor owes him Rs. 200, the man to whom the debtor admits he owes Rs. 100 will say "No, his debt is Rs. 500" and the third will say "No, his debt is Rs. 800." Now, will not the conciliation board have to decide first the amount of debts that are due to certain creditors against a particular debtor? And if you impose on your conciliation boards this huge task of finding out exactly the amounts due from a certain debtor to various creditors as a condition precedent, will it serve any useful purpose to institute these boards? They will have already undergone infinite trouble in ascertaining whether creditors to whom not less than 40 per cent. of the total debts are due have come to a settlement with the debtor. There may be a dispute between the creditor and the debtor as to the exact amount of debts owed to the creditor. What will happen then is, that in respect of each item the conciliation board will have to take evidence to be produced by both sides. And suppose at the end it comes to the conclusion that the condition precedent has not been fulfilled, all this trouble will have been undergone for nothing.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : One can provide for all this in the rules.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : In any case, conciliation boards will have to come to a definite conclusion as to what is the proportion of the debts of the creditors who have come to a settlement with a debtor. And that means infinite amount of waste of precious time.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : In any case that has to be done. You will not accept the statement of the creditors.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : No. You cannot afford to accept any statement unchecked. When an allegation is made by one party and it is not accepted by the other there will have to be issues and there will have to be evidence on that issue and so much time of the boards and so much time and money of the parties will have to be wasted. That is one very serious defect which I see arising after the insertion of this clause. Then, again, why is Government afraid of the clause as it stands? I think Government is really afraid of shadows. Having instituted conciliation boards and having the composition of conciliation boards in its own hands, the Government is not prepared to trust them. If we just go through the wording of the clause we find that it reads as follows :—

✓[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

Where during the hearing of any application made under section 9, any creditor refuses to agree to an amicable settlement, the Board may, if it is of opinion that the debtor has made such creditor a fair offer which the creditor ought reasonably to accept, grant the debtor a certificate, in such form as may be prescribed, in respect of the debts owed by him to such creditor.

Here three conditions require to be fulfilled before a certificate can be issued. There should be a fair offer made by the debtor. That offer must have been accepted as reasonable by the conciliation board. And that fair offer must have been refused by a creditor. A board will consist of one chairman who will probably be an experienced officer or at least a man of a good deal of experience of life, possessing a respectable social status and position. He will be assisted by two other members who will be selected by the officers of Government with care, and may be presumed to be respectable and responsible persons. With that composition of a conciliation board, why should Government be afraid of their coming to a wrong conclusion? The offer will be made in their presence; they will know exactly what the conditions are; they will know what the assets of the debtor are and they will also know his liabilities and having a precise knowledge of his assets and liabilities they may certainly be expected to come to a correct conclusion as to the offer made by a debtor being fair or unfair, reasonable or unreasonable. If, under the circumstances, the offer of the debtor is regarded by the conciliation board as not fair they will refuse to issue a certificate. This is not all.

If the conciliation board comes to a conclusion that the offer is a fair one, a reasonable one and it has been unreasonably refused by a creditor, even then it is discretionary for the conciliation board to issue a certificate or to refuse to issue a certificate. The word used here is "may." The conciliation board is under no obligation to issue a certificate even if it comes to a conclusion that a reasonable offer has been unreasonably refused by a creditor. In the select committee we had proposed an amendment that the word "may" should be replaced by the word "shall", because if the conciliation board comes to a conclusion that a fair and reasonable offer has been refused by a creditor, why should the conciliation board have any discretionary power to refuse to issue a certificate? But after having heard the arguments put forward by the representatives of urban interests and by official members we agreed to have the word "may" retained as it was in the clause. Under these circumstances I do not see why Government should be afraid of certificates being issued wrongly or unreasonably by conciliation boards. In the first instance I believe that unreasonable offers will be held by the conciliation board as unreasonable and the question of the issue of a certificate does not arise. Secondly it is only when the offer has been accepted by the conciliation board to be fair and reasonable that they will be in a position to exercise their power of issuing certificates. And even then, it lies within their discretion to say either yes or no. Suppose there-has been an offer which they consider to be reasonable and fair and the creditor gives some sort of a reason which appeals to them or they feel that the offer is a border offer, even then they can refuse to issue a certificate. With the arguments which I have put forward in respect of the weakening of the first incentive and the weakening of the second incentive and the power of the conciliation boards being only discretionary, I feel that Government is not right in insisting upon the insertion of this fresh clause. Therefore I oppose the amendment moved by the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 19, sub-clause (1), the following words be added :—

Provided that the board shall not grant a certificate unless the board is satisfied that creditors to whom not less than 40 per centum of the debtor's debts are owing have come to an amicable settlement with the debtor.

The Council divided : Ayes, 35 : Noes, 26.

AYES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.	Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Askwith, Mr. A. V.	Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.	Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.	Manohar Lal, Mr.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.	Marsden, Mr. P.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.	Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
Chetan Anand, Lala.	Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.	Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.	Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable Malik Sir.	Nur Elahi, Khan Bahadur Shaikh.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.	Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.	Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.	Ramji Das, Lala.
Grindal, Mr. A. D.	Roberts, Mr. W.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.	Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.	Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Labh Singh, Mr.	Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.
Latifi, Mr. A.

NOES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.	Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.	Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.	Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar.
Akbar Ali, Pir.	Haibat Khan Dahi, Khan.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri	Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.	Muhammad Eusooof, Khwaja.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.	Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.	Makhdum Shaikh.

[Mr. President.]

Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.	Nur Khan, Khan Sahib Risaldar Bahadur.
Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.	Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Muhammad Sarfaraz Ali Khan, Raja.	Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.	Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.	Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
	Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair and it was occupied by the Deputy President.)

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General): Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 19, sub-clause (1), the following be added:—

Explanation.—‘Fair offer’ shall mean capital determined after an examination of accounts made under proviso (i) of section 3 (1) (iii) of the Usurious Loans Act of 1918 plus interest calculated with due regard to section 5 of this Act.

My friend the Leader of the Unionist Party sometimes distrusts the conciliation boards and at other times he trusts them.

5 P.M.

The personnel of the conciliation board is not yet known. We do not know whether either the chairman or the members will be men of judicial experience, well versed in examining accounts. I therefore think that clear guidance should be laid down in the Act for their procedure. ‘Fair offer’ is a very vague term and the way in which I propose to define what fair offer should be appears to me to be very reasonable and moderate and I hope that the explanation will commend itself to the House.

The Usurious Loans Act as it stands without any amendment which this Bill has made authorises the courts to examine accounts for a period of twelve years. If the principle is traced to twelve years back, surely it would be a very moderate amount. The rate of interest which I think should be guaranteed is 6 per cent. It is lower than the rate of interest which my friend Mr. Roberts’ amendment proposed and which has been passed by the House and I think it would be of advantage to all to clearly explain what ‘fair offer’ means and what fair offer should be. Otherwise if there are more boards than one in a district area or in different areas one board will act upon one principle and another board will act upon some other principle. I therefore think that it is necessary to give clear instructions to boards as to how they should proceed and how they should calculate that fair offer, the refusal of which exposes the creditor to grave penalties. This fact has been admitted by the Honourable Mover of the Bill and I hope this amendment will not be rejected by the Council.

Mr. Deputy President: Clause under consideration, amendment moved:

That in clause 19, sub-clause (1), the following be added:—

Explanation.—‘Fair offer,’ shall mean capital determined after an examination of accounts made under proviso (i) of section 3 (1) (iii) of the Usurious Loans Act of 1918 plus interest calculated with due regard to section 5 of this Act.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadaan, Rural): I rise to oppose this amendment. We have already, in this House passed an amendment moved by the Honourable Mover of the Bill that no settlement should be possible unless creditors to whom not less than 40 per cent. of the debt is due come to an amicable settlement with the debtors.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: No debt should be certified.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali: Any way, we have already limited the scope of the Bill and we have limited the number of cases in which an amicable settlement is possible. There is also another amendment by Mr. Puri to add the word 'unanimously' in clause 19, sub-clause (1), line 6, before the word "of opinion". Again this also goes to limit the number of cases in which a settlement is possible. Now, if we agree to this amendment, I think we will again be limiting the number of cases and the object of the Bill will be marred and no relief in reality will be possible, though there be some in theory. The Bill will be merely a dead letter like so many other Acts in our province, like the Regulation of Accounts Act, or the Juvenile Smoking Act or the Sarda Act. All these provisions have remained a dead letter and they have not been worked on account of one reason or another. (An honourable member: What about the Pure Food Act?) That is a dead letter too, you can go on adding to the number. If we agree to this amendment, we will be making nice distinctions and we will be going against the principle already made clear by the Honourable Finance Member and in a way we will be fettering the discretion of the boards. As he has remarked members of the conciliation boards are not supposed to be 'a set of fools' and I think it is more advisable that we should leave in their hands to decide each individual case as to what is a fair offer in a certain case. A fair offer in one case, according to the merits, may not be a fair offer in another case. So it is very difficult to define these fine limits and it will be advisable if we leave these things to the good will and to the discretion and better understanding of the conciliation boards themselves. With these words I oppose the amendment.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadian, Rural): Sir, I oppose this amendment. I think Raja Sahib ought to know by this time that if his definition of 'fair offer' is accepted then relief becomes really impossible. He simply means to say that the whole amount of the principal with interest at 18½ per cent. should be awarded to a creditor and if the amount offered falls short of this amount the offer should be regarded as not fair. If this is the correct interpretation of the amendment of Raja Sahib, I feel that this Bill will fulfil no useful purpose whatsoever after the insertion of this amendment and it had better be withdrawn. Again, as was argued by Chaudhri Riasat Ali 'fair offer' will be different in different cases. You cannot lay down one uniform principle as to what is a fair offer and what is not a fair offer. Now a man may have been an assami under a sahukar for twenty years, he may have paid in the shape of interest perhaps four times the principal which was lent originally. In his case 'fair offer' may mean four annas in the rupee, three annas in the rupee, two annas in the rupee or even one anna in the rupee. But suppose there is another case in which cash was advanced to a debtor, say, only two years ago when the prices of crops were on the same level as they are to-day, and the creditor has not received much in the shape of interest. Certainly a 'fair offer' in his case will be different from a 'fair offer' in the case of a man who has been in debt for twenty years and has been paying something by way of interest from year to year. The total amount which may have been paid by the man who has been in debt for twenty years may have exceeded the principal by three or four times. Thus you cannot lay down one uniform measure for a 'fair offer' in every case.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

Take another instance. One debtor is the sole male member of his family. He is old, he is decrepit, he has barani land, he has no helpers in his agricultural profession. Certainly a 'fair offer' in his case will be different from a 'fair offer' in the case of a man who owns 200 acres of irrigated land, has half a dozen adult members in the family to work for him or with him. Then take another instance, the instance of a man who is a debtor but has two of his sons in civil employ and two of his sons or nephews or grandsons living in the same family under the same roof in military service. Can any one say that a 'fair offer' in his case will be the same as a 'fair offer' in the case of an old decrepit fellow who owns 20 acres of barani land in some sandy part of the district of Hissar? Therefore, to lay down one general measure for determining what offer will be regarded as fair or unfair is entirely useless. The thing ought to be left to the discretion of conciliation boards. They will have all the relevant circumstances before them and in the light of those relevant circumstances they will be able to judge whether the offer made by a debtor is a fair offer or not. Certainly the definition of 'fair offer' given in the amendment moved by Raja Sahib is one which gives absolutely no relief to a debtor under any circumstances.

Sardar Sampuran Singh (Lyallpur, Sikh, Rural): When Raja Sahib proposed this amendment, he perhaps forgot this fact that this is an extraordinary piece of legislation (Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: But not an unreasonable piece of legislation), to meet extraordinary circumstances, and when proposing this amendment he seems to be presuming that the people are in a position to meet all their liabilities; while we from the very beginning presume that the people, in whatever condition at present they are, are unable to meet their liabilities and somehow or other debts have to be adjusted and consequently this extraordinary measure of legislation has been proposed. In these circumstances it is too much to expect that the people will be able to pay their whole capital with interest at the rate proposed by Raja Sahib. If we were to pass this amendment, that would practically mean that this enactment is going to be a dead letter. Therefore, I would submit that this is practically nullifying the whole effect of this Bill if we pass this amendment and in these circumstances I would strongly oppose this amendment.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): I do not think that this is an amendment which can be accepted.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: What is your idea of a 'fair offer'?

Shaikh Abdul Ghani: My idea is that it is a very clever amendment. If you read carefully this amendment, you will find that the proposal is that the conciliation boards should be engaged in determining the capital, after an examination of accounts has been made under the provisions of the proposed law. If they have to apply certain principles of this very Bill which is being enacted into law to determine what interest accrues on this principal amount, then that original amount plus the interest calculated according to the provisions of this Bill is to form the basis of the offer and this in no case can be reduced. What it comes to is this that if a creditor has to go to a civil court and to lodge his suit, what the civil court after the passing of this Act would do is to be done by the conciliation boards not only with respect to one creditor but with respect to ten, twenty, fifty or as many creditors as there are in the case of a particular debtor. The object is to render the task of the conciliation boards hopeless and impossible and of civil courts nugatory. This is, I would say, rather a novel amendment and that is why, as I got up, Raja Sahib enquired, 'What is your idea of the amendment?' Their meaning lies hidden too deep of course. This amendment will render the whole thing hopeless, ambiguous and absolutely impossible. If we adopt this provision the Bill will become a mockery.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): The apprehension which exists in the minds of Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and Shaikh Abdul Ghani is this, that this definition of a fair offer is necessarily to be the basis on which conciliation is to proceed. That is not so. Of course the decree that will be passed by the conciliation board will depend upon the agreement between the debtor and the creditor. No agreement or proposal, however fair, can form the basis of a decree under the provisions of the conciliation board unless it is assented to by the debtor. Therefore, there is no danger in this case of any debtor being made to pay more than what he wishes to pay. What then is the object of the definition of the expression 'fair offer'? The Honourable Finance Member was pleased to remark that if there is one feature of these provisions which requires to be carefully safeguarded that feature is the provision imposing penalties against the creditors and those penalties as is well known include the writing off of the debt. Before it is laid down that the creditor's dues are to be wiped out, all that is necessary is that he should insist upon demanding what under the present provisions of the Usurious Loans Act he is held to be entitled. If a person wants his capital and a reasonable amount of interest, not an extortionate amount of interest, even if the conciliation board is not prepared to give him all that he wants, at least he should not be penalised. Is this asking for anything unreasonable? It is not proposed to ask the debtor to accept the statement of accounts of the creditor or ask him to pay anything. But, is not the creditor justified in asking, 'Judge me by any reasonable standard, any standard which you may fix, and if judged by that standard my offer does not appear unreasonable, am I wrong in asking you not to penalise me?' The conciliation board may not provide special facilities for the repayment of the debt, but it need not dub the creditor a scoundrel if according to the standard of the conciliation board he is not unreasonable. The whole object of the amendment has been entirely misunderstood or misdescribed. This amendment is merely intended to mitigate the penal clause if according to the standard which the House may fix the creditor refuses to accept a fair offer.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): I rise to oppose the amendment under consideration. The argument which the honourable member for Industries has put forth are very plausible indeed. He says that fair offer is only a basis for granting a certificate. If there is no fear of the conciliation board granting a certificate why should the creditor come to an agreement at all with the debtor? There is a chance that he will forego a portion of his capital or his capital and interest and he will never come to a settlement if there is no fear of a certificate being granted. But, if the amendment is accepted there will be no inclination on the part of the creditor to come to a settlement because he is sure that he will not have to forego anything of his capital and interest. It is therefore clear that this amendment is intended to nullify the provisions of this measure relating to conciliation boards. If this amendment is adopted the conciliation boards will not at all work. I am sure the other side is attempting to throw dust in the eyes of members on this side of the House. I do not think the Government consistently with the object which it has before it in passing this Bill will support the amendment. With these words I oppose the amendment.

[Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan.]

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I just want to say a few words. I think my friends are misjudging the wise counsel and a friendly counsel too. It reminds me of an old Persian verse which I read as a boy.

آنچه تو کردی است با خود هیچ دیرانه نه کرد
در میان خانه نم کردی است صاحب خانه را

(Hear, hear). I shall invite your attention to the grounds which have been covered. First of all the House has agreed that payment of the decree cannot be assured. My proposal for the realisation of the decree and the method of realisation has been negatived by the House. There is, therefore, no hope of recovery of the decreed amount which the conciliation board may pass. Secondly, the House has just passed an amendment to the effect that creditors to whom a certain per cent. of debt is due should agree. Now, if the conciliation board is not to be guided in determining what a fair offer is and if forty per cent. of the creditors do not agree to a settlement, then the conciliation board will come to nothing. The board will become infructuous and will prove a mere mares' nest. I want to make everything definitely clear so that creditors may readily agree to the settlement which the conciliation board may arrive at. If the House does not want this, it is quite welcome to act as it pleases. I have given a friendly advice and if it is not accepted by the party opposite neither I nor my party will be to blame for the consequences.

Mr. Deputy President : The question is—

That in clause 19, sub-clause (1), the following be added:—

"Explanation.—'Fair offer' shall mean capital determined after an examination of accounts made under proviso (f) of section 3 (1) (iii) of the Usurious Loans Act of 1918 plus interest calculated with due regard to section 5 of this Act."

The motion was lost.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the chair.)

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): I beg to move—

That in clause 19, sub-clause (1), the following explanation be added :—

“ For the purpose of determining what is a fair offer the entire property of the debtor shall be taken into consideration.”

If I am assured that this is a superfluous amendment I shall be thoroughly satisfied and will not press it, but will at once ask for leave to withdraw it. But things being what they are, I have thought it necessary to place it before the House. The meaning of this explanation is perfectly clear. It is intended only to exclude certain possibilities which I fear are present and against which the conciliation boards, if they are to function with any degree of fairness must be cautioned. It is intended to invite attention to a state of things something like this. Take the case of a big landlord who owns 10,000 acres of land. He raises a loan of Rs. 10,000 and then asks a friend of his to make an application to the conciliation board. Let us also assume that he borrowed the money for the purpose of adding to his broad acres which he still has in his possession. Unless the conciliation board takes into account the ten thousand acres which he already possessed and also the land which he purchased with the sum of Rs. 10,000 that he borrowed afresh, it would not prevent a serious injustice being done. I hope, Sir, the honourable the Leader of the Opposition who may be said to be in virtual charge of this Bill and who is responsible for the fate of the Bill as also for its final shape which depends more on the Rao Bahadur than on anybody else, will see this point. Does he or does he not agree to this explanation being added to this clause: “ For the purpose of determining what is a fair offer the entire property of the debtor shall be taken into consideration,” irrespective of the fact whether there is some class of property which may not be proceeded against by the creditor, say in the absence of a decree? The difficulty becomes still more aggravated if we remember that all the creditors of a particular debtor who has made an application to the conciliation board may not necessarily be non-agriculturists. Amongst the creditors there may be agriculturists as well as non-agriculturists. Agriculturist creditors are in a favourable position already. They can proceed against the land of the debtor; that is available for the discharge of their debts. But so far as non-agriculturist debtors are concerned, it cannot be touched by them even in the execution of a decree. Therefore in order to avoid confusion it is absolutely necessary that we should put some such explanation after clause 19 (1), as I have suggested.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved :

That in clause 19, sub-clause (1) the following explanation be added :—

“ For the purpose of determining what is a fair offer the entire property of the debtor shall be taken into consideration.”

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) : Sir, I think it will serve no useful purpose if we add this proviso to the clause which the House has already agreed to, because after all it is an indication in one way and it is a very defective indication. We will have to define which property is attachable, which saleable and on which one can lay his hands in payment of a debt and then we will have to see whether the debtor is a member of the notified agricultural tribe or he is merely a debtor living in some urban area and not exempt from the operations of the Land

[Shaikh Abdul Ghani.]

Alienation Act. Again this is neither a very decisive nor an exhaustive proviso. When making a decision, the conciliation board will take into consideration all the circumstances of the debtor, his property and everything. Why limit the discretion of the board, merely to this particular fact of the possession of property by a debtor? For instance, if the debtor is infirm, if he is blind, if he is a young man or old or if the debtor is in very good circumstances otherwise without having property and he is drawing a good salary, all these factors will be taken into consideration by the conciliation boards. Why restrict the discretion of the conciliation board to one particular fact and why emphasise this particular feature when there are so many other things to be taken into account? So my submission is that we should not hamper the discretion of the conciliation boards by attaching too much importance to a particular aspect of the question. I think we should leave their discretion unfettered and wide.

Mr. Labh Singh : If it is understood that it is only restrictive and it will only put undue fetters on the discretion of the conciliation board, I am prepared to withdraw my amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) :
I move—

That in clause 19, sub-clause (2), line 9, for the word " or " the word " nor " be substituted.

The object of the clause is to provide for the double penalty contemplated. If the object is clear then my amendment is redundant. But if the House agrees and especially the English-speaking section of the official benches is of opinion that it would be better to make its meaning clearer by substituting the word ' nor ' in place of ' or, ' I think they might very well adopt it.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved :

That in clause 19, sub-clause (2), line 9, for the word " or " the word " nor " be substituted.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : I think the word " no " at the beginning governs both the alternatives and, therefore, the word ' or ' is right.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : I then beg leave to withdraw the amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I beg to move :

That in sub-clause (3) of clause 19 the words " six months " be omitted.

These words occur in the last 3 lines of this sub-clause. It is a penalty which is imposed on a creditor who has been certified under section 19, the penalty being that his decree is not to be executed until all the other debtors are paid of and the payment of creditors in this province especially where the Land Alienation Act is enforced will not be payment as contemplated in the Central Provinces. In the Central Provinces and the United Provinces where the Land Alienation Act is not in force, the persons who have obtained decrees on agreement, will be able to sell property and within a period of six months or a year the entire debts will be wiped out, and in that case it was necessary to fix a period of six months or so and to postpone the execution of those decrees to that period. But in the Punjab where most of the decrees against agriculturists will be attempted to be satisfied by leases of land which necessarily will be for twenty years or for longer periods it is unnecessary to put in six months. There is no reason why a period of six months should elapse. The effect of my amendment would be that the creditors who are certified will be able to take any remedy available to them as soon as the other creditors have been paid off and they will not have to wait for six months.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in sub-clause (3) of clause 19 the words "six months" be omitted.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural) : I oppose the amendment. The honourable member has lost sight of the provision in clause 17 which has just now been agreed to, i.e., "Provided that the Board is unanimously of opinion that the period fixed for payment is excessive, the Board may refuse to authenticate the agreement." According to this it should be presumed that in no case shall the board fix a period which is unreasonable and an authentication can be refused only on the ground of the period fixed being excessive. So we can safely presume that under these circumstances the period fixed will not be of considerable length. It will be, comparatively speaking, a short period and under these circumstances I think it is quite reasonable to fix a period of six months which should be available to the debtor after the expiry of the period itself. Another reason is that the law of execution as it now stands, I may say without any fear of contradiction, is horrible. The man can be arrested and his property attached, simultaneously. The recent rulings in our province are to the effect that for a debt of even annas eight only both these remedies are available. The law of execution is horrible because both remedies are allowed at once, remedy against the person and remedy against the property. In these circumstances also we should give some time to the debtor after the period fixed for payment has expired, to make arrangements not according to the terms of the agreement, but to pay his debts in the ordinary way, according to the law of the land. A similar provision appears in the Central Provinces Act. Under section 15 (3) of that Act a higher penalty is prescribed for this thing. It reads :—

- (3) Where, after the registration of an agreement under sub-section (2) of section 12, any unsecured creditor sues for the recovery of a debt, other than a debt incurred subsequent to such agreement, in respect of which a certificate has been granted under sub-section (1) or any creditor sues for the recovery of a debt incurred after the date of such registration, any decree passed in such suit shall, notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, not be executed until all amounts recorded as payable under such agreement have been paid or such agreement has ceased to subsist.

That a higher penalty is prescribed is clear. (See the words in italics). We only provide that a further time should be given to the man to set up his programme of paying off his debts. With these words I oppose the amendment.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I am in the unfortunate position of having to support amendments which on a fair and-independent consideration of the proposals one is perhaps not in a position to support. This is not an amendment of any consequence but it is in line with most of the amendments which I have proposed in this House. I have been trying to restore the original Bill of the Government. My amendment again is one of those unfortunate amendments of a provision which the Government itself proposed, but which was dropped under the influence of the majority. You will find that those 'six months' did not find a place in the original Bill and is a result of an addition made in the select committee and I put it to the House whether the omission of six months was really a penalty which the House wanted to impose upon certain creditors.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Mr. President : Question is—

That in sub-clause (3) of clause 19, the words 'six months' be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): I beg to move—

That in clause 19 sub-clause (3) the words after the word 'until' be omitted, and in their place the following be substituted:—

"Six months have elapsed since the making of the agreement."

My friend the member from Gujranwala has drawn the attention of the House to a section in the Central Provinces Act. This procedure reminds me of blowing hot and cold in the same breath. Whenever we draw the attention of the House to the provisions of the Central Provinces or the United Provinces Acts we are met by a rejoinder that the conditions in the Punjab are different from the conditions in the United Provinces or the Central Provinces, and when we ask what is the difference, we are told that here in this blessed province there is the Land Alienation Act. That measure is so sacrosanct that nothing which directly or indirectly trespasses upon its provisions or seems to the majority to trespass on its provisions is to be adopted. This procedure, I would submit, is on the face of it unfair. My proposal is that such of the creditors who are parties to the agreement should be placed in a position of some advantage over the creditors who hold out. They may realize at least ten per cent., 15 per cent. or more of the debts due to them. The remaining will be left out in the cold. They have already to wait for ten or 20 years before they are allowed to make any attempt to realise their debts. You will be pleased to note that clause 19 says, provided that the board is of the opinion that the period fixed is excessive the board may on that account refuse to authenticate the agreement. Now, we have not anywhere described as to what is excessive. We have given no guidance to the conciliation boards. It is fully known to us that decrees of civil courts which have got to be executed against agriculturists are sometimes executed on usufructuary mortgage which may extend to 20 years. So there is nothing in this Bill or elsewhere which would prevent these agreements covering a period from 20 years upwards, at any rate 20 years is the least we may expect would be covered by these agreements. Would it be reasonable or, conscionable to postpone the remedies which are open to such of the creditors as have not joined the so-called agreement to a period of six months after the lapse of 20 years, i.e., the period provided by the conciliation agreements. I believe one has only to state the position squarely to see the injustice of it. I would submit that it would be fair either to define what is excessive and give some guidance to the conciliation boards or lay down a maximum period of one year, two years, or even three years for the fulfilment of agreements sanctioned by the conciliation boards, that would be something but if you simply leave the boards to an indeterminate period, they will not be able to put their foot on an agreement unless in their opinion the period provided in the agreement is excessive. Now we can understand the mentality which added the word 'unanimously.' An attempt was made to retain the word 'unanimously' in clause 17 of the Bill. Supposing there are three members of the board, we may assume that one of them at any rate would be unreasonable. We may fairly assume in this province that one at least out of the three may have opinions of fairness and reasonableness which would radically differ from the opinions of fairness and reasonableness of the other two. We may not describe him as unjust or unfair, but we may reasonably assume that at least one of the three members of the Board will have opinions of fairness and justice which would be certainly different from the opinion of fairness and justice of the majority of the Board. That is the reason why the word 'unanimously' was sought to be retained in clause 17. I would, therefore, submit that either we may add to the Bill some explanation as to what is considered excessive or we may accept the amendment which I have moved for inserting certain words, if necessary, after amendment. In the place of six months asked for by me the House may adopt one year or two years, I will have no objection, but some reasonable definition should be given as to which period the board may regard as excessive or not excessive. With these words I beg to move the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 19, sub-clause (3) the words after the word 'until' be omitted, and in their place the following be substituted :—

"Six months have elapsed since the making of the agreement."

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 19 as amended stands part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

New clause.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division, and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I beg to move—

That the following be added as a new sub-clause after clause 19 :—

"If a debtor commits a default in paying any amount due in accordance with the terms of an agreement entered into under section 17, such amount shall be recoverable as an arrear of land revenue on the application of the creditor made within 90 days from the day of the default."

If after the entire machinery of the conciliation board has moved, the debtor is found to be behaving in a manner in which he should not behave, there is no earthly reason why the amount of his debts should not be recovered from him in the manner in which land revenue arrears are recovered. This is one of those provisions which go to the root of the matter. We have essayed to incorporate in this Bill some provisions which will test the good faith of the debtor or of the majority behind the Bill. We moved that he may make a deposit of ten per cent. before making an application and we attempted also to move that he may make a deposit of some per cent. of his assets, before he is permitted to make an application. All these amendments have been rejected. We also tried to make a suggestion that he may make assets to the value of even one-twentieth of the entire debt due by him available for the purpose of distribution amongst his creditors, or he may give some sort of security like the security which an ordinary person who comes to the Insolvency Court is called upon to give, but none of these wholesome suggestions or amendments the House has thought fit to adopt or even to consider on merits. Such being the case we would have been extremely reluctant to pursue the other amendment which we have tabled, but we are under orders to go on even against our better judgement. Now, Sir, when a debtor is really agreed to make a certain payment and creditors representing 40 per cent. of the debts due by him are also agreeable and that agreement has been authenticated by the board, and is looked upon by everybody as fair and reasonable and he is given the full period for the purpose of making these payments, if he even then makes default, is there any reason why he should be further protected? If he does not comply with the conditions of the agreement in which he has entered into with the aid and under the supervision of the conciliation board, who ex-hypothesi, are bound to be friendly to him at any rate and would be there to superintend his interests and to watch the procedure to see that nothing unfair is done to him, is it fair that this man if he makes a default should not be proceeded against in the manner in which this amendment of mine provides that he should be proceeded against? The Central Provinces Act to which reference has been made over and over again has a provision not only in substance but even in words identical with this. I hope the House will see its way to consider this amendment on merits.

[Mr. Labh Singh.]

Mr. President : New clause proposed is—

If a debtor commits a default in paying any amount due in accordance with the terms of an agreement entered into under section 17, such amount shall be recoverable as an arrear of land revenue on the application of the creditor made within 90 days from the day of the default.

The Council then adjourned till 2 P.M., on Tuesday, 20th November 1934.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Tuesday, 20th November 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2 P.M. of the clock. Mr. President in the Chair.

OATH OF OFFICE.

Mr. F. H. Puckle (Officer on Special Duty), was sworn in.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

New Clause—(concluded).

Mr. President : The Council will resume discussion on the motion of Mr. Labh Singh, namely :—

That the following be added as a new sub-clause after clause 19—

If a debtor commits a default in paying any amount due in accordance with the terms of an agreement entered into under section 17, such amount shall be recoverable as an arrear of land revenue on the application of the creditor made within 90 days from the day of the default.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural) : The motion under discussion is rather fantastic and I should say is not consistent with the underlying principle of the legislation which has been undertaken by Government. The legislation has been brought forward with a view to relieve the debtor classes of the burden of indebtedness. The proposal seeks to include a provision by which Government should undertake to collect the private debts of the creditor classes and should set the whole machinery of the Government in motion for the realisation of the individual debts of the creditors. If closely examined what will it come to? It looks that if this provision is included it would mean that the whole country, as a matter of fact, would have to be perhaps converted into a prison-house and anarchy, chaos and confusion would prevail. And when such a state of affairs is brought about the advocacy of the honourable mover and his eloquence would be of no avail to the population or to the administration.

Secondly, and this is my more serious objection, if examined this motion comes to this. The honourable mover of the motion when he moved it yesterday made it quite clear that sometimes he did not believe in some of the motions he moved but that they were moved under orders. That means that all the motions moved on the other side of the House are done under orders to carry on. (Mr. Labh Singh : I said nothing of the kind.) Those were the very words of the honourable member and I remember he was asked whose orders they were. In reply I think he pointed out to the leader of that party, the honourable member, Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath. That means that it is not an individual motion but that it is a motion by the party and the motion has been moved to bring pressure upon the Government and to get out of Government as much as possible. It is all the more sad when we find that such a drastic motion should come from a section of the House which very often claims to belong to a party which I believe calls itself Nationalist and honourable members belonging to it sometimes claim to speak in the name of the masses. They sometimes clamour and sometimes declare from their housetops that they are the people who are in the vanguard of the movement for self-government. If the masses were to know that this is what the self-government is going to be or what the advocates of the Swaraj Party promise would do when once they are in power for however short a time, I have no doubt the masses would say: "God save us from such friends who would not only do what they would ask the Government to do but much more." As a matter of fact, my own view is that the Government by giving way to one or two motions yesterday moved from that side and by carrying one of their own motions by the majority that they can command with the aid of that party, have already toned down the salutary provisions of the Bill. I am afraid if the Government yield to further pressure they would water down the provisions of this legislation altogether and they might then seriously think—

[Sardar Arjan Singh.]

نه خدا هي ولا نه وصال عذم
نه ادھر کے رہے نہ ادھر کے رہے

That would be the position that they would reduce themselves to and I would, therefore, appeal to Government that they should now leave aside their weak-kneed policy which they have so far adopted with respect to some provisions relating to conciliation boards. With these words I oppose the amendment under discussion.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural): What I have seen and heard in this House during the last week or ten days is very depressing, even painful. Member after member has risen from urban benches and put forward proposals which, if carried, will mean nothing less than a complete negation of the Indebtedness Relief Bill. While on the one hand they claim that they are prepared to extend all possible sympathy for those who are in debt, on the other hand they are putting forward amendments which not only make the Bill of no worth but are much worse than that. Take the present amendment. If this amendment is carried the result will be not only no relief to the debtor but a tightening of the rope round his neck still further, and this tightening of the rope will turn his present economic helplessness into his economic death and I may be allowed to warn urban members that if the debtor dies, his death will also mean ultimately the death of the bania, the death of the trader, the death of the merchant, the death of the professional man, because the debtor at present practically represents no less than 80 per cent. of the population. If 80 per cent. of the population dies economically those who depend upon them, those who do not produce any wealth but are either engaged in certain professions or are doing the work of distributors or intermediaries will die automatically. Therefore, I should like to make an earnest appeal to the occupants of the urban benches not to put forward these amendments. I think everybody is agreed that there is need for relief and the need is urgent and that the relief should not only be nominal relief but that it should be substantial. Here the urban members are, at least in theory, at one with us. In fact they have kindly pointed out the extreme heaviness of land revenue and have been kind enough to suggest that land revenue should be cut down to a little less than half. That shows that they admit the urgent need for substantial relief. And yet, if they mean seriously to press this amendment, what does their idea of relief come to? What I understand by relief is either a lightening of the burden of debt or a mitigation of the harrassment to which the creditor may sometimes be able to subject a debtor, or a softening of the harshness of the methods of realisation. If we just examine this proposal closely, can anybody contend that any of these three results will follow? Certainly not. What will follow will be the exact reverse of what a normally constituted person will regard as relief. More than once objections have been raised by certain members of the National Reform party that we are trying in this legislation to repeal in some respects the general law of the land contained in the Civil Procedure Code. I think I can raise an objection exactly on the same ground. At present under the Civil Procedure Code certain items of property belonging to a debtor are exempt from attachment or sale. If the present amendment is accepted those provisions of the Civil Procedure Code which protect these items of property will be repealed inevitably.

Then again, the realisation of debts as an arrear of land revenue will also mean the repeal of the Land Alienation Act. Therefore, under this single amendment my urban friends are seeking to repeal not only the Punjab Land Alienation Act but also the Civil Procedure Code which is the general law of the land.

I wonder whether the mover has understood or realised the full meaning of this amendment. If he had, probably he would not have been so keen about his amendment. I will just draw his attention to the provisions of the Land Revenue Act which lay down the method in which an arrear of land revenue is to be realised or collected. However, before I come to those methods I may draw his attention also to the fact that in respect of land revenue there is such a thing as joint and several liability. I wonder whether my friend has ever heard of that. This novel incident of land revenue is as follows:—If an estate is owned by more persons than one, or if it is an estate which is held on a bharyachara tenure, every single proprietor of the land in that estate is liable to pay land revenue which is assessed on any holding in that estate. For instance, if all the occupants of urban benches were owners of their own respective holdings in a single estate and Mr. Labh Singh made a default in land revenue, Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath could be made to pay the land revenue in respect of which default has been made by Mr. Labh Singh. And not only this, but the methods which can be applied in the case of the actual defaulter will also be applicable to other owners, that is, in respect of a default made by Mr. Labh Singh, Raja Sahib makes himself subject to all those coercive methods of realisation which are prescribed in section 67. I will now read out section 67 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act.

Subject to the other provisions of this Act an arrear of land revenue may be recovered by any one or more of the following processes, namely—

- (a) by service of a writ of demand on the defaulter;
- (b) by arrest and detention of his person;

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

- (c) by distress and sale of his movable property and uncut or ungathered crops;
- (d) by transfer of the holding in respect of which the arrear is due;
- (e) by attachment of the estate or holding in respect of which the arrear is due;
- (f) by annulment of the assessment of that estate or holding;
- (g) by sale of that estate or holding; and
- (h) by proceedings against other immovable property of the defaulter.

Is there any coercive method conceivable which has been omitted under this section? And is Mr. Labh Singh really serious that all these coercive processes should be available for the realisation of debts under present conditions? We have come here to this Council begging for relief, and Mr. Labh Singh presents us with an amendment which will have the effect of applying very uncivilised methods for the realisation of these debts. Under the circumstances I feel it that I can, with some hope, appeal to Raja Sahib to countermand all the amendments which have such characteristic features about them. Urban Hindus are my political opponents and any blunders that are made by them ought ordinarily to be welcomed by me, but there are limits beyond which I should not like even my political opponents to commit blunders. This is a blunder which I think can have very serious consequences. After all, they are Hindus and they should not forget that a very large section of the Hindu community is in debt and a very large section of the zamindar population which is also Hindu is in debt. The effect of this amendment will be to deprive so many Punjabis, so many Hindus and so many zamindar Hindus of their ancestral property by the repeal, practical repeal of the Punjab Land Alienation Act, and also the repeal of section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code. Am I to understand, that this amendment really represents the soul of urban Hindus? (An honourable member: Mr. Labh Singh is really a rural representative.) That makes things still worse. It means that a man who is himself of urban extraction will not have any sympathy for rural people even when he is returned to the House to represent rural population. That puts the matter in a still more unpleasant perspective. I do not think Raja Sahib would like to have this amendment taken as the measure of his sympathy and the sympathy of his party for zamindars. May I hope that he will ask the members of his party not to move amendments of this character.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North non-Muhammadan, Rural): I will say just a few words in answer to what Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and the honourable member for Hoshiarpur (Sardar Arjan Singh) have said. The honourable member for Hoshiarpur twitted me by repeating and misrepresenting what I said yesterday, namely, that although we have seen that even some of the most moderate and reasonable amendments moved by us had been thrown out by the House without being considered on merits, we were told by our venerable Leader not to lose heart but to go on with the amendments which have been tabled by us. This is all I said and nothing more.

As regards the remarks made by the honourable the Leader of the Unionist Party, it is apparent that what we are proposing under this amendment is nothing new. This is what has already been embodied in the Central Provinces Act and there is no enormity about it. All that the amendment says is that when a person's debts have been scaled down and he has made an agreement to pay them and the board has deliberately come to the conclusion that the man is competent to discharge his obligation, if even after that he makes a wilful default, if after that he sells his assets or otherwise misbehaves, it is only then that the provisions contained in the Land Revenue Act for the realisation of arrears of land revenue should come into force. So the thing is not quite so bad as the Rao Bahadur wants us to believe. And his method of argument reminds me only of a pettifogging advocate who when he has got a weak case trumps up another case altogether, attributes it to the other side and tries to demolish it. What is wrong about these methods being applied against the defaulter who makes default dishonestly and works in bad faith, who sells his property to delay or defraud his creditors and who does not intend to pay? This is a procedure that is to be adopted in the case of the dishonest borrower and not to harrass an honest person who wants to deal honestly by his creditor. My friend's argument would suggest that he wants to shield every dishonest borrower. If that is the thing he wants to do, he may well do it because as I have already said he has votes behind him. But we are suggesting nothing of the sort, all that we are suggesting is that dishonest people should be dealt with strongly, and should not be shielded.

Mr. President : The question is :—

That the following be added as a new sub-clause after clause 19—

If a debtor commits a default in paying any amount due in accordance with the terms of an agreement entered into under section 17, such amount shall be recoverable as an arrear of land revenue on the application of the creditor made within 90 days from the day of the default.

The motion was lost.

Lala Chetan Anand (West Punjab Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the following clause be added after clause 19—

When the debtor has committed a default in carrying out the terms of the agreement the debts and decrees will be revived and the creditor or decree-holder will be entitled to pursue his remedies according to law as if no application has been made.

Sir, the amendment I have moved is perfectly harmless and I hope that the House would readily accept it. If the debtor commits a default in carrying out the terms of the agreement, that is, if he does not transfer or lease out his land to his creditor, the latter should be allowed to pursue his remedies according to law. That is but a reasonable request and I hope that the House will accede to it.

Mr. President : The clause proposed to be added is :—

When the debtor has committed a default in carrying out the terms of the agreement the debts and decrees will be revived and the creditor or decree-holder will be entitled to pursue his remedies according to law as if no application has been made.

Lala Bhagat Ram (Jullundur-cum-Ludhiana, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I rise to support this amendment. When so many concessions and facilities are being provided for the debtors as against their creditors, it is only reasonable that steps should be taken to make it possible for the creditors to have the decrees granted by the conciliation boards executed as speedily as possible. If amendments like these are not accepted, it will only mean that you are encouraging the debtors to avoid paying back their debts even if some of them may be able to pay very easily. I wonder why no provision should be made to compel the debtors to return the money that was advanced to them in time of their need and difficulty. Why should you place so many impediments in the way of the sahuks in the realisation of the money advanced by them and why should the debtors be allowed a free hand in every way? This attitude of the Government and the majority will certainly create this impression that both have joined to crush one particular class of people. If you do not want to create that impression and if you do not like that trade should cease to prosper, you must not persist in this attitude but like reasonable men you should accept this amendments so that the creditors may have the right to pursue their remedies in the courts, according to the law now in force.

[Lala Bhagat Ram.]

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain (North-East Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, I wonder very much at the attitude of the House which has been adopted in considering the matter before the House and I fail to understand where the things are leading to. Any proposal that is put before the House from this side is at once rejected without giving a thought to it and whatever amendments or proposals are put before it from the other side of the House are readily accepted and adopted. Is it because the number of members on this side of the House is small and the number on the other side is large that this treatment is meted out to every suggestion put forward from this side? Whatever the minority party has to say is at once declared as wrong and improper and whatever falls from the lips of any of the members on those benches who are in a majority is said to be quite reasonable and proper. I am extremely sorry to observe that even the Government has failed to do its duty on this occasion. Instead of taking the side of the minority and instead of keeping the balance even, it has gone over to make common cause with the majority party. It is not even trying to show that it has some sympathy with the cause that the minority party is pleading. It has not deigned to do anything even as an eye-wash. I really cannot account for this heartedness of the Government in regard to this matter. Only a few minutes ago Mr. Labh Singh put forward before the House a very reasonable proposal and although he did his best to convince the House of the soundness of his amendment by quoting any number of references, his amendment was rejected without a thought having been given to it.

As you are aware, the conciliation boards have been given very wide powers and they have also the power to reduce the amounts of debts to as low a figure as may please their fancy. They will be entitled to reduce a loan of Rs. 4,000 due to the sahuks to Rs. 1,000 and even to a lower figure. But it is a pity that no provision has been made by which it may be possible for the sahuks to realise even their reduced loans and if any proposal of such a nature is made, it is at once rejected. It is clear, therefore, that debtors are being encouraged to make no efforts to repay their debts. No other conclusion can be drawn from this attitude of the Government and the majority party. If that is the real motive by which the honourable members opposite are being guided, why should they not say so openly? Why should they not ask the Government to make such a law as may enable the debtors to refuse to pay back their debts? That law may further provide that in case a creditor attempts to persuade an honest borrower to return his money, he shall be punished with imprisonment or with fine. That will solve the difficulty with which the honourable members opposite seem to be faced with. And if the intention is to hold the scales even between the debtors and the creditors as has been said, then I see no reason why amendments like these should not be accepted. It is but fair and reasonable that the sahu-kars, many of whom are now very poor, should be helped to recover their money at least from those who can pay and whose sons have become deputy commissioners and other high officers by spending for their education that money which their fathers borrowed from the sahu-kars. Please do not confirm this impression, which has already been created, that this Bill is intended to crush the sahu-kars and trade in the province but accept this amendment which is most reasonable and quite harmless.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi (Shahpur-West Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): I do not see how this amendment will do any good to the creditors. I am positively of the opinion that it is a superfluous amendment and the creditors can, in no way, benefit by it. The award of the conciliation boards will be as effective as any decree of a court and even if a borrower will fail to pay the money in fixed instalments, it will be open to the creditors concerned to have that money realised just as any amount decreed by any other court of law can be realised. I hope the honourable mover will realise that it is useless to have this amendment made and that he will not press for its acceptance.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following clause be added after clause 19:—

When the debtor has committed a default in carrying out the terms of the agreement the debts and decrees will be revived and the creditor or decree-holder will be entitled to pursue his remedies according to law as if no application has been made.

The motion was lost.

Clause 20.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 20 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 21.

Lala Bhagat Ram (Jullundur-cum-Ludhiana, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I beg to move—

That for clause 21, the following be substituted:—

An appeal shall lie from the order of the board granting a certificate to the debtor to the District Judge.

As the boards will have power to decide cases of the value of Rs. 5,000, Rs. 7,000 and even Rs. 10,000 for which an appeal lies to the High Court according to the present law, it is necessary that the orders of the boards granting certificates should be made subject to appeal and revision by some higher authority. In case this is not done there is a danger of injustice being done to the sahu-kars. Without such a provision the boards are very likely to pay little attention to the merits of the cases that will come up before them for decision. While on this point I may warn the Government that it is already being accused of having made a common cause with the majority party in the Council in order to crush the money-lenders who are helpless and who are now very poor. I shall not say that it is really so. But one thing is clear and that is that we are not even allowed to speak out our mind. Efforts are made to prevent us from speaking by putting closure motions whenever we get up to speak on any point. During the course of the last few days, whenever we got up to speak, the closure motion was put. To me it appears that the Government and the majority party have decided not to listen to what we have to say. In order to gag us either Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram or some one of his party will get up to move that the question be now put and the pity is that as soon as a motion like that is made, it is accepted by you.

[Lala Bhagat Ram.]

Mr. President : It is extremely regrettable that the honourable member is attacking not only his honourable colleagues but also the Chair. Can he quote a single instance in which the voice of the minority was suppressed or the minority was allowed to be oppressed? I have tried to treat all parties equally. I have not allowed the majority to oppress the minority nor have I allowed the minority to obstruct the majority. It is most unfair that the honourable member, while replying to another honourable member, should have brought in the Chair. I would request him, therefore, either to quote an instance in support of what he has said or withdraw his remarks at once.

Lala Bhagat Ram (Urdu): It was never my intention to cast any aspersion on the Chair or on the House. I only tried to state in my own way the facts that I have known and if in doing so I have offended anyone, I am sorry for it. I was trying to impress upon the House the need of placing some sort of check on the boards so that there should not be any fear of miscarriage of justice. I need hardly say that the sahukars have always remained as obedient and loyal to the Government as the zamindars. They contributed large sums of money towards loans raised during the Great War and even during the Civil Disobedience Movement their attitude was praiseworthy. It is, therefore, the duty of the Government to safeguard their interests as well. After these few words from me I hope that this amendment will be accepted.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That for clause 21, the following be substituted :—

An appeal shall lie from the order of the board granting a certificate to the debtor to the District Judge.

Lala Chetan Anand (West Punjab Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, I beg to move—

That for clause 21, the following be substituted :—

An appeal shall lie from the order of the board granting a certificate to the debtor to the deputy commissioner.

I need hardly say that I have moved this amendment in order that the Government may choose between the district judge and the deputy commissioner. If for some reasons it may not be acceptable to the Government to vest the district judges with powers of hearing appeals against the orders of the boards it may vest the deputy commissioners with that power. What we want is that there must be some sort of check over the boards. They should know that their orders are subject to appeal and revision and so forth. You know that the orders of the boards granting certificate to the debtors under clause 19 will have far-reaching effects. According to those orders not only the rate of interest will be reduced, but in many cases the amounts of loans will also be reduced and then no costs will be given to the creditors. Under the circumstances it is only necessary that the order of the boards should be made subject to appeal so that they may take every care in passing such orders. With these few words I commend my motion for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That for clause 21 the following be substituted :—

An appeal shall lie from the order of the board granting the certificate to the debtor to the deputy commissioner.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Jullundur, Muhammadan, Rural). (Urdu) : Sir, I really wonder at this attitude of the honourable members on the opposite benches. They are never tired of condemning the present system of government and of demanding swaraj for the country. They urge the Government in and out of season that greater control should be given to the Indians in the government of the country and that our own men, not the Englishmen, should be entrusted with more powers. But now when the Government has decided to appoint Indians for deciding the matters between the debtors and the creditors, they do not want these powers to be vested in the Indians. From this I can safely conclude that they do not want the debtors to obtain any relief. My friends on the opposite benches know that in the present courts of law it is very easy to procure witnesses false or otherwise and in some cases also to influence the presiding officers and then to obtain decrees against the debtors. They also know that the members of these boards will be local men who will have full and personal knowledge of the transactions between the money-lenders and the debtors and that, therefore, it will be well nigh impossible to deceive them and obtain decrees for the sums of money that may not be even due to the sahu-kars. It is for this reason that they do not want the members of the boards to have a free hand in the matter. They want that the fear of the district judges or the deputy commissioners should always haunt these members and that they should not be able to do full justice to the debtors. These are only tactics to evade the real issue and I hope that the House will not be deceived by them.

It is after a very long time that the Government has thought fit to apply the proper remedy for the ills from which the agriculturists are suffering and I am sure that nothing will be allowed to be done which will mar the effect of this remedy. At this time when the number of advocates of equality and fraternity is daily increasing all the world over, it does not behove my friends to adopt such an attitude. There are persons—and their number is pretty large—who can be found in almost every country and who want that taking and giving of interest should be disallowed by law because they think and very rightly too that this is the root of all evil. If this can be done we will be saved the trouble of this bak bak and jhak jhak in the Council.

Mr. President : That is not the question now before the House.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : This interruption by you, Sir, has reminded me of the story of an old woman and his son who died of thirst. This son of the old woman managed to read Persian or at least something of it and when one day he came home, he asked for water from his mother saying ab biared, ab biared. As the mother could not understand what her son wanted, she sometimes brought this thing and sometimes that thing but never water which the son wanted. As the son continued to ask for water in the same language which his mother was not able to understand, he died of thirst ultimately. When some neighbours came to offer their sympathies to the bereaved mother and asked what had happened, she told them the whole thing. The neighbours then explained to her what her son had asked. At this the poor mother bewailed—

آب اب کودا مویا بیجہ فارسیان کہر گالے
جے میں جاندی پانی منگدا بہر بہر دزدی پیالے

You, Mr. President, know that I do not know English.

Mr. President : Order, order. A member cannot without the permission of the Chair, address the Council in any vernacular of the province. The honourable member has been a member of this House for so many years. Has he ever heard the President speaking in Urdu ? He should withdraw two things : the last part of his speech and also the words

”بک بک جھک جھک“

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Sir, I withdraw both these things. The representatives of the money-lending classes want that they should continue to derive advantage from the law courts as they have been doing in the past. With this end in view they bring in such amendments. In the circumstances I strongly oppose the amendment now before the House.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) :

3 P. M. three members. One of these three members will be the president of the board and the remaining two its members.

Nothing has been said about the qualifications of these members. In the absence of any provision stating the qualifications of the members of these boards, it is very possible that such persons may be appointed as members of these boards who are quite inefficient and unqualified. There is every chance of such people being appointed as members who are illiterate and quite unfit to discharge their duties. Men like the members of district boards of backward districts can be appointed as members of the boards. Similarly in urban areas any tax payer can be appointed as a member and educated men can be ignored. There is every fear that ordinary shopkeepers who have some influence on the Government officers can by flattery win their good opinion and be appointed members of the conciliation boards. The members of these boards ought to be persons who know law and have educational qualifications. If in every district you are going to establish a conciliation board there is every likelihood that such people who have got no knowledge of law may become their members. Often it happens that members of a panchayat even if they have no jurisdiction in the matter decide the matter. They think that it becomes their duty to give their decision if an application is once presented to them. They never care to see whether the matter regarding which the application is made is within their jurisdiction. Similar things can be expected from the conciliation boards if no qualified members are appointed as their members. It would be very unfair if these boards took action even in cases which they are not entitled to decide. Under the circumstances it is very necessary that appeal should lie from the decisions of these boards. It has been stated that there is no chance of collusive decrees being given. I may submit that in order to harm the interests of a third person collusive decrees can be obtained. With these words I support the amendment now before the House.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment under consideration. In the first place it has not been found out whether the deputy commissioners will have time for these heavy duties apart from those that they are at present performing. The deputy commissioners in the Punjab are very much over-worked. They may not find time to dispose of all the thousand and one pieces of work entrusted to them. There is no mention of district and sessions judges in this motion. As deputy commissioners they are heavily over-worked and will never have time to dispose of the work that will be constantly thrown on them. Again it is quite possible that many boards may have retired district and sessions judges as their members. If they come to a certain understanding with the consent of the parties, how can the deputy commissioner decide against them. Deputy commissioners do not do any civil work. All that is expected from them is that they should do criminal and executive work. How can they dispose of civil work of this magnitude? Again, there is no staff with them for this extra work and that staff which they at present possess is hardly enough to cope with the multifarious duties that they have to perform. The staff is generally over-worked and it works from 10 in the morning to 6 in the evening. Still it is not able to dispose of its work. So extra staff will have to be provided for which I do not think the Government will be prepared to bear the cost. I also doubt whether the Government will be able to persuade the deputy commissioners to do this heavy additional work. Besides this amendment is absolutely unnecessary and so must not be supported by any member of the House.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, the principle involved in both these amendments is the same. The question is whether the right of appeal should be conferred on dissatisfied persons against the decisions of these boards. The first point that I want to make is that the grant of the certificate involves very serious results touching the rights of at least 60 per cent. of the creditors. We assume with respect to the amendment that was carried yesterday that in any compromise or composition at least 40 per cent. of the debts would be represented. But it leaves out 60 per cent. of the total amount of debt due by the applicant. Now, in view of these serious results which the grant of the certificate involves, is it not proper that the right of appeal should be given to persons dissatisfied with the agreement? I assume that the honourable Leader of the Unionist Party tacitly concurs in the view that such right of appeal would be barbarous or is not called for by the circumstances of the case, that it would be detracting from the full measure of relief which he seeks to provide in this Bill. But let us contemplate for a few minutes the serious results which flow from the grant of a certificate. There is the question of the rate of interest touching the sixty per cent. of the creditors. There is the question of the cost of the case and what is still more important and in fact the most important thing in the matter is the suspension of all remedies so far as sixty per cent. of the creditors are concerned. It postpones all remedies which are open to them almost indefinitely. As I pointed out yesterday the agreement may provide that the instalments which are to be paid under it shall range over a period of 20 years. All rights and remedies which under the ordinary law inure to the sixty per cent. of the creditors will have to remain in suspension for the long period of 20 years. In view of this important series of results which flows from the grant of the certificate by the conciliation board, I would submit that it is all important that the right of appeal should be given to the dissatisfied creditors. This is still more necessary when we remember that so far as the personnel of these boards is concerned this Act when it is passed will be absolutely silent as to their qualifications. Even that modest amendment which I moved that the chairman of the board and at least half the members should be persons with some judicial experience was turned down. So we have not got any guarantee in the Act itself. We are left to the sweet mercy of the executive. There is no guarantee in the Act itself that these persons would be persons qualified to adjudicate in the matters which would be entrusted to their care. Our experience in other well-known directions is sad, in the matter of assessors, in the matter of panchayats, and in the matter of members of district boards for instance. These people are bound to be influenced by their local bias, by their local or communal prejudices and there is every possibility that the ends of justice would be thwarted if the right of appeal is denied. After all the principle of appeal is a recognized principle of civilized jurisprudence at the present day. Human judgment is liable to error and it is only to correct that error that the right of appeal is allowed. Under the ordinary law causes and suits of the value of ten thousand rupees are tried by senior sub-judges, people who have training of long years behind them, while in this case we do not know to whom these matters would be entrusted for adjudication. It is, therefore, in the highest degree necessary that the right of appeal should be given.

[Mr. Labh Singh.]

The point has been trotted out that these decrees would be consent decrees and that, therefore, no appeal is necessary. One has got only to state this to show the absurdity of it. In the first place we do not contemplate that persons who are parties to the agreement should have a right of appeal. What is being urged is that the right of appeal should be given to people who are no parties to the composition, i.e., to those who have been left out in the lurch, who are dissatisfied with the agreement, who claim that the agreement has proceeded on wrong lines or that it is contrary to facts that have been brought before the board or otherwise not in accordance with the weight of evidence that was placed before the members of the board. The absence of a right of appeal only prejudices those who stand outside the agreement and not those who are in it.

Another argument has been put forward that the deputy commissioners and district judges have no time to deal with these matters. This, again, is wrong in fact, because as I pointed out the other day the moment that you constitute these boards you practically relieve our civil courts of a good deal of their business. This would be so even if this Bill were confined in its operation only to the agriculturists. Ninety per cent. of the population as we are told from day to day belongs to that class, either they are statutory or non-statutory agriculturists or persons depending upon agriculture, and they would be covered by this Bill. We are to assume, therefore, that 90 per cent. of the litigation that is going on in our courts belongs to this class of people. If 40 per cent. of these people refrain from going to the ordinary courts and the other 60 per cent. are prevented from going to them, then apparently the so-called civil courts will be relieved of all their work and there is no fear of any congestion taking place either in the work of the deputy commissioner or the district judge. Therefore that argument also goes overboard.

I would submit, therefore, that judged by every canon of fairness and justice the right of appeal should not be taken away but on the contrary it should be expressly conferred upon those who are dissatisfied with the decrees of these courts.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural): The real principle involved in this amendment is that an appeal should be allowed to some officer. So far as those who have given notices of these amendments are concerned it is immaterial to them whether the appeal is to the district judge or the deputy commissioner or the district magistrate. We have to make up our mind as to this essential principle that is, whether an appeal should be allowed. So long as an appeal is allowed it is immaterial to urban benches whether it is to a district judge or to a deputy commissioner or to a district magistrate. At least, this is what I have been able to judge from the speeches made on that side. Personally I am opposed to this principle of an appeal being conceded and my reasons are these. In the first instance we should not forget that these conciliation boards are to consist of at least three persons. There may be more than three on them but at least one chairman and two members must be there in order to constitute a conciliation board. When you have had a bench of three persons selected by the local Government to decide a case there is no need for an appeal being allowed to another court. After all as was remarked by one speaker on this side some of those members, some at least, are likely to be local people. Parties who come before them will lay their case in a free and easy manner and they will be able to get at the truth more easily than a judge in a civil court who is bound by so many artificial rules of evidence. (An honourable member: Then abolish the courts.) If I had my way I would probably prune the wild growth of courts to a very large extent. There will not be the present unending series of legal proceedings—original proceedings, appeals, second appeals, reviews and revisions. And if my honourable friend will allow me, I will draw his attention to the Punjabi saying:—

جیتا سو ہارا—ہارا سو مرے

In litigation even the man who actually wins in the end is not in a better position than a man who has lost and the man who actually loses a litigation is in the position of a man who is practically dead. That is the meaning of the saying and the significance of this saying ought to be well-known to my honourable friend. This hierarchy of courts here, so many of them, deciding the same cause of action one after the other has been the cause of our ruin. And if I had my way I would certainly introduce very radical reforms in the system of our courts. However, the point is why an appeal should not be allowed. My first argument as already submitted is that if the board is to consist of at least three persons, the executive government may be expected to select men who would be able to do justice in an even-handed manner. As the boards will consist of men with local knowledge and the parties will in their presence, be honest and frank with regard to the statement of their case, there is no reason why we should fear that a miscarriage of justice will occur. If there are any cases of miscarriage of justice then there is an opportunity given to the party aggrieved to file an application for review. And if facts are brought to the notice of a conciliation board and the board is convinced that they have been led into an error, certainly they will set their judgment right.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

One of the arguments put forward by the honourable member, Mr. Labh Singh, was that if there is an agreement between one creditor and a debtor that instalments should cover a period of twenty years, then all the others, at least those creditors to whom 60 per cent. of the debts are owing, will have lost their remedy. The remedy will certainly be lost if we believe his premises to be correct, but the actual instance which he has selected is impossible of occurrence. If instalments covering a period of twenty years are agreed upon between a debtor and a creditor you may take it that the conciliation board will refuse to authenticate that agreement. (An honourable member : How ?) Just look at the words of the clause. If the period is excessive then the conciliation board has power to refuse to authenticate that agreement. (An honourable member : Who is to define "excessive" ?) (Another honourable member : Common-sense). (An other honourable member : It is very rare). Is common-sense the monopoly of civil court judges only ? If common-sense is rare probably it will be found to be rarer in those who are in a way hide-bound by technical rules. Those who are not accustomed to pay homage to technicalities may be expected to have better common-sense than those who are hedged in by these technicalities, and my honourable friend will admit that civil judges are more curbed and cribbed by technicalities than ordinary persons.

Sir, I was submitting when interrupted that in the case of an excessively long period of instalments the conciliation boards will refuse to authenticate the agreement. Then, again, suppose there is a compromise decree passed in terms of a compromise in an ordinary civil court, is the effect in any way different ? The defendant comes into court, confesses judgment and the plaintiff and the defendant come to a compromise that the whole of the defendant's holding will be made over to the plaintiff for twenty years. A decree in terms of this compromise must ensue. What is the remedy of other creditors in such a case ? Is not the present law exactly the same as it is proposed to make it under this Bill with certain reservations. Even courts sometimes make over the whole of the holding of a judgment-debtor to a judgment-creditor for a full period of 20 years. I will quote one instance from my own district of which I have personal knowledge. In this instance 340 bighas of canal irrigated land was made over to one creditor for the full twenty years. What was the remedy left for other creditors in this case? (An honourable member: We are talking of vigilant creditors.) Here also there is an opportunity for creditors to be vigilant and also reasonable. If the creditors to whom not less than 40 per cent. of the debts are due have come to an amicable settlement, is there any reason why the others should not come to a mutual settlement? After all, you cannot say that creditors who consent to a settlement are fools. Debtors may be fools but creditors have never proved themselves fools. They may be anything else. Thus the serious consequences to which reference has been made are brought upon the creditors by themselves. If they have the fairness to come to terms with a debtor as other creditors have done there would be absolutely no fear of any serious consequences following.

My friend has made a reference to panchayats and district boards. He will admit that panchayats are elected bodies and neither the head of the district nor the head of the executive government has anything to do with the election of panchayats. Under a system of election with an ignorant electorate it sometimes happens that undesirable persons are elected, but certainly we must concede that when the members of conciliation boards are selected by the executive authority such mistakes are not likely to occur. Let us remember that they will be selected on the recommendation of district officers who have full knowledge of their districts. This will prevent any likelihood of undesirable persons being selected. Under the circumstances I may be allowed to submit that in the interests of simplicity of procedure, in the interests of expedition, in the interests of economy and in the interests of true justice no right of appeal should be conceded.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural): I thought the amendment was such that no sensible man would support it and I had absolutely no mind to speak on it. But after hearing the arguments of the honourable urban members I thought it necessary to say something on it. Especially my surprise knew no bounds when I heard the legal luminaries arguing for an appeal from the order of the conciliation board consisting of three members and the appeal being heard by one man. This is a thing unheard of. Have you come across any instance in which a case was decided by three judges and an appeal on it went before a single judge? That is what the amendment comes to. Unfortunately the system of laws foisted upon this country has proved very unsuitable, and has landed the ignorant litigant public in indebtedness. Here are a series of courts in the land entailing any amount of expenditure. The procedure adopted by them is so complicated that by the time a man either wins or loses his case he is ruined. Honourable members urging for a right of appeal do not know the difficulties of the litigant public because they have a very rich harvest to reap by these series of courts. But the litigant who has to go to a number of courts, first to one, then to another, then to a third and again to a fourth, by the time he reaches the final court spends any amount of money. In order to avoid this complexity, Government has brought forward this simple Bill and hence no appeal has been provided for from the order of the conciliation board. How can any one say that the members of these boards ordinarily will be zaildars or men who are unacquainted with the law and its procedure? How can you say that? It is quite possible that one of the members may be a retired district judge, or a judge of the High Court and the other members may also be well versed in law and procedure. I do not want to say anything more. With these words I oppose the amendment.

[K. B. Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan.]

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural): I was extremely surprised to hear the last speech and I was reminded of a proverb, a rather vulgar proverb—“Nau sau chuhe kha ke billi haj ko gai.” The honourable gentleman who has just sat down after having administered the British law is now trying to qualify himself to sit on the conciliation board, and therefore he would throw overboard all that law which he has been administering for so long during his long and meritorious service. People are supposed to change when they are children or when they have not made up their minds, but one would have thought that after 50 years the Khan Bahadur would have fixed ideas on the subject. It is therefore very surprising how party feelings influence people and that is one, in fact the greatest, argument why cases of this kind should not be left entirely to people who would be influenced by party feeling, namely these men who will arrange some sort of compromise (interruption) my friend says not compromise but coercion by means of these conciliation boards.

One argument given by Chaudhri Sahib is this,—one is so much surprised when one hears him: he is springing surprises every day. He says: Here are three men. If there are three men, why have an appeal? Have you heard, he says, of such a thing that three people should sit down and give their decision or try to bring about a conciliation under this law and then there should be an appeal? One can understand, he says, an appeal from one man's judgment or one man's decision on this matter (or interference on this matter), but how can you expect an appeal from the judgment of three judges? Chaudhri Sahib should have had a look at the court which is very close by. There is a High Court Judge in the Gurdwara Tribunal, and he is assisted by two very competent men, namely an advocate of at least ten years' standing and a sessions judge or a senior sub-judge. Here are these three men and if the honourable Chaudhri Sahib does not know he should have a look and see how that work is carried on very competently and efficiently. Even then an appeal is provided to the High Court and a division bench of the High Court hears that appeal. So is the case with the benches of honorary magistrates who are constituted by Government and where appeal lies to the district magistrate. And here is my friend the Chaudhri Sahib who cannot possibly conceive of an appeal from three people and who says theirs should be the last word on the matter which should be accepted. The ministers who will constitute the Government in the near future influenced by their large parties in the Council will give these posts to men who will always be sitting at their door asking favour in one form or another and they will be given these posts. There can be no doubt that such a thing is bound to happen in the near future. (An honourable member: Do not take such an uncharitable view of your future ministers). Therefore, I say political considerations, caste considerations, religious considerations, all these will sway the judgment of the local Government that is to be, in the appointment of the members of conciliation boards, and I ask, if these men are above party and political influences why are three men to be appointed on each board? The very idea of having three men is that you are not prepared to repose confidence in these men. One must be an advocate of one side, one must be an advocate of the other side, and the third must be an arbitrator or an umpire. The principle underlying it is that there must be both parties represented and that there must be an arbitrator or umpire to give his decision. That is the main idea underlying the conciliation boards which are to be constituted in the near future and that is why I find that in a tribunal of this kind one member is a Sikh, one Hindu and the third a judge of the High Court to give a decision when these two gentlemen differ. The basis of the constitution of these boards is want of confidence.

Then my friend the Chaudhri Sahib said—he was very emphatic when a question was put to him, he said that he would have no civilised system of justice. He said that if he had his way he would demolish all the courts that were functioning. He would construct them in the way in which panchayats have been working. They will sit in an easy manner with chaddars and so on—smoking hukkas and sometimes smoking charas and when in a moment of forgetfulness a case of Rs. 10,000 or Rs. 20,000 comes up and the opinion of a member is asked he will say: My opinion is the same as that of the other member and when he is asked what the opinion of the other member is he generally says: I do not know, you just ask him. This is the sort of thing that goes on there and you have seen it yourself. They cannot possibly smoke in courts, they are not permitted to smoke in the sessions judges' courts but if they were permitted they would all take their hukkas and decide the cases in that manner.

Chaudhri Sahib does not want civilised system of justice and says there should be no appeals of any kind. You are clamouring for western institutions. You want 95 per cent. representation or 90 per cent. representation, and you talk of democracy, but when a thing is asked as a safeguard, the honourable Chaudhri Sahib says: I want to demolish all these courts and this system of dispensing justice which has been going on in the Punjab during the last 60 or 70 years. Persistency and obstinacy should have some limit and when we are invited to talk in a responsible manner we should not talk in this irresponsible manner. If you like to be irresponsible you can be, but try to examine this argument that you want to demolish the system of administering justice that has been in existence and you want to reconstruct it in the way in which the conciliation boards are going to dispense justice: try to examine and do not be influenced by party feelings. After all why should you be afraid of these matters?

One other argument was brought forward, that you save compromise decrees being brought under review or appeal or anything of that kind. But see what sort of compromise decrees they would be or these compromises would be. They would be coercion decrees and we would have nothing but coercion in matters of this kind.

Then the honourable Chaudhri Chhotu Ram wandered into other futile arguments and said panchayats are bad because they are elected and as they are elected therefore they are bound to be bad. He would want us to remember that members of the conciliation boards would be selected and not elected. But by whom would they be selected? Will not these boards be appointed by elected men who would form the local Government? If you are so much prejudiced against election, why leave this matter in the hands of the local Government which would be thoroughly an elected affair. I, therefore, very seriously ask my friends on the other side that when they are going to permit cases to be dealt with of the value of Rs. 10,000 or above where appeals are permitted to their lordships of the Privy Council they should at least permit one court to revise the errors which are bound to creep in cases of this kind. This is a very modest demand put forward and I see no reason why when we have appeals from gurdwara tribunal and from benches of honorary magistrates, we should not have appeals in conciliation boards.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

Mr. President : The question is—

That for clause 21 the following be substituted :—

An appeal shall lie from the order of the board granting a certificate to the debtor to the district judge.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That for clause 21 the following be substituted :—

An appeal shall lie from the order of the board granting the certificate to the debtor to the deputy commissioner.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 21 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 22.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): I beg to move the following amendment—

After the proviso to clause 22 the following words shall be added :—

Provided further that no application for review shall be entertained if presented more than twelve months after the date of the order which the person interested seeks to have reviewed.

I think that after the debate which we heard on the preceding clause there is little need for me to say much about this amendment. I think the House realises clearly that the proceedings before a board are very different from the proceedings before a court. I want to lay stress on the provision in clause 15 that the settlement shall be an amicable settlement entered into with the consent of all parties concerned. If one has a settlement of that kind there should in practice be very little need for this section at all. The board will very seldom find it necessary to review its order. If, however, it does find it necessary to do so, then it is obvious that there should be some reasonable time within which the parties interested may apply to the boards. It should not be possible for the parties to come forward after a long term of years to upset the proceedings entered into with full consent. With these words I commend my amendment to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. President : The question is—

That after the proviso to clause 22 the following words shall be added :—

Provided further that no application for review shall be entertained if presented more than twelve months after the date of the order which the person interested seeks to have reviewed.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 22 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 23.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) :
I beg to move—

That in clause 23, line 6, the words " or by a legal practitioner " be omitted.

The amendment which I have moved is very important from the point of view of both the creditors and the debtors. The original clause as proposed by Government was—

In any proceedings under this part of the Act any party may with the permission of the board be represented by an agent authorised in writing, but not by a legal practitioner.

It was therein clearly and emphatically stated that the legal practitioners should not appear in any proceeding before the conciliation board. Obviously it was very reasonable. I, not being on the select committee, am not in a position to know what led to the substitution of the words that now appear in clause 23. I am told that it was as a sort of compromise between the two parties that these words were substituted. Anyhow, if it was a bait to the members of the legal profession in order to secure their support to the Bill, I think the Government has absolutely failed. If it was out of deference to the wishes of any particular section of the members of the select committee, unless any of the members of the select committee make it clear why the change was made in the clause, I may not be in a position to follow the point. However, the object of these clauses constituting the conciliation boards is quite clear. The Government and the House have tried their best to make the procedure of the conciliation boards simple, speedy, inexpensive and as intelligible as possible. If legal practitioners are allowed to appear in the proceedings before the conciliation boards, I think in the first instance the parties, both the creditors and the debtors, will have to bear extra expenditure, they will have to pay for the engagement of legal practitioners : and then the legal practitioners would draw in all the legal technique and there will be the whole Civil Procedure Code imported into the proceedings of the conciliation boards. This will not help any side at all. It will tend to make the work of the conciliation boards very difficult, very tardy and at the same time very complex and confused. Moreover, it will delay the proceedings before the conciliation boards out of all proportion. The difficulty is the more accentuated by the fact that there will be one debtor and any number of creditors and they will all have to prove their debts. If legal practitioners are allowed to represent the different sets of creditors, they will all be coming up with proofs and they will all be demanding the striking of issues and they will all be taking their stand upon the general procedure pertaining to civil courts in the land. (Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh: Why should that not be done?) I think the honourable member may as well explain in his speech why it should be done. The conciliation boards are not going to come to any definite judgment as to the amount of debt owing to a creditor. It is just possible without taking the least notice of the accounts, that they may be in a position as soon as the parties appear before them to press them to come to an amicable settlement: and as the business of the conciliation board is to reconcile the parties it may not at all be necessary to go through the various accounts, to apply to them legal standards that are prevalent in civil courts, allow the parties to let in evidence, allow the legal practitioners to examine and cross-examine the witnesses and then to give lengthy judgments. If it is contemplated that the conciliation boards should go through all these formalities then I think it will be a hopeless task. We should make their work very simple if this measure is to be effective. That is why I submit that legal practitioners should be dispensed with so far as these conciliation boards are concerned. With these words I commend my amendment to the House.

[Shaikh Abdul Ghani.]

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): I beg to move—

That in clause 23, the words "with the permission of the board" be omitted.

The clause, if my amendment is adopted, would read as follows:—

In any proceedings under this part of the Act, any party may be represented by an agent authorised in writing or by a legal practitioner.

The clause as it stands makes representation by pleader dependent upon the sweet will of the conciliation board, whereas if my amendment is accepted, it would make the representation by counsel a matter of right of the litigant. The exclusion of lawyers reminds me of the famous black measure in respect of which it was said that it did not admit of a vakil or dakil or appeal. In this particular Bill before us we have dispensed with appeal and we have been, throughout the procedure that we have adopted, dispensing with dakil and argument and one thing more remains to be done before this measure also approximates in full identity with the measure that has gone before it, namely that we should also shut out representation by counsel or pleader. The main argument urged by my honourable friend from Sargodha against representation by counsel is this. He says that it is only in courts of justice that parties should be permitted to be represented by vakils. By necessary implication he means to convey the idea that these are not courts of justice but courts of injustice and therefore the legal practitioners are out of court or out of forum so far as the conciliation boards are concerned. Another point that he has raised shows that he has got a very poor idea of his class or the position of the conciliation boards. He says pleaders and lawyers would confound or confuse the boards, as if the primary function of a legal practitioner according to him was to confound the judges and not to help them in the administration of justice. That is a very poor idea of the legal practitioner. The honourable member also assumes another thing, namely that the persons to be appointed to sit on these conciliation boards would be persons of a calibre who would be open to be confused and confounded by the legal practitioners. That again is hardly fair. Either he supports my argument that we should have some sort of guarantee of the minimum qualification of the members of the conciliation boards or he cuts the very ground from underneath his own argument. It is too late in the day now to go at length into the elementary philosophy of legal representation. The doctrine has been fully established in all jurisprudence, ancient or modern, and the reasons need not be now gone into in extenso. It is well known that a person may be incapacitated from representing his case for various reasons, for instance by absence or by reason of illness or by reason of mental incapacity to represent his case. It is well known that when a person is pleading his own cause he is confused and he does not see things in the proper perspective and it is the business and duty of a legal representative to sift things for him and to represent them to the court in the proper perspective. I hope that at any rate this amendment would be accepted by the House, so that every man may be able as of right to have his case represented by his counsel.

4 P. M.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 23 the words "with the permission of the board" be omitted.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : I think to a certain extent I was responsible for the addition of the words "or by a legal practitioner." They were added in the select committee, and I do not remember whether we were unanimous or not on this point, but certainly there was a majority in favour of this addition. The clause as it stands is excellent. My own experience is based mainly on the administration of the Frontier Crimes Regulation in the Mianwali district. There when lawyers appeared before me and asked permission to represent a client I always welcomed their assistance, and I found them most helpful in preventing me from making mistakes and in eliciting facts and generally in securing that justice was done. On those occasions lawyers appeared with permission. When they appear as a matter of right I do not think that the same remarks would always apply. Some of them are then inclined to abuse—certainly to extend their privileges to the very fullest extent, and I am not sure that they are always aids to justice, though of course in a great many cases they are. As the clause stands, I think we have a safeguard that they shall not abuse the concession given to them. At the same time there is a very fair chance that they will help the boards to administer justice.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram (Multan division, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I only want to bring to the notice of the House that the select committee in paragraph 20 of its report have stated "The Committee unanimously decided to allow legal practitioners to appear in proceedings before boards." When this question was discussed in the select committee and it was unanimously decided by them that legal practitioners should be allowed to appear before the boards, I do not see any reason why you should omit them now as my friend suggests. It is only reasonable that people should be allowed to be represented by lawyers.

Mr. President : There appears to be some misunderstanding which I venture to clear up. By an oversight amendment No. 1 to clause 23 was not called first. Therefore the honourable member Shaikh Abdul Ghani was called and he moved amendment No. 2. The mistake was discovered afterwards, and therefore amendment No. 2 was not proposed from the Chair. But I find that some members have not realised the situation and are speaking to amendment No. 2 which has not been proposed from the Chair and which is therefore not before the House.

[Mr. President.]

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : I want to submit that having known that the attitude of the Government is not to delete these words, I beg to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. President : There is no question of withdrawal as the amendment of Shaikh Abdul Ghani has not so far been proposed from the Chair and, therefore, is not before the Council.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I have not much to say on this amendment. What I really desire is to explain what happened in the select committee. The clause as it stands was the result of a compromise. There were some members who were opposed to the appearance of legal practitioners before conciliation boards. There were others who were in favour of allowing this privilege and one of the strongest arguments advanced by the representatives of urban interests was that under this Bill we were not conceding the right of appeal to parties, and therefore it was only fair that parties should be allowed to be represented before conciliation boards by legal practitioners. We realised the fairness of this argument and felt inclined to agree to the proposal put forward by them. We wanted particularly to be deferential to their wishes because they felt they were in the minority. Another reason which was urged by the Sikh members of the select committee was that in many cases a legal practitioner may be more useful to a debtor than to a creditor. The creditor, man to man, is more intelligent than a debtor. Therefore while a creditor may be in a position to explain his case fully, the debtor himself may not be able to do justice to his own side of the case. We, therefore, arrived at a unanimous solution that the clause should be given the shape in which it stands at present. Shaikh Abdul Ghani's amendment is not before the House and, I am afraid, I shall have to oppose Mr. Labh Singh's amendment.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 23 the words "with the permission of the board" be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 23 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 24.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I beg to move—

That in clause 24 for the words "when an application has been made to the board under section 8," the following words be substituted :—

On the passing of an order by the board staying further proceedings against the debtor.

The object of this amendment is to prevent a useless stay of civil proceedings and to save the time of courts. The necessary result of putting in an application before a conciliation board is to prevent the institution of new suits and the stay of all pending civil proceedings against the debtor.

If any execution proceedings are pending, at whatever stage they may be, they will be stayed. They may have reached a very late stage; the property may have been attached, proclamations of sale may have been issued and the actual date for sale might have been fixed, and a person who has no desire to get a decision from or even to go before a conciliation board, just to get a postponement of the sale, may send an application to the conciliation board which he has no desire to prosecute. The clause as it stands at present, leads to an automatic stay of all suits, applications for execution and other civil proceedings pending in various courts. What my amendment proposes is that instead of there being an automatic stay of suits, there should be an order by the conciliation board so that the stay of proceedings is taken away from the hands of the debtor and is given to the conciliation boards which will have quasi-judicial functions. A similar procedure already exists in insolvency proceedings. An insolvency court can pass an order staying further civil proceedings in other courts, and on the passing of such an order, such proceedings are stayed. This amendment, if accepted, would ensure that the proceedings in courts will not be stayed at the order of the debtor, but rather will be stayed by the order of conciliation boards, which would be a co-ordinate authority with quasi-judicial functions, and which are the creation of a statute. The debtor is not likely to be put to any particular disadvantage or to any hardship, but it would certainly save the dignity of the court. It should not be possible to a party who is appearing before a court to ask the court for an unnecessary adjournment and when that is refused, to order it to stay proceedings as he has drafted an application and intends to put it in the box next door to a conciliation board. If the civil court is to have its hands stayed, its proceedings suspended, at whatever inconvenient stage that a stay is asked for, it is but proper that it should be by an order of a conciliation board rather than at the order and sweet will of the debtor, by the mere filing of an unstamped application which he may or may not subsequently pursue and which he may have put in with a view just to get an adjournment. The debtor incurs no risk, nor does he suffer any disadvantage by putting in an application and not prosecuting it later.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 24 for the words "when an application has been made to the board under section 8," the following be substituted:—

On the passing of an order by the board staying further proceedings against the debtor.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East, Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, Mr. Puri argued that courtesy required that before proceedings were stayed a civil court should be asked by a conciliation board to stay further proceedings. If proceedings are stopped automatically in consequence of the law as we propose to make it under this clause, it will not be polite. I have not been able to follow this argument. If proceedings in a civil court are stopped in consequence of an impersonal law, there is no question of impoliteness or heart-burning, while on the other hand there may be some reason for regular courts to feel a little resentful if the order comes from a conciliation board. Any way I do not attach much importance to this argument. If that argument falls to the ground, there does not seem to be much force in the other. He says, there is no reason why a civil court should not be allowed to wait until it has actually received an order staying proceedings. But why? After all, nobody is interested, it is not to the advantage of anybody that proceedings in respect of the same matter should go on in two courts simultaneously. If the case has once come up before a conciliation board and the decision of the conciliation board is to be given effect to the best thing is that proceedings in the ordinary civil courts should come to a stop at once. It is only fair that we should desire our conciliation boards to become effective working bodies to the exclusion of ordinary courts in this class of cases. Therefore I oppose this amendment.

[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): Sir, it seems quite impossible to adopt this amendment. You might as well have two courts dealing with the same suit simultaneously and giving contrary decisions.

Mr. President : Question is—

That in clause 24 for the words "when an application has been made to the board under section 8," the following words be substituted:—

On the passing of an order of the board staying further proceedings against the debtor.

The motion was lost.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 24, line 2, for the word and figure "section 8," the word and figure "section 9" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): Sir, I beg to move—

That the following proviso be added to clause 24:—

Provided that no proceedings before a board shall continue for more than a period of three months, and if no final order is passed by the board within three months after the date of the application to the board, the application shall be considered to have been dismissed.

The next amendment has also the same end in view, and it reads as follows:—

Provided that no proceedings before a board shall continue for more than a period of six months, and if no final order is passed by the board within six months after the date of the application to the board, the proceedings shall be considered to have been dismissed.

These are amendments which the zamindar members, if they wish to work these boards honestly, should welcome and to which even the Government ought to have no objection. The idea underlying these amendments is that the proceedings before the conciliation boards ought not to be allowed to drag on for an indefinitely long time, that is, the conciliation boards should send for the parties without loss of time and arrive at a quick decision, and if a decision is not or cannot be arrived at they should cease forthwith to meddle with the matter. It is with that idea that I have sent in these two amendments which are alternative to each other. If you think that a period of three months is too short, though in my opinion it is quite ample, you may reject my first amendment and accept my second amendment which provides a period of six months. I wish the House to realise what appears quite clear to me, that if any proceedings are allowed to drag on before a conciliation board for a period exceeding six months, it would be entirely an abuse of the proceedings before the board. The effect of these proceedings is to give freedom to the debtor from all civil processes from suits, executions, insolvency proceedings, etc., etc., and the conciliation boards should not be permitted to be used simply with that object. My idea is that the proceedings before these boards should be finished with as great a despatch as possible, and six months is quite a sufficient and long period for any matters that would be decided by these boards. After all, is it the idea of the Government or of the supporters of these boards that an application may continue pending before the conciliation board for a year or for a period exceeding six months? Some time limit should be fixed. It would exercise a very wholesome influence on the conciliation boards themselves. They will be induced to work with a certain amount of despatch. If you think that the period of six months is too short, make it nine months or even longer if you please, but you must put a limit to the time that the conciliation boards should take in disposing of their applications.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That the following proviso be added to the clause :—

Provided that no proceedings before a board shall continue for more than a period of three months, and if no final order is passed by the board within three months after the date of the application to the board, the application shall be considered to have been dismissed.

Or, in the alternative,

Provided that no proceedings before a board shall continue for more than a period of six months, and if no final order is passed by the board within six months after the date of the application to the board, the application shall be considered to have been dismissed.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi (Shahpur West, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I rise to oppose the motion now before the House. It is a novel principle which is intended to be introduced in this connection. I have never heard of any such provision in any other law, and I am aware that no time limit has ever been fixed in deciding cases in the case of any court. If this amendment is accepted it will certainly frustrate the whole object of the Bill. In case a time limit is fixed as has been proposed, it will be very easy for the creditors to get the applications of the debtors dismissed. They will take care not to have the summons served on them for the period which will be fixed for the boards to decide cases coming up before them and thus the boards will be turned into a nullity. This amendment, therefore, must be rejected, and it should be left to the good sense of the boards to decide cases coming up before them as early as possible.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural) : I am sorry to observe that from the opposite section of the House there have been moved various amendments, all to the effect that they want to set at naught the provisions contained in the Bill regarding conciliation boards. At first there was an amendment of the honourable member, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, that the whole part be omitted. When that failed he is bringing in amendments after amendments to set at naught the wholesome provisions contained in this part of the Bill.

[Ch. Riasat Ali.]

The question of speedy disposal is not the question before us to-day. Neither is it the question of accumulation of arrears. It is justice that we want and not speedy disposal. We do not mind even if it takes a year or more than a year to effect an honourable and amicable settlement between the creditor and the debtor. What we want is that relief and just relief should be given to the man who is suffering and who is in debt, and who has been ruined on account of the usurious methods of the creditors. Time is not the essence of the thing, but it is the thing itself. It is the justice which we want, however long it may take to achieve it. Moreover, as has been said by the honourable member, Nawab Muhammad Hayat Qureshi in the case of the district magistrates working under Government, it is the magistrates themselves who are responsible for the speedy disposal and no hard and fast rules are prescribed. Nor are there any rules in regard to the revenue, judicial or criminal courts of the land. So far as this aspect of the question is concerned, it is left actually to the good sense of the men in charge of the districts to provide remedial measures so that justice might be done without any unnecessary delay.

Again, this proposal is impracticable and unworkable. Supposing there are many creditors, some of them living in distant districts or there are others who want to evade service in order to take advantage of this provision. There might be persons who do not want that service should be effected on them. Under these circumstances if we fix a certain time limit within which the proceedings are to come to an end ipso facto I do not think we would be giving any relief to debtors and the object of the whole Bill will be marred. Let it be left to the executive government, as in all other respects, to use their discretion and see that these judges or members, whatever they might be called, do not sleep over the matter. Let it be left to Government itself that it should awaken those who are in their deep slumber and drive them to do speedy justice. The mover himself is not sure of the period which will be taken in finishing the proceedings before those boards. In the first instance, he suggests, let it be three months; then he says, let it be six months, and in his speech he says he will not mind the period being extended to one year. He himself in his heart of hearts is not sure that he can fix a time limit within which these proceedings might come to an end. Such a provision that if the board fails to finish the proceedings within a certain period, the application will be considered to be dismissed whitewashes the whole effect of the Bill and is most injurious to the interests of those to whom relief is sought, to be given. With these words I oppose the amendment.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): As I understand the intention of this part of the Bill, it is that proceedings should be finished not in months but in days. But this amendment if carried will, I think, defeat the very intention of the whole of this part. Fix an arbitrary period, make it three months, make it six months or make it seven years, you will find some creditor who for his own ends will deliberately make it impossible to ever come to a decision. He will play out time. I think we must trust to the good sense of the boards in the matter. I oppose the amendment.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I entirely agree with what the learned Legal Remembrancer has pointed out that if these conciliation boards are to be at all useful they will have to act with despatch and the proceedings before them would not be delayed. I am also in complete agreement with him that it should not be possible for any creditor to oust the jurisdiction of conciliation boards by any dilatory tactics on his part. I am quite prepared to obviate the possibility of any dilatory tactics being employed by the creditor, and with your permission, may I suggest to the Honourable Legal Remembrancer if he would accept either of my amendments with the addition of the words "unless for reasons to be stated the board considers it desirable to extend the period." So that in cases where the proceedings are being really delayed by the creditor, say, by some creditor not coming in, by another creditor avoiding service of notice, it will be open to the board to extend the time for another three or six months. I do not believe that it is possible for any creditor to prolong proceedings by evading service as service of notice is prescribed to be by registered post. But I am quite prepared to accept any amendment which may rule out even a remote possibility of this being attempted or done. Therefore, the only objection to this proposal which has been raised by the honourable member from Gujranwala and by the Legal Remembrancer will disappear if discretion is given to the boards to extend the period in special cases. It is very necessary to emphasize that the proceedings must be finished soon. My honourable friend from Gujranwala said, there are no limits fixed on the time which a court might take to decide a case. Conciliation boards are very, very different from courts. They are not bound by any rules of evidence or procedure, nor have they to give any decisions which take time. And further the effect of the institution of a suit in a civil court is not to stay all proceedings. In proceedings relating to conciliation boards it is the interest of one party, the debtor, to see that conciliation proceedings are delayed indefinitely because if they are dismissed ordinary civil proceedings would restart against him. If they are not dismissed but a compromise is effected, he has got to pay something. Therefore, it is to the interest of the debtor to prolong the proceedings as far as he can because both in the case of dismissal of his application and of the passing of a decree he is to suffer. It is, therefore, essential to put some limit to the length of time for which these proceedings could be dragged. Therefore, if the Government is prepared to accept my suggestion I am willing to add to the amendment the words I have already read out. This would meet the only objection which has been pointed out to these amendments and help in carrying out the views of the Government, as indicated in the speech of the Legal Remembrancer.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I would prefer to leave the clause as it is.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following proviso be added to clause 24 :—

Provided that no proceedings before a board shall continue for more than a period of three months, and if no final order is passed by the board within three months after the date of the application to the board, the application shall be considered to have been dismissed.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following proviso be added to clause 24 :—

Provided that no proceedings before a board shall continue for more than a period of six months, and if no final order is passed by the board within six months after the date of the application to the board, the application shall be considered to have been dismissed.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 24 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 25.

Mr. President : The amendment standing in the name of Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan proposes the substitution of a new clause for clause 25. But in effect he proposes three amendments to the existing clause, i.e.—

- (i) the words " of this Act " be inserted in line 6 after the words " part IV " ;
- (ii) the words " or appeal " be added at the end of the clause ; and
- (iii) the words " or when counting the period for the purposes of interest, " be added to the clause.

The honourable member will move these amendments one by one.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Very well. I beg to move—

That the words " of this Act ", be inserted in line 6 of clause 25, after the words " part IV."

The motion was carried.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : I move—

That at the end of the clause the words " or appeal " be added—

The motion was carried.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : I beg to move—

That at the end of the clause the following words be added :—

Or when counting the period for the purposes of interest.

By this amendment I wish to point out and place before the House one fact. The ordinary applications before the board by a creditor or by a debtor will continue ordinarily for some time like six months or five months, or they may ordinarily go in some cases to three years or two years or more than one year. The proposal of Government at present is that when counting the period of limitation this period should be excluded, that is, a suit which was to be brought after four days when an application has been filed by any party and the application has been going on for two years that suit can be filed after two years and four days. For this period of two years for which the application has been pending before the boards, I hope that the debtor will not be compelled to pay interest. It is in favour of the debtor himself that for the period for which the time of limitation is extended he should not be compelled to pay more interest. That is, his liabilities should be the same before the filing of the petition ; and if the petition ends in dismissal after the petition has been disposed of by the board. The period which has been taken for the petition when it is not allowed in the limitation should not be allowed in the interest too. With these words I put my amendment before the House.

Mr. President : The amendment moved is—

That at the end of clause 25 as amended the following words be added :—

Or when counting the period for the purposes of interest.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural) : I support this amendment. In fact it is very necessary. Without this amendment it would be the case that a long time may be spent in the proceedings before the conciliation board, and during that time the creditor will continue to enjoy his interest, and it is to his interest that you may prolong the period. If it is not done then he will try all sorts of means to prolong the proceedings, and he will be taking an advantage for he will be drawing interest all the same while the board is working at conciliation meetings and thus the debtor will suffer. Whether a settlement is arrived at or not, the creditor will be at an advantage, for this period will not be a bar to a fresh suit or for appeal or application or anything while it will be to his advantage to get interest during this period. Why in the original Bill this provision was not put down, I think, is that there was no idea about it, but still the thing is there. I think this is a salutary provision and we should accept it.

Lala Chetan Anand (West Punjab Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, I rise to oppose this amendment. You are aware, that it has already been provided that the making of an application to a board will automatically have the effect of staying all proceedings in the civil courts, and if to this provision the proposed provision is also added whereby interest on loans will cease to be counted from the date of the application to the date of its disposal, you will certainly tempt even those persons to make frivolous applications to the boards who will not be entitled to make such applications. It is a simple reason, and I am sure it will not fail to appeal to the Government. I hope that this amendment will be rejected.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I have nothing more to add with respect to this amendment. It does not fit in where it has been placed. The clause was designed exclusively for extending the period of limitation for suits and applications and other remedies, and it does not come within the 40 per cent. rule. The real disabilities with which the dissenting creditors were to be saddled have been disposed of in the substantive clauses of the Act, and it is really inadvisable that this further disability should be shoved in in this clause which is intended for other purposes. Secondly, it is equally obvious that every person, whether he is entitled under this Bill to present an application or not, may have an application presented simply for the purpose of suspending the interest that accrues on debts which are due by him, and this would let in frivolous applications ad libitum which it is not the intention of the legislature to let in. On these grounds I beg to oppose this amendment.

Mr. President : The question is—

That at the end of clause 25 as amended the following words be added :—

Or when counting the period for the purposes of interest.

The Council divided : Ayes 38 ; Noes 36 ;

AYES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
 Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
 Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
 Akbar Ali, Pir.
 Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
 Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
 Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur, Chaudhri.
 Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
 Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar.
 Haibat Khan Daha, Khan.
 Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
 Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.
 Mazhar Ali, Azhar, Maulvi.
 Mohindar Singh, Sardar.
 Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
 Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan, Chaudhri.
 Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja.

Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur, Malik.

Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.
 Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
 Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
 Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani, Makhdumzada Sayad.
 Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
 Muhammad Sarfaraz Ali Khan, Raja.
 Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
 Nur Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
 Nur Khan, Khan Sahib, Risaldar Bahadur.
 Nurullah, Mian.
 Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
 Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
 Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
 Ujjal Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
 Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.

NOES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
 Askwith, Mr. A. V.
 Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
 Bhagat Ram, Lala.
 Bourne, Mr. F. C.
 Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
 Chetan Anand, Lala.
 Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
 Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
 Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable Malik Sir.
 Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.
 Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.
 Grindal, Mr. A. D.
 Hearn, Mr. J. W.
 Kesar Singh, Rai Sahib Chaudhri.
 Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.
 Labh Singh, Mr.
 Latifi, Mr. A.
 Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.

Macfarlane, Mr. D.
 Manohar Lal, Mr.
 Marsden, Mr. P.
 Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
 Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
 Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.
 Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
 Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
 Nur Elahi, Khan Bahadur Shaikh.
 Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
 Puckle, Mr. F. H.
 Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi, Sir.
 Roberts, Mr. W.
 Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
 Shave, Dr. (Mrs.) M. C.
 Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
 Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair, and it was occupied by the Deputy President).

Mian Nurullah (Lyallpur South, Muhammadan, Rural): I beg to move—

That in clause 25 the following words be added at the end :—

But no creditor who was not actually a party before the board would be entitled to this exclusion of time.

This advantage of the exclusion of time should be given only to those who do appear before the board with a clean hand and in an honest way. The very essence of the conciliation board is that the debts should be liquidated, and, therefore, those who do not come before the board should not get this benefit of exclusion of time.

5 P. M.

Mr. Deputy President: Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 25 the following words be added at the end :—

But no creditor who was not actually a party before the Board would be entitled to this exclusion of time.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): The honourable mover of the amendment has entirely misunderstood the purport and intention of the clause which has just been enacted. The extension of time is proposed to be given only to those persons who are prevented from seeking their relief in courts during the pendency of proceedings before the conciliation boards. If a person is prevented from applying for execution of his decree because of an application having been put in before the conciliation board, he is given an extension of time, inasmuch as he is being prevented by statute from seeking his ordinary remedies. Besides, he is given an extension of time only for the time that he is so prevented. Such a provision exists in almost all similar statutes. No difference can be made or should be made between persons who are 'a party' before the conciliation board and those who are alleged to be 'not a party' before the board. In fact every creditor is a party before conciliation boards whether he is present or not.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): I have very little to add to what Mr. Puri has explained to the House. But I would like to ask one question of the mover of the amendment. When does a party begin to be a party before the board and when does he cease to be so? It must also be remembered that these proceedings before the conciliation boards are very informal, and a part of their strength lies in the informality, and it is difficult to employ in practice the test which the honourable member has suggested in his amendment.

Mian Nurullah: In view of the explanation given by the two previous speakers, I beg leave to withdraw the amendment.

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy President: The question is—

That clause 25 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried

Clause 26.

Mr. Deputy President : The question is—

That clause 26 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

New clause after clause 26.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I beg to move—

That the following be added between clauses 26 and 27 :—

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in the Court Fees Act (Punjab Amendment), court fees on all suits in respect of debts to which this part of the Act applies shall not exceed Rs. 10.

This is a genuine relief which I ask the House to give to the debtor. Under the law as it stands it is well-known to the House that the costs of litigation are paid by the party against whom the case is decided. If a plaintiff brings a suit against a defendant, although it is the plaintiff who has to pay the court fees in the first instance, ultimately it is realised from the debtor. Thus the amount of decretal debt is enhanced by the amount of costs. The costs are by no means a very insignificant portion of the decretal debt which exists in this province. For suits below Rs. 500 the court fee is 7½ per cent. and for suits above Rs. 500 the court fee is charged at 11½ per cent. That is not all. In addition to that lawyers' fees also add to the costs. Their charges are usually 5 per cent., but for higher amounts they are on a reduced scale. In addition to this a certain amount is spent on witnesses, a certain amount is spent on stamps on various applications and other matters. Thus when a decree for a suit, say, for Rs. 100 is given the total which the debtor has to pay amounts to Rs. 125 at least if the suitors do not go to the appellate courts. If the suit goes to the appellate stage, the amount of taxed costs is much higher which ultimately falls on the debtor. Therefore I propose that in cases where ultimately the decretal debts may have to be scaled down by conciliation boards, the amount of court fee which the State should realise in the first instance from plaintiffs should not exceed Rs. 10 so that the amount of decretal debt may not increase unnecessarily.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : May I know what the honourable member exactly means by this amendment? Does he mean to say that the court fee in suits filed in civil courts should not exceed Rs. 10 irrespective of the value of the suits, or does he mean that the fees charged for applications filed before the conciliation board should not exceed Rs. 10? There seems to be an ambiguity in the amendment.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am referring to all suits in respect of debts to which this part of the Bill applies.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Does it refer to suits in civil courts before the conciliation boards?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : All suits within the area to which conciliation boards have been extended and which can be referred to them. (An honourable member : The cat is now let out of the bag). No. The cat was never in the bag. It was very much in front of the honourable members all the time. My proposal is perfectly simple and unambiguous. It is that with respect to suits which are cognisable by the conciliation boards, i.e., money suits, the court fees shall not exceed Rs. 10. (Interruption). The position is perfectly clear, if the honourable member would quietly listen. With respect to suits which are within the cognisance of a conciliation board, i.e., which can be taken to a conciliation board and which are instituted within an area to which this part of the Bill is made applicable, the State itself should at least do nothing which would add to the burden of the debt. It is hardly fair—I put it to the members on the official benches—to ask a creditor to pay 11½ per cent. and then say to him as soon as he has obtained a decree, “We will not assist you in realising that decree, we will stay its execution, but we will send you to the conciliation board to scale it down, the effect of which may be that you will neither get anything of the principal nor of the interest, and possibly you may not get even what you have paid in the form of court fee.” Again a suit may be instituted and court fee paid. The debtor can get the suit stayed by putting in an application. Is it fair that the State should charge such heavy court fee when it does not undertake to decide the case? Will the State refund the court-fee? I ask for this relief, however, not only in the interest of the creditor—although it is only fair that when the State is not assuming responsibility for the execution of decrees or for even the trial of suits, it should not charge a heavy amount of court fee,—but also and mainly in the interest of the debtor, because ultimately the incidence of the court fee and other expenses falls upon the debtor. It is, therefore, only fair that in the districts where this extraordinary piece of legislation is to be made applicable the State should not increase the burden of the debtor in this artificial manner and thus swell the amount of debt in the locality whose bad economic conditions have justified the extension of this legislation to that area. Therefore, Sir, my reason for this amendment is the reason which is alleged to have induced the Government to introduce this legislation, and I commend it for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. Deputy President: Clause under consideration, amendment moved —

That the following clause be added between clauses 26 and 27:—

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in the Court Fees Act, (Punjab Amendment), court-fees on all suits in respect of debts to which this part of the Act applies shall not exceed Rs. 10.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South East-Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I agree with Mr. Puri that the level of stamp duties is very high, and I should welcome a suitable opportunity for some reduction of court fees. But this is neither the time nor the occasion for seeking an amendment of the Court Fees Act. If my friend wants that the level of stamp duty should be brought down, he ought to move in a proper manner; in other words, he ought to move separately an amendment of the Court Fees Act itself. (Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: Will you oppose it again?) I cannot say yet. It really depends upon the character of the amendment which he seeks to make. But so far as the present amendment is concerned, I must certainly oppose it. So far as I am concerned, I had no doubt in my mind that what Mr. Puri wanted was to reduce the scale of court-fees on suits in civil courts, because so far as the present Bill is concerned, we have not given the designation of suits to applications before conciliation boards. But there was some hope in the minds of some people that possibly Mr. Puri wanted to restrict his amendment to applications before conciliation boards. One of the reasons which incline me to oppose this amendment is that it will result in a serious shrinkage of provincial revenues, and if we lose, say, about 20 or 25 lakhs or even 30 lakhs of our revenue in this way, how is the loss going to be met? The system of taxation in our province is such that whatever avenues you may explore, the burden is bound to fall on the zamindar. If there had been any other sources of revenue open to the Government they could have been availed of in the event of reduction of revenue in consequence of this amendment. I would certainly then have gone some way to support Mr. Puri's amendment, because I could have asked the Government to tap those fresh sources of revenue which would have affected classes other than agriculturists. But now whatever deficiency has to be made up by Government in its revenues, it can only be done by imposing an additional burden on agriculturists. That is one reason. Another reason why I am opposed to this amendment is that a lower scale of court fees in respect of applications before conciliation boards will be a definite incentive to creditors to come before conciliation boards, because they cannot at present finance litigation in ordinary courts. If you reduce the scale of court fees in respect of suits in civil courts, that would be a reason for creditors not to come before conciliation boards, but to seek their remedies in civil courts with a reduced scale of court fees. On these grounds I oppose this amendment.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I oppose this amendment.

Lala Bhagat Ram (Jullundur-cum-Ludhiana, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, the honourable members who have opposed this motion have stated that by accepting it we would be increasing the work of the civil courts inasmuch as a large number of cases will be filed before them instead of their being filed before the conciliation boards. The honourable members have always said that the zamindars are poor and that they cannot afford to pay so much in the form of court fees, etc. They have always stressed the necessity of reducing the court fees and other expenditure incurred on cases that go to the courts. But now they are opposing this motion by which it is intended to reduce the expenditure that is incurred for fighting cases in the courts.

Mr. Deputy President : The honourable member is repeating the argument already advanced.

Lala Bhagat Ram : Sir, I am saying that all the expenditure that is being incurred for fighting out cases in the courts in the long run falls in the form of costs on the debtor. Now, what is the use of burdening the debtor by the cost of a case which he has to incur in the long run? In the first instance, what is the use of making the sabukar spend so much on a suit and then realising it from the poor debtor in the form of costs of that case? There is therefore no harm if this motion is accepted.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has admitted that the court fees in this province are very high and almost prohibitive, and he would welcome any proposal for their reduction if it is brought before the House on another occasion. But I fail to see why if he considers the reduction desirable, he is opposing my amendment on this occasion. One reason that he has given is that it would mean a loss of revenue to the Government. He has unnecessarily exaggerated, and I think wrongly calculated the loss which the Government is likely to suffer in this connection. In the first instance, I am not proposing at this stage a general lowering down of court-fees all over the province. According to my amendment it will only apply to the district or tahsil or areas to which this part of the Bill is extended. Therefore, the loss in revenue under the head court-fee is not likely to be at all appreciable. Again, this reduction in court-fee is not an all round reduction. It is confined to one class of cases only. It is not to apply for instance to suits for possession of property, to suits for injunction and to numerous other classes of suits provided in the Court Fees Act. The reduction proposed by me will apply to that class of cases only which are covered by the provisions relating to conciliation boards. Therefore, the suggestion made by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram that this amendment is likely to considerably affect the revenues of the province is not correct. Besides, suggestions have been made repeatedly, though always unheeded, that when reduction of debt is being contemplated and decided upon when a certain class is to be penalised and the debts are being forcibly reduced, is it not the duty of the Government to help in some manner and come forward with some kind of assistance? We know that the Government has definitely refused or has found itself unable to give any kind of assistance in the form of advancing loans to agriculturists, or even otherwise in the form of at least assisting in the realisation of the scaled down debts as arrears of land revenue, as has been done by the Central Provinces Government. Therefore, I suggest now a very small relief to the tax-payers, i.e., that the Government should not charge court-fee in districts with respect to these debts, which court-fee is ultimately to fall on the debtor himself. It will be ultimately a relief to the debtor, and it will be bare justice to the creditor to charge less court fee from him when the State is abandoning the duty of passing decrees or executing them. Why should the Government in this case, when calling on the whole body of creditors to forego their debts, not be prepared to forego this little amount of court-fee with respect to those suitors at least whom it is depriving of their legitimate remedies by this legislation.

Mr. Deputy President : Question is—

That the following clause be added between clauses 26 and 27 :—

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in the Court Fees Act (Punjab Amendment), court fees on all suits in respect of debts to which this part of the Act applies shall not exceed Rs. 10.

The motion was lost.

Clause 27.

Shaikh Abdul. Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) :
I beg to move—

That in clause 27, sub-clause (1), item (c), the following words be added at the end :—
Their academic or other qualifications or the class to which they belong.

Mr. Deputy President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 27, sub-clause (1), item (c), the following words be added at the end :—
Their academic or other qualifications or the class to which they belong.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): I must resist this amendment. It is totally unnecessary to tie the hands of Government and to fetter their discretion by laying down in the rules the academic or other qualifications or the class to which they belong. I think it is highly desirable that we should be able to appoint to the conciliation board a man of the meagrest academic qualifications if he is a really good man. For instance, one of the ablest men in the Ministerial Staff of the province, at present is a man who has only passed the Matriculation examination. If we start prescribing literary qualifications and that sort of thing we may exclude some people eminently suited for the purpose of members of conciliation boards. I think it is quite unnecessary, and I hope the member will not press his amendment.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the chair).

Shaikh Abdul Ghani: I beg leave to withdraw the amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I beg to move—

That sub-clause (2) of clause 27, sub-clause (3) of clause 31 and sub-clause (4) of clause 37 be omitted and a separate clause at the end of the Bill be added to the following effect:—

The power of making rules conferred by sections 27, 31 and 37 shall be subject to the condition that the rules be made after previous publication.

Mr. President: At this stage the honourable member cannot bring in clauses 31 and 37. The only clause now before the House is 27. His amendment appears to be a desirable one, but it might be left to the Legal Remembrancer to suggest as one of the consequential amendments.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: It might be very useful to learn the reason which actuated the honourable member to give notice of this amendment.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: In order to make my motion admissible, I will make this motion only in respect to the clause which is actually under discussion, and after I have made that motion I will give my reasons. I beg to move that—

That sub-clause (2) of clause 27 be omitted.

My reason is that a clause to the effect that the power of making rules shall be subject to the condition that the rules be made after previous publication, has been repeated several times in this Bill. Instead of repeating it in several places I think it may serve just the same purpose if we put it as one clause in general terms.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): The only reason why this clause has been repeated wherever rule-making power has been given in the Act is that this Act is going to be used, and if one reads each clause by itself it is possible that one might lose sight of a general clause providing for rule making-power at the end. People do make mistakes. In my own experience I regret to say that they read the clause which immediately affects them and then forget to look at the end of the Act where there is a general clause governing the other clauses.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It would appear to be a matter for the drafting committee.

(Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram agreed not to press his motion.)

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 27 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 28.

Mr. President : Question is—

That clause 28 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

New clause after clause 28.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the following clause be added after clause 28 :—

This Act shall not apply to any loan advanced after December 1931.

The important question which the House should decide is, are these conciliation boards intended to be a permanent feature of the Punjab Statute Book or are they being constituted to meet an extraordinary situation which is alleged to have arisen out of the present alleged abnormal agricultural situation? One of the reasons given for adopting this extraordinary measure is that on account of the fall in prices of agricultural commodities the debts which were borrowed during a period of inflation have assumed high proportions, and it is necessary to scale them down, and it is also alleged that certain amount of debtors feel that their debts have exceeded beyond their capacity to pay in certain parts of the province. If that is so, then it will be improper to place on our Statute Book a legislation which is called for to meet a particular situation, permanently for all times. It will be very harmful. Supposing we reached normal times and it is found that there should be no restriction on the advance of loans. If this part of the Act is in force then the creditors will be very nervous in advancing loans because of the uncertainty inherent in procedure contained in this Part. Supposing three years hence it is not necessary to resort to this Act, the mere existence of this Act and the mere fact that the Government can extend that Act to any part will deter creditors from freely advancing money and will also prevent them from seeking the assistance of courts because they know that the Government might at any time extend the Act to that district and interfere with them. Similar provisions restricting operation of such legislation have been made in certain United Provinces Bills, and provisions have been confined to debts which were borrowed during the period of inflated prices. Therefore my submission is that this House should not place on the Statute Book this legislation for all time to come, but it should confine it to debts which were borrowed before December 1931. After December 1931 prices have not been inflated and no relief is called for, with respect to debts which had been borrowed since December 1931. So I propose that this Act be confined to debts which were borrowed before the 1st of December 1931. This date, 1st of December 1931, I have taken from the United Provinces Bill.

Mr. President : It has been proposed that the following new clause be added :—

This Act shall not apply to any loan advanced after December 1931.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muham-madan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I have stood up to oppose the amendment moved by my honourable friend who has just resumed his seat. (Cries of "Well done" from rural benches). My honourable friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, is seeking through his amendment to cut at the very root of the salutary provision relating to conciliation boards which are bound to considerably improve, rather than embitter, the relations of the creditors and debtors. If his amendment is accepted the result would be that the provisions of this Bill will apply to those debts which will have become time-barred by the time it is enforced as law. (Voices : No, no.) Honourable members have only to read the amendment once again in order to be convinced of that. Here it is—

The Act shall not apply to any loan advanced after December 1931.

Now, the Bill, if passed, will receive the sanction of the Viceroy in any case not before January 1935 ; and all debts incurred in or before December 1931 will have naturally become time-barred by that time. Then, what is the object, may I ask, of passing the law if no debts have to be covered by it ? If the law is not made applicable to loans advanced before December 1931 there will be hardly any work before the conciliation boards. In fact the very existence of these institutions will become meaningless. In other words, all the labour of the mountain will not yield a mouse in result. Moreover, the relations of the sahu-kars and the debtors will become all the more strained by the virtual negation of the provisions of this Bill. My friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, has always been complaining that murders of sahu-kars in the province are on the increase owing to these strained relations between money-lenders and their debtors.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I have never said so.

Pir Akbar Ali : He has said so many a time.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : No, no. It is wrong.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : If the honourable member has not said so, many of his friends certainly have. I perfectly remember having heard such words from his lips. I have not got his speeches with me at this time. I will refer to them, however, during my speech on the last motion about this Bill.

Furthermore, all who are acquainted with conditions obtaining in rural areas know it perfectly well that something like conciliation boards already exist in the country-side. The sahu-kars do not generally sue their debtors in courts lest they should be wasting the money on court-fees, because there is little hope, under the present circumstances, of recovering the debts even if the decrees are awarded to them by civil courts. So when the debts are about to be time-barred, they request four or five gentlemen in the locality to intervene on their behalf and make the debtor through persuasion or pressure to pay a part of the debts or at least to renew the deed. I would make it clear to honourable members of this House, through you, Sir, that conciliation boards are sure to help the sahu-kars to a great extent. Under the present conditions they hesitate to institute legal proceedings against their debtors as there is little hope of recovery even after getting the decrees. So they are not willing to part with a little money which they have with them in the shape of court-fees. Setting up of conciliation boards will help them out of their difficulties, and they will be able to recover a considerable portion of their bad debts. With these words, I oppose the motion now before the House.

Pir Akbar Ali : On a point of order. The amendment is that this Act shall not apply to loans advanced after December 1931. The Act has not yet been passed and the amendment will not be reached till we have considered the Bill. We are now only in part IV relating to conciliation boards. The amendment, therefore, is not in order.

Mr. President : The question is—

The following clause be added after clause 28 :—

This Act shall not apply to any loan advanced after December 1931.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The honourable member, Mr. Puri, will now move both the amendments standing in his name.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I beg to move—

That the following be added as a new clause after clause 28 :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall cease to have effect from July 1936.

In the alternative—

That the following be added as a new clause to part IV :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall be in force for a period of two years from the date of the commencement of the Act.

These are alternative amendments, and I place either of them before the House for consideration. These amendments do not suffer from the defect which has been pointed out by Pir Akbar Ali that they limit the operation of the entire Act to certain dates. In these two amendments I wish to limit the operation of the provisions relating to conciliation boards only and that too to a period of two years only from the date of the commencement of this Act.

The provisions relating to conciliation boards, it will be admitted on all hands, are of an extraordinary and revolutionary character. And, therefore, it is necessary that such a piece of legislation should not be permanently placed on the Statute Book but only for a definite period. If it is found at the end of that time, that the circumstances justify the continuance of this extraordinary piece of legislation, the Government could ask this House to extend the time. If the Government agrees, I am prepared to add the following words to my amendments "unless Government considers it necessary to extend it for another two years." If that would meet the desire of the House I would propose that amendment. Apart from the fact of having an ugly piece of legislation like this—and there is no other word by which I can call this part of the Bill—permanently on our Statute Book, my special grounds for asking the House to accept these amendments are these. Here are extraordinary powers being given to Government. One such power is that the provisions relating to conciliation boards can be made applicable to debts without any limit. The discretion of the Government to extend the provisions as to conciliation boards to any amount of debt is unlimited. The power that has been conferred on the executive government is that they can extend the provisions to debts of Rs. 10,000 or upwards, without any limit. Another such power is that these provisions are now applicable to all kinds of debts, whether in towns or countryside, whether due from agriculturists or non-agriculturists. All the time Government is proceeding on the assumption that this Government—Messrs. Boyd and Sikander Hyat—will carry out the provisions of this Act. We have before us the speeches of the Honourable the Finance Member who introduced this Bill and of the present Finance Member to the effect that to start with, Government intend to treat this legislation as an experimental measure in one or two districts, and to extend it only to agriculturists and to rural areas. That is the declared intention of the present Government, and if they stick to this intention, as we hope they will, the harm and mischief which we contemplate is bound to arise from this legislation might be circumscribed within well defined limits. We do not know what might happen after two years. The present Government may not be there. The Government then may consist of persons who do not wish to place themselves within those circumscribed limits. Therefore, this Government should only take the powers which it will be in a position to use and for which it will be in a position to assume responsibility. The Honourable Leader of the House suggests that it is quite possible that the Government a couple of years hence might be so constituted as to make the provision relating to conciliation boards more drastic than they now are. Let me tell him that there are limits on the powers of every despot, at least the well known 'external and internal' limits, mentioned by Dicey in his constitutional law. In any case, I would not mind because then people who have to enforce this Act would be persons who will take responsibility for it, and they will not be able to take shelter behind the act of others: they would not be able to say that they are merely giving effect to a legislation enacted by the British, i.e., passed by their predecessors. Sir, you are fully aware that the iniquities of the Punjab Land Alienation Act are being more and more noticed and felt by all right-thinking men in this province.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Mr. President : May I ask the honourable member to speak to the motion?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am merely illustrating my point. Here is a piece of legislation which on account of the injustice it works and on account of unanswerable criticism to which it has been subjected, the present Government has now definitely declared: "We shall not extend the principles of the Act. But we shall not go back either. Zamindars have acquired certain privileges under this legislation which is the gift of a bureaucratic or benign Government. It is the Act of a Government in which we had no hand." It will similarly be said with respect to the conciliation boards, "it is the gift from our predecessors, and we are only carrying out what had been enacted by the previous Government." If this legislation is to be worked by those people who know its limitations, it is all right. But is it fair on the part of this Government to give this extraordinary piece of legislation in the hands of their successors, who are untried persons, in the hands of persons who will only look to their self-interest and who may not perhaps be in a position to hold the scales even which the circumstances of the case require? There is, Sir, a real danger. I said the other day that my honourable friend, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, if he as a Government were to assume responsibility for this legislation he would never be a party to highly unjust provisions as they have been enacted by this House, but sitting as he does on the other side, he chuckles in his sleeves when he makes the Government do these things at his dictation, without his sharing the least responsibility for these provisions. With these words I ask the Government to apply this part of the Act for the period I have proposed.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following be added as a new clause after clause 28 :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall cease to have effect from July 1936.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following be added as a new clause to part IV :—

The provisions of this part of the Act shall be in force for a period of two years from the date of the commencement of the Act.

The motion was lost.

The Council then adjourned till 2-30 P.M., on Friday, 23rd November 1934.

PRINTED BY
THE SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRINTING, PUNJAB.
206 PLC-525-17-12-34-SGPP Lahore.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Friday, 23rd November 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2-30 P. M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

OATH OF OFFICE.

The following members were sworn in :—

Mr. C. C. Garbett (Chief Secretary).

Mr. R. Sanderson (Director of Public Instruction).

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Clause 29.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): Sir, I beg to move—

That for clause 29 the following clauses be substituted :—

29. (1) 'Debtor' means a person who owes a debt and—
Definition.

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, and is either a landowner, or tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuits of a land-owner or of a tenant of agricultural land ;
- (ii) who earns his livelihood as a village menial paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture.

Explanations—

- (a) A debtor shall not lose his status as such through involuntary unemployment or on account of incapacity, temporary or permanent, by bodily infirmity, or, if he is or has been in service of His Majesty's Military or Naval Forces, only on account of his pay and allowances or pension exceeding his income from agricultural sources.
- (ii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such by reason of the fact that he makes income by using his plough cattle for purposes of transport.
- (iii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such only because he does not cultivate with his own hands.
- (2) 'Agriculture' shall include horticulture and the use of land for any purpose of husbandry inclusive of the keeping or breeding of live-stock, poultry, or bees, and the growth of fruit vegetables and the like.

Shall I read out the second clause of the amendment? It is the same as clause 29 as drafted by the select committee.

Mr. President: That might be taken up after this has been disposed of.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: Sir, I desire to raise a point of order. This very definition was under discussion when clause 7 was taken up. After a fairly lengthy and comprehensive discussion the Council came to the definite conclusion that the definition which is now proposed and which was contained in clause 7 should be rejected. It would really be upsetting the decision of the House given after careful consideration and in a formal manner if this amendment is now allowed to be moved. The reasons why this particular definition should be rejected and why the definition which has actually been passed should be adopted were given in extenso by me on the day when that clause was under discussion. I may be allowed to repeat some of those grounds to-day.

✓[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

The object of defining the word "debtor" in the manner in which it was defined was to make this Bill one of universal application. There are very material advantages in making the Bill of universal application.

Mr. Labh Singh : Would you permit a speech on a point of order ?

✓Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am raising a point of order and I am giving all the reasons which I think justify my doing so. Sir, this question has been specifically discussed and decided in this House in a formal manner and should not be allowed to be agitated over again.

Mr. J. D. Anderson : Sir, I anticipated the objection which the honourable Leader of the Unionist Party has now raised. Before I submitted this amendment I gave the matter full consideration to the best of my ability, and the opinion which I formed was that this amendment is a proper amendment and a necessary amendment, an amendment consequential on the decision which the House has taken on clause 7. I mentioned at the last meeting of the House that the measure which is before us is an omnibus Bill. It has all the defects and advantages which are inseparable from a Bill of that nature. The advantages are, I think, mainly administrative. They come into full effect after the passing of the measure. As regards the drafting of the measure, there are certain grave defects as I think we have already experienced in the course of these debates. I think that an omnibus Bill is one in which the object of the whole thing is one, but there are a number of parts. I should compare these parts to the passengers in a public vehicle. They are all going in the same direction. They are strangers one to another and they get out at different stages of the journey. The House has been considering the IVth part of the Bill which deals with conciliation boards. It is considered that in the course of the debate various members have expressed views about the scope of the Bill as a whole but they did that, Sir, in the course of the debate. The issue before them was not the Bill as a whole. It was not part V which they have not yet reached. It was part IV. I submit, that the principle which underlies debt conciliation boards is altogether different from that which we should consider when we discuss damdapat in part V of the Bill.

Mr. President : One of the elementary rules, of Parliamentary procedure and practice is that matters which are once decided by the House should not be allowed to be reopened in the same session. Another rule is that when an amendment to an earlier part of a Bill has been made, an amendment inconsistent with that amendment cannot be allowed to be made at a later stage. Therefore, I see no reason why the honourable member's amendment should be allowed. The only argument advanced in its favour is that it is an amendment to part V, while the definition of the word "debtor" in clause 7 is in part IV. I am not sure that two entirely different definitions of the same word can be allowed to stand part of the same Bill, except with a clause to the effect that each of them will govern different parts of the Bill. But so far as I can see there is no such clause in the whole Bill.

Again, it is urged that the Council has been considering different parts of the Bill. The Bill is divided, no doubt, into parts; but no part as such has been considered or put to the vote of the House. The Honourable Finance Member's motion was "that the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill be taken into consideration" and it was that motion which was carried and it is in pursuance of that decision of the House that the Council is considering the Bill clause by clause. Thus the whole Bill is under consideration and not any particular part of it. In other words, the Council is considering clause by clause the whole Bill and not any particular part of it. So long as the definition of the word "debtor," as passed in clause 7, stands, a different definition of the same word cannot be allowed. For these reasons I rule the motion to be out of order.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): Sir, the consequences of your decision are very serious indeed. Before we proceed to anything else I would ask if we would be in order to move this amendment: For the purpose of this part of the Bill 'debtor' means a 'a person' and so on.

Mr. President: The definition of "debtor" as given in clause 7 is not in so many words confined in its operation to part IV of the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: The matter is quite separate. It was never in the mind of Government that the principle of damdapat should apply to anybody else but the agriculturist debtor. It was the intention of Government from the very beginning that the principle of damdapat should apply only to agriculturist debtor. I would therefore suggest that you allow this amendment to be moved which will carry out the intentions of Government.

Mr. President: This being a new clause may we postpone its consideration for a short while to enable me to consider the propriety of allowing the amendment to be moved? I hope the House will give me a few minutes to make up my mind and in the meanwhile proceed to Part VI.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: I think it might perhaps save the time of the House later should your ruling be contrary to my suggestion, if you also consider whether it would be in order to restore the definition of "agriculturist" which occurred in the original draft of the Bill and for the word "debtor" the word "agriculturist" is substituted. It is the definite intention of Government that this part of the Bill should apply to agriculturist debtor only. This is an alternative amendment suggested to carry out our intention. I do not want your decision now. You may give your considered ruling later.

Mr. President: Very well. We shall then proceed to Part VI.

PART VI.

Clause 30.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra (Nominated, non-official) :
(Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 30, for sub-clause (1) the following be substituted :—

Any person who owes money may at any time pay by means of a cheque on Imperial Bank of India a sum of money in full or part payment to his creditor and if that cheque is returned or refused by his creditor or the amount of the cheque not realized by him within a month, the debtor shall immediately deposit that amount in the court.

Sir, I have no fundamental difference with the substance of clause 30. My object in moving this amendment is simply this, that whereas the debtor has been allowed to deposit money in court at any time in full or part payment to his creditor, the latter too should be safeguarded against any undue hardship. It is a matter of common knowledge that it is no easy job to realize the money deposited in a court. The creditor has to spend many days before he comes by the money. And this difficulty becomes all the more acute and embarrassing when no interest is allowed to him after the money is deposited in the court. I hope the Government will see their way to accept my proposal and will provide facilities to creditors for the recovery of their money in the same spirit in which they have sought to relieve the creditors from the burden of interest, at least after they deposit money in courts. My proposal is that the debtor should send his creditor a cheque on Imperial Bank of India and if the latter does not realise the money the debtor should deposit the same in court. I want to make it clear, once again, that I have moved this amendment knowing full well that creditors are put to great inconvenience if any small quarrel arises. If the creditor and the debtor will quarrel over a single day's interest the debtor will be authorised under the present form of clause 30 to deposit the sum in a court and the creditor will be deprived of full twenty days' interest. It is from such difficulties that I want to save the creditors. I have no objection, however, to any other honourable member's suggesting any other method of ending the troubles of the money-lenders. My amendment may be accepted in an amended form if the House may so desire. But what I want to emphasise is the necessity of making it impossible for the debtors to create undesirable difficulties for creditors in the manner I have just referred to. With these words I move my amendment.

Mr. President : The new clause which is proposed to take the place of sub-clause (1) of clause 30 is—

Any person who owes money may at any time pay by means of a cheque on Imperial Bank of India a sum of money in full or part payment to his creditor and if that cheque is returned or refused by his creditor or the amount of the cheque not realized by him within a month, the debtor shall immediately deposit that amount in the court.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I am really surprised to find that an amendment of this character should have been moved by any member of this House. This amendment presupposes that a debtor has a balance in the Imperial Bank of India. Is it seriously contended that any appreciable proportion of our debtors whom we have in view in this Bill has any account with the Imperial Bank of India? And yet this amendment has been put forward, perhaps seriously. I am surprised at the ignorance which has been displayed by Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra : He can open an account.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : But he has no money.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra : What he wants to pay he can put into the Bank and give a cheque.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am simply incapable of making any reply to a stupid argument like that. If the debtors whom it is intended to benefit by this Bill were in a position of having accounts in the Imperial Bank of India at all, this Bill would not have been needed. We are dealing with a section of the population which has never even heard the name of any bank with the possible exception of village societies. My friend wants to insist that any deposit that is to be made in a court should be made in the court by means of a cheque on the Imperial Bank of India. The object is to spare the creditor a little trouble of going to courts in order to withdraw the money. In view of the fact that this amendment presupposes a state of things which does not exist in the case of at least 99 per cent. of the debtors, I cannot but oppose this amendment. Let me hope my friend will possibly think of withdrawing it.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I think Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has opposed the amendment simply for the sake of opposing it. The honourable the mover of the amendment is thinking of Amritsar and Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram is thinking of the villages of Rohtak. Both of them are right and this reminds me of the six wise men of Hindustan who went to see an elephant. One touched the legs and thought that the elephant resembled a pillar; the other touched the ear and thought it resembled a huge fan and so on. Though all were in the right yet all were in the wrong. Let the payment, if possible, be made in the way suggested by the honourable member from Amritsar, in the way in which people living in big towns are familiar. The honourable member from Rohtak was saying a few minutes ago that the Act was going to be of universal application and if so, all debtors are not agricultural debtors; there are other debtors also. The Act will apply to wealthy debtors, to villagers as well as mercantile community. My friend who moved the amendment seeks to prevent the inconvenience incidental to depositing money in court. It does involve waste of time and waste of energy and is a troublesome affair. This can be avoided if we accept this amendment. We can have this as an addition to the course suggested in the Bill so that both ways may be open to the debtors, i.e., they may deposit in court or may pay by means of cheques. Let both the alternatives remain.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I think the honourable member from Amritsar has pointed out a real difficulty which is experienced in the course of business. He is thinking of transactions between traders which have to be met on particular days and where high rates of interest are not charged and interest is calculated up to the date of payment. Very often there is a dispute with respect to interest for a few days only. The creditor considers himself entitled to it. The debtor insists upon remission but as he has not been given any remission he will deprive him of interest for a much longer period. He goes and deposits the money in court and from the date of deposit the interest is not calculated. Ordinarily speaking it will take at least a week to get the money from the court, unless a special machinery is devised for this purpose whereby the courts are directed to issue cheques at once, and during that week the creditor may badly need the money, he may have to meet a hundi or he may have to pay to his own creditors. You will be encouraging resort to this device between people who are not on good terms and who have fallen out especially in trading centres. Therefore some means should be devised by which these traders can be prevented from playing these tricks. As the Act is being made of universal application it is necessary to take note of this fact. The problems of Amritsar are certainly not the problems of Rohtak. No agricultural debtor is ever going to deposit money in court. This provision is useless as far as Rohtak is concerned, while this may create difficulties in Amritsar. For instance, if in such cases the money is deposited in court, say on 22nd December or 31st August, it will take a long time to draw the money and it will be a real difficulty for such people as the honourable member from Amritsar has in view. I think some way should be found to meet the point.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : In this amendment we once more come across the extremely awkward position into which the Bill is being put by the omission of the definition of debtor. The intention originally was that an agriculturist debtor might have facilities for paying off his debts. It has been urged fairly frequently that a creditor refuses to accept payment from an agriculturist debtor because he wants to keep him in his grip. It is in order to check this practice that this clause was inserted in the original draft of the Bill which read, "an agriculturist debtor may at any time deposit in court" and so on. Now the scope of the Bill has—and to-day I am convinced of it—absolutely wrongly been extended so as to include people who do not want help at all and the result is that we come across one complication after another. This amendment is the result of one of the complications. As the amendment is worded, I do not think it can possibly be accepted. Of course it is absurd to require an agriculturist debtor who is the person whom we want to benefit to sign a cheque on the Imperial Bank of India in favour of his creditor. Therefore if this amendment is accepted, the intention of the Government would be clearly defeated and for this reason I must oppose the amendment as it stands.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 30, for sub-clause (1) the following be substituted :—

Any person who owes money may at any time pay by means of a cheque on Imperial Bank of India a sum of money in full or part payment to his creditor and if that cheque is returned or refused by his creditor or the amount of the cheque not realized by him within a month, the debtor shall immediately deposit that amount in the court.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 30 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 29.

Mr. President : In the proposal made by the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, he referred to two things in the alternative: (i) the definition of "debtor" for the purposes of part V and (ii) the definition of "agriculturist" as given on page 1 of the original Bill. Which alternative would he prefer?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I prefer the former.

Mr. President : As the definition is to be confined only to one part and practically to one clause, I allow it.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I move—

That for clause 29 the following clause be substituted:—

29. For the purpose of this Part of the Act—

(1) 'Debtor' means a person who owes a debt and —

Definition.

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, and is either a landowner or tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuit, of a land-owner or of a tenant of agricultural land; or
- (ii) who earns his livelihood as a village menial paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture.

Explanations:—

- (i) A debtor shall not lose his status as such through involuntary unemployment or on account of incapacity, temporary or permanent, by bodily infirmity, or, if he is or has been in service of His Majesty's Military or Naval Forces, only on account of his pay and allowances or pension exceeding his income from agricultural sources.
- (ii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such by reason of the fact that he makes income by using his plough cattle for purposes of transport.
- (iii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such only because he does not cultivate with his own hands.
- (2) 'Agriculture' shall include horticulture and the use of land for any purpose of husbandry inclusive of the keeping or breeding of live-stock, poultry, or bees, and the growth of fruit vegetables and the like.

The object of this amendment is to restore the original intention of the Bill. It was intended that this part of the Bill should apply only to agriculturist debtors and this amendment is necessary to bring back the original intention of the Bill. It is hardly necessary to argue this question, but I think it is quite clear that the application of the principle of damdupat to transactions between the trading classes might have effects which we cannot possibly foresee and which we certainly did not intend when we laid this Bill before the legislature. For this reason I hope the House will, without any difficulty, accept the amendment which I have moved.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration amendment moved—

That for clause 29 the following clause be substituted:—

29. For the purpose of this Part of the Act—(1) "Debtor," means a person who owes a debt and—

Definition.

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, and is either a land owner, or tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuit, of a land-owner or of a tenant of agricultural land; or

[Mr. President.]

- (ii) who earns his livelihood as a village menial paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture.

Explanations—

- (i) A debtor shall not lose his status as such through involuntary unemployment or on account of incapacity, temporary or permanent, by bodily infirmity, or, if he is or has been in service of His Majesty's Military or Naval Forces, only on account of his pay and allowances or pension exceeding his income from agricultural sources.
- (ii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such by reason of the fact that he makes income by using his plough cattle for purposes of transport.
- (iii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such only because he does not cultivate with his own hands.
- (2) 'Agriculture' shall include horticulture and the use of land for any purpose of husbandry inclusive of the keeping or breeding of live-stock, poultry, or bees, and the growth of fruit vegetables and the like.

Pir Akbar Ali (Ferozepore, Muhammadan, Rural): May I know whether any other amendment to the clause to which an amendment has been allowed by the Chair, will be allowed?

Mr. President: This amendment without the words "for purpose of this Act" has been in the agenda for sometime.

Pir Akbar Ali: It has been in the agenda no doubt, but obviously it was considered by honourable members that it would be ruled out of order.

Mr. President: Has the honourable member got any amendment in writing?

Pir Akbar Ali: We are thinking of one.

Mr. President: Those who are thinking may continue to do so.

Pir Akbar Ali: We have already in the printed lists amendment No. 11 printed on page 2 of the Fourth Revised List of Amendments. I will formally move it.

Mr. President: I have no objection.

Pir Akbar Ali: Then I move—

That the following be substituted for the proposed clause 29:—

'Debtor' means a person who owes a debt and—

- (i) who is a member of a tribe notified as an agricultural tribe under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, or
- (ii) who is a member of a class declared by the Local Government as depressed among Hindus, or
- (iii) who is a member of a class among Muslims or Sikhs corresponding to a depressed class among Hindus, or
- (iv) who is a tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuits under a person falling in any of the categories specified in (i), (ii) and (iii) or under a tenant of agricultural land, or
- (v) who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture.

(Urdu): Sir, the object of the amendment I have now moved to the clause proposed by Government is to draw the attention of the House to the advisability of providing a suitable definition of the word "debtor" in the Bill. In my opinion "debtor" should be taken to mean a person who owes a debt and who belongs to a tribe notified as an agricultural tribe under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. It should not in any case be left to the court to determine whether or not a particular debtor is an agriculturist debtor, for, in many cases the courts will take months to decide this issue and when after a long time it is decided that a particular person is not an agriculturist debtor all the labours of the court will be wasted. Such an enquiry will involve unnecessary waste of time and money and will in many cases nullify the real object of the Bill. I, therefore, prefer my amendment to the one moved by Government and commend it for the acceptance of the House. With these words I resume my seat.

Mr. President : Amendment moved is—

That for the proposed new clause 29 regarding the definition of debtor the following be substituted :—

Debtor means a person who owes a debt and—

- (i) who is a member of a tribe notified as an agricultural tribe under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, or
- (ii) who is a member of a class declared by the Local Government as depressed among Hindus, or
- (iii) who is a member of a class among Muslims or Sikhs corresponding to a depressed class among Hindus, or
- (iv) who is a tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuits under a person falling in any of the categories specified in (i), (ii) and (iii) or under a tenant of agricultural land, or
- (v) who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural) : When one looks carefully at the provisions of this definition, one cannot agree with it. We accepted a definition of "debtor" in part IV which is of general application and I do not know why we should now limit it to only agriculturists.

Mr. President : What is the honourable member speaking to? Is he speaking to the motion before the House?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : The amendment which we carried out—

Mr. President : Which amendment?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Amendment to Part IV.

Mr. President : The motion before the House now is the amendment which has been moved by Pir Akbar Ali.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Both, the one moved by the Honourable Member in charge and the one moved by Pir Akbar Ali.

Mr. President : No. Unless Pir Akbar Ali's amendment is disposed of the one moved by the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill cannot be discussed. If an amendment aims at taking the place of the original motion in its entirety, then both of them are simultaneously under consideration, otherwise only the amendment, as in the present case, is under consideration and not the original motion, which is laid aside for the time being.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Then I will speak on the second amendment. The second amendment moved by Pir Akbar Ali is more explicit and if we are making any change we must make a definite change and not a haphazard one. The amendment moved by the Honourable Finance Member has loopholes in it and gives a very wide discretion to the courts. It is for limiting that use of discretion that this Council has been fighting for a long time. It is time that an amendment is brought to limit the exercise of discretion which would otherwise be left wide open. The amendment which has been moved by the honourable member from this party, Pir Akbar Ali, is quite to the point and I support it.

[Ch. Allah Dad Khan.]

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): My view is that both the amendments are defective. If the object of the Bill is simply to defend those who are members of notified agricultural tribes, the amendment moved by Government falls short of that object. It appears that the sense of the House so far as these benches are concerned has been throughout to monopolise the attention of the House to the particular section of agriculturists who are termed statutory agriculturists. These gentlemen lose sight of the fact that there are whole villages in the Punjab and there are residents in different villages of the province who for generations have been engaged in the pursuit of agriculture, but who by some misfortune or by some circumstances, which were not taken full account of at that time, were not declared statutory agriculturists. And they are as much in debt and deserve as much Government support and sympathy of the House as any other so-called statutory agriculturist. I think this cry should end somewhere. I have been throughout with this party but when I see that whenever there is a certain loophole, when there is the slightest occasion that any statutory non-agriculturist would be benefited, these gentlemen jump at once and try to spoil the whole thing. The amendment proposed by Government is very wide. It would include persons who are land-owners wherever they are and whatever their caste may be. Anybody, even if he lived in a town, owning lands would get the protection. But if we limit the clause as my learned friend behind me, Pir Akbar Ali wants it, to statutory agriculturists, it means that only those who have been fortunate enough to get sanction to their particular tribe and who have got themselves notified under the Land Alienation Act would be benefited by it. This is a very narrow view of the law especially when we are here legislating for generations and for the whole of the province. If the object of the House is to cover all the members of statutory agricultural tribes whether they are engaged in agriculture or not, then of course, the amendment of Government would fall short of it. Supposing, for instance, there is a big landlord. He has got a son who studies here at Lahore in some college. He thinks of purchasing a motor car and begins incurring debts. His debts amount to something like Rs. 5,000. He is a member of the statutory agriculturist tribe because his father is one. Under the definition of Government he will not be able to claim exemption. The decree would be there; no damdupat, no conciliation board or anything of that sort would help him. If the object, however, is to defend the members of the statutory agricultural tribes, be they engineers, be they doctors, be they civil servants, be they anywhere, of course, the Government amendment falls short of achieving that object, and from the point of view of my party it is defective as it is. But if the object is to exclude them it is quite clear. My submission is, if the House wants to exclude each and every member of an agricultural tribe whether engaged in agriculture or not and to protect him, the House might adopt Pir Sahib's amendment which is very wide. All the same we would be depriving and excluding a particular section of the land-owning classes who are not fortunate in getting themselves notified under the Land Alienation Act. If there is a compromise which can be effected I would, with your permission, suggest that we might adopt the first clause of Pir Sahib's amendment, "who is a member of a tribe notified as agricultural tribe under the Punjab Land Alienation Act" and then have the whole of the amendment proposed by Government subsequent to it. That will serve the object of the zamindar party as well as of the Government.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-east, Rohtak, non-Muhammadian, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, you will remember that about four or five days ago I quoted a verse by Iqbal in connection with another motion. That verse which is as follows:

مدعی کو مایہ ناز از قوت است
دعوی او بے نیاز از حجت است

applies even more appropriately to the present case. It means that a powerful man does not stand in need of any argument in support of his claim. To-day we have been compelled to move and support an amendment which on a previous occasion we had dropped as unnecessary. I say we have been compelled to press for the amendment which my honourable friend from Ferozepore has moved because the new definition of the word 'Debtor' proposed by the Government leaves us no alternative. Otherwise we do not want that there should be any discrimination in the treatment of different groups of persons merely on the ground of residence or even profession. This I have said to make our position clear so that we may not be charged with inconsistency by the honourable members on the opposite benches.

Now I shall proceed to show why it is so very necessary to adopt the amendment of our party. But before I do so, I would like to clear the misunderstanding under which my learned friend on my left (Shaikh Abdul Ghani) appears to be labouring. I should think that he had had no time to read this amendment by Pir Sahib thoroughly or that he has not tried to fully comprehend its meaning. It is obviously so exhaustive that it includes every individual who has anything to do with agriculture. It does not leave any one out of its scope who depends for his maintenance on agriculture whether directly or indirectly. If he will kindly read this amendment a little more carefully, I am sure all his doubts on the point will be removed. He will see that it includes even those who are not statutory agriculturists, but who derive their livelihood mainly from agriculture and who by an oversight or by their own carelessness have not been declared agriculturists under the Land Alienation Act, although they very much deserve to be so declared. I again say that the amendment of Pir Sahib is very comprehensive and my learned friend need have no fears that it will not include any deserving persons.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : Question.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : The amendment of Pir Sahib consists of five parts. In the first part are included those persons who are notified as agriculturists under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. The second part of the amendment brings in those persons who have been declared by the Government as members of depressed classes among Hindus. The third part of this amendment is meant for those persons among Muslims.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]
and Sikhs who belong to classes which correspond to the depressed classes among Hindus. In the fourth part of this amendment are included all tenants of agricultural land or servants engaged in agricultural pursuits under persons falling in any of the categories specified in the first three parts of this amendment or servants under a tenant of agricultural land and in the fifth part of the same amendment are included all persons who earn their livelihood mainly by agriculture. Now if one kept in view all these classes which have been enumerated in these five parts, one would easily see that no class or group of persons has been left out which depends for its maintenance mainly on agriculture. I need hardly repeat that this amendment is not only beneficial to those who are notified agriculturists but also to those who directly or indirectly live upon the income from lands.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : My objection is that this amendment does not include the sons of such persons who have been classified in it.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I do not think it is a very serious objection. I am of opinion that the sons of agriculturists will, as a matter of course, be classed as such. However, if there is any doubt on the point, the sons of such persons may also be included to make assurance doubly sure. Anyhow the object of the amendment is clear, and that is, to benefit all persons who deserve to be benefited by this measure.

I shall now proceed to show why this amendment is considered to be necessary. According to the amendment proposed by the Government it will be for the courts to decide whether a person desiring to benefit by the provisions of this Bill is a debtor or not. The decision of this matter is proposed to be entirely left to the courts whether a person earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and whether or not he should be declared a debtor for the purposes of this Bill. That being so, it will be necessary for the courts to strike an issue to the effect in every case whether a person who has made an application for amicable settlement, is in fact a debtor or not. That will be a preliminary issue in every case. To decide this issue it will be necessary for the person claiming to be a debtor to adduce evidence in support of his claim. His creditors, too, who will very much like to oppose that claim, will be entitled to adduce evidence. This will certainly lead to the prolongation of every case to unnecessary lengths. But that is not the only or even the main ground on which we take our stand. What we fear is that it will be very difficult for the debtors, who will be agriculturists in most cases, to prove their claim. As the House is aware they are not in the habit of keeping accounts and consequently they will have no documentary evidence to produce before the courts concerned. They will naturally depend on oral evidence to prove their status as debtors. But we know that very little value is attached to oral evidence by the courts particularly in these days because it is so very easy to procure oral evidence. I do not blame the courts for this attitude of theirs with regard to such evidence. They are right to a certain extent in taking up that attitude. Any way whether rightly or wrongly the courts have come to take up this attitude with regard to oral evidence. It has, so to say, become a rule with them to reject oral evidence in almost all cases even if it were true to a word, as my friends, who have anything to do with the courts, will bear me out. Suppose a debtor says—quite truly—that he has given 200 maunds of wheat and a she-buffalo to his creditor, he will never be believed although he will say everything on oath and although every word of it will be true. Of course if he can produce a receipt to that effect, he can convince the court of the truth of his statement. But receipts these people never obtain and in many cases such receipts are not given to them, even if demanded. Many of us will have experienced that if in a case a debtor has paid something out of the amount decreed against him and if he comes to the court and makes a statement to that effect without producing any receipt for it, he is not believed. This is, then, the attitude of the courts and under the circumstances it is essential to adopt the amendment moved by Pir Sahib. Otherwise, as I have said before, it will be an uphill task for the debtors to prove that they are really debtors. If you want that the debtors should really benefit by this measure, you should not leave to the courts the decision of the question whether a person claiming to be a debtor is really a debtor or not. We have not only this difficulty in view which the debtors will have to experience in order to prove their claim. We fear that it will be very easy for the creditors to oppose successfully that claim. It will not be very difficult for them to produce written evidence to show that a person claiming to be a debtor has other sources of income which exceeds his income from lands. They will easily find out that a person claiming to be a debtor is in receipt of monthly pay as a servant of some private firm or individual or he is in receipt of some pay, pension or allowances from the Military Department, and will easily procure a documentary proof of the same. The courts will naturally give credit to that evidence particularly in the absence of any documentary evidence to the effect that the person claiming to be a debtor mainly depends on agriculture for his livelihood. The House should also bear in mind that a majority of the cases will be of the value of Rs. 100, Rs. 200 and Rs. 500. The number of such petty cases will be sufficiently large and as in each case it will have to be decided as the first thing whether a person is really a debtor or not, the courts will naturally have to do a huge amount of unnecessary work. It is possible that they will not be able to cope with this amount of work. In any case a heavy burden will be thrown on them and I can see that the results that will follow by placing this burden on them will not be very desirable. The only proper course, therefore, is to adopt the amendment that has been moved by the honourable member from Ferozepore. It is only by adopting this amendment that you can avoid a defeat of the object of this Bill. This amendment says in clear and precise terms which persons or which classes of persons must be held by the courts to have the status of debtors for the purposes of this Bill. It says that all notified agriculturists, all persons belonging to depressed classes among Hindus, all persons of the same status among Muslims and Sikhs and all tenants and the servants of the men of these categories if engaged in agriculture, must be held by the courts to have that status. If this amendment is adopted, it will be easy for the courts to decide cases in weeks and even in days which may otherwise take months. The debtors, too, will not have to experience any difficulty. Everything will work smoothly. No complications will arise and the courts will not find it difficult to discharge their duty. Their work will be lightened. In the presence of this amendment very few persons will have to prove formally that they mainly depend for their livelihood on agriculture. Such few cases the courts will not find difficult to dispose of and, such cases will arise only under the fifth part. This part finds a place in the amendment of the Government also and we see no objection against it. But we do not certainly want that about each and every person the courts must decide whether he is a debtor or not. On the ground of the obvious advantages of precision, we cannot agree to leave notified agricultural tribes to the whims of the courts. I realise that the Government perhaps does not want that it should specify any class of people and thus give an impression that it is favouring a particular class. But that feeling should not be allowed to frustrate the avowed object of the Bill. If Government has this feeling in fact and is being influenced by that, should we take it that it has begun to repent to having passed the law which we call the Alienation of Land Act? If it is really repenting over it and if it has come to dislike this Act, we have no help for that. But if that is not the case and if no such feelings are at work, then the Government should readily agree that certain classes of people should be specified as having the status of debtors so that those classes for whom apparently this Bill has been brought forward, may fully benefit by it.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

This specification is also necessary in the interests of the courts as I have already made it clear. We know that people already complain that the courts take too much time in deciding cases that come up before them. We have also heard people saying that these courts have no sympathy for the zamindars and they are always inclined in favour of the sahuikars. If we desire that such complaints should cease in future, we should not give them any discretionary powers. We must make everything as clear as possible. We must not leave them in doubt as to the intention of the legislature and thereby increase their difficulties.

As to the desire of the Government that nothing should be done to affect trade we are at one with it. We do not want to interfere with trade or with matters relating to trade (hear, hear). The traders may have their own way if they so desire. We are not their representatives and need not worry about them. Their own representatives are there to take care of their interests. If they think that the principle of damdupat will hinder trade or will harm the interests of the traders, we are not at all desirous of forcing it on them. Sir, the principle of damdupat is regarded by all as 4 P.M. a very just and equitable principle and personally I see no reason why businessmen should not be given its benefit. I doubt whether the view point of commercial classes of the province is correctly represented here in this House by these gentlemen.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Leave it to them.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I desire to make it clear that if in fact trading classes do not want to take advantage of the principle of damdupat, then it is not for us on this side of the House to urge its application being extended to them also. (Interruption.) Yes, if they think that they can better safeguard their interests by repudiating this principle which was laid down by Manu himself then let them do so. But one thing seems to have been missed by our critics. If we accept the amendment of Pir Sahib the commercial classes will be excluded from the benefit of the principle of damdapat. So there is no reason why Government should feel perturbed. Let them accept this amendment. And I think the honourable members sitting opposite should also have no objection to its acceptance.

Our desire to make the definition of 'debtor' of universal or, failing that, of more general application can be easily understood. What is beneficial for agriculturists is also beneficial for non-agriculturists and we did not like to look selfish by confining the application of this definition to agriculturists. In this Bill the definition of agriculturist is not the same as is given in the Land Alienation Act. Here an agriculturist is defined as one who depends for his subsistence mainly on agriculture. If the honourable members representing money-lending classes require time to think over the matter in order to come to a compromise with us we have no objection. There need be no hurry about this clause. We are willing to effect a compromise, and will try our best to do so. We have always been prepared to effect a compromise. In the past we have been trying to effect a compromise, but the honourable members opposite did not make a response.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Land-holders, General) (Urdu): Sir, I fail to understand the mentality of my honourable friends opposite. Sometimes they profess to be liberal and broadminded and at other times they show quite the reverse tendency. At one moment they try to extend the application of this Bill to all the debtors of the province and at others they want to narrow it down to a particular class of debtors. They do not stick to one thing. What they say at one moment they contradict at another. At present there are two amendments before the House. The first was moved by the Government, the second was moved by my honourable friend from Ferozepore. In support of the second amendment many honourable members have made speeches. The amendment of the member from Ferozepore will have the effect of extending the application of the term "debtor" to many people who in reality do not earn their livelihood by agriculture. It will include people who depend for their subsistence on service or income from profession. Against the objection that this definition of "debtor" will include people who earn their livelihood by service and other professions and occupations it is said that it would be difficult for the courts to find out whether a man earns more by agriculture or by some other profession and so there would occur confusion which will increase the work of courts. This objection is quite unreasonable. It is very easy to find out whether a man depends for his livelihood mainly upon agriculture or on some other occupation. Many gentlemen who have taken part in to-day's debate are dependent upon other occupations than agriculture for their livelihood. But according to the definition of a "debtor" as given in the amendment moved by the Government they will be included amongst the agriculturists. There are many people whose income as lawyers is Rs. 3,000 a month while their income from agriculture is only Rs. 200 a year. The fact that they have a little income from agriculture will give them the right of being included amongst the agriculturist debtors. It is not very difficult to find out whether a person depends upon agriculture or some other occupation. A reference to the land records will show how much land he owns and how much revenue he pays to the Government. The area of land owned or the amount of land revenue paid will sufficiently show whether or not agriculture is the main source of income.

[D. B. Raja Narendra Nath.]

Sir, all the difficulties which were enumerated by the honourable leader of the Unionist Party were quite imaginary. What he wanted was only this that some people who in fact are not agriculturists should be regarded as such and given the benefit of this Bill. I object to their inclusion amongst the agricultural debtors and I think my honourable friend sitting on this side of the House also object to it. How can a man be regarded as an agriculturist for the purposes of this Bill who earns Rs. 3,000 by practising as a lawyer and only Rs. 200 from agriculture? Such classes of people as Government servants, lawyers, members of the council, executive councillors, ministers, etc., should be excluded from the definition of "debtor." This is a very reasonable demand on our part. But whenever we want to press it the honourable members opposite at once change their broadmindedness and become narrow-minded. They at once begin to oppose it and the conciliatory spirit leaves them. They vote against it. Seeing their uncompromising spirit we become indifferent and cease to take part in the debate. If the honourable members opposite are really generous and fair-minded, then let them agree to the exclusion of these classes from the application of the definition of the word 'debtor.' The land revenue paid and the area of land owned is sufficient to show whether agriculture is the main source of income or not. The generosity of the honourable members representing the rural interest only extends to the depressed classes like the sweepers and others. These classes have no credit and as such they do not owe any large amounts of debt. What little they borrow they pay at once. By including them in the definition of 'debtor' the honourable members have not done any great service to these people. They have no credit and they have got no debts to be paid. A member of a depressed class has not got as much credit as the poorest amongst the zamindars has. Then they wanted to give the benefit of this measure to the people living in urban areas. About it there was a talk at Simla and we were also given a day to think over the matter. We thought over the matter and found that it was an offer with only a glazed outside and would in reality confer no benefit upon the urban people. We refused the offer. This was an offer which could be likened to a sweetmeat the eating of which gives no relish to those who eat it and at the same time holds out a temptation to those to whom it is denied. In economics any measure by which the credit of a class becomes less cannot be regarded as beneficial. To increase prosperity and to remove economic depression there are only two ways, to reduce your expenditure and increase your income. But my honourable friends want that the debts should be written off and that they should be relieved of their burden. This is no way out of the present difficulty.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: They say first write off the debts and then they will act according to the principle stated by you.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath: They want prosperity but do not want to act according to ways by which prosperity can be acquired. As I have stated before this offer is an empty temptation. If they want to extend the scope of the term "debtor" then let them do so. We do not consider it a boon on the urban people. We shall neither support them nor oppose them. We will keep silent.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : May I ask the honourable member whether he wishes this part of the Act to be extended to the people whom he represents?

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I am not particular about the extension of this part of the Act to the section I represent. I leave it to Government to decide. If the Government wants that this measure should be confined to agriculturists, I welcome that change. My point is that the amendment proposed for the purpose of defining "agriculturists" is very objectionable, because it covers persons who are not really agriculturists, who are making money in other ways and who want to get the benefit meant for this class. It is to that that I object.

Sir, I object to the amendment moved by the honourable member from Kasur. This amendment is 'Kasurwar.' Perhaps he has come from Kasur.

Pir Akbar Ali : Let me correct the honourable member that I am not from Kasur. I come from Ferozepore. (An honourable member : Yes, but you come via Kasur.)

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : With these words I strongly oppose the amendment moved by my honourable friend. An amendment which is based upon narrow-mindedness should not be accepted. For the reasons I have submitted before the House this amendment should be rejected.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan (Revenue Member) (Urdu) : Sir, the honourable member from Sargodha raised some objections to the amendment under consideration, some of which are weighty. But apart from those objections I see another and a serious one; not as a member of the Government but as a Muslim. One portion of this amendment reads :—

Who is a member of a class among Muslims or Sikhs corresponding to a depressed class among Hindus.

Among Muslims there are no depressed classes or untouchables to whom this portion of the amendment can apply. Therefore, this portion of the amendment is superfluous and should be deleted. I am sure I am voicing the feelings of all Muslims in objecting to this part of the amendment.

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : We Sikhs also join with the Honourable Revenue Member in contending that there are no depressed classes among us.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Sir, I noted with pleasure that the Leader of the National Unionist Party does not wish to force upon the Urban Hindu Party, if I may so call them, any measure which they themselves will not welcome. (Hear, hear). I would be very glad indeed if the Hindu Urban Party will say definitely whether they wish to be included in this part of the Bill or not. If they definitely say that they wish to be included then I will withdraw the amendment at once.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Our point of view with respect to damdupat is this. Damdupat is not the worst feature or the most obnoxious form of the Bill. The more obnoxious parts are those which have already been passed, the conciliation boards, the Usurious Loans Act which should have also been confined to the classes for which they were originally intended. But as we do not want unnecessary restrictions on the credit of urban classes we do not wish the part as to damdupat to be extended to the urban classes also. We are very anxious, that the other provisions should also be restricted to agriculturist debtors.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It is now definitely stated that the National Reform Party do not wish the principle of damdupat to be extended to their class. In that case I think it to be the duty of the Government to carry out their original intention and restrict this portion of the Bill to agriculturist debtors.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : It is not enough if the Hindu Urban Party which is representative of money-lenders says so. What about the other communities ? These are not the only representatives of the Urban section. You are mistaken if you think so. I say emphatically that other urban representatives do want protection whilst the Hindu Urban Party will not like to extend any relief to anybody in the world.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The original intention of the Bill was to relieve agricultural indebtedness. The word "agricultural" may not have remained in the preamble ; but that was undoubtedly the intention of the Bill and still is. As the National Reform Party do not wish this Part of the Bill to be extended to them, Government will do what it can to prevent its extension and I am very glad to note that the Leader of the National Unionist Party disclaimed all intention whatever of forcing upon the other party a portion of the Bill which they did not wish to accept. The Leader of the National Unionist Party also made an offer : he offered to accept the Government amendment provided we included within it the amendment moved by Pir Akbar Ali. Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath has already given us one good reason why we should not accept this amendment. It is that it would include amongst the people to whom relief is being extended, people whose real employment is not agriculture but who have taken law or medicine or Government service or that sort of thing. That is one reason. There is another very good reason indeed and that is that it will extend the benefits of this portion of the Bill to agriculturist money-lenders, perhaps I should say, to money-lenders who are members of notified agricultural tribes. I do not think anybody in this world wants to give that class relief simply because they are as a rule not in need of it and it would be absurd to pass any special measure to help them. But my strongest reason for opposing Pir Akbar Ali's amendment is that I strongly object to appearing ridiculous before the public. This King Charles's head is always being brought into every debate in this Council, this mention of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. The Punjab Alienation of Land Act is undoubtedly a class measure, which was thoroughly justified at the time when it was passed and has since justified itself. But we do not want it exhibited, we do not want it brought before the public at every turn and to introduce a totally unnecessary class distinction of this kind is to my mind wholly objectionable and I am afraid it will be regarded as ridiculous. Other parts of the amendment are bound to be regarded as ridiculous, including the unusual definition of the members of depressed classes among Hindus and those corresponding to them among Muslims and Sikhs. It has already brought protests from Muslims and Sikhs, very well deserved protests. For the rest, I think the Government amendment is about as exact as it can be. I do not say that no dispute whatever can arise from it, as there are very few phrases indeed about which no dispute can arise. But I feel sure that it will achieve the object of restricting this part of the Bill to the classes for whom it is intended, namely indebted agriculturists.

Pir Akbar Ali (Urdu): Sir, I have listened to the speeches of the Honourable the Leader of the House and the honourable Raja Sahib very attentively. I have also heard the speech of Shaikh Sahib. It appears that the main objection against my definition of "debtor" is that it does not include all that is included in the definition of "debtor" as given in the amendment moved by the Government. The Honourable the Leader of the House objected to a portion of the amendment which refers to depressed classes. I have no objection if this portion is deleted. I also agree with all that has been said by Shaikh Sahib. The Sikh members also associated themselves with the Honourable the Leader of the House as regards the deletion of the portion referring to depressed classes among Sikhs and Muslims. As already stated I agree with its deletion. If all parties can agree about a thing by this deletion I have no objection to it. Let the portion concerned be deleted. Raja Sahib said that we are not consistent in our behaviour, that sometimes we are large-hearted enough to extend the scope of the Act to all classes and at others become so narrow-minded as to limit its application to a particular class. Let me remind him that at Simla at the time of the select committee meeting the Government wanted the Bill to limit its application to a particular class. We objected to it and stressed that the application of this beneficial measure should be extended to all classes without any distinction. With this end in view we gave time to the honourable members opposite to consider this matter and then acquaint us with their mind. The honourable members considered it for one full day and came to the conclusion that they should reject our offer. They rejected our offer. This shows our attitude. We wanted to give the benefit of the measure to all classes whether Hindus or Muslims or Sikhs; agriculturist or non-agriculturists, poor or rich, alike. But the honourable members did not agree to our proposal and rejected the offer. The honourable Raja Sahib compared this offer to a sweetmeat which has no sweet taste. Let me tell him that sweetmeats and other such nice eatables have fallen to the share of the community of those honourable members. What have we got in their place? Nothing, not even such vegetables as are given to the cattle. I would like to place before the House the condition of the zamindars, but as there is very little time at my disposal I will refrain from it. The Government has defined "debtor" as one who chiefly depends upon agriculture for his livelihood. Government has included all such classes in their definition who depend upon agriculture in some way or other for their subsistence. The Government has very kindly offered a helping hand to all the classes. But I say if the Government wants to pass this Bill into an Act for the benefit of the agriculturist classes also then they should consult us about it. We are the representatives of the agriculturists. But if this measure is not meant to ameliorate the condition of the zamindars, then let them take their course. We cannot help it. We have every claim over the Government. We have been fighting in their wars. We have been paying land revenue and other taxes. We will also continue to form their armies in the future and would also continue to pay the different land taxes. The Government should keep in view our benefit. But if notwithstanding all the sacrifices that we have made for the Government the Government insists upon showing indifference to our cause then it is our bad luck that is to be blamed. These honourable members who are sitting over there are here in the Council on account of us. We have made their fortunes. We have earned and they have spent. But still they are indifferent to our interests. They never think of all that we have done for them. The zamindars work hard and all that they earn by the sweat of their brow goes to the community of these honourable members. Now the cotton crop has failed and the zamindars are expecting still harder times. The honourable members should be considerate and offer a helping hand to the zamindars. Instead of doing this they are trying to snatch all the land from the hands of the agriculturists. They want to deport them and expel them from the country. But let me tell them that they cannot do so. Even if they succeed in driving the agriculturists out of the possession of their lands they will not be able to carry on agriculture with their own hands. They will have to employ the agriculturists as farm labourers, etc. But then they would like not to give them anything for their subsistence. Now the condition is this. The agriculturists work hard throughout the year and then at the end find that they have not got anything to live upon. Some portion of their income is taken away by the Government as their land revenue and abiana. The remaining portion is taken away by the sahukars as the interest on the loans advanced to them. The zamindars remain empty-handed. But if at times some portion is left, well, that covers the expense of feeding the cattle. Raja Sahib was not right in stating that we are narrow-minded. We produce and all the other classes consume. We earn and they enjoy. Is it narrow-mindedness? When the zamindars cut their crops they give a good portion of it to the poor. Any one who goes to the fields at the harvest time gets something. We are not narrow-minded. But when we are offered unbecoming treatment we do resent it.

[Pir Akbar Ali.]

Then there was an objection to the inclusion of pleaders, and others in the definition of "debtor." I say there are perhaps not more than two in a thousand who are pleaders. There are very few vakils and government servants amongst the agriculturists. The number of such men who have also other means of income in addition to agriculture is very small, and it matters little if the scope of this portion of the Bill is also extended to them. The honourable Raja Sahib has been in service for so many years. Can he say that his salary was his only income? Can he say that his salary made a great difference in his income? He, I am sure, had to depend upon agriculture, during the time he was in service. He now depends upon the income which he derives from his lands. I am sure that even now the honourable Raja Sahib is not living on his pension alone. Income from his land will be more than his income from pension. The definition proposed by the Government excludes from "agriculturists" all those Punjabis whose income from other sources exceeds the income which they derive from agricultural occupations. This is not fair. This definition will make the circle of agriculturists hopelessly narrow. We on these benches, Sir, are desirous of widening this circle like anything. In fact, we want that everybody in this province should have a right to be called an agriculturist.

It is the narrow vision of the money-lending and factory-owning classes which wants to exclude all other people from these professions. The money-lender wants to confine the occupation to his own class and the factory-owner will fight hard against the setting up of another factory in his neighbourhood. But we zamindars are pleased when people from outside join our profession. It does not behove the Government, therefore, to narrow down the definition of "agriculturist" as they have proposed to do. In the end, I would make another submission to the Government. We began the consideration of this Bill on the 24th of the last month and now the 24th of the present month has come. If we accept the Government's amendment the achievement which we have made so far will be well nigh lost and we shall find ourselves again in the first stage of our task. Will it be proper for the Government to create such a situation? I hope Government members will give a moment's thought to my submission. Moreover, the Government should not take very seriously a defeat here or a reverse there in the matter of divisions. We should think that Government's position is such that its reverses even are as glorious as its victories and in fact there is very little difference between them in practice as it is possible for the Government to mend matters whenever they are so inclined, and do whatever seems to them proper and right. I personally was of the opinion that the Government would be gratified that the present Bill had been extended to all classes and its universal application had removed from it the stigma of its being a class measure. I thought that the fact that the House itself had voted for its universal application had given the Government all the greater pleasure. I could never think that the Government would grudge the application of this Bill to all sections of their subjects equally. In fact only the zamindars can be appropriately called subjects of the Government. They are most loyal and it is the loyal people who can be justly mentioned by the name of subjects. We have made sacrifices for the sake of Government. We have shed our blood in its service. In fact we have loyally served the class of gentlemen on those benches who have come here now to oppose every reasonable demand made by us. But we are extremely sorry to see that those whom we serve and those for whose sake we suffer are the most uncompromising opponents of our cause. I wonder why the Government has taken in its head to displease the entire population of the province in an attempt to win the goodwill of half a dozen people here. The Government is already doing a lot for these people and their community at the cost of our people. It has opened colleges for them. It has established all sorts of beneficent institutions for their sake. It looks after their health and the sanitary condition of the localities where they live. It is not doing anything for the sake of zamindars. It is depriving zamindars of the benefits of colleges, schools, hospitals and good sanitation. We fail to understand why it is showing a step-motherly treatment to its rural subjects. Now it is defining the word "agriculturist" in such a way that it will go down to posterity as a synonym of debtor. I know this Bill, if passed into law, will remain in force for all time to come because the system of raising loans can never die out. So we zamindars view with horror the prospect of being mentioned as debtors for all time to come. We regard it as a slight. I hope the Government will give its closest consideration to this aspect of the question. As is apparent I am not in a mood to make a lengthy speech at this time (hear, hear), so I shall resume my seat after making just one more submission. The Government, zamindars expect, should not treat them in a manner which might totally disillusion them. If it does not see its way to vote in zamindars' favour, it may remain neutral. One word to my Hindu friends and especially to Pandit Nanak Chand. He is always found to declare that he stands for the welfare of zamindars. To-day's voting will clearly show whether he really is a well-wisher of the zamindars. We deserve his help and the help of his community. We have served them through thick and thin. We have helped them at the risk of our lives, property and everything. In fact we zamindars are the makers of history in this country. The House may reject those parts of my amendment to which reference has been made by the Honourable Revenue Member. It may make any other change too by mutual agreement. But it is my earnest request that my amendment should be adopted. If, however, the Government may be prepared to withdraw their amendment, I shall have no objection to withdrawing mine. Otherwise, I shall be obliged to press it. With these words, I resume my seat.

[Pir Akbar Ali.]

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh (Multan division and Sheikhpura, Sikh, Rural): Sir, I want to move an amendment.

Mr. President: Amendment to what?

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh: Amendment to Pir Akbar Ali's amendment. He agrees to certain amendments being made and with your permission I formally move it. I believe it is agreeable to one section of the House at least.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: Surely the debate has come to an end.

Mr. President: Yes, the debate has ended and the mover has exercised his right of reply. The question is—

That in the proposed clause 29, sub-clause (1), the following be added as part (i):—

(i) who is a member of a tribe notified as an agricultural tribe under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, or

The Council divided: Ayes, 32; Noes, 37.

AYES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.

Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.
Haibat Khan Daha, Khan.
Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan, Chaudhri.
Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.

Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari,
Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani,
Makhdumzada Sayad.
Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib
Mian.

Nur Khan, Khan Sahib Risaldar
Bahadur.
Nurullah, Mian.
Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
Zafrulla Khan, Chaudhri.
Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur
Malik.

NOES:

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
Askwith, Mr. A. V.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
Chetan Anand, Lala.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable
Malik Sir.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.
Ghani, Mr. M. A.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honour-
able Dr.
Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.
Grindal, Mr. A. D.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.
Labh Singh, Mr.
Latifi, Mr. A.

Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.
Manohar Lal, Mr.
Marsden, Mr. P.
Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur
Raja.
Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Ramji Das, Lala.
Roberts, Mr. W.
Sanderson, Mr. R.
Shave, Dr. (Mrs.) M. C.
Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur
Sardar.
Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honour-
able Captain Sirdar Sir.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in the proposed clause 29, sub-clause (1), the following be added :—

who is a member of a class declared by the Local Government as depressed among Hindus, or

The Council divided : Ayes, 94 ; Noes, 37.

AYES

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Atzal Haq, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan
Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.

Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chau-
dhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab
Chaudhri.
Ghani, Mr. M. A.
Haibat Khan Daba, Khan.
Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.

Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
 Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan,
 Chaudhri.
 Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
 Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib
 Makhdum Shaikh.
 Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan
 Bahadur Nawab.
 Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari,
 Khan Bahadur Nawab.
 Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani,
 Makhdumzada Sayad.
 Muhammad Sadiq Shaikh.

Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
 Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
 Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib
 Mian.
 Nur Khan, Khan Sahib Risaldar
 Bahadur.
 Nurullah, Mian.
 Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
 Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
 Roberts, Mr. W.
 Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.
 Zafrulla Khan, Chaudhri.
 Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur
 Malik.

NOES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
 Askwith, Mr. A. V.
 Bansilal, Chaudhri.
 Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
 Bhagat Ram, Lala.
 Bourne, Mr. F. C.
 Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
 Chetan Anand, Lala.
 Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
 Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
 Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable
 Malik Sir.
 Garbett, Mr. C. C.
 Gokul Chand Narang, The Honour-
 able Dr.
 Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.
 Grindal, Mr. A. D.
 Hearn, Mr. J. W.
 Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.
 Labh Singh, Mr.
 Latifi, Mr. A.
 Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.

Macfarlane, Mr. D.
 Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.
 Manohar Lal, Mr.
 Marsden, Mr. P.
 Mayadas, Mr. Earnest.
 Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
 Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan
 Bahadur Mian.
 Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur
 Raja.
 Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
 Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
 Pancham Chand, Thakur.
 Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
 Ramji Das, Lala.
 Sanderson, Mr. R.
 Shave, Dr. (Mrs.) M. C.
 Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur
 Sardar.
 Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

Mr. Labh Singh : On a point of order. After these various items are put, supposing the House answers one of the items in the affirmative, will it be your pleasure to put the amended clause as a whole once again?

Mr. President : That question has not arisen yet. The question is—

That in the proposed clause 29, sub-clause (1), the following be added :—
 who is a member of a class among Muslims or Sikhs corresponding to a depressed class among Hindus, or

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The next sub-clause proposed is—who is a tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuits under a person falling in any of the categories specified in (i), (ii) and (iii) or under a tenant of agricultural land, or

As the categories specified in (i), (ii) and (iii) have been deleted, does the House want that this clause be put?

Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan : The amendment does not go out in consequence. The categories specified in the deleted parts will be read into this part and I submit that there is nothing repugnant in the amendment to the parts rejected before.

Mr. President : I shall put the amendment. The question is—

That in the proposed clause 29, sub-clause (1), the following be added :—

who is a tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuits or under a tenant of agricultural land.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in the proposed clause 29, sub-clause (1), the following be added :—

who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture.

The motion was lost.

Pir Akbar Ali : Now that this has been rejected I submit that both the parts of sub-clause (1) of clause 29 proposed by Government being substantially the same as mine or being covered by my amendment, the amendment of Government has also been rejected.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : No. The Government amendment is not the same as the honourable member's.

Mr. President : Now I propose to put the original new clause.

(At this stage Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram rose to speak).

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Sir, I have an objection to raise. The objection is that both the motions were before the House and the honourable Chaudhri Chhotu Ram spoke on both the motions. He therefore cannot be permitted to speak again.

5 P. M.

Mr. President : The amendment moved by the honourable Pir Akbar Ali was before the House and Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and several other gentlemen spoke to it. When that amendment was before the House the original clause was laid aside. Now that that amendment has been disposed of, the original clause is again before the House and if any honourable member wishes to speak to it he may do so.

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair and it was occupied by the Deputy President.)

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East, Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, the object underlying the amendment moved by Government is to substitute a new clause for the existing clause 29 and by means of this amendment the Government want the House to go against its own decision already arrived at in connection with section 7 of the Bill. The word "debtor" is already defined in section 7 which was passed by the House weeks ago. There was nothing in the Bill as introduced or in the Bill as it emerged from the select committee to show that the words

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

"debtor" and "agriculture" were restricted to any particular part or to any particular clauses of the Bill. On the contrary it appeared that these words were intended to be of general application. Therefore the definition of the word "debtor" in section 7 which has been agreed to by the House extends to this clause also. Under these circumstances to move an amendment which controvenes the spirit of section 7 and thus nullifies the previous decision of the House is entirely unfair.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Surely this has already been decided. Is it in order to discuss a point of order on which a ruling has been given?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am not at all discussing the correctness or otherwise of the ruling of the Chair. I do admit its soundness and bow before it. But I have every right to discuss whether the Government is justified in moving an amendment which defeats the real object of the Bill especially when a particular definition of the word "debtor" has already been agreed to by the House. The ruling of the Chair was to the effect that according to the rules and standing orders, the amendment moved by the Government was in order, that is, it could be considered and passed or rejected by the House. What I was submitting was that it was unfair and objectionable on the part of the Government to bring in an amendment which indirectly abrogates the previous decision of the House. In fact I am inclined to say that it amounts to a contempt of the House for whose decisions we should all have every possible regard.

I would now turn to the actual words of the amendment. The first part of it runs as follows :—

(1) "Debtor" means a person who owes a debt, and—

(i) who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, and is either a landowner or tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuits of a land-owner or of a tenant of agricultural land ;

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Why not read it in English to avoid the trouble of translating it in Urdu.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I am speaking in Urdu because I know that most of the honourable members now present will easily understand my point. It is true that it is sometimes difficult for many of us to express or make others understand a foreign idea in our own tongue. But since I have begun speaking in Urdu, I would like to continue my speech in Urdu. It is possible that Government Members may not be able to understand some words of my speech here and there but I am sure that they will be able to understand generally what I am driving at. The second part of the amendment is as follows :—

(ii) who earns his livelihood as a village menial paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture.

There are also certain explanations to which I would advert later on.

Under the first part of the amendment a person claiming to be a debtor will have to prove that he earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture. The word "mainly" has not been defined in the Bill anywhere. There may be presiding officers of courts who may hold that one who derives three-fourths of his income from agriculture, is alone a person who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture. There may be others who may hold that one who derives two-thirds of his income from agriculture, is alone a person who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture. The greatest difficulty likely to confront the courts as well as those for whom this Bill is intended would be on account of the absence of some definition of the word "mainly" in the Bill. This drawback in the Bill will defeat its real object. It would depend upon the whims and fancies of presiding officers of courts to allow or disallow the claim of a person to be treated as a debtor and to take advantage of the provisions of the Bill. This is after all an emergency measure intended to relieve as quickly as possible the agriculturist debtor of indebtedness. Why, then, should we leave things ambiguous and cause delay? Nobody can compel the courts to take any particular course of action in the absence of a clear direction. It will be very difficult for one to prove that he is entitled to seek relief under the provisions of the Bill in the absence of a clear definition of debtor. It may be said that a ruling can be had from the High Court on the point. But an agriculturist debtor is too poor a person to go up to the High Court.

Probably in most cases he will not be able to prefer an appeal even in the court of a district judge. But if at all he goes to the High Court, it will take at least two or three years if not more as has been the case so far, to decide his appeal finally. This part of the amendment being vague and indefinite merits strong opposition from the House. If the definition of the word "debtor," as given in the amendment, is accepted, the debtors for whom the Bill is intended, would stand to gain nothing. But supposing the courts condescend to hold that one who derives more than half of his income from agriculture is a person who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, even then the debtor will have to face certain insurmountable difficulties. He will have to prove from what different sources his income is derived. If under the law of evidence the onus is placed on the debtor, it would be difficult for him to establish his case for the courts do not attach much importance to oral evidence. On the other hand if documentary evidence is adduced they have to consider whether it is or is not admissible under the existing law. Very often documents have been declared to be inadmissible on account of certain legal and technical defects.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : If the word "mainly" is omitted, it will worsen the situation.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I do not say that the word "mainly" should be omitted. In my opinion the whole definition should be deleted. I was submitting that documentary evidence in many cases will not be admitted on account of certain legal or technical objections.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the chair.)

If the document in possession of the debtor is in the handwriting of a third person it would be expensive for him to produce its writer. And if it is written by the creditor and he denies having written it the evidence of a handwriting expert would become necessary. In that case the debtor will have to incur a lot of expense. But even if the expert opinion is obtained, it is not safe to attach to it any great evidential value. According to a ruling of the High Court, to base judgment on expert opinion alone is not free.

✓ [R. B. Chhotu Ram.]

from danger. In other cases the debtor in order to prove his point may have to produce copies of certain official records and for that also he will have to incur expenses. As I have already said the courts, for certain cogent reasons, do not attach much importance to oral evidence. The courts may not consider the evidence given by witnesses summoned by the debtor to be reliable for they will not be well-dressed gentlemen but will most probably be like the debtor himself dressed in rags. I would therefore submit that it would be both difficult and expensive for the debtor to prove that he earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and consequently the debtor will not get relief which you want to afford to him by means of this Bill. It is, therefore, essential that such persons or such classes of persons as are to benefit by this measure and for whom this measure is intended, should be definitely and clearly specified. If you leave it to courts to decide which person or persons are entitled to the benefit of the Bill, you will certainly be depriving most of the debtors of the benefits, that are to accrue to them under this legislation. I need hardly say that the task of courts will also become very difficult. This is about the first part of the proposed definition of the word 'debtor.'

I shall now proceed to show that the second part of this definition is also very defective. It says that only such menials as live in villages will be able to avail themselves of the provisions of this Bill. Now there is a large number of menials who live in towns or I should say in big villages having a population of three or four thousand people declared as "notified areas." There is a large number of menials who live in the limits of what are known as "small towns." These menials, as you will be aware, Sir, live upon nothing else but what they get from the agriculturists as remuneration for the help that they render to the latter in tilling their lands. But as they do not live at places which are strictly speaking villages, but which have been declared notified areas or small towns committees, they will not be able to claim the status of a debtor for the purposes of this Bill. Although it will be easily proved and admitted too by the courts that such persons earn their livelihood as menials paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture, yet it will be impossible to grant them that status simply because they happen to live at a little distance from the countryside in the limits of notified areas and small town committees. It is obvious, therefore, that the word "village" that has been added before the word "menial" in the second part of this definition, will deprive many deserving persons of the advantages of this Bill. Before I pass on to the other parts of this definition I may point out that menials who help agriculturists and who have nothing else to do live in big towns too. The case of the Indian Christians is in point. Although they have embraced Christianity and although they prefer to live within the limits of municipal committees, they have not given up agricultural labour. Many of them still earn their livelihood by helping the agriculturists in their work connected with agriculture. But as they happen to live in towns and not in villages, they will not be able to benefit by the provisions of this Bill. Their claim for being declared as debtors for purposes of this Bill will at once be rejected. Therefore I say that if it is not the intention of the Government and the House to defeat the object of this Bill, the word 'village' before 'menial' must not be allowed to be retained. The retention of this word, I need not repeat, will exclude many deserving persons from the category of debtors.

I now come to the explanations. The first of them says that a debtor shall not lose his status as such through involuntary unemployment or on account of temporary or permanent incapacity or if he is or has been in service of His Majesty's Military or Naval Forces, only on account of his pay and allowances or pension exceeding his income from agricultural sources. I may at once say that this explanation is not happily worded particularly in the last part of it. The word 'only' is certainly very misleading. Suppose a person belonging to a notified agricultural tribe, is in receipt of pay and allowances or pension as a servant or ex-servant in the Military or Naval Forces and he has some income, although very small, from another non-agricultural source too and that his income from these two sources exceeds his income from agricultural sources, will the courts decide in such a case that he and similar other persons do not lose their status as debtors? Certainly not. The decision will be surely against them. Therefore it goes without saying that a large number of persons for whom this Bill is meant will again be excluded from the category of debtors. That will be the sure result of this explanation as it now stands. If, of course, the pay and allowances or pension of a servant in the Military or Naval Forces were to be declared as agricultural income, no such difficulty will arise and the courts will have no doubts on the point. But if this explanation is allowed to remain as it is, a large number of the loyal servants of the Government from districts like Rawalpindi, Jhelum, Rohtak, Ludhiana, Hoshiarpur and Gurdaspur will find it impossible to derive any benefit from the provisions of this Bill. While on this point, I may be permitted to say that most of the people in these districts are very poor. Their holdings are very small and yield very limited incomes. Most of them own only one or two acres of land. These districts also lack irrigation facilities, as I understand there are no canals in Rawalpindi and Hoshiarpur districts. (Interruption.) I am just now told that there is a canal in the Hoshiarpur district which irrigates only a very small portion of it.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Mention Simla also.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : If the number of agriculturist debtors in Simla is sufficiently large, I have no objection to please the Honourable Finance Member and include in my list Simla as well. However, what I wanted to convey was that deserving persons like these will be deprived of the advantages of this Bill if this explanation is not more happily worded.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Is not this a long way off the debate?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : It is not a long way off the debate at all. I am bringing out the defects of this definition. I was saying that if military pay and allowances were to be considered a portion of the income from agricultural sources, the difficulty could be solved. But if the Government is not prepared to do that, it will be going against the interests of its own loyal servants who having very small holdings and who being very poor, deserve its help more than anybody else.

The second explanation says that a debtor shall not lose his status as such by reason of the fact that he makes income by using his plough cattle.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

for purposes of transport. Against this explanation I have the same objection which I have raised against the first explanation. In regard to this explanation also, therefore, I shall make the same suggestion and, that is, that such income should be taken to be a portion of the income from agricultural sources. That will achieve the object which, the Government also has in view. As regards the third explanation I have nothing to say against it. It will serve our purpose all right even as it is and therefore no change need be made in it.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It appears that it is not intended to finish the work to-day.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I now turn to the second part of this definition. It says that "Agriculture shall include horticulture and the use of land for any purpose of husbandry inclusive of the keeping or breeding live-stock, poultry, or bees, and the growth of fruit vegetables and the like." I must admit that this is a very useful part of the definition.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Sir, I beg to move—

That the question be now put.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I was about to say, Sir, that if in other portions of the definition the income from pay and pension from the Military Department or income derived by the use of cattle for purposes of transport could have been included in the income from agricultural sources, the object which is so dear to us and which, I hope, is dear to the Government as well, could have been easily achieved. To sum up, I may say that with the exception of the two parts of this definition the rest are open to very serious objection and are certainly very defective. Unless those defects are removed the courts will find it very difficult to discharge the duty which this measure will impose on them, in a satisfactory manner. In my humble opinion we are not here to increase and add to the difficulties of the courts which they will have certainly to face if these defects, which I have pointed out, are allowed to remain. I think that it is our duty to facilitate the task of the courts and not to make their task difficult. We must not pass provisions which would complicate matters. Everything that we adopt must be clear and precise and beyond all doubt. But as this definition does not come up to that standard, it will be better to drop it altogether. We have already adopted a definition of the word 'debtor.' Why should we rise in rebellion against it. I know that a very unimportant and innocent amendment was passed by the House against the wishes of the Government. But that is no reason why the Government should fly into fury and should try to undo what the House has already done. Can it not be so large-hearted as to respect in one small point the wishes of those who have always been studiously trying to respect its wishes and on occasions had made substantial sacrifices? Are those sacrifices of ours to result in nothing? Government ought to know that if a person sometimes chooses to yield to another person, he does so with the expectation that at some other time the other man will also yield to him. Similarly if we have been always trying to meet the wishes of the Government we have been doing so with the hope that Government too will meet our wishes on some occasion.

We never expected that the Government would always be selfish and that it would always expect to get something and would never give anything in return like the urban people.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Then, how is it that the rural people have become indebted to the urban people if the latter were never in the habit of giving but always in the habit of taking ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : By the time of final settlement the urban people take many times more than they have given. Whether it is on account of constant association with the urban people or for some other reason I do not know, but it is plain that the mentality of the Government has changed. Now it seems to have come to believe only in 'taking' and never 'giving.' That is not the attitude that a Government should adopt. Sometimes it must try to please those who have always been its obedient servants. It is neither politic nor proper that the Government should always insist on the fulfilment of its own desires. It is its duty to have some regard for the wishes of those also whose care it is always to help and co-operate with it. But if it is not prepared to listen to what we have to say and if it is determined to have its own way it will mean that it is behaving like that powerful man who will beat a weak man and who will not allow the man subjected to beating even to cry.

(The Deputy President was reading a newspaper.)

Mr. President : I am sorry that the honourable the Deputy President is reading a newspaper. This is not the place for reading newspapers.

Pir Akbar Ali : I hope it is not your ruling that a member cannot read a newspaper even if he is reading something concerning the debate that is going on.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I move—

That the question be now put.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I was submitting Sir, that it does not behove the Government to act in this manner. If it will have no regard for our feelings and will hurt them, we must naturally cry in protest and express our resentment against that attitude. That is but natural. We cannot go against nature. We know that Government will begin to call us unreasonable and obstinate. It will say that we are not prepared to listen to reason although we are always prepared to bow before reason. But we will not mind that because truth, as we are sure, is on our side. We are only asking for what is most reasonable and most desirable. We are sure, that this charge against us must fail ultimately because we have always been so accommodating and obliging to the Government and intend to remain so in future. We have been accommodating and obliging even to those who have the privilege of close association with the Government. I mean to say that we have always been accommodating to the urban people as well.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Why are you joking ?

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I can cite instances to show that we have been accommodating to the urban people as well.

Mr. President : I request the honourable member to speak to the motion.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Sometimes I have to digress in order to reply to the remarks of the honourable members who choose to interrupt me. What I have been driving at all along was that after the House had adopted on another occasion a very desirable and a very reasonable definition of the word 'debtor' it was not proper for the Government to come forward with this proposal.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The honourable member has said this about twenty times.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : To bring home a point sometimes it becomes necessary to repeat it even twenty-one times. However in deference to the wishes of the Honourable the Finance Member I shall leave that point here.

I may now be permitted to say that I have enumerated one by one the defects that are found in the definition proposed by the Government. I have analysed each part of the definition and I have shown what its effect will be if it is allowed to remain as it is.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : May I invite your attention to paragraph 59 (2) (ii) of the Constitutional Manual which says :—

✓ 'A member shall not use his right of speech for the purpose of wilfully and persistently obstructing the business of the Council.'

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : What I am doing or saying is certainly included in the business of the Council. If I were to be guided and controlled by the opinion of the Honourable Finance Member even in the use of my right as a member of the Council, I am sure I should not be allowed to say much. But thank God that the power of control lies somewhere else. I am really sorry that I cannot accede to the wishes of the Honourable Member. I was saying, Sir, that I have analysed at length the different parts of the proposed definition in order to show that it is defective and harmful whether as a whole or taken in parts.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : We must appeal to the Chair. There is no other protection.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I was about to finish, Sir. But before I close I must say once again that this definition is very defective and it should be rejected.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member has repeated arguments several times. I quite realise that he is using his speech for dilatory purposes, but I think there should be a limit to these tactics.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I wanted to say that the effect of all the different parts of the definition put together and even the effect of individual portions of the definition will be detrimental to the interests of the people for whose benefit this Bill is being passed into law.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I appeal to the Chair.

Mr. President : Please allow the honourable member to proceed.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I think I have every right to continue my speech until I have said all that I can to convince the House of the harmful effects that this definition will produce.

Mr. President : Subject to the restrictions contained in our Standing Orders every honourable member has a right of speech and when there is no time limit he can speak as long as he pleases on the matter under discussion, but the sole object of his speech must be discussion of the question before the House. Obstruction by bringing in irrelevant matter or unnecessarily prolonging one's speech is undesirable and the honourable member being the leader of the biggest party in the House, is expected not to employ any dilatory or obstructive tactics (hear, hear).

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Sir, the matter is so very important that it had to be discussed threadbare and I had to take such a long time over it. I think what I have said I have said with one simple aim and that is to convince the House of the defects that are to be found in the definition proposed by the Government.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : May I remind you of another occasion in this House when I was speaking to a resolution moved by the honourable member opposite. I spoke up till after six o'clock and you were pleased to put the motion to vote even though I had talked out the motion.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : May I point out that not a single word has been objected to by the Chair as irrelevant or as a repetition?

✓ Mr. President : I did not solicit the honourable member's opinion.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : What I wanted to impress upon the House was that the definition proposed by the Government would, if adopted, defeat the very object of the Bill.

Mr. President : Repetition is not fair.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (Urdu) : Sir, I do not deny that in the previous portions of my speech some arguments may have been repeated. But now, towards the end of my speech, I am only summing up my arguments for the benefit of the honourable members. Therefore, it cannot be said that the last portion of my speech is either unnecessary or irrelevant. In the end I urge that whether you consider the accumulative effect of the whole amendment or the effect of any individual portion of it you are bound to come to the conclusion that by accepting it the purpose of the Bill would be frustrated, and, consequently the Council should reject this amendment.

(At this stage the Honourable President enquired the number of members who wanted to speak on the motion.—11 members standing).

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : May I ask if they wish to support the motion or oppose it?

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : May I just propose an amendment to one of the explanations, explanation No. 2 of the motion proposed? This was already printed up in the list at page 3 of the Fourth Revised List, as No. 25.

Mr. President : The honourable member will have to give notice.

The Council then adjourned till 2 P.M., on Monday, 26th November 1934.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Monday, 26th November 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2 P.M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

OATH OF OFFICE.

Sardar Bahadur Captain Sardar Janmeja Singh (nominated non-official) was sworn in.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

VILLAGES IRRIGATED BY LOWER JHEULM CANAL.

3941. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

- (a) how many villages of the Gujrat district are irrigated by the Lower Jhelum Canal ;
- (b) whether he is aware that the Upper Jhelum Canal irrigates the remaining villages of the Gujrat district except those in (a) ;
- (c) whether he is aware that for the villages in (a) there are two instalments yearly for the payment of land revenue, while for villages in (b) there is only one ;
- (d) whether he is aware that the land revenue of both the sets of villages in (a) and (b) respectively was levied in a single settlement report ;
- (e) if answers to (c) and (d) be in the affirmative, what action the Government intends to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Eleven.

- (b) Yes, the remaining canal irrigated villages.
- (c) (a) Yes.
(b) No.
- (d) No.
- (e) Does not arise.

3942. Cancelled.

FIRST OFFENDERS.

3943. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that at the 1st Provincial Conference of the Punjab Jails Non-Official Visitors' Association held in January, 1933, a resolution was passed unanimously recommending to the Government that short term imprisonment should be abolished ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that the same Conference recommended to the Government that necessary legislation be passed for " Release on Probation of First Offenders " ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that a draft of a Bill of " Release on Probation of First Offenders " was submitted to the Government for its consideration ;
- (d) whether Government is aware that the present provisions of Section 562 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot serve the real purpose of a " Release on Probation of First Offenders Act ", as recommended by the Punjab Jails' Non-Official Visitors' Association, as the necessary machinery of probation officers, etc., required under the Probation Act does not exist and that the provisions of Section 562, Criminal Procedure Code, are more limited in their application than would be provided with the Probation Act and its machinery ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that similar resolutions were passed by the second Provincial Conference of the district Secretaries of the Punjab Prisoners' Aid Society ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that the Government of India recently circulated the draft of a Bill of " Release on Probation of First Offenders " and later on dropped this measure for reasons of its being a matter for the provincial Governments ;
- (g) if replies to questions from (a) to (f) are in the affirmative, what action Government proposes to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a), (b) and (c) Yes.

(d) This is a matter of opinion.

(e) Government have no information.

(f) Yes.

(g) Owing to the cost of experiment Government are unable at present to consider the introduction of any system of release on probation of first offenders.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : With reference to the answer to part (e) I wish to ask a supplementary question. Will Government please state whether by this method the number of short term prisoners will be reduced ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I should think that is probable.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : As regards the answer to part (h), is a non-official visitor debarred from seeing any prisoner or can he see every prisoner in the jail ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I see no reason at all why a non-official visitor could not see every one of the prisoners.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Is any non-official visitor debarred from seeing any political prisoner ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : He is not debarred but special visitors have been appointed to see political prisoners.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : I specifically ask, is he debarred or not ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : He is not.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Has the Superintendent power to stop a non-official visitor from seeing any prisoner whomsoever that non-official visitor should like to see ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : May I have notice of that question ?

NON-OFFICIAL VISITORS OF JAILS.

3944. Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) what qualifications are taken into consideration for the appointment of non-official visitors of Jails in the Punjab ; and whether these qualifications are observed in the appointment of every non-official visitor ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that a number of non-official visitors of jails are appointed from among those persons who cannot write their remarks in the Jail Minute Book in English, and who do not permanently reside in the city or town where jail is situated and of which they are the non-official visitors ;
- (c) whether Government is aware that the non-official visitors of jails feel great hesitation in writing their observations with any spirit of independence, in the Jail Minute Book kept for the purpose, in the presence of the Jail officials and in certain cases are obliged to write eulogising remarks ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the Punjab Jails Non-Official Visitors' Association passed a unanimous resolution requesting the Government to allow the non-official visitors to write their observations of a Jail visit either at their homes or at an independent place in the Jail, where no official of the Jail may be present at that time ;

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

- (e) if the replies to questions (b), (c) and (d) are in the affirmative, what action the Government propose to take for removing the existing defects, and if the Government propose to take no action, the reasons in each case;
- (f) whether it is a fact that a number of honorary magistrates are appointed non-official visitors of the jails of their own place; if the reply to this question is in the affirmative, whether Government propose to revise the appointments of such non-official visitors of jails;
- (g) how often a non-official visitor is expected to visit his jail; whether it is a fact that a number of non-official visitors of jails do not pay their regular scheduled visits required normally under the rules and if so, how many such cases were reported to the Government and for what action during 1933 and what action Government took in each case;
- (h) whether it is a fact that a number of non-official visitors of jails during their visit to a jail do not see every prisoner confined there even at least once a month; if so, whether Government intends to take necessary steps to ensure that every prisoner confined in a jail was seen by every non-official visitor of a jail at least once a month if not oftener, and if necessary amend the existing rules to this effect;
- (i) whether it is a fact that Superintendents of Jails in many cases write contradictory remarks against the observations recorded in the Minute Book by a non-official visitor of the Jail and that a copy of Superintendent's explanation is not immediately sent to the non-official visitor concerned and the Inspector-General of Prisons gives no opportunity to the non-official visitor to establish the truth of the observations recorded by him; if so, whether Government intends to take necessary steps to assure due credence and value to the observations recorded by a non-official visitor of jails?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: (a) Non-official visitors are chosen on the ground of definite qualifications such as interest in prison matters or other social work, ability and willingness to assist in finding work for prisoners on release.

(b) It is not incumbent on a non-official visitor to write his remarks in English or to reside in the town in which the jail is situated.

(c) No such complaint has been received by Government from a non-official visitor.

(d) Yes. Jail officials are required to withdraw when a non-official visitor is recording his remarks.

(e) Does not arise.

(f) First part, Yes. Second part, No.

(g) The honourable member is referred to paragraph 52 of the Punjab Jail Manual. Some non-official-visitors do not pay the required number of visits and they are not re-appointed unless special considerations exist. It would involve considerable labour to obtain the figures asked for by the honourable member.

(h) It is nowhere laid down that a non-official visitor should see every prisoner during his visit, nor is this practicable in the majority of jails. Government are not prepared to amend the rules in this respect.

(i) There have been occasions when Superintendents of Jails have contradicted the remarks of non-official visitors. The Inspector-General of Prisons considers both sets of remarks and his conclusions are communicated to the non-official visitor through the Jail Superintendent. The honourable member is referred to paragraph 55 (3) of the Punjab Jail Manual.

LADY NON-OFFICIAL VISITORS OF JAILS.

3945. Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the first Provincial Conference of the Punjab Jails' Non-Official Visitors' Association held in January, 1933, passed a unanimous resolution recommending to the Government that ladies should be appointed non-official visitors for all Jails in the Punjab at which women are confined as under-trials or prisoners for however short period such a confinement may be ; if so, what action it has taken or proposes to take on the resolution passed by the Punjab Jails' Non-Official Visitors' Association ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that for a number of District or Sub-Jails where women are confined as under-trials or convicted offenders, lady non-official visitors are not appointed ;
- (c) whether Government is aware that at Lucknow the Government of the United Provinces have appointed two ladies as honorary magistrates to try women and juvenile accused ; if so, whether Government intends to appoint some women magistrates in the Punjab ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the first Provincial Conference of the Punjab Jails' Non-Official Visitors' Association held in January, 1933, passed a unanimous resolution recommending to the Government that necessary measures be adopted for establishing Children's Courts in the Punjab and that the necessary machinery of Certified Schools, Probation Officers and Remand Homes and the appointment of lady magistrates on the Bench of Children's Courts be set up ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that a similar resolution was later on passed by the second Provincial Conference of the District Secretaries of the Punjab Prisoners' Aid Society ;

[K. B. Sardar Habib Ullah.]

- (f) if the replies to (d) and (e) are in the affirmative, what action Government proposes to take on such a resolution passed by two independent organisations interested in the prisoners' reform work, and in case the Government proposes no action the reasons for such decision, when Juvenile Courts are successfully functioning in the Bombay, Madras and Bengal Presidencies?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) and (b) Acting on the recommendation of the Conference of Non-official Visitors referred to by the honourable member, Government have appointed lady non-official visitors for all jails for which they are required and where suitable ladies were forthcoming.

(c) First part, Government have no information : Second part, does not arise.

(d) Yes.

(e) Government have no information.

(f) The proposals in question involve fresh expenditure and are not urgent. They cannot be undertaken immediately.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : I want to know the jails where lady non-official visitors have not been appointed. Can the honourable member give that information?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : No, not off-hand. I shall be glad to supply the information if notice is given.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram : Will Government see that a lady non-official visitor is appointed for every jail because there is no prohibition of ladies being sent to particular jails?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I understand that lady visitors have been appointed in about three-quarters of our jails. Where you hardly have any female prisoners it is doubtful whether the appointment is necessary and it is not always possible to find suitable lady visitors. But if the honourable member will give notice of that question I shall consider the matter.

PRINTING WORK OF LAHORE HIGH COURT.

3946. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state the number of firms who do printing of paper-books and other work for the Lahore High Court, and the number of such firms owned by Hindus, Sikhs and Muslims, respectively, stating also the total payments made by the High Court to the—

(a) Hindu firms,

(b) Sikh firms,

(c) Muslim firms,

during each of the years 1927 to 1934, inclusive?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: A statement is laid on the table—

Statement.

		PAYMENTS MADE DURING
		1927.	1928.	1929.	1930.
		Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.
Hindu firms	.. 12	8,209 3 0	7,100 2 0	4,590 12 0	9,868 4 0
Sikh firms	.. 3	3,312 8 6	3,863 0 0	2,061 0 0	1,959 4 0
Muslim firms	.. 11	12,336 7 0	11,967 0 0	9,008 4 0	10,639 12 0
Total number of firms.	26

		PAYMENTS MADE DURING
		1931.	1932.	1933.	1934.
		Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.
Hindu firms	.. 12	13,041 4 6	38,916 9 6	28,835 14 9	14,933 9 0
Sikh firms	.. 3	3,937 8 3	7,607 9 9	7,059 13 6	3,724 6 6
Muslim firms	.. 11	24,488 10 9	48,401 6 3	32,963 4 6	14,473 9 0
Total number of firms.	26

BANKING COMPANIES.

3947. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan: Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of banking companies registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, in the Punjab?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: The information asked for by the honourable member is not readily available and to collect it would take time and entail the appointment of additional staff. It is considered that the value of the information demanded will not be commensurate with the labour involved.

BANKING COMPANIES.

3948. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total of the—

- (a) nominal,
- (b) subscribed,
- (c) paid up,

share-capital of banking companies registered in the Punjab under the Indian Companies Act, stating also, how much of such capital belongs to—

- (a) Hindus,
- (b) Sikhs,
- (c) Muslims?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

DIRECTORS OF BANKING COMPANIES.

3949. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of Directors of Companies registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, in the Punjab and engaged in banking business in all its various branches, stating also the number of such directors, community-wise?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

INSURANCE COMPANIES.

3950. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of Insurance Companies registered in the Punjab?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

DIRECTORS OF INSURANCE COMPANIES.

3951. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of directors of insurance companies registered in the Punjab, stating also the number of such directors, community-wise?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

INSURANCE COMPANIES.

3952. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total of the—

- (a) nominal,
- (b) subscribed,
- (c) paid-up,

share-capital of the insurance companies registered in this province, stating also how much of such capital belongs to—

- (a) Hindus,
- (b) Sikhs,
- (c) Muslims ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

ELECTRIC SUPPLY COMPANIES.

3953. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of companies engaged in the supply of electric energy and registered in the Punjab under the Indian Companies Act ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer to his question No. *3947.

DIRECTORS OF ELECTRIC SUPPLY COMPANIES.

3954. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of directors of companies in the Punjab which are engaged in the supply of electric energy, stating also the total number of such directors community-wise ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

DIRECTORS OF ELECTRIC SUPPLY COMPANIES.

3955. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total of the—

- (a) nominal,
- (b) subscribed,
- (c) paid up,

share-capital of companies registered in the Punjab which are engaged in the supply of electric energy, stating also, how much of such capital belongs to—

- (a) Hindus,
- (b) Sikhs,
- (c) Muslims ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

SUGAR MANUFACTURING COMPANIES.

3956. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of companies engaged in the manufacture of sugar and its various by-products and registered in the Punjab under the Indian Companies Act ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

SUGAR MANUFACTURING COMPANIES.

3957. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total of the—

- (a) nominal,
- (b) subscribed,
- (c) paid up,

share-capital of companies registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, in the Punjab, and engaged in the manufacture of sugar and the various by-products thereof, stating also how much of such capital is —

- (a) Hindu,
- (b) Sikh,
- (c) Muslim ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

DIRECTORS OF SUGAR MANUFACTURING COMPANIES.

3958. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of directors of companies in the Punjab, registered under the Joint Stock Companies Act, 1913, and engaged in the manufacture of sugar, stating also the number of such directors community-wise ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

FILM COMPANIES.

3959. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of companies in the Punjab, engaged—

- (a) in the manufacture of cinematographic films,
 - (b) in the distribution of cinematographic films,
- and registered under the Indian Companies Act in the Punjab ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

DIRECTORS OF FILM COMPANIES.

3960. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total number of directors of Film Companies, registered in the Punjab, stating also the number of such directors community-wise ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

FILM COMPANIES.

3961. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state the total of the—

- (a) nominal,
- (b) subscribed,
- (c) paid up,

share-capital of film companies registered in the Punjab, stating also, how much of such capital is —

- (i) Hindu,
- (ii) Sikh,
- (iii) Muslim ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is referred to the answer given to his question No. *3947.

PUBLIC PROSECUTORS.

3962. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state the total number of Public Prosecutors of each grade in the province, also stating for each grade the strength of the Muslim representation and among the Muslims of each grade the number of agriculturists and the number of non-agriculturists ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : A statement is laid on the table.

Statement.

Grades of Public Prosecutors.			Total No. of Public Prosecutors.	Muslim Agri-culturists.	Muslim Non-agriculturists.
Rs. 1,200	2
Rs. 1,050	1	1	..
Rs. 900	5	2	..
Rs. 750	5	1	2
Rs. 650	4	2	..
Rs. 500	11	2	1
Rs. 400	3 (2 temporary).	1 (temporary).	..

NOTARIES PUBLIC.

3963. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state the provincial total of Notaries Public in the Punjab, stating the strength of each community and how many among each community are agriculturists and how many are non-agriculturists and the total emoluments of each community during the last year for which figures are available ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The information is being collected and will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

INSOLVENTS.

3964. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan: Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state the provincial total per year, community-wise, stating how many were agriculturists and how many were non-agriculturists, of those who were—

(a) adjudicated insolvent during each of the last ten years ;

(b) granted discharge certificates by insolvency courts, during the same period ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : As the expense involved in compiling the information asked for would be out of proportion to the value of the result the Government regret that they are unable to answer this question.

ESTABLISHMENT IN THE OFFICES OF INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF CIVIL HOSPITALS, PUNJAB, AND THE CIVIL SURGEONS IN THE PUNJAB.

3965. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan: Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state the total number of—

- (a) Superintendents,
- (b) Assistant superintendents,
- (c) Head clerks,
- (d) senior clerks, and
- (e) junior clerks,

in the offices of—

- (i) Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, Punjab ;
- (ii) the Civil Surgeons in the Punjab ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : A statement containing the required information is laid on the table—

Statement.

(i) OFFICE OF THE INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF CIVIL HOSPITALS, PUNJAB.

Superintendent	1
Assistant superintendent	Nil.
Head assistants	5
Head clerks	Nil.
Assistants	5
Stenographer	1
Senior clerks	9
Junior clerks	14

(ii) OFFICES OF THE CIVIL SURGEONS IN THE PUNJAB.

Superintendents	Nil.
Assistant superintendents	Nil.
Head clerks	29
Senior clerks	29
Junior clerks	29

COURT COMMISSIONS.

3966. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state the total number of—

- (a) commissions issued, or
- (b) receivers of various kinds appointed, by the—

- (i) High Court,
 - (ii) the civil courts in the province,
- during each of the years 1927—1934 inclusive, and how many of the total number went to Muslims in each year ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The information is not readily available and the expenditure of time and labour involved in compiling it would be out of proportion to the value of the result. In the circumstances I regret that I am unable to supply the required information.

USUFRUCTUARY MORTGAGE OF LAND IN GUJRAT DISTRICT.

3967. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) the total acreage of agricultural land in the Gujrat district ;
- (b) the total acreage of agricultural land in the Gujrat district which is at present under usufructuary mortgage to non-agriculturists ;
- (c) the total of agricultural land given by agriculturists to non-agriculturists on usufructuary mortgage during each of the last ten years ;
- (d) the total of areas which, having been under usufructuary mortgage to non-agriculturists, reverted to the agriculturist owners in the district in each of the last ten years ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) The total acreage of agricultural land in the Gujrat district in 1932-33 (the latest year for which statistics are available) was 1,419,081.

(b) 97,868 acres belonging to agriculturists and 44,858 acres belonging to non-agriculturists, that is to say, 142,726 acres in all, were under usufructuary mortgage at the end of 1932-33 ; but Government have no information how much of this area was under mortgage with agriculturists and how much with non-agriculturists.

(c) and (d) Government have no information and are of the opinion that its collection would involve an expenditure that would not be in the public interest to incur.

COURT ATTACHMENTS IN GUJRAT DISTRICT.

3968. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state the total number of houses—

- (i) brought under attachment,
- (ii) put to auction-sale,

[Ch. Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan.]

in the execution of decrees by civil courts in the Gujrat district in each of the last seven years, and the number of houses among these which belonged to agriculturists ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The honourable member's attention is invited to the reply given to question No. *3171¹. The Government regret that they are unable to supply further information.

REPRESENTATION OF FACULTY OF LAW IN THE PUNJAB UNIVERSITY.

3969. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : With reference to the Honourable Minister for Education's reply to starred question No. 8696², dated the 25th October, 1934, will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the practice up to comparatively a recent date had always been for the Dean of the Faculty of Law ex-officio, to represent that Faculty in the Syndicate ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that all the Chief Justices of the Province, have hitherto been Deans of the Faculty of Law and that they have been so ex-officio ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that till a recent date during Sir Shadi Lal's Deanship of the Faculty of Law, the practice that the Dean should represent this Faculty on the Syndicate continued uninterrupted ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that shortly before Sir Shadi Lal's retirement, the Faculty by its resolution decided that in future it should elect its representative on the Syndicate ; if so, the date on which this decision was made ;
- (e) whether there is any intention of reverting to the old wholesome tradition that the Dean of the Faculty of Law should represent it on the Syndicate ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) No, the Deans of the Faculty of Law have not been representing the Faculty on the Syndicate ex-officio.

(b) The Chief Justices of the province have not been ex-officio Deans of the Faculty of Law.

(c) Yes, the Right Honourable Sir Shadi Lal had been representing the Law Faculty on the Syndicate but not ex-officio. He was also on the Syndicate before he became Chief Justice. His predecessor, the late Sir Henry Rattigan, was not a member of the Syndicate.

(d) No change in the procedure has been made—the Faculty has always been electing its representatives on the Syndicate.

(e) Does not arise.

¹ Volume XXIV, page 1032.

² Page 554 ante.

MUMTAZ BANK, LIMITED.

3970. Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) the names of those who were promoters of the Mumtaz Bank, Limited, now in liquidation, what was the nominal share-capital of the Bank and how much of it had been paid up by the date on which the Bank was wound up by orders of the court ;
- (b) the amount of cash paid by the Bank in various forms to each of its directors before the liquidation commenced, specifying the name of each director and the amount so paid to him, the way in which liability arose and the extent to which each of such directors claims to be a creditor of the Bank in liquidation also, stating also the nature of his claim ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that some persons were Directors of the Bank, although they had paid no application money or allotment money and the total number and names of such directors and whether it is a fact that some of the directors so elected did not attend a single meeting of the board of directors and, if so, the names of the latter class of directors ;
- (d) if persons were in fact elected directors of the Bank without having paid any application or allotment money, the names of those promoters who so elected them ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that the Bank commenced business, while yet there were directors who had not paid application money or allotment money on their shares ; the reasons why in such circumstances, a certificate of commencement of business was granted and the names of those promoters who were so responsible for the commencement of the business ;
- (f) the length of time for which the Bank continued to do business and the number of balance sheets filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies during that period ;
- (g) the number and names of persons to whom shares were allotted without their having paid application or allotment money and the number among such persons of those who have been settled on the list of contributories of the Bank ;
- (h) whether Government is aware that allegations of gross fraud have been made against some of the promoters ;
- (i) whether any of the promoters has been subjected to any public examination ;
- (j) whether Government in view of the way in which the affairs of this Bank were managed intends to hold a public enquiry ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It is regretted that the information asked for cannot be supplied as the case is sub judice.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

CONFINEMENT OF BABU SATINDRANATH SEN, A BENGAL DETENU, IN CAMPBELLPUR JAIL.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether Babu Satindranath Sen, a Bengal detenu, is now confined in the Campbellpur Jail ;
- (b) if so, whether the said Babu Satindranath Sen is at present in a precarious state of health ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that on or about the 20th October 1934, the said Babu Satindranath Sen wired to his relations in Barisal (Bengal) that his condition was very precarious and that an interview with him should be forthwith arranged ;
- (d) if so, what medical arrangements have so far been made for the said detenu ;
- (e) whether the Government have informed the relations of the said detenu about the true state of his present health ; if not, whether they propose to do so now ;
- (f) whether Government contemplate transferring Babu Satindranath to a better place for more suitable treatment ; if not, why not ;
- (g) whether it is a fact that the younger brother of detenu Satindranath Sen sent a reply-paid telegram to the Superintendent of the Campbellpur Jail from Calcutta on 29th October 1934, but that no reply has yet been vouchsafed to that telegram ;
- (h) if so, the reasons for the silence ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) Yes.

(d) He was admitted to the Campbellpur Jail on the 10th January 1933. Since then his health has been indifferent. At the request of the Medical Officer of the Jail that a second opinion should be obtained the Civil Surgeon, Rawalpindi, examined him, and later on he was sent to Lahore for examination by the specialists at the Mayo Hospital. Their reports indicated that the detenu was not suffering from any disease or organic trouble. His trouble appears to be that he will not take enough exercise.

(e) The relatives of the detenu were informed by the Superintendent of the Jail about the state of his health on the 30th October 1934.

(f) No. The present place is quite suitable and has an exceptionally good climate.

(g) A reply to the telegram was sent by the Superintendent of the Jail on the 30th October 1934.

(h) Does not arise.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

New clause —(concluded).

Mr. President : The Council will now resume discussion on the proposed new clause 29.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I have a suggestion to make. If that suggestion is acceptable to Government, then the discussion on the definition of 'debtor' may very considerably be cut short. My amendment is—

That at the end of the proposed new clause 29, the following proviso be added—

Provided that a member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from the sources specified above is less than his income from other sources.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : If the wording of this proviso is suitable, the Government is prepared to accept it. The only question is the question of wording. If we may have just one minute to consider, I shall be very much obliged. (After consideration).

With your permission, Sir, I would like to make an addition to the amendment which I have already moved in the hope that we may come nearer to an agreement than we are at present. Unfortunately the Leader of the Unionist Party and the Government have not been able to come to a complete agreement. But the difference will be greatly narrowed if you will permit me to add a proviso to the amendment I have moved. The Leader of the Unionist Party may then be allowed to move his amendment to the proviso. Thereafter the sense of the House may be gathered on my amendment. I move—

Before the explanations in clause 29 the following proviso be added :—

Provided that a member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from other sources is greater than his income from agriculture.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : We have not got the amendment before us to be able to appreciate its merits. I should, therefore, suggest that we adjourn for a short while so that you may in the meanwhile get copies of the amendment printed and distributed to us.

Mr. President : I think we may proceed to discuss the whole new clause till the amendment is printed and distributed. The new clause proposed is—

For the purpose of this part of the Act—

(1) "debtor" means a person who owes a debt and—

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, and is either a landowner or tenant of agricultural land or a servant engaged in agricultural pursuits of a landowner or of a tenant of agricultural land ; or
- (ii) who earns his livelihood as a village menial paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture.

Then follow the explanations.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural) : I beg to move—

That in the proposed new clause 29, sub-clause (1), part (i), after the word "landowner" the words "or dependent" be added.

My reasons for moving this amendment are very simple. So far as the definition of the word "debtor" is concerned, it covers a landowner, a servant or his tenant and so on. There is another class in the same household. Supposing there is his son or any member of his family dependent on him or even his wife or other family relations in certain cases. There have been cases in which these persons have been, at least in the central parts of the Punjab, raising loans and they will not be entitled to the benefit of this Bill.

[Ch. Riasat Ali.]

Mr. President : If the honourable member's amendment is carried the clause will read as follows :—

Who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, and is either a landowner or dependent.

Instead of improving the clause it will make it meaningless. So the amendment is out of order.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali : Then I will say "dependent on the landowner".

Mr. President : That is a new amendment which I do not feel advised to allow.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali : But you have to-day allowed the amendment of the Leader of our Party, notice of which was given just now.

Mr. President : I would request the honourable member to wait and see.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in the proposed new clause 29, sub-clause (1), part (ii), the word "village" be omitted.

This is a very simple amendment and it has been stated on the floor of this House that it is a village menial who alone requires this sort of relief under this Act. But if we omit this word, "village" it means that we will be giving relief to more people than are intended under this Act. Moreover a menial or a blacksmith or a carpenter who does not happen to reside in a village as put down here should not be debarred simply by reason of the fact that he is living in some municipality, small town or notified area. In fact that man might be deserving our sympathy more than the menial who is living in the village. It is only to give a larger scope to this section of the Act and to extend the benefits to those who really deserve them, irrespective of the question of their residence that I have moved this amendment. I mentioned the other day, of the case of a carpenter who repairs things intended for the purpose of agriculture. But if that carpenter happens to live in a place not covered by this section, he will be excluded from the benefits of this clause. I therefore move this amendment in order to give the clause a larger and extended scope.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved —

That in the proposed new clause 29, sub-clause (1), part (ii), the word "village" be omitted.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The expression "village menial" was used as the English equivalent of the word "kamin." I do not think we can get anything closer than that. Menial without the word "village" before it is very much the same, but I think "village menial" is frequently used for the expression "kamin."

Mr. President : The question is—

That in the proposed new clause 29, sub-clause (1), part (ii), the word "village" be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in the proposed new clause 29, sub-clause (1), the words beginning with the word "and" to the words "connected with agriculture" before "explanations" be omitted.

I am afraid I will have to repeat some of the arguments as these amendments are repeated over and over again. The first thing which I would submit in this connection is that this definition of "debtor" occurred in part IV, as we all know. Part IV related to the question of "conciliation boards." Now this definition has been introduced in this chapter relating to damdupat. So far as I can see, it would have been easier if we confined ourselves to the definition now proposed by me in that chapter. So far as the chapter on damdupat is concerned, we stand more in need of passing this amendment. I mean that the definition of "debtor" as a "a person who owes debt or debts" should be adopted so far as this chapter is concerned, because we can only then extend the benefit of these provisions to a larger number of people. There might be persons who do not depend mainly on agriculture for their livelihood but might be still deserving of our sympathy more than anybody else. Moreover there might be questions of interpretations as was pointed out by the honourable leader of my party if we accept the Government's definition. So, if we pass this amendment it will simplify matters more than anything else and we will be free from intricate questions of interpretation, and we will also make the definition as simple as possible. This part of the Bill is the essence of the whole Bill and deals with the amount which a debtor has to pay. The important question is whether he has to pay double the amount due at the commencement of the Act or double the amount originally advanced. My point is that we should make this law as general as possible and not confine it to a "privileged class." We should not make this part of the Bill applicable to a restricted number and turn it into a "class measure." It is only to extend the advantages of this part of the Bill to as many persons as possible and to give relief to all the persons concerned, that I move this amendment.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in the proposed new clause 29, sub-clause (1) the words beginning with the word "and" to the words "connected with agriculture" before "explanations" be omitted.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, one obvious objection to the amendment is that if it is accepted, what will remain of the clause will be perfectly meaningless. The honourable mover has apparently overlooked the word "both." However this is only a drafting point. The other serious point is this that if we accept the honourable member's amendment, where then can be the village menials? The village menial may be a tarkhan, who works in wood. Can we say that he earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture? I do not know what view the courts would take of it. There may be a potter who makes pots and that employment has nothing whatever to do with the tilling of the soil.

Mr. President: If the amendment is accepted the word 'village' must go.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I have made a slight mistake. I thought it was sub-clause (i). Apparently the honourable member wishes to cut up both sub-clauses. All I can say is that his amendment would defeat entirely the purpose of the amendment which I have moved.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in the proposed new clause 29, sub-clause (1), the words beginning with the word "and" to the words "connected with agriculture" before "explanations" be omitted.

The Council divided : Ayes, 27 : Noes, 31.

AYES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.
Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Haibat Khan Daha, Khan.
Kesar Singh, Rai Sahib Chaudhri.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.

Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.
Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.
Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
Nurullah, Mian.
Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.

NOES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
Askwith, Mr. A. V.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
Chetan Anand, Lala.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.
Gokul Chand, Narang, The Honourable Dr.
Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.
Janmeja Singh, Captain Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.

Labh Singh, Mr.
Latifi, Mr. A.
Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Marsden, Mr. P.
Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Ramji Das, Lala.
Roberts, Mr. W.
Sanderson, Mr. R.
Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division, and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I beg to move—

That in the proposed new clause 29, the following explanation be added:—

No person shall be deemed to be earning his livelihood mainly by agriculture, if his monthly income from other sources is in excess of Rs. 30.

This amendment is perfectly self-explanatory and I designed it only as a test of the good faith of those who are supporting this measure and who want it as a measure of relief for the petty agriculturists. I put it as a test whether they want to relieve the poor agriculturists or whether they want to help themselves. If they accept this amendment that would be a clear proof to my mind that they are out to help the poor agriculturists, but if they vote it down I shall take it that they want to help themselves.

Mr. President: Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in the proposed new clause 29, the following explanation be added:—

No person shall be deemed to be earning his livelihood mainly by agriculture, if his monthly income from other sources is in excess of Rs. 30.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): I cannot see what the use of this explanation is at all. The clause which I have already proposed says nothing at all about a person who earns his livelihood merely by agriculture. It talks of a person who mainly derives his income from agriculture which is entirely a different issue. If this explanation is carried I do not know how it affects my clause any way.

Mr. Labh Singh: I beg to submit that the word “merely” appearing in the order paper is a misprint for the word “mainly.” I want the opinion of the member in charge if the word “merely” is read as “mainly.”

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: That is an entirely different thing.

(Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram rose to speak.)

Mr. Labh Singh: If this means a lengthy speech from the Leader of the Opposition, I would beg leave to withdraw my amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. President: Gentlemen, as the result of discussion between the Leader of the Opposition and the Member in charge of the Bill two alternative amendments have been handed over to me. But I am not prepared to allow the amendments to be moved unless the majority of the honourable members present wish them to be moved. May I have the sense of the House?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit: They should not be permitted to move them.

Mr. Labh Singh: They should not be allowed to move.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram: They should be.

(An overwhelming majority of members were for the amendments being allowed.)

Mr. President: The amendments will be moved.

Mr. Labh Singh: Can the majority suspend the rules of business of the House? It is for the Chair to decide whether the amendments should be allowed without the required notice.

Mr. President : According to the rules the Chair can interfere only when the moving of an amendment is objected to on the ground of insufficient notice.

Mr. Labh Singh : We have been objecting from the very start.

Mr. President : There is no harm, in a province where communal feelings are so high, to consult honourable members on certain formal matters.

Mr. Labh Singh : That is a reason why the honourable members should not be consulted. You have seen one community has been voting one way and the minority voting the other way. It is, therefore, for you to give your ruling in accordance with the dictates of conscience, justice and the rules of the game.

Mr. President : The rule on the point is article 91 which reads—

If notice of the proposed amendment has not been given two clear days before the day on which the consideration of the clause to which the amendment is proposed is commenced, any member may object to the amendment and such objection shall prevail unless the president in the exercise of his powers to suspend this article allows the amendment to be moved.

Now the whole House with the exception of seven gentlemen wish the amendments to be moved. So, I have no alternative, but to exercise my powers under this article and to suspend it and allow the amendments to be moved.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : You gave the ruling that you were not prepared to give any ruling but would leave it to the House to decide. I submit there is no power left to the House in this matter.

Mr. Labh Singh : Nor is it in the power of the Chair if it has already ruled one way, unless the Chair wants to review its own decision. You were pleased definitely to say that if left to yourself you would rule out the amendments.

Mr. President : That is the reason why I have consulted the House.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Is it laid down in the rules that the President shall take the sense of the House in this matter?

Mr. President : That was in my discretion and I have exercised it. I have sounded the House and now when I am convinced that an overwhelming majority of the honourable members present here wish these amendments to be moved and discussed I feel justified, nay bound, to exercise my power of suspension under this article and allow the amendments to be moved.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I move—

That before the explanations in the proposed new clause 29 the following proviso be added :—

Provided that a member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from other sources is greater than his income from agriculture.

I need hardly explain further for this is an attempt to arrive at a compromise with the National Unionist Party so that the passage of the Bill may be expedited.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That before the explanations in the proposed new clause 29 the following proviso be added :—

Provided that a member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from other sources is greater than his income from agriculture.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I move—

That at the end of the proposed new clause 29, the following proviso be added :—

Provided that a member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from the sources specified above is less than his income from other sources.

I do not know whether the honourable member in charge of the Bill and I differ only in the language that has been used by me and by him or whether we differ in substance. What I intend to ensure by my proviso is that incomes which have been specified in parts (i), (ii) and (iii) of the explanation should not be taken into account as non-agricultural and be used as a means to exclude a man from the category of debtor. If the honourable member in charge of the Bill has the same object in view, that is, if he agrees with me that parts (i), (ii) and (iii) of the explanation were designed by Government to ensure that people who make their incomes from these sources will not be deprived of the benefit of this section, then I think there is no reason why he should not agree to my proviso being included here. So far as the wording of his proviso is concerned, I fear that the word "agriculture" will naturally be interpreted by courts in its ordinary sense and the ordinary sense of the word cannot be taken as covering income from military pay or pension, etc. I am extremely doubtful whether income made by an agriculturist by the use of his plough cattle for purposes of transport will be regarded as agricultural. The word "agriculture" has been mentioned specifically in part (2) and there it has been defined to include certain things. But the very fact that the word "agriculture" has been used in this clause and has been specifically made to include certain things will naturally be interpreted by courts as excluding incomes which are mentioned in parts (i), (ii) and (iii) of the explanation. Therefore I can urge with reason that it would be on the whole safer to adopt the proviso suggested by me than to adopt the proviso that has been suggested by the honourable member in charge of the Bill. Of course, it would be a different thing if he says that he does not want the three kinds of income stated in parts (i), (ii) and (iii) of the explanation to be regarded as agricultural. That is how I view the provisos. If we are at one so far as the substance is concerned, there should be no difficulty about words. But if the honourable member wishes that incomes from military pension or pay shall not be regarded as agricultural or that they should be counted in such a manner as to exclude an ordinary person who makes income from this source from the category of debtor, then we are at cross purposes. Therefore, I move my proviso in the hope that presumably there being no difference between us with regard to substance, the honourable member in charge will kindly agree to my proviso being adopted.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That at the end of the proposed new clause 29 the following proviso be added :—

Provided that a member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from the sources specified above is less than his income from other sources.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) :

Would it be permissible to suggest certain alterations in the Government amendment by way of further improving it? It is just possible that the two sections of the House might come nearer thereby. My object is simply to come to an understanding and to save the time of the House and I shall make my suggestion if it is acceptable to the other side. I think there is not much difference and there appears to be some misunderstanding. If the Government proviso were to be added in the end after the explanation much of the confusion, I think, would be over. Moreover, if we add these words in the proviso so as to make it read : “ provided that a member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from sources not contemplated by this section is greater than his income from agriculture.” All that the Leader of my party wants to be sure of is that according to the amendment which is proposed and the sub-clauses (i) and (ii) of clause 29 (1) and sub-clause (2) where agricultural income is defined in a way, the exemptions made in favour of agriculturists with respect to certain incomes that they might be earning are excluded. If we do not say specifically here that all those sources which have not been contemplated or considered here will be excluded, all that has been referred to in this clause, defined or made mention of specifically in this clause, would be added to the income of the agriculturist and will be deemed to be agricultural income while coming to the conclusion whether his income from agriculture exceeds the income from other sources or vice versa. My submission, therefore, is that if in the Government amendment we make some changes, for instance, delete the word “ other ” before “ sources ” and add the words “ sources not contemplated by this section is greater than his income from agriculture ” we may come to an agreement. (An honourable member : Is this a third amendment?) Whatever it is, I do not think there is much difference between the two points of view. If the object is to exclude certain incomes—and the object is quite clear because the Government has itself sent the amendment—while totalling the income of an agriculturist apart from the income which he is deriving from land, for instance, income earned by resort to cottage industries, using plough cattle for purposes of transport and the like, where is the harm if we specifically say that all the incomes that have been enumerated, that have been specifically excluded, will be excluded when the court has to make a presumption in favour of a member of the notified agricultural tribes? That will only clear the confusion and would bring together both the points of view. I might be permitted to make the amendment I have suggested as that would solve the difficulty that is at present confronting us.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : It is very difficult for us if an amendment, a further amendment and a further amendment to that further amendment are allowed to be brought without the least notice to us, to form our opinion on them.

Mr. President : The question is—

That before the explanations in the proposed new clause 29 the following proviso be added :—

Provided that a member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from other sources is greater than his income from agriculture.

The Council divided : Ayes, 32 : Noes, 31.

AYES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
Askwith, Mr. A. V.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
Chetan Anand, Lala.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.
Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.
Janmeja Singh, Captain Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.

Labh Singh, Mr.
Latifi, Mr. A.
Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Marsden, Mr. P.
Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Narendra Nath. Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Rahim Bakhsh. Maulvi Sir.
Ramji Das, Lala.
Sanderson, Mr. R.
Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

NOES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.
Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Haibat Khan Daba, Khan.
Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
Kesar Singh, Rai Sahib Chaudhri.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.

Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.
Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
Nurullah, Mian.
Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Roberts, Mr. W.
Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
Ujjal Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.

Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the new clause 29 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

New Clause 30.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : I move—

That the following new clause 30 be added to the Bill—

30. (1) In any suit brought after the commencement of this Act against a debtor as defined in section 29 for the recovery of a loan borrowed before the commencement of this Act, no court shall grant a decree in satisfaction both of principal and interest for a larger sum than twice the amount which the court finds to have been due at the commencement of this Act.
- (2) In any suit brought against a debtor as defined in section 29 for the recovery of a loan borrowed after the commencement of this Act, no court shall pass a decree for a larger sum than twice the amount of the sum taken as principal.

Mr. President : New clause proposed—

30. (1) In any suit brought after the commencement of this Act against a debtor as defined in section 29 for the recovery of a loan borrowed before the commencement of this Act, no court shall grant a decree in satisfaction both of principal and interest for a larger sum than twice the amount which the court finds to have been due at the commencement of this Act.
- (2) In any suit brought against a debtor as defined in section 29 for the recovery of a loan borrowed after the commencement of this Act, no court shall pass a decree for a larger sum than twice the amount of the sum taken as principal.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in the new clause 30 (1) for the words "which the court finds to have been due at the commencement of this Act" the words "originally advanced" be substituted.

The object of this amendment is quite clear. If the clause is allowed to stand as it is the result will be that relief will be given only in respect of transactions which take place after this Bill has become law. The object of this legislation is to give relief more in respect of past indebtedness than to prevent future indebtedness or to give relief in respect of future indebtedness. After all, the chief reason which has led to this legislation is the existing heavy burden of debt, and relief is needed in respect of the indebtedness under which debtors are groaning at present. Therefore, if the clause is allowed to stand in its present form the main object of the Bill will not be fulfilled.

Again, Sir, in respect of future transactions evasion will be very easy. The sahukar will naturally say to the man who comes to borrow that the law has been tightened and that in order to evade that law he will make it a condition to write twice the sum that is actually advanced and the whole object of this legislation will be frustrated. I do not think there is anybody in this House who will not readily agree that evasion is easy and evasion will naturally be resorted to by sahukars in order to circumvent the wholesome provisions of this clause. With this object in view, that is, with the object of affording relief to those who are in debt already I have moved that the words "originally advanced" should be added in this clause, so that the relief which is needed will be given for certain. With these words I commend this amendment to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. President : New clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in the new clause 30 (1) for the words " which the court finds to have been due at the commencement of this Act " the words " originally advanced " be substituted.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural) : The provisions relating to damdupat are the only provisions which have been held as the most salutary provisions in this piece of legislation. As a matter of fact, this legislation has been undertaken with a view to relieve the present indebtedness. As to the future it will take care of itself. The only anxiety on the part of Government and the public is that something substantial should be done with a view to relieve the indebted classes of their groaning debts. The Government has been anxious to see that the scope of this rule of damdupat is restricted to certain classes of debtors. That has been already agreed to by the House. We have already disposed of an amendment which was moved by Government though it was rather very late in coming. Now, having passed that amendment, if we now restrict the operation of this law to future transactions, then it would mean that all the time and labour we have spent on this measure will be lost. Already a good deal of time has been spent in bringing this measure before the House and this delay has caused a great deal of economic trouble to the debtors. If the amendment as proposed by the Government is allowed to stand, then no tangible good will come out of it to the debtors. It would amount to this, as they say, that the mountain was in labour and brought forth a mouse. The Government cannot go on looking with equanimity the results of this measure. It has already been computed that the debts of the province amount to 200 crores. The Government cannot allow this debt to swell to 400 crores before this measure comes into force. I know that sometimes the position of Government is difficult. It is also enviable in certain respects. The constitution of the Council being what it is, the Government is always able to command a majority of votes in this House and thus carry on things as it likes. But it has also got a responsibility. There is a couplet—

مہرِ ہوا کانرِ تیر و کانرِ مسلمان ہر کجا

That is exactly what we have been doing in this House. It is, therefore, all the more the responsibility of Government to consider the amendment in a detached and dispassionate manner and see what the result of the amendment as moved by Government would be. With these words I support the amendment moved by the Leader of the Unionist Party.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) : I do not think this amendment moved by the Leader of my party requires much elucidation I may call it the soul of the whole of this measure. If this amendment is rejected and the Government's amendment is accepted, much of the time and labour of this House must be considered as wasted. If we are not going to relieve the present indebtedness but only think of the future, then this piece of legislation is absolutely useless. At present borrowing and lending are at a stand-still and, therefore, if we are taking all these pains to see that the debtors are not burdened in the future, then we are not doing a wise thing. This is considered to be an emergency measure and it is all the more necessary, therefore, that it should be made effective even now. The retention of these words at the end of this measure excludes all transactions previous to the coming into force of this measure. As has been remarked by the honourable member who has just sat down, it would be simply waste of time and money and energy if the amendment of the Leader of my party is rejected or is not fully considered on merits by the official benches. It has been truly remarked that the Government are the masters of the situation and that they are so happily placed that they can very well reject any reasonable amendment proposed by us. I submit that by throwing this amendment the House will be defeating the object of the whole Bill.

[Shaikh Abdul Ghani.]

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural): The rule of damdapat as has been known from ancient times, means double the original sum and not the sum acknowledged. (An honourable member: That is wrong). The reason why I support the amendment is that by this time the interest must have swelled to such an extent that it is practically impossible for a debtor to pay off his debts if this clause is allowed to stand as it is. I am afraid that the mischief is already done, that the disease has already sufficiently developed, and I may say, to use the same metaphor, that it has already eaten up the vital parts of the body. Therefore, unless we amend the rule in the light proposed by the honourable Leader of my party, there will be no relief to anybody. In this belief of mine I am supported by various officials who have given their opinions on this aspect of the question. The first official to whom I shall refer is the Deputy Commissioner of Montgomery. He says—

Section 29 (1) means that the rule of damdapat would apply to loans contracted after the commencement of the Bill. So far as the loans contracted before this Act are concerned, the damdapat will not apply to the principal, but would apply to the amount due at the commencement of the Act. For instance, if a person has borrowed Rs. 1,000 before the commencement of this Act and owes another sum of Rs. 500 as interest on this amount up to the date on which this Act comes into force, will he be liable to pay up Rs. 3,000 which is double of Rs. 1,500 i.e., the amount due at the commencement of the Act or will he be liable to pay Rs. 2,000 which is twice the amount originally borrowed by him? If it is the former the rule of damdapat will give no immediate relief to the zamindars. If it is the latter the point deserves some clarification.

The next opinion to which I refer is of no less a person than Mr. S. A. Rahman, Senior Sub-Judge, Sheikhpura, who is now a sessions judge. He says—

- The latter part of section 29 (1) is not very clear. "Twice the amount which the court finds to have been due at the commencement of this Act" would in most cases cover all claims of the creditors which might include an undue proportion of interest by striking new balances. I hope this will be looked into, before the Bill is finally passed.

The third opinion to which I shall refer is that of Nawabzada Fateh Ullah Khan, Sub-Divisional Officer, Rupar. He says—

The rule of damdapat should apply to all cases whether the debt was borrowed before or after the commencement of this Act.

All these opinions which I have quoted go a long way to prove that unless the amendment moved by my honourable friend, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram is adopted, there will be absolutely no relief to the debtor, because as figures show the debts have swelled to such an extent that unless we cut down this amount, unless we apply the provisions of this part of the Bill to old debts, I am afraid nothing will be gained by the passing of this measure. So far as the question of future loans is concerned, I think we have been given sufficient warning, sufficient notice, sufficient threats by the gentlemen sitting opposite. They have said that the credit of the zamindar has extinguished totally and that it will be impossible for any sahukar now to advance loans to him. We are, therefore, now in a position to know that no loans will be advanced by the money-lending classes so far as the future is concerned. If this clause stands as part of the Bill as amended by the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, I think we may as well not have this relief.

I would also like to remark in this connection that the zamindar if he wants to raise any loans in future will have to try 'fresh fields and pastures new,' if I may use that expression here. The doors of sahukars are already closed and we will, therefore, have to knock at the doors of others if we wish to raise fresh loans. Those doors may be in the shape of commercial banks or co-operative banks or any other banks registered under the Companies Act. So far as these banks are concerned, we know that the provisions of this Bill are not extended to them. So, where is the necessity of this clause as proposed by the Government? If we want to gain anything by this rule of damdapat it is essential that we should accept the amendment moved by the Leader of the Unionist Party. With these words I support his amendment.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala Division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): I rise to support the amendment moved by my friend from Rohtak. The effect of this amendment will be clear if you consider that case which was recently decided by the High Court, in which the principal of Rs. 500 was decreed to the extent of Rs. 1,96,000 by the High Court. This may not be so in many cases but that is an indication of the amount that will be due at the commencement of this Act. For that reason it is very reasonable that we should limit the amount to a reasonable sum and I think twice the amount is a reasonable sum as suggested in this amendment. If you look at the facts of the case you will find that in many cases the rates are so exorbitant that no one will hope that all the principal and interest accumulated could ever be paid unless it is limited to half the principal. From my own experience I can say that the rate is sometimes as high as 75 per cent., and that in face of the security offered. Will you allow such accumulations made before this Act comes into force to stand as just and equitable? I do not think any one will. Again, when you make this provision that in future any sum will not be allowed to double itself, why should you not apply it to past debts? We want to give relief to the zamindars in relation to debts hanging heavily on them. Why should we not adopt this provision to lighten their burden? I have an example from our part of the country. In the Bhavanagar State they have paid it at four annas in the rupee and we are giving much more than that. We are giving double the amount that was originally advanced. When the sahukar is satisfied in that State to receive four annas in the rupee on the amount that he advanced why should not this House be willing to say that our sahukars might receive double the amount that they advanced? If you do this, many people will make up their minds and will strain every nerve to pay off the old debts and this will be very useful to my friends on the opposite side. They have always been saying that there should be some provision for paying the amount. Now this provision will facilitate the payment. Besides, if you do not accept this amendment no effort will be made by the zamindar to pay off his debts and the burden of debt will remain as it is, and I think the intention of this Act will not be fulfilled. My honourable friend from Hoshiarpur has already appealed to the Government and I need not waste time on that score. This is a measure which will certainly go a long way to relieve the distress of the zamindars and I think all the members should show their willingness to relieve the heavy burden of debt on the shoulders of the zamindar.

4 P. M.

[Ch. Allah Dad Khan.]

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): Sir, I must make it quite clear that Government attach great importance to sub-clause (1) of clause 30 as I have moved it. The matter has been carefully considered by Government on more than one occasion and they have decided on full consideration to adhere to the clause as it stands. The matter is very important. As for our reasons, I think if members will cast their eyes over the earlier parts of this Bill, they will find that ample provision has been made for the relief of past debts. If a zamindar, if an agriculturist debtor, cannot pay his past debts, provided they are not too big and he himself is not too big a man, he can now or will when this Bill becomes law, be able to resort to the insolvency courts and get some real relief. We are also providing that certain rates of interest shall be deemed excessive and compelling courts to re-open the transactions in cases in which excessive interest has been charged. It is quite clear, therefore, that we have provided two very effective means for the relief of past indebtedness. In conciliation boards there is a third means of relieving past debt and I think that members have forgotten in their anxiety to relieve existing debts, that during the boom years, the debtor could in most cases pay his interest and probably a bit towards his principal also. He had the chance; he had the real opportunity of keeping his debt within bounds. If he was improvident and preferred to spend the money on luxuries at the time when he had money, does he really deserve this further relief involved in damdupat? If we accept the amendment moved by the Leader of the Unionist Party, the result will be definite confiscation of existing claims, all claims that have already accrued. Confiscation should most certainly be avoided except as an absolutely last resort and when we have already provided three effective remedies for existing debt, surely we should confine the rest of the Bill to the future and not resort to confiscation. As I have said, the Government have carefully considered amendments of this description and have decided very definitely that they cannot accept an amendment of this kind.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): One should be thankful even for small mercies and I am extremely grateful to the speech that has been made by the Honourable the Finance Member who is in charge of the Bill. Even Government must stop somewhere although we were losing heart and really coming to the belief that the Government was not likely to do so. On the other side we notice that concessions as they are being made from hour to hour and from day to day, were only aggravating the appetite as the old proverb goes. I have listened with the utmost attention to the speeches that have been made by the representatives of the zamindars on the Unionist benches in support of the amendment which has been moved by their Leader. The only thing that comes to my mind is in terms of that old philosophy of India which is known as the doctrines of the Vedanta. There is such a thing which is known as a half-way house to Vedanta. A person who is a perfect Vedantist loses all distinction between self and non-self. That is supposed to be the highest pitch of achievement which a person can reach, namely, losing all distinction of self and non-self. But people who travel on this road have sometimes to put up in what one might call a half-way house. The position of our friends on the Unionist benches is one of a traveller along the road to Vedanta who is occupying that half-way house. A person who is at that stage of the journey achieves half the battle. He has attained half the accomplishment. He feels that all that is somebody else's is his and what he himself possessed is already his. I hope I have made my meaning sufficiently clear. He has attained to Vedanta only in this respect that he sees all things as one, my possessions and his possession are all one to him. His being already his, mine also he looks upon as his and therefore he is only what we might call a semi-Vedantist or half Vedantist. This is exactly the mentality with which these gentlemen are moving these amendments. They do not look upon any relief as relief unless it gives them the fullest measure and the fullest power to wipe off existing debts. They would call that relief only a relief if it goes so far. They say that this amendment moved by them constitutes the soul of the Bill and if this amendment is rejected, the soul will be lost. This is what we have been told. To them it is self-evident and they possibly cannot see how we on these benches can get up and oppose this amendment. They want this measure to be a measure of spoliation through and through. We have by our effort tried to explain to them that this is not a proper way of dealing with the matter and we do not propose any more either to take up our time or the time of the House in making useless protest and I am really gratified that the Honourable Finance Member who is in charge of the Bill has told us that the Government have given their anxious consideration to the form of this clause and this is their final word on the subject. We were told by one of the speakers that so far as the sahukar was concerned, he is going to make no more advances to the agriculturist and that the agriculturists will have to look up to either the banks or other agencies for getting his loans. That is a reason why you should leave the money-lenders with a good feeling. Why should you part with them with a kick if you are going to deal only with banks in future? As you think so, it is doubly important that you should leave your former friends as if they were your friends and you should pay them whatever you owe them in an honest manner. I need not repeat the arguments which have been so often repeated in this House that the effect of this measure when passed would be to restrict rural credit and would certainly in the opinion of competent persons produce results which perhaps neither the members of the Unionist party nor the Government are fully contemplating. It will restrict credit to an extent that would hamper all agricultural operations and the Government would be finding it extremely difficult, if this measure is enforced in the way in which we are about to pass it, to make realisations of their land revenue.

Mr. President : The honourable member is not speaking to the motion before the House.

Mr. Labh Singh: I will restrict myself exclusively and literally to the amendment before us. My first objection to it is that this section as well as the amendment traduces the word damdupat and the principles underlying it. This principle of damdupat is a well known and ancient doctrine which is fully known to all lawyers and to call the principle embodied in this section 29 now renamed section 30 as damdupat would be a misnomer. It is really not the doctrine of damdupat.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Not Manu's doctrine of damdupat.

Mr. Labh Singh: No, not even as it prevails in Bombay and elsewhere. Even there it is hedged round by certain limitations and qualifications and I believe this principle as it is embodied in this section 30 as damdupat is essentially erroneous. My other objection is that even if it is carried it would go a long way in demoralizing both the creditors and the borrowers. People are bound to borrow and people are bound to lend and it is only within very narrow limits that we can interfere with the economic laws. It is the conditions, social conditions and economic conditions of the people which would govern the rates of interest and which would govern the other conditions of transactions between them. We will be only asking them to have recourse to certain subterfuges and evasions in order to comply with the letter of the law. How far this is fair and how far this is a correct position to take up I am unable to say, but I am certain that it would lead to an all round demoralization which every Government and every serious-minded person should do all that he can to prevent. With these words I beg to oppose the amendment that has been moved.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): I beg to move that the question be now put.

Mr. President : Question is—

That in the new clause 30 (1) for the words " which the court finds to have been due at the commencement of this Act" the words " originally advanced " be substituted.

The Council divided : Ayes, 33 : Noes, 33.

AYES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur, Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur, Nawab Chaudhri.
Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.

Haibat Khan Daba, Khan.
Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
Mohindar Singh, Sardar.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja.
Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan Raja.

Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.	Nurullah, Mian.
Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.	Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.	Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.	Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
	Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
	Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.

NOES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.	Labh Singh, Mr.
Askwith, Mr. A. V.	Latifi, Mr. A.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.	Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.	Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.	Manohar Lal, Mr.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.	Marsden, Mr. P.
Chetan Anand, Lala.	Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.	Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.	Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.	Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.	Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.	Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.	Ramji Das, Lala.
Janmeja Singh, Captain Sardar Bahadur Sardar.	Roberts, Mr. W.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.	Sanderson, Mr. R.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.	Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
	Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

Mr. President : Gentlemen, the number of Ayes and Noes is equal. I have to give my casting vote. I find that this clause, at least this part of the clause, was left untouched and unaltered by the select committee. So, in view of the fact that the select committee has recommended the clause, also in view of the fact that the Council had accepted the principle of the clause when the Bill was referred to the select committee and also in view of the fact that it is my duty to continue the status quo, so far as I can, I give my vote against the amendment.

The motion was lost.

Mian Nurullah (Lyallpur South, Muhammudan, Rural) : I beg to move—

That in the new clause 30 the following be added as a proviso at the end:—

Provided that where the court is satisfied that any fictitious sum was added to the sum actually advanced in order to circumvent the provisions of this Act the entire sum shall be disallowed.

This is a very important clause and would give some relief to the debtors when accepted. The law of damdupat, as it stands, is very important and as the principle has been accepted it will be incorporated in the Act soon. Without this proviso the present clause is very defective. We find that for years past this artifice of adding fictitious sums has been resorted to by the creditors. The debtor is an ignorant person; he is illiterate and does not know sometimes what he is doing. Very often he is in such need that he is prepared to do anything which the creditor wants. He is prepared to bow down before the creditor in any way; he says to the creditor, "give me a hundred rupees, you may put the amount at any figure you like; or here is my signature and I shall put it on any blank paper leaving it to you to fill up the amount later." If in this Bill we had provided for registration of all debts or licensed the money-lenders, probably this proviso would not have been necessary. But now, as it is, the creditor has the upper hand and being a shrewd businessman and sometimes dishonest he takes advantage of the position of the ignorant zamindar or the illiterate debtor and makes him sign a document which is not a real thing. The creditor does not actually advance Rs. 50 but he puts down Rs. 50 in the document; he does not give Rs. 1,000 but he makes the debtor sign a deed for that amount and because the debtor is in need he takes only Rs. 800 and signs for a thousand. Since we have reduced the rates of interest this is going to be resorted to more often than before. The critics of this Bill say, "what does it matter if it becomes an Act? We will do this, we will do that." And the very commonplace thing that is suggested is this: How can anybody stop us putting down a much higher figure than is really advanced? Therefore the need for a proviso like this is real. We have made so many laws before but they all remain as dead letters. If a proviso like this is incorporated into the Bill it will have a very salutary and wholesome effect. With these words, I move my amendment.

[Mian Nurullah.]

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in the new clause 30 the following be added as a proviso at the end :—

Provided that where the court is satisfied that any fictitious sum was added to the sum actually advanced in order to circumvent the provisions of this Act the entire sum shall be disallowed.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : I must oppose this amendment on the ground that already the addition of a fictitious sum to any bond or other document is cheating and that is punishable by the criminal law. To add to the penalties already provided is distinctly undesirable and I think this proviso is unnecessary and I therefore oppose it.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural) : I rise to support the amendment. Where we had rates of interest like 70, 50, 25 and 19 per cent. we have reduced them to a low figure. If the rate were only 10½ per cent., it will be an inducement to resort to such tricks against which this proviso is intended to safeguard. When a man finds that he will be able to realise only 10 per cent. per annum, he will make a condition in the very beginning that the debtor will put down a sum equal to that which the creditor would have obtained if the interest had been 25 per cent., which percentage is the lowest rate prevalent in the villages. How will a sahuakar accustomed to this way of making money be satisfied with a rate of ten per cent. which works out according to the rate which we have accepted, if the Bill comes into an Act? Therefore, a salutary provision like the one contained in this amendment should be made in order that dishonest means should not be resorted to. If a more lenient provision is made the creditor will still have the temptation of making this demand in the beginning. The provision is thus very salutary and should be supported.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadian, Rural): I support the amendment whole-heartedly. I was very considerably surprised to see that the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill has seen fit to oppose this amendment. After all, what does this amendment come to? The object is that if the court is satisfied that a money-lender has deliberately and wilfully entered in his account book or bond a larger sum than was actually advanced then, the court will dismiss the whole of his claim. Is there any injustice about it? If a man proceeds wilfully to enter a larger amount than he has really advanced, if he is guilty of an obviously and undeniably dishonest act, why should there be any mercy for that man in the mind of anybody? Everybody knows that after the enactment of this law money-lenders will be tempted to enter larger sums than they have actually advanced in order to frustrate the object of this Bill. Therefore it is only right that they should forfeit the whole of their claim if they do so. There is nothing novel about it. There is already an analogy in practice recognised by courts. That is, when a money-lender makes a material alteration in a document he forfeits the whole of his claim. If a material alteration is proved to have been made by a money-lender in his account books, either by way of changing the amount that was advanced or of changing the date on which the amount was advanced or of changing the rate of interest that was originally entered, the rulings of the various High Courts are that that money-lender should lose the whole of his claim. Is this amendment asking for anything more than that? Is this amendment intended to get more than is already allowed by the highest courts of the country? Under the circumstances I think the opposition of the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill is not fair, and I hope that he will change his mind and give up his opposition.

Mr. J. D. Anderson (Legal Remembrancer): May I point out to the House that there is in reality no analogy of any kind between the money-lender who makes a dishonest alteration in his books and the money-lender who only with the connivance, with the encouragement of the debtor, makes a false entry to begin with. I need hardly point out in this House the ancient and well-established principle of law that when parties are in pari delicto, in the same fault, they should be treated in the same way. I oppose this amendment.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadian, Rural): I oppose this amendment. I have full sympathy with the object of this amendment but unfortunately the object cannot be achieved in the way in which it is proposed to be achieved. When agriculturists purchase land we generally find that fictitious sums are entered in sale deeds. This law would lead—it is natural that it should lead—to a similar sort of penalty being imposed on the agriculturists who are daily buying and selling land and entering fictitious sums in the sale deeds. It would be a very dangerous thing and for the sake of the agriculturists this amendment should not be pressed by Mian Nurullah. Then, again, as has been pointed out by the speaker who has preceded me, if any fictitious sum is entered it is really entered with the mutual consent of both the parties. How are you going to punish one and not the other? There is a third point. The civil courts do not have any criminal jurisdiction. Here you will be investing the civil courts with power to inflict penalties which it is the function of the criminal courts to do. The obvious remedy for a dishonest act committed in this manner is to go to a criminal court and get redress in the courts which are meant for the purpose. But it would be unfair and unjust to punish the creditor for the faults of himself and the other man, the debtor.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

There is besides another reason why this amendment should not be accepted. Chaudhri Sahib said that when there is an obvious and undeniable act of this kind, it should be punished. We know as a matter of fact that courts sometimes give wrong and hasty judgments and it would not be proper to deal with courts of that kind and therefore on these grounds I oppose this amendment.

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General): Sir, I think enough has been said by the honourable Legal Remembrancer and the honourable member for Hoshiarpur against the amendment. It only remains for me to point out that if I remember aright, section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code already exists on the statute book and it empowers the court to prosecute under proper section any person if the court believes that a prima facie case against him showing that an offence has been committed exists. If these sections of the Indian Penal Code are not sufficient to prevent a man from committing offence I do not see what will be gained by adding this proviso to the clause. As has been pointed out these fictitious sums in documents are very often entered in complicity with the other party. Why should the creditor alone be prosecuted and why should he alone be penalised and the debtor not be touched? "Fictitious sums" appears to me to be a phrase which does not admit of proper legal interpretation. "Fictitious sum" probably also means and it includes a sum in excess of the amount advanced. Such sums are often written in account books in complicity with the debtor and I do not see why the creditor alone should suffer. With these words I oppose this amendment.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban): It remains for me to point out that there is practically no change between the parties who are both in the wrong in this case, because here the court has deliberately to satisfy itself by a proof but if we have to resort to criminal courts the debtor just to save his skin would be concealing the fact and would not come out with the whole truth. The result would be that the court will be left to formulate its own opinions and to collect evidence and sift it as best as it can. After it has come to a certain conclusion, after it has decided that there has been a collusion in this case, the court would be helpless if both parties charge each other under section 476. The courts would proceed against both the parties and if they are satisfied that there was a collusion and there was a conspiracy entered into, the result will be that there will be no proof forthcoming and no court will take the trouble of sifting the evidence or unearthing the truth in a case of this nature. The result would be that there would be possibly no check, there would possibly be no restraint on the doings of the creditor and the debtor who is just an instrument in the hands of the creditor at the time he contracts a debt.

Moreover this is a measure in which a certain section of His Majesty's subject is sought to be protected. If you are rendering assistance to a debtor in this particular way, why should you hesitate to defend him further so that he may not be burdened with unnecessary and fictitious amount and his debt may not be swelled in this way? He requires special protection by the peculiar circumstances under which he is placed at the time he contract the debt. He is not a free agent of himself and in these circumstances it is the duty of the State to protect him. Unless there is some such safeguard in this Bill there will be no check upon the doings of clever money-lenders. I admit that this provision is very drastic but after all it can be improved. If the official benches could be made to prescribe some sort of penalty so that creditors in future may find it deterrent for themselves if the creditors know that by entering false figures in their accounts or bonds they stand to lose something, it would be a good thing. On the whole the suggestion is very salutary and I commend it to the Honourable Member for Finance and the Legal Remembrancer to make some sort of provision in the Bill if they are not agreeable to the very drastic change that is proposed on our side.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following proviso be added at the end of the new clause 30—

Provided that where the court is satisfied that any fictitious sum was added to the sum actually advanced in order to circumvent the provisions of this Act the entire sum shall be disallowed.

The Council divided : Ayes, 84 ; Noes, 32.

AYES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.
Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Haibat Khan Daha, Khan.
Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Muhammad Eusoo, Khwaja.

Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib
Makhdum Shaikh.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur, Nawab.
Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani, Makhdumzada Sayad.
Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.
Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
Nurullah, Mian.
Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Roberts, Mr. W.
Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.

NOES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.	Labh Singh, Mr.
Askwith, Mr. A. V.	Latifi, Mr. A.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.	Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.	Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.	Manohar Lal, Mr.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.	Marsden, Mr. P.
Chetan Anand, Lala.	Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.	Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.	Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.	Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.	Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.	Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.	Ramji Das, Lala.
Janmeja Singh, Captain Sardar Bahadur, Sardar.	Sanderson, Mr. R.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.	Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.	Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the new clause 30 as amended stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clauses 31 and 32.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clauses 31 and 32 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 33.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadian, Rural) : I move—

That in clause 33 the proviso together with the explanation be omitted.

My object in moving this amendment is that immunity from arrest provided for under clause 33 should be made unqualified.

5 P.M.

My attention was drawn to the consequences which may follow from the presence of these four qualifications to immunity from arrest. I was told that if these qualifications were allowed to stand the result would be that the benefit of immunity from arrest will be practically gone. Therefore I have moved the omission of this proviso so that immunity from arrest in execution of decrees should remain unqualified. The object in view is commendable and I commend the amendment to the favourable consideration of the House.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 33 the proviso together with the explanation be omitted.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : I am not quite sure whether this is the proper time or not for me to repeat what I said at the commencement of this session, namely, that the Government of India have intimated that they themselves intend to introduce legislation in the next session of the Legislative Assembly to deal with this same question of imprisonment for debt. In the circumstances they do not wish the provincial legislature to do anything in the matter for the present. For this reason the Government are bound to oppose the inclusion of clause 33 in the Bill. For the same reason I presume we must vote against the amendment also.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 33 the proviso together with the explanation be omitted.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Before you take the sense of the House I submit that I think I was wrong in saying that I opposed this amendment. Obviously if we oppose the amendment we would be committed to this portion of the clause standing. As a matter of fact we wish the whole clause to be deleted. Rather the correct and logical action is to vote with the amendment.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It will be more convenient if the whole clause is put first, and if the motion for omission is lost, then the amendment can be put.

Mr. President : I am afraid I cannot do that as amendments to a clause must be disposed of first.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : If we now vote for the omission of this proviso and explanation and later on the motion for omission of the clause is lost, then our position will be anomalous. Therefore the House should be given discretion to vote on the clause as a whole first.

Mr. President : I quite see the point of view of the Honourable Leader of the House and personally I shall be glad to follow the procedure suggested by him. But when a clause is taken up, if no amendments to it are tabled or moved, the clause, as it is, is before the House and it may be deleted or retained as the House may decide. But, if some members are willing to adopt the clause with certain modifications and have given notice of their amendments, they cannot be deprived of their right to move those amendments. No doubt the course suggested by the Honourable Leader of the House is the shortest cut. But members who wish to move amendments to the clause cannot be deprived of their right.

The question is—

That in clause 33 the proviso with the explanation be omitted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the first part of clause 33 stand part of the Bill.

The Council divided : Ayes, 36, Noes, 33.

AYES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
 Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
 Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
 Akbar Ali, Pir.
 Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
 Arjan Singh, Sardar.
 Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
 Bishan Singh, Sardar.
 Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
 Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
 Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
 Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.
 Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
 Haibat Khan Daha, Khan.
 Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
 Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
 Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
 Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja.
 Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Shaikh.

Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
 Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
 Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani, Makhdumzada Sayad.
 Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
 Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
 Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.
 Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.
 Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
 Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
 Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
 Nurullah, Mian.
 Pancham Chand, Thakur.
 Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
 Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
 Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
 Ujjal Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
 Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.

NOES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
 Askwith, Mr. A. V.
 Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
 Bhagat Ram, Lala.
 Bourne, Mr. F. C.
 Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
 Chetan Anand, Lala.
 Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
 Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
 Garbett, Mr. C. C.
 Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.
 Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.
 Hearn, Mr. J. W.
 Janmeja Singh, Captain Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
 Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.
 Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.

Labh Singh, Mr.
 Latifi, Mr. A.
 Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
 Macfarlane, Mr. D.
 Manohar Lal, Mr.
 Marsden, Mr. P.
 Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
 Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
 Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
 Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
 Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
 Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
 Ramji Das, Lala.
 Roberts, Mr. W.
 Sanderson, Mr. R.
 Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
 Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

Clause 34.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 34 stand part of the Bill.

The Council divided : Ayes, 35 : Noes, 34.

AYES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir,
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Arjan Singh, Sardar.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Faqir Husain Khan, Chaudhri.
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.
Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Haibat Khan Daba, Khan.
Jawahar Singh Dhillon, Sardar.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Muhammad Euseof, Khwaja.

Muhammad Hasan, Khan Sahib Makhdum Sahikh.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Jamal Khan Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Raza Shah Gilani, Makhdumzada Sayad
Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.
Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
Nathwa Singh, Chaudhri.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.
Nurullah, Mian.
Pancham Chand, Thakur.
Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
Sampuran Singh, Sardar.
Ujjal Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
Umar Hayat, Chaudhri.

NOES.

Anderson, Mr. J. D.
Askwith, Mr. A. V.
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Bourne, Mr. F. C.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
Chetan Anand, Lala.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
Garbett, Mr. C. C.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.
Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.
Janmeja Singh, Captain Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.
Labh Singh, Mr.

Latifi, Mr. A.
Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Macfarlane, Mr. D.
Manohar Lal, Mr.
Marsden, Mr. P.
Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.
Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.
Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Narendra Nath, Diwan Bahadur Raja.
Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.
Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.
Rahim Bakhsh, Maulvi Sir.
Ramji Das, Lala.
Roberts, Mr. W.
Sanderson, Mr. R.
Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Sikander Hyat-Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.

Clause 35.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadian, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 35 for the words "sub-rule (3) shall be omitted" the following be substituted:—

Sub-rule (3) shall read as follows:—

If a decree-holder fails to discharge the obligation imposed on him under sub-rule (1) the court shall refuse to grant him any costs in respect of subsequent execution proceedings and may, at its discretion, refuse to entertain any further application in connection with the portion of the decree which still remains unsatisfied.

According to Order XXI, rule 2 of the Civil Procedure Code if any money payable under a decree is paid out of court, it is the duty of the decree holder to certify that payment to the court concerned. Supposing a judgment-debtor has paid to the decree-holder Rs. 200 in part payment of the decree against him, it is the duty of the decree-holder to go to the court concerned and certify that payment within 90 days. If he does not do that within the period prescribed, he is in no way punished. On the other hand according to sub-rule (3) the judgment-debtor has to suffer inasmuch as the courts concerned refuse to recognise such payments. This is just like that uncouth Punjabi saying which is :

نانی خصم کرے تے دوترا چٹی ہرے

My object in moving this amendment is to remove that anomaly. I want that the person at fault should be punished and this is why I have suggested that no costs should be granted to the decree-holder in subsequent proceedings if he fails to discharge his duty, and the courts may even refuse to entertain any further application for execution. Need I say that it is a very reasonable amendment and the House, therefore, ought readily to accept it?

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved--

That in clause 35 for the words "sub-rule (3) shall be omitted" the following be substituted:—

Sub-rule (3) shall read as follows:—

If a decree-holder fails to discharge the obligation imposed on him under sub-rule (1) the court shall refuse to grant him any costs in respect of subsequent execution proceedings and may, at its discretion, refuse to entertain any further application in connection with the portion of the decree which still remains unsatisfied.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): Sir, the actual clause to which this amendment has been made provides for the omission of sub-rule (3) of rule (2) of Order XXI. That sub-rule (3) reads as follows:—

A payment or adjustment, which has not been certified or recorded as aforesaid, shall not be recognized by any court executing the decree.

It appears to me that this sub-rule (3) penalizes the unfortunate person who has made payment because he cannot afterwards prove this payment in execution proceedings. It does not seem fair and for that reason the Government are prepared to let the clause stand. I do not think that there is sufficient reason for going the full length of the amendment and the Government benches must oppose it.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : May I then ask for leave to withdraw the amendment ?

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. President : Question is—

That clause 35 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 36.

Mr. President : Question is—

That clause 36 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was lost.

Clause 37.

Mr. President : Question is—

That clause 37 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was lost.

Clause 38.

Mr. President : Question is—

That clause 38 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was lost.

New clauses.

Mr. President : Shrimati Lekhwati's amendments¹ have been tendered in a spirit of mockery and are, therefore, out of order.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Are they ?

Mr. President : Yes. The honourable member knows as much as anybody else does, that they have been tendered in a spirit of mockery.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I am not a party to it.

¹The following be added after clause 38:—

PART IX.

Penal provisions.

39. Any creditor who demands the payment of his debt from an agriculturist-debtor or makes any attempt to execute his decree against the person or property of an agriculturist judgment-debtor, shall be punished with imprisonment which shall extend to one year or a fine not exceeding the amount of debt.

Penalty for demanding payment of debt from agriculturist-debtors.

40. Any person who refuses to advance loan to an agriculturist, when asked to do so, shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to one year or to fine not exceeding the amount of debt.

Penalty for refusing to advance loan to an agriculturist.

41. (a) The offences described in section 39 and 40 shall be cognizable non-bailable and shall only be triable by magistrates belonging to the statutory agriculturist tribes.

(b) The fine, if realized, shall be paid to the agriculturist-debtors as compensation.

Title.

Mr. President : Question is—

That the long title stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Sub-clause 1 (1).

Mr. President : Question is—

That sub-clause (1) of clause 1 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : Gentlemen, I have to appoint a committee under sub-clause (2) of Article 94 of our Business Manual with orders to report what amendments of a formal or consequential character should be made in the Bill as a matter of drafting. This committee shall consist of three gentlemen consisting of the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, the Legal Remembrancer and the Deputy President, and shall submit its report by Friday next.

THE PUNJAB LAND REVENUE AMENDMENT BILL.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan (Revenue Member) : I introduce the Punjab Land Revenue Amendment Bill.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I move—

That the Punjab Land Revenue Amendment Bill be taken into consideration.

The motion was carried.

Clause 1 (2).

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 1, sub-clause (2) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clauses 2 to 5.

Mr. President : The question is—

That clauses 2, 3, 4 and 5 stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Preamble.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the preamble stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 1 (1).

Mr. President : The question is—

That clause 1, sub-clause (1) stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I beg to move—

That the Punjab Land Revenue Amendment Bill be passed.

The motion was carried.

GOVERNMENT'S DEMANDS FOR TOKEN GRANTS.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : I have to announce that the demands printed on the order paper are being brought on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor.

IRRIGATION CAPITAL.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I beg to move—

That a token sum not exceeding Rs. 10 be granted to the Governor in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Irrigation (Capital).

The motion was carried.

IRRIGATION—WORKING EXPENSES.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I move—

That a token sum not exceeding Rs. 10 be granted to the Governor in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Irrigation—Working Expenses.

The motion was carried.

REPORTS OF THE FRANCHISE COMMITTEE AND THE JOINT SELECT COMMITTEE.

Mr. President : I find that the honourable member, Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan, who had given notice of a motion that the report of the Franchise Committee be discussed, is absent.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : When a member is absent the motion standing in his name is usually dropped and I think there should be a new motion by some other honourable member if the House wants a discussion on the report.

Mr. President : No notice of the motion is necessary, as the discussion of the Franchise Committee's Report was put off by the House. When a certain matter is before the House and the House puts it off the House can take it up without notice of a motion that it may be taken up.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : How did the House put off the matter ?

Mr. President : The honourable member may refer to printed proceedings. Does the House wish to discuss the report to-morrow ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable the Leader of the Unionist Party wants time for discussion of the Joint Select Committee's report. I do not know whether the honourable members have been able to wade through the two bulky volumes of the report. I confess that I have not been able to study critically the two volumes yet. I take it that honourable members would like to read the report carefully before discussing it. If the House desires to discuss the report I would suggest our meeting again sometime about the middle of next month.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : I suggest that both the reports, the report of the Franchise Committee and of the Joint Select Committee, be discussed together then.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Government will consider the matter and I will announce the dates when we meet on Friday next.

The Council then adjourned till 2-30 P. M. on Friday, 30th November 1934.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Friday, 30th November 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2-30 P. M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

OATH OF OFFICE.

The following members were sworn in :—

Mr. A. Murphy (Chief Engineer).

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan (Reforms Commissioner).

Mr. R. J. S. Dodd (Officer on special duty).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

LADY AITCHISON HOSPITAL, LAHORE.

3971. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state whether it is a fact that there is no place provided in the Lady Aitchison Hospital, Lahore, where the male companions of the female out-door patients could stand or wait, and that they have to wait outside the hospital on the road where they are exposed to sun, rain and dust ? If so, what steps does Government propose to take in this connection ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : A men's waiting-room exists at the hospital for the use of men accompanying out-door women patients, but it was out of use for a few weeks while the annual repairs and certain alterations were being carried out. A room with a wooden bench has since been set apart for the purpose.

RATES FOR LORRIES.

3972. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the rate of hire per mile on kacha and pucca road is entered on the licences issued for plying motor lorries in the Punjab. If so, will he please state these rates and also and whether it is a fact that the rates of hire at present charged by drivers of motor lorries plying between Zafarwal and Narowal and Zafarwal and Sialkot (district Sialkot) are in excess of the rates entered on the licences ;

- (b) if the answer to the latter part of the above question is in the affirmative, what action is proposed to be taken against these lorry drivers for charging fares in excess of the rates laid down on their licences ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) First Part.—It is discretionary with a district magistrate to prescribe such rates ; if he does prescribe them, then it is necessary in the case of passenger fares to exhibit them in a prominent place in or on the vehicle, but this is not necessary in the case of goods rates.

Second Part.—No passenger fares have been fixed ; the rates for goods have been fixed as follows :—

Kucha roads, Re. 0-0-6 per mile per maund.

Pacca roads, Re. 0-0-3½ per mile per maund.

Third Part.—Neither Government nor the local officers have received any complaint that drivers of motor lorries on these roads charge more than the prescribed rates.

(b) Does not arise.

CARRYING OF LATHI BY MAHABIRDAL VOLUNTEERS, RAWALPINDI CITY.

3973. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the Senior Superintendent of Police at Rawalpindi has prohibited the carrying of lathi by Mahabirdal volunteers along with processions, etc., in Rawalpindi city ; if so, why ;
- (b) whether it is also a fact that no such prohibition exists in case of volunteers of other associations ;
- (c) whether Government is aware of the fact that this order has caused widespread agitation in the Sanatanist circles of the province ;
- (d) whether the attention of Government has been drawn to the articles entitled ' Lathi Day ' in the daily Vir Bharat, Lahore, dated the 18th October 1934, on this subject ;
- (e) whether Government is aware that numerous resolutions protesting against such orders were passed and sent to the Senior Superintendent of Police, Rawalpindi, on the subject ;
- (f) in view of the above and the fact that the Mahabirdal is a peaceful social service volunteer organisation of Sanatan Dharam, whether Government intends to issue instructions removing the ban ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Yes. It is a precautionary measure to prevent a breach of the peace.

(b) No. The prohibition applies also to similar organisations of other sects and communities.

(c) No.

(d) Yes.

(e) Government have no information on this point.

(f) No ; Government does not propose to interfere with the discretion of the local authorities.

RETRENCHED CANAL OVERSEERS.

3974. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that a list of the retrenched canal overseers was sent to the Principal, Rasul Engineering College, and to every Superintending Engineer under orders of Chief Engineer, so that they may be employed whenever necessary ;
- (b) if so, whether this list includes the names of those overseers who were retrenched from Second Bahawalpur Circle ;
- (c) if the answer to above be in the affirmative, then how many of those on the above list have been re-employed and how many of them are those retrenched from Second Bahawalpur Circle ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that nearly all the overseers employed during the last years in the Drainage Circle, particularly on the Lower Chenab Canal, are new hands ;
- (e) if the answer to above be in the affirmative, the reason why absolutely new hands have been preferred to those who have already put in long service in the Department ; and
- (f) what Government intends to do in the matter ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Lists of retrenched men were supplied by Superintending Engineers to the Principal, who classified them according to merit. On application the Principal, informs any Superintending Engineer, who needs an overseer, of the name of the next on the list for employment.

(b) Men discharged from the 2nd Bahawalpur Circle were classified along with those from other circles.

(c) So far as can be ascertained 22 men who were classified have been re-employed, two of these were from the 2nd Bahawalpur Circle.

(d) No : no overseers have been appointed during the past four years to the Drainage Circle.

(e) Does not arise.

(f) No action is necessary.

LUDHIANA MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

3975. Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that the wards of the Ludhiana Municipal Committee were redistributed and the papers were sent to the Ministry for Local Self-Government some years ago in 1928-29 for sanction ;

(b) whether it is a fact that a great disparity exists in the number of voters of various wards as at present constituted and the redistribution scheme removes the same ;

(c) if so, why the sanction has been withheld so long ;

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

(d) whether it is a fact that recently the Civil Lines area has been included in the municipal limits thereby making the redistribution of wards an imperative necessity ;

(e) if the answer to above be in the affirmative, whether Government intends to sanction the redistribution of wards in view of the new elections coming in the next year ; and, if so, when ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Definite proposals for the redistribution of wards have never been received by Government. The Commissioner, the Deputy Commissioner and the Municipal Committee have corresponded about the matter, but owing to the inclusion of the Civil Lines in the Municipality, which was for a long time under consideration, and to difficulties involved in adjusting the wards after such inclusion, they have not yet been able to complete the proposals.

(b) It is understood that there is a great disparity in the numbers of voters in different wards, but, as above stated, no redistribution scheme removing such disparity has been received.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) Yes.

(e) The Commissioner is being asked to expedite the matter, and Government will certainly endeavour to sanction the proposals before the next election, if they are received in time.

LOTHIAN COMMITTEE REPORT.

3976. Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly place on the table final proposals made by the Local Government with reference to the observation made in paragraph 170 of the Report of the Lothian Committee, Volume I ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I regret that the reply to this question is not yet ready. It will be supplied to the honourable member when ready.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

NON-OFFICIAL CHAIRMEN OF DISTRICT BOARD.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is the declared policy of Government to encourage district boards to elect a non-official chairman if they like after their election ;

(b) whether Government has sent letters to district boards to that effect ;

(c) how many boards have since shown their desire to elect non-official chairmen ;

(d) whether it is a fact that some time ago the District Board of Multan passed a resolution by 26 votes against 12 for electing their non-official Chairman ;

- ✓
- (e) if so, what was the date of this resolution ;
 - (f) whether this resolution had been passed long before the last session of the Council at Simla ;
 - (g) if the requisite approval has not so far been given though more than four months have passed, the reason for the delay ;
 - (h) whether Government is aware that once half a dozen members of the Council sent up a resolution that district boards should be allowed to proceed to elect non-official chairmen as soon as they pass a resolution to that effect without waiting for Government approval ;
 - (i) what Government proposes to do in the case of Multan ;
 - (j) when Government will come to a decision ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) Two boards indicated their preference, and have been allowed to elect non-official Chairmen. Another board passed a resolution to the same effect, but before Government had arrived at a decision it withdrew its request. Yet another board passed a similar resolution, but there were representations to Government that the proceedings had been irregular, and on being requested to pass a fresh resolution, the board reversed the previous decision. Besides these the Multan District Board has also passed such a resolution. I may also mention that by a rule framed in 1919 the Sialkot Board has had the option to elect the Chairman or to apply to the Local Government to appoint one ; and it has always elected the Deputy Commissioner as the Chairman.

(d) Yes.

(e) June 21st, 1934.

(f) It was passed five days before the Simla session of the Council.

(g) The Government has decided to comply with the request and orders have been issued.

(h) Nine members signed the resolution but it was never moved.

(i) and (j) Do not arise.

APPOINTMENT OF INDIAN CHRISTIANS AS HOUSE SURGEONS OR PHYSICIANS IN THE MAYO HOSPITAL, LAHORE.

Mr. E. Mayadas : Will the Hon'ble Minister for Education be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that biennially six duly qualified persons are given posts as House Surgeons and House Physicians for one year, in the Mayo Hospital, Lahore ;
- (b) if so, since 1915 to 1931, what is the number of persons so appointed ;
- (c) out of the appointments so made how many times Indian Christians were appointed ;

[Mr. E. Mayadas.]

- (ii) (a) whether it is a fact that since 1981 or thereabout the number of posts has been increased from 6 to 12 ;
- (b) if so, since the number was increased to 12 up to end of 1983, what is the number of persons so appointed ;
- (c) how many out of them were Indian Christians ;
- (iii) whether it is open to the Indian Christians to compete for these posts ;
- (iv) in case the total number of Indian Christians that have been appointed to these posts is smaller than what they might expect on communal basis, whether Government is prepared to consider the application of an Indian Christian this year, if a suitable candidate is available ; if not, why not ;
- (v) (a) whether it is a fact that generally 3 Muslims, 2 Hindus and one Sikh, are selected ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that there have been occasions (one was perhaps in 1982) when instead of 2 Hindus only one Hindu was selected ;
- (vi) (a) amongst the students who have passed the final Medical Examination this year, whether there is any Indian Christian ;
- (b) if so, whether he has made application for appointment to one of these posts ;
- (c) if so, whether Government is prepared to consider his application ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (i) (a) Yes.

(b) 105.

(c) Once.

(ii) (a) In December 1982 the number of posts of these House Surgeons and Physicians (Honorary for the first six months and salaried for the remaining six months) was raised from 6 to 12.

(b) The number of appointments made from December 1982 to the end of 1983 was 18.

(c) None.

(iii) Yes.

(iv) Yes.

(v) (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(vi) (a) Yes, there is one Indian Christian.

(b) No.

(c) Does not arise.

DISCUSSION ON THE JOINT SELECT COMMITTEE REPORT.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan (Revenue Member): Sir, a request was made the other day asking Government for time to discuss the report of the Joint Select Committee. I have to announce that the Government is prepared to fix 17th and 18th of December for the purpose.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): I beg to present the report of the drafting committee on the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill.

Mr. President: The report which has been presented by the drafting committee, appointed under Article 94 (2) of the Business Manual, has not stated in proper form the formal and consequential amendments proposed by it. I propose, therefore, to adjourn the Council till 4 o'clock so that by that time the committee may be able to draft the amendments in proper form and resubmit them to the House.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: I must express regret that we did not appreciate that separate notice of the amendments were required. I am very sorry for the inconvenience caused to you and the House.

The Council then adjourned till 4 P. M.

The Council re-assembled at 4 P. M.

FRANCHISE COMMITTEE REPORT.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan: Will the House discuss the Franchise Committee Report to-day?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: Is the House really anxious to discuss that report? On the last occasion I got the impression that the House was not keen to discuss it. If, however, the House desires to discuss the report, Government will be prepared to give time after the discussion of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report.

THE PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): I present the report of the drafting committee on the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill.

Mr. President: Now that the report of the drafting committee has been presented, the House will proceed to consider the amendments recommended by the committee one by one. The question is—

In the preamble, for the words "relating to" the words "governing the" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President: The question is—

In clause 3, in place of the words "insert after the existing clause (a) the following", the following words shall be inserted:

"After the existing clause (a) the following clause shall be inserted."

The motion was carried.

Mr. President: The question is—

In clause 3, sub-clause (aa) in place of the words "Part V of the Act", the words "section 74 of this Act or" shall be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 4, in place of the words "of the said Act", the words "of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920" shall be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 5, sub-clause (ii) for the words "after the word 'court' in clause (b) of the same sub-section", the words "where it appears for the first time in sub-section (1)" shall be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 5, sub-clause (iii) for the words "in clause (b) of the same sub-section" the words "in sub-section (1)" shall be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 5, sub-clause (iv) in place of the words "to clause (a) to sub-section (2) the following words shall be added:" the following words be substituted :

"to sub-section (2) the following clause shall be added "

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 5, sub-clause (iv), between the words "Imperial Bank of India" and "by more" when they first occur, the following words be added :

"in force at the date when the loan was borrowed."

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 5, sub-clause (iv), sub-clauses (1) and (2) be made into a single clause and sub-clause (3) be made into an explanation.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In the proviso to the same sub-clause for the word "courts" the word "court" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 7, sub-clause (1), in place of the words "to co-operative banks and societies" the words "to co-operative banks or to co-operative societies" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In the same sub-clause, before the words "any banking company", the word "to" be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 7, sub-clause (2), after the word "debtor", the words "for the purpose of this part of this Act" be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 8, sub-clause (1) (b), the word "a" be inserted in place of the word: "any".

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 8, sub-clause (3), for the word "of" between the word "date" and "such", the word "specified in" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 8, sub-clause (4), in place of the figures "22", the figures "23" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 11, sub-clause (2) (b), for the word "or", the word "and" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 12, sub-clause (2) the word "with" be omitted before the word "acknowledgment".

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In the proviso to clause 13, for the word "directions", the word "direction" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

At the end of the proviso to clause 14, sub-clause (1), the word and figures "and 10" be omitted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

At the end of sub-clause (2) of clause 17, the words "of the jurisdiction of the board" be added.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The motion is—

In clause 19, in place of the words "no second application shall lie within two years of the date of dismissal of the first application", the words "no board shall entertain a second application within two years of the date of disposal of the first application" be substituted.

Mr. Labh Singh (Rawalpindi division and Lahore division, North, non-Muhammadan, Rural): I think the original amendment adopted by the House was slightly different from the one that is proposed now. The underlying idea of the amendment that was adopted by the House when the clause was under consideration was that once an application is made by a debtor and is disposed of, no second application shall lie, that is, no application could be made either by the debtor or somebody else on his behalf. The drafting amendment suggested by the committee seems to imply that only the debtor cannot make a second application. This amendment therefore seems to be destructive of the original amendment adopted by the House.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): I think the objection is groundless. The amendment is that no board shall entertain a second application. That does not restrict the prohibition to a second application of any particular person. The words "no application shall lie" was to my mind somewhat doubtful English. Of course I am aware that in ordinary conversation we say that an application shall not lie. But I am not at all sure that it is perfect English. There can, however, be no doubt that the expression "No board shall entertain a second application" is good English.

[The Hon. Mr. D. J. Boyd.]

The only thing about this clause to which I would like to invite the attention of the House is that for the word "dismissal" we have substituted the word "disposal". That undoubtedly does make a difference in the meaning of the clause. We have changed the word "dismissal" into "disposal" advisedly because in the earlier part of the clause the words "disposed of" occur—"if once an application is made by a debtor and disposed of." Therefore the right word that should occur later is "disposal" and not "dismissal." "Disposal" covers both acceptance and dismissal whereas the original clause as adopted by the House referred only to dismissal. I think the House should have its attention drawn to this change before it actually adopts the present amendment.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 19, in place of the words "no second application shall lie within two years of the date of dismissal of the first application", the words "no board shall entertain a second application within two years of the date of disposal of the first application" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 20, sub-clause (2), the word "shall" be removed from before the word "notwithstanding" and inserted before the words "not allow".

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 20, sub-clause (3), the word "shall" be removed from before the word "notwithstanding" and inserted before the words "not be executed".

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 21, at the end of sub-clause (b), for the figures "19" the figures "20" be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 26, for the words "Part IV", the words "this Part" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

In clause 26, for the words "suit or application or appeal", the words "application, suit or appeal" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 28 (1), for the words "the Act" the words "this Act" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 28 (a), for the figures "8 (3)" the figures and letter "8 (1) (c)" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in sub-clause (g) of clause 28, for the figures "19" the figures "20" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in sub-clause (h) of clause 28, for the words "the Act" the words "this Act" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in sub-clause (2) of clause 28, between the words "to" and "condition" the word "the" be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 30, for the words "the Act" the words "this Act" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in the proviso to clause 30, the description of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act be corrected.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 31, for the figures "29" in sub-clauses (1) and (2), the figures "30" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in sub-clause (1) of clause 33, for the words "the Act" the words "this Act" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 33, sub-clause (3), between the words "to" and "condition" the word "the" be inserted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 34, in place of the words "'50 acres' shall be substituted for '30 acres'" the words "for the figures and word '30 acres' the figures and word '50 acres' shall be substituted", be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 36, for the words "or let to others" the words "or lent to others" be substituted.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That owing to the insertion of clauses 19 and 30 all clauses from 19 onwards be re-numbered.

The motion was carried.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill be passed

[The Hon. Mr. D. J. Boyd.]

We have been considering this Bill since the 18th of October and the principle of the Bill was very fully discussed in the Simla session. It was again very fully discussed when I moved that the Bill be taken into consideration at the beginning of the present session. Each clause has been very fully discussed since then. Accordingly I propose to set a good example and make no speech. (Hear, hear and cheers).

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill be passed.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : I have got one suggestion to make and that is that a limit may be set to each speech. I think 15 minutes for every speech will be a suitable limit.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : No limit can be fixed when an important measure of this kind is going to be passed. We are in a minority and the minority has a right to place its view before the Council and emphasise it.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : So far as the question of time limit is concerned, it is for the House to make a request and for you to decide. But I suggest that we should sit to-day till we finish this Bill.

✓ Mr. President : I think the House will accept that suggestion.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : There is one difficulty. Half a dozen of us have an engagement at half past six to-day.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : There are two days for this and if we cannot finish to-day we can finish even late to-morrow.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : Sir, I was going to submit that the unequal battle which raged on the floor of this House for a long number of days is coming to an end. I say it was an unequal battle because on the one side there was a large number of people who were prepared to vote for the Bill as it stood or even if it became much worse than it actually was. But it is our duty, the duty of those who represent 50 per cent. of the Punjab population, though they are in a minority in this Council, to place our views before this House on a measure like this which affects the life of this province not only in financial matters but in other matters as well. There are three stages of this Bill. The first was when the Bill was presented by the Government and a discussion with regard to it took place during the Simla session. The second stage was when it was referred to the select committee and emerged out of that committee. The third is the present stage. These three stages have to be taken into account. In the first stage nobody who had read the Bill carefully could possibly accuse the Government of any anti-agriculturist sympathies. The Bill was decried no doubt by a large section of this House representing non-agricultural interests. But the Bill as it stood was, if I may be permitted to say so, a Bill which went clearly in favour of the agricultural tribes of the Punjab and the agriculturists in general. Not content with that, the Bill was referred to the select committee and very many drastic changes were made by the committee in that Bill. It was admitted by every fair-minded person that the Bill as it emerged out of the deliberations of the select committee had completely changed its hue and colour and had become a new measure.

Mr. President : I may inform the honourable member that at this stage speeches must be strictly limited to the matters contained in the Bill.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : Sir, I am just referring to those matters which are contained in the Bill and I will not say a single word about matters which are not contained in the Bill. Most of the provisions of this Bill are to be found in the report of the select committee and I am making mention of this fact in order to show to the honourable members that an advice was given by you that the Bill as it emerged from the select committee has changed in a very material and drastic manner and in spite of the advice given by you that the Bill should not be proceeded with the Bill was placed before the Council.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I do not think this is correct.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : The Bill as it has emerged after a full debate in the Council, has gone still from bad to worse so far as those people are concerned who are entirely dependent upon non-agricultural professions and therefore it is but proper that we should at this stage consider the aspects of the Bill which would affect the various people living in this province. Therefore I intend to discuss very briefly this Bill from 5 points of view, the Bill as it affects the rural credit, the Bill as it affects urban credit, the Bill as it affects the administration of justice, the Bill as it affects law and order in this province and finally as it touches the Hindus living in this province.

Mr. President : I am afraid, all these matters are not contained in the Bill. I have already stated that at this stage speeches must be confined strictly to matters contained in the Bill. The honourable member, I hope, will not go beyond the provisions of the Bill.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : This is exactly what I was going to submit and you will catch me when I am irrelevant in any matter. I am going to show how the provisions which have been incorporated in the Bill are going to affect rural credit, administration of justice and law and order. I do not think that I would be travelling beyond the provisions of the Bill or beyond my province as a representative of the people who have sent me here, if I were to point out to the Government now in these various matters that the provisions which have been now incorporated in the Bill touch their lives and their every day occupations. Therefore, the first point that has to be looked into is whether the Bill would bring any relief to the agriculturist debtor who lives in the rural areas. I submit with all the earnestness and seriousness that I can command that this Bill is going to destroy entirely rural credit. Various provisions have been made in this Bill with regard to the Usurious Loans Act, with regard to various Acts which are in operation at present and I find that if the provisions of the Bill are going to be assented to by His Excellency the Governor, the agriculturists living in rural areas as well as those living in urban areas will find themselves either entirely at the mercy of shylocks or they will go without getting any credit from anywhere. This is the main point which I wish to emphasize while I am dealing with rural credit. Sometimes it has been stated on the floor of the House that there are two classes in this province, the debtor class and the creditor class. But unfortunately those people who call themselves representatives of the debtor classes have not tried to understand really the financial situation in this province. There are people in this province who are both creditors and borrowers, people who lend money to other people, but at the same time are borrowers themselves as was pointed out by Mr. Haig while speaking on the Money Lenders Bill, as it was presented in the Legislative Assembly in 1923. Financial conditions in India are entirely different from the financial conditions in England and other European countries and he pointed out, and I would quote his very words, how this Bill would ruin the financial fabric of the Indian society and I submit that these words are fully applicable to the Bill now under discussion. The Honourable Mr. Haig stated the question in these words —

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

The whole result would be to interfere to a very great extent with the money-lending system of the country and I would ask the honourable members to remember, as no doubt they will remember, that whatever hard things may be said against money-lenders as a class or individuals in particular, the fact remains that the money-lender is one of the most useful members of society in this country. The honourable member says 'question' but how is a vast agricultural country especially in those tracts where the ryotwari system is prevailing, how is it to be carried at all, if money is not available for agriculturists. Agriculture cannot be carried on without borrowed capital. The honourable member says "co-operative societies." How many co-operative societies are there as yet in this country? It is, therefore, not realized that co-operative money-lending in spite of the great strides that it has made is still in its infancy and that if we were to strike a blow at the common system of lending money in this country the result would be disastrous.

These were the words of Mr. Haig.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : When were they uttered?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : They were uttered by Mr. Haig in 1923 and I submit that conditions have not since changed in any material degree. I pointed it out then and I point it out now that in the Punjab it is not only a class of money lenders that lend money to people but everybody in the province is either a borrower or a lender and sometimes both. You will find in rural areas people lending money as well as borrowing money, orphans, widows carrying on moneylending in order to make their livelihood. These things exist in every Punjab village, in every small town, and in every notified area. Banking system as known in Europe is very limited in this province even at this time and I may point out to honourable members that by passing this Bill they are striking at the root of rural credit. An agriculturist must always borrow. He cannot carry on unless he is permitted to borrow freely and largely in the town market. The Bill unfortunately is going to destroy this system of agricultural borrowing and the worst effect of this Bill would be felt in these rural areas. What is going to happen if this Bill is passed? One effect of that would be that these people who generally lend money on interest would, in future, refuse to lend money to agriculturists at the time of their need. Sir, I say with all seriousness that if this takes place, dacoities would be committed, murders would take place and the lives of moneylenders and persons who possess money will be in danger. (Interruption). Honourable members will have their turns to speak and I will not interrupt them, but if they continue to interrupt me I do not mind these interruptions. I do not mind if they want to carry on this game, I can play it myself too. The result of that would be, as I submitted, complete disturbance in rural areas and the agriculturists will find that they can go to ✓ nobody for loan when they have to pay their land revenue. Surely it is not contemplated that needy people will cease to have their needs in future. Will the agriculturist become in future an entirely changed man that he would not require money at the time of marriage, or at the time of illness in his house? These things are not going to be changed even by the passing of the Bill. In such circumstances the agriculturists or persons who live upon small trades or small agricultural professions subservient to agriculture, if they were to go and borrow they will find that they have no credit in the market and they will not be able to get even a penny. The result would be disturbances and destruction of the state of peace in which people at present live. Not only would there be a destruction of private moneylending, but you will find that those occupations or trades which depend not on agriculture but on small borrowings, the carpenters, blacksmiths, potters and small tailors, all these will find themselves in a position that they would not be able to carry on their professions in a peaceful manner. Therefore with all the seriousness and earnestness that I can command I submit to the Government and through Government members to His Excellency the Governor that he should withhold his assent from this Bill which is going to be placed before him after it has been passed by this Council.

Next, Sir, we have to consider how the Bill will affect urban credit, or the credit of people who are living in non-rural areas, people living in small towns, people living in notified areas and municipal committees. I could not understand why the amendments moved by Mr. Puri on these matters were not accepted by those people who represent or claim to represent agriculturist interests. You can just imagine the condition of those people who in carrying on their petty shopkeeping, their various professions in order to obtain their livelihood, find that they cannot obtain any money from anywhere. Surely co-operative societies are not going to lend any money to them. They are mainly for the benefit of the agriculturists. There are no large banks existing in this country in small towns or notified areas. Where are then these people going to get their money from? How are they going to carry on their day to day professions in order to earn their livelihood and keep large families which unfortunately is a feature of the Indian society. Not only this, but we find that the Punjab has entered upon an industrial career only recently. It was mainly and predominantly an agricultural province, but finding other provinces going ahead in the race of industrial development, the Punjabees have also begun to stir themselves up. But on the passing of this Bill, they will find that the industrial awakening which had taken place and commercial awakening which had taken place will be nipped in the bud. It is an unfortunate part of the whole affair that honourable members here in this House seem to think that there is some direct antagonism between industrial and agricultural interests. I do not hold this view. Those who are engaged in the profession of agriculture have mainly to depend on industrialists or persons who trade and vice versa. There is no antagonism between the two. The industrialist is as essential for the agriculturist as the latter is for the former. Therefore this antagonism exists in the minds of the majority of the honourable members who represent rural classes and this seems to be at the root of this doubt, this want of confidence in the non-agriculturist classes or the trading classes. Thus you will find that there would be no money to invest in industry, no money to invest in factories and no money to carry on commerce and other professions of a similar nature. The law of supply and demand cannot possibly be defied. Legislators may legislate, people may say whatever they like, but the eternal laws of economics which govern matters of this kind cannot be defied. I already pointed it out and I point it out once again now that capital will flow away from this province to the neighbouring provinces. I point out that factories and industries have sprung up in the United Provinces with the help of the Punjab money. The honourable member, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, said that that was due to the fact that sugarcane could be got there more cheaply. Exactly that was my point. If money could go from this province to other provinces for the building up of industry, the law of supply and demand, the economic laws to which reference was made by the honourable member, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, are bound to work with equal vigour when it is declared by this Bill that a rate of five per cent. per annum on secured loans will become an excessive rate of interest and the Usurious Loans Act as modified by this Bill would be invoked by the court for the help of the debtors. I submit that the result would be that industrial development would be greatly injured and urban people or members of agricultural tribes who can neither own land nor can buy land nor can go into Government service and whose only source of sustenance is either petty shopkeeping or commerce trade or small industry of any kind would be hard hit by this Bill. The result would be great misery and ruin, not contemplated—I hope I am right there—by honourable members who are supporting the drastic measure which is going to be passed by this Council. I have already submitted that it would have a very bad effect on the administration of justice. It is surprising how honourable members who have voted for some of the sections which are incorporated in the Bill have very lightly given their vote without even understanding that the Government was not supporting them. For example, instead of trying to find out methods by which an honest money-lender who has got a decree should have the fruits of his decree, efforts have been made that even that decree should go unsatisfied. There has been a drastic change, in section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code. It has been laid down, if this part of the Bill is going to be accepted, that houses owned by certain class of people shall not be attached in execution of a money decree even though the houses are not occupied by agriculturists or are not required for their own living purposes. Even those houses which are spare, which are superfluous shall not be attached. What happens then? Under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, the land cannot be touched, it cannot be attached. Under this Act which is going to be passed the property of the agriculturist in the shape of houses cannot be attached and if we remove the only other safeguard, namely warrant of arrest, then even the movables could be hidden somewhere and the moneylender or the person who has got a decree from the court has the bare satisfaction of having gone to a British court of justice without the means of realising the fruits of his decree. Honourable members have not seriously thought of providing any machinery by which the just fruits of a decree should somehow or other be ensured to the person who has got the decree. Is this law? Is this, I ask, in the name of justice and fairplay, a thing to be proud of? Are we to take it that those honourable members who have voted for this drastic provision of the Bill in spite of the desire of Government not to get it passed have been earnest, have been serious when they asked the House to give its acceptance to the provision? It would be, I submit, a sheer mockery and sham if we were to accept this provision which utterly destroys the hope and debars the possibility of the money-lender for the realisation of those amounts which, after full investigation, have been decreed by the court. Why pursue this policy, why say to the world that power which once passed over to certain class of people is going to be abused in this manner? I ask honourable members who have supported this part of the Bill to be really serious and to be face to face with the unfortunate cases of those people who, after having spent a lot of money, a lot of time and trouble in order to get a decree, find that they can be set at defiance.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

I shall not take a long time over conciliation boards. Much was said by us at the time when the clauses relating to this subject came up for discussion. I do not regard these boards as conciliation boards at all. According to me they are coercion boards in which people would find that they have exchanged one paper for another and that too, a paper of no use, of no value, if we look to the provisions regarding the amendment to section 60 of the Code of Civil Procedure and the provisions regarding arrest. Surely if your conciliation boards have given one paper in place of another paper, have said that instead of realising Rs. 1,000 the unfortunate money-lender is to realise only Rs. 300, even in that case some provision should have been made that the debtor should have been called upon to pay that amount. That has not been done. On the other hand every effort, as I have said, has been made to put the unfortunate creditors, the unfortunate people who find themselves in an unenviable position today, in the place of mere helots to whom the protection of the law is not to be given any longer. These are very serious matters and I ask my honourable friends that before they proceed with measures of this kind they should calculate the harm that will be done to the province as a whole if this Bill were passed.

Then there is one other important part of the Bill, namely the part which deals with damdupal. With your permission I shall quote the following words again from Mr. Haig who said this with regard to damdupal :—

The point I wish to make is that damdupal though in itself a very well-meant rule is really a very primitive expedient. It lays down no period within which interest may be allowed to accumulate up to an amount equal to the capital. For instance, the rule is this that the amount of interest claimed at any one time must not exceed an amount equal to the capital. It takes no account of the periods of payment of interest. If a suit is brought at the end of three years there is nothing to prevent as far as the rule goes the persons bringing the suit from recovering interest which amounts to 33 per cent. per annum. On the other hand if a suit is brought at the end of twenty or thirty years the rate of interest is enormously reduced. It is in fact a clumsy way of regulating the rate of interest. The question of regulating the rates of interest has been gone into frequently. It was investigated by a Parliamentary committee in England and I think it has been universally condemned by all those experts who are competent to deal with it. Moreover there are several positive dangers about this rule of damdupal. The first is this. If you have a rule of that sort in force all payments which are made are immediately credited as interest, never anything against the principal. Secondly it is a direct temptation to the money-lender at the time when the bond is made to cause the debtor to agree to have a much larger sum entered as principal than that actually given to him in order to enable the creditor to recover a larger sum when he goes to court. Thirdly, it leads to the practice of nominally winding up a transaction and beginning a new one so that the additional amount shown in the new bond is very much greater than that originally lent. Fourthly, it compels the money-lender to bring a suit at the earliest possible moment which, with all due respect to my honourable friend's opinion, is not an unmixed blessing even to the debtor.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

This was what was said by a member who represented the Government of India. And here the Punjab Government in their wisdom have thought it fit to put this clumsy, this awkward, this archaic matter into law in the year of grace 1934. It would have been very wise if the Government of India's example had been followed by the Punjab Government and we had taken a leaf out of that Government's book in order to settle matters of this kind in a more amicable, more wise and more just manner. This is all I have to say at the present time with regard to damdupat. One thing has been emphasised in the quotation which I have given, and it is this, that the money-lender, as I said in the beginning, the honest money-lender will find his trade gone, while the shylock, the dishonest money-lender, will find that these are days of his prosperity, he will find that he has got debtors or the debtor classes — if there are debtor classes of the kind which seem to exist in the imagination of various honourable members of this Council — at his mercy. That matter was pointed out by speaker after speaker from these benches but no heed was paid by honourable members who sit on the other side. But there was the warning, the warning conveyed by the Government of India when they opposed a differently named Bill of Muhammad Yamin Khan in the Legislative Assembly in 1923. Efforts have been made in this Council times out of number to threaten credit in this province. We are aware of the Moneylenders Bill of 1925, of the Punjab Regulation of Accounts Bill of a later date and this is the third attempt made in all seriousness and earnestness to destroy the credit system of this province. I appeal to you in the name of reason and fairplay that you cannot possibly disregard the warning conveyed to you by a member of the Government of India in 1923 speaking in the Legislative Assembly. It is a very serious thing. In a very light-hearted mood you are seeking to destroy the credit of this province, to destroy the financial fabric on which the prosperity and peace of this province depends. Bills have been passed to deal with similar problems in other provinces than the Punjab. It is said that circumstances differ in a very material degree, that there is something in the United Provinces or in Bengal that does not exist here. But remember this that you find credit limited in this province because of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act; the rate of interest is higher because people are not desirous of lending when there is no security. The result of this, if such is the case, should be that there should be more facilities granted for the credit, for lending and borrowing from one person to another. I cannot possibly understand how this difference in circumstances is an argument which should go to support the drastic provisions of this Bill. Honourable members says: "We do not care if credit in the Punjab is curtailed, we do not mind if the agriculturist does not get the money at the time of his need; we do not desire that the agriculturist should go and beg for money at the door either of this man or that." These are idle words. Their consequences have not been weighed. The needs of those people who entirely live on agriculture have not been taken into consideration. If such was the case things would have been mended long ago. Unfortunately the agriculturist, not only in the Punjab, not only in India, in provinces outside the Punjab, has to borrow, but even in advanced countries like England, France, Germany, America, the peasant has to borrow. Only the other day I gave instances how the agricultural debt in the United States of America was at a very large figure. The borrowings have to go on. Otherwise agriculture cannot be carried on. Is it seriously desired that the agricultural industry in the Punjab should receive a set-back and that people should be forced at the point of the bayonet to sell their lands to people of agriculturist class whose aim and desire is to grab all agricultural land? Is that the desire of the Punjab Government, or of the honourable members of this House? That would be the result if this Bill is enacted into law in the shape in which it is emerging from the Council. Therefore I ask the House to remember that they are laying the axe at the root of agricultural industry in this province. The Punjab which has been famous for its canals and agricultural prosperity, that Punjab would find that with its credit gone, the agriculturist at the mercy either of shylocks who would resort to various kinds of practices or at the mercy of those agriculturist lawyers, those agriculturist money-lenders who would know where the shoe pinches and would be prepared to take full advantage of the misery of the agriculturist peasant. I ask the House to take these matters into serious consideration. I have already hinted at it and I do not want to repeat that so far as the administration of justice and law and order is concerned it is going to be seriously jeopardised. What I said in regard to the conciliation boards, while discussing the various amendments, I need not repeat. The courts of justice will find that their occupation is gone. They will find that confidence in their administration has gone. They will find that a man can go to a conciliation board and can get a decree either modified or set aside by the various subterfuges adopted to defy the judgments of the court and therefore that is a serious matter which should be taken into consideration.

5 P. M.

Lastly, Sir, as a representative of the Hindus of the Punjab in this Council I wish to issue a kind of warning to the Punjab Government. I want to tell them this that there are 29 per cent. of the Punjab population who profess the Hindu religion and Hindu faith. Twenty-five per cent. only of this 29 per cent. are declared members of agricultural tribes under the Punjab Land Alienation Act. There are 75 per cent. who on account of this Land Alienation Act cannot take to agriculture. Government's stubborn attitude not to include more Hindus within the purview of the Act has driven them to take to professions like shopkeeping, money-lending, industry and commerce, and the result is that if there is an outcry that this Bill is against the Hindus it is because 75 per cent. of the Hindu population is not an agricultural population but entirely dependent on things other than agriculture. It was in view of this that at my request my honourable friend, Mr. Puri, in all seriousness placed two or three amendments before the House in order to exclude people who are residents of towns, small towns or notified areas from the operation of this Bill and to confine the Bill to the residents of rural areas or only to classes who do not have anything to do with trade, commerce and other things. Now, it is significant that on that day when these motions came up there were 25 votes for and 25 against the amendments, that is to say, 25 persons were for a compromise of that sort and therefore there was an adjournment. It is not surprising that Sikhs and Hindus stood together for an amendment of that kind but unfortunately owing to the stubborn attitude adopted by the members opposite under the leadership of Chandhri Chhotu Ram that compromise did not materialise. These are serious matters which I request Government to take into consideration. The whole community of Sikhs and Hindus wanted this protection but instead of the Bill being limited to agricultural areas it is being extended by the agriculturist members to people residing in areas other than rural, in other words, the Bill is going to be imposed on the whole province. That, Sir, is a very serious matter. I have been constantly attending the Legislative Council during the discussion of this Bill and throughout the speeches I have mainly confined myself to agriculturist requirements. The result is that these salutary motions which would have gone a long way in allaying the fears of the minority who do not want the provisions of the Act to apply to loans advanced to people not dependent on agriculture or to a trader, contractor or shopkeeper, were rejected. All words of wisdom, all words of caution were thrown to the wind and instead some amendments which the Government did not want to support were passed. Now the Bill is going to be imposed ruthlessly on this 29 per cent. of the population of the Punjab. I would say this to the people who are looking forward to a Bill of this kind that when power is entrusted to them, they should try and judge the feelings of the minority. It is not always wise for the majority to impose conditions of this kind which are insulting and humiliating to people who belong to the minority community. In spite of all this I believe that under the most difficult times Hindus will find certain methods to live, but this is a warning for the Government to take. It has been repeated times out of number and I repeat it for the last time that it would be useless to try and crush this immortal race by a legislation of this kind. Efforts were made when the amendment moved by Mr. Roberts was carried, that wiser counsel should prevail and the Bill should have been strictly confined to people who wanted it for their own benefit and not imposed on the province as a whole.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

(At this stage Mr. President called upon Mr. Mukand Lal Puri to speak.)

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, may I make a submission. I have been very ill as my voice will indicate. Therefore, I hope you will permit me to speak tomorrow or at a later stage.

Mr. President : It was in the honourable member's presence, I presume, that the Leader of the House suggested that discussion on the Bill should be finished today.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I was not present when this suggestion was made. You will remember that last time you decided to allocate two days and it was on that understanding that I did not come earlier. In fact it is only by mere accident that I have attended today. I am not in a position to say anything now. I might speak at a later stage, if necessary.

(At this stage Mr. President called upon Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath to speak.)

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I would also like to speak later, Sir. I want to hear the other side first.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : In view of the disinclination of the other party to speak I beg to move—

That the question be now put.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : If Pandit Nanak Chand's speech shows any disinclination on our part to take part in the discussion, I do not know what would show enthusiasm on our part to contribute our humble share to the debate. We are very anxious to assist the Government by placing every possible point of view before it and the House and the public, but perhaps Chaudhri Chhotu Ram wants to stifle the discussion.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I shall take only a few minutes of this honourable House in giving my reasons why I have supported this Bill. I feel called upon to make my position clear as a newspaper has declared me as opposing this Bill. It has said that a zamindar member has gone out of his way to oppose this piece of legislation. What I want to point out is that at that time I supported the motion for consideration and opposed the motion for re-circulation.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : You had better contribute an article in that newspaper explaining your position.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : I shall explain my position just now in a few words. I feel that the provisions incorporated in this Bill are the most effective remedy of all those evils of which the sahukars themselves complain. For instance, money-lenders have been making this propaganda that they have not been provided with adequate facilities to recover their debts. This complaint has been made from the platforms of many conferences convened by money-lending urban classes. Lala Kundan Lal, Secretary, Traders Association, declared in one of his public utterances that the real difficulty of the sahukar begins after he has taken a decree from a civil court. He knows it full well that the debtor has no means to pay his debts and yet he has to press his claim and incur the odium of the debtor and his people. But the conciliation board to be established under this Bill will solve his difficulty. The debtor will be summoned together with his creditors and the board will decide how much he should be asked to pay without seriously injuring the interests of money-lenders. The provision relating to conciliation boards is especially needed for the rural people. In cities if a debtor is unable to pay his debts and wants to be declared insolvent, his community comes to his help. As he happens to be a member of the money-lending community they have a sympathy for him. Members of the fraternity join heads and decide that he is able to pay, say, two or four annas in a rupee and the creditor has to bow before the decision of the baradari. But in villages no such sympathy exists between the creditor and the debtor because both belong to absolutely different classes. Hence the necessity of the conciliation boards. Many of our sahukar friends have been complaining of the murders of their brethren at the hands of debtors. The Government have provided for bringing into existence an agency which will help debtors and creditors in arriving at an amicable settlement with regard to their debts. So there will be no more murders of sahukars after this Bill comes into force as an Act.

[Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan.]

Then there is the provision with regard to the reduced rates of interest. This will greatly help the poor debtors and the needy zamindars. But I should like to point out that a uniform rate of anything between 10 and 18 per cent. would have been far better than a fluctuating rate. I, for one, am in favour of accepting the Government's original proposal of 18½ per cent. as against a rate which is fixed at 11 to begin with and raised to 17 after the lapse of six months and then reduced to 15 after another four months. I think such a rate will not be acceptable to either the money-lenders or the zamindar debtors. A uniform rate of interest would have been acceptable to the sahukar and the debtor alike.

Damdapat is another salutary provision in this Bill which commends itself to me. Under the present circumstances the sahukars have very little chance of recovering their debts. I shall take the instance of sahukars doing business amongst three communities in the villages, Sainis, Rajputs and Kamos. A sahukar who is doing money-lending business amongst Sainis is considered to be the most fortunate man. He can recover his principal and interest very easily and get rich very soon. But one who lends money to Rajputs is the most unhappy creature on the surface of the earth. He has big registers and account books in which are entered huge sums of money advanced by him but he is not in a position to recover those debts. All come to borrow money; nobody thinks of paying it back. But now it has been made easy for the debtors to pay their debts in accordance with the principle of damdapat. I hope the debtors will be able to clear their debts very soon after this rule comes into operation. They have only to realise their responsibility and pray to God that their debts be cleared and opportunities will offer themselves to them to clear their debts.

One thing more and I have done. Sahukars have said in their conferences that the zamindar owes them a debt of one arab and 72 crores of rupees and the Government is encouraging him by this legislation not to pay a farthing out of it. Our leader Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram said that in order to give relief to the zamindar the sahukars must be put to a considerable loss. But I think that the provisions of this Bill will only apply when the debtor is unable to pay his debts and the debt of a person who can pay his debt, i.e., who is able to pay his debts are not touched by this Bill. So the sahukars need not worry on that score. I think there is not much advantage for the sahukars by the passage of this Bill (Laughter). I mean, neither the sahukar nor the debtor should think that this Bill is being passed to the exclusive detriment or advantage of the other. It has been only provided that the debtor should pay as much as he is in a position to pay and the sahukar should realise as much as it is proper for him to realise. I think we should be grateful to the Government that they have taken so much trouble to pass this salutary measure.

Much has been said against the provision abolishing civil imprisonment. All of us know that in the past when there used to be no civil imprisonment the relations of the creditors and the debtors were very cordial. If a debtor was unable to pay, the village panchayat used to arbitrate, and give a decision which was acceptable to both parties. But now the relations of the creditors and the debtors have been embittered owing to this system of civil imprisonment. Its abolition will be to the best interests of the people of this province. On the whole this Bill will prove a blessing for our province. With these words, I support the motion that this Bill be passed.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain (North-East Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, I had no mind to participate in this discussion at this stage as many of the honourable members of the House are anxious to cut short the debate on the motion now before us. But I feel advised in view of what has been already said about this Bill to make a few observations in a few minutes. It has been said that the Bill if passed into law will benefit all the three classes that are concerned in its passage, the Government, debtors and the creditors. I have stood up to point out that the Bill is not likely to fulfil the expectations of any one class out of them. The members of our party had made it abundantly clear even when the Bill was first introduced in this House that it would neither benefit the creditor nor the debtor. It will give rise to so many conflicts in the country on the other hand. It will drive zamindars and non-zamindars, creditors and debtors into different hostile camps. One class will find itself ranged against another in this province. Nobody will remain immune from the effects of ever-increasing hostility amongst the people of this country. This, in a word, will be the effect of this legislation on the life of this province. We gave the same warning when the Bill was circulated. And this House has seen the opinion of the most enlightened section of the people about this Bill. Honourable Judges of the High Court, other learned judges and prominent members of the bar were against its passage into law. The great mass of public opinion, moreover, condemned it as a sinister attempt on the part of the Government to ruin the sahukars of the province. But we are sorry to see that a section of the people here is anxious to pass this Bill in the teeth of the most reasonable opposition. They do not seem to realise that the debtor is not going to benefit in the least by this legislation. On the other hand he will suffer on account of it. But they will not pay heed to our warnings until the time comes when they will realise the folly of the step they are now taking. Their condition is like that patient who in spite of all warnings insists upon having a puri and relishes its sweetness but is beside himself with anger at the sight of the bitter dose of medicine brought to him by the doctor. What will be more advantageous for him, the bitter dose of medicine or the sweet puri? He should certainly know better and take the medicine however bitter it may be in good taste because a speedy recovery will follow its taking. But the sweet, delicious puri is the harbinger of greater trouble and pain.

Will the honourable zamindar members give a moment's thought to my warning even at this stage? I do not think they will. If you go through this Bill clause by clause you will find that the aim before the sponsors of this Bill has been continuously this that the sahukars' debts should be made impossible of realisation. The institution of conciliation boards will not help the realisation of debts in the least. It is said that the debtors will be made to pay these boards as much of their debts as they are in a position to pay. But this they are doing already. What will be the special function of these conciliation boards? It is not fair that the Government and the rural members should combine to deprive the sahukars of their money. It will not be fair. It will not be equitable. How can a justice-loving person be a party to such an affair? Only such people are willing to pay their debts as have a sense of justice and fairness. And only three classes of people can be fair-minded, those who have pure souls; those who are mindful of the public opinion and those who fear the strong hand of State law. Those who have pure souls think like this: "Since we have borrowed money it is our moral duty to pay it back. We should not displease him who extended his helping hand unto us in our time of need. Though law may allow us not to pay anything yet pay we must." But this Bill is throwing temptations in the way of such pure souls too. Who knows that people of pure souls may not be tempted to act dishonestly on account of this Bill? Very strange arguments are adduced while putting forward such strange measures. For instance, people say, "After all it is our money that is with the sahukars. We gave it to them. And they have advanced us loans out of the money taken out of our own pockets. So we are not to blame if we refuse to pay anything." But, may I ask them if sahukars robbed them of their money by force? Did they on their part pass any law through this Council to deprive you of your hard-earned money? If not so, why are you passing this law to rob them of the money which they advanced to you in good faith hoping that you will return it like gentlemen?

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

I wonder why the honourable members on the opposite benches consider it advisable to support the Bill with all its obnoxious provisions, especially when it creates fresh difficulties in the way of the sahukars in realising their debts. Under the existing law a defaulting debtor can be arrested and sent to civil jail. He knows that if he will not pay his debt he will be sent to jail and his children will starve. This fear of imprisonment compels him to pay up his debts. But under the provisions of the Bill neither of these remedies will be open to a creditor and consequently the debtor will feel quite safe. In that case I ask, what will make the debtor pay his debts? I therefore submit that if this Bill is passed into law the recovery of rural debts will become impossible. It has been said that conciliation boards are being established with a view to facilitating the recovery of rural debts. But when the remedies already available to a creditor will no longer be open to him, how will he be able to recover his debts? Of course the conciliation boards will grant him a decree of one thousand rupees instead of a decree of four thousand rupees without making proper arrangements for its execution. There is no provision in the Bill which makes it the duty of the conciliation board to see that the decrees granted by it are properly executed. It is, therefore, obvious that the Bill, if it is passed into law, will never facilitate the recovery of rural debts. In fact it intends to wipe off the slate all existing debts of the zamindars. I would appeal to the good sense of the members of the Unionist Party and request them to throw out this Bill. I also ask their leader if this is the same Bill about which he was once pleased to remark that it was only a toy to play with. No, it remains no longer a Bill, but it has become a billa (he-cat).

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : No, it is now a billi (she-cat).

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain : Well, Sir, I make bold to say that the Bill will not achieve its object in so far as it aims at crushing a particular class of people. This Bill or similar measures can never crush people who are intelligent. For God's sake do not be a party to a measure of this kind. I know full well that you have a majority in this House and on the assumption that all money in the possession of the sahukars is in fact yours, you can make law even to the effect that whosoever demands payment of his debt from an agriculturist debtor or whosoever refuses to advance loan to an agriculturist when asked to do so, shall be punished with imprisonment. But this is against all canons of justice. If you really want to help the zamindar debtors, try to cultivate in them frugal habits, tell them to live within their means and impress upon them the evil consequences of squandering money wastefully on marriages and in the entertainment of guests. If you do that, surely you will achieve your object. The Bill by itself will not in the least improve the situation. If you pass this Bill into law the question arises wherefrom the zamindars will have money to meet their requirements. They borrow money from sahukars to defray the expenses of elections. If they will not be able to borrow from them, they will be face to face with serious difficulties. Sir, I am not at all speaking against the debtor class. I can even sacrifice my life for them if there is an occasion for it. But at present I am simply condemning a measure which, though intended to benefit the zamindars, would in fact thoroughly shatter the rural credit and land the zamindars in serious troubles. I therefore strongly condemn this iniquitous measure and urge upon the House the desirability of throwing it out. But who pays heed to it? It is the case of

تھے سیرتہا ہی تھے سیر کھاجا

I warn the Government members as well as the members of the Unionist Party against the evil consequences that this Bill is sure to produce. Why not treat sahukars as your brethren? They are your friends in need. When you are dealing with a particular class of your countrymen you should display the spirit of Rana Partap who wandered through jungles but did not act against his conscience. When the Bill was circulated for eliciting opinion thereon it was said that there was no use in circulating it for the sahukars and their friends will oppose it and the zamindar debtors and their well-wishers will express their opinion in its favour. But what about the opinions expressed by English officers like the District Judge, Ambala, who condemned this measure as thoroughly iniquitous and injurious to the interests of both the sahukars and debtors? Did these officers express their opinions under any influence of the sahukars or the debtors? No, they expressed their opinions quite independently and as such their opinions ought to have carried sufficient weight, but these have in fact been ignored. Various amendments were proposed to improve the Bill but unfortunately they were rejected. Even the amendment proposed by Mr. Puri that an appeal shall lie from the order of the board granting the certificate to the debtor to the deputy commissioner, was rejected on the ground that the sahukars will somehow or other try to bribe him to achieve their object. If you have no confidence in the deputy commissioner, how can you have confidence in the members of the board? If the deputy commissioner can be bribed, do you think that the members of the board cannot be bribed? This is a vast subject which cannot be finished even within fifteen days. Briefly speaking, I do realise that what I am submitting is falling on deaf ears but I consider it my duty to voice my feelings on the subject. Of course my observations are bitter, but a bitter pill has always a wholesome effect on malady which increases if sweets are provided to the patient. You have already enacted laws for improving the condition of the debtors. You have quite recently passed the Regulation of Accounts Act. Have these enactments removed the rural indebtedness? If so, to what extent? I do not think that these enactments have done any good to the debtors. This Bill will also do no good to them. I therefore appeal to the zamindar members to show their kshatriya spirit and throw out this Bill. Besides, it is the clear duty of the Government to refrain from being party to the passage of an iniquitous measure like the one now before the House. If to-day they side with the zamindar members in passing this Bill into law, the latter may to-morrow bring in another similar measure which might render the position of Government awkward. For God's sake do not disgrace the fair name of this House. With these words I most strongly condemn this Bill and request the House to reject it.

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

Chaudhri Ram Sarup (North-West Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Punjab): Sir, before I proceed to refute the arguments advanced by the honourable lady member of the House I would like to observe that some years back when the system of holding district tournaments was in vogue, the athletes who stood first, second and third in a race used to get prizes and those who could not win such prizes were made to compete for consolation prizes. Similarly the learned members of the House have already made their mark and we the defeated ones are now trying to run the race. (Laughter). The honourable lady member has been pleased to remark that if this Bill is passed into law the recovery of rural debts will become impossible. So far as I have been able to read and understand the clauses of the Bill I do not find a single clause which really stands in the way of sahukars recovering their debts. On the other hand the clauses which in the opinion of the honourable members opposite, are obnoxious and detrimental to the best interests of the sahukars are likely to go a long way in helping them to realise their debts. Is it not reasonable that a person who is groaning under an unbearable burden involving risk of life should be relieved of some burden in order to enable him to live? (Interruption). The honourable lady member and some other honourable members have made much of the point that under the existing law a defaulting debtor can be arrested and can also be committed to civil jail, but under the provisions of this Bill even these remedies will not be available to creditors. It is true that one can pay up his debts by earning money. But if he is in jail how can he possibly earn money to pay up his debts? (Hear, hear). Whether the debtor is an honest person or he is a dishonest person his commitment to jail will not help the sahukars. In the last session of the Council held in Simla the honourable lady member in her speech was pleased to dwell upon the ruinous effects of polygamy. So far as the Hindu society is concerned I am sure polygamy is being practised by only big sahukars who though already married can well afford to pay up a handsome consideration for taking another girl in marriage. If you enquire into the causes of elopement of such girls you will find that in almost all cases some aged sahukar married a young girl who in the lifetime of her husband or after his death eloped with some Muhammadan and thus brought disgrace to the whole community. I say if these people are not allowed to amass wealth by charging exorbitant rates of interest they will not be able to contract such unnatural marriages.

Lala Bhagat Ram : Is the honourable member speaking to the Bill ?

Chaudhri Ram Sarup : If you want me to close my remarks, I do so after submitting that I strongly support the Bill.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : Sir, the Leader of the House has asked me to speak a few words and I will not refuse his request. I do not wish to dilate on the obnoxious provisions of the Bill, which were discussed in detail when the various clauses were before the House, but I just wish to raise one or two matters which have been passed over by this Council in sheer thoughtlessness. Amendment of section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code was not put before the House by the Government originally and the other day without any discussion it was passed. The effect of the amendment is that houses belonging to members of agricultural tribes, although situated in towns are made exempt from attachment and sale. It is the declared policy of the Government, so far as one has been able to understand it, not to extend the principle of the Land Alienation Act. The principle of the Land Alienation Act is that the agricultural land of a member of an agricultural tribe shall not be attached or sold in execution of a decree. The amendment of section 60 makes their houses also not liable to attachment and sale. That necessarily follows from the omission of the word "occupied by" and its substitution by the words "not let out on hire." This provision also extends to houses of agriculturists which are situated in towns, and the effect of this amendment is that while agricultural land of a member of a statutory agricultural tribe which is situated in the town of Lahore, that is within the municipality of Lahore, is not exempt from attachment and sale, his houses, provided they are not let out on hire, would be exempt from attachment and sale. I submit that this is the effect of the omission of the words "occupied by" which as interpreted by various High Courts were intended to be confined only to cases where the houses were houses used as subservient to agriculture. Once those words "occupied by" are omitted and the words "not let out on hire" are substituted, the effect is to exempt from attachment and sale every house owned by a member of an agricultural tribe which may be situated in any part of the Punjab, provided it is not let out on hire. It is not at all stated as to how long it should not be let out on hire. As soon as the decree is passed the owner can get his house vacated and then at the time of attachment, it will become "not let out on hire." Most of the big zamindars have a number of houses in villages. They have houses and bungalows in tahsil headquarters, in sadar headquarters and houses in Simla and Lahore. These houses are not usually let out on hire. As far as the houses in villages are concerned, the House will bear me out when I assert that there is no letting value of the houses in villages and in fact in some cases kamins have to be procured and induced to come and live in the houses so that the houses may not fall down on account of leak or repairs or for want of proper use. Section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code was enacted for indigent debtors. The effect of this amendment will be to enable rich debtors who own several houses to evade successfully the payment of their just debts, their land being already exempt from attachment and sale under the provisions of the Land Alienation Act. This House has thoughtlessly omitted, I repeat, the words "occupied by" and substituted the words "not let out on rent" in the section, the effect of which is, as I have stated, that the houses of the agriculturist gentlemen in the town of Lahore, provided they are not let out on hire, are also exempted. Without discussing the merits of this amendment, I would submit that it is a serious extension of the principle of the Land Alienation Act and such a clause, in view of the oft declared policy of the Government, should not have been passed. This is again one of those provisions of the Bill, which were not circulated for public opinion. This clause was not sent to the honourable judges and other judges and officers for opinion. Otherwise they would have, I believe, pointed out the serious consequences of the clause to the Government. I wanted to bring this and other matters in connection with this clause to the notice of the House the other day. I had also given notice of deletion of this clause. I was just a bit too late only perhaps a minute. I had my copy of the Civil Procedure Code in my car outside and I had just gone to bring it when you, Sir, put the amendment to the House without discussion. This is one of the proposals which was not in the original Bill, which was not discussed when the Bill was in the select committee and it could not at all be the subject of discussion in the House, when the Bill was referred to the select committee. It is one of the proposals which was put before the select committee also on the last day of its sitting without any previous intimation to other members. Therefore, it could not be considered in detail and it has passed through the House even without any discussion. Such an important proposal should have been explained to the House by the member in charge of the Bill or by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram who is responsible for this clause.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

6 P. M.

Again another matter to which sufficient attention has not been given is the amendment which makes the creditor subject to severe liability for what the debtor has done. If a debtor has passed a promissory note for Rs. 600 and has only received Rs. 500, the person who makes the false document is the debtor. He writes the promissory note for Rs. 600 while he has received only Rs. 500. On whom is the liability now laid? The liability is not laid on the debtor, on the person who has forged the document if it is a forgery, on the person who has made the false document but this House agreed to put the liability on the person who receives the document. The document itself may have been sent to the creditor from another station, say from Lahore to Gujranwala or any other place. If you want to penalise such practices, make it equally bad both for debtor and creditor. The honourable member, Mian Nurullah, who put in an amendment, was prepared to accept that point of view, but it was not acceptable to the leader of his party and, therefore, the matter was dropped. By this one provision alone you are making the system of credit in this province absolutely impossible. Suppose a debtor borrows Rs. 1,000 and passes a promissory note and a suit is brought. The whole suit will be held up by a false plea that the pro-note was executed for smaller consideration than is shown in the pro-note. The debtor runs no risk by proving his own misconduct and if he succeeds, the entire claim of the creditor has to be dismissed. If it is desirable to impose penalties, both the creditor and the debtor should be penalised, but here the penalty is enforced on the creditor alone who is punished for what is principally the offence of the debtor. (Mian Narullah: May I ask the honourable member if he has read my amendment?) I understand that criminal liability is not sought to be placed but the penalty which is imposed is out of all proportion to what is really a delinquency on the part of the debtor himself. The liability is placed on the creditor for the fault of the debtor and it is out of all proportion to the offence of which the creditor may be said to be guilty. It is really the debtor who has passed the document who should be made to suffer, but no penalty is imposed on him.

If the entire Bill is taken into consideration I submit that its effect will be to make it impossible for any creditor to realise his money either from a member of an agriculturist class or from those who do not belong to that class. How does a creditor realise his debt from a debtor who is unwilling to pay? There is only one method, and that is by the attachment of the debtor's property or by attachment of his person. The latter is popularly known as arrest of the judgment debtor and this has been abolished by the present Bill. (Interruption). My learned friend says, not in the case of urban classes. This shows the knowledge of honourable members of the House as to what they have passed by their votes. I will ask him and others to read the Bill. Attachment of the person of a debtor in execution of a civil decree has been abolished altogether in this province for all judgment debts. One of the reasons why a debtor would not refuse to pay his debts when due was that he stood in danger of the attachment of his person. That is now gone. The second method is the attachment of the debtor's property. Property may be movable or immovable. With respect to movables, it is the easiest thing in the world to conceal them from the creditor. A debtor may be possessed of movable property worth thousands. But as soon as you get a decree against him, you will find that beyond a few utensils, a few pieces of furniture, a few wearing apparel there will be hardly anything visible in his house. Movable property as it is the experience of courts—I think the learned Legal Remembrancer will be able to throw some light on the point—is never available for the creditor unless the debtor himself makes it available. It is the fear of arrest that makes him do so. The movable property is, therefore, now not available. With respect to immovable property the law of this province makes it impossible for a creditor to realise it. Let us not consider the case of a person who is governed by custom, but let us consider the case of a Hindu, governed by Hindu law, and residing in the town of Lahore. As soon as the attachment is made, a suit will be filed by his son and possibly his brothers and nephews that the house belongs to a joint Hindu family and it is not liable to attachment or sale in execution of decree against the judgment debtor. That suit cannot be dismissed straightaway simply because the world knows that the house is the debtor's or that it has been so described in the deed. The matter has to be tried like any other matter, summons must be issued, issues framed, evidence led in and ultimately after two years it may be decided that the house is liable to attachment. If it is decided to the contrary, the decree-holder will possibly have to file an appeal which will take another two years, otherwise the judgment debtor will take it to an appellate court and have an injunction issued staying the execution of the decree. As soon as this litigation closes another suit is usually filed by the wife of the debtor, perhaps also by his daughter-in-law and by his mother claiming that the house is not liable to attachment and sale as they have got right of residence and maintenance in the house. That litigation will take another two or four years and when that ends, the debtor has only got to make a gift, let us assume by a registered deed, of his property in favour of his son. That gift cannot be set aside except again by a regular suit. The decree-holder will have to file a suit for a declaration that the transfer, i.e., gift is void on account of its being fraudulent and being intended to defraud creditors. This suit again has to be tried and it takes its own time. These are all collusive suits designed to defeat and delay the decree. Now, what is it that prevents dishonest debtors from not resorting very frequently to these tactics? It is because the courts can say to the debtor: You are playing dodges with your creditor; you are putting up your son, your mother, your daughter-in-law and so on; you have made a gift of all your property in favour of your son or wife. The court will attach your person and will arrest you. And this salutary provision has been abolished in this province. This liability to arrest is ultimately a great sanction for realisation of decrees. When you have abolished this, there is no use of the provisions relating to conciliation boards and the entirely unnecessary provisions relating to insolvency jurisdiction, with entirely useless controversy as to their jurisdiction whether it should be Rs 2,000 or Rs. 1,500. No one knows more than Chaudhri Chhotu Ram that if this clause which was not in the original Bill but which has been smuggled into the present Bill is accepted by the House and the Government, other provisions become of comparatively less importance. If the Punjab Government accept this clause, it would mean that the Punjab Government has decided to abolish all provisions for the realisation of debts. I say, therefore, with a full sense of responsibility that if this provision stands no person in the Punjab will be able to realise his debt from any of his debtors whether agriculturist or non-agriculturist. Another point to which I wish to draw the attention of the House is that agriculturist creditors are under the Bill in a much better position. We have been told and repeatedly, that the agriculturists do not want the present system of credit to continue, and they want the existing facilities for credit abolished. Therefore, some of them boldly assert that they are out to destroy the present method of financing agriculture. That argument is, however, fallacious. Because while you are restricting the credit of agriculturists with one class of creditors, you have done nothing under this Act to restrict their credit with another class of creditors. The Land Alienation Act permits the sale of the land of a member of an agricultural tribe in favour of another member of an agricultural tribe without any restriction. The Land Alienation Act permits the raising of money by an agriculturist debtor by the simple mortgage of his land in favour of another member of an agricultural tribe and in a suit on that mortgage the land can be sold. (Honourable members: No.) Whether it can or cannot be sold, the credit of a member of an agriculturist tribe as far as creditors of agricultural tribes are concerned is not restricted.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

at all. There is no provision in this Bill which even in the slightest degree restricts the credit which he enjoys with the members of the agriculturist classes. Therefore, when you restrict his credit with non-agriculturist, he will be thrown more and more in the clutches of the agriculturist creditor. The effect will be that the agriculturist cannot do without borrowing money and instead of borrowing money without security he will be compelled to take money by selling his land of course at very much cheaper rates. This exploitation of the Punjab peasantry by bigger zamindars like Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and other members of this House is not at all displeasing to Chaudhri Chhotu Ram. Similarly, the agriculturist debtor will be able to mortgage his land, not only in the usufructuary form, the only form permissible under the Land Alienation Act, but on a simple mortgage with a member of an agricultural tribe. The effect of this measure will be the entire extinction of the present system of financing agriculture by non-agriculturists and their substitution by the agriculturist money-lender. This is a very serious matter as it deprives one class of an occupation and profession and gives facilities to the other, without affording any relief to the agriculturist classes. In fact, it makes them put permanently with their assets in land at very low prices. I wish to close my speech by asserting my firm conviction that the system of credit and finance in this province will be entirely destroyed if the provisions of this Bill are given effect to in their entirety.

Mr. E. Mayadas (Non-official, nominated): Sir, I support this Bill. My one regret, however, is that here was an opportunity for the representatives of the agricultural classes and the representatives of the great money-lending classes to cultivate goodwill. This opportunity has been more or less wasted. In fact, I think it might be said that they have drifted away from each other. I would have liked to have seen something more tangible done to the benefit of the small agriculturist. It is true he has been protected from the money-lender, but I think hardly anything has been done to protect him from the agriculturist money-lender. (An honourable member: There is no distinction between money-lender and money-lender here). I think the result will be that small fish will be swallowed by the big fish.

I would have liked to have seen some limit on the big agriculturist acquiring land, I mean that a maximum limit might have been placed on holdings. I regret that no voice has been raised from the side of those who need no protection. That protection need not have been given to them. I am trying to think what will happen fifty years hence or earlier when hardly any small land-holders will be left. What will happen then? There will be a great agitation and a reaction and I fear that the big agriculturists will suffer very much at the hands of the small agriculturists whose lands will have been taken away from them.

I regret that I do not find any suggestion made about teaching people to live within their means and not to resort to the money-lender. (An Honourable member: Bring in a Bill; it will be very effective). I regret that no suggestion has been made whereby the money-lender might have been induced to divert his capital and invest it for cottage industries which would have benefited both the agriculturists and the money-lenders. After having heard all arguments I feel that the best course would have been to have passed a law where interest should cease until conditions improve.

[Mr. E. Mayadas.]

I feel that the money-lenders should have been given an opportunity to set up enquiry committees in each district.

Mr. C. C. Garbett : On a point of order, Sir. Is it in order that we should be addressed on what is not in the Bill?

Mr. President : No.

An Honourable Member : He is supplying material for some future legislation.

Mr. E. Mayadas : The money-lenders might have been given the opportunity to set up enquiry committees in every district to examine complaints of agriculturists, and the agriculturists would have gone and told them how this money-lender or that money-lender was falsifying his account. In the same way the agriculturists may have been given the opportunity to set up enquiry committees in every district to examine the complaints of money-lenders. Money-lenders could have told them that so and so is able to pay, but was evading payment, and under pressure from the money-lenders and the agriculturists these enquiry committees would have done useful work. I can hear an objection being raised and it might be said that we cannot find such impartial men either amongst money-lenders or amongst the agriculturists. If so, how will you find, I ask, the impartial men for the conciliation boards? If impartial men can be found for the conciliation boards, surely they can be found for these committees also. In future we have to live in this land and our paths are bound to cross and when our paths cross, will we meet as friends or will we meet as foes?

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra (Non-official, nominated) (Urdu) : Sir, I shall take only half a minute. This Bill, if passed into law, will irreparably impair the trade of this province. I do not propose to make a speech as I know that the supporters of this Bill are sure that a majority of votes in this House are at their back and so they are not likely to listen to reason. We feel that in their heart of hearts they know everything, but in spite of all this they insist on placing the Bill on the statute book. I shall, therefore, say nothing more but resume my seat with this verse—

سوئے کو تو مشفق ہے سہل جگانا
کون اس کو جگانے جو کوئے مکنس بہانا

(Cheers).

Mr. President : The question is—

That the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill be passed.

The motion was carried.

The Council then adjourned till 2 P. M. on Monday, 17th December 1934.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Monday, 17th December 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 1-15 P. M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

OATH OF OFFICE.

The following members were sworn in :—

Mr. F. H. Puckle (Officer on Special Duty).

Mr. R. Sanderson (Director of Public Instruction).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

HEAD OF Dek NULLAH.

3977. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that a Head is proposed to be constructed somewhere above the town of Zafarwal in the Sialkot district for the storage of water of the Dek Nullah ; if so, whether the proposal to construct this Head has matured and when it is intended to start its construction ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : There is no such proposal before Government.

DILUVIATION OF LAND BY JUMNA RIVER IN KARNAL DISTRICT.

3978. Chaudhri Nathwa Singh : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) how much land has been diluviated by the Jumna from the land of Nagla, Dhansauli, Karar and Barana villages of tahsil Panipat, district Karnal, in each of the last five years ;
- (b) whether Government has considered any scheme of allotting squares of land in compensation to the owners of these villages in canal-irrigated areas ;
- (c) whether Government has ever allotted squares to any person of the Karnal district in similar cases ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : It is regretted that the reply to this question is not yet ready. It will be communicated to the honourable member, when ready.

ALIENATION OF LAND TO NON-AGRICULTURISTS.

3979. Chaudhri Ram Sarup : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

- (a) how much land has been alienated by statutory agriculturists to non-agriculturists by way of sale or gift with the sanction of the Deputy Commissioners under section 3 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act in each of the districts of Ambala division for each of the last five years ;
- (b) the purposes for which the alienations have been made ;
- (c) whether the provisions of Standing Order 1, paragraph 25, have been complied with in each case in sanctioning such alienations ;
- (d) whether all persons having right of pre-emption have been consulted before the granting of such sanctions ;
- (e) the standing instructions of the Government in this respect ;
- (f) whether Government intends to take any measure to protect the agriculturists and the pre-emptors so affected ; if so, what ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) to (d) It is regretted that the information is not readily available and that its collection would involve an expenditure that would not be in the public interest.

(e) The only instructions issued in this regard are those contained in the proviso at the end of paragraph 37 of the Land Administration Manual.

(f) The Financial Commissioner, Revenue, is examining the matter.

FRAUDULENT DEVICES BY MONEY-LENDERS.

✓ 3980. Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : Will the Honourable Finance Member kindly state, after enquiry, if necessary :—

- (a) whether it is a fact that money-lenders in the Rohtak and Karnal districts are resorting to fraudulent device under which one money-lender secures, on the basis of private award or otherwise, a collusive decree against another money-lender, secures an order of attachment in respect of the debts owed to the latter by other debtors and then applies for the execution of this collusive decree against these debtors by means of attachment and sale of their property on the ground that the debts owed by them to the collusive judgment-debtor have been attached ;
- (b) if the answer to (a) is in the affirmative, whether Government considers such a device legal ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that this device has been countenanced by courts, and, if so, in how many cases during the last twelve months ;
- (d) whether, in view of the fact that this device deprives the State of revenue and debtors of any opportunity of contesting the claims of their creditors, Government intends to stop this practice at once ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) No such case has come to the notice of the district officials of either district.

(b) (c) and (d) Do not arise.

SUBORDINATES IN IRRIGATION BRANCH.

3981. Sardar Jawahar Singh Dhillon : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that there are certain subordinates in the Irrigation Branch, who have been serving regularly for a period of fifteen years or more and are still borne on the temporary list ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that those subordinates have, in spite of approved service of such a long period, not yet been confirmed in the permanent cadre ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that freshers from Rasul College have been engaged on permanent posts to the exclusion of the rights of the existing members of the category mentioned in question (a) ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the qualifications then available at Rasul coupled with the experience of such old employees merit for them a treatment equal, if not preferential, to the freshers from the college ;
- (e) whether it is a fact that the discrimination has given rise to insecurity of services among the temporary employees and a means of heart-burning for them ;
- (f) if the answers to (a)—(e) be in the affirmative, whether the Government is prepared to redress the grievances of those old employees by confirming them in the permanent cadre of the department ; if not, what provision Government is prepared to make for them which might give them a reasonable security for employment ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) Freshers from Rasul have been engaged but the claims of temporary men receive full consideration.

(d) No.

(e) Temporary men cannot claim permanent employment as a right but steps have already been taken to ensure that the best of the temporary men are not discharged while permanent posts remain to be filled and to confirm them in permanent rank as soon as opportunity offers.

(f) Does not arise.

COTTON CROP IN VILLAGE SHAHZADA.

3982. Sardar Jawahar Singh Dhillon : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that the village Shazada, tahsil and district Lahore, was visited by tela pest which spoiled the cotton crop ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that scarcity of rain and canal water has, at the same time, affected the cotton crop adversely ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that the yield of the lands mentioned in (a) has greatly deteriorated in quantity ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that the yield has consequently fallen much below the average of the last year ;
- (e) if the answers to (a) to (d) be in the affirmative, whether Government has decided to grant remission in the abiana and land revenue of the lands mentioned in (a) ; if so, to what extent ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) No.

(d) No.

(e) Does not arise.

FISHERIES REVENUE.

3983. Sardar Jawahar Singh Dhillon : Will the Honourable Minister for Agriculture please state—

- (a) the amount of fisheries revenue before the creation of Fisheries Department and the number of districts from which it was realized ;
- (b) the increase in fisheries revenue from the districts under lease since 1912 ;
- (c) the increase in fisheries revenue in the districts under licenses since the inception of License Rules ;
- (d) whether fish have increased or decreased in the rivers since the creation of Fisheries Department, giving reasons thereof ;
- (e) what steps are taken to increase the number of fish ; if none, what is the justification of the present Fisheries staff ;
- (f) whether the present Fisheries staff possess enough qualifications to carry on scientific work which the Department is supposed to do ; if not, what steps are being taken to improve the existing conditions ;
- (g) whether it is a fact that soon after the retirement of Mr. Donald, late Warden of Fisheries, Punjab, increments of more than half of the out-door staff were withheld ?

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) The Fisheries Department came into existence in 1912. The Fisheries revenue derived from the 14 districts in 1911-12 was Rs. 9,250.

(b) The increase in Fisheries revenue from the eight districts under lease, i.e., in which individual licenses are not issued, was Rs. 16,354 during the year 1933-34.

(c) In the year 1933-34 there were 17 districts in which fishing licenses rules were in force and the revenue from these districts during that period was Rs. 22,547. The increase in revenue since the inception of the Licensing Rules was Rs. 14,948.

(d) No statistics are available to show whether the fish have increased or decreased.

(e) The following steps are taken to increase the number of fish :—

(i) Conservation of the stock in the rivers and streams by prohibiting the use of uneconomic methods of fishing.

(ii) Protection of fry, young fish, etc., in the natural spawning grounds.

(iii) Enforcement of a close season during the time of spawning.

(iv) Stocking of streams in Kangra, Kulu, and other hill tracts with trout.

(v) Construction of fish ladders at the weirs at Canal Headworks to enable the migratory species to reach their natural spawning grounds for breeding.

(vi) Observations are being made on the breeding habits of important indigenous species of carp at the Chhenawan Experimental tanks; and their life history is being worked out by the Fisheries Research Officer.

(f) The outdoor Fisheries staff are not required to do scientific research work.

(g) No.

USE OF MOTOR LORRIES BY POLICE OFFICIALS.

3984. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether Government is aware of the fact that the Sub-Inspectors of Police and their subordinate staff stationed at thanas Narowal and Zafarwal, in the Sialkot district, make use of motor lorries plying there for hire for official and especially private purpose and make no payment of hire due from them;

(b) if the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, what steps Government proposes to take to make the above police officials pay for the use of motor lorries and to save the public from the inconvenience caused to them by over-loading?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) No complaints to this effect have reached Government or the district officers.

(b) Does not arise.

IRREGULARITIES BY DRIVERS OF MOTOR LORRIES.

3985. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that many irregularities in respect of over-loading, etc., are committed by the drivers of motor lorries plying for hire in the Punjab ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Yes. I regret that the world is not yet perfect in this as in many other respects. There has, however, been *considerable improvement in the past 2 or 3 years.

IRREGULARITIES BY DRIVERS OF MOTOR LORRIES IN SILAKOT DISTRICT.

3986. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : With reference to the answer to part (d) of question No. 3933¹, asked on the 16th November 1934, will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state whether the officers in charge of the police thanas at Zafarwal and Narowal (district Sialkot) have made any permanent arrangements to put a police constable or head constable on duty to tour on the Narowal-Zafarwal and Zafarwal-Sialkot roads as also at the lorry addas of these towns to check the irregularities of over-loading, etc. ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : A head constable or a constable is regularly deputed to check lorry traffic on these roads.

SYPHILIS AND GONORRHOEA.

3987. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state —

- (a) how many patients of syphilis and gonorrhoea visited the Mayo Hospital, Lahore, last year ;
- (b) whether the attention of the Government has been drawn to the fact that these diseases are increasing every day ;
- (c) whether Government has been pleased to enquire into the causes of the increase of these diseases ;
- (d) whether the attention of Government has been drawn to an article on the subject published in the Insaf of Ambala, dated the 26th November, 1934, on page 8 ;
- (e) whether there is any law at present to compel prostitutes to get themselves medically examined ;
- (f) if so, what ;
- (g) if not, whether Government intends to make any legislation in this matter ;
- (h) what steps Government intends to take to protect the public from these diseases ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) 1,671 cases of syphilis and 1,404 cases of gonorrhoea were treated in the Mayo Hospital, Lahore, during the last year.

(b). No.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) No.

(e) No.

(f) Does not arise.

(g) and (h) The problem is not a new one, nor is its seriousness known to be on the increase, but the Government will be glad to consider any suggestion.

TAHSILDARS AND NAIB-TAHSILDARS BELONGING TO SIMLA DISTRICT.

3988. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state—

(a) how many tahsildars and naib-tahsildars there are in the Punjab belonging to Simla district ;

(b) how many of them are statutory agriculturists ;

(c) how many of those referred to in (a) or (b) belong to Kot Khai and Simla tahsils ;

(d) whether Government intends to consider the claims of deserving candidates of Simla tahsils in the next recruitment to these cadres ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) and (b) Four ; all statutory agriculturists.

(c) Two belong to the Kot Khai tahsil and two to the Simla Hill States.

(d) No special action is deemed to be necessary.

TAHSILDAR CANDIDATES FROM HINDU RAJPUTS OF AMBALA DIVISION.

3989. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state —

(a) how many Hindu Rajputs of Ambala division there are in the service of the Punjab Government as tahsildars and naib-tahsildars ;

(b) how many tahsildar candidates have been accepted directly from the Hindu Rajputs of Ambala division in the last 10 years ;

(c) what steps Government intends to take to encourage this backward community in respect of employment in the above mentioned cadres ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Five.

(b) One.

(c) The attention of the honourable member is drawn to the reply given to part (a) of Council question No. 84471.

SIKHS AND "EDUCATIONAL GAZETTE," JULLUNDUR.

3990. Sardar Sahib Sardar Gurbachan Singh : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state —

- (a) whether an article published in the Educational Gazette, Jullundur City, in its issue of November 1934, under the heading "Zila Jullundur ki Tarikh" by F. M. Aziz of Islamia College, Lahore, has been brought to his notice;
- (b) whether he is aware that this article has seriously wounded the feelings of the Sikh community and has insulted the religious belief of the Sikhs;
- (c) whether it is a fact that a deputation of the Sikhs of Jullundur district waited upon the Deputy Commissioner, Jullundur, to request him to take action against the author, publisher and editor and others concerned with it;
- (d) what action the Government has taken or proposes to take in this matter?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a), (b) and (c) Yes.

(d) The printer-publisher has tendered an unqualified apology which has received sufficient publicity in newspapers.

BOTANY DEPARTMENT, GOVERNMENT COLLEGE, LAHORE.

3991. Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Will the Honourable Minister for Education be pleased to state —

- (a) whether it is a fact that at present there is no Muslim on the teaching staff of any of the departments of the different sciences in the Government College, Lahore;
- (b) whether Muslims with fine records in the Government College, Lahore, and the University of the Punjab, possessing Doctor's degree in Botany from British Universities and teaching experience also—qualifications actually unbeatable—are available and are candidates for any vacancy that may occur in the Government College, Lahore;
- (c) If the answers to (a) and (b) above are in the affirmative, whether Government will consider the case of Muslims in filling any vacancy that occurs in the Government College, Lahore, in consequence of the death of late Rai Bahadur Dr. Shiv Ram Kashyap, Professor of Botany, Government College, Lahore?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c) The claims and applications of all candidates will be duly considered.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, LUDHIANA.

3992. Chaudhri Riasat Ali : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly :

(i) lay on the table the following —

(a) letter No. 8211, dated the 3rd November 1934, from the Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana, to the Executive Officer, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana ;

(b) letter No. 8869, dated the 13th November 1934 from the Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana, to the Executive Officer, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana ;

(c) letter No. 661/E.-D., dated the 22nd November 1934, from the Executive Officer, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana, to the Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana ;

(ii) state whether the permit given to the said nominated member by these letters was according to the rules and how many permits have been issued since this permit was bestowed ; if none, why not ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (i) (a), (b) and (c) Copies of the letters are laid on the table.

(ii) The permit given to the appointed member was found to be illegal. No such permits were therefore issued afterwards.

Copy of a letter No. 8211, dated 3rd of November 1934, from the Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana, to the Executive Officer, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana.

I have the honour to request you please to submit by an early date, the municipal office file relating to the building application of Khan Sahib Dr. Nur Muhammad, Ludhiana, for the grant of permission to construct a projection in front of his shop in Chaura Bazar near the Tahsil.

Copy of a letter No. 8869, dated 13th of November 1934, from the Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana, to the Executive Officer, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana.

SUBJECT :—Building application of Khan Sahib Dr. Nur Muhammad for the grant of permission to construct a projection in front of his shops in Chaura Bazar, Ludhiana.

I have the honour to return herewith the municipal office file received with your letter No. 624/E. D., dated the 9th of November 1934, and to ask you please to explain the circumstances under which you did not accord sanction in this particular case, when you were competent to do so under the Executive Officer Act without a reference to the Committee.

I also ask you please to give the requisite sanction, if you see no objection to it, in view of your own opinion and the reports of the Municipal Medical Officer of Health and the Electricity Department.

Please treat this as urgent.

[The Hon'ble Dr. Gokul Chand Narang.]

Copy of a letter No. 661-E. D., dated 22nd November 1934, from the Executive Officer, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana, to the Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana.

SUBJECT:—Building application of Khan Sahib Dr. Nur Muhammad for the grant of permission to construct a projection in front of his shops in Chaura Bazar, Ludhiana.

With reference to your letter No. 8369, dated 13th November 1934, I have the honour to state that as ordered I have issued the permit in this case, and am laying it before the Committee for formal approval.

My interpretation of clause 12 of schedule 2nd of the Executive Officer Act is that permission for a projection without first obtaining the approval of the Committee cannot be granted. However, if after perusal of proviso to clause 12 of Schedule 2nd of the Executive Officer Act, you are of opinion that I am competent to accord sanction without the approval of the Committee, I will act according to your decision.

This is not the particular case that has been sent to the Committee for approval but all such cases are first laid before the Committee for approval and then permits are issued.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, LUDHIANA.

3993. Chaudhri Riasat Ali : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government kindly :

(a) lay on the table the following :—

- (i) complaint of Khawaja Muhammad Akram, Municipal Commissioner, addressed to the Executive Officer, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana, dated 27th November 1934, against Dr. Noor Muhammad, nominated Municipal Commissioner, Ludhiana Municipal Committee, regarding the violation of laws and letter, dated 28th November 1934, regarding the above complaint from Khawaja Muhammad Akram to the Deputy Commissioner, Ludhiana ;
- (ii) report of the Overseer, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana, dated 27th November 1934 on the above-mentioned complaint ;
- (iii) action taken by the Executive Officer, Municipal Committee, Ludhiana, on the report of the Overseer, dated 27th November 1934 ;

(b) state whether he is prepared to take any action against this member ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The necessary information is being obtained from the local officers and will be supplied when ready.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

COTTON ON THE DIPALPUR INUNDATION AND SUTLEJ VALLEY PROJECT CANALS.

1056. Khan Sahib Mian Noor Ahmad Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state —

- (a) whether he is aware that the principal crop for kharif harvest, 1934, viz., cotton, has been seriously damaged on the Dipalpur Inundation Canals and Sutlej Valley Project Canals, irrigating the Montgomery district, due to shortage of water, at critical times ;

(b) whether he is aware that the zamindars of the villages in (a) have made representations for remission of Government dues to the Deputy Commissioner, Montgomery ;

(c) if the answers to (a) and (b) are in the affirmative, what action the Government intends to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan :

(a) No.

(b) Yes.

(c) Does not arise.

REVISION OF RECORD OF RIGHTS OF SANGNAI ESTATE.

1057. Thakur Pancham Chand : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state —

(a) whether it is a fact that in 1932 Government issued a notification directing a special revision of the existing record of rights of Sangnai estate in the Una tahsil of the Hoshiarpur district ; and, if so, what were the reasons for directing the special revision ;

(b) whether it is a fact that the notification directing the special revision was subsequently cancelled by Government, and, if so, what were the reasons for the abandonment of the special revision ;

(c) if the special revision was directed on account of serious inaccuracies in the existing record of rights how those inaccuracies are now intended to be removed ;

(d) what compensation will be paid by Government to the persons who have been undergoing great monetary losses due to these inaccuracies ;

(e) whether it is a fact that at one time the local officers intended to remove the inaccuracies by consolidation of holdings of the village, and, if so, why the work of consolidation of holdings has not so far been taken in hand ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Yes ; the notification was issued because several discrepancies were discovered in the measurements recorded at the current settlement, 1914-15, as compared with the shajra kistwar of the previous settlement of 1868-69.

(b) The notification was subsequently cancelled because the actual measurement on the spot revealed that the shajra of the present settlement is definitely more accurate than that of 1868-69.

(c) Government are now satisfied that there are no serious inaccuracies in the existing record of rights and that no further action is needed.

(d) Does not arise.

(e) Yes ; the consolidation of holdings in the village was dropped partly because some of the proprietors did not give their consent to the consolidation and partly because others failed to deposit the advance required towards its cost.

SITTINGS OF THE COUNCIL.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan (Revenue Member) : I believe that the House will take two full days in the discussion of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. After that, we can meet on the 20th. If it will suit the House we can discuss the Franchise Committee's Report on the 20th and also take up the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Bill which has been returned by His Excellency the Governor for reconsideration on the same day unless you decide to sit on the 19th.

Mr. President : I am in the hands of honourable members. If they wish to sit on the 19th, I shall respect their wishes.

JOINT PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq (Hoshiarpur-cum-Ludhiana, Muhammadan, Rural) : I move—

That in the opinion of this Council the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee does not satisfy the aspirations of Indians and should be rejected.

(Urdu) : Sir, the report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee now before the House is most disappointing and retrograde. As a matter of fact we know that almost all sections of the people have disapproved of it. Of course there are some of our countrymen who for certain reasons of their own have remained content with calling it an unsatisfactory report. But even a report which is unsatisfactory cannot be acceptable to the country. There are some others who consider that since the inauguration of reforms now in vogue, the country has made some progress and that it will therefore be worth while to give a fair trial to the scheme embodied in the Report. That is a wrong view of things. The all-important question now before the public as also before us is to see whether the British Government have fulfilled their promises held out to this country from time to time ever since the announcement of 1917. If these promises have been fulfilled one can say with some show of reason that this Report may be accepted with all its inherent defects. You are aware that in 1917 an announcement was made to the effect that India shall be granted responsible government in due course of time. The words "responsible government" were interpreted in two ways. There were people who thought that "responsible government" meant "dominion status" while there were others who held that "responsible government" did not mean dominion status. Consequently Sir Malcolm Hailey with a view to setting at rest the doubts of the public on the point explained in the Legislative Assembly that the words "responsible government" did not stand for dominion status. This led to a strong agitation throughout the length and breadth of the country. Those who already believed that so far as India was concerned British Government used to promise much and do little, were once again confirmed in their belief. But those who happened to be credulous were satisfied with the words "responsible government" even though there remained no doubt as to the real meaning of these words. It was then that the Congress raised a strong voice and vehemently urged upon the British Government the advisability of granting dominion status to India. Following the lead thus given by the Congress, the members of the various parties of the Legislative Assembly asked the Government to specify something as the ultimate political goal of India and for that purpose to hold a round table conference. This was the first time when the British Government yielded before India's demand. On the 9th July 1931 the Prime Minister declared in Parliament that India's ultimate goal was not responsible government but dominion status. Thereupon Lord Irwin announced on the 9th August 1931 that the interpretation put upon the words "responsible government" by Sir Malcolm Hailey was wrong. Sir, this is not an unimportant matter. It is rather a matter of great consequence. We should not say that whatever is being given should be readily accepted by us. We have been making great sacrifices for the cause of the country ever since 1917, and we should not make any efforts to undo the effect of these sacrifices. It was due to these sacrifices that the British Government was compelled to send the Simon Commission out to India which met with a strong opposition at our hands and which ultimately led the British Government to hold a round table conference. Similarly you may care a fig for our opposition to this Report at present but a time may come when you will realise the force of our remarks.

Now I come to the Report itself. No responsible class of people, not even any sensible individual will ever consider the form of central government provided in this Report to be a responsible one. Under the proposed constitution when you will have absolutely no control over the army, in fact no hand in the administration of the country, how can you call this form of government to be a responsible one? We cannot be satisfied with this Report because no opportunity is provided for us for shouldering big governmental responsibilities nor any promise is made as to the shifting of these responsibilities on to our shoulders on some future date. How can you expect us to welcome a report according to which India will not be in a position to establish and maintain independent political and commercial relations with foreign countries? With regard to the internal administration of the country I would submit that there are various objectionable features in this Report, as for instance, Indian States have been given adequate representation in the central legislature but our ministers will have no power to interfere in the internal affairs of these States. It has also been urged more than once in the House that Indian trade and industry have been ruined and that Government should take steps to revive them. The authorities in India have pointed out to the Home Government that the latter need not discourage Indian trade and industry. But inspite of that a keen rivalry exists between the British and Indian commerce on account of which the British Government have taken a very hasty step to protect the British commerce. Under these conditions you cannot ensure the financial stability of India. In fact, this Report is a document ensuring British political and commercial supremacy. Even provinces have not fared better. There are people who look very much pleased with the idea of provincial autonomy. There is of course one redeeming feature of this Report so far as the provinces are concerned and that is that there will be no official block in the provincial legislature. This is all that can be said in its favour. Much has also been said about the ministers' responsibility which in actual practice would surely prove a mere sham. How can one be expected to control an unruly horse the reins of which are in the hands of another person? How can the poor minister effectively keep control over the I. C. S. officers who are placed under the direct control of the Governor or the Secretary of

[Ch. Afzal Haq.]

State for India. The minister's position will be worse than it has been hitherto. Supposing a friend of a minister in charge of law and order is arrested for being a member of a terrorist party. The minister may be interested to know the nature of the offence his friend has committed. He will probably ask the Inspector-General of Police to state the nature of the offence on which the arrest of his friend has been ordered. The Inspector-General will not be prepared to do that.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : That is wrong.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : The minister will ask the Inspector-General of Police as to why his friend has been arrested.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : That is right.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : If this is right, why is the other statement wrong? I am submitting that the position of ministers will be still worse. There is some sense of responsibility in these days but under the proposed constitution a time will come when even this much responsibility which exists at present will not be found. The minister concerned will approach the Inspector-General of Police with folded hands to know something about the arrest of his friend who may be a member of the Council (laughter). Supposing the minister in charge of the Police Department is pressed, on reasonable grounds, that the punitive police system, which is very old and which does not conform to the present conditions, should be changed for the better and the minister concerned agrees to introduce the necessary change, I ask, will he be able to respect the wishes of the representatives of the people and act according to his own convictions? No, he will not be able to do so. His Excellency the Governor will at once ring him up and say that he has no such power to make such promises or to give such an undertaking to the legislature. The poor man will have to bow before the Governor and will have to disregard the wishes of the people. If these so-called responsible ministers will not be able to introduce a small change in the police rules, it will be travesty of facts to call them responsible ministers.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The honourable member is exaggerating facts.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : I should like to know what then will be their position. Supposing further that a minister wants to punish an I. C. S. officer under him or wishes to transfer him for some fault of his, will he be able to act independently? The reply is that he will not be able to do so. Such officers have gone wrong in the past and they will go wrong in the future too. You will remember that a deputy commissioner behaved in a very objectionable manner towards an honourable member of this House somewhere in 1927 and that a vote of censure was unanimously passed against him by this House. You will also remember that the then Finance Member was pleased to assure the House that instructions would be issued to all officers to behave properly and courteously towards the honourable members. I am prepared to admit that according to that assurance the instructions might have been issued. I also know it for a fact that the officer in question was reprimanded and transferred to some other place. But my fear is that under the proposed constitution our ministers will not be able to do even this, however much they may desire to do so. If an officer is guilty of such an offence in future, and it is very likely that such offences will be repeated, our ministers will not be able to punish the offenders. If this is so, no one can say that our ministers are going to get more powers. It will be certainly far wrong to call them responsible ministers.

Now I come to the forming of cabinets under the new constitution. It has been said or at any rate efforts have been made to make us believe that the legislatures will have full independence in this matter of forming cabinets. But from what I have read in the Report of the Joint Select Committee I find that even in this matter the Governor will have the final authority. The legislatures will look to the Governor for his decision in this matter also.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I have not been able to follow what the honourable member has said. Will he kindly explain his meaning?

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : There are some things which are certainly difficult to understand. However to make myself more clear I will say that in case the Unionist Party is in a majority in this Council or in the Council under the new constitution and it chooses to form a cabinet of men of its own choice. I ask, will the Governor agree to that choice and will he give his blessings to that cabinet? No, this will not be the case. He will certainly say that he must have some regard for the wishes of the National Reforms Party. He must seek their consent also in this matter and if this is to be so, how can you say that the legislature will have complete independence in this matter?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Where is it written? Please do not distort the Report. It is already bad enough and you distort it and make it worse.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The honourable member will please keep to what is in the Report.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Why does not the honourable member quote from the Report?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : The honourable member should not be interrupted by the Government officials. One of them can reply to what he is saying.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : I am sure the Honourable Member has not read the Report. It is after a thorough study of the Report that I have made this remark. If any of the honourable members on the Government benches can satisfy me as to what is meant by 'protection of minorities' and how they are to be protected I shall readily withdraw this objection. I shall in that case accept the resolution to be moved by the Khan Bahadur. But I am convinced that in order to protect the interests of the minorities the Governors are going to interfere in this matter of formation of cabinets. They will surely make it a ground to thwart the wishes of the majority party in the Council.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : This is not necessarily the way or the only way to protect the interests of the minority communities.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : If you happen to be at the helm of affairs at that time, you may see that in the formation of the cabinets the wishes of the majority party in the Council prevail, but I doubt very much that others also will act in that manner.

Then there will be a permanent and unchangeable secretariat representing the Honourable Finance Member and the Honourable the Revenue Member and it will see that anything that the so-called responsible ministers intend to do is brought in time to the notice of the Governors who will in turn stop the ministers from carrying out their intention. This secretariat will act just like the Inspector-General of Police in matters relating to Police and the Criminal Investigation Department. This is another serious defect which I have found in the Report. I cannot, therefore, but say that the Report is not acceptable from any point of view. It is full of so many serious defects which it will not be very easy to remove. In the proposed constitution the ministers will be nothing more than mere advisers and they will not enjoy even the powers that they at present enjoy.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : That is also exaggeration.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : I may also point out that in the proposed constitution the Governors will have the power to make laws and to enforce them even if the Councils are in sessions at the time a law is made. They will not be bound to refer to the Councils or to take their advice before making such laws. If a Council passes a law, the Governors will have the power to see that it is not enforced.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Will you kindly explain how he can do that ?

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : If a Governor wishes that a certain law passed by the Council should not be enforced, he will sleep over it, say, for two years and when the members or the ministers approach him and enquire about the fate of that legislation and where it is locked up, he will evade the enquiry by saying that it has been sent to His Majesty for His assent. These are only delaying tactics no doubt, but they will have the desired effect. Therefore I say that the Governor will not only have the power of making laws independently of the Council, but he will also have the power to prevent a law passed by the Council from coming into force.

Now I ask another very relevant question, and I would like any of the honourable members on the Government benches to answer it. What will be the position of a minister if an I. C. S. Officer who has been working under him for some time and whom the minister does not like as his subordinate is after some time exalted to the position of Governor ? What sort of treatment, do you think, will be meted out to him by that Governor who as a subordinate was not on good terms with the minister ? We can very well guess that the minister will be disgraced at every step.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : Why should the honourable member think that that minister will like to continue as minister ? He will certainly do better to get away from the cabinet.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : I know that that course will be open to him, but I want to say that either the ministers will have to put up with disgrace or they will have to resign from the cabinet. With the change of every Governor the cabinet will change. That is, I think, another serious defect which I wanted to point out. Taking into consideration all these defects I am constrained to say again that the Report is not acceptable. I would, therefore, request the honourable members of the House to pause and consider as to what they are going to accept. They must give their best thought to it and come to the right conclusion. It is clear as daylight that the proposed constitution is not going to benefit the people of this country in any way, and, therefore, it will not be in the interest of the country to accept it. What a result of those unique sacrifices which the country has made to attain its goal and which at one time in 1929 compelled the British Government to declare that responsible government, which meant dominion status, for India was the goal in view! I am really shocked to see this outcome of those sacrifices. I realise that we ourselves are to blame to a certain extent. I know that we kept quiet for a long time believing in the honesty of purpose of the British Government. We were credulous, and we left everything to the British statesmen. But I find now that we were wrong to take up that attitude. Unfortunately for the country there is always one section of the population which is prepared to welcome any step towards advance and even a retrograde step and the British Government is fully aware of this fact. That is why such a Report has been made and our aspirations have been trampled down. It is now our duty to let the British Government know that it was wrong to entertain such a feeling and let us therefore all unite to reject this Report.

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That in the opinion of this Council the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee does not satisfy the aspirations of Indians and should be rejected.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah (Lahore, Muhammadan, Rural (Urdu) : Sir, I beg to move—

That the following be substituted for the original motion :—

Whereas the scheme of constitution outlined in the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee definitely falls short of the pledges given by His Majesty's Government and does not satisfy the Indian aspirations, in the opinion of this House it should be declared inadequate, unsatisfactory and disappointing.

In the agenda that I received from the Council office day before yesterday there were two motions, one standing in the name of a Government Member and the other which has been moved just now by my honourable friend from Hoshiarpur. The first merely wanted to discuss the Report of the Joint Select Committee and the other, as we have seen, wanted us to reject the Report. It at once occurred to me that if the one did not go a long way, the other went much further than it was desirable. I am glad to find that the first motion has not been moved. The other motion, which has been moved and which asks us to reject the Report, is rather vague and at least not intelligible to me. I have listened attentively to every word that the honourable mover had to say in support of his motion and I may say that he has anticipated me in what I had to say. Most of the views that he has given expression to are the views that I wanted to express in connection with this Report. But what I particularly wanted to know from him he has failed to tell me. He has not made it clear how and in what way the Report is to be rejected. Does he mean to say that we are not to enter the Councils that are to come into existence on the basis of the Report, or that we should non-co-operate or offer obstruction to the proposed constitution when it comes into being? Or, does he mean to say that we should exhort people to resort to civil disobedience in case our demands are not accepted? As the honourable member has not made it clear how the Report is to be rejected, we must hesitate to accept the motion moved by him. In the circumstances I thought it best to move my amendment for the consideration of the House. I have used the words inadequate, unsatisfactory and disappointing as these are the very views which have been expressed with regard to the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee by Indians of every shade of opinion. The scheme of constitution as outlined in the Report is inadequate, unsatisfactory and disappointing because it does not fulfil the Indian aspirations and does not appeal to the Indian mind. It does not go a step beyond what we have got at present and, therefore, it must be characterised as very disappointing.

[K. B. Sardar Habib Ullah.]

I must confess that I have not been able to read this Report thoroughly enough to offer a detailed criticism or to point out every defect that is to be found in it. I shall, therefore content myself with saying what is apparent and what can be seen even from a cursory glance at the Report. To begin with I fully endorse the remarks of the honourable member from Hoshiarpur that those pledges which were made by so many British statesmen, by a number of members of Parliament, by the Prime Minister and by the Governors-General in India have not been in the least fulfilled. You will remember that Lord Irwin as Viceroy declared in one of his speeches that dominion status was the goal in view for India. He used these very words in that speech and he went further and said that he had the full authority of the Home Government to make that declaration. It may have been said afterwards that these words meant something different because afterwards some other political considerations prevailed, but it will not be denied that these words were actually used by Lord Irwin in one of his speeches that he made here in India as Governor-General. And in the face of all those pledges and solemn declarations if this Report is presented to us we must naturally feel disappointed. There is another very sad feature about this Report to which I particularly draw the attention of the House. This very inadequate, unsatisfactory and disappointing Report has taken ten long years for its preparation. It is the result of deliberations which extended over a period of ten long years and for which the British Government as well as the Indian Government had to spend so much. Such a report, I dare say, would have been easily and in a very short period prepared by any Indian Civil Service man. All this expense and time has simply been wasted. It is not convincing in any respect. It does not fulfil the Indian aspirations and it does not meet with the demands made by the Indian leaders from the Congress or from the Muslim League or even from Muslim Conference platform. It is not even in conformity with the Joint Memorandum that was submitted by the Indian members of the Round Table Conference who were all nominees of the Government. It is a pity that the Indian aspirations have been cruelly and mercilessly trampled down under foot. I am constrained to say that the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee is goal-less and soul-less. It is goal-less because no promise has been held out that after five years or even ten years the scheme will be revised and further reforms granted according to the changed circumstances. I say it is soul-less because in its preparation the voice of the conscience has been ignored. From the study of the Report you will at once find that federation and responsibility at the centre have been made things of very remote possibility and dependent on so many factors.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : But, why are you in a hurry about this federation ?

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : But we have not got even that provincial autonomy which was definitely promised to us and about which no doubt was ever expressed. I believe the proposed constitution will even be worse than the present constitution with regard to the provinces. I am sure the ministers will themselves say that it is so if, of course, they have not ceased to listen to the voice of their conscience as I am sure they have not. (Honourable members: No, no.). Let them show if they can that the proposed constitution is in any way an improvement on the present constitution. From every word of the Report you will find that our ministers have not been trusted. They have rather been suspected in regard to every matter and that is why so many safeguards have been provided with regard to every department. Take the Police Department for instance. The Inspector-General of Police is to be given powers to refuse to disclose anything that he may desire, to keep secrets even from the minister in charge of the department. When the honourable member for Hoshiarpur referred to this point, his statement was challenged and in order to satisfy the honourable members on the Government benches as to the correctness of that statement I shall with your permission, Sir, read a relevant portion from the Report of the Committee. That portion occurs at page 58 in paragraph 95 of the Report and is as follows :—

For these reasons, it is, in our view essential that the records of any such Intelligence Department should be protected from even the slightest danger of leakage. Experience in every country shows how strict this protection must be. It has been argued that an Indian Minister, who may have to defend subsequently before the Legislature an arrest or prosecution made or begun by his orders, must have the right to satisfy himself that the information on which he is invited to act is in all respects trustworthy, and that the names of the informants or agents from whom it has been obtained could not in the last resort be withheld from him. We think that those who argue thus are not acquainted with the general practice in matters of this kind.

It clearly means that it will be at the option of the Inspector-General of Police to give information or not to the minister in charge of the department. Ministers will not be fools to ask the name of every informant and every agent, but even if they ask for such an information, they will be refused and they will be helpless to enforce their will. Should we not take it then that our ministers will have not even those powers which they at present enjoy? Leave this Police Department alone and take any other department. Take for instance the Industries Department. Will the minister in charge of this department be able to make any development in the department that he would like to make? Will he be able to satisfy the wishes of the representatives of the people in the Council for introducing industrial reform? I challenge the present minister to get up and say that he will be able to do as much as he will be desired by the people to do in regard to this or any other department. The same might be said about the Agriculture Department.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : I can get all the money for the Department of Agriculture.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan : We must cut our coat according to our cloth.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : But even if the money is available the ministers will not be able to do as much as they may desire to do independently of the wishes of the higher authority. I say there is no department in regard to which the ministers have been given unrestricted powers. They have not been trusted. They have rather been suspected of bad intentions. It appears that there is something rotten in the minds of those who are responsible for preparing this Report. This mistrust will not help to work successfully any scheme of reform and constitution. (Interruption). The Honourable Leader of the House has said that all depends upon one's actions. The reforms have been in force for the last 17 or 18 years and during this long period I do not think that there has been any occasion when there was a reluctance on the part of the honourable members of this House or the honourable ministers to co-operate with the Government. During this long interval we have never given any chance to the Government to complain against us that we have been deficient in anything whether in the spirit of co-operation with them or in the performance of our duties as members of this House.

In order to judge the strength of any measure two things are kept in view, first as to who will have power over the finances and secondly, as to whether the control over the army has been given or not. The quotation regarding control over military is a central subject and as such I will not discuss it. As regards the finances I may submit that although this Report says that the minister will be responsible, yet I think they will not be able to discharge their responsibility efficiently, for, the Governors are given very vast powers over them. The Governors are given such absolute powers as are not even enjoyed by dictators like Mussolini and Hitler. Mussolini and Hitler are selected dictators of their countries and their people have granted them those vast powers. But here the position is quite different. Under the new reforms as they are outlined here in this Report Governors will be enjoying the powers of dictators. And it is a pity that we who are the public of this country will have no hand in their appointments. Neither will we select them nor appoint them. I would not have taken up this point, but the idea that these dictators will be thrust upon us forced me to mention it. Who will be our dictators? None else than the members of the I. C. S. who will be promoted to those high positions and given such large powers as to make the ministers helpless. The ministers will be figure heads and will be absolutely in the hands of their secretaries. Whenever there is a difference of opinion between the secretary and a minister the former will be entitled to approach His Excellency the Governor and tell him that he fails to see his way to agree with the minister and, therefore, the Governor should kindly settle the question. In this way the Governor will interfere and decide the matter according to his own sweet will. Not only will the members of the I. C. S. be entitled to approach the Governor but even the members of the P. C. S. may at any time approach the Governor and tell him that they do not agree with the minister. The position of a minister will be that of a man who has no power to do anything. No one would tolerate that any of his subordinates should be given powers to go over his head and get things done according to his own will. I would not tolerate such a thing on the part of any of my servants. Under the reformed constitution such powers are given to the secretaries that the ministers will find it difficult to do work according to their own will. In reality they will not be able to do anything independently. They will not be able to interfere in things in which they may be keenly and sincerely interested. Mr. President, at present in order to bring before the House any Bill you require the permission of the Governor and then after it is discussed and passed by the Council it is again sent to the Governor for his assent. The case of the Relief of Indebtedness Bill is before you. It was moved, discussed, passed and then sent to His Excellency the Governor so that he may accord his assent to it. His Excellency has returned the Bill to the Council with his instructions to further consider some of its provisions. Under the reformed constitution powers like these and others will be given to the Governors to such an extent that provincial autonomy will exist only in name and not in fact. No doubt these powers are necessary to some extent but in no case necessary to the extent to which they are proposed in the Report now before us. All the procedure of this House will be regulated according to the wish of the Governor and the secretaries. The President of the legislature, the leader of the House and the other officers of the Council will have no power so far as the proceedings of this House are concerned. There will not even be any need to make references to May's Parliamentary Practice. There will be no need to follow the practice of the Parliament. The Governor will be there to lay down the rules of procedure for the House. The House will simply follow them.

Again, the Governor will have powers to reject a Bill passed by the Council. He will have also powers to ask the House to stop the discussion of a Bill while it is in the course of its passage. He will also have power to certify a Bill as essential in the interest of law and order even though that Bill may have been rejected by the Council. (An honourable member : What will it amount to ? Perhaps Sikhashahi !) Sikhashahi was not bad. If we have formed some bad associations with it, it is due to some adverse propaganda that was made against it. The coming constitution as suggested in the Report will be something worse and it will not stand any comparison with Sikhashahi. The Sikh Raj was very good. I am an admirer of that Raj. Our future constitution as is outlined in this Report is something which is in its effects much more autocratic than Hitlerism. Governors will have powers to stop the discussion of any Bill at any time. Liberal section of the House of Commons thinks that we have been given so much but those who can see things through know that nothing has been granted to us. The Churchill party is satisfied that Indians have not been granted any privileges in substance. All those who are jubilant over this Report and think India has been given some measure of control over her destinies only prove their shortsightedness. Those members of the House of Commons who seem to be favourably inclined towards India are in reality very anxious to please the Churchill party and in order to win their goodwill they have outlined a reformed constitution for India in this Report which in reality is not a forward step from what we have already got but a retrograde step. They have prepared this Report in order to please the Churchill party. On the basis of this Report they can tell their opponents, "Look here we have not granted anything to India and still you are estranged with us." From my point of view this Report is disappointing and the measure of autonomy granted in it is too insufficient. In order to remove all these defects which are inherent in this Report it is very essential that propaganda and publicity on a very large scale should be carried on against the proposals embodied in the Report, so that it may influence the minds of the Parliament and the Bill in the course of its passage through the House of Commons and the House of Lords may be amended according to the lines suggested by the Indian opinion.

[K. B. Sardar Habib Ullah.]

The Englishmen are mistrustful of the Indians and on account of this mistrust on their part they think that Indian ministers will not co-operate with them and perhaps at some time in the future may act in a way which may be harmful to the interests of England. This mistrust on the part of the English is quite baseless. If self-government is granted to India and our ministers are made responsible I am sure things will run as smoothly as they have been running in the past. Let the past experience of the Councils be a guide to the Englishmen who are opposed to the wishes of the Indians. In the past the Councils and the ministers have together co-operated with the Government and in the future it is hoped, if they are made responsible and the country given a greater measure of self-government, the administration will run smoothly and no question between the interests of India and the interests of England will ever crop up. As regards the remark that in the future governments will be formed and they will work smoothly as they have been formed and working in the past is no argument in favour of this Report. It is no criterion of a good government. In the end I request the Government that they should, through the Government of India, draw the attention of the Secretary of State for India to our dissatisfaction and disappointment with the proposals embodied in this Report, more specially with the proposals regarding the powers of the Governors over the ministers and the legislatures. So long as you will not include in the proposals some element of autonomy the public opinion in this country will remain dissatisfied with the reforms.

Mr. President : Motion moved is—

"Whereas the scheme of constitution outlined in the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee definitely falls short of the pledges given by His Majesty's Government and does not satisfy the Indian aspirations, in the opinion of this House it should be declared inadequate, unsatisfactory and disappointing."

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural) : I rise to support the motion moved by the honourable Sardar Habib Ullah. This Report has been criticised all over the country through the press and a good many platforms and pulpits and in a number of Legislative Councils as well as in the Parliament, and a great deal of criticism, both sound and unsound, has been offered in regard to it. In my opinion the Report is of such valuable importance that it should not be discussed in a light-hearted manner. Both its good points and bad points should be considered. What appears to be wrong with many of its critics who have criticised the Report is that they consider it to be the final word, whereas it is a report to the Parliament and one does not know whether the Parliament will carry out the letter or the spirit of the Report entirely. They will make many changes, so it is proper for us to point out its defects as well as its good points. If we make only a damaging criticism of the Report, it will give a handle to the die-hards of Churchill type who will use the opportunity for injuring the cause of India. Therefore we must consider it most dispassionately. The suggestion that the Report should be light-heartedly rejected is ill-timed. That time will come when the problem will be discussed when it comes in the form of law. It is indeed crying before death: Pesh az marg wawela. So keeping this principle in view I will take up the good points of the Report first and then its bad points.

This Report is a gift by a country which has ruled over our destinies for some two hundred years, and I think it is most magnificent and generous on the part of England to part with the power which it has enjoyed for about two hundred years. It is all right to say that nothing has been given, but just think of the bureaucrat who has ruled single-handed with the power of a Tsar or a Sultan parting with that power at this time. I think that point should be realised. They might very proudly say :

کے قانون سازگان کا دیا ہم نے جگر کو
جو کام کیا ہم نے رسام سے نہ جوا تھا

It is a mere hypocrisy to say that there is no real advance over the previous one. The gift that England is making to India is well-deserved because India stood by England in time of stress and trouble and specially during the War, and when the promise of the gift was made there was no pressure brought on England. It was made when the War was going on and just when it was turning in favour of the allies, and it was made when there was no agitation in India and even the much abused Congress was quiescent. It was made out of England's goodwill for India and as a result of the lessons which England was reading from the War. It was then that a promise to confer responsible government, was made in 1917. This promise was interpreted as one conferring dominion status on India. In 1931 the promise was considered first by Lord Irwin who said that this promise meant nothing less than full dominion status. This promise was re-affirmed by the Premier in England when the first Round Table Conference dispersed. With those promises before us, it is only natural that there should be a great deal of disappointment caused by this Report. We must therefore agitate as much as we can against this Report so that those defects therein may be removed which are a real obstacle to the transfer of power to the people of India.

This Report is a great re-action on the White Paper. It has gone much beyond what is conceded in the White Paper. When the White Paper was discussed in this Council I and a number of other honourable members thought that perhaps the Joint Parliamentary Committee which was then intended to be set up would remove many of the defects and shortcomings in the White Paper. But we are disappointed to see that this Report instead of removing those defects has provided far more safeguards, reservations and special powers. Certainly the Joint Parliamentary Committee has not done justice to India. It should have taken note of the vehement protest raised in India against the White Paper. Evidently it has not done so. On the other hand it has made the Report more stringent and more reactionary, bristling with more safeguards and reservations and more special powers. My honourable friend who moved the motion has enumerated all those drawbacks, and I therefore need not go into them. What is left for me is to show wherein the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee has been made more reactionary and more stringent than the White Paper. In showing these reactionary points, I hope the Parliament will take note of them and remove them while considering the Bill on the subject.

[Ch. Allah Dad Khan.]

The first point is that in the White Paper only three subjects were reserved as being the special province of the Viceroy, namely, defence, finance and foreign relations. Ecclesiastical department was added to these as an adjunct. Of course about the last we have no quarrel. It may be within the special province of the Viceroy as he is best fitted to administer it as a Christian. But in this Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee administration of railways has been taken away from popular control. The railways will come under the control of a statutory Railway Board when the Act comes into force. Though the Act constituting the Railway Board will be an Indian legislation to all intents and purposes it may be said that the Railway Department will be taken away from the control of the Indian minister. Remember that this is not only for a short time but for ever. In this respect the Parliamentary Committee has gone beyond the White Paper. I do not mean to say that they had no right to add to or reduce the recommendations contained in the White Paper, but it would have been very good of them if they had confined themselves to the recommendations in the White Paper. It must have kept in mind that it had to do justice to India besides satisfying the die-hard element in England. Instead of trying to satisfy the legitimate aspirations of the Indian people it has added insult by taking away the Railway Department from the control of the popular minister.

Then comes the reports of the Criminal Investigation Department concerning terrorist movement. These reports are to remain a sealed book. They will never come to the notice of the ministers. My honourable friend, the Leader of the House, said that they were confidential not only in India but also in England. That may be true in practice. But there is no law or rule in England to treat these reports confidential from the ministers. If an occasion arises the minister in England can have a look at them. It may be that generally the ministers in England do not see them. But it is only as a matter of practice and there is no statutory prohibition. Why should you not expect the Indian ministers also to do the same? Indian ministers have been in office for the past fourteen years, ever since the Montford Reforms. Have they done anything during these years that you should now begin to distrust them? If they have not done anything to lose your trust, why should you impose a statutory obligation that the reports of the Criminal Investigation Department should be treated as confidential even from the Indian ministers? You may as well allow a practice to grow up in India by which the ministers will not generally call for such reports. Why should there be different practices in England and in India? (An honourable member: Practices take many years to form.) But we must benefit by the lessons of England. We have introduced English institutions into India and we find them thriving. If that is the case we may naturally expect English practices also to grow up and thrive here. Therefore all these reservations and special powers lead only to one interpretation that England wants to retain its power over this country by any means and for as long a time as possible. Otherwise I do not see why the ministers in India are not trusted with the reports of the Criminal Investigation Department. It is open to the Governor if he finds that any minister has ceased to command his confidence to remove him from office. When the Governor has got so much power I really do not see the purpose of this reservation. Ever since the introduction of Reforms of 1919 there have been ministers in all the provinces of India and we have not had any single case where a minister has ceased to command the confidence of the Governor. Even in Bengal where the terrorist movement is at its highest, we have not heard of any minister there having lost the confidence of the Governor. That proof is enough, if any proof was wanted, to show that Indian ministers can be trusted. Therefore this provision in the Report relating to the reports of the Criminal Investigation Department is only an answer to the clamour raised by Churchill and his die-hard friend in England. The Committee should not have minded these gentlemen. They have a clear majority in the House of Commons and so they need not have been afraid of Churchill and his party. (Interruption.) I may draw the attention of the House to page 12, line 4 of the Report where it is said :

To many Indians it seems to imply a selfish reservation of powers inconsistent with any real sense of responsible government.

That shows that the Committee is conscious and it is only in view of the hue and cry raised in England that these safeguards have been provided. But is this all the reward for the people having stood by England through thick and thin during the great War? Even the Indian National Congress did not raise any obstacle in the way of success to the allies. For this obligation England must be very grateful, nay, not only grateful, but must be very considerate. The Committee should, therefore, have considered the position of our country with 350 million people and not the handful of die-hards in England who raised a huge clamour. I therefore suggest that when Parliament is going to consider the Government of India Bill, it should try to placate the 350 millions of Indians and not the 95 die-hards in England. It is always a good policy to satisfy the majority. Government cannot afford to satisfy the minority in political considerations of this type. The pledges which the British Government has made are very far-reaching and in spite of the safeguards that the White Paper has provided, in spite of the statutory obligations, I say still that England has parted with power for all time to come. They must bid good-bye to autocratic power. Take the case of Ireland. How many powers did you reserve in their case? A great many, the commercial treaties and other things. But were those powers kept intact? No. So, once you begin to give the powers, they are not likely to be stopped. And when you part with them, part with a good heart. Do not spoil the good that is given. There is a proverb in Hindustani which says :

[Ch. Allah Dad Khan.]

اگر بکری نے میٹگنیں ڈال کر دودھ دیا تو کس کام کا

That is, if you give these powers, give them pure, and unadulterated. Say, you have stood by us, you deserve this. But why should you give with one hand and take away with the other? The man to whom you give the power will not like to part with it. The safeguards do not avail very much. You give the whole power in any case once you begin to part with it. I do not say that you should withhold it. Why should you part with your powers with tears in your eyes? You are giving such a generous thing. You are giving India a thing which no other country in the world has given. It is a most magnanimous thing. England is generous enough in this respect. It has taken the lead and as I quoted in the Urdu verse just now, England can say that it has parted with powers voluntarily which it could enjoy, because divided as we are, Hindus killing the Muslims, Muslims grappling with Hindus and so on, it could keep those powers. What I say is, why do you not make that gift still more generous? Why do you keep these things to yourself? This will produce discontent and nothing else. You are bound to give responsible government or dominion status or whatever you call it. Why do you not give it in a generous spirit? Then there are other questions, the questions relating to the control of the Indian Civil Service and the Police. The Joint Committee has gone much worse in this respect. The minister cannot even transfer an officer of these services without the consent of the Governor. Now, what is this? How can he work the department? This is a very funny thing which has been recommended by the Joint Parliamentary Committee. They say English officers up to this time have behaved very well under the Indian ministers and have not raised any obstacle. You have forgotten that the Indian Civil Service has obeyed the ministers so far because they thought they would get absolute powers. They knew that the bugbear of power was coming. But now they have been given an assurance that they would always be free from the control of the minister, you will see the result of that in a few months. I can give you an instance. I am not going to divulge any confidential things. But there may be many confidential cases in which there may be such incidents. In the district of Gujranwala a member of the Indian Civil Service defied a certain gentleman in the Cabinet and he defied at a time when he knew that the next instalment of reforms was coming in 1930. The incident happened in 1926 and he never dreamed then that the reforms were coming so late as 1936. I do not want to rake up old sores. There are many other similar instances. I can point out the instance in which a deputy commissioner was involved. But these are unhappy things and I will not indulge in them. If I have digressed a little it is only to point out to the Joint Parliamentary Committee that they are mistaken and they have no experience of the servants in India, how autocratic and how overbearing and how bullying these officers are. Even the deputy commissioners must know to their cost that many of the younger members of the Indian Civil Service have defied them and there is one man who defied the High Court Judges not once but several times. When I told him that he should have been a Judge of the High Court, he said that it was foolish that the Government had not made him one. An English man who is a Judge of the Court also told me that that member was as good as any other judge. (An honourable member : Did he discuss that with you ?) Yes. Not discussed but disclosed.

Mr. President : Will the honourable member please speak to the motion ?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : There may be some Indian Civil Service men who have behaved very calmly and submissively to the Indian Ministers.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : May I say one word ? So far as the ministers and the services are concerned, there has been the closest possible co-operation between them.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : You are not the only minister. There have been many.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : I was speaking on behalf of all the ministers.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : It is not enough for one minister to say so. And one of the ministers is not present here. It may or may not be correct. But I say human nature is there. When they know that they are absolutely free from the control of the minister and while the minister is in charge of a subject and the Indian Civil Service man is not under him, how can you expect good work to go on ? In the next few years they may say that the Indian ministers are incapable ; they cannot carry on the administration properly. But how can they when you tie them ? You must give them good chance to work. The whole administration depends a good deal upon the Indian Civil Service men, and they will continue to be recruited in the same manner and to the same extent as at present. So, how will you carry on the administration when these people are not under the control of the minister ? I challenge any minister to say that even if he has no control over the Indian Civil Service men still he can carry on the departments smoothly. They may say that the dismissal of an Indian Civil Service man must rest with the Secretary of State because he is the appointing authority at the present time, and in all other respects the Indian Civil Service man as well as the police will be under the authority and control of the Indian ministers. Many an occasion may arise when the minister might have to take action against these men, still a provision like this kept there will have its effect, though these people may turn out as good work as they are doing now. These are my remarks about these services.

Then the Joint Committee have surpassed themselves by recommending that the elections to the central legislature should be indirect. Just think of it. A very funny thing indeed. If a man manages by hook or crook, and you know many a time a member creeps into the Council by dishonest means, who is not fit to be there—

Mr. President : Will the honourable member please withdraw that remark ?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I withdraw that and say by subterfuge, by election tricks. But they are not representatives of the people. Now having come in he will elect the people to the Assembly. As far as the vote of that member is concerned, it is not a vote of the people.

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair and it was occupied by the Deputy President).

Besides, in the future constitution there may be parties in the country. Just now the Congress party has come, and has got many of its members elected to the Assembly, and in future there will be many parties. Those parties which in future will come into the provincial councils will have to elect men to the Assembly from among the council members in the case of indirect election. So how will they be representatives of the people? In no sense are they the representatives of the people. Moreover, this indirect election is not in operation in England. Why are you imposing this bogus representation on the people of India? If you are afraid that otherwise many congress or other people will come in, this new procedure is all the more advantageous to them. They will return their own men to the provinces and then from there to the Assembly. I think that direct election is the safest thing in the world. Let the members be elected by the people directly. There is no half-way house and there is no use of having indirect election and sending men who are not representatives of the people. They must represent the people. Many times questions of life and death are discussed there. If they are not the representatives of the people how can the people be satisfied that their cause is rightly fought by their own men? Then there will be discontent. If you are giving a generous gift to India why should you take shelter behind all these things? Even the die-hard element in England is not satisfied by this device. Why should you make a provision which perhaps is only based on the consideration of convenience? I say convenient or not convenient, you must carry out the sound principles into practice. You must carry out the sound measures and you must not mince matters in this half-hearted manner. The Parliament should not accept this principle, and no provision should be made for indirect elections. Elections should be direct. When you have controlled things by direct methods for such a long period in the past, why can you not do so in the future? Employ more staff, if you need, to conduct these direct elections in which the voter has a chance to vote for the best man. In this respect the Joint Parliamentary Committee has again gone beyond the White Paper, and I think it should be modified by the Parliament.

3 P. M.

Then the other thing is that the White Paper recommended second chambers in 3 or 4 provinces, Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, and one other province, the United Provinces, but now the Joint Parliamentary Committee has added Bombay and Madras to it, and there is one man who is perhaps one of the seven wise men of Greece who has written an article in the Civil and Military Gazette saying that there should be a second chamber in the Punjab. Look at this man's arrogance. He professes to possess political knowledge which even the Punjab Government does not possess. As far as I know the Punjab Government did not recommend the creation of a second chamber for this province. The grounds given for this proposal is that the provinces of the Punjab and North-West Frontier are more criminal than any other province in India, surely not more criminal than Bengal. Besides what has this got to do with the creation of a second chamber? In the second chamber there will be men, he says, who will be turning down the proposals of the lower House. The members of the second chamber, it is said, will be more experienced than those in the lower House. But after the Reforms come into existence people will be more independent and will not be what they are now. People in the new Reforms will go according to the wishes of the Council and not according to the wishes of the Government, and that in spite of the safeguards and reservations. Anyhow whether good or bad, look at the audacity of a Punjabi recommending a second chamber. (An honourable member: Who is he?) There is a gentleman of the name of Professor Gulshan Rai. He seems to understand more politics than perhaps even the Government of the Punjab. He has forgotten that this Council has been in existence in the Punjab for the last 14 years, and it has never given any occasion to the Government for dissatisfaction. It has generally carried out the wishes of the Government. This was probably the fact which induced the Punjab Government not to support the idea of a second chamber. Yet when the Punjabis themselves indulge in a language which might be misconstrued, which might furnish an argument to the reactionaries in British Parliament and probably might give to our friend Mr. Churchill a handle to oppose the grant of reforms, we must express our resentment against the writings of such people. Mr. Churchill will make capital out of it, and will say that there is a political leader writing in the papers in the Punjab such silly things. These should have no weight in the counsels of Parliament when they come to legislate. The Punjab Council has justified by its conduct and by its work for 14 years that it does not stand in need of a second chamber, and it is well that even the Joint Parliamentary Committee has not recommended it for the Punjab. They certainly know more fully the value of such co-operation as we in this Council have rendered. The reactionary provisions which have been recommended by the Joint Parliamentary Committee should not be incorporated in the Act. I do not say that these are the only things which should not be included in the Bill, I say that we must improve the scheme of the White Paper, and this was what I suggested when the White Paper was being discussed in this House, and I again say that the principles included in the White Paper should be liberalized and should be widened rather than narrowed. In Parliament the Government commands a majority and it should not be afraid of any die-hard element. Once the Act is passed, these people will be reconciled. They cannot raise any hue and cry, whereas a widening and liberalising of the scheme outlined in the White Paper will make the people of India more grateful and more contented and more loyal than they are at present. If you want contentment and loyalty and want to remove disaffection against the Government, liberalize the constitution rather than listen to die-hards in England. This will be the wisest act of statesmanship. I would have said a good deal more, but as my friend Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit wishes to say something, I make room for him and resume my seat.

Sardar Sampuran Singh (Lyallpur, Sikh, Rural): Sir, at about the end of the second Round Table Conference there was a rumour afloat that

[Sardar Sampuran Singh.]

His Majesty's Government intended to give autonomy in the provinces, but they did not mean to do much in the way of giving responsible Government at the centre. Several inquiries were made, as a matter of fact the responsible Ministers of the Government in England even inquired from several members of the Round Table Conference as to what they thought if the autonomy of the provinces were given and the question of responsibility at the centre were considered later. If my information is correct, I can say that practically all the delegates at the Round Table Conference said that the autonomous Government will not work in the province unless responsibility is given at the centre as well. But the British Government has found a very clever way of making provincial Governments work the reforms without giving anything at the centre; because the picture which is drawn before us of the Federal Government, it appears to me, may not materialise at least in our lives, in the form in which it is pictured in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. Every day we read speeches from several Rajas and Maharajas in which they definitely declare that they would not like to have any kind of interference in their respective States, but at the same time, we know, that they want members from their States to come to the Federal Assembly and have voice in the governance of British India. His Majesty's Government we know stand committed and cannot very well ask their Highnesses to allow the Federal Government to interfere with their State affairs or they would not allow them to interfere in the affairs of the Government of India. This one point if we consider seriously should assure us that Federal Government, as it is outlined in this Report, is not going to come into existence in this country. Therefore, how I read the situation from this Report is this, that you are going to have autonomy in the provinces as it is outlined in this Report whether you call it autonomy or not, but this is what you are going to get, but so far as responsibility at the centre is concerned it is yet only a pious wish. At the Round Table Conference your representatives, if I may call them so, unanimously declared to the British Government their intention to have nothing in the provinces unless something substantial was given simultaneously at the centre as well; and I think so far as the national aspirations are concerned the position is the same to-day as it was then. Again, so far as giving of responsible Government in the Punjab is concerned I may submit that the whole of this Report is based on the communal decision of the Prime Minister. I intentionally avoid the words "communal award" because as a lawyer I would say that an award is always given by an arbitrator, and I being an eye-witness of the whole affair declare on the floor of this House that the Prime Minister was never given the power to act as an arbitrator. He was only given that power as a last resort not to act as an arbitrator, but to give his decision because otherwise there was no other solution, and that too he was asked to do so as a head of the British Government. So, I would call it a decision or an order or a judgement, if you like it, but it was never meant to be an award, and it is not an award. According to this decision we find that in this province separate quotas are fixed for different communities. Without mentioning any names I may say that one community has a definite quota which constitutes and is bound to constitute a majority in any House which is going to be elected in the Punjab. (The Honourable Revenue Member: Question.) That statement of mine is questioned. I am not going to enter into any argument on this point. But all the same I am sure of my ground, and I will be quite willing to argue the point later on with any gentleman who questions that statement that that is going to be the effect. Undoubtedly this is the fact. The question then is, that one community is going to be a permanent majority in the Council, and that majority is going to be elected by electorates which are separate and not joint, i.e., constituting only of that one community. (The Honourable Minister for Education: Only 49 per cent. by separate electorates. That is not a majority.) I know that. A House composed of a majority of one single community based on separate electorates cannot take us very far in the way of developing self-government in this province. I would not object to having any single community in the majority in any House for if they are in the majority in a province why should they not have a majority of seats in the House? But the question is this that that is not the proper door for entry into the legislature of the province, I mean the separate electorates. Let there be chance for not only people of one community but of all communities combined to have any majority which they want in the House. As long as that opportunity is not given to us, we can never develop responsible government in this province with the help of this constitution outlined in the Report before us. Therefore I say that any reform or any constitution which is based on this communal decision cannot lead us very far. (The Honourable Revenue Member: Who shut that door? Ourselves.) I do not answer that question. Let somebody else answer that.

There can be two kinds of constitutions which would be welcomed by this country, an autonomous constitution or a constitution which contains within it the seeds of autonomy which can develop into a big plant in course of time. I would even be satisfied with the latter, but I do not find even that seed capable of development in the Report before us. For every little step which you would like to take forward you will have to refer to the British Parliament. Every time you wish to effect a change, this constitution will have to be carried back to Great Britain to be reformed, something to be added to or subtracted from it. Even if we had that power of development in regard to the constitution which we are now getting, perhaps there would be some consolation in that. A government can be called independent or autonomous if its executive is independent, if it has control over its finances or if the head of the Government is responsible to the representatives of the people. Neither of these conditions is fulfilled by this Report. The executive is constituted no doubt of elected members of the House, but their powers are very much limited by the special powers given to the Governor. The Governor will have the power to veto any Bill which the legislature may pass. If the legislature is required to pass but does not pass a Bill the Governor is empowered to certify it. In the same way the Governor can override any act done by any of his ministers. This scheme is supposed to be based on the analogy of the constitutional position of the King of Great Britain. Everything emanates from the Crown according to the constitution of England. In the same way everything which is done in the province is supposed to emanate from the Governor, and he will have absolute controlling power. But I maintain that that analogy does not apply to this country. In England the Parliament as it has grown during several centuries has developed the tradition that the leader of the majority party in the

[Sardar Sampuran Singh.]

House of Commons advises the King to accept certain members of that House or the House of Lords to constitute his cabinet, and those ministers together with the leader of the majority party whom they afterwards call the Prime Minister make the Government of the day and the King has to abide by the advice of that ministry. If we apply that analogy to this country it would have no meaning whatsoever because though in theory everything comes from the King, as a matter of fact everything comes from the responsible legislature in England. Here that is not the case. Even the ministers here have to be appointed by the Governor and not by the leader of any majority party in the House. So neither the formation of any cabinet nor any decision of the legislature will go through unless the Governor's good-will goes along with it. Under these circumstances I do not think that there is, in any sense, either so far as the executive or the control of finances is concerned, any responsibility conferred in the provincial government.

There is, however, one bright feature in the whole affair, and that is this, that the attitude of the British politicians has taken a favourable turn. Only some days ago we read in the papers that in a meeting of conservatives a resolution proposed by Mr. Churchill was defeated with a very large majority. That indicates that the mentality in Great Britain has changed. Therefore when we find that in such large meetings where every one cannot be supposed to be in touch with Indian politics, such a resolution is defeated by such a large majority I feel confident that the angle of vision even in that country has changed. Therefore if we still try to press our case with ability, force and unanimity I think perhaps we would not be too late to get the things remedied. As my friend, the honourable member, Sardar Habib Ullah said, only a short while ago, it is not yet too late that we may be able to get something substantial in place of the Report which is before us.

I quite agree with the authors of this Report when they say that dyarchy should go. According to this report dyarchy is really going to disappear but all the power is going to centralise in one person and that is the Governor of the province. With these few words, I support the motion moved by my friend, Sardar Habib Ullah.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan (Revenue Member) : I have listened to the speeches of the previous speakers with great interest. I cannot say that I can congratulate the mover of the first motion either on the wording of his motion or on his speech. Apart from the fact that the major portion of his speech seemed to be either uninformed or else a deliberate distortion of the Joint Select Committee proposals, I do not take an uncharitable view and fancy that the misunderstanding is due to the different interpretation put by him on the various clauses in the Report which is opposed to the general trend of public opinion in the province. Does he realise that the motion which he has put before this House might do an immense amount of damage to the cause of his country? Has he forgotten that there is a section of extremists in England also waiting to grasp at opportunities provided by such loose speaking to strengthen their position with a view to thwart the legitimate claims of India? Is he not aware that in spite of the fact that the present Government in England commands the largest majority which any British Government has commanded during recent years, they are having considerable difficulty over the India Bill and will find it even more difficult to pilot the Bill through the Houses of Parliament, if the die-hards are provided with powder and shot by such ludicrous speeches? It is for this reason that I regret the motion which the honourable member has put before the House, and I hope that honourable members will keep this aspect in mind before them not only when giving expression to their views but also at the voting stage if the various motions are put to vote. The speeches of the other speakers, Sir, have followed more or less the line adopted by the press and the critics outside. I do not for obvious reason include in this category those who are wedded to a policy of unreasoned and unqualified opposition. We all know that they would have in any case rejected the Report in whatever form or shape it may have emerged from the Joint Select Committee. As in the case of the Montford scheme and of the more recent White Paper proposals they had prejudged the issue long ago and had decided to have nothing to do with the report or the subsequent legislation which is to be based on the recommendations of the Joint Select Committee.

Those who subscribe to this point of view will not be content with anything short of independence. It is futile to argue with them over the merits or demerits of the White Paper proposals or the report of the Joint Select Committee. It is equally fruitless to try to point out to them that what they desire is impossible of attainment. What they want can be achieved by physical force alone, and no sane person can have the audacity to assert that that is a practical proposition. But assuming for the sake of argument that it is possible for India to turn out the British from this country, to use the pet phrase of the extremists—"bag and baggage"—by force, what would happen when they have gone? Can any one guarantee or have the temerity to predict that when the Britishers have left this country, peace and prosperity and tranquillity will continue to prevail, and that chaos and anarchy will not re-appear? The past history of the country gives a very clear answer to that question. During the past thousand years or more the two most prominent phases in our history have been internecine warfare or foreign aggression. We have either been fighting among ourselves or else been ruled by outsiders. Any impartial student of history will unhesitatingly say that the brief spell of comparative peace and calm can be attributed only to the personality of benevolent but strong despotic rulers. Let me make myself quite clear. I am not putting forward a plea for despotism, be it foreign or indigenous. My object in citing these facts is merely to enable us to take stock of the situation by comparing it with the past and to visualise the development promised in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report in their true perspective. It is time we divorced our thoughts from mere impracticable idealism and faced facts like practical men.

It would not have been necessary to refer to this aspect of the question at all; but, unfortunately, the attitude adopted by the extreme section of our own countrymen is likely to be mis-construed and made capital of by the extreme section of die-hards in England. It is therefore necessary that we should make it clear beyond doubt that the vast majority of people in this country do not endorse or countenance the views and methods advocated by the extremist minority in this country. It is equally necessary to make it clear to the extremists in England that India views with grave misgiving and mistrust their attempts to thwart its legitimate claims and demands for political advance and strongly resents the obstructionist policy adopted by them. It is our duty to warn them that the tactics adopted by them can have only one effect—that of alienating the sympathy of the moderates and creating bitterness and hostility against Great Britain. If their professions to save India for the Empire are genuine, then let me tell them, with all the emphasis that I can command, that the course they are pursuing is the surest way of defeating the end they have in view. I appeal to them as also to that section of my own countrymen, who stand at the other extreme, to bear in mind and act up to that well known Arabic saying :—

[Hon. Capt. Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan.]

خیر الامور اولها

In moderation lies the path of wisdom and safety.

As I have said, a change in the form of government by physical force must once for all be ruled out as outside practical politics. Even the Congress does not advocate such a course. Indeed, its decision to enter the legislatures and its general trend of policy during the past two months indicates a desire to return to constitutional methods, which is a hopeful augury for the future. The only other practical alternative to my mind is the one which has been pursued hitherto—Chaudhri Afzal Haq : On a point of order, Sir. How long will we hear this thesis on Constitutionism ?

Mr. Deputy President : Is that a point of order ? The honourable member can speak as long as he likes.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : I was saying that the only other alternative to my mind is the one which has been pursued hitherto and which it is proposed to follow in the future, namely, the attainment of self-government by progressive and peaceful evolution. Let us for a moment pause and examine how this method of advance by progressive stages has worked and what it has achieved so far. Since the assumption by the Crown of responsibility for the government of this country, this country has, broadly speaking, passed through four distinct phases. During the second half of the last century and the first few years of the present century we were passing through the educational phase. I would further divide this period, the first half into elementary and secondary educational stage and the latter into higher educational stage which culminated in the post-graduate stage with the advent of the old Imperial Legislative Council. [An honourable member : What has that to do with the Report?] I am just telling you how by gradual steps we have come to the present stage and that we are now going to enter upon a further stage. [An honourable member : There is no question of a further stage or of future steps in this Report]. Please try to understand. This stage, I mean the educational stage, has been naturally a protracted one, but the stages which followed have followed in rapid succession. The next stage dates back from the date of Minto-Morley Reform, and I would describe it as the apprenticeship period. That in turn was followed by the present Montford Reforms, and this can be cited as the junior partnership stage. We are now on the threshold of a further stage during which we are to be entrusted with almost complete control and management of our affairs in the provinces.

This gradual and progressive evolution can be compared to a well run business concern in which apprentices are first trained and then appointed to posts of responsibility. They then become junior partners and eventually in the course of time senior partners. We are about to enter the stage when the senior partner is prepared to hand over complete control of this vast business concern to the junior partner, and to content himself by retaining only a watching interest through a chairman in the person of a Governor. It would be the duty of the chairman to advise and assist, when necessary; his mature experience and knowledge would always be at the disposal of the directorate, that is, the ministers. They later will always be in a position to seek advice or assistance whenever they stand in need of it in the discharge of their onerous and responsible duties. It is in this light that I visualise the new constitution promised in the White Paper proposals as modified by the Joint Select Committee's Report, and it is from this aspect that I ask you to look at the safeguards which have been made the target of intensive adverse criticism during the past few weeks.

Now let us examine the safeguards which indeed are nothing more than constitutional checks which you find in the constitutions of every democratically governed country. In some you find these checks incorporated in the written constitution. In others, like Great Britain, you find them in the unwritten law and conventions on which the political structure of these countries is based. The checks proposed for inclusion in the Indian Constitution in the provincial sphere, broadly speaking, are meant to ensure first, peace and tranquillity in the province without which orderly government would be impossible; secondly, immunity from terrorist activities and the dangers which it entails; and, thirdly, a fair deal to the minorities. In the federal sphere additional checks have been provided for the purpose of securing financial stability for the country as a whole and to avoid commercial discrimination against Great Britain—the senior partner who is going to divest himself of power and to entrust the destinies and management of the affairs of this country to Indians themselves. I have intentionally omitted from the federal list safeguards relating to defence and foreign affairs as the reservations of these subjects during the transitional period has been accepted, generally speaking, by all political schools except a small recalcitrant minority.

A dispassionate view of these checks should convince even the most pessimistic amongst us that their application would be necessary or be possible only if the ministry of the day fails to discharge its responsibilities efficiently and justly. No one will deny that it is, and will continue to be, the duty of the government to see that peace and tranquillity of the province remains undisturbed. It would also be the duty of the future ministers to stamp out terrorism if it raises its head; and it would be no less incumbent on the ministers to watch that the legitimate interests of minorities are not in any way affected or overlooked. It follows therefore that if the cabinet continues to discharge its functions in a responsible and efficient manner—and so far as our province is concerned I have no doubt whatever that they will do so—it would not be necessary for the Governor to interfere or put those checks into operation, indeed it would amount to a constitutional trespass if he does so. But if, unfortunately, for any reason, the ministers fail to discharge their duty honestly and diligently in regard to these matters, or abuse their powers, then surely it is necessary that there should be some sort of check to save the province from the consequences of their inefficiency or inaptitude to govern, which might conceivably take the form of widespread disorders leading to general insecurity and chaos and even bloodshed. So far as the Punjab is concerned, I can confidently prophesy that such a contingency is not likely to arise, and therefore these special powers will remain in abeyance and eventually be relegated to the background as merely of academic interest. But in a constitution provision has to be made for exceptions and every conceivable contingency; it would therefore be unreasonable to condemn this Report on that score.

[Hon. Capt. Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan.]

While I am dealing with the question of safeguards I might profitably quote from the majority Report of the Punjab Reforms Committee an extract which is germane to this subject. I may incidentally remind the House that the members of this committee of which I had the honour and privilege to be the chairman were elected unanimously by this House. It is true that this report was written some six or seven years ago, but the main considerations and the principles on which it was based still hold good. This is what the committee said :—

We visualise the Governor as the constitutional head of the Government in the province under the revised constitution. We, however, consider that it would be necessary for him to have a considerable reserve power which he may be able to utilise in cases of emergency, and to check any violation of the provisions of the constitution. We believe that he will, if at all, require to use these reserve powers on extremely rare occasions; and in time these reserve powers will gradually fall into desuetude for want of occasions for their exercise. * * * We agree with the official members of the Punjab Government that the Governor must have the power, in the last resort, of temporarily taking over the administration in case of a breakdown of the constitutional machinery

Again—

We consider that the safeguards proposed by us will provide adequate protection against any unconstitutional tendencies on the part of the legislature or the Ministers. The powers of veto and interference vested in the Governor in the legislative and the financial fields, furnish further safeguards against any breakdown of the constitutional or legislative machinery. On examination it will be found that those powers are so extensive and complete that they fully cover all the various spheres of administration in the province, and contain adequate provision for safeguarding the interests of the minorities if and when necessary.

I submit that the recommendations of the Joint Select Committee do not go any further than what the representatives of this House themselves recommended. In view of what I have said I trust that I have made it sufficiently clear, that in the first place constitutional checks are a necessary ingredient of every constitution, and, secondly, that they cannot be put into operation so long as the ministers continue to carry on their functions honestly, efficiently and diligently.

Another matter which has aroused a great deal of feeling and criticism is the substitution by the Joint Select Committee of the method of election from the direct to indirect in the case of Central Federal Legislature. This question has been the subject of a great deal of controversy ever since it was raised before the Simon Commission six or seven years ago. A great deal can be said on both sides, and I do not propose to repeat the arguments in support of the recommendations of the Joint Select Committee, because they have been adequately and exhaustively dealt with in the report of the Simon Commission as well as the present Report. But I should like to point out just one fact, and that is that the recommendation of the Joint Select Committee makes it quite clear that this method—, i.e., of indirect election—is going to be an experimental measure only, and that the legislature will have the power to recommend a change if after fair trial it is found that the method has proved unsuccessful. So, there is no danger of its being permanently established if it subsequently proves to be unsatisfactory or unworkable.

I have dealt briefly with the more important points on which the Report of the Joint Select Committee has been criticised. There are several other points of detail on which some of my colleagues on these benches will throw light when they take part in the discussion. But the criticism of the Joint Select Committee's Report is mainly confined to the three important points I have dealt with, viz., safeguards, indirect system of election and reservations in the central sphere.

Before I resume my seat I should like to say one word about the future if I may do so. It is my fixed conviction that when the new constitution comes into force the parties in this province will be based on economic and political basis and will cut across purely communal and religious divisions. But to make sure it would be as well to start preparations from now. (Hear, hear.) Instead of frittering away our energies in making futile attempts to get a modification of the proposed constitution, it would be much more useful if those energies were directed towards creating a better atmosphere and in bridging the gulf between the various communities, and creating a spirit of cordiality and good-will in the province in readiness for the future reforms. My parting advice to my Muslim brethren would be that they must do everything which is possible for them to do to cultivate the good will and confidence of the minority communities in this province. (Hear, hear.) They should try to convince them both by word as well as by deed that the interest of minorities will be safe in their hands. Then must satisfy them, that they will watch and guard the interests of minorities even more jealously than their own. They must not hesitate to give them their legitimate share, and more in order to establish mutual good-will and confidence. My appeal to my Hindu and Sikh brethren is that they should try to put aside feelings of suspicion and distrust and to join hands with their Muslim fellow-countrymen in the service of their province and their country. They should both remember that confidence begets confidence. (Cheers.)

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural): There are two motions before the House, one which asks the House to reject the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report and the other which asks the House to declare that the recommendations are disappointing, unsatisfactory and inadequate. I may at the very outset tell the House that I propose to support whole heartedly the motion moved by Sardar Habib Ullah, that is, the latter motion. I do not think that it is practical politics to reject the report. People who talk about rejection do not know their own minds. If by rejection they mean that they are not going to enter into the legislature which will come into existence as the result of the new reforms, then I can understand the meaning of rejection on their part. But if after entering those legislatures they intend to carry on agitation for greater reform, then the meaning of rejection loses all force. Moreover, it is not in the power of the people of India to reject a report of this kind. They cannot do so. Rejection means certain sanction behind it. That sanction does not exist. Therefore under the circumstances we must very carefully examine the merits and demerits of this Report and intensify our agitation to get a modification of those things which we dislike intensely in this Report. I find that in this Report there are many great and big things which should receive general approval of the people of India. At the same time I am prepared to admit that there are many grave blunders committed which we should get rectified.

[Mr. Nanak Chand, Pandit.]

Before I actually deal with the recommendations I want to place one or two facts before the honourable members of this House so that they may be able to understand why the constitution proposed is a ram-shackle constitution, a constitution which will have to be worked with the greatest possible care. It is a very delicate instrument which will require careful handling on the part of the people who work it. Otherwise I am afraid the constitution is bound to break. These defects in the constitution are due to the various conflicting matters with which the Joint Parliamentary Committee was dealing. First of all there is a great conflict of interests which the Joint Parliamentary Committee had to reconcile somehow or other. Consider first of all the conflict of interests between the British and the Indian. Consider again the conflict of interests between the Hindu and the Muslim, the Anglo-Indian, Christian and men of various castes and classes who claimed special privileges for their own caste or community. Consider again the conflict of interests which had to be reconciled between the British India on the one side and the Princes of India on the other. Inter se between these communities there are other various matters of smaller importance where there is a conflict of interests. That is one very important point which must be borne in mind when we are closely examining the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. Then, Sir, look again at the immensity of the problem.

4 P. M.

For the first time in the history of the world, you have a constitution or the outlines of a constitution which has never been attempted before. You have nine provinces, some of them much bigger than the biggest European States; you have 600 native states from the biggest to the smallest, from the Nizam of Hyderabad to the smallest of princes, some of whom own a few acres only and yet enjoy sovereign rights.

These 600 states and 9 large provinces have to be brought into one constitution. This, I submit, should not be forgotten. This immense task had to be handled by foreigners, people whom we could not possibly claim to be Indians and I should like here to pay my tribute to them that this work was done with scrupulous honesty. Indeed nobody can escape prejudices which are inherent in human nature, which are due to tradition and education. But nobody who knows anything can doubt that Sir Samuel Hoare, Lord Irwin, Mr. Butler and others brought on to their task an impartiality which I find rare amongst men.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the chair.)

I must pay a tribute to Lord Lothian on the floor of this House who alone fought for these voiceless millions and gave them certain rights which would otherwise have been denied to them. My special thanks are due to Mr. Seymour Cox, a labour member, who tried to understand some of the problems and some of the recommendations put forward by me alone. I find some of them accepted and incorporated in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. Therefore, if it is said that the members were not prepared to consider carefully the suggestions placed before them, I must strongly repudiate any such insinuation.

Undoubtedly some of the recommendations have been put in to please the die-hards. The Report has gone back on some of the very good recommendations made in the White Paper. But who is to blame? There was nobody to counteract the agitation carried on in England by the die-hard element which was against any large reform. The most advanced political party, the best organised party in India boycotted the deliberations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee. If they had chosen to send their representatives to this Committee the report would have been written in a different way and the constitution would have been differently framed. This is the experience which I wish to place before the honourable members of this House. Therefore I would submit this word of advice to those people who are the best organised political party in India, that they should try their utmost to see that the defects of this Parliamentary Committee's report are removed and they are not intensified. There is a great danger if there is no political agitation in England in order to improve the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report.

Now, I would very briefly state to the House what I regard as the greatest contribution to the constitution-making of India. First of all I submit this, that the all-India Federation with responsibility at the centre is one of the biggest things promised to India in that Report. Never before had such a recommendation been made by any political party either in India or in England. The Report, therefore, takes precedence and is superior to the Report framed by the Indian National Congress or any other body. It is a much bigger document than the Simon Report because an all-India Federation, though there was a glimmer of it in that report, was not promised us as a practical proposition in the near future. Therefore the promise now of an all-India Federation with all the Indian states included is one of the biggest political contributions to the constructive thought of India, and we must, therefore, see that this idea or this outline should not recede further and further, as I greatly fear it will recede unless there is a proper agitation on constructive lines both here and in England. This constitution has been criticised by certain sections of the Indian public on the ground that autocratic States could not work side by side with democratic British India. There are princes autocratic and despotic who would send their nominees and the good work which would be done by the British Indian representatives would not be permitted to be done by these autocratic and despotic princes. But we must face facts. If there is going to be an all-India constitution, the princes must be brought in the picture, and you cannot possibly by any amount of agitation in British India convert these princes who have enjoyed autocratic powers so long to give up those powers and accept the democratic ideal. My feeling is that by coming into contact with British India the States are bound to have democratic institutions in the near future. The influence created there cannot be limited to the Council chambers, but it must extend to the Indian States and their subjects. That, I think is the greatest political contribution made to the constitution of India by the Joint Parliamentary Committee. The next best thing is that provinces are going to be autonomous, namely, power will pass from official hands entirely into non-official hands. One important fact in this connection must not be missed. These new councils in the provinces are going to be broad based on a very large and extensive franchise. They are not going to be nominated bodies but the members are to be returned to these legislative assemblies of the provinces by a large electorate, five times as much as we have got today. There would be 4 crores of men who would be enjoying the franchise under the new constitution. There would be more than 70 lakhs of ladies who would have franchise under the new proposals. The tremendous impetus that democracy will receive will sweep off the safeguards about which we talk so much. If rightly and properly controlled the electorate will greatly strengthen the desire for freedom and the Governor's powers will have to recede to the background. The only thing needed is that these 4 crores of men would have to be rightly controlled and led. If they are not rightly controlled and led, the future constitution might be disrupted and might be torn assunder by fanatics. This large extension of franchise I consider is of supreme importance to the future of India. Even under the franchise recommended by the Indian National Congress, you cannot possibly organise such a big and large number of men who would exercise their vote, and I ask you to take into consideration this immense, this vast, this large crowd of men who have been living as mere helots and who would now have the right to vote and who will be given the power to determine as to who will rule them in future. These social inequalities about which we hear so much are bound to disappear. A Brahmin will have to seek the vote of a sweeper or the great Pathan or Rajput will have to seek the vote of a Mochi for being returned to the Council. The social inequalities and injustices which are now existing are bound to disappear when the new constitution with that large and extensive franchise comes into existence. We must, therefore, give great credit to the Parliamentary Committee because I know the tremendous agitation that was carried on in England and in India by that die-hard group which wanted to have a very limited franchise. People when they talk of defects should realise that but for the liberal and the very sympathetic treatment accorded to these matters by the members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, this franchise could have easily been cut down and reactionary proposals could have easily been recommended. I therefore say with a full sense of responsibility that this great extension of franchise is a great contribution to the future of India. Then there are the safeguards about which we have been talking so much. I will deal with them later on.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

But there are one or two points which I wish to place before the House as I regard them as the most serious defects in the constitution. First of all, I may say plainly and frankly, and I have said so in England and I say it here, and now, that the Report bears many signs of anti-Hindu prejudice. Take the case of second chambers. The second chambers have been imposed on the big Hindu provinces, except Bengal where British interests predominate. The second chamber is given there also. In Behar and in the United Provinces and in Bombay and Madras, big Hindu provinces, second chambers are going to be imposed, and they are imposed, according to these gentlemen, in the interests of the minorities. (Honourable members : No, no.). That I think is a very great blunder so far as the Hindus are concerned. (Interruption). My friends would like me to quote chapter and verse. I appeared in the witness box, and I was cross-examined. I was put some questions with regard to the second chambers in the Punjab and I want to read out to my friends the questions and the answers to them :—

Pandit Nanak Chand speaks with considerable apprehension of the future of minorities. Does he think that a second chamber in the Punjab, where the communalities might be expected to be somewhat less keen, would afford some protection to minorities? (Pandit Nanak Chand): The question is: On what lines is the second chamber going to be framed? If the second chamber is going to be formed on lines on which the lower chamber is recommended, I am afraid it would be entirely of no use to us—to the minorities.

This was the second question—

Would you accept, Pandit, that as communalities begin to die out they would die out in the more highly qualified assembly—the Second Chamber first?

Answer :—My experience is this, so far as the Punjab Legislative Council is concerned : The more highly educated a person is the larger is his desire for communal domination. I am afraid I can see no time when with these communal electorates there would ever be a growth of harmony or of national spirit. I am not one of those who say, " we are going to be punished and if so let Muhammadans be punished too".

Second chambers are a reactionary measure and a retrograde measure and they should be done away with in those provinces also (hear, hear) (Interruption). I did not want it for the Punjab. But the imposition of second chamber in Hindu provinces is the greatest evidence of anti-Hindu prejudice which is to be found in this Report. The second is that so far as the communal decision is concerned, it is accepted by the Joint Parliamentary Committee. That also I regard as a great proof of anti-Hindu prejudice. I am not saying that any other community is responsible, but this is my honest belief and it is shared by almost every Hindu who lives in this province or outside this province that the communal decision given by His Majesty's Government based upon separate electorates is due to anti-Hindu feelings. First of all you will see that in the centre the Hindus from a position of majority, i.e., 70 per cent. are reduced to a minority of 42 per cent. In Assam, they have been reduced to a minority, in the Provinces of Bengal and the Punjab they do not get even their population basis quota, not to talk of weightage, as given to other minorities. I have regarded these separate electorates with the greatest possible apprehension, and I have got those misapprehensions even now, inspite of the advice given by the Leader of the House, that that advice will remain unheeded, that it would be beyond human power and human ingenuity to control religious firebrands who would be going from place to place during the time of elections, infuriating and inflaming the public mind in order to win support for their candidates. This is a fact which has been noticed in the past and which is bound to be repeated in the future and it was expected that members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, fully conversant with the facts of the case that were placed before them, should have at least in provinces where the Hindus are in a minority accepted their desire for joint electorates instead of separate electorates. This has not been done. I know of a certain stage in the deliberations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee when the view was taken by some of the most influential members that so far as Bengal and the Punjab was concerned the decision required modification. But unfortunately that recommendation or that desire on the part of honourable members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee was not accepted by the Government of India and instructions seem to have gone forth from this place that they shall accept no responsibility if there is the slightest modification of the communal decision given by His Majesty's Government. Such a man as Lord Salisbury definitely stated on the floor of the House of Lords that the Hindus were most unjustly treated, Colonel Wedgwood speaking from the other extreme supported the same view and there is not the least doubt that the decision given by His Majesty's Government would not appeal to even the most liberal-minded Hindu. It is clear that this decision has been given only to punish the Hindus.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

My apprehension is that this constitution which contains many good things will be disrupted and destroyed by that poison which is contained in this recommendation. When I blame these gentlemen who have drafted this Report, I cannot help blaming ourselves also. Indeed nobody can expect that, when Sir Sikander Hyat, Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, Sardar Buta Singh and Pandit Nanak Chand cannot agree, the statesmen of Great Britain would be ready to meet our wishes. It is a great pity and a great shame that we have not been able to find or evolve a scheme for the protection of minorities or give proper representation to all people without resorting to a destructive formula as contained in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. Indeed there are signs and there are hopes that if another effort is made and the people come together, the British Parliament is bound to accept that formula which will be acceptable to us. At this time, therefore, there is this appeal which I hope my friends will seriously consider that they should not leave any effort untried to evolve a common formula for the protection of minorities. That is the second proof that this Report bears an anti-Hindu prejudice. In fact this was stated on the floor of the House of Lords and also in the House of Commons by the Honourable Lords and Members of the Committee who made statements in their speeches. It is even now up to the Government to make recommendations that the grave injustice contained in the communal decision should be rectified. If there are minorities in this country, they are not confined to Europeans, Muhammadans, Anglo-Indians and the Christians, there are Hindus and Sikhs as well. No formula should have been evolved which could not have been applied to all communities equally. If my words could be read by the members of the House of Commons they should be read by them carefully that this is our earnest appeal that whatever the formula it should be a common one and it should be a fair one equally applicable to all communities. The Hindus should not be singled out for punishment because some of them have been too patriotic, because they were in the vanguard of the political movement, because their sons and daughters undertook to fight for India's freedom and liberation for which sympathy is felt all over the world and even in England. It would be a very mean act to do if England were to teach Hindus a lesson by giving them second chambers by giving them communal formulas and decisions which will not stand the test of examination even for one minute. You must remember that all Hindus are not terrorists and are not out to murder. It would be a shame if every-one of them were to be punished. That I say is one of the greatest defects of this constitution and, I am reminded that the honourable members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee point out to us that constitution in England has succeeded because there were four things which contributed to the success of their constitution. They should attempt that these four things are also reproduced in India. At page 11 of their Report they say—

Parliamentary government, as it is understood in the United Kingdom, works by the interaction of four essential factors: the principle of majority rule, the willingness of the minority for the time being to accept the decisions of the majority; the existence of great political parties divided by broad issues of policy, rather than by sectional interests; and finally the existence of a mobile body of political opinion owing no permanent allegiance to any party and therefore able, by its instinctive reaction against extravagant movements on one side or the others to keep the vessel on an even keel.

These things cannot be reproduced in India with communal electorates. The blame should not be placed on the shoulders of Indians if after 10 or 12 years they are not able to work the constitution successfully because they lack in capacity for working democratic institutions. In order to create these four things which are necessary for Parliamentary Government not only in Great Britain but also in India, it is essential that this question of minority protection should be settled and there should be a modification of communal electorates.

Now I want to say a few words with regard to safeguards about which a great deal has been said. As I have already submitted, most of the safeguards which have been put in by the Joint Parliamentary Committee were not contained in the White Paper, but due to the fact that there was an intensive propaganda in England by die-hards and there was no propaganda as against that die-hard agitation the result has been that the Government felt itself unsafe, it could not produce evidence to say that Indians are dissatisfied with these safeguards and if the die-hard recommendations were accepted the Bill will not be acceptable to Indians. It was therefore a very grave situation which the Secretary of State had to face. These safeguards had to be made real and effective and it was no use having ineffective safeguards. In spite of the great courage which Sir Samuel Hoare showed on these occasions, the Committee had to yield to the agitation carried on by Mr. Churchill and his party and if the Bill had to go through the House of Commons without that support which should have been given to it, what could the Secretary of State or the Government do but accept those suggestions made on the other side? Surely we cannot blame them for our faults, i.e. for not having carried on a counter propaganda both in England and in India against these safeguards. The cry of the Indians that England must be turned out of India strengthened the hands of those die-hards in England. If this was to be the fate of the British in India under the new constitution, was it not better to accept the recommendations of the die-hards and thus win support for more moderate recommendations. It was most unfortunate that at the right moment, at the moment when we should have concentrated all our forces and should have brought our influence to bear on the British Parliament or the Joint Parliamentary Committee, there was no counter agitation and the liberals and other representatives of communal bodies who went to give evidence or to take part in the deliberations of the three Round Table Conferences did not possess the same representative character as the nominees of the Congress or the Congress representatives. Thus I think the Gandhi-Irwin Pact has been torn to pieces because the Gandhi-Irwin Pact definitely stated that the safeguards would be in the interests of India, and recommendations made with regard to British trade and commerce are certainly in favour of Great Britain. And therefore if my advice could be heard and accepted, I would say this, that we must concentrate on this one particular purpose and not merely reject the Report.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

Then there are other safeguards, some of them demanded by members of the minority community. If you are going to have separate electorates and men returned through communal doors to the legislature and if laws and legislation are going to be passed inflicting injury on the minority communities, who is to safeguard the interests of such communities? If election to the provincial legislatures is going to be through unadulterated communal departments, I ask honourable members here, who is going to take care of the interests of the minorities if the majority in its wisdom sees fit to injure the interests of the minority? That is an important point. The constitution must give protection to the minorities. It might be that there must be a clause in the constitution which should prevent discrimination between the minorities and the majority. That unfortunately has not been considered by the members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee to be a practical proposition. But should there be or should there not be a specific provision to that effect whenever the interests of minorities are threatened? Honourable members who belong to various communities and who represent the various communities in this chamber should pause and consider over this problem which was placed by us and by others who belonged to the minority communities before the Round Table Conferences. Indeed we wanted protection by the elimination of communal electorates. But there is this dilemma, there is this problem that has to be faced and it must be faced if India is to advance on democratic lines or if protection is to be given to all communities alike. This important point I wish to place before honourable members who represent the majority community here and also before the Members of Government. You must find some formula for the protection of minorities. I submitted before the Joint Parliamentary Committee that there must be an all-India Minority Protection Board. It should be a Government department and from time to time this Board or its members should undertake to examine whether in any province any minority has been injured or not and then come to a decision on these matters the final authority to give effect to such a decision should rest with the Governor-General. That recommendation—for whatever it was worth—was not accepted. However, that may be, we should recognise that this is a very serious problem. The Hindu minorities live not only in the Punjab. They are to be found in the North-West Frontier Province. They are to be found in the new province of Sind, and they are to be found in Bengal. Similarly Muhammadan minorities whom you may count on your fingers are to be found in other provinces. This then is the problem of problems. It must be faced by Indians, more by ourselves than by outside authorities. It is therefore up to us to make recommendations to the Houses of Parliament saying, "Here are the safeguards which we want, which we have evolved. Governors shall have nothing to do with them except when there is grave danger to the peace and tranquillity of the country." I submit this for the consideration of honourable members who perhaps might take a different line of action. I condemn myself along with others who condemn us for this is a matter primarily for us to decide and not for the foreign government to settle for us.

Then there are other defects in the Report which I would state one by one so that they may be considered by honourable members who will speak after me. There is no promise of dominion status in the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. There is one very ugly feature of the Report and that is the system of indirect election. That is a method which must be repugnant to any democratic House, and I can say this that Hindus and Muslims, Liberals and Congressmen, all unite in demanding direct election to the Assembly. (An honourable member : No, no). Muslims also. I have read their memorandum. If the honourable member is talking of one or two individuals I am not speaking for them. The Muslims and Hindus demand direct election. It is demanded by all communities, by the Liberals and Congressmen, by every kind of political organisation that exists in the country. In fact at one time the recommendation was made to the Lothian Committee by our Franchise Committee that there must be indirect election to the Legislative Assembly, but at the final stage that recommendation was withdrawn and there was a unanimous demand made by the members of the Punjab Legislative Council who were represented on the Lothian Committee that there must be direct election and that is a plain fact. If India is to be one State and one nation that nation should be represented and not the nominees of those people who have been returned to the Provincial Councils. That is an important and fundamental fact and I would ask honourable members to concentrate on this fact, and to demand from the British Parliament that indirect election should not be substituted for direct. That is not the only reason. Under the present scheme Indians have enjoyed for over 12 years the right of direct election. It would be taking away the right of vote which they have enjoyed so long to substitute in its place indirect election which is a reactionary and retrograde measure. Indirect elections are bound to corrupt the Punjab Legislative Council, the Legislative Assembly and also the Central Government. Why? Fancy—I am only naming the Hindus leaving out men of other communities—fancy 42 Hindus sending their representatives to the Legislative Assembly. Some persons will see that their pockets are well lined before they vote. Such a thing has taken place in other countries. Indirect election has led to corruption. Votes have been bought, high prices have been paid. The corrupter and the person corrupted will corrupt the Government which is to be formed. That is a very grave danger and it was pointed out in the three Round Table Conferences and it was on account of the strength of opinion that even against the desire of the Secretary of State—Sir Samuel Hoare was in favour of indirect election—direct election was recommended and accepted in the White Paper. I may mention that Lord Lothian, a liberal and Lord Salisbury who represents the die-hards were distinctly in favour of direct election. The labour members were not in favour of indirect election. How is it that indirect election has been resorted to in the face of public opinion in India.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

and the liberal opinion in England supported by the die-hard public opinion whom Lord Salisbury represented ? Whom did they want to please by having indirect elections ? I can only say this that by this method of indirect election they are cutting at the root of responsible government which is going to be given to the legislature at the centre. Therefore it is essential that Government in the centre should be helped by a popular assembly and not an assembly nominated in a way by the representatives of the people in the popular provincial legislature. If you must have indirect election why not have it for the Council of State alone. Have indirect election to the Council of State and direct to the lower House and notice the difference between the calibre of the men who would be returned to the two chambers. If Indian liberty and Indian freedom is to find full expression I suggest this to those who want to reject the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report that they must concentrate on this matter. Unless they do so this reactionary proposal of the Committee will be accepted. Not only this. Even the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report, if you carefully read it, shows that the authors were apprehensive of the proposal, that it will not meet with support in India and, therefore, they have made it a temporary measure to be changed later on. I ask honourable members to go outside the House, speak to their constituents and create as much agitation as possible on this point. This I regard as the greatest drawback and the most reactionary measure now likely to be introduced and I urge that they must be made to revert to the proposal made by the White Paper in this behalf.

There is another point on which the Report will lack popular support. There is no promise as to the time when the federation will be brought into existence. Some have suggested that the princes should not be asked or forced to join the federation. My advice would be that we should force the princes to come into the federation and every possible effort should be brought to bear upon the princes who should be made to realise that the days of autocracy are past and that they should come to share the burden along with British India in framing their laws which are common to the whole of India and in bearing the burdens of common taxation. A time should have been fixed in the Committee's report for bringing federation into existence. I do not know whether the authorities here are trying to bring the Indian princes within the federation, but if they are not, our request should go forth that pressure should be brought to bear on the princes. The princes are exerting all kinds of pressure on their subjects, I am not saying this about all States, but only of some. You have only to realise how their methods of government are inconsistent with the progressive ideas of to-day. I would, therefore, in all seriousness request honourable members to concentrate their energy on this point. If by coaxing the princes or by creating some sort of agitation among their subjects they can arouse their desire or sympathy to come into the federation, such methods should be adopted. Of course I do not ask you to resort to unconstitutional methods. Only popular methods should be resorted to. Indian princes should thus be asked to come and it would benefit them to come in. They are entirely wrong if they seem to think that their coming into the federation will go against them in any way. They know that and that is the reason why some of them are not satisfied with the control which they have at the present moment. If they come in they would be showing India the path towards unity in this matter. That,

I submit, is a great defect in the Report and it should be rectified. If a new constitution is to be framed then even with or without the princes, the responsible federation should be brought into existence.

There is yet another defect and that is with regard to the army. I do not say that absolute control of the army should be given to us now. For, I cannot shut my eyes to existing facts. We cannot possibly say to the Britisher: "Take your bag and baggage; depart to your country. We have now grown wiser and we are going to rule." Nobody would give any serious attention to an appeal of that kind. We must remember that the British came here not to teach Indians the art of government but for the purposes of trade. But their sons have shed their blood for winning this Empire and it would be difficult for any one to demand that this sacrifice should be made. Here in the Legislative Council of the Punjab we have seen instances that if any community or any class had got any privilege or power it refuses to yield to any appeal either to reason or to justice. It would be too much to demand that the Englishmen who have made sacrifices should be asked to withdraw from India. On the other hand people in England should also know that this kind of rule cannot last for ever, that British rule in India as it exists to-day must come to an end. The nature of things is such that a foreign nation cannot go on governing another nation for eternity. The question is whether India will grow happy and prosperous under them, whether they will train Indians in the art of defending their country or whether they will depart and leave India a prey to foreign aggression. The scheme outlined in the Report should, therefore, have evolved a proposal by which control of the Indian army should have been conceded to Indians at least to a partial extent. Recommendations were made by the people that if any effective control, partial or otherwise is not given to us, at least the right to criticise the budget and so on should be given to us. But unfortunately the voice of the die-hards carried the day and unfortunately again if agitation is not organised with regard to the Indian army we are likely to have still more reactionary proposals than those already made.

This is with regard to the big defects. There is another thing which I wish to see incorporated in the constitution. I want to see a definite announcement made in the new constitution that the crutches by which the different communities now walk should be removed after ten or twelve years. It is no use saying that the communities should themselves find a solution and put it forward. I want a definite declaration to the effect that communal electorates should be given the go-bye, whatever the condition of the communities may be under the new constitution, after a defined number of years have passed. A declaration should be incorporated in the constitution—and I speak as a member of a minority community, not of a majority community—a definite announcement which will promise to the people of India whether Hindus, Muslims, Indian Christians, Sikhs or Anglo-Indians, that there will be no crutches of the kind which we are now going to be incorporated in the constitution. This is absolutely essential for the peaceful evolution of Indian self-government. If the communities or the representatives know that these communal crutches are going to be removed the result will be that there will be efforts for mutual good will and co-operation. But if it is asked that the communities should themselves bring for ward proposals, that is asking the impossible. If you give communal electorates a statutory sanction, and if you thus intensify communal differences, you cannot possibly imagine a time when the communities will say good-bye to this system. So I say that whatever the period may be—it may be ten years or it may be fifteen years, this announcement is especially essential for the peaceful evolution of India towards dominion status.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

I have said and I spoke only from the Hindu point of view what I said before with regard to the second chamber. But I say these second chambers in the provinces are not required for various other reasons. They will uselessly add to the burden of the Indian tax-payer. Why should these men go into these upper chambers? (An honourable member: But you are not going to have one.) Not here, but I am talking of the other provinces. They will unnecessarily add to the burden of the Indian Exchequer if you have these legislative chambers of a superior kind as they are called. Again, what can you expect from men who are either nominated or who are merely Knights and Khan Bahadurs and who have tasted the joy of life and want to find repose in the Council Chambers when they have lost their judgment and have lost their powers of hearing? An honourable member explaining to me the necessity of having an upper chamber said to me: "Pandit, the day will come when you will not be able to fight in the elections. Why should the province lose the benefit of your presence? Why should you not find a place in the upper chamber by nomination?" I said, "If I have energy and if I have brains left I shall fight elections, but I do not want to be placed in any chamber when my sense of judgment is gone and when my power of hearing is diminished. I do not want that sort of repose." The people of India will find that these second chambers will be a clog in the wheel of progress. They will not make the machinery work. Wherever any progressive measure is brought forward, they say, "Do not go so far, we cannot move with the times." These people will be putting checks on Indian progress. I ask the members of this Council that they should join the Hindus of the Punjab and say that in provinces where the Hindus are in a majority these checks should be removed. (An honourable member: What should be removed?) Checks in the form of second chambers.

It was stated that these second chambers are a protection for the minorities, and that view was maintained very seriously. Everybody who came to give evidence on these points from the other side referred to these second chambers in England and in other places. But what is the Governor for? You have over-weighted him with responsibilities for the protection of minorities. Why must checks upon checks be added for the sake of minorities? After all it is the majority which should rule and not the minority. Therefore the Punjab Legislative Council should express the opinion that it is not in favour of second chambers.

Then there are other serious and grave defects. I do not want to take the time of the Council with regard to these grave defects. But there is one very great misapprehension which exists in the minds of many of my friends on the other side which I wish to remove. I have seen many times statements in the Muslim press and in the Civil and Military Gazette that

Pandit Nanak Chand opposed the advance on national lines. Here is the view which I on behalf of the Hindus of the Punjab placed before the members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, and I would ask you to listen to these words because I should not be misquoted in the future. This is what I said :—

The organisation of the various communities in India, even on religious and communal grounds, has helped to create a spirit of restlessness, which is no less than a desire for advance. The people of India are not satisfied with the very moderate demands ceded to them under the White Paper. In the opinion of most of the people the White Paper gives with one hand and takes away what it has given with the other.

The White Paper, in order to meet the growing national consciousness and the desire for freedom, should be made more liberal. The impression that seems to be prevailing in England, that the National Congress is dead, or that the Civil disobedience movement has been laid low for all time, is entirely wrong. Similar impressions prevailed in this country after the martial law of 1919 in the Punjab. But the spirit of the Indian people, now awakened, can never be crushed. The best way and the only way to keep India and England together is to concede to the Indians their demands for self-government to the full. This is the only way for peace in India. No other way can lead to the happiness and welfare of the people of the two countries—Great Britain and India—which is desired without exception by all reasonable men.

The scheme of the All India Federation, with central responsibility, holds the field in India, and it should hold the field in England. The efforts of all the British political parties should be directed to make the scheme more liberal, more fair, and more just—but under no circumstances should the name of the Hindus of the Punjab be used for the purpose of blocking Indian advancement towards full responsible government.

And this is what I said—

This is what I said with full sense of responsibility on behalf of the Hindus of the Punjab. I made it quite clear that we are in a minority and we will continue to be in a minority. These safeguards will not save the minorities.

A statement of that kind is not a true interpretation of their feelings, and is not a correct statement of their case. Even now if a scheme of advancement on national lines—totally abolishing distinctions of caste and creed, religion or race—is produced, and the legislatures.....are freed from the communal poison, and statutory sanction is not given to their sectional distinctions, the Hindus of the Punjab, though in a minority, will gladly accept such a scheme. They will ask for no safeguards, or guarantees, for they know that a policy of mutual trust and goodwill is the only right policy. India now cannot be ruled any longer in the old way and on the old lines.

This is what I said. I believe that the time has come when the Hindus and the Sikhs should take courage in their own hands and say to the Muslims of the Punjab that they are committed to destroy these communal distinctions and want their message to be carried to other provinces, that communalism and communal electorates are no protection, though they had their day. Mutual goodwill can only come if the Hindus cast their votes for Muhammadans and the Muhammadans for Hindus: it cannot come otherwise. It would be impossible to talk of goodwill and bring in the two religious communities together with these communal and separate electorates. We must denounce them in the strongest terms possible, and as a member of the minority community, I would ask you to co-operate in this matter and not to let things drift as they have been allowed to drift in the past.

I will say only one thing more. I believe and I have always believed in the policy of co-operation. Those that have now gone into the central legislature have gone with this idea that they must co-operate with the Government. The old idea of ruling a foreign nation is changing. The world has grown very small. England is only a dot on the map of the world. India is a bigger dot on the map. (An honourable member : A blot) (laughter). What I am saying is this ; my honourable friends would require some explanation. The thing does not strike them in the way as it has struck me. The aeroplanes, the telephones, the telegraphs and the various other things have brought the world together. If India wants to advance on national democratic lines it requires the help of England, whatever you might say. Therefore believing in this measure and working on this policy, I have always attempted to do my little best and I would therefore say in all humility to everybody who was at one time a non-co-operator that it really does not mean that we must not exploit every possible means of advancing our country's cause. We must remember that there is a very growing party in Great Britain which believes that it is by co-operation and goodwill that the two countries should be linked together, and that the cause of mutual goodwill must be given preference to the die-hard methods which have been employed in ruling India in the past. I have had the fortunate opportunity in coming into contact with conservatives, liberals and labour members of Parliament who believe that if India is to be ruled and kept contented and the masses are to be made more prosperous India and England must pull together and therefore sacrifices must be made on all sides for the common good of Great Britain and India.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

Mian Nurullah (Lyallpur South, Muhammadan, Rural) : I do not profess to be a politician nor a constitutionalist, but having seen the motion of my honourable friend from Hoshiarpur I felt this morning that the last few words were quite redundant and useless. As has been pointed out clearly by the honourable member for Lahore (Sardar Habib Ullah) and by the Leader of the House and the honourable Mr. Pandit we have no authority either to accept or reject the report. There is no offer and therefore there is no question of acceptance or rejection. Now, the position before us is that there are two propositions, one proposed by the honourable member for Hoshiarpur with the last few words omitted and the other proposed by the honourable member for Lahore. After carefully examining the two propositions I feel that the proposition of the honourable member for Hoshiarpur with the last four words omitted is much better for this House to adopt than the proposition of the honourable member for Lahore.

I do not propose to go into the details of the proposals contained in the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report, but I cannot help remarking that two things in it are pugnacious. Firstly, the continuance of the principle of joint electorates is most vicious and injurious to the healthy growth of the country and secondly, as pointed out in detail by some honourable members the indirect system of election to the Legislative Assembly is most re-actionary. (Hear, hear). This is a point against which we should all raise our voices and create as much agitation as possible. It is taking away the right of those who have enjoyed it for over twelve years. I feel that this will give most undue powers into the hands of Governors who are going to be supreme overlords of the future. I may explain this in a little detail. In future the cabinet is going to be under the thumb of the Governor. The appointment of the Prime Minister rests on the judgment of the Governor. He will make the selection of a person who in his judgment commands the confidence of the majority in the House. Therefore when indirect election comes into being for the central legislature, naturally the majority party will have the best say and that party will be able to send most of the members to the Assembly. So, if the Governor wishes to influence the elections to the Assembly he can do so at any time through the Prime Minister. Therefore this system of indirect election is most re-actionary.

There are of course some good points also in the Report. I would therefore suggest to honourable members who want to criticise this Report that they should, like the Honourable Pandit, point out both the good and bad points and give healthy suggestions so that when the question of the Report being translated into legislation in the House of Commons comes up those suggestions can be incorporated in the Bill. Finally, I should say that the Report does not in any way satisfy the aspirations of Indians and I need not go further and take the time of the House except to read what Mr. Lansbury has said. He is reported to have expressed frank disappointment with the report and to have said, "We are giving power with one hand and taking it away with the other."

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural): I do not pretend to say that I have read all the papers on the subject because I have not been in touch with the Report of the Statutory Commission or the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee. Moreover it is such a lengthy document that it has not been possible for me within the last few days to go through the whole of it. I will therefore confine myself to only a few points. The only advance that the present report makes upon the existing constitution is that it gives a little larger franchise to the people. The rest of the Report is a mere sham and mockery. (Hear, hear.) It has been said that the ministers in the future constitution will have more powers and responsibility. But after going through the Report it seems to me that it has been conceived in a spirit of distrust by the members of the Joint Select Committee. The Report shows that the ministers will still be under the tutelage of the Governor, who armed with executive, legislative, financial and commercial powers, coupled with his special responsibilities, special and discretionary powers, having the ministers and the Council under his thumb, will be in the position of a dictator and all powerful, and can very well say I am the Government, as Louis XIV, King of France some centuries before, said "I am the State." These ministers have been in charge of the transferred departments for the past fourteen years, and if they have not picked up the procedure so far and are not fit to exercise full responsibility—I should really be surprised. Under the future constitution a minister cannot do anything except with the approval of the Governor. (Interruptions.) These interruptions will not do. If during these years of reforms the ministers have not been able to pick up the threads of administration, I do not think they will do so in the future either. In this connection I may perhaps read a short extract from page 55 of the book Nationalism and Imperialism by Hans Kohn:—

If, however, the people really are not ripe for self-government, the reason is to be found in the method of government hitherto in force. "It cannot be denied that an autocratic system of administration which gives no real voice, no opportunities, and no responsibility to the people is not likely to educate them in the use of their own initiative and to promote their latent qualities, nor can it be conducive to high political standards. Only in liberty, and in responsibility can the people effectively advance, become constructive, and politically mature. Deny them responsibility and you have the safest way of impeding their progress and of rendering them always destructive and inefficient, thus creating a vicious circle, which cannot be too strongly condemned. However, much will depend upon the quality of the Ministers and the actual working of the constitution.

[K. B. Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan.]

Coming to indirect elections to the Legislative Assembly I submit that it will lead to corruption without creating any self-consciousness and awakening among the people. These elections will now be confined to a few people in the legislative councils and it is not impossible that corruption may prevail amongst the members of the local councils and at the same time the official classes may be demoralized. This point also is borne out by the writing of another author William Ernest Hocking in his book. The Spirit of World Politics at page 105 says—

It is especially disastrous for any people to live long among a population which it holds in contempt. It is perpetually drawn to adopt an inferior morality because it supposes itself dealing with inferiors. It buys elections and consciences, because it supposes that elections and consciences are customarily bought. It creates faction, because it assumes faction and intrigue to be the order of the native soul. It allows itself cruel and unjust punishments because of the theory that these are the punishments necessary to impress. It cuts itself off from all those sources of knowledge which only reveal themselves to good will and good faith. It forgets that just in proportion as men are different in their presuppositions, they must be approached with humility, and willingness to learn what is beyond one's native circle of thought. Though individuals achieve this attitude, it is hard for a government—perhaps impossible for a foreign government. If so, it indicates that there arrives a point where the best of foreign government may be worse than a native government of very moderate attainments.

At this stage the Council adjourned till 1-15 P.M., on Tuesday, 18th December 1934.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Tuesday, 18th December 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 1-15 P. M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

NOTICE UNDER CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT TO MIRZA BASHIR AHMAD OF QADIAN.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether it is a fact that when the Ahrar Tabligh Conference was held in Qadian, the Government was pleased to give notice under the Criminal Law Amendment Act to the President of the Conference and also to the Head of the Mirzai Sect ;
- (b) whether it is a fact that Mirza Bashir Ahmad of Qadian in his address of Juma Prayer following the Tabligh Conference warned the British Government either to apologise to him or he will take bold steps against the Government ;
- (c) whether the Government tendered an apology ;
- (d) whether the Government made enquiry as to the steps that the Mirza Sahib is going to take in case Government does not apologise to him ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : It is presumed that the reference at the end of part (a) is to the Head of Ahmadia Community—

- (a) Notices were issued as suggested in the question, one under section 144, Cr. P. C., and the other under section 8 (1) (d) of the Punjab Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932.
- (b) This is not the interpretation which the Local Government placed on the address.
- (c) and (d) No.

JOINT PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

Mr. President : The Council will now resume discussion on the motion before the House.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural) : Yesterday I was referring to two books on political science and my object in doing so was first that there was absolutely no justification for not imposing full confidence in the ministers and secondly that indirect elections to the Legislative Assembly would be attended with undesirable consequences. As regards the ministers it is to be borne in mind that Government is an organism or a machinery and ministers when appointed will be its parts. There is a well known proverb in Persian—

[K. B. Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan.]

ہر چہ درکان نمک رفت نمک شد

Everything that goes into a salt mine becomes salt.

There is absolutely no reason why we should not repose full confidence in them and we have got instances before us not only in this country but also in England, that men when placed on posts of trust, have changed their former opinions. Perhaps you remember that Mr. Ramsay Macdonald during the Great War was a conscientious objector but since he became the Prime Minister he has shed his old ideas and has become as good an Imperialist as Mr. Churchill, Lloyd George and others. So it is impossible for a man who is a part and parcel of the Government not to share its views and not to give up his old notions. That is what I wanted to make clear. Another object in quoting these books was to show that the Joint Select Committee's Report in certain portions was defective and required improvements and it is our duty to bring all these points to the notice of the House so that all these points may be conveyed to the British Parliament. This Report is not the final word at present and most probably many alterations will be made in it and unless these defects are pointed out and are laid before the House there is no hope that any improvement will be effected. I admit also that there are some good points in the Report and it will be folly on our part to reject it or condemn it altogether. But we should try our best to have it improved in certain respects. With these few words I support Khan Bahadur Habib Ullah's amendment and not the other one.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): In the first place I would like to acknowledge the high level on which this debate has been conducted, although I regret to say that I must exempt the original speech from that description as in many cases it so distorted the meaning of the Report that it was frequently difficult to recognise that it was referring to the Report. However, in the main, I think the level of the debate has been such as this Council might be proud of. That being so, it seems to me all the more regrettable that the wording of the motions should be so ungenerous. The first motion moved asked us to reject the Report. The other, which seems to be that favoured by most of the non-official members of the House, says that it falls short of the pledges given by His Majesty's Government and does not satisfy Indian aspirations and should be declared inadequate, unsatisfactory and disappointing. Is this the language in which we should describe the very great free gift of self-government to the province? I think it is distinctly ungenerous to use these epithets to such a magnificent gesture. I admit freely and frankly that two of the speakers did recognise the magnanimity of this gift. I think Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan was one of them. He mentioned the fact that Britain after holding India for 200 years was, of her own free will, now parting with power. He also declared it most magnanimous on her part to do so. He further added that he did not believe that any country but Britain was capable of parting with power as she had done in the case of Ireland and as she intended to do in the case of India. That is a handsome acknowledgment of what is being done.

He added that it was mere pretence to say that there were no serious defects implied in the constitution which has been sketched out in the report of the Joint Committee. I think it is both childish and churlish to do so. Pandit Nanak Chand also had the fairness to admit that the report contains many, I think his own words were, great and big things, which should receive the appreciation of India. There can be no doubt about it, that the free gift of provincial self-government is a very great gift indeed and implies an enormous advance on the present constitution. It is the more creditable to both countries because it is not the result of agitation on the one hand nor of fear or indifference on the other. In the case of India, I think I may express my opinion that it is the result of the magnificent self-sacrifice and loyalty of her sons during the Great War. On the side of Britain I think it is the result of the Britisher's firm belief in democracy, of his innate sense of fair-play and of his attempt to follow, perhaps in a purblind and halting manner but still in a genuine manner, the sacred precept, "love thy neighbour as thyself." It is possible that the carping criticism of the Report which one has read in the press and which to some extent, I am glad to say not to a great extent, we have heard in this House, is due to the circumstances under which the Report was written. It was written, I take it mainly for home consumption and the Joint Select Committee while recommending the constitution which they thought best for India, at the same time had to recommend it in a form in which it was most likely to pass through Parliament. For this reason they could not but emphasise the safeguards in order to soothe the nervousness, the fears, of the more conservative elements in politics in England. At the same time, it is possible, in fact I feel sure, that they slurred over the very great advance in the constitution which is implied in this Report. They have, as I said, emphasised, the safeguards and I think it is incumbent on me to say a word or two about these safeguards. These safeguards, or at any rate one of them was described by one member as a selfish reservation of power. I think that is a totally erroneous description of the safeguards. I have only heard one of them mentioned in this debate as not being conceived primarily in the interests of India and with possibly that one exception, to my mind it is quite clear that they are all conceived primarily in the interests of this country. To launch a new constitution without providing safeguards against its going astray would be like placing a powerful railway engine on the lines without any brakes. Once steam is put and the train begins to move, no matter what the driver may try to do to prevent disaster, a great catastrophe is bound to occur and if Parliament launched the new constitution without very definite safeguards to prevent serious catastrophe, I think we would probably find that the catastrophe would come. If you look at the three main safeguards in a province, the main responsibility of a Governor will be to secure the province against any grave menace to its peace and tranquillity, to secure the legitimate interests of minorities and also the interests of services. There are other safeguards but these I think are the safeguards which will most probably come into action if any safeguards ever do come into action. As I said, if we launched the new constitution without these safeguards we might be heading for a serious catastrophe, without any power on the part of the Governor to prevent any grave menace to the peace and tranquillity of the country, to prevent injustice to minorities or to ruin the services without which no constitution can possibly work. It seems to me to be quite obvious that these main safeguards are absolutely required if the new constitution is to work at all smoothly and safely and if disaster is to be avoided. The bugbear of safeguards has loomed very large in the Press and also in this debate, so I think it is right to remind members of what is said in the Report. In paragraph 79 the Joint Select Committee say—

[Hon. Mr. D. J. Boyd.]

If Ministers in fact act reasonably, as no doubt they will, the occasions on which a Governor will find it necessary to dissent from the advice which they tender to him may never in practice arise.

If there is any province in India in which it will be unnecessary to bring the safeguards into play that province is the Punjab (hear, hear). One of the remarks in the Report which I have found hard to stomach is the statement that dyarchy has not been a success. In this province I think it has been a conspicuous success. Our ministers and non-official members of Council have always acted with the greatest reasonableness and they have when necessary modified their own opinions in order that the Government might work as a harmonious team. That has been what has occurred since the beginning of 1921. I have no doubt that in this further and freer constitution that lies before us our ministers will show exactly the same spirit and I very much doubt whether the Governor will ever find it necessary to bring his special responsibility into play. So much about the general character of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report.

There were one or two particular criticisms of this Report which I think I should endeavour to explain as they are probably based on misapprehension and it would be a pity if the misapprehension went forth to the public without being explained and if necessary contradicted. To begin with we have all of us, I think, seen in the newspapers this morning a heading in very large type describing the Report as "goal-less and soul-less" which I think we may attribute to the honourable member opposite. To say that the Report is goal-less is surely taking a very short-sighted view of it indeed. The goal has been laid down very clearly in the preamble of the Act of 1919.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : They have changed it.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : That Act is still in force and that goal I have no doubt, I have no authority to say so, but I have no doubt that that goal will remain as the goal of the constitution. It is in brief the progressive realization of responsible government in British India as an integral part of the Empire. There is the goal very clearly set forth. You do not get it at once in the constitution which is adumbrated in this Report. Nobody in his senses would expect to get that by a single step. For one thing, as the Report has said repeatedly, constitutional conventions are a very slow growth. They have to be formed after years of tradition and when formed they are what really suits the country and not an a priori constitutional Act. Progress is bound to be gradual, if it is going to be safe and if the result is going to be satisfactory. But I think I am justified in denying entirely that the Report is goal-less and as I have already said, I think it is inspired by the firm belief in democracy and the innate sense of fair-play which distinguishes, at least I hope it does, the whole British nation. Therefore I have no doubt that it is not soul-less.

The same member further said that the Governor can prescribe the procedure of the provincial legislature. This is to my mind an astounding statement, because if you read the Report you will find it expressly stated that it is rightly proposed that the provincial legislature itself shall have ample power to regulate its own procedure and business and the Governor shall only have power to regulate its procedure when the matters under discussion concern his own special responsibility—a very minor part indeed of its procedure. This is an example of the misleading statement that is apt to be made when we have not had time to study the Report carefully and in detail and I would not for one second suggest that the honourable member meant to be misleading. I know that he did not, but at the same time statements of that kind when they go out and are repeated in the Press do harm. Another statement of the kind which struck me as requiring explanation was a statement made by one member that the Governor had full power over the finances of the province. That is a ludicrously misleading statement. One of the conspicuous omissions of this Act was the omission to give the Governor any financial power whatever except the financial power necessary for the discharge of his own responsibility. One of the omissions in the Report which has slightly alarmed me as Finance Member is the omission to provide that the advice of the Finance Department shall be sought on all questions of new expenditure. I have no doubt that this omission will be remedied in something like the devolution rules which exist at present because just as the Treasury at Home has to keep a cautious and careful eye on expenditure so in this country the Finance Department of the central government and the Finance Departments of the provincial governments must keep a very strict watch indeed upon expenditure, otherwise you will find a very heavy deficit in a few years. But to say that the Governor has got any financial power except the meagre financial powers—and these too are limited—the very meagre powers that are necessary to discharge the special responsibilities, to make such a statement is very seriously misleading indeed. These are three specimens of the misapprehensions that exist about the Report. There is a fourth which I think needs mention because it was repeated by more than one speaker. It was originally mentioned I think by Chaudhri Afzal Haq. He depicted a position in which the future minister in charge of law and order might find a friend of his, I think he went further and said that the friend might be a member of this Council, prosecuted on a charge of sedition. The minister wants to know what the charge against his friend is, but under the new constitution he will not be entitled to know. This is not a fair picture of what is said in paragraph 95 of the Report. Paragraph 95 seeks to put beyond all doubt a convention which exists certainly in England and probably in most other advanced countries of the world. The convention is this that the minister in charge of law and order, that is, the Home Secretary, is not supposed to ask the police for the sources of their information. We know that in the Evidence Act the sources of information are protected. The law in this country already protects the sources of information from being divulged in a court of law and objection cannot possibly be taken to the law protecting sources of information in other cases also in the sphere of administration.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Even from the minister ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : You must remember that this is not a case of suspicion of the minister. It is a case of suspicion or rather of removing suspicion from the minds of the possible informer. That is the whole object of this provision. If informers are not absolutely assured, if they do not feel certain that their identity will be preserved secret then the sources of your information must dry up at once and if they dry up you are done. Terrorism in a province like Bengal until it changes, will be rampant and there will be no means of checking it when you get no information about the persons concerned in it and about their plans. It is merely to remove this fear from the minds of potential informers that it is proposed to insert in the instrument of instructions to Governors that the sources of information shall be secret even from the minister in charge of law and order (hear, hear). I would never myself dream of asking the police to tell me from whom any particular report was received. Practically every day I receive secret reports about various matters. They are said to emanate from "a source." Sometimes the name is given but frequently it is pseudonymous. I never dream of asking the police what their source is. It might be said that no minister would ever dream of doing that and I believe that no Punjabi minister is likely to be unduly curious on a subject of that kind.

Shaikh Muhammad Sadiq : Do you think a Bengali would be ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : This convention has grown up in England at any rate as a result of a century of experience and informers in that country know the position perfectly well. Informers in this country, at any rate at the beginning of the new constitution cannot know the position unless it is put absolutely beyond doubt and the intention is not to throw any suspicion whatever on the bona fides of the minister but the intention is to reassure the potential informer (hear, hear).

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : May I say something on a point of personal explanation ?

Mr. President : Was there any personal attack upon the honourable member ?

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : No, I wanted only to admit the mistake that I made in connection with the power of the Governor with regard to the procedure of the House.

Sardar Arjan Singh (Hoshiarpur and Kangra, Sikh, Rural) : Sir, the subject is a very important one and it has a history of its own behind it. The constitution which is being worked out is the result of the Government of India Act, 1919. Shortly before that Act was passed an interesting discussion took place in the House of Commons on what was called the Mesopotamia Muddle. Mr. Montague who was a member of the House, but was not a Secretary of State at that time pointed out that the constitution as obtaining then in India was too rigid, too wooden, too inelastic and antediluvian and fortunately for all concerned a few months after he himself was charged with the responsibility of making improvements in that constitution which he had so severely criticised and very justly too. It was as a result of consultation and long discussion that that Act was passed and it was provided in that Act that within ten years a commission would be set up to investigate into the working of the constitution which had been passed and it was in pursuance of that provision in that Act that the Simon Commission was appointed. Then three conferences were held and then the White Paper was issued and after that it was followed by a reference to the Joint Select Committee of both Houses of Parliament. They have worked for over eighteen months and they have collected voluminous material and it is as a result of those labours that this Report is before this House to-day. So far as the theoretical side of the question is concerned, the criticism would be different from what the practical side of the problem is. If there were people—and certainly there were people who expected that by this Act or by the Report the Joint Select Committee would recommend a full fledged dominion status, they certainly have been keenly displeased. There is no doubt that there is not even a mention of the words "dominion status." In the constitution that is at present being worked there are words to the effect that responsible government is to be set up. These words gave rise to a long controversy. The Indian politician interpreted the words "responsible government" as an equivalent of "dominion status," while some of the administrators, chiefly Sir Malcolm Hailey controverted that view and said that the words "responsible government" were quite different from the words "dominion status." Therefore the omission of words like "responsible government" or "dominion status" in this Report is significant. It cannot be said that it is only through inadvertence or by oversight. It is as a matter of fact, with a view to avoid that controversy that the expression has been omitted, because there were certain members of Parliament who seriously contested the view that dominion status was ever meant by those words which found their place in the present Act. Therefore the omission is very significant and it is all the more deplorable when we remember that Lord Irwin when he was Viceroy made it clear on behalf of the Imperial Government that responsible government was equivalent to dominion status. Then a higher authority than the Viceroy himself, that is, Mr. Ramsay Macdonald made it quite clear when he made his famous speech in which he said that another dominion of another race would be added to the British Commonwealth of nations, that is within months rather than within years. In face of these pledges, in face of these promises, therefore, it is too late in the day to wipe out all the promises that have been made from time to time from responsible quarters.

Another important feature of the Report is regarding federation. Criticism has been levelled against it, and a very serious criticism too, that it is still in a nebulous state and we do not know when this federation would come into existence and that it has rather receded into the background by this Report. Even then when it comes about, opinions differ whether any responsibility will be given to the Indians, because clearly three subjects have been excluded from the jurisdiction of the federal government, that is, defence, foreign affairs, and law and order. That means that law and order and foreign affairs would be under the charge of three different councillors and whatever advice may be tendered by the ministers might be nullified by the advice tendered by the member in charge of the special Department of Law and Order.

There is another drawback in the scheme that has been adumbrated regarding federation, and that is this that it will not be very easy for certain ministers to assert themselves and the constitution of the federation is such that there are serious doubts regarding its constitution, inasmuch as to say that it has been pointed out that the official bloc will disappear, but it would be replaced by the representatives of the States in the new constitution.

[S. Arjan Singh.]

Again there are other subjects, as for instance the Secretary of State's Council is still retained. Criticism against it has been levelled from time immemorial because it is considered to be the citadel of reactionaryism and still under the constitution it remains.

Then regarding the powers which have been given to Governors there are serious doubts whether provincial autonomy means anything in the face of the special powers which have been conferred upon the Governors.

Then there is one other aspect of the question and that is the position of the civil servants. It has been granted to them that they will continue to be recruited and will remain under the charge of the Secretary of State. Therefore there are fears that they will not obey the ministers when they know that the authority which has to deal with them is sitting at a distance of 6,000 miles. Of course there is much justification for the protection of the civil servants who are at present in the civil service but there is absolutely no justification for the new entrants. If they have to work under the ministers, why should not the ministers be responsible for their recruitment or for dealing with their conduct as occasion arises? These are some of the features which, as I said at the beginning of my speech, can be considered very ideal but let me show the other side of the picture. Nobody can deny the weight of authority which attaches to this document, I mean the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. Considering the personnel of the Committee and judging from the individual qualifications of the authors of the Report, it is undeniable that they have collected a large amount of material and nobody can doubt the sincerity and honesty of purpose which has actuated the authors of the Report. It has been criticised that safeguards as they exist make provincial autonomy a mere mockery. I may point out in all seriousness to my colleagues on this side and also my colleagues on the other side that the safeguards are mainly protective. I would not touch the safeguards respecting other subjects but regarding the protection which these safeguards will give to minorities I wish to say something. The communal award was announced over two years ago. Take the instance of the Punjab. This communal award has been criticised in unmeasured terms from the Sikh point of view and from the Hindu point of view and this controversy has been going on for the last two years. What steps has the majority community in this House taken to inspire confidence in the minds of the other two minorities during these two years? Have they taken any steps to allay the fears of the other party? They should have tried to meet their grievances if they were real. But they have not done anything during the last two years. If under these circumstances we minorities are for special protection where is the objection to these safeguards which provide the Governor with special powers to protect the minorities?

Then there is another aspect and I wish to address my Hindu brethren about it. It is an open secret that they have, as a matter of fact, monopolised all the Punjab services. There have been serious attempts on behalf of the Sikhs and Muslims to approach them and to evolve a scheme which might fix the percentage of certain services. I know I am not divulging any secret when I say that our Revenue Member has been taking very keen interest in the solution of this problem, but how far have we succeeded? What has been the result? The result has been that not only do they not admit that there is something in the grievances which are ventilated by the Muslims and the Sikhs but they go to the European officers and poison their minds and prejudice them against the Muslims and Sikhs, so that, if any of them approaches for a post, he is told : " The difficulty is that you are not good," or " The difficulty is that you are not quite competent " or " The difficulty is that you are not quite fully qualified." That is because the Hindus have the ears of their European colleagues. That is the way in which they are making themselves responsible for recruitment to the services. They tell members of the other communities that they had better qualify themselves. " Charity covers a multitude of sins." There are no golden scales by which qualifications of a certain community are to be weighed. Absolutely none. This is what is called the bugbear of efficiency or the bugbear of qualifications. If this is the way in which the minorities are treated, then they certainly have a genuine grievance and then they must certainly want protection and that protection can only be given by the special powers that have been retained for the Governors.

I have to make only one or two more observations and I have done. One is that there is a certain school of thought in England and that school has pointed out that there are grave apprehensions whether this scheme will work for the interests of the masses. They are under the impression that this will only benefit a few educated people and will leave the masses in the lurch. There is something to be said for this view and it is only the future that can tell whether the masses will get the proper protection under the new scheme.

One word more and it is to the extremists in England to whom reference was made by the Honourable Revenue Member yesterday. There are of course extremists in India and there are extremists in England, but I refer to that class of extremists in England who have stated in the House of Commons that this scheme if introduced will imperil the English life and English honour. Nothing can be farther from the truth. Of course I know that this is only a propaganda, but even to that there must be a limit. It is a dirty propaganda that is being carried on.

I may assure them that the life and honour of Englishmen are as sacred to Indians as they can ever be to the Britishers themselves. (Hear, hear). Indians can never be ungrateful for what the Britisher has done for them. Whatever differences of opinion there might be on the question of political advance, they will not be forgetful of the great benefits that the British have bestowed upon the masses of India. With these words I resume my seat.

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh (Minister for Agriculture): I had no desire to take part in this discussion as I have both officially and unofficially expressed my opinions candidly on the subject of reforms. The criticism of the Report at this stage seems to me to be in the nature of ploughing barren field. We are harvesting the results of our own sowings. The report holds up the mirror to the realities of the situation. The Report defines the conditions that determined decisions and points out the path of progress. Several pointed references have been made to the relations of ministers in the past and their position in the future government. I thought it might be useful if I might afford glimpses as to the working of the system in the past of which I have nearly eight years' experience. It was in 1926 that Sir Malcolm Hailey telegraphed to me to come to the Punjab and offered me a seat in his Cabinet. As I was sworn in, he sat dumb without a word of encouragement and I said to myself that it will not be for any length of time that I will be able to hold office in his Cabinet. I am glad to say, however, that this impression was soon dispelled. I found in Sir Malcolm Hailey the strongest supporter of my policy. I do not recall a single occasion when we differed. (Interruption.) My honourable friend asks me what was my policy. The policy of the ministries in the Punjab has been to advance beneficent activities of the Government to the utmost possible limit. I can say without fear of contradiction that in the time of Sir Malcolm Hailey education, public health, industries, agriculture, in fact all the departments which were controlled by the ministers made the largest possible advance. Later on depression came and financial position had to be taken into account. We all chafe at the financial control, but honourable members I am sure realize that financial control has to be faced both in private and public life. Under the new dispensation when it is hoped that sluices will be flung wide open I am afraid if the financial control is not maintained it may be found that the financial streams have run dry.

[The Hon'ble Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh.]

There is one remark I wish to make regarding the services. Whatever may be the form of government, the province and the country will require strong and efficient, public services. We may well be proud of the work that the services have done for the Punjab. Our relations with the services have been of the closest and unstinted co-operation. Finally my own view is that what the country needs is a good and progressive government, alive to the new economic realities, ready to guide, direct and plan the development of industries and agriculture in keeping with the position of India in the new world. Will the new constitution accelerate the pace of advance and raise India to a position of equality with the self-governing dominions and lead it along the path of self-realisation and attainment of nationhood? The answer is provided in the progress that we have made in the past, in our power to make use of our new opportunities and in our realisation of the meaning of nationhood. I can therefore say that we can work the new constitution to our advantage and the ministers, if they have the support of all communities behind them and are men who do not seek personal advantage, and are prepared to uphold the dignity of their office at the sacrifice of self-interest and are ready to consecrate all their powers in the service of their fellowmen, the safeguards will rust and decay in the armoury of the Governor.

Dr. (Mrs.) M. C. Shave (Non-official nominated): I shall confine my remarks on the Joint Committee's Report to the portion that deals with my people. It was with extreme satisfaction that I discovered in this Report that in the opinion of the writers the Anglo-Indian and Domiciled European community represents one united body of people. This is in sharp contrast to the grouping according to the Punjab Franchise Report which I shall criticise on the floor of this House when it comes up for discussion at last. The authors of the Joint Committee Report have taken the larger view. I wonder if they glimpsed the irony of the situation as they pressed the soil about the roots of these people with their particular history. After nearly two hundred years a ragged remnant is all that is left to face the new conditions and to carry on great traditions and to follow a high ideal. But much can be done if one keeps, above all the strife and the tumult and the shouting, a steadily burning faith and we are not afraid. We are grateful therefore for the protection this Report promises. This will enable us to pull ourselves together and to set our house in order. We are and we shall be everlastingly grateful for the educational boards which give us the means to rise to the full stature of humanity, to shape our fate ourselves and to carry out our destiny purposefully taking no cowardly by-path to ease and safety.

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh (Multan division and Sheikhpura, Sikh, Rural): The subject under discussion is a very vast one. It is very difficult, nay, I may say almost impossible, to do full justice to it within the time at our disposal. I may even say that it is not possible to touch even the fringe of the scheme which is before us for discussion to-day. At the very outset I must admit that I agree with Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit that the Report under consideration has got many good points as well as bad points. We have to appraise the good points and criticise the bad points. I shall refer to a few points which I am sure all reasonable people will agree with me in regarding as a step forward on the present constitution. First of all it must be noticed that there will be no official block. Dyarchy is being abolished. We have been promised responsibility at the centre. We are also promised provincial autonomy. Public service commissions will be set up. Federal courts and supreme courts are visualised at a certain stage. Certain services which have been doing yeoman service to the province, such as those in the irrigation branch will be transferred to provincial governments. In this way we observe that a good deal of advance is made on the present constitution. But we should not close our eyes to many of the bad points in the Report. These bad points have, however, been referred to by previous speakers and I have no mind to go into them in detail. But I should like to draw the attention of the House to certain studied omissions, I use that expression because two of the official members who have spoken on this subject have scrupulously avoided replying to the criticisms raised by some other honourable members, on certain questions. One of those questions is about the dominion status. Nobody has answered as to whether this dominion constitution is to come or not. Some time limit should have been fixed. Some assurance must have been given that our goal is dominion constitution and that it would be given us after a certain period. No such promise has been made. Secondly, there is no written constitution in the whole world where the fundamental rights of the people are not incorporated in the constitution. British statesmen knew all this throughout the deliberations of the Round Table Conference and the Joint Parliamentary Committee. I have got personal experience of that. These points were raised there and fully discussed on the floor of that Committee. Pledges after pledges were given by the Viceroys and other men in authority that dominion constitution will be given to this country. I would in this connection read to the House an extract of a speech of the Prime Minister made at the first Round Table Conference. He says:

Pledge after pledge has been given to India that the British Raj was there not for perpetual domination. Why did we put facilities for education at your disposal?

[S. B. S. Buta Singh.]

Why did we put in your hands the text books from which we draw political inspiration, if we meant that the people of India should for ever be silent and negative subordinates to our rules? Why have our Queens and our Kings given you pledges? Why have our Viceroys given you pledges? Why has our Parliament given you pledges?....

Finally, I hope and I trust and I pray that by our labours, together India will come to possess the only thing which she now lacks to give her the status of a Dominion amongst the British Commonwealth of Nations—what she now lacks for that—the responsibilities and the cares, the burdens and the difficulties, but the pride and the honour of responsible self-government.

Not only that. I will now take you to some other stage of the drama. During the deliberations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, this point was raised before that august body and the gentleman who brought this issue to the forefront was Lord Irwin. Mr. Churchill put in a memorandum before that Committee and Lord Irwin examined him on the same. You remember that there was agitation at the time when Lord Irwin used the phrase dominion status when he was Viceroy and he handled Mr. Churchill very nicely in this respect by reminding him of a speech which he made in the year 1921 when he was Colonial Secretary in charge of the dominions, in which Mr. Churchill himself used the phrase dominion status and I crave the indulgence of the House to read this portion of the evidence. I will first read from the memorandum submitted by Mr. Churchill. He says:

It seems therefore wrong for the high servants of the Crown, whether Ministers, Viceroys or Governors, to use this phrase—(Dominion Constitution)—or hold out hopes based upon it, unless they see their way to its practical realisation within some period of time to which living men can reasonably look forward. If they have ideas that India may become a self-governing dominion like Canada or Australia within one hundred or two hundred years, and that is all they mean by it, they ought not to use such a phrase without also explaining that it cannot be achieved in any period which men can foresee. Particular responsibility falls upon those who at the present time, when constitutional issues are rife, when the whole of this ground is so well-known, and after the Statute of Westminster has been passed, use this phrase without at the same time disclosing the reservations which they have in their own minds which make it meaningless so far as contemporary politics are concerned.

I now come to the portion where Lord Irwin examined Mr. Churchill.

Lord Irwin.

Mr. Churchill, you have made your position very clear in answer to preceding questions on the points which they have covered, and I only want, if I may, to ask you a question or two about a subject which has not yet been touched upon. You say in paragraph 3 of your memorandum that in your judgment "the term 'Dominion Status' has been used so loosely as to cause harmful misunderstandings?"—Yes.

That is no doubt your view. I am afraid that probably you might include me in that specific condemnation?—I am not even sure I would exclude myself.

No; that is the point to which I was coming?—I thought so.

I wanted to ask you if you had in mind what seemed to me a most admirable speech, if I may humbly say so, that you delivered in June of the year 1921, I think I suppose you have not by any chance a copy of the speech before you?—No I have not.

Would you allow me to refresh your mind with it?—I should be grateful.

Because I was not fortunate enough to hear it, but I have no doubt that it produced a great impression upon those who did hear it, and the Committee would be glad to have the opportunity of refreshing their own minds. You were at the time, I think, Secretary of State for the Colonies?—Yes.

Who was then, was he not, responsible for the Dominions as well as the Colonies?—Yes.

Therefore, I suppose, it would be fair to conclude that the Secretary of State for the Dominions would hardly have been likely to fall into the use of loose language?—It is impossible to generalise about the holders of political office.

May I read what you said? It was at a dinner given by the Empire Development Parliamentary Committee to the Prime Ministers of the British Dominion Governments and representatives of India who were then over here for the Imperial Conference? Yes.

You said: "There was another great part of the Empire represented at that gathering which had not yet become a Dominion (this is referring to our country) but which moved forward under the Montagu Scheme in the work which began with Lord Morley, and was continued by Lord Chelmsford towards a great Dominion status. (Cheers). You then went on: "India was now coming, into our affairs and councils as a partner, a powerful partner. We well knew how tremendous was the contribution which India made in the War in 1914, how, when there was no other means of filling a portion of the Front by men from any other part of the whole world, there came the two splendid Indian corps, who were almost annihilated in the mud and the shell fire of that terrible winter in Flanders. (Cheers). We owed India that deep debt," and these were the words which interested me: "and we looked forward confidently to the days when the Indian Government and people." (I would ask you to note that) "would have assumed fully and completely their Dominion status"?—Yes.

Would it be fair to you to draw from that speech these conclusions: First of all, that, as you were speaking in 1921, and you were then looking forward confidently to this further development, that you evidently had in mind, something more than a ceremonial Dominion status, that it might be argued India had enjoyed through membership of the War Conference and the like?—Well, with the great development of the Montagu-Chelmsford scheme as regulated by the Act of 1919 of course.

But that had taken place, had it not, before 1921?—It had taken place but it was in operation and was part of the facts and circumstances of the occasion.

Therefore, your meaning was that that having taken place, and that being the constitutional structure of the moment, you in 1921, as Secretary of State for the Dominions, were looking forward to the Indian Government and people attaining fully and completely their Dominion status under that?—No, I have set down in my paper in words which I could read again if you like, but I think would be tiresome, the exact view which I take of the use of this term "dominion status," and I admit that it has been loosely used, and I regret that it should have been loosely used, and I do not except myself from the scope of any censures of that kind; indeed, I reproach myself if, in using this term, although I was only one of the Secretaries of State using this term, that I should have given rise to any misunderstanding and most particularly that I should have led other much more important people in quite different circumstances to make the same mistake on a far larger scale.

I do not want to take more time of the House on this particular subject. But I wanted to draw the attention of this House that pledges about dominion status were not only given but even discussed before that Joint Parliamentary Committee. I do not know what has happened afterwards, and why the spirits which were active then were damped later, because no mention of dominion status or dominion constitution has been made in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. I would therefore request those who are responsible for the destinies of our country with all the emphasis that I can command, that the idea of dominion status should be mentioned there, though some time limit, say a generation or two, I do not object to that, may be fixed within which this goal should be reached. This goal should be kept before our mental horizon. I do not know what good would be achieved by merely omitting these words, because by saying that that would be the goal they will not be going to give anything in the near future. It was quite easy to have done that. But as they have omitted these words, I would request that this mistake should be rectified even at this stage. Secondly, as I have already pointed out all the written constitutions,— not the unwritten ones, I have got nothing to say about them—have a clause about fundamental rights. This has been omitted too in the present case. There is another thing. In the first Round Table Conference and also in all the Conferences which followed, great stress was laid upon the joint responsibility of ministers, but I am very sorry to note that they have found themselves unable to agree to this proposition as well. Express promise was made about this. They want to unite us and if they want that united action should be taken I fail to understand how they can do so unless this principle of joint responsibility is accepted.

[S. B. S. Buta Singh]

Then there is another point on which I am prepared to adopt all the arguments which were advanced by my friend Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit yesterday and that is the matter of direct and indirect elections. We regard direct election as a principle of our body politic. I do not know what has impelled those very wise people to have gone back from the experience which they say has been gained and very wisely gained during the past 14 years or so. People have been able to conduct their elections and there has been a close contact between the voters and the candidates but all the same they have come to the conclusion that indirect elections should be the means of election to the Federal Assembly. On the one hand they say that there ought to be a contact with the voters but on the other hand they take away the only means which would bring about this contact. What is the proposal which they have put before us? Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit yesterday very lucidly put this before the Council that 40 or 42 Hindu members are going to elect 6 representatives in the Assembly. How these 6 people are going to have any contact with the electorates is what I cannot understand. Even during the present elections to the Assembly I think 50 per cent. of the registered voters have gone to the polls and it shows that a great deal of contact exists between the electors and the elected under a direct system of election which will not exist when the elections are held under an indirect system of election. It has been said that there are no means of communication and that it is very difficult to reach the constituencies and these constituencies will be very gigantic. But I submit that it is all wrong. When people can go and hold big meetings even in the farthest corner of the country I do not know why they cannot go and seek the votes of their electors. There are lorries and motor cars ready to carry people to any part of the country. In their Report the Committee say :

A close and intimate contact between a representative and his constituency is of the essence of representative government, so that the former may be conscious of a genuine responsibility to those whom he represents, and the latter that they are able to influence his actions and in case of need call him to account.

This is how the Committee argues but when it is time to come to some conclusions they go directly contrary to their promises and have actually tried to do away with any kind of contact between the elector and the elected. We have had this system of direct elections in the district boards, in the municipal elections and in the panchayats and in the gurdwara elections under the Gurdwara Act. Even before this Act we used to have direct elections for the management of our institutions and I do not know why this should now be replaced by indirect system of elections. With all the emphasis that I command I suggest that a strong representation should be made to the Parliament that the system of elections should not be changed from direct to indirect. I have now to say a few words about the communal decision or the communal award. Some of my friends have already said that more than two years have passed and nothing has come out of it. I practically endorse their arguments. The majority community has done nothing to bring the matter to a successful finish, and I think like our elder brothers they should have come to us to inquire about our grievances and to know how this controversy should be ended. If they had done this, matters could have been settled long ago. Even now it is not too late and something can be done on that score. My honourable friend was laying stress on the point that the Governor should have all these special powers. But I would respectfully submit that these safeguards and reservations are of no avail and it is only good will that can afford the best protection, otherwise these protections are mere paper protections. If there had been the will to protect the minorities, the present constitution provides enough powers to do so, but what do we find? My community has very great grievances. Has the Government done anything to remove them? Everything is being done for the majority. This reminds me of a proverb that “زر را بخت”. A rustic passed by the shop of a jeweller and saw a pile of money. He had heard of the proverb that money attracts money. He threw the solitary rupee that he possessed in the heap at the jeweller's shop and waited for the whole heap to be drawn by the money that he had thrown in but without any effect. The jeweller thereupon remarked that the huge pile of money has attracted his one rupee. Similarly we know that all these safeguards are for the benefit of the majority. We are here in a minority, but what do we find. There have been twice vacancies in the office of the Assistant Legal Remembrancer but on both the occasions this post has gone to a Muhammadan and no Sikh has got it. I am simply placing this fact before this Council. I have no grudge against my Muhammadan brethren. I only just want to show that under the present constitution even when the Governor has so many powers no protection is being given to us in certain respects.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani: How are you then the Deputy President?

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh: That is another question.

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang: No thanks to you.

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh: Good-will and co-operation on the part of communities is the only remedy and the best safeguard and no paper protection can help us. Give and take. Trust begets trust. If you put faith in us we will put faith in you. I am prepared to agree to the views which our Leader of the House advanced yesterday that the time has come when the parties here in this House will not be based on communal divisions, but will be constituted on economic considerations. At that time all these paper protections will not be required. With all the large number of safeguards mentioned in the Report, I think the Governor must be a supernatural being if he is going to avoid making any misuse of the great powers vested in him. I agree with my friend in the remark that the British Government has tried to take with the other hand what they have conceded to us with the one. These safeguards have practically nullified the effect of what has been given to us in the Report. But I am prepared at this stage to support Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah in saying that the Report is unsatisfactory with all the other adjectives he has used (laughter). But I wish to warn my friends on this side of the House that if they had been so very energetic at the time when we should have put up a united front, I think we would not have seen this day. In this connection I will relate a story in Urdu.

[S. B. S. Buta Singh.]

(Urdu.) An old man had five sons. One day as the family was sitting together the sons of the old man told him that as he has been working all his life it was better that he should retire from work and rest. The proposal was accepted by the old man. Next morning when the old man was sitting the elder son came and told him : " Look here, father, this bullock is required out in the fields. Please take it there and then you can come back and rest." The old man took the bullock to the field and then went to where the well was and there sat down under a shady tree to rest. The second son came and seeing him told him " Father, the fodder is to be cut for the cattle. Will you mind cutting it? After cutting it you can go and rest." The old man cut the fodder and then sat down again to rest. The third son came and seeing him sitting there told him that the milch cow was hungry and some fodder was required for it. The old man took some fodder and carried it home for the cow. He put the fodder before the cow and then sat down to rest. The fourth son came and told him that the fields were to be ploughed and the farm hands were short by one and that he was required. The old man rose to his feet and went to the fields and did his little bit. As soon as the work was finished he turned his face homeward in order to go and rest. The youngest son cried that as he was going home he should better take some more fodder with him for the cow. The old man took some fodder with him and went home carrying it on his head. In the evening when the family met the old man related all that had happened during the day and how after every request to do something each of the sons had assured him rest after finishing that work. This story shows how the boys took away the concession which they had conceded to their old father.

Mr. P. Marsden : Does the honourable member want to stick to the present system?

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : The present system is much better than the one embodied in the Report. I would like to end my speech with a Punjabi saying :—

” آؤ بیٹھو سچنوں گھر بار تمہارا اندر جگہ تنگ ہے باہر کرو اتارا“

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon (Minister for Education) : Sir, I have listened to the speeches to-day and yesterday with great interest. In this country there is no doubt a school of thought which has certainly a big following, which feels that no sufficient advance has been given to India by means of this Report. There is another section which takes the middle course and which would accept what is being given and work it, and then later on demand more. There is yet a third section which we find in all countries, consisting of sycophants and flatterers who are found all over the world and who will always praise governments for what little they do or what they may not do. I for one feel that as far as this Report is concerned, it is fair that the public and we ourselves should know what exactly is going to take place. Either in our enthusiasm for the criticism of this Report or for its praise it seems to me that the House has overlooked probably the main features of this Report. Sir, I crave your indulgence to permit me to lay before this House a few aspects of this Report as I see them. The first and the most important aspect of this Report from the point of view of the man in the street and the man in the village is the vast extension in its franchise. (An honourable member: In the Assembly or elsewhere?) If the honourable member has not read the Report, it is not my fault. He should patiently listen and I will tell him. At the present moment as far as men in British India are concerned they have an electorate of 70 lakhs. Under the proposed scheme the number of electors is going to be 2,80 lakhs. (An honourable member: That is for the whole of India.) Yes, certainly. I mean as far as India is concerned. Instead of 70 lakhs of men-electors, in future we will have 2,80 lakhs. As far as women are concerned, at present we have an electorate of 315,000 women voters; in the future we are going to have 6 lakhs of women-voters. I will read it out from the Report:—

It is, however, estimated that the proposals in the White Paper would, if adopted, create a male electorate of between 28,000,000 and 29,000,000 and a female electorate of over 6,000,000, as compared with the present figures of 7,000,000, and 315,000.

The point to notice is not only the increase in the strength of the voters but the most important point to notice from the poor man's point of view is the extension of franchise to persons who have not yet received that franchise. (An honourable member: What about the Assembly?) What I would like to point out is that under the present constitution there was a certain amount of disparity between the voters living in urban areas and rural areas. Under the new scheme the electors in the rural areas are going to be increased. Under the new scheme depressed classes are going to be enfranchised which is not the case at present. Under the new scheme labour is going to get representation in the various legislatures which is not the case at present. The labour representatives will be elected by voters of their own class. At the present moment all the tenants in this province have not been enfranchised. In the future constitution it will be that every landlord who wishes to stand for election will have to go and beg his tenants for votes. At present people do not realise the tremendous advance which is made in favour of the poor man, the labourer, the tenant in the villages and the depressed classes as far as the proposed constitution is concerned. It should also be realised that this new constitution is going to permit us to enfranchise all persons who have passed the middle school examination (An honourable member: Primary.) The suggestion is that it is left to the provinces whether they would have middle school examination standard or not. The Honourable Member from Hoshiarpur has forgotten what he read. All that I wish to suggest is that in view of this great advance in the franchise there is going to be a very large number of electors at the polls, and judging from the manner in which some bogus voters have been behaving at some of our municipal elections, I think it would have been unsafe for any Government to have gone beyond the limit to which the Joint Parliamentary Committee has gone.

[Hon. Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon]

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : May I ask where this middle school examination is referred to ? It is primary and not middle.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : I would refer the honourable member to page 76 of the Report, paragraph 137, last two lines which read as follows :—

But we think that it should be open to the Provincial Government to prescribe at least any middle school certificate as the qualification for the suffrage.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : We enquired about the Punjab qualifications.

The Honourable Malik Firoz Khan Noon : I hope the honourable member will in future be careful.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : The Honourable Minister should look at page 62 for qualifications given for the Punjab.

The Honourable Malik Firoz Khan Noon : The second point to which I wish to come is the question of membership of this House. This honourable House will remember that it has been the continuous demand of all political thinkers in India that all the members of this House should be elected members. I think the proposed change which involves the elimination of all nominated members will certainly be welcomed by this province and by this House. In the future not a single person is going to be a nominated member of this honourable House, with the result that in our deliberations we will be entirely guided and controlled by our own voting strength. The officials will have nothing to do with it. While I am on this point, I would like to make mention of one thing, and that is this that in the past we have had as members of this honourable House and also in the central legislature officials who have later risen to be our Governors. For instance, Sir Malcolm Hailey had a very vast experience of the Assembly, whose debating qualities and whose touch with the representatives of the public and whose knowledge of the working of the mind of the elected members of the House was of great help to him as a Governor in administering this province. Then the next Governor, Sir Geoffrey deMontmorency was a Leader of this House for several years and the training he received in this House was no doubt of tremendous help to him as a Governor. Later on, our present Governor was a member of this House as Chief Secretary and he was also a member of the Assembly as Home Secretary to the Government of India. The only point to which I would like to draw attention is this, that if by some means some officials can be allowed to continue in some of these Houses without any power to vote as members, that experience will help them when they are to become Governors. But that certainly will be a drawback if some of the Governors in the future are not to have the experience inside the Legislative Councils. But I know that the I. C. S. consists of such adaptable men that they will certainly rise to the occasion and will prove successful Governors whether they have been members of the legislatures or not.

The second point which we ought to realise is that all the ministers are going to be elected members of this House. At one time there was a fear that Government may nominate a Deputy Governor or a minister. That fear has been dispelled. We will have as completely an elected and responsible cabinet as we can get in any democratic country.

The next point to follow is that all the departments under the Punjab Government are going to be entirely in the hands of elected ministers with the result that as far as this province is concerned, all the ministers will be elected and responsible to the House and all the departments in this Government are going to be in their charge. No department has been reserved.

Pir Akbar Ali : Will the ministers be elected or appointed by Government ?

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : I shall come to that point later.

From these points it will be observed that as far as this province is concerned, under the proposed scheme we are going to have complete self-government. There is one very great change which I welcome, and that is this, that the future Governors have been given no control over the finances of the province, and I think rightly. Under the future constitution the whole money of this province will be at the disposal of the ministers and the legislature. That money can be disposed of in any way the ministers like or in any way the legislature may like.

There is one point in regard to the services. Some honourable members have laid great stress on this question. The question of services is certainly of such importance from the point of view of the working of the provincial government that it deserves the attention which has been given to it by this House. The scheme proposed in the report is that all the services except the police and the Indian Civil Service are going to be handed over to the provincial government as far as their recruitment is concerned. So, we need not say anything more about them. Now remains the question of the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police Service. With regard to these with your permission, Sir, I should like to read to this House the views which I expressed in the memorandum of the non-official members of the Punjab Government on the recommendations of the Indian Statutory Commission. I said—

That provincial autonomy will be a sham if the security services, Police and Indian Civil Service (both Executive and Judicial Branches) continue to be recruited by the Secretary of State and remain under his control for all intents and purposes. Is it not a fact that there is not a single Dominion (Australia, Canada, South Africa) where security services are recruited by a Secretary responsible to the British Parliament? I consider that if the security services in Egypt are recruited by Egyptians there is no reason why this right should be denied to Indians. Even if the British element in these services cannot be immediately brought under the control of Provincial Governments there is no reason why the Indian element should not be forthwith placed under them.

I am glad to say that though the Joint Select Committee has not entirely agreed with that situation their mind certainly seems to be working in that direction. This can be gathered from a perusal of pages 182 to 184 of their Report. I do not propose to read the whole of these pages, but I should like to read one or two lines from the Report :—

[The Hon. Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon.]

We believe, however, that there is much to be said for the recruitment in India of the prescribed proportions of Indians for the Indian Civil Service as well as for the Indian Police Service, and recommend this as a subject for consideration by His Majesty's Government

Later on, the report says—

We hope that the situation will have become so far clarified in five years' time from the date when the new Provincial Governments first take office that an enquiry may then be found of advantage.

So, you will notice that as far as recruitment to the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police Service is concerned, the Joint Parliamentary Committee have conceded this point that after five years the position with regard to the recruitment of these two services is to be revised, and as far as the Indian element of these two services is concerned, I have no doubt that it will be impossible for Parliament to prevent the placing of the recruitment of these services in the hands of the provincial governments.

Now, I wish to say a word in regard to the past of these services. One honourable member yesterday referred to one particular instance in a particular district where one member of the Indian Civil Service did not co-operate with a member of the Punjab Governor's Cabinet. But the honourable member did not complete that story. I have no official information on the subject, but as far as I know that particular gentleman retired from the service. I have not the least hesitation in saying that in all matters the ministers and members of the Punjab Government have had the greatest support of their Governors in the past and I am certain that they will continue to receive that support in the future also. As far as the services are concerned, the officers of the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police Service have entered into the spirit of the reforms in a most wonderful manner and I cannot recall a single instance where I have had occasion to be displeased with the conduct of any of the officers of these two services in the past. I have been going round the province recently and I have come across some of the young Indian Civil Service officers who have recently come out to this country. I have been particularly struck with the way the young European Indian Civil Service officers are serving in the districts. They have come to this province at a time when the reforms are in working order and they have fully imbibed the spirit of the reforms. It will be found that when these young officers are raised to the positions of deputy commissioners and commissioners, they will prove to be excellent servants of the public, worthy of the task which they will be called upon to perform in co-operation with ministers. The House need have no doubt at all regarding the full support which the future ministers will receive from these two services.

There are only one or two more points on which I should like to say something. One is the question of second chamber in this province. I have personally always been against a second chamber in this province and I am very glad to see that we have not been given a second chamber. The most important reason why a second chamber has not been given in this province is that we have no hereditary class of big land owners. For generations our land has been divided up between all sons equally. The rich landlords are being continually levelled down to the status of their humbler brethren. So, it would have been wrong to have created a second chamber in this province when we have no hereditary rich land owning classes. Moreover, I think it is only right that the rich land owning classes should mix with their less fortunate brethren, keep in touch with them and realise their needs and have sympathies for them. This is not possible if there are separate legislatures. I do not wish to dwell further on this point.

The next point I am going to take up is the indirect election to the central legislature. In this respect I am in the happy position of being able to say that the Joint Parliamentary Committee have accepted my views. I have always been in favour of indirect elections to the central legislature. I shall explain my reasons for holding that view. But I may state that I am not the only one who holds that view. If I remember rightly, I am of course speaking subject to correction, when Mahatama Gandhi was in England at the second Round Table Conference he said either in an interview or at some meeting that he himself was in favour of indirect election for the central legislature. (An honourable member: Are you prepared to follow Mahatama Gandhi in every respect?) I will follow him where I think he is right. I shall explain why I prefer indirect elections. (An honourable member: Because ministers will have an opportunity of influencing the elections.) There may be differences of views. But let me tell the House why I hold the view about indirect elections. My fear is this: Take the case of the United Provinces from where three or four Muslims have to be elected to the legislature. Naturally the electorate for the Muslim representatives will be divided into two or three divisions. Is it possible for any member of the Assembly elected from the United Provinces Muslim constituencies to keep in touch with the electorate if his constituency is wide? My second reason is this: Under the direct election it will be impossible for any poor man to organise an election campaign over such a wide area. (Interruptions.) That is my view. I may be right or I may be wrong. Another point to which I would like to draw the attention of the House is this: If you have direct elections to the Legislative Assembly you will have two groups of elected representatives pulling different ways. The members of the central legislature will claim that they are the directly elected representatives of the people and that therefore they are entitled to speak on their behalf. On the other hand you will have directly elected representatives of the people in the provincial legislatures who will say that they alone are entitled to speak on behalf of the people. Eventually there will be a tussel for power between the centre and the provinces. (Interruption.) I am not now talking of Indian States. If a tussle between the centre and the provinces is to be avoided you must avoid a system of directly elected representatives for the centre as well as to the provinces. These are my views. I sincerely think that it is to the best interests of the provinces and their people that the members of the central legislature consider themselves as the representatives of the provincial legislatures.

I do not wish to deal with any other points as far as this Joint Select Committee's Report is concerned. But I wish to point out that as far as the Punjab is concerned I am not despondent at all. In my view as soon as the new elections take place the Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs are bound to come together and form parties which will represent all classes in this province.

[The Hon. Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon.]

I am certain that the future government that will be formed will be non-communal. It will speak for the Punjab and act for the Punjab as a whole. There is, however, one thing to be remembered and that is this, that if you want to form yourself into a nation you must make a nation of yourselves. You must not expect that any foreign country is going to come and make you into a nation. We must try and remove our differences. After all, what are the primary needs of a nation? First of all, a common culture; secondly, common language. Are we working in the right direction so far as common language is concerned? Mussalmans are reading Urdu, Hindus are reading Hindi and the Sikhs are reading Gurmukhi. In another 20 or 30 years' time it will be realised that one Punjabi will not be able to read what another Punjabi has written or said. I am afraid that our society is moving on wrong lines, lines which are not going to lead to a United Punjab unless we sit together and put our house in order. These are no doubt small matters. What I wish to point out to the House is that we can ourselves take what we are now asking for provided we educate ourselves and make ourselves fit for it. And I personally have every hope that in the next ten or fifteen years, the people of the Punjab are going to be united and that the Punjab is going to be a great country.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : May I correct a mistake? The Honourable Minister has attributed a mistake to me, but I think he is mistaken. He will kindly read page 362 where the qualifications for the voters of the Punjab are given and he will find at page (h) "having passed primary educational standard or a standard accepted by the Local Government as the equivalent thereof."

Mr. E. Mayadas (Nominated, non-official) : First of all we should consider the magnitude of the task which has been attempted by the Joint Parliamentary Committee. It concerns no less than one-fifth of the human race, 11 provinces and some 600 Indian States. The second thing is, whether we are desirous of remaining in the Empire or going out of it. I am glad that there are very few in the country and I believe none in this chamber, who have any desire of going outside the Empire, because of the great advantages of staying where we are. During the recent Great War the resources of Canada, Australia and other countries in the Empire were all available for us and the same will happen on the next occasion when war breaks out. The next question to decide is whether we want a Paramount Power in India and if so whether it should be weak or strong. I beg to say that in my humble opinion in the future, our advancement is entirely dependent upon the existence of a strong Paramount Power. Our civilisation and the progress of our civilisation is bound up with the Paramount Power. Civilisation might be said to rest on certain planes. There is a country which has no high ways. Again, there is one with poor highways and one with good highways. Again one also with canal systems; again one also with telegraphs, telephones and aeroplanes. Now in a country which has its civilisation resting on one or other of these planes, if you take away any one of them, you are taking away a certain amount of civilisation from that country and the level of civilisation will fall correspondingly. And if you take away all, the level of civilisation will fall extremely low.

What has the Paramount Power done for us in the past that we should desire it to continue? It has given us communications cutting across Indian States. Many of the Indian States did not like this; but it was the authority behind the Paramount Power that has enabled us to have them. What has the Paramount Power done for us in the Punjab? I will recount just a few things. The Grand Trunk Road which runs across several Indian States; the Sirhind Canal going across Indian States. There is the Jhelum Canal which has its head in an Indian State and there is the Bikaner Canal which has its head in British India. There is the big North-Western Railway system. The degree and level of civilisation that we have reached in the Punjab is due to the efforts of the Paramount Power. Further there is the Bhakra Dam Scheme which we have under consideration and for which we require extensive areas owned and controlled by Indian States and were it not for the Paramount Power we could not have dreamed of such a scheme.

As regards the retaining of the British element in the central and provincial spheres there can be no question, because our interests are so interwoven. The Indian Civil Service in the past has achieved a great work for us and it is due to their efforts, their influence, that this self-realisation has come to us and we are to-day asking for a further advance in responsible government. Amongst other things, they have done three great things. First they have impressed the people with their sense of justice. If to-day you were to go to any court and ask the litigants, in 99 cases out of 100 they will say that they would prefer to be tried by a British judge. Again it was in the year 1925 a discussion was held in this House in which it was pointed out that in the every day affairs of this province sifarish and bhaz play a great part. It is to the credit of the Indian Civil Service that these things do not play a part with them. Again it is due to their efforts that we have made one other achievement. The land values in British India stand higher than in the Indian States. If you happen to stand near the common boundary and make enquiries you will find that the land values in British India are 25 to 50 per cent. higher than in Indian States. I admit that the Indian Civil Service is not very perfect, and that there are exceptions here and there. But I say the Indian Civil Service is doing a great work. Speaking of the Indians in the Indian Civil Service they are also doing a great work. Their advantages of education and upbringing not being the same, they have not yet reached the same level and unfortunately a few are even below level.

As regards British trade and manufacture my attitude is, that all things being equal I should first buy Indian goods; second, British goods; third Empire goods; fourth outside goods, and I think that whatever protection is given it should be given on these lines.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq made a speech and he wants us to reject this scheme because it has been condemned all over India. Now supposing all of us sitting here want to go to a picnic and we asked you to bring a motor lorry in which to accommodate us all, and supposing that we got into the lorry, and one said that he wanted to go to Ferozepore, another to Multan side, another to Rawalpindi side and so on, and again some wanted to travel at 20 miles per hour, some at 50 and others at 100, under these circumstances how could you possibly please any one? Here is a country in which some want to go in one direction and others in other directions, how can any committee, however good it may be, produce a report which will please everybody ? Those who have found fault with the Report have apparently not studied the facts properly. We have been told by those who attended the Round Table Conferences, that there has been scrupulous honesty and impartiality on the part of the members of the Committee, but here some members tell us that solemn pledges have not been fulfilled. As far as dominion status is concerned, it is not a thing which can be brought and placed here just as the Kanadian throne was recently brought and presented to Ceylon. We are on the road towards it and we have been given a further advance and in case the rate of progress is not to our liking, let us be honest and look at the causes. I do admire Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, I have read the account of the interview he gave to a newspaper representative where he said that our very slow progress was our own fault and was due to our dissensions. That being so, what can the Prime Minister or anybody else do ? If India is lost to Britain, it means India is lost to the Empire and we can scarcely realise what a calamity that would result in. Therefore it is true that the British people are trying their very best to put us on the road and to give us what help they can under the circumstances. Is it not in keeping with this view that recently the Government instead of sending their opinion by post have sent it by cable ? They are, therefore, doing all they possibly can to expedite this matter.

[Mr. E. Mayadas.]

Another point raised by Chaudhri Afzal Haq was that the princes will have a say in the matter of British Indian affairs while the British Indian representatives will not have a say in the affairs of the princes. I would invite, in this connection, the attention of the House to page 118 of Volume I, Part I, paragraph 217, where it is written that in a division on a matter concerning solely the British Indian subjects, state subjects should not be entitled to vote.

Then, there is the question of safeguards. So much has been spoken against safeguards. But let us just look round ourselves. We are surrounded by safeguards. Look at the safeguards provided by nature for fish. Ice floats on the surface and does not sink to the bottom. If it were to sink, then fish life would be impossible. In some countries where there is long and protracted winter, the seas would get solidified and the warmest summer would not be able to melt the ice, if this safeguard were not there all the fish life would die out. Look at our body. We are told by medical men that in our blood there are white corpuscles. What are they here for ? In case of damage they rush to the spot and commence the work of repairs.

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : Are we here to hear a lecture on anatomy ?

Mr. E. Mayadas : Two days ago, we read in the paper of His Excellency going to Lyallpur and on that occasion Mr. Sri Ram made a speech describing his new factory. He says that the factory has been furnished with automatic sprinklers, that as soon as fire breaks out the sprinklers will automatically come into play and put the fire out. Do we not have bridges across storm channels and dare we neglect to build bridges across them ? About two years ago I happened to go towards Khushab and I noticed that there was a road bridge and above it was a railway bridge. The railway had provided for surplus storm water and their bridge was not damaged but the road people forgot to make that provision and the result was that the road was very seriously damaged. So, in the case of storm water channels for exceptionally heavy storms and floods which may come once in 50 years if the safeguards are there you will be protected otherwise you will suffer damage. It does not mean that these safeguards will come into play every day, but rather only when the necessity actually arises. We have been assured by the Honourable Leader of the House that the Reforms Committee of our own Council did recommend safeguards and that the safeguards now put forward have not gone beyond their recommendations. This should be sufficient for us.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah says that the Report is disappointing. I say that the Report is not disappointing. Supposing, I were strong enough to catch hold of your hand and compel you to write the word disappointing and were to say look here you have written the word disappointing with your own hands, would that be the proper thing to say? As a matter of fact the Joint Parliamentary Committee had certain materials placed before them and they have cooked a dish and if it gives a flavour of certain ingredients that were presented to them, is it their fault? If you say that their Report shows distrust is that right? If their Report suggests distrust, it is because our representatives have gone and told them that distrust exists among us, and that is why distrust is traceable in the Report (hear, hear). I would like to mention the opinion that Kanwar Sir Maharaj Singh, Agent to the Governor-General in South Africa has given. I happen to know him fairly well, and I know how very careful he is with his words. He says that the Report takes us onward on the path of dominion status and I feel myself that there is no doubt about it.

Another point referred to by Khan Bahadur Habib Ullah was that they have taken ten years to prepare this Report. But that is a point in their favour. It was said that if a Governor had been asked to write this Report, he would have made almost as good or perhaps a better Report, and all this trouble and expense might have been saved. The Joint Parliamentary Committee was entitled to enquire into and consider all the matters that have a possible bearing on this great question, and it is after much labour that they have prepared this Report, which is an impartial document of very great importance. This Report is not only in the interests of India but it is in the interests of Britain and also in the interests of the British Empire. Either we should say that they have deliberately prepared a document which is disappointing or that they were incapable of producing a proper document, but if we cannot say either of these things and nobody can possibly say so, then I cannot see how we are going to support the contention that the Report is disappointing. Either let them prepare a document with equal or better authority behind it or accept this Report.

Indirect elections have been condemned. I am glad to find at least one honourable member, the Minister for Education here who supports indirect elections. I also favour indirect elections. My community will have 21 representatives in the provincial legislatures and I understand that these 21 will be called upon to elect 8 members for the Assembly. I welcome the proposal and in case the other communities wish to go back to direct election I beg that my community be allowed to continue to enjoy indirect elections. We would rather not have direct elections. The evils of direct elections are very great. Look at the bad habits into which the voters are getting into. They want free motor rides, to be fed, and they want liquor. Not only that, there is one other very serious evil which I have not heard discussed in this chamber. I am afraid that in a majority of cases the returns of expenses made are not true. The returns of expenses do not actually show what the member has spent on motor lorries, entertainment and liquor. Friends are supposed to do all this, but the cost is actually borne by the candidate.

[Mr. E. Mayadas.]

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh : Have you got any personal experience ?

Mr. E. Mayadas : I have knowledge of the experience of other members who are as reliable as yourself and I know that in many cases members spend large amounts of money and it is extremely unlikely that any man backs his friends to incur those expenses to such an extent.

There is one matter about which I must admit my ignorance and that is about the necessity of widening the franchise. I am afraid that I remain yet unconvinced regarding the necessity of enlarging the franchise. The reason is this. Supposing that a community aims at a certain matter, and that matter can be achieved with the help of a narrow franchise, why should we then have a broad franchise, especially when the percentage of literacy in our country is so poor and the voter is unable to appreciate merit in the candidates ? Certainly as literacy increases, the franchise might be enlarged, but at the present time the widening will do more harm than good.

The Honourable the Leader of the House said yesterday that the basis of safeguards was good-will. That has been repeated again and again, but unfortunately good-will at present is conspicuous by its absence. All the same we must trust the majority community. The minorities must try their best to secure the good-will of the majority community and to secure it by safeguards or by force is not the best way. At the same time it is for the majority community to so act as to beget trust in the minorities. The will of the majority, however, must prevail and it is for the minorities to submit and it is by submission to their will that ultimately the majority also will undergo a change of heart.

There is one other matter and that is regarding the Christian element in the second chambers. In certain provinces second chambers are to come into existence. I am not aware whether seats have been provided for Indian Christians, in second chambers. In case this has been overlooked, I beg that this might be rectified now.

Then there is another very important matter from the point of view of my community. I think there should be some provision by which every ten years a revision should be possible. I say this for the reason that some communities are increasing while others are decreasing in population. Supposing ten years hence my community is reduced to half of what it is to-day, then we cannot expect that the same representation should be continued. Or suppose it increases four-fold, would it not be fair that the claims of my community be adjusted accordingly ?

The attitude of the Indian Christians in such matters is as follows, submit to the King. Honour and obey the authorities, resist not him that is evil, if smitten on one cheek turn the other. If compelled to go one mile (in begar) go two. Do unto others as you would be done by. We will therefore gladly submit to the will of the majority as far as possible and if necessary we will also gladly undergo sacrifices.

Certain as the sun will rise tomorrow, I feel that we are on the road to joint electorates. It is bound to come and then it will not be communalism but merit that will count. Instead of calling the Report disappointing my attitude is, to say "thank you for the great efforts you have made. But we regret that the result has not been as satisfying as expected, but that is not your fault that is our fault. We have injected the virus of communalism and that is the cause why a great many defects have come to the surface. We will now look into the matter and we will try to rectify our weak points."

One very brief quotation I will read with your permission from Professor Tagore. He says—

So long as there is a feeling of separateness among the various elements that make the Indian nation, so long as there is want of sympathy and mutual understanding amongst different communities and different provinces, Swaraj or which we may call Responsible Government will remain a chimera.

Let us give the utmost we can and demand the very least possible and when not given the smallest share which is our due, we should still seek and utilise every opportunity for service and doing kindness to the other communities. With these words I oppose both the motions put forward by Chaudhri Afzal Haq and Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah.

Professor W. Roberts (Non-official, nominated): Sir, I rise to support the motion moved by Sardar Habib Ullah. I may say that the motion dealing as it does with a matter of such great importance as the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report which is the result of the best brains of Britain and India, is somewhat too narrow. At the same time I think it is the only alternative which we have at present to the original motion.

If I may take the time of the House for a few moments I have one or two criticisms which I would like to put before you. I am not saying that the Report meets the point of view of the European Association and we are taking steps even now to try and get the defects put right, but anything which we will do I may assure the House, will not give any fuel or ammunition to the die-hards in England who are at present trying to wreck the Bill.

Then again one other defect in the Bill from the European Association's point view is that there is no clear indication that interprovincial tariff will not be allowed. In other words, it is not clearly laid down that there must be free trade in India as a whole. This together with the increase in the number of provinces will tend to disrupt this country to some extent. I think this is a real danger. Even when federation is complete, I think this danger will still exist, and as you know even the best friends of this country must admit that there are plenty of disruptive elements here, and the efforts of all of us should be to see India progress as a united India and we should very jealously guard against any tendencies in that direction. I therefore plead for even more reservations in it with this end in view.

As regards dominion status, my impression from the parts of the Report which I have read is that this subject is not only not mentioned, but no fixed limit of time has been given for the further instalment of reforms, and why?—because this Report in itself provides for the future. And therefore it.

[Prof. W. Roberts.]

is neither necessary to mention dominion status or a further instalment of reforms. I honestly believe that when this Report is put through in the form of a Bill it will form the basis on which India can attain full self-government. Therefore, I think we are making unnecessary criticism in dwelling on this question of dominion status or dwelling on future instalment of reforms.

I have been struck like the Finance Member with the high plane on which the debate has been carried on. After all, this Report contains the best brains of India, men like Sir Akbar Hydari, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, Sir Purshottamdas Thakurdas outside the Council, and even in this Council men like Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan, Sardar Buta Singh, Sardar Ujjal Singh, Pandit Nanak Chand and Sardar Sampuran Singh—all men whom we trust. They have done the very best they could to improve this Report and for this reason I think the terms in which our present motion is put, may help the opponents of the Bill in England and may add fuel to the fire. I ask the House to consider whether in the coming fight in the British Parliament whether the Churchill Party—Mr. Churchill is a very able man and he has very able lieutenants—whether they are not likely to gain some more points in future for the restriction of the reforms, and I would therefore suggest that as sensible men—and the Punjabis have plenty of commonsense—it would not be wise for us to pass a motion in such a form as will give any fuel or ammunition to the opponents of this Bill in the British Parliament.

Khan Bahadur Mian Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana (Muhammadan landholders): I will just take five minutes of the House because there are some other members who wish to speak on this motion. I had no intention of speaking but after the speeches of my friend, the Deputy President, my friend from Hoshiarpur (Sardar Arjan Singh) and the speech that was made by my friend Sardar Sampuran Singh, I want to say just one word in reply to what they have said. I am really sorry that the discussion about the communal award crept in this debate. (An honourable member: How can it be avoided?) As far as I have been able to understand, none of our brethren, neither the Sikhs nor the Hindus deny the right of a majority community to a majority of seats but what they object to is the method of the election. My Hindu and Sikh brethren say, let the majority community have a majority of seats but not through separate electorates. As far as the question of joint electorates is concerned, in the absence of adult franchise the real criterion is not the population but the voting strength, and as far as that criterion is concerned the majority community of this province is in a minority in voting registers and unless the majority community is turned into majority in the voting register they cannot be expected to behave like a majority. If the minority communities agree to the majority of the majority community in the voters and the majority community then insists on separate electorates, I think their grievances will be genuine and their condemnation of the award will be justified. It is needless for me to repeat what was discussed about two years ago. We all know and I think it will be futile to remind the House of Sir Sikander's formula and its details and the attitude of our friends towards it. After this I have just to say a word about the indirect method of election. Our Leader will be just speaking on behalf of the Party and my opinion about the Report is that from the provincial point of view there are several black spots but the substitution of the indirect method of election instead of direct is perhaps to be regarded as the blackest. I do not agree with my friend the Pandit ji that the indirect elections will corrupt the members of this Council, but there is no doubt that it will corrupt the politics of local legislatures. It may be that eventually it may prove a rock on which ministries may perish. I fear that through indirect elections there may be a possibility of professional politicians being able to find places in the central legislature who under direct method may not even hope to get back their security deposits. Whatever the reasons may be this is a definitely retrograde step.

There is one thing more which I have not been able to understand. A member who is elected by an electorate should be responsible to that electorate. Supposing a provincial council elects say 20 members to the central legislature. The members of course will be responsible to the local legislature but by the time they seek their re-election the electorate will be quite different, because as far as I understand the term of the local and the central legislatures will be the same. Supposing a local legislature in the beginning of 1935 elects 20 members. When they offer themselves for re-election, their electorate in the beginning of 1940 will be quite different. It is quite possible that the whole council may be replaced by new members. I think that that is a blunder that the authors of the Joint Parliamentary Committee have made and I purely from the point of view of a provincial legislature condemn it and feel that it would create many difficulties and inconveniences as far as the smooth working of a provincial legislature is concerned.

As regards the main Report, I think it is not at all necessary to discuss at length the reasons why it is on the whole unsatisfactory, gloomy and disappointing. But who is responsible for this? There is no doubt that the British statesmen have taken advantage to the fullest extent of our differences and we can only blame them for having done that. But mostly the blame lies at our own door. I think the unfortunate and the graceless way in which our leaders have been discussing these questions in the past does not entitle us to even this much. The British Government will not part with a grain of power unless it is made impossible for them to retain it. My unhappy country stares at the framers of the Report and their Leaders with sullen indignation. Our leaders have accentuated our differences and our rulers have taken the fullest advantage of it. Poor India repeats the famous verse (of Princess Zebunnisa) after reading the Report—

صبا را شرم می باید بسوخته گل نگه کردن
که رخت غنچه را وا کرد و نگذاشت نه کردن

The Spring breeze should be ashamed to look at a flower in bloom for it ignored to make a fair estimate of its limitations inasmuch as it opened the folds of the closed bud and now finds it beyond its capacity and ability to restore the blossoming petals to their former security.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali (Gujranwala, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I beg to move—

That the last four words, i.e., "and should be rejected" be deleted from the original motion.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : I rise to a point of order. This amendment should have been moved at an earlier stage. If it is allowed to be moved now, we will have no opportunity to speak on this amendment.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : This amendment is identical with the one proposed by Mian Nurullah.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : But Mian Nurullah did not move his amendment.

Mr. President : There is no force in the point of order raised. The honourable member, Chaudhri Riasat Ali, has given notice of an amendment and is entitled to move it when he gets an opportunity to speak, that is, when he is in possession of the House.

Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah : I submit that it would have been better if the Chair had called upon the honourable member to move this amendment even yesterday so that we might all have had an opportunity to speak on the amendment.

Mr. President : It is not for the Chair to call upon any member to move his amendment. There is no such provision in the Rules or Standing Orders. It is for a member to move his amendment when he is in possession of the House, that is to say, rises to speak to the main question. The honourable member caught the eye of the Chair only now and is entitled to move his amendment now.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : May I point out that a convention has been established by which the Chair used to call upon a member to move his amendment? That convention has been now violated by you.

Mr. President : If the honourable member, who has given notice of an amendment, does not rise to move it, is it the duty of the Chair to call him to move it at an earlier stage or forego his right to move it later?

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : A convention has been established by which you have been calling upon members to move their amendments.

Mr. President : There is no such convention. Excepting the case of Bills no member, who has given notice of an amendment, is entitled to precedence on that account, nor can he claim to be called unless he himself rises to speak. The practice is that a member who is in possession of the House is entitled to move an amendment at any moment after the main question has been proposed and before it is put.

Chaudhri Riasat Ali : I stood up even yesterday to move my amendment, but I was not fortunate to catch your eye then.

The much awaited Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report is now published and it is gratifying to see that the apprehension that the White Paper proposals might be whittled down has proved unjustified. This Report is a revolutionary document, revolutionary because it destroys the hitherto unitary system of government in India and sets about to build up federal government on provincial foundations. As a student of constitutional history one is bound to feel that the Report is without parallel in the manner in which it deals at length with the problems it was asked to report on. I should say it is an "Instrument of Instructions" for the future

Governors, Governors General, the Secretaries of State, the ministers and the members of the British Government, inasmuch as it definitely lays down the sphere of each one of them and no doubt is left as to what is to be done and how it is to be done and why it should be done. The Report has been before the public for the last three weeks and by now every shade of opinion has been expressed. Though the Report has not given full satisfaction, the general aspect is not very gloomy. (Hear, hear.) In India stalwarts like Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, Sir Chiman Lal Setalvad and Mr. Jayakar, in spite of the fact that they have pointed out certain defects in the details of the Report, have advised us to work these reforms. Muslim leaders like Sir Abdullah Shuhrawardy, Sir Ghulam Husain and Sir Muhammad Yakub have given expression to the same trend of view. I may say that the views of the majority of the Press is that the Report on which so much time, money and labour have been spent should not be rejected summarily, and it is unstatesmanlike to throw it overboard after a long period of deliberations and conferences. History also teaches us that the methods and programmes of obstructionists and wreckers of constitutions have always been barren of results, while those of the co-operators and responsivists have always been full of fecundity.

I shall now proceed to mention very briefly, as the time at my disposal is very short, some of the good points in the Report. The position in my view is that the provincial autonomy is now an accomplished fact. The sphere of democracy will be enlarged in four directions, i. e., (1) there would take place a wide extension of franchise, (2) official and nominated block would disappear, (3) size of provincial legislature would be doubled, (4) dyarchy would be replaced by a unified administration under the ministers. The most important feature which shows the far-sightedness of the framers of the constitution and which will prove the acid test for the workers of the constitution is the transference of law and order. This alone is the most important feature which should make us accept the Report. There have been some misunderstandings so far as this part of the recommendations in the Report is concerned. The apprehension is, as has been said by many previous speakers, that the ministers will not be able to see the confidential reports of the police. If we study the recommendations in the report rather carefully, we will be convinced that this is not so. The ministers are quite welcome to see the reports, only the names of agents and informers will not be disclosed to them. Even to-day, if I am not mistaken, the practice is to refer to the agents and informers as X-A and X-B and not by their actual names. I do not see any harm if the names of these informers are not disclosed to the ministers. I think it is rather for the good, because, otherwise when a minister goes out of office his knowledge of the names of informers might be embarrassing to the constitution itself and to the executive government.

The second point I want to mention is that responsibility at the centre is no longer a mere dream or a vague promise. The Government has already accomplished whatever was in their hands in this direction. The Reserve Bank is going to function soon, the Railway Statutory Board will soon be established. It is now for our ruling princes to accelerate this part of the constitution. Most of them have already agreed to join the federation and I hope others too will soon express their readiness to join it. The sporting zeal and team spirit which they have hitherto exhibited in the field of games I hope they will show even in the field of politics. Another matter which is of vital importance is that henceforward no previous sanction of the Governor-General will be required for legislation concerning religious and social matters. This is a very important advance over the present constitution. If we remember the agitation over the Temple Entry Bill and also the great agitation raised from thousands of platforms by the sanatanists that this Bill was banned by the Queen's proclamation, we will be ready to admit that this provision recommended in the Report is a very important break from the past. The next important thing I wish to mention is the endorsement of the Fiscal Autonomy convention and freedom in tariff matters. There is no doubt that trade discrimination has been banned, but if we give our best consideration to the Report we will see that much of the economic power has been transferred to us. The British in this country began with the dual object of collecting revenue and maintaining law and order. Later on they took up social, religious and economic matters. Now they are reverting to the original position. We are being given full latitude so far as religious, social and economic affairs are concerned. The British will now mainly concern themselves only with the collection of revenue and to some extent with the maintenance of law and order.

[Ch. Riasat Ali.]

Much has been said on the floor of this House and even outside this House by my friend, Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit. I would like to dwell, though briefly, on three of his points. He said on the 15th of December in the Maynard Hall, "The report contained many big and good things but it also contained many big blunders. The first is the pernicious system of separate electorates?" I have heard members speaking on this point and I would have refrained from speaking on this; but I feel that something must be said in this connection. The Muslims have been in this country for the last 10 centuries and in spite of this fact, I am sorry to say that Muslims and Hindus are two separate entities. They are different so far as their food and dress is concerned; they are different so far as their culture is concerned and they are different so far as their customs are concerned. Untouchability is still existing. It may not be existing in some classes. If a Muslim, for instance in some cases, happens to touch the table or the food of a Hindu, the gentleman is bound to throw it away. The Hindus feel strangers in Muslim Mohallas and the Muslims feel strangers in Hindu Mohallas. There is still existing the question of the tazia and the pipal tree and the quarrel over music before mosque and the question of halal and jhatka. There are still Muslim and Hindu boarding houses, Hindu kitchen and Muslim kitchen, Hindu roti and Muslim roti, Hindu pani and Muslim pani and so on. When these things exist, where is the wonder in having Hindu wards and Muslim wards and Hindu constituencies and Muslim constituencies? These are necessary evils. But we should rise above these things and then say that we should not have separate electorates. Let us be Indians first and Punjabis afterwards; let us be Punjabi first and Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs afterwards and then we will be justified in demanding that there should be no separate electorates. It is very painful to admit these things but facts are facts. I am not a communalist. I am one of those who are ready to eat from the hands of a Hindu brother even though he does not like to eat from my own hands. But I am forced to say that as long as these things exist these separate electorates are a necessary evil.

So far as indirect election to the central legislature goes, I do not want to dwell on it long. It may be wrong in principle. But as the Honourable Minister for Education and my honourable friend, the Secretary of my party, mentioned, it has both good points and bad points. The next point I would refer to is the "safeguards in the interest of the British" as Pandit Sahib calls them. These safeguards have already been referred to by the Honourable Finance Member. He compared the constitution without them to "a steam engine without a brake." I will give another simile. The constitution without safeguards will be like a motor launch or boat in wide seas without a steer or rudder. Some of them are there owing to our own limitations, while others are there owing to lessons from history. I assure you, Sir, that the day when India begins to act nationally and patriotically, these safeguards will be nowhere. They are necessary now; because we are so hopelessly divided. They are there to safeguard the interests of the minority communities and to protect the men in services, and so far as these exist, there is nothing wrong about the safeguards. Those who know the game of cricket will find that the ministers will be the wicket keepers and the Governors will only be the long stop and nothing more. If the ball cannot be stopped and kept in check by these worthies, it might be caught and held by another man sitting behind. The Governor may also be compared to the danger wires or poles in electricity. Unless they are there everything which falls on the electrified wires is sure to burn. So the presence of the Governor is necessary just as the presence of the danger pole or wire. Moreover we should depend on the integrity, on the intelligence, on the education and on the good-will of our future Governors. Rather I suggest that we should have safeguards for our ministers because even in those matters in which they are given full authority they take the papers to and consult the higher authority. So there must be safeguards to protect this. After all we are only arguing in the abstract; let us work the thing. Let us put our shoulder to the wheel and very good results on both sides will be achieved. Let us muster strong under the banner of the workers of the constitution and prove the value of its working to the country.

Mr. President : Motion under consideration, amendment moved.—

That the last four words of Chaudhri Afzal Haq's motion be deleted.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain (North-East Towns, non-muhammadan Urban) (Urdu) : Sir, in supporting the motion moved by the honourable member for Hoshiarpur (Chaudhri Afzal Haq) I shall try to throw a dim light on some of the aspects of the Report by the Joint Parliamentary Committee. Before I do so I may be permitted to say that I have tried my best to find out if there are any good points in the Report. I may go so far and say that I have used a microscope, which a person will use who hopes to get a position under the Government or who has been promised a position under the Government as I have been actually promised, to find out the merits of this Report. But I am sorry to say that in spite of all these efforts I have failed to see any merits. I can say that there is not one point in this Report which may be calculated to satisfy a true Indian.

[Sh. Lekhwati Jain.]

As you are aware, Sir, the British Government and its representatives here in India have been telling us from time to time that they are prepared to grant dominion status to India in the near future, but there is not one word in the Report which may even imply that this status is to be granted to India even in the remote future. This Report is altogether silent about that pact called the Gandhi-Irwin Pact for which the name of Lord Irwin will go down to posterity and in which our present Governor was also concerned. There is no mention in this Report even of that joint memorandum which was submitted by our Deputy President and some other honourable members of this House and about which a resolution was also passed by this Council in its last budget session. All those representations, memoranda, promises and pledges appear to have been thrown to the wind. The Indian point of view has been hopelessly and totally ignored and in the circumstances it is no wonder that this Report has evoked opposition from all quarters and throughout the length and breadth of the country. It is being opposed, as all of us know, by all people from Raskumari to Kashmir and from Karachi to Burma. What to talk of the Congressmen and patriots, it has failed to satisfy even the moderates who are now as enthusiastic as anyone else in rejecting it. I shall not be wrong if I say that there are few people in India who are prepared to give their support to this Report. And if you find anyone supporting it, it is not because he is convinced that there are really some good points in it. He is, I am sure, supporting it because in his opinion it is the only opportunity for him to win the pleasure of the Government and its officers who have patronage in their hands (hear, hear). For instance, our respected Pandit Nanak Chand has blessed this Report and has tried to make us believe that there are at least three very good points in it. One is that it gives us federation at the centre. The other is that it gives us provincial autonomy and lastly it widens the franchise. It may be so from his point of view, but I beg to differ from him. There is no doubt about it that in the Assembly, that will come into existence under the new constitution, there will be no nominated members and there will be no Government block. But as Pandit ji must be aware there will be Rajas and Maharajas to make up that deficiency. These Rajas and Maharajas, I may say with due respect to them, will be even worse than the official block. They will never be able to act independently. They will always play into the hands of the Imperial Power like puppets, because whatever they possess is at the pleasure of the Home Government. I say that these Rajas and Maharajas will be even worse than the official block from another point of view also. Under the present constitution the number of official and nominated members in the Assembly which consists of 144 members in all, is only 40, but the number of their worse substitutes in the new constitution will be 144 as against 350 members in all. In other words the official block, as I call it, will be more powerful in the Assembly that will be formed under the new constitution. Under the circumstances no one can reasonably say that this so-called federation which is proposed to be given to us and about which Pandit Nanak Chand appears to be so very hopeful, will be something to boast of. If I may say so it will be worse than the present Assembly.

Now let us see whether this Report gives us provincial autonomy in its real meaning as Mr. Nanak Chand would have us believe. I admit that all the Government departments will be placed under the control of the ministers who will be six in number, as I guess it, and that three of them will be Muslims, two Hindus and one Sikh (Honourable Members: How do you know that?) It is only my guess. But these ministers will have no real power. They will always be at the mercy of His Excellency the Governor who will have full power to get rid of them at any moment by accusing them of tendency of sympathy with the terrorists and such other activities. The Governor will further have the power of taking the control of any department in his own hands if he finds that any of the ministers is acting against his wishes. He will even have the power to dissolve the Council for some time. Besides these powers, the Governor will have the power to make not only emergency laws to remain in force for a period of six months or for any limited period, but laws of a permanent nature. It clearly means that the Governor will be all in all and the ministers will be mere figure heads. In the face of these facts no one can say that it is provincial autonomy or even approaching something like provincial autonomy. Only the other day the Minister for Education in his presidential speech in the Y. M. C. A. tried to assure his audience that the Governor will not interfere with what the minister likes to do reasonably and honestly, and that, therefore, we should have no fears on the score that the Governor is being vested with very wide powers. He further told the audience that he was saying so on the strength of his experience for eight years as a minister during which period the Governor had never interfered with what he wished to do. That may be so. I am prepared to admit that that is really his experience. But may I ask him if he has ever dared to do anything contrary to the wishes of the Governor? If he has always been guided by the wishes of the Governor any interference by the latter was out of the question.

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon: Many a time I had to act contrary to the wishes of the Governor.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain: In any case it is not necessary that if the Governor has not interfered before he will not interfere in the future too. This will readily be admitted that the ministers will not have the power to enforce their will so far as their subordinates are concerned, because they will not be able to punish them in any way for their wrong-doing. In short the new constitution will be like a locked box the key of which will be in the possession of the Governor and the ministers will always look to the Governor for that key.

Now I come to the widening of franchise. It has been widened because direct representation has been substituted by indirect one. What a pity that we have been asked to accept it as one of the good points in the Report! The Honourable Minister for Education was just now pleased to say in his speech that this system of indirect election was good because the candidates for the Assembly would not have to undergo so much inconvenience as they have to experience now under the present system. What an argument for this change for the worse! Besides other defects that have already been pointed out in regard to this system of indirect election, one serious defect that will creep in public life will be that public in general will become corrupt. You know that even under the present circumstances the candidates for election to all bodies spend a lot of money. We are told that as many as ten thousand, twenty thousand, fifty thousand and one and two lakhs of rupees are spent by the candidates to win a seat in this or that body. This is what we know from the newspapers. And if this is so, you can very well guess that the votes of the 42 Hindus members of this Council will be easily purchased by the six candidates for the Assembly and similarly of the Muhammidan members of this Council. Another indirect result of this will be that persons who spend so much for being elected as members of this Council will have the incentive to spend more in future because they will be sure to regain much as the price of the votes that they will have to cast for a candidate for the Assembly. Under this indirect system of election only men like Raja Sahib, Doctor Sahib and Lala Gopal Das will be able to seek election and those who are the true servants of the people will have no place in these bodies. This in short will be the pernicious effect of this indirect system of election which we are asked to bless as very convenient and very useful.

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

By the proposals embodied in this Report we are not given any powers to ameliorate the condition of our trade and industries. Even at present we cannot frame a law to protect our trade or industrial interests. In the circumstances no one can say that we have been given dominion status. We fail to find our way to agree to the proposals incorporated in this Report. At present there are three motions before the House. The first motion was moved by honourable Chaudhri Afzal Haq, the second was moved by honourable Sardar Habib Ullah and the third was moved by the honourable member who criticised this Report and opposed it. This shows that honourable members are not satisfied with the proposals of the Joint Select Committee of the House of Parliament. From the Indian point of view this Report cannot be accepted so long as it is not materially changed in its objectionable aspects. Congress is the greatest political body in the country and it represents the public opinion in India. Congress has also passed a resolution to the effect that the proposals contained in this Report are unacceptable unless some substantial improvements according to the Indians' desire are made in them. Similarly Ahrar Party which is a very influential body in this country has also passed a resolution expressing their disappointment at what is contained in this Report. These proposals require a lot of improvement. Unless they are not amended they would not satisfy any section of the Indian public opinion. We were promised dominion status but the statesmen of England have gone back upon their word and they have given us a thing utterly disgusting and disappointing from the point of view of our aspirations. If dominion status is not granted to us in the near future agitation on a very large scale will be made and then the Indians will not be content even with dominion status. They would then prefer complete independence and for the severance the framers of this Report will be responsible. We will then want puran swaraj.

Then there is the question of separate electorates. To-day no Hindu can vote for a Muhammadan candidate seeking election for the Assembly. Similarly Hindu ladies cannot vote for a Muhammadan lady candidate for any of the legislatures. This continuously creates a schism between the two communities, a thing which is very deplorable. The Indian Women's Conference decided that they want joint electorates and passed a resolution in favour of joint electorates. They demanded joint electorates for themselves. But no heed has been paid to their demand.

It is very deplorable that in the second chambers no seats are reserved for women. The women candidates can seek election to the Lower Houses, to the Prince's Assembly and to all local legislatures but they are not given the right to seek election to an Upper House. If they are considered to be fit to sit in the Lower Houses and the local councils then there is no reason why they should not be regarded fit and qualified for the Upper Houses. The women should be given the right to become members of the Upper Houses also.

In the end I would only like to emphasise that this Report should be rejected and not agreed to, and it should be made clear to Parliament that nothing less than dominion status can satisfy the aspirations of the Indians. Further, it should also be made clear to Parliament that if the Indian aspirations is not satisfied there will be agitation in the country to an extent that the connection between India and England which has been existing for the last two centuries might break causing much loss to England. There is still time to mend matters. With these words, Sir, I resume my seat.

Khwaja Muhammad Eusoof : Sir, I beg to move—

That for the words 'should be' the word 'is' be substituted in Chaudhri Afzal Haq's motion.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President: The question is—

That the last three words 'and is rejected' be deleted from the original motion.

The motion was carried.

Pir Akbar Ali : Sir, I beg to move—

That the question be now put.

The motion was carried.

Mr. President : The question is—

That whereas, the scheme of constitution outlined in the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee definitely falls short of the pledges given by His Majesty's Government and does not satisfy the Indian aspirations, in the opinion of this House it should be declared inadequate, unsatisfactory and disappointing.

The Council divided : Ayes 14, Noes 25.

AYES.

Afzal Haq, Chaudhri.

Bhagat Ram, Lala.

Chetan Anand, Lala.

Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur, Sardar.

Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.

Mararaj Singh, Chohan, Kanwar.

Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan,
Chaudhri.

Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.

Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.

Mukand Lal Puri, Mr.

Nihal Chand Aggarwal, Lala.

Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.

Sewak Ram, Rai Bahadur, Lala.

Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Bahadur,
Malik.

NOES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
 Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan Bahadur, Mian.
 Akbar Ali, Pir.
 Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
 Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
 Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
 Faqir Hussain Khan, Chaudhri.
 Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur, Nawab Chaudhri.
 Gurbachan Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar.
 Janmeja Singh, Captain, Sardar Bahadur, Sardar.
 Jaswant Singh, Guru.
 Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib, Lala.
 Mayadas, Mr. Ernest.

Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
 Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur, Nawab.
 Muhammad Jamal Khan, Leghari, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
 Mushtaq Ahmad, Gurmani, Khan Bahadur, Mian.
 Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib, Mian.
 Nurullah, Mian.
 Pancham Chand, Thakur.
 Ram Singh, 2nd-Lieut., Sardar.
 Riasat Ali, Chaudhri.
 Roberts, Mr. W.
 Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur, Sardar.
 Zafrulla Khan, Chaudhri.

Chaudhri Afzal Haq (Hoshiarpur-cum-Ludhiana, Muhammadan, Rural): I should like to say just a few words by way of reply. I may, however, assure the House that I will not detain the honourable members long. I submit that whenever it suits the honourable members on the official benches they say that the debate has been of a high order. When it does not suit them, they snub and threaten the members of the opposition. That high level of debate which has been alluded to by my honourable friends on the other side can be judged from their own speeches. It can also be judged from the speech that I have also made. From first to last all those points that I have brought before this House have not been answered at all. (Interruption.) I am told that I must fear Churchill. I need not be afraid of the Churchill of England. I have to be afraid of Churchills sitting here. They are worse enemies of this country than the Churchill of England. I expected a sympathetic attitude evinced by the official members, but I do not find any word of sympathy in the speeches of the official members who have taken part in the debate. I may point out that from Lord Irwin to the Duke of Connaught pledges have been given that we will be given dominion status, but there is not a shadow of dominion status in the Report which has been placed before us. It has been said that our attitude will make the die-hards in England more powerful. I may assure you that if the die-hards in England become more powerful, the extremist element in this country will become still more powerful. What happened in the year 1929? Perhaps those who have followed the politics of this country will remember that on the 23rd December there was a small round table conference in Delhi and it was attended by Motilal Nehru, Sardar Patel of the Legislative Assembly and Lord Irwin himself. There was Mahatma Gandhi also. At that conference the leader of Indian opinion tried to impress upon the Viceroy that if he promised dominion status for India every agitation would stop. At that time Lord Irwin who was a very honest and sincere man and very sympathetic towards our people said that he sympathized with our aspirations, but he could not at present agree to that. It was only after that that the National Congress passed a resolution asking for complete independence. They were forced to pass the resolution of independence because there was no hope held out to the Indian people that even dominion status would be conceded to them. It was after a bad disappointment that that resolution was passed. Though I tried to oppose that resolution in the Congress committee still I know that there was force behind that resolution.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Do you mean Purna Swaraj by dominion status ?

Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Yes. Before 1929 in our resolutions the swaraj meant within the Empire and even without the Empire. It was the Indian people who put forward that resolution. But it was the British officers and the attitude of the British people that made the Indian people stick to that resolution of independence. I now quote one couplet:—

بہر تغافل ہائے لیلیٰ کرد مجنون را خواب
ورقہ آن بیچارہ را لیلیٰ خرابائے نبرد

The Indian people were always loyal to the people of England but when the people of England disappointed them time and again, it was then that as human beings we felt it our duty to resent that attitude of the Britishers. Now some people think that the Britisher yielded these powers out of his own free will. But history says something against it.

Mr. President : Motion moved—

That in the opinion of this Council the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee does not satisfy the aspirations of Indians.

The question is that this motion be adopted.

The Council divided : Ayes 14, Noes 5.

AYES 14.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan
Bahadur, Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Bishan Singh, Sardar.
Buta Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur, Chaudhri.

Faqir Hussain Khan, Chaudhri.
Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan
Bahadur Nawab.
Muhammad Yasin Khan, Chaudhri.
Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib,
Mian.
Nurullah, Mian.
Roberts, Mr. W.
Zafrulla Khan, Chaudhri.

NOES 5.

Afsal Haq, Chaudhri.
Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.

Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan,
Chaudhri.
Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.

The Council then adjourned till 1-15 P.M., on Thursday, 20th December, 1934.

PRINTED BY
THE SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRINTING, PUNJAB.
226 PLC-525-29-12-34-SGPP Lahore.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Thursday, 20th December 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 1-15 P.M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

OATH OF OFFICE.

The following members were sworn in :—

Mr. A. V. Askwith (Officer on Special Duty).

Mr. H. J. Pearson (Officer on Special Duty).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

CUSTODY OF CATTLE FOUND WITHIN THE CANAL BOUNDARIES.

3994. Chaudhri Faqir Husain Khan : Will the Honourable Revenue Member kindly state—

(a) whether the overseer, zilladar and beldar are authorities under the Canal Rules to take into custody cattle found on the canal bund or grounds within the canal boundaries ;

(b) if the answer to (a) is in the negative, whether Government is aware that such persons as are mentioned in (a) usually catch cattle without authority ;

(c) whether the Government intends to issue instructions to prevent this abuse of power ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) No.

(b) & (c) No, but if the honourable member has in mind any instance, he will please quote it when an enquiry will be made.

REDUCTION OF LAND REVENUE.

3995. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : With reference to question No. *3364,¹ dated the 27th June 1934, will the Honourable Revenue Member be pleased to state what action the Commissioner took on the petitions ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The Commissioner forwarded the petitions to the Deputy Commissioner of Hoshiarpur who found on enquiry that there was no case for a remission of land revenue.

POWERS TO DEAL WITH TERRORISTS IN THE NEXT CONSTITUTION.

3996. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that the Punjab Government in their memorandum specially recommended that powers to deal with terrorists should be invested in the Governor in the next constitution ;

[Chaudhri Afzal Haq.]

- (b) whether the Government recommended that the Chief of Police may not be required to disclose the names of the informers even if asked by the responsible Ministers ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : What correspondence there has been has been with the Government of India : and it is not in the public interest to disclose it.

BOGUS VOTERS.

3997. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- (a) the number of bogus voters arrested in the Lahore Municipal elections held recently ;
(b) whether the Government have information that candidates ordinarily hire persons to vote for them in spite of the fact that they have no vote and even do not live in the ward for which they give their votes ;
(c) whether the Government propose to make an enquiry into the matter ?

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Twenty-five.

- (b) No such complaint has reached Government.
(c) Any specific complaints of impersonation received by Government or its officers will certainly be investigated.

POLITICAL PRISONERS.

3998. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether Government have made enquiries whether all the political prisoners who are kept separate from other prisoners are given proper facilities for taking exercise ;
(b) whether every such prisoner has a companion ;
(c) the total number of political prisoners who are kept separate ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : If the honourable member will inform me what class of prisoners he means by political prisoners, I will have the requisite information collected.

OPINION ON JOINT PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE REPORT.

3999. Chaudhri Afzal Haq : Will the Honourable Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether the Government of India or Home Government have invited Punjab Government's opinion on the Select Committee Report on the future constitution which has just been published ;
(b) whether the Government will lay that opinion on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Correspondence with the Government of India and Home Government is confidential : and it would not be in the public interest to reply to this question.

ENLISTMENT OF MIAN CHIRAGH-UD-DIN AS MEMBER OF CRIMINAL TRIBE.

4000. Sardar Jawahar Singh Dhillon : Will the Honourable Revenue Member please state—

(a) whether it is a fact that one Mian Chiragh-ud-Din, son of M. Barkat Ali, of village Khurla Kingra, Thana Sadar Jullundur, was enlisted as a member of a criminal tribe in the year 1933, —vide Government notification No. 9245, dated the 27th March 1933,—and his movements were restricted within the limits of his village ;

(b) if so, the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Yes.

(b) Because investigation by the Allahabad Police revealed that he was associated in crime with persons who were being prosecuted by them for counterfeiting and who were themselves members of a gang notified as a Criminal Tribe by this Government.

REPORT OF THE FRANCHISE COMMITTEE.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I thank the Government for giving this Council an opportunity to discuss the Franchise Committee's Report. I do not propose to take up the time of the House in discussing the Report in detail. I only wish to place before honourable members my views on three matters. The first is the landlords' constituency, the second is the women's constituency and the third is the allotment of seats in the Ambala division. As regards the landlords' constituency I wish to point that the qualification of a voter in this constituency is the same as at present that is, the payment of Rs. 500 as land revenue or the assignee of land revenue to the same extent. I wish to submit that this qualification should be lowered and a person paying land revenue to the tune of Rs. 250 should be made a voter. The fixing of qualification rests with the Government and I think this can be easily done. There is another reason for this suggestion of mine and that is this. The arrangement of these constituencies is such that it is highly improbable that the Hindus or Sikhs will get a seat which the Government thinks may be captured by them. In each of the constituencies Muhammadans are in such a majority that they will influence the elections of any other constituency.

Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan : You do not want them joint ?

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : I do want that but I also want that the Muhammadan community which has got two secure seats may not be able to affect the election in another constituency from where it is expected that a member of another community will come.

Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan : Do you think that the lowering of the franchise will help that ?

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : I cannot say. The figures are not before me and it is for the Government to say that. Next is the question of distribution of seats for women. In the first instance I wish to point out that one thing I am very much against is the confinement of the women's seat to one constituency for ever. The Government in the present proposals has been pleased to allot one seat to Hindu ladies in the cantonment and municipal area of Lahore only. I wish to submit that in the fitness of things this seat should be made to rotate from one constituency to another. One election should be in the urban constituency and the next in the rural. I think the Government should have no objection to this as the Joint Parliamentary Committee also reported on page 71, paragraph 128 in these words—

As regards the women's seats, we are provisionally, subject to consideration of special local difficulties in favour of the reservation of seats in constituencies formed for the purpose and containing both men and women. We are inclined to think it desirable that those constituencies should be both urban and rural, and we should see no objection to their area being varied by rotation should this prove to be desirable and practicable.

So in the case of general seats we find that the women's seats have been confined to areas which are non-rural areas and this is open to objection. It is in a way depriving the rural womenhood from coming into the forefront and taking steps which their sisters in the cities are taking at present. Objection may be taken to this proposal, but I may point out that even to this day rural women have so many things to teach to urban sisters of theirs.

Next, I wish to take up the case of distribution of general seats in the Ambala division. The rural seats that have been allotted to us in the Punjab are at present 26 out of 34. The matter was fully discussed in a note to the Government by Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram which is annexed at page 16 of the proceedings of the Provincial Franchise Committee Report. In this Chaudhri Sahib fully clears the point that the distribution of these seats to rural areas is not justified, but is against the interests of rural people. The rural seats should have been 28 or more. This question is rather important when we consider that the women's seat has been given to urban areas. The urban areas will no doubt capture so many other seats and fairplay requires that the number of seats allotted to rural areas should be increased. Then, comes the case of local distribution in the Ambala division. The Government has been pleased to say in another note on delimitation of seats at page 13 that the Ambala division will get 11 seats but when distributing them they distribute 10 seats and the one seat which is extra is given to the Hissar district. It seems Nawab Sahib does not agree to what I say so I may read the note—

As in the case of Muhammadans, if we distribute the 11 seats according to population it will be necessary to split up the districts of the division and separate tahsils from their districts and group them with other districts. This will, however, be open to serious objection. I would, therefore, give the extra seat to Hissar district with a population of 434,992.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan : On population basis Ambala division is entitled to 10 seats.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan : In spite of the interruption by Nawab Sahib, I think I am still right. I shall read this note in full—

The case of the Ambala division general population is similar to that of the Muham-madans of this division. Taking districts individually, the division will get 10 seats as below—

Hissar	2
Rohtak	3
Gurgaon	2
Karnal	2
Ambala and Simla	1

While taking as a whole it is entitled to 11 seats, its total rural population being 1,977,529.

The matter is clear, that is, the Ambala division taken as a whole should get 11 seats but, while distributing them individually among the districts the ten districts will get 10 seats and one extra seat is given to the Hissar district. I take exception to this. The Government should also remember the fact that the depressed classes in the Ambala division get 4 seats out of the 8 seats reserved for them and the Hissar district fortunately gets one seat. But in Ambala where there are 10,000 voters of the depressed classes and perhaps even more, all of them are given only one seat. Had this fact been taken into consideration, the case of the Ambala district would have been better than that of Hissar. Specific attention was drawn to this in the note of Rao Bahadur Chandhri Chhotu Ram to which I have just referred, but I do not know how it escaped the notice of Government.

Having given the general average of the seats allotted to the Hindus in the rural areas as one seat for 174,790 of the population, Government have given two seats to Hissar. Deducting double the figure given as average from the population of that district, the difference is only 85,412. They have given three seats to Rohtak and deducting thrice the figure taken as the average from the population of that district the difference is 6,443. Two seats have been given to Gurgaon district and deducting double the average from the population of that district the difference is 18,643. Now take the case of Karnal, Ambala and Simla together. Two seats have been given to these three districts and deducting twice the average from the total population of these districts, the difference is as much as 119,131. If we take this fact into consideration the extra seat which has been given to the Hissar district should in justice have been given to Ambala-cum-Karnal and Simla. In population Hissar district exceeds the Karnal district only by 2,000.

Government have said that they do not want to split the districts but I submit that this is not the only instance in which Government have been asked to split them. Government have themselves divided the districts and split even tahsils and thanas even in the case of Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs. Why should they refrain from grouping three districts in one unit and giving that group four seats? My argument is fortified by the fact that a part of Karnal district once formed part of Ambala. When the British came to the Punjab, the tahsil of Thanesar was part of Ambala and not a part of Karnal. It was named Pippili at that time. A portion of the Karnal district which once formed part of Ambala may for the purpose of election and no other purpose be taken as part of Ambala again, and Ambala, Simla and tahsil

[Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan.]

Thanesar may be given another seat. I wish to point out at this stage that the population of the rest of Karnal district if we exclude Thanesar, exceeds the average population taken as the basis multiplied by two. So it will not be doing injustice to anybody if Thanesar tahsil is separated from Karnal and attached to Ambala and Simla districts and the group given another seat.

The case of Ambala can be viewed sympathetically in another respect too. When we have found the average for a tahsil or part of a tahsil or a district or combination of tahsils, every district or even a tahsil which exceeds the average is entitled to a seat. Why not Ambala stand by itself as a tahsil, if nothing better can be done and why should Simla be combined with it to its disadvantage? If Government cannot combine Simla with any other area, then Ambala district is rightly entitled to some advantage.

My honourable friend wants me to say a few words about the depressed classes. I have read the note of Lala Mukand Lal Puri that some classes in my district have not been included among the depressed classes. One point is that owing to the shuddhi movement of the Arya Samajists, a person who is purified calls himself a mahashaya and no longer wants to call himself by the same name as his erstwhile brethren. Such persons have escaped the notice of Government and I hope Government will consider that aspect of the case and give them the same advantages which it has given to their brethren. Again the class of kabirpanthis have been excluded and they have a right to be included among the depressed classes. This is all that I want to say with regard to the Ambala district.

Dr. (Mrs.) M. C. Shave (Non-official, nominated): I am only concerned with the section of this Report that has to do with my people. I have a task to-day which is neither pleasant nor easy of accomplishment, but I should be untrue both to my people and to my ideals if I shirked it. The two seats held respectively by the honourable member who sits with the Unionist Party and myself have both been recorded as representing the European and Anglo-Indian communities in this Council, and this is why only one of us was chosen to be on the Franchise Committee. But we have done with appearances now and have come definitely to the parting of the ways. In the new Council under the reformed constitution the White Paper first, and now the Joint Committee's Report say that there will be a separate European seat and a separate Anglo-Indian seat. The Joint Committee's Report also gives a seat in the Assembly to a non-domiciled European from the Punjab but there is none for an Anglo-Indian from this Province. I have certain criticism to make of the paragraphs relating to European and Anglo-Indian electorates in the Punjab Franchise Report and to the note appended thereto. I should like to begin my argument by quoting from a leading article in an issue of the Civil and Military Gazette, for this introduces my subject more effectively than I could myself possibly. The Civil and Military Gazette although it emphasizes the definition of the Punjab Franchise Report which contains the words "regardless of domicile" calls the census figures "most fantastic," and it also says "any one of the slightest mixed blood now for election purposes must be regarded as an Anglo-Indian and if the definition is adhered to, this will do much to swell the ranks of that community which in the past has been denied the support of many of its more opulent brethren, who have claimed to be strictly European. A stranger result of a well conducted census probably never has been recorded; for one has only to look around the Railway Colonies alone to realise that the Anglo-Indian population is far and away bigger than that of the European." It is to the words 'regardless of domicile' that we object and the census figures that we protest are absolutely incorrect. These figures should be as the Civil and Military Gazette has suggested the other way round (not quite—for soldiers have been included on the European list) and for the words "regardless of domicile" we want substituted the words "not domiciled in India."

Now let me explain the composition of the Anglo-Indian and domicile European community. Ordinarily in marriages between people of different nationalities the children take the nationality of the father (as the children of Indians do when they marry European women). But when the marriage is between a woman of the East and a man of the West the case is differently dealt with by the Gods of Western Society to-day. The children of such a marriage are repudiated by the race to which the man belongs and must be specifically labelled and the man himself is outcast. It was not always so, as history records, and the following extract from the writings of an Englishman will show:—

- (1) In early John Company days inter-marriage was encouraged and the children were accepted as British and the sons given covenanted employment both civil and military. In those days when they were treated as people of our stock they showed the best qualities of that stock and Anglo-Indian names shine memorably in the story of the British in India. I feel shame every time I stand in the Residency at Lucknow and look at the ruins of that advanced post (over against the heart of the bitter fighting, confronting the haunt of "Bob the Nailer") which fifty boys of La Martiniere held throughout the siege. No boys in the world's history ever did a more gallant job.
- (2) By a process of the most shameful neglect and active contempt it has been reduced to its weak and dependent condition and out of weakness spring bitterness and an aching wretchedness of mind. It might have been a bridge between the two races now so estranged; instead, it has become a source of exasperation to both. In old days it rendered very great service to the British Raj; and many honoured names in our Indian history show what vigour of will and intellect Eurasians have possessed. Nor was its gift to the Indian community less in such personalities as Derozio's. Yet to-day the Eurasian community is regarded by Indians with a hatred which is rarely felt by them for the British; and with the British they carry in the stigma of 'native blood,' a disability as cruel and unjust as it is crushing.....their loyalty.....why should they give us such loyalty when we have treated them as we have?.....is beyond any loyalty that we get from the free races of our worldwide Commonwealth. As recently as the Great War they gave abundant proof that they can take their place with "the steadfast among spears" as resolutely as any Britisher of us all.

And so the years brought changes and among other things the advent of European women in larger numbers than ever before and a taboo was put upon my people and the term Eurasian came to be applied in contempt and derision. The taboo has been succinctly expressed by an English woman writer:—

Their very existence is an iniquity and we will not have the impropriety flaunted before our eyes. We will subscribe to hospitals where their women may lie and orphanages where their children may be brought up; but they must acquiesce in exclusion and work out their own salvation.

[Dr. (Mrs.) M. C. Shave.]

Thus a people grew up under this terrible shadow. They married mostly amongst themselves but as their women often possessed both charm and beauty Europeans many times married into this community and many Eurasian men sought and found European women willing to marry them. The blood of this community was therefore re-inforced again and again with European blood. Economic considerations kept certain European families in India, but by remaining here they also lost caste and came to share in a slightly lesser degree in the taboo—the country born. These people were educated in our schools shared our lives and occupations and our very homes. This was the true domiciled community. Into this community have gone over and over again—men by identification and women by marriage and vice versa—the “fair Anglo-Indians” who were not rich enough to get themselves and their children out of this country, driven by the ever present fear of the taboo till the domiciled European community became so intimately connected with the Anglo-Indian community that it is practically one community. So powerful was the fear of the taboo that when we pinched and scrapped and sent our sons to England for education, they often cut their parents and their brothers and sisters on their return to India, or only communicated with them by stealth.

In both church and state were men without vision or negligent of their duty, who have their own share of responsibility for our present plight; for our education has been entirely in the hands of the churches and our fortunes in the care of the state. Economic considerations, I have been definitely given to understand, necessitated and excused desertion and it cannot be prevented from going on. I did not think at the time of reminding these strange Christians (I am not always ready-witted) that it was Judas who sold their Lord for thirty pieces of silver, but I have thought of it since and to-day I must speak out or for ever hold my peace.

On the other hand there was growing up in India an Indian Christian community as the result of the work of European missionaries. These converts were sometime given and sometime assumed European names, and their position was at one time improved by merging into the Anglo-Indian community. When the Reforms came in, the better class Indian Christians were the first to realise that in the New India it would be safer to be an Indian than an Anglo-Indian and for once the easy way was the right way, so the dresses and topies disappeared and the sarees and turbans came back. But through generations a small section of these people had become so thoroughly imbued with our traditions and ideals and had so completely lost sight of their origin that their descendants to-day really believe they are Anglo-Indians. We have been told to drive out these people, but, can we, who have suffered for our colour, inflict suffering in our turn on others? It was into this section that British soldiers of ‘before the War’ days went for feminine companionship, and here they many times found their wives. And that kind of thing happens still. And last but not least there is a problem of victims of the Mendelian Law.

The taboo as the quotation I have given you implies imposed heavy social penalties to which civil and military disabilities were added; so, inevitably corruption and degeneration set in. Some Eurasians found that they could buy their way out of the shadow and improve their social position thereby, for, the preservation of racial integrity becomes a secondary matter beside economic considerations with a certain section of the European world. So, we lost constantly at the top all our prosperous and well-educated—the class that in every community forms that community's voice, fights its battles and sets its standards.

A few voices have always been raised against this conduct, voices that could only prove unavailing against the powerful influences of the past. These voices are stronger to-day and so we ask that in this definition the words "not domiciled in India" be substituted for the words "regardless of domicile" and the Domiciled European remain with us. It is for time we ask—time to teach our people the ignominy of compromise, time to teach them acceptance of their lot—time to teach the true domiciled European that while he can keep all his love for the 'old country' (which he may never have seen, and which we love as well as he) intact, he can and ought to be loyal to the land of his birth—time to show them all that while any remain under the shadow of the taboo none may in honour escape. Emerson says "there is no escape in all the worlds of God but performance—you must do your work before you shall be released"—and our work is to prove once and for all the utter falsity of that cruel libel—"the vices of both races and the virtues of neither." It is not 'perpetuating a mistake' but working out an expiation so that the eyes of mankind be opened and they see that the half-breed and the half-caste all the world over must not be treated as something less than man and deliberately stunted and deformed by ill-treatment, but allowed to grow to full stature and to justify his existence. TIME! O. TIME! to open the eyes of our people! To prove to them that life will be enriched in all the things that matter if they will only be loyal and true. And given time we shall succeed and shall build up a community which will be an asset to India and to Britain.

I was talking to a child sometime ago—a child who has always disliked the term Anglo-Indian and declared that she would never be one when she grew up. I told her that in the Southern States of North America white men had sometimes married Negroes and some of the descendants of these people who looked like white men of pure descent escaped into the American nation. But when Negroes were massacred and lynched and burned alive some of these white men with Negro blood came back to fight for their people. "Didn't they all come back?" She queried. "No!" I said, "some were afraid." "The cowards!" she flashed out, and then for the first time she saw her own way clear and for the moment she quailed and put her head on my shoulder, but she will grow and learn, and if an ordeal comes to her she will not flinch. The European community (non-domiciled) must give their British sense of justice full play and then they will see that they must not take any of our people on to their rolls. If they persist in their determination to exploit the census figures and profit by our weakness a nemesis will follow their actions as certainly as night follows day. They know their definition has not in the past been applied by them with any real fairness (I am referring to pure descent on both sides). They know that they cannot really appreciate our difficulties or represent our point of view in the Councils or on the education boards; but strong in the thought that might is right they have been trying to do away with direct representation on the Council in this province for us, and have prepared to throw their weight on the education boards on the side of those who would still keep us in thrall. But we have a final court of appeal in Britain if her sons here turn to us a deaf ear.

[Dr. (Mrs.) M. C. Shave.]

And now because I have been charged with opportunism, with so much said, there is one final statement to make and that is, that though we shall be one of the peoples of India, we must remain a separate people for a long time to come. An Indian gentleman once said to me, "Why don't you drop the 'Anglo'—it has brought you nothing but pain. I am of Arab stock but I do not call myself an 'Arabo-Indian.'" This is my answer. We have no illusions about the path we have to tread. If the past has been full of pain, our troubles have already increased and the future is rich with potentialities for suffering. We must, however, remain a separate people for a long time to come. Our culture is different and we have certain ideals which may come into conflict with those of New India. Ireland furnishes a parallel. For these we will fight and if need be die. For, if the warm blood of tropical climes makes our pulses beat a little faster, our emotions a little more difficult to control, in our nerves is more than a little of the steel of those Northern natures. Not "a disastrous waffly mixture" (as, above all, a book on religion for children described racial mixture the other day) but a combination that can raise man to heights of courage and sacrifice unknown to more uniformed people! We do not ask to be put to this supreme test but if it come and there be any real meaning in life, on that day we shall not be found wanting. I can only hope that "whatever Gods may be" will guard and guide all the peoples of this sub-continent which is our home till that far, far distant day dawns when all the races of the earth shall be one nation.

There is no seat in the Assembly for a Punjab Anglo-Indian but there is one for a non-domiciled European according to the Joint Committee's Report. We almost lost our seat in this Council when the Lothian Committee came. You must guard our seat and try to secure for us one in the Assembly. For there must not be "only Europeans and Indians in this Province." You need the Anglo-Indian still, his time for usefulness is not past. "And the stone that the builders rejected" shall be not "the chief stone of the corner"—but, ground in the mills of Destiny, the cement that shall bind the nations together.

Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan (Sialkot, Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I am sure all of us are very grateful to our colleagues, Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan, and the members of the Provincial Franchise Committee for all the care and labour that they have bestowed upon the task that was entrusted to them, the result of which is under discussion to-day by this House. I shall not detain the House very long for the one matter that I desire to raise in connection with this Report. But the matter is an important one and I think I am justified in taking up a few minutes of the time of the House to draw attention to it.

I wish to draw attention to the number of seats allotted to Sialkot rural Muslim constituency. The number proposed originally in the Report was 3. This was said to be raised by the Franchise Committee to 4. In paragraph 13 on page 5, the Franchise Committee in their Report say—

The Committee was unanimously of opinion that Amritsar was not entitled to three rural seats as proposed either on the basis of population or of voting strength rough figures of which were supplied to the Committee, and that this seat should go to Sialkot. That would give one seat to each tabell of the Sialkot district.

Now the population figures are as follows :—

Sialkot Muslim population	529,598
Amritsar Muslim population	382,984

The original proposal was to give 3 seats to Sialkot and 3 to Amritsar, thus placing them on the same level and as I have just said the Committee proposed that Amritsar should have 2 and Sialkot should have 4. I shall readily admit that either division would cause a certain amount of injustice either to one district or to the other. Amritsar on the population figures deserves a little more than 2, but not quite 3. Sialkot deserves a little more than 3 but not quite 4. That being the case my submission is that other factors in the situation may be looked at in order to determine which of these two districts should have the odd seat.

Now the Report of the Franchise Committee took into consideration not only the population figures but also the voting strength and gave that as the main reason for differing from the original Government proposals. Finally the decision of the Government like most of the Government decisions is ruthless, direct and without any kind of argument. It merely says—

2 P. M.

It is decided to adhere to the previous decision of Government to allot three seats to Amritsar district rural and three seats to Dera Ghazi Khan district rural instead of two seats to each of these districts as proposed by the committee.

My submission is that Government, I am afraid as appears from their Report, have failed to pay any attention whatsoever to another important factor involved in the case. That factor is this: Under no circumstances would one have thought that population alone would be the factor which would determine decision in such matters. The real factor of the situation is the number of voters under the present system as well as the numbers that are likely to be on the registers under the new franchise proposals. Looked at from this point of view the case for the odd seat going to Sialkot is very much stronger than it is on the population basis. I understand that the strength of Muslim voters in the Sialkot district under the present system and conditions of franchise is 9,145 and that in Amritsar is 4,727, so that the number of voters in the Sialkot district at present is almost double the number of voters in Amritsar. But the disparity is likely to be still greater under the new conditions. It is expected that in the Amritsar district Muslim voters under the new franchise conditions will be just over 20,000, the estimate is 20,574, but in the Sialkot district they are estimated to be 46,198, considerably more than double the number of voters in Amritsar. On these figures I should have thought that it would have struck even a very busy executive Government that the case was very strong for allotting the extra seat to Sialkot rather than to Amritsar. I have no grievance against Amritsar and it is not a question of between Sialkot and Amritsar for any political or geographical reasons, but it just happens that Amritsar is the district which will get considerably more than its share even on the population basis and an unjustifiable excess on the voting strength basis if things are allowed to stand as they are proposed in the final decision of

[Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan.]

Government. I therefore venture to draw the attention of the Government to this great disparity and I hope that before the proposals are put in a final shape for the commission which is finally to deal with these matters Government will be pleased to revise their report in this particular respect.

Chaudhri Ram Sarup (North-West Rohtak, non-Muhammadian Rural) (Urdu): Sir, leaving special constituencies apart, the Hindus have been given 27 rural and 9 urban seats. If this allotment had been made on the population basis the urban Hindus with a population of 914,000 would have got only 5·7 seats whereas full 29 seats would have gone to rural Hindus with a population of no less than 45 lakhs. As the population of the rural Hindus is five times the population of the urban Hindus they ought to have been allotted 45 seats if population was the only basis for the allotment of seats. But I have not been able to understand how the Government arrived at the strange figure of 27 in the case of rural Hindus. They have done injustice to urban Hindus which they should take the earliest steps to remedy. The honourable lady member of this House, Shrimati Lekhwati Jain, is always heard loudly complaining that the Hindu zamindars, and in particular Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, are unusually anxious for their own rights. But this is how the wishes of the zamindar Hindus are fulfilled. She has excelled veteran Hindu members in opposing the demands of Hindu zamindars and criticising them in season and out of season. Now they have cheated even her by taking the women's seats for themselves. Further I find from the study of the Franchise Committee Report that the Mussalmans as well as the Sikhs have been given one seat for every tahsil. But nowhere has this right been conceded to Hindus. This could have been done with much show of reason for at least one district, that is, the district of Rohtak. Although the Franchise Committee made a unanimous recommendation that three instead of four seats should be given to the Rohtak district, their recommendation does not seem to have found favour with the Government. I hope Chaudhri Chhotu Ram will press this matter on the attention of the Government. He should make it clear to the Government that they have shown undue favour to urban Hindus by allotting 9 seats to them whereas they deserved to get only 6. He should assimilate the tactics of the urban Hindus who move slowly and stealthily, without making much noise. I think he will succeed that way. The grievances of the rural Hindus are great and many but they have always escaped the notice of the Government. We have no sympathies of our countrymen too. The Mussalmans think we are Hindus. The Hindus consider us zamindars. (Laughter).

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: But what are you actually?

Chaudhri Ram Sarup: We are everything. But in the eyes of the honourable member we are nothing. But the time is coming when the eyes of honourable members will open and they will know better. I shall again point out to the Government the anomaly of giving away 9 seats to a community which deserves only 5·7 and ignoring the rights of rural Hindus by giving them 27 seats while they deserve 29. I have not been able to understand how the Government have arrived at this decision.

Mian Nurullah (Jyallpur South, Muhammadian, Rural): The document before us to-day is a very important one because the constituencies framed under this report are going to last for a number of years. It is, therefore, the duty of every one of us to study it minutely, but always impartially. Several great questions arise out of this Report. But the one question that strikes me is, as pointed out by my honourable friend, Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan, whether the constituencies should have been formed on the population basis or on the voting strength. It looks as if the population basis has been given preference. I do not find the voting strength figures given in the columns along with the population figures. Personally I think the population basis should not be taken as the basis for forming constituencies, but the voting strength should be the basis on which these constituencies should be formed. My reason is very simple. Adult franchise is likely to come after a number of years. Even then we would not be nearer the population. I might ask from the Honourable Member in charge what percentage adult franchise is going to form as compared with population. Supposing it is 30 per cent. Then, when we adopt adult franchise the total number of voters will form 30 out of 100 of the population? (Interruption). Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan corrects me and says it is 25 per cent. to be very exact. According to this Franchise Committee's Report and the franchise that is being given to us we are likely to enfranchise between 10 to 14 per cent. of the population. This is much nearer to 25 per cent. than the population. (Interruption). Even that does not take away the force of my argument. Supposing it is 45 including women, even then 14 per cent. is nearer to 45 than 45 is to 100. So, we will never reach the population. Therefore, the basis that should be adopted, even taking it for granted that adult franchise will be introduced after a few years, should be the voting strength. If that basis is adopted, then, certainly Western Punjab will get something more than the Eastern Punjab and the division of Multan is likely to get about 30 seats instead of 23 seats now given. On the same basis, coming to my own district of Lyallpur which pays about one-fifth of the total revenues of the province, there the voting strength is much more proportionately than the population. Compare, for instance, the figures for the Legislative Assembly. The voting strength for the Legislative Assembly in the Lyallpur district is 8,150 as compared with the total number of 12,100 for the four districts of Sialkot, Gujranwala, Sheikhupura and Lyallpur which form the whole constituency. That means that Lyallpur has got two-thirds of voters of the whole constituency. In the Council the case is going to be different. Taking the voting strength of Lyallpur as it is likely to be under the new franchise, I can easily say that we deserve more than one-third of the number of seats that are allotted for these four districts. But we are getting much less than our due share. Therefore, I urge that voting strength should be taken as the basis. If that cannot be done, then the mean between the voting strength and the total population should at least be the basis.

I next come to the distribution of seats according to tahsils. Where the number of seats in a district is the same as the number of tahsils no difficulty arises; but where the number of tahsils is not the same as the number of seats difficulty does arise. Probably the matter was referred to deputy commissioners and others as to how to divide the district into that number of constituencies. Previously in the district of Jhang we had three tahsils and three constituencies, one for each tahsil. But now we find in the further list that the disparity of population has been removed and the tahsils have been broken. I wonder if the local people of that district were consulted. But certainly it is true that we cannot have the best of both. We cannot stick to tahsils and also have the population percentage equal. But what I want to lay before the House is that if in one district this differential treatment has been given, why not carry it to others? I may point out that Toba Tek Singh has got a population of 197,000 while Jaranwala is said to possess according to this Report a population of 147,000. I challenge the correctness of the figure 197,000 for Toba Tek Singh. I am positive that it has got a population of at least 206,000. (Interruption). I shall refer only to Muslim seats and not others. I leave it to others to take up the case of other interests. I find that in Toba Tek Singh which has been created a sub-division a large area has been brought from three districts. One is from Montgomery. This was brought in before the last census. Later an area consisting of about 41 villages was taken from the Multan district and attached to Toba Tek Singh. This was after the last census report. This has greatly added to the population of Toba Tek Singh. Considering the fact that franchise is being given to tenants of six acres, we will have at least 10,000 voters among the tenant population alone. The total population of Toba Tek Singh is likely to reach 240,000. Thus the disparity between Toba Tek Singh and Jaranwala will become very great, Jaranwala having a population of 147,000 and Toba Tek Singh, a population of 240,000. Two more villages were added from Jhang with an area of 7,000 acres. The old rakh of Pirmahal in Toba Tahsil is being rapidly colonised. Considering all these facts Toba should get not one but two seats.

[Mian Narullah.]

In any case the disparity in population can be easily removed, I can suggest many permutations and combinations, but the fairest would be that part of Thana Bablak in the Samundri Tahsil should go with Jaranwala and instead Thana Kamalia with 15,000 souls and a new area from Multan with about 12,000 souls should be taken off from Toba and added to Samundri. Toba may be left with one seat with its growing population in Pirmahal area (a new grain market place) and the chaks from Jhang. The areas are contiguous and will result as follows :—

Toba	198,000
Samundri	182,000
Jaranwala	175,000
Lyallpur	170,000

If correct it would be a fair distribution. This will be all right to some extent if we were to stick to population. But I think that if voting strength is considered Lyallpur should get another two seats at least. I am astonished to find that in the future lists of constituencies given to us not only tahsils have been split to police station areas but a further sub-division is made. In certain cases I find that even zails have been excluded or included. I find this in four or five cases.

I now come to women constituencies. I find that these are special constituencies. Therefore, I would request that in the new Act women should have a right of standing from any constituency they like. If possible, I would suggest, that all the District headquarter towns of the province should be allowed to take part in it. That will remove the objection put forward by the honourable member who moved this motion, Kanwat Mamraj Singh Chohan, because otherwise it is only a few districts that will get the benefit. So let all the districts have some say in it. It can be based on the basis of landholders constituencies if you like. Then I find that the municipalities of Bagbanpura and Bhogiwal in men's side have been added to the urban areas, while on the women's side they have been excluded. I request that they may be brought into the Lahore area.

Another point I would like to mention is the landholders' constituencies. There are 3,741 voters and the Franchise Committee Report makes an attempt to give one seat according to the Act to the general, one to the Sikhs and 2 to the Muslims. I find that no clear majority is given to the first two. If two groups combine they can defeat the third. That should not be so. If an open attempt is made then with a little change in the number of votes the object can be achieved. If you like I can place my amendment on the table, so that the constituencies are divided into groups and the seats of the Muslims go to the Muslims, the Sikhs to the Sikhs and the Hindus to the Hindus giving each of them a clear majority over all others combined. The difference in one case between Muslims and Sikhs is only 25 and when the voters' lists are actually prepared the difference might dwindle down to nothing or just the reverse. Next the reference made by Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan is very striking. In one case there are 529,000 and in the other 382,000 souls and one seat more is allotted to Amritsar rather than to Sialkot. On the basis of voting strength Sialkot deserves that seat and if I can carry the analogy further and compare Amritsar with Lyallpur with an addition of 316,000 voters, only one extra seat is given. That is still more unfair to Lyallpur. To put it more clearly the population of Amritsar is 382,000 and that of Lyallpur 698,000. The difference is 314,000, but there is a difference of only one extra seat. That also strengthens my previous argument.

Another thing I want to point out—I may be wrong and would like to be corrected—is that while counting the number of constituencies in Statement E on page VI of the Franchise Committee's Report, I find that Hoshiarpur has two for a population of 309,000. Number 8 is given, then one seat is missing and No. 9 is given to Jullundur. We have got 75 rural constituencies and 9 urban. But one constituency has not been given a number. (Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan: Kangra and Hoshiarpur together come under No. 7). My last point is that all this requires a reconsideration on the basis of electoral strength and on the basis of population. The new Government of India Bill is not going to be passed before the next winter. I, therefore, request the Honourable Member in charge to reconsider the whole matter on the basis of voting strength.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani (Non-official, nominated) (Urdu): Sir, I had thought that in discussing the Report of the Provincial Franchise Committee honourable members would restrict their remarks only to matters of principle and would leave the details to be worked out by the Reforms Department, but some of my honourable friends have considered it fit to interfere in matters of internal distribution of seats within a district which could have been more usefully dealt with by more competent and impartial agency, the Reforms Department of the Punjab Government. I, on my part, would try to confine my remarks only to matters of principle. The question of delimiting the constituencies within a district can be decided more efficiently by the provincial Government in consultation with local district authorities. I am laying emphasis on this point because it is possible that in view of our individual interests we may not be able to give due consideration to the conflicting interests and it might be said that we have tried to take advantage of our position and that our proposals are not impartial and are apt to effect adversely the interests of others.

[K. B. Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani.]

My friend from Lyallpur has taken objection to the delimitation of constituencies in his district on tahsil basis. He has said that as the numerical strength of population in each tahsil of his district varies it would be better to take away a portion from one tahsil and add it to the other to remove the disparity in the numerical strength of the population. I would like to point out in this respect that if this principle is adhered to it will entail a great hardship to the population of that area which will be added to the other tahsil because they will remain in a hopeless minority and it will not be possible for a resident of that area to be elected as against one who belongs to the other tahsil which will have an overwhelming majority. It will, moreover, be more convenient to have tahsils as a unit, because it is a better administrative and geographical division.

Mian Nurullah : Why is it then that some police stations and even zails have been taken away from one tahsil and added to another in certain cases ?

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani : As far as I can understand, it is done only in certain special cases where sectional and clanish interests of the people of a particular area were more identical to the population of the other tahsil than that of their own. For instance, there is a police station in one tahsil in which there is preponderance of Arain population and it happens to be situated in a tahsil which has very little or no Arain population in its other portions, and there is more population of their clan in the neighbouring tahsil. In such a case it would be advantageous to include that area to the other tahsil where there is more population of similar clan and they have more in common with each other. In such special cases it may be useful to make these changes but not as a general rule.

It has been suggested that the constituencies should be delimited on the basis of voting strength rather than on the basis of population. I am opposed to this principle for various reasons. Our ultimate goal is adult franchise and this is a first step towards that goal. All the political parties are unanimous in the view that we should introduce adult franchise as soon as we can overcome administrative difficulties in that connection and if we adhere to that principle it is only right that we should form our constituencies on population basis so that when it is possible to introduce adult franchise we may not have to start with the formation of constituencies again. Moreover, the member who represents a constituency has not only to look after the interests of the voters but he is expected to protect the interests of the entire population of that area and he has, therefore, to keep himself in touch with the general population of the constituency. On this consideration also, it is desirable that the constituencies should be delimited on population basis. Apart from that there are practical difficulties at present in forming constituencies on the basis of voting strength, because the existing voters' lists cannot be taken as a correct basis for calculating qualifications. The existing franchise materially differs from that which has been proposed in the White Paper Scheme and the Joint Parliamentary Select Committee Report. Under the existing system persons enjoying property qualifications are only enfranchised but under the new proposals the right of vote will be extended to tenants, haisiyat tax-payers, and persons with educational qualifications of the primary standard. It would, therefore, be impossible to estimate correctly the number of future voters unless statistics are gathered. It cannot be denied that collection of this material will entail enormous labour and expense and unless Parliament definitely approves of the franchise proposals it will be futile to proceed in this matter. Under these circumstances there could have been no other basis to work upon except population basis. I might also point out that there will be very little difference, if at all, between the voting and the population strength of the district. At present the colony districts have larger voting strength than the other districts, but by the enfranchisement of tenants this disparity will almost disappear. The reason of there being more voters in colony districts is that there is a large majority of peasant proprietors there, and an owner of six acres of land generally pays sufficient amount of land revenue to enable him to become a voter. The number of voters is less in non-colony districts because there the number of peasant proprietors is comparatively less and the big landholders are in a majority. By the enfranchisement of tenants there will be great increase in the number of voters in the non-colony districts while there will be practically no increase in the voting strength in colony districts where the peasant proprietor already enjoys the right of vote. Before I resume my seat I feel myself called upon to express my appreciation of the work so creditably done by the members of our Provincial Franchise Committee. I hope I am voicing the feelings of the House when I say that the high sense of responsibility with which they have performed their duties deserve our sincere gratitude. I wish to pay a special tribute to Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan, Reforms Commissioner, for his untiring labour, high standard of efficiency and speed and great sense of duty. It was due to his tact, honesty and strict impartiality that almost all the conflicting interests have been satisfied by his proposals and his scheme has earned universal approval and admiration. I sincerely congratulate him on the successful termination of his great and important task. It is a great pity that he is retiring shortly. Our regrets are increased when we find that he is leaving the department at a time when his services are most needed. I, however, hope that he will not desert us and that he will long be associated with us and with this Council, and that we shall continue to derive more benefits by his ripe experience and statesmanship.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): I just want to say a few words about this Report. Classification of constituencies has been made on the basis of population and this in spite of the fact that adult franchise has been actually denied. There is no prospect of adult franchise being accorded in the near future. Basing of election on population strength is absolutely wrong and it will never stand the test when actual figures of voting strength are obtained. In the new constitution we shall have a voting strength of rural areas based on Rs. 5, as the maximum amount of land revenue and if a list is carefully made, then the wide difference, the very wide difference in the voting strength of each city and village in the districts will be obvious. Therefore this list to all intents and purposes is not at all one which will stand when the actual figures are obtained and it is good that the members are now pointing out its defects. These defects pointed out by members and their remarks will remain on record and judgment will be based on these. It is a mistake to suppose that these constituencies are final arrangement and it seems to me that some of the members are discussing the Report on that assumption. But that assumption is totally wrong. Taking the actual facts, I take strong exception to one thing in this Report. The qualification for describing a constituency rural or urban is bad. Previously there used to be a limit of ten thousand souls for dubbing a constituency as urban and now it has been reduced to 7,500 and the result is very ridiculous. I will point out to you just from my own division a few strange things. According to this qualification Shahabad which is a village for all intents and purposes and for all practical purposes, has been included in the urban areas. If you go to Shahabad, you will find that it is a village but if you look at the franchise report you will find that it is a town. This reminds me of the artist who could not distinguish between a picture of a house or a man. Similarly, if you look at this constituency list you will be compelled to think as I do. Again I can point out a village in the Ferozepore district called Nathana which has a population of 20,000 souls but it is still a village. I believe it is the largest village in the world. Will you class it as a village or a town? This classification is therefore absolutely wrong and the results are that Shahabad, Sadhaura and Kharar which are at present rural areas will in future be towns. Instead of making any advance towards the real character which they possess, they have lost all hopes of having their own representatives in the Council or the Assembly of the future. If you link up Shahabad with the town of Ambala, do you think that any man will ever be returned from Shahabad in the face of all the overwhelming voters in the town of Ambala? The result will be that Shahabad will get no real representative in the Council. For these purposes this point requires very careful consideration. All those villages which were included in rural areas before are not ambitious of becoming towns and losing all hopes of representation by their own men. Similarly in the Sialkot district the two Daskas have been included in Sialkot. Do you expect that any man from these Daskas has a chance of being returned to the Councils in the face of the large number of voters from Sialkot? These people will be left nowhere. This point has been evidently overlooked by the Franchise Committee. Instead of reducing the number they should have increased the population strength for including a village in urban areas. On the other hand they have reduced it and the result is what I have explained. I trust Nawab Sahib who is here will note this point and will not leave these people to their fate. They will otherwise have to say—

[Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan.]

عطائے تو بہ لقا ئے تو بخشیدم

If the franchise is extended these people should not be deprived of the chance of having their representatives in the Council and Assembly. Similarly my friend touched that point by mentioning Baghbanpur and Bhogiwal which have been linked up. Do you expect that any man from Baghbanpura can come to the Council? Why should you link these towns together? They are villages separate from each other and each village should be considered on its own merits. This is for the purpose of returning members to the Council and not for any municipal purpose. The link is there for the levy of octroi or things of that type, but not for the purpose of having representatives in the Council. Similarly the two Daskas should not be linked up. This remark applies to other places also which have been unfortunate in the matter of being linked up together. Then there is another thing. Ambala, if you look up at the constituencies, will have two seats. But Ludhiana has been linked up with it. Now if these constituencies are only provisional and based on the approximate strength of voting or population, then, why should you not give representatives to the urban town of Ambala? You will still find that it has been linked up with Ludhiana. It appears to me that the effect will be that only men from Ludhiana will be returned and Ambala division will be in the unhappy position of having no representative from urban areas. Ludhiana has an overwhelming number of voters, but if these few towns from the Ambala district are taken away from that district the effect will naturally be that they will have no representatives. I agree that that is not the intention but that will be the effect of this arrangement. I therefore urge that Ambala Division should be allowed two seats. (Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan: What is the population of Ambala division?) I say the population basis is absolutely rubbish. There ought to be due consideration given to the voting strength and I am not for the population basis at all. Is it not going over the head of the Franchise Committee over which that renowned Lord, Lord Lothian, presided, to construct the constituencies on the population basis as if we were all given adult franchise?

In my opinion this is not the time to delimit constituencies. It would not take much time to delimit them once the constitution is settled. It is not a difficult matter and it could be arranged within two months' time after the Reform Act is passed. No purpose is served by creating constituencies beforehand. If at all anything is done at this stage it should be only the general principles that should be framed and the actual figures should be worked out later. To work out the figures and to form the constituencies now is a mistake. It has led to several interpretations being put upon the step taken in enumerating and delimiting the constituencies.

In the Gujrat district even the population basis has not been maintained. There are circles in which the population is very meagre and yet they have been given one representative. Take for instance circle No. 2, the police station areas of Karianwala and Lalamusa. It has a very small population in comparison with the first, third, fourth and fifth circles. Yet it is given one member. Why is this? I ask. Will the Nawab Sahib kindly explain this? This I say is a discrimination unduly made. Why not Bahuwal and Sabawal which are congruous to this circle be left in the second circle and why should they be joined to the third circle? Why should thereby the other circles be made unduly large? The only conceivable justification for this step is that these zails are not individually big enough and that they have to be linked up to be given a representative. But these should have been given to the police stations of Karianwala and Lalamusa Circle. Even if zails have to be split up there is no harm in doing so. This has been already done, for instance, Mohuwal has been taken from the fourth circle, Pindi Bahauddin has been taken from the sixth circle. Why not these two police stations be tacked to the second circle which has a smaller population? Similarly there are a number of inconsistent facts in the Report which if I had the time I would go into in detail. But I think I have indicated the main defects of the Report and for the time being it should be made clear that constituencies are not laid out finally. Government should say: We have simply marked out principles according to which constituencies should be framed and when the actual figures are available, we would frame the actual constituencies. The only objection to my mind for such a step would be that when the Government of India Act is passed and the rules are framed thereunder it will take a long time to frame the constituencies. I may remind my honourable friend, the Nawab Sahib, that it would take not more than two months to complete the list of constituencies and to define them, and two months is not a long period. There is at present a fear in the minds of the people—it may not be a fact and I myself do not see the justification for the fear—that the constituencies are being defined now beforehand for a sinister purpose, of making it easy for some big men to return to the legislature. Why should Government raise this unnecessary suspicion in the mind of the people? When the time comes the constituencies may be delimited. The patwaris and the tahsildars are there and they will give you complete lists within a week if they like. I know a tahsildar made the list for a district board based on a five rupee qualification within three or four days. He called all the patwaris together with a jamabandi and each patwari was called upon to give the list of voters and he made it within a few hours. I say from actual experience that the preparation of the list will not take a long time as long as you have the patwaris. Only keep them content and give them a little allowance and they would save you all delay and this will save all unjust and unkind remarks from the people at large. With these words I bring my remarks to a close.

[Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan.]

Mr. E. Mayadas (Nominated, non-official): I also offer my meed of praise to the framers of the Franchise Committee Report for the trouble they have taken in preparing it. It would have been a far pleasanter task to discuss a motion about joint electorates without reservation of seats, but we have to take things as they are and therefore I will say just a few words on behalf of the community which I represent here.

The total population of Christians is given as about 414,788 of which the Europeans and Anglo-Indians are shown as 22,644. The Indian Christians represent the difference between these two figures, i.e., about 392,144. In this province the Indian Christians are concentrated in the Lahore division and in two districts of the Multan division, that is Lyallpur and Montgomery. In the Lahore division the number according to the list given here is, in Lahore, 51,003, in Gujranwala, 49,297, in Sheikhupura, 49,211, in Gurdaspur, 43,014, and in Amritsar, 16,408, making a total of 273,049 in the whole division. Of the two districts in the Multan division, Lyallpur has 45,448 and Montgomery 17,099 which make a total of 62,547. Adding the figures of the Lahore division with those of the two districts, we get a total of 335,596 which represents almost 90 per cent. of the total population of Indian Christians in the province.

The Christians have been allotted two seats. One possible solution was to give one representative to the urban area and another to the rural area. In the case of the urban area the same towns could have been selected as in the case of the other communities, that is towns with a population of 7,500 and upwards. If that had been done the urban areas would have covered a population of 42,000 and the rural areas a population of 309,000, making up a total of 351,000. While certainly a very large proportion of the total population would thus have been included in the special constituencies the size of the two constituencies would have been very unequal one being almost seven times the size of the other. Therefore, Government have very wisely not followed this idea. Government then selected eight districts for the formation of two special constituencies, one constituency to be composed of Lahore, Amritsar, Gurdaspur, and Sialkot with a total population of 174,541 and the other constituency of Gujranwala, Sheikhupura, Lyallpur and Montgomery with a total population of 161,005. Putting the two together the total population comes to 335,546. (Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan: We have added Multan and Shahpur.) They were taken in later on. I am referring to what was done at the first time. This proposal was certainly much better than the one about urban and rural constituencies. Indian Christians would like to have it made perfectly clear that those who are not included in these special constituencies can stand for election in the general constituencies with non-Muslims or in the special constituencies with Indian Christians. In this connection I will read an extract from paragraph 4 of the note on delimitation of constituencies:—

No restrictions need be placed on candidates standing in these special constituencies. As in the case of the present general constituencies Indian Christians living outside these areas should be eligible to become candidates in these constituencies.

The words "in these constituencies" are not quite clear and I would beg Government to be good enough to make them clear. Do these words mean, the special constituencies or the general constituencies or both? We request that Christians living outside the special constituencies be permitted to stand for the special constituencies as Christian candidates or in the general constituencies.

After this, Government was pleased to add Shahpur and Multan to the special constituencies. It appears that some members of the Franchise Committee pointed out that the inclusion of Christians with the non-Muslims and their voting with non-Muslims disturbed the elections of their non-Muslim candidates and that they would rather, that as few Christians as possible voted with the non-Muslims. To this we have no objection. If our brethren want us that we may vote separately we are quite willing to do so. But on passing I feel constrained to remark that whereas so many of my countrymen have so often said that they liked the idea of general electorates, here when a small opportunity is offered of partaking in a kind of general electorate, they raise objection about it. Their proposal was that towns with as low a population as 3,000 should be included in the special constituencies. If that had been done then altogether seventeen districts would have had to be put into these selected constituencies. But Government has not adopted this proposal. They have however added two more districts only to the eight already selected, that is Shahpur with a population of 11,244 and Multan with a population of 8,939. Thus the proposal of Government now for the Indian Christians is that there will be two constituencies, one consisting of Christians living in the districts of Sialkot, Lahore, Gurdaspur and Amritsar with a population of 174,541 and the other constituency consisting of Gujranwala, Sheikhupura, Lyallpur, Montgomery, Shahpur and Multan, with a population of 181,238. This is as good an arrangement as regards area and population as could in the circumstances have been made.

[Mr. E. Mayadas.]

As soon as I came to know of this matter, I informed the editors of two Indian Christian papers, one called the "Almaida" published in Lahore which is circulated in every district as well as many states, and the other "Sai-e-Jadid" published in Kapurthala and this information appeared in the October number of these papers. Again, the further information about the composition of these constituencies that is showing the districts comprising them was received later and I forwarded it again to the Editor of the "Almaida" and that appeared in the November number. Thus the matter has been fairly well circulated and a good many Christians have come to know about it. Some Christians have discussed the matter with me and they have said that they would have preferred an arrangement by which as many districts as possible could be included in the special constituencies, because they are very interested about the representatives they send to the Council that they may send the best men as far as possible. I also brought this matter to the notice of the Indian Christian Association and they carefully considered it from every point of view, from the point of view of our Hindu brethren who say that our voting with them disturbs them, from the point of view of the general Christian who says he is interested in voting for the best Indian Christian representative and also from the Government point of view of convenience, and of not making the constituencies too unwieldy. The Indian Christian Association desire me to report that they prefer the eight-district proposal to the ten-district one. That is, they prefer the first proposal to the second because of the smaller size that the constituencies would have, and they suggest that if convenient this be further reduced from eight to six, that is the six districts with the largest population only be included in the two constituencies.

I have got one thing more to say and that is this that the total population of the Punjab is 23,580,852 and in the next Council there will be 175 members. Thus the average we get per member is 174,747 against which the Indian Christian population is 392,144. Thus this gives 2.91 seats against which we have been given two seats. With a small weightage we might have been given three seats.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan : I do not think the honourable member can discuss that point.

Mr. E. Mayadas : I only wanted to bring it to your notice. I do not want to discuss it and I feel I can safely leave the matter in the hands of Government. With these words I resume my seat.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri Fazl Ali (Gujrat East, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I had no idea to participate in the debate as I thought it unnecessary to do so. But as the honourable member from Ambala (Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan) has been pleased to make mention of my district and has provoked me to say something in this connection, I feel called upon to make a few observations. He has been pleased to suggest that as the population of the villages in the jurisdiction of the police stations Karyala and Lala Musa in the Gujrat district is very small and as the population of Gujrat, which forms another circle, is comparatively much larger, therefore Zails Fatehpur and Sabowal now included in the constituency of Gujrat should be included in the constituency formed by the area under the jurisdiction of the two police stations mentioned above. But this suggestion, I may say, does not find favour with any one of those who are actually concerned and I have met no one in my ilaga who may have complained about the delimitation of the constituencies by the Franchise Committee. I am inclined to think that the honourable member, who is in the habit of poking his nose in the affairs concerning others and who on some previous occasions also has talked of Gujrat district, has made this complaint or has made this suggestion without knowing the real situation and without any knowledge of the conditions of that district. My friend on my left tells me just now that he has been a tahsildar and in that capacity he may have known the conditions of my district. I know that he has been a tahsildar, but unfortunately he could not remain for long in that post and for whatever period he remained tahsildar, he was never posted to any of the tahsils in my constituency.

The honourable member ought to have known that if his suggestion is accepted, the constituency which he considers is small now will become very large. It will then be open to another objection and that is that some villages of one constituency will be in the jurisdiction of two different police stations although so far the guiding principle has been that this should never be done unless it is very necessary to do so.

I take this opportunity to pay my tribute to the Franchise Committee for the services it has rendered to the province and particularly to Nawab Sahib who has been considering the situation very carefully and who also took the trouble of going to my district and studying the conditions there in person. He had been in the district for a considerable time and knows the district very well. We are fully alive to the fact that in the delimitation of constituencies it is impossible to work with mathematical precision and exactitude. It is only on estimates that these things can be worked. Supposing that a population of $1\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs is taken as the average for each seat. It is impossible to stick to that average in each case. It must happen that in some cases this figure should go up to $1\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs and in some cases it should come down to $1\frac{1}{4}$ lakh. Therefore, it is useless to suggest that one or two zails should be taken out of one constituency and should be included in another constituency. If it has been considered necessary to include Mangowal zail in the Phalia constituency, how can it be said that it is equally proper or necessary to include the two zails mentioned before in the constituency of Karyala and Lalamusa? The conditions of different places are different and if we were to act according to the suggestion of the honourable member, the arrangement proposed will be again open to the same objection to remove which this arrangement is being proposed. But I ask, where is need for making any such change when we do not want it? I have not met with one person in my district who may have expressed his dissatisfaction with the present arrangement in any way.

[K. B. Nawab, Ch. Fazl Ali.]

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Because you are not the true representative of that district and therefore no one would have come to you to express his dissatisfaction.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri Fazl Ali : Evidently only persons from Ambala or Ludhiana can be true representatives of the people and no other person! I know that the honourable member has the audacity to speak on every motion that comes up before the House and also to press for it. But I do not remember any such proposal which has been agreed by the Council adopted by the Government. I wonder why he should take upon himself the duty of ventilating the supposed grievance of the people of the Gujrat district when he knows nothing about that district. If at all he has ever been to that district he has gone there only once or twice in the capacity of a jail visitor. Beyond that he knows nothing about the district and it is not for him to ask for any changes to be made in the present arrangements. It is probable that the honourable member might have been approached by any one for his own selfish motive. As I have said before, we are very much indebted to Nawab Sahib for his very fair distribution so far as our district is concerned and we are fully satisfied with it. We do not want any change in that distribution and I am sure that Government will not be carried away by what the honourable member from Ambala has said.

Chaudhri Faqir Husain Khan (Amritsar, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I must first congratulate those who have prepared this Report which is now under discussion. It is obvious that they must have worked very hard to bring out this Report for which they fully deserve our thanks. I specially congratulate Nawab Sahib for preparing this Report.

Now, coming to the allotment of seats for different districts I would like to submit that at present according to this Report three seats have been allotted for Amritsar. For Amritsar an allotment of at least three seats was very necessary. For Sialkot one more seat has been demanded. Three seats have already been allotted to Sialkot. The population of Sialkot is 529,598. According to this Report for the representation of 158,374 persons one seat is allotted.^a According to this arrangement by allotting three seats for Sialkot arrangement for the representation of 475,122 men has been made. The remaining population which will not be represented consists of 54,476 men. Similarly the total population of Amritsar is 382,984. At present three seats have been allotted for Amritsar. If you take away one seat only a population of 316,674 persons will be represented and the remaining population of 66,233 persons will go unrepresented.

The number of those who will not get any representation in the Amritsar district in case one seat is taken away, is far larger than the number of those who according to the present arrangement of representation of Sialkot district will have no representation. The number of such men who will not have any representation in the way I have described in the districts of Amritsar and Sialkot is 66,233 and 54,476 respectively. In the presence of these figures in all fairness it is desirable that the third seat allotted to Amritsar should not be taken away from it.

Another reason why Amritsar deserves three seats and not two is this, that at present so far as elections to the district board are concerned the system of joint electorates is in force. On account of joint electorates the Muslims of this district on account of the neighbouring powerful sister communities fail to capture the proper number of seats according to their population in the district. To compensate this loss it is necessary that Amritsar should be given three seats as at present arranged.

As regards the claims of Attock to one more seat my argument against this district is the same which I have already advanced against a similar claim of Sialkot. The population of Attock is less than Sialkot. As such it cannot have a superior claim to a third seat than Sialkot, and regarding the claim of Sialkot I have already made my submissions and shown how it cannot be admitted.

In view of all that I have said, I think it would have become clear to this Honourable House that it is only Amritsar that deserves 3 seats.

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah (Jhang, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, the work of delimitation of the constituencies in this province for the coming reforms is a very important and rather a delicate one. Everybody expected that much time would be spent in fixing the territorial boundaries of these constituencies. But this has been completed within a very short period and that accounts for the hard labour put in by the members of the Franchise Committee under the guidance of our able Reforms Commissioner (Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan). Hence I would be lacking in my duty if I do not associate myself with the previous speakers in congratulating the Nawab Sahib and the members of the Franchise Committee for their untiring labour to put through, as I have said before, this most important and delicate work. And I say :

” مبارک علی مبارک “

The work of delimitation of constituencies for every community, class and interest in this province being very important and delicate I am sure the Franchise Committee must have been confronted with much difficulties in reconciling different communities and interests in certain cases, but they have come out with great success in this respect. The successful working of the new constitution mostly if not entirely depends upon these proposals and it is the duty of every member of this honourable House to make some useful contribution to it in general, and regarding their respective constituencies in particular. So, I will put forth the demands of my constituency, and make some suggestions regarding the same.

As honourable members know I represent the Jhang Muhammadan Rural constituency in this House. So I shall try to confine my remarks to it, but I may have to compare the claims of my district with one or two other districts of this province. There are always certain principles which are observed in every work of this nature, such as allotment of seats to each district of this province. The main criterion in this case were the population, the voting strength and the land revenue annually paid by the districts concerned. According to all these three principles, as I understood them, I expected that my district (Jhang) was entitled to four Muslim rural seats and I awaited the recommendations of the Franchise Committee very anxiously. When these were published and there was no proposal regarding the number of rural Muslims seats allotted to my district, it only indicated that the Deputy Commissioner was consulted as there was great disparity between the population of the constituencies proposed for the district. From the study of the proceedings of the Franchise Committee I could make out (as the last two lines of paragraph 15 indicated) that the Committee was considering the claims of my district to another seat, but I could not find out whether their claims to another seat referred to the fourth seat or a fifth one being given to my district. And when we were supplied with another list of the remaining constituencies delimited later on, then to my great surprise I found, that my district was allotted only three Muslim rural seats. I was further disappointed when I found in the same further list of constituencies as it was called that districts like Dera Ghazi Khan and Amritsar were put in the same category with my district Jhang, i.e., they were allotted equal number of rural Muslim seats (three to each district). If we look at the statement "E" (Muhammadan Rural) of the "Note on the delimitation of Constituencies," we will observe that there is great difference between the population of the districts of Amritsar, Dera Ghazi Khan and Jhang, this being nearly 383,000, 407,000 and 518,000, respectively. There are certain other districts which have got much less Muslim rural population and have got the same number of seats as Jhang, but for convenience sake, and also taking in view the time of this Honourable House I have picked out only these two districts of Amritsar and Dera Ghazi Khan, the former with the least Muslim rural population and the later coming next to it in the same category of districts which have been allotted three Muslim rural seats each. Jhang and Dera Ghazi Khan being in the same division, I will further compare them in this respect. All of us have seen that there is a difference of nearly 111,000 between the rural Muslim populations of these two districts. Now I will present the House with two other aspects of the question, i.e., the difference between the voting strength and the amount of revenue annually taken by the Punjab Government from these two districts. Most part of Jhang district, as you all know, is irrigated by the two most important systems of canals, Lower Chenab and the Lower Jhelum, of this province: with the result that a much larger area is annually cultivated in this district than in the Dera Ghazi Khan district, which has as I understand got no permanent canal system and hence Government gets annually much more money from the former than from the latter, in the shape of land revenue and water rates. Again, owing to the presence of the two above mentioned very extensive systems of canals and the district having quite a large area of new colony on these canals, there is no comparison, between the number of small landholders in Jhang district, with those in the district of Dera Ghazi Khan wherein the landed property of each tuman stretches in miles, and there are but a few votes in each tuman. Almost all the small landholders at present in the Jhang district are voters for this Honourable House, and with the lowering of the franchise qualifications (as proposed by the Lothian Committee) there will hardly be a small landholder left in the Jhang District who will remain unenfranchised. Consequently the voting strength of my district will at least be doubled if not more. There may be an increase in the present voting strength of the Dera Ghazi Khan district owing to the enfranchisement of the tenants but the same will apply to the tenants in the Jhang district; and I am sure the number of so enfranchised tenants of Jhang will greatly exceed that of the Dera Ghazi Khan district. I have endeavoured to put before this House, the case of my district as compared with the districts of Amritsar and Dera Ghazi Khan and more specially with the last mentioned. And the House must have realised that the claims of my district to have more seats than that of Dera Ghazi Khan, are much greater and well founded and deserves sympathetic treatment by the Government to make up the wrong done to it in this respect. There is still an opportunity to rectify the mistake as the present arrangement is not a final one. If we peruse the proposal of the Franchise Committee we shall notice that another seat has been reserved for Dera Ghazi Khan district, I mean the tumandars' seat. It makes four seats in all to Dera Ghazi Khan district.

[Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah.]

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan : They represent the tribes across the border.

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah : Yes, I know it. They may be given another extra seat for their special services and political importance; I do not grudge them being given a special seat ; they do deserve it, but the fact remains that only a tumandar is going to capture that seat and no outsider. What I wish is this that a seat be found from any other part of the province for Jhang, and it can easily be taken from Amritsar and given to Jhang. But as there is a claimant to that seat—Sialkot in the same division—therefore the third seat allotted to Dera Ghazi Khan, should be taken away from it and given to Jhang district to redress our grievances in this behalf.

There is another point which I wish to put before the House. We find on page 3 of the Proceedings of the Franchise Committee, that one Muslim woman seat was proposed to be given to a rural district which was very backward in education, and was much behind the other rural districts so far as general advancement was concerned ; and specially the womenfolk of that district. It can be easily found out from the Annual Reports on Education and those of other Government Departments that Jhang lags much behind the other Muslim districts of this province even in general advancement of its male population, what to say of the poor womenfolk of that unfortunate district. But as a Muslim district it is very important. Nearly 88 per cent. of the population of that district is Muslim. There is another very important and special feature of this district : that several Muslim ladies belonging to families of very high social and political status, are owners of vast landed properties ; wielding great respect and influence in their districts. But extremely conservative as they are, neither their wealth nor their influence is of any use to their community and country. The fact of their being big landholders can be ascertained from the electoral rolls of the several landholders' constituencies of the Council of State, Legislative Assembly and the Punjab

[Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah.]

Legislative Council. It is very essential that their lot is improved and a seat in the local legislature for them, is bound to have very good results in this direction.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan : Have you got any educated lady in Jhang who will come to the Council ?

Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah : Probably not, but we can import any number of them from our neighbouring districts such as Shahpur for this purpose (laughter). Reverting to the main subject, I would request that a woman elected from Jhang (though she may be an outsider) will take much interest in these Jhang ladies to improve their condition. I am sure this will have a healthy effect on them, and their sense of duty and responsibility towards their community in general and the womenfolk in particular is bound to be awakened with the results, that they themselves will use their wealth and influence in ameliorating the lot of their sisters of the district concerned, and then and then alone the Government will be able to say that they have done something real for the womenfolk in the countryside, where much is needed in this direction.

Even in the White Paper, there is a reference to the special concession being given to backward areas and classes ; and when unfortunately we have got a most backward class in a backward area like Jhang, why should not the Government agree to our legitimate demand of giving us a woman seat in the local legislature and why should it afford this concession to Jullundur district, which is already far advanced in every respect than my unfortunate district of Jhang ? The Government has already given a woman seat to an advanced area, i.e., Lahore and if they wish really to do some good to a backward district then they should give this seat to us, otherwise it will not achieve the object stated in page 4 of the Note on Delimitation of Constituencies and in paragraph 15 of the Proceedings of the Franchise Committee. So, in the interest of political education and advancement among the Muslim women of the backward areas I strongly request the Government to allot this one woman seat (reserved for Muslim rural areas) to my district Jhang, which is most backward in this respect.

I had no mind to speak on this point, that is about the proposed constituencies for Jhang Muslim rural as we are not allotted the number of seats we are entitled to, but my friend Mian Nurullah of Lyallpur has just referred to in his speech, so I will explain what we the Jhang people think about it. Sir, in paragraph 14 of the Proceedings of the Franchise Committee it was pointed out that there was great disparity between the population of different tahsils of Jhang district and again in paragraph 9, on page 2 of a paper called provisional decisions of the Punjab Government on the recommendations of the Franchise Committee which was supplied to us later on, we find that this matter was referred to the Deputy Commissioner, Jhang, for consultation and advice, and on his recommendation the police station of Brana was taken from tahsil Chiniot and annexed to tahsil Jhang constituency while police stations Massan and Athara Hazari were taken away from tahsil Jhang and attached to the Shorkot constituency. Besides making up the vast disparity between the population of these tahsil constituencies, it has removed another very serious defect which would have damaged the cause of two great and most important Rajput tribes of the Jhang district, viz., the Siyals and the Bhattis. Thana Brana is mostly inhabited by Bhattis—Rajput and also there are good many villages belonging to the same tribe in the adjoining police station of Qadirpur situated to the south of Brana in the Jhang tahsil. By the present arrangement the entire Bhattis ilaga has been brought together in the Jhang tahsil constituency and now they would be more able to send to the Legislative Council their nominee (who will look after their interest) than had the constituency been confined to the tahsil boundaries and they remained divided into two constituencies, and their rights ignored, as they could not have influenced the elections. Again, the bulk of the great and most important tribe of the Siyal Rajputs (whose ancestors for centuries were the rulers of the part of this province lying between Multan and Shahpur) have got their ilaga in police station Massan and Athara Hazari, in the Jhang tahsil. In combining the police stations of Massan and Athara Hazari with the Shorkot tahsil constituency, their tribe has been brought together in one constituency and in this case it would be more easy for them to send in their nominee and safeguard their interests, than if the mere territorial boundaries of the Jhang and Shahkot tahsils were kept for the purpose of delimiting these two constituencies and the great tribes' influence kept splitted up into two parts. Therefore, so far as delimitation of constituencies in case of three seats is concerned I as the soul representative of the Jhang Muhammadan rural at present in this House assure this House that they are satisfied with the present arrangement. But I most emphatically impress upon the Government to give our claims a sympathetic and most thorough consideration and give us another Muslim rural seat, as a matter of our right and also allot us the "Muslim rural women's seat" not as a matter merely of concession; but because we also deserve it owing to our backwardness.

In the end I should bring it to the notice of Government that there is already general grumbling in Jhang district over our one Muslim rural seat being taken away and it will intensify the situation if no heed is paid to our just and legitimate claims. In making these demands I am voicing the feelings of my electorate, as many prominent electors approached me and asked me to make these demands in the Council when these proposals were discussed. With these words I resume my seat.

Shrimati Lekhwati Jain (North-East Towns, non-Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, I did not want to take the precious time of the House in order to lay before it my humble submission. But before me some honourable members of this House have made a few references to the women of this province as well as to the question of their representation in this Council. Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan and Chaudhri Ram Sarup have said some things on behalf of women. I am thankful to them. Chaudhri Ram Sarup said that not only men have been deprived of one seat by its reservation for women but also that Shrimati has been deprived of it for that seat has not been given to rural areas and therefore Shrimati would not be able to capture it. I am very thankful to my brother for this consideration on his part. At least one seat for women ought to have been reserved for rural areas. At present this seat which we expected would come to us has fallen to the lot of Lahore. I am glad that Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has also said favourable things on behalf of women. He pressed that one of the seats reserved for women should be given to the rural areas. It was very kind of them all to plead our cause. But let me tell the House that we women are confident that we will surely get our proper rights. From what Chaudhri Ram Sarup said it appeared that he was dismayed at the idea that no seat had been reserved for the representation of women population of the rural areas. I would say that a seat for women should not be reserved for rural areas alone but it should be reserved for the whole of the Punjab Province. Some time back when I moved a resolution in this House asking that women may be allowed to vote for and seek elections to local bodies gentlemen from the rural areas like Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram and his colleagues opposed that resolution and said that they did not want that their women should go to the local bodies. But I find that they have changed their attitude towards women and have realised the necessity of demanding seats for them. So far as we women are concerned we want that our sisters living in the rural areas should awaken and realise their own interest. According to the Joint Committee's Report four seats have been reserved for women : one seat for a Hindu lady, one for a Sikh lady and two for Muhammadan ladies. The reservation of seats for women only means that women cannot capture seats in a contest with male candidates. So far as we women are concerned we have never requested that seats be reserved for us. We always wanted that we should be given equal rights with men and that we should be allowed to fight election campaigns in the same way as men do. We always trusted that our brethren would never be unjust to us and that they would concede to us the rights which belong to us. I was returned to this Council as its member from a constituency which is ordinarily reserved for men. The seat which I am occupying in this House was occupied before me by my worthy predecessor Rai Bahadur Lala Mohan Lal. On the death of this gentleman his seat fell vacant and I sought election from his constituency. I had to fight election campaign against men candidates in the first election, and then when the successful candidate's election was declared null and void and he was unseated I again sought election. At the second time only a woman contested my right to this seat. During these elections I found that my brothers of my constituency were willing to vote in my favour and this was the reason why no man had the courage to stand against me. This shows that there is no very great necessity for reserving seats for women. We want that we should be given equal rights with men.

[Shrimati Lekhwati Jain.]

The next objectionable thing is that the principle of separate elections has also been thrust upon us. We never demanded separate elections. It is deplorable that a Muslim sister cannot vote for a Hindu lady seeking election and vice versa. These separate elections are the seed of disunion and disruption amongst women. This fact that four seats have been reserved for us is a blot on the character of women so far as their conciliatory spirit is concerned. If no seats are reserved for women so far as their conciliatory spirit is concerned. If no seats are reserved for women it is very possible that they might capture more seats in an open contest with men. At present there are four seats reserved for women. If these seats had not been reserved, women would have captured at the most one or two seats less. But this loss would not have been much as compared with the loss which will be inflicted upon them by separate electorates and reservation of seats. This loss would be the loss of union amongst women and also the loss of confidence in their own capacities.

In the end I would say that only one seat has been reserved for Hindu women and that has also been given to Lahore. The lady member will in future be returned from Lahore. She would be the representative of the whole province. But the women of other districts of the province will have no hand in her election. This is deplorable. With these words I resume my seat.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): Sir, some honourable members of this House have appreciated the work of the Franchise Committee and have praised our work. We the members of the Committee do not deserve the praise which has been bestowed on us. Let me take the House, into confidence and tell them that the bulk of the work, if not the entire work, was done by our President, I mean, our colleague in the House, Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan, the Reforms Commissioner. He put up a very elaborate and useful note before the Committee and to him the thanks of the House are due but his work was really hindered by the difficulties which were inherent in the constitution of the Committee itself. The work of delimitation of constituencies is a work of very difficult and responsible character and a work for which impartiality and disinterestedness are the chief qualifications. The Committee which was appointed to assist the Reforms Commissioner unfortunately consisted of members of this House, appointed to that Committee more or less on party lines, who were themselves interested in carving out constituencies for themselves and their friends and who were naturally anxious to see that the future constitution of the House was on lines which were most favourable to the point of view which they represented. I do not blame the members. They were nominated to this Committee and naturally they could not help looking out for a constituency for themselves and for their friends. I do not say that this was done consciously. But it was very difficult for human beings not to be sub-consciously influenced in their own favour, they were Judges of their own cause and my own view is that wherever the Report of the President has been interfered with, it is really a moot point, whether that is an improvement on the original. That was his difficulty and that was the difficulty which the framers of this Report had to contend with. Another difficulty was that which was created by the procedure adopted by the Committee. We were asked to lay down constituencies for the election of the representatives of the entire province and the one thing that should have been done was to have invited the public to offer suggestions, or at any rate, a criticism of the tentative proposals of the President. But the Committee never examined any outsider and never gave the public any opportunity of expressing their views and therefore it was not in possession of any information except the one which was made available by the President through official sources and that which was supplied by the members themselves. It was very necessary for this Committee—and it was pointed out but the suggestion was not accepted—that the members of the public who were interested in the future constitution should be invited to offer their suggestions and should be examined, or at least an opportunity given for consideration of their opinions and suggestions. That was not done. Again, we were attempting to provide for the basis of a new constitution on an enormously increased franchise, and with a few absolutely new features. Therefore instead of proceeding on old lines, on lines which although beaten and therefore easier to be trodden, but which had resulted in a great disparity of representation; instead of chalking out new lines or considering new methods in delimitation of constituencies, the Committee decided to proceed more or less on the existing lines. We have just now had a few remarks from a member of this House on the disparity between the urban and rural representation, as compared with their proportions in the population. I do not wish to enter into a discussion of that proposition at all except to point out that in spite of the fact that the number of constituencies in the Punjab have been doubled, in spite of the fact that the urban area has been increased by inclusion in it of all villages having over 7,500 population instead of over 10,000 as under the present constitution, the urban representation whether of Hindus or of Muslims, is exactly the same as under the present constitution. (Khan Bahadar Nawab Muzaffar Khan: We gave 8 seats to the depressed classes.) They will also be representing mostly rural areas, but I particularly wish to draw attention to the paucity of Muslim urban representation. You will be pleased to observe that out of 86 general seats allotted to Muslims, only 9 are given to urban constituencies. But the paucity of urban representation is not my main grievance. In my opinion, the present distinction between rural and urban is futile. But whether that distinction is maintained, abolished, or modified, what I wish respectfully to convey to His Excellency the Governor, through you, Sir, is, that he should see that the new constitution which is the gift of Imperial Parliament, and to which the Imperial Parliament wishes all classes of His Majesty's subjects to be equally and fairly represented, is not, by any system of jerrymandering, made to subserve only the interests of the present party in power, and to intensify the privilege which a particular class enjoys under the present constitution. It is well known that in this province rights are claimed by people on the ground that they belong to statutory agricultural tribes, tribes notified under the Land Alienation Act. You know that a statement every year is given to us detailing as to what the percentage of persons belonging to the statutory tribes—they may not even be agriculturists, they may be merely Sayads carrying on urban occupations and residing in the town of Lahore—what the proportion of the number of statutory agricultural tribes is to those of non-agricultural tribes in the various services. Again throughout the province, privileges and rights are claimed on the ground that a person is or is not a member of a statutory agricultural tribe. Now, Sir, the population of this province consists of about 50 per cent. of the members of statutory agricultural tribes and 50 per cent. of non-agricultural tribes. I put this to the Government, and request them to frame the constituencies on any basis they like, on the basis of rural or urban, if they please, or on any other basis, but let them kindly delimit the constituencies in such a fashion that this House in future shall represent more fairly the population of this province, i.e., that to this House will be returned approximately 50 per cent. of non-agricultural tribes and 50 per cent. of agricultural tribes. And this is not difficult to achieve, if a serious attempt is made to arrive at a fair and equitable distribution on these lines. The consti-tuen-

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

cies which the Committee has delimited do not provide for such a fair distribution. I make bold to say that the present constituencies would ensure the return of 70 to 75 per cent. of members belonging to agricultural tribes. I am making that statement after careful consideration and I should like Nawab Sahib to contradict it, if he can. I put it to you, Sir, is it fair that the present House consisting of majority of members of statutory agricultural tribes, the present Government dominated as it is, by members of statutory agricultural tribes should lay down the basis of the future constitution, in which although their proportion in the population is only 50 per cent., they should be returned to the Council to the tune of 70 per cent? That is my objection on principle. I do not wish to go into any matter of detail relating to particular constituencies.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan : What remedies would you suggest in delimiting constituencies?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I wish that subject had been open for discussion in the Franchise Committee. I would, however, suggest straight away one of the obvious methods which is actually in use in the neighbouring province and that is that the urban seats should only be confined to towns whose population is more than 50,000 and the remaining seats should be divided on territorial basis. The Committee, following the report of the President has made one innovation this year which will have exactly the opposite effect, that is, that villages whose population is 8,000 or 9,000 or less than 10,000 have been now relegated to the urban areas, so that the rural constituencies which will now be formed would not be able to return a member of non-agricultural tribes, or even be influenced by that electorate. I join with my friend Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan in my protest against this innovation and thank him for bringing this change to your notice. He has given you the instance of the village of Shahabad in Karnal district. It is a village. I give you another instance off hand, i.e., of Daska in the Sialkot district, a place to which I and my friend Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan belong and which under the new classification will be treated as towns and which are to all intents and purposes villages. The population of both these villages contains a very large portion of non-agriculturist population and will be deprived of influence in deciding the election of representatives from that rural area. Objection has been taken to the number of Hindu representatives of urban constituencies, i.e., they have been allotted 9 seats. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram says that they should have 6. I say, no, they should get only two or three. After all urban conditions prevail only in Lahore, Amritsar, and possibly at Rawalpindi and Multan. The rest of the province should be divided into convenient areas so as to assure that the members of the House represent the agriculturists and non-agriculturists equally. This is not a point which is being urged here for the first time. This is a matter which has been agitated before and which was also put forward before the Franchise Committee, presided over by Lord Lothian. They went into this question and pointed out that the statutory agriculturists who enjoy special privileges under the Land Alienation Act should not have the additional privilege conferred on them of being in a vast majority on the electoral roll. Franchise proposals should be so framed that the legislature should consist of all the sections of the population in a fair proportion. Let me place before the House what the Lothian Committee said on the point. They said—

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

The Punjab Land Alienation Act affords great advantages social and economic to the members of the agricultural tribes and it would not be right to give them in addition, the political predominance which they would gain if they formed $\frac{1}{2}$ of the electorate.

Therefore in making electorates the Government should see that they are given only the proportion which their population entitles them to. By a little jerrymandering, you can assure that the Hindus, Sikhs and Muslims who are returned to this Council do not have more than 50 per cent. of members of statutory agricultural tribes. But the constituencies as at present framed, would result in sending 75 per cent., or in any case not less than 70 per cent. of the members of statutory agricultural tribes, to the Council.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : They are 80 per cent. of the population.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : They are 50 per cent. and no more. Kindly study the Census Report. If they are 80 per cent., I have no grievance. What I submit is this, that if my premises are correct that the members of statutory agricultural tribes do not form more than 50 per cent. of the population, you will kindly see that you delimit the constituencies in such a fashion that it should be possible for about 50 per cent. of members of non-agricultural tribes consisting of Hindus, Muhammadans and Sikhs to be returned to this Council. If the result achieved is different, I am not here to attribute motives, it would always be said that the party which was in power intentionally brought about a state of affairs by which their own predominance was perpetuated. I am not concerned with the proportion of rural and urban members. Am I a rural or an urban person? I have a vote in rural areas and will probably be returned next time from a rural constituency, if I care. I have houses in rural areas and lands and property. I have lived in rural areas during my childhood and if for the purposes of my profession I have to come to Lahore, there is absolutely no reason, why I should be any more an urban member than any other rural representative. What difference is there between Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan and myself? He is a barrister practising here. We both come from the same place and practically from the same surroundings. His father was a lawyer, so was mine, he owns land and so do I, and both of us practise at Lahore.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : Daska has been joined to Sialkot.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I do not live at present in a village, Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan also does not live in a village. I live 5 miles away from Daska. My humble request to His Excellency the Governor who is the guardian of the constitution is, that in order to prevent any unfairness to the minorities he should kindly see that 50 per cent. representatives are secured to non-agriculturists. And it can be easily done. In a few days, sitting for a few hours only a Government official should be in a position to demarcate constituencies which would achieve that result. It is a thing which should be attempted and done. The cry of rural and urban differences is a false cry. Do not give the towns 9 seats, give them three for Lahore and Amritsar, Rawalpindi and Multan. The rest of the province should be divided into rural constituencies so arranged that every section of the population receives proper representation. This cry of antagonism between rural and urban is absolutely false and is an attempt to side track the real issue. You do not give a post to a Shaikh if his father and he himself live in rural areas, nor do you refuse a post to a Sayad of Lahore who has never moved out of Lahore. The Sayad is a member of an agricultural tribe and the Shaikh is not inspite of the fact that a Sayad lives in the town and his ancestors have also lived in towns while the Shaikh lives in a village. I therefore ask the members of this House that in all fairness it is necessary that the constituencies should be so delimited that they should represent the various elements in the same proportion as they are represented in the population. Now I take up one or two small matters of detail. May I point out with respect to the depressed classes that Kabir Panthis of Hoshiarpur and Mahashas of Gurdaspur have not been included in the category of depressed classes? What happened was that this matter of representation of depressed classes was considered in the Committee at an earlier stage and we blindly followed the advice of a gentleman who represented the depressed classes and whose claim to represent them has subsequently been denied by several associations of repute and who subsequently sent these associations to us. I have so often said that everybody is anxious to carve out constituencies for himself and is afraid lest others might appear on the scene. Therefore these Kabir Panthis have been excluded from the list. A representation has been sent to Government a copy of which has also been supplied to me. It is signed by a gentleman who appeared before the Franchise Committee as a representative of depressed classes and who pleaded the claims of depressed classes before the Committee on behalf of his association. He was also called to give evidence and was examined at some length. I have personal and direct knowledge that Kabir Panthis of Hoshiarpur are treated as untouchables. There is a judicial case of 1931 in which Rajputs of Hoshiarpur district would not allow the Kabir Panthis even to bathe from the same tank or in fact from the same tap in the tank at which other Rajputs bathe. All the conditions which are necessary for the inclusion of Kabir Panthis amongst scheduled castes are to be found among them but these persons do not find themselves in this category. Again census figures have been taken as a basis of allocation of seats for these depressed classes. In some of the districts, depressed classes got themselves recorded as Mahashas or Vedic Dharmis. If you call a man Chuhra (sweeper), he is ashamed to own it, and some of these depressed called themselves Mahashas. It is quite possible that in a future census, some of the depressed classes would style themselves as Harijans, and the census man will put them as Harijans. Population of Gurdaspur has been taken from census report in which these persons are recorded as Mahashas. That is a matter to which I particularly invite the attention of the President of the Committee if he has still something to do with the matter. After all these matters should not be decided according to the opinion of one person who may have been nominated by the Government as a representative of those classes and he may possibly have reasons of his own to ask for exclusion or inclusion of certain persons. There is another matter in which the disinterested opinion of our President, was disregarded by a majority of the Committee. He definitely included in the list of voters of commercial constituency, companies whose paid up capital was Rs. 25,000. It is on page 21 of the Report. At the Committee stage unfortunately I happened to press for it and as voting usually went on party lines, I found myself with Mrs. Chatterjee, a Christian lady, a representative of ladies who I may point out was very useful, in a minority of two persons against four. Some people did not vote and therefore a very useful proposal of the Government was not accepted. Again, I request the Government to consider the claims for inclusion among the commerce constituency of trade associations other than those which figure on the old list. There is no reason why the Indian Chamber of Commerce of Lahore of which the President is Lala Harkishen Lal and the Deputy President is our friend, Khan Bahadur Sardar Habib Ullah and the Secretary, the indefatigable Mr. Sodhbans, and which enjoys so many privileges, already as for instance the returning of two members to the North-Western Railway Advisory Committee and which consists of the leading figures in the commercial life of this province, why this body should not be included among the voters, and why the other trade organisations of this province should have been excluded. The list of electors for this constituency has been unnecessarily narrowed down. I may respectfully point out as a result of ignorance on the part of members of the Committee more than due to any particular design, the companies under the present constitution have a right of vote in the constituency of industry. They have a right to be included, and the Government has rightly included them and restored the original proposal of the Government. There are thus only two matters of detail, the depressed classes and commerce, for which I have claimed the indulgence of the House for this time. But the main matter which should be set right is, as I have suggested, whether the thing is done by this Committee, by its President with or without the members, whether it is done by another Committee appointed by the Government, or by some official, the most important thing is for the Government to assure that in the new constitution which the Parliament has been graciously pleased to confer on the Punjab the various sections of the population of the province should find their due representation in the new Council and in proportion to their strength in the population.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

4 P. M.

Rai Bahadur Mr. P. Mukerji (Punjab Chamber of Commerce and Trades Association, Commerce): Honourable members who have preceded me have made comments on the various proposals embodied in the Proceedings of the Provincial Franchise Committee and the provisional decision of the Punjab Government on the Report. I desire on this occasion to confine my remarks to the matter relating to the Commerce Constituency and express the disquiet caused by the provisional decision of the Government to the two great well-established commercial organisations in the province, namely, the Punjab Chamber of Commerce and the Northern India Chamber of Commerce. Before going into the question I feel it is desirable that I should place before the honourable members of this House a history of the formation of the Commerce Constituency in this province as briefly as I can.

With the inauguration of the Morley-Minto Reforms in 1909 the Commerce Constituency was formed and the Punjab Chamber of Commerce with its headquarters in Delhi, then within the province of Punjab, and branches in Lahore and Amritsar—the only well-established commercial organisation fully representing both European and Indian commercial interests, was accorded the privilege of electing a member to the Punjab Legislative Council when the number of elected seats was only 11 and the total strength of the Council 29. This privilege of independent representation was exercised by the Chamber without interruption for eleven years. But under the Montagu-Chelmsford Reforms when the membership of the Council was considerably increased—from 29 to 97—representation of commercial interests was actually halved for the Punjab Chamber of Commerce was allotted a seat jointly with the Punjab Trades Association. The interests of merchants are not the same as those of traders and it is for this reason that commerce and trade are given separate representation in the other provinces and even the Lothian Committee recognised this difference. On page 130, paragraph 327 of their Report they said "We recognise the diversity of interests as between trade and commerce."

As soon as we came to know of this unhappy amalgamation of interests we represented the matter to the Government and we were given to understand that this diminished representation of commercial interests in the Punjab was due to an oversight and hopes were held out by the highest authority of the land at the time, a distinguished Viceroy, that the Chamber's claim for increased representation on the Punjab Legislative Council would be duly considered. The commercial community in the Punjab have been for the last several years labouring under a grievance in the matter of their representation in the legislatures. Since the introduction of the Montagu-Chelmsford Reforms their privilege for representation has been gradually restricted and the proposals for Indian Constitutional Reforms so far as the provincial council is concerned practically extinguish it. Three main points in this connection deserve special attention. The first is that, although, with the introduction of each successive stage of reforms, the Punjab Legislative Council has been enlarged commercial representation instead of being increased has been actually curtailed. The second point is that, while in every other province the number of commercial and industrial seats under the present proposal has been increased, except in the cases of the United Provinces and the Central Provinces, where the number is retained, it is only in the case of the Punjab that it has been curtailed. I will read out a statement which will convince honourable members, how commercial interests in the Punjab, have suffered under the present proposals, in comparison with other provinces.

NUMBER OF SEATS ALLOTTED TO COMMERCE, INDUSTRY, MINING AND PLANTING.

Province.	Indian Councils Act, 1909.	Government of India Act, 1919.	Present proposal.
Madras	4	5	6
Bombay	4	7	8
Bengal	6	15	19
United Provinces	2	3	3
Punjab	1	2	1
Behar and Orissa	2	3	4
Central Provinces	NB	2	2
Assam	3	6	11
Orissa (New Province)	*	*	1
Sind (New Province)	*	*	2

[R. B. Mr. P. Mukerji.]

Honourable members will observe that Assam a comparatively new province, with one-third the population of the Punjab has been accorded increased commercial representation almost in geometrical progression—8 in 1909, 6 in 1919 and 11 under the White Paper Scheme. Even Orissa, the proposed new province with little or no commercial importance has been given one seat.

The third point is that Labour in the Punjab Legislative Council has hitherto been represented by one nominated seat but under the proposed reforms Labour is to have three seats. It is not my concern to point out the difficulties of obtaining proper representation of Labour in its present unorganised condition in the Punjab nor do I object to increased representation of Labour; but I certainly protest against commercial and industrial interests of the province being granted a very much smaller representation as compared to Labour. It will be observed from the tabular statement given on page 79 of the White Paper that in no other province except in the Punjab, the employers of labour as such, have been awarded a less number of seats than Labour itself.

I will not weary the House by quoting more figures but, I should like by way of contrast, to mention that in Bengal while Employers of Labour have been granted 19 seats and in Assam 11 seats Labour has got 8 and 4 seats respectively. In the Punjab the table is entirely turned, Labour has got 3 seats as against 1 for the Employers of Labour. Even in the League of Nations where the International Labour Bureau is set up for ameliorating the condition of Labour throughout the world, Employers of Labour have got equal representation with Labour itself. The position in the Punjab is unique in this respect.

Some of the honourable members may very well repeat the argument that since the general constituencies return quite a number of commercial men there is no need of special constituencies for Commerce and Industry. To them my reply will be that the same remarks will apply to other special constituencies and since these constituencies have been retained in the other provinces the Punjab should be treated in the same manner as the other provinces have been. Another convincing reply is the one made by the Lothian Committee in this respect. I shall read the relevant portion from paragraph 320 of their Report :—

The suggestion has been made that the general constituencies can be relied on to return in sufficient numbers members whose experience is such as to enable them to speak with authority on commercial and industrial questions and that special representation for commerce and industry is unnecessary in the new legislatures. We are unable to accept this view. Functional representation is assuming increasing importance under modern conditions, and the arguments in favour of making special provision for the presence in legislative bodies of business and economic experts is in our judgment a strong one. While general constituencies may not frequently return individuals whose knowledge and experience is such that they can make contributions of value in discussions on commercial and industrial questions, those members speak primarily as representatives of their general constituency, and they may on occasion find that the claims of the constituency are difficult to reconcile with a wholly dispassionate examination of particular economic issues.

Another point to which I desire to draw the special attention of this House is that while Government is anxious that Englishmen and Indians should come into closer co-operation with each other, any such co-operation in the Punjab seems to be discouraged. A very glaring instance of this is the treatment meted out to the commercial men—both British and Indian—in the Punjab. In every other province British and Indian commercial interests have their own separate organisations and have secured separate representation in the legislatures, but, in the Punjab since these interests are amalgamated, in the Punjab Chamber of Commerce and the Northern India Chamber of Commerce, they have been accorded one seat only in the provincial Council. Had there been two separate bodies representing exclusively British and Indian commerce I have no doubt that they would have been given at least one seat each. My constituency fully realize, that unless the communal award is modified or amended, there is no chance of increased representation. At the same time they cannot help ventilating their just grievance.

Having placed before you the history of the Commerce Constituency and the vicissitudes through which it has passed, I now come to the recommendation of the Provincial Franchise Committee and Government's provisional decision thereon. The qualifications of a voter in the Commerce Constituency of the Punjab are (see page 97 of the White Paper) that he should be a member of the Punjab Chamber of Commerce or of the Punjab Trades Association having a place of business, or working for gain, in the Punjab. The Government's proposal with regard to this constituency, which the Provincial Franchise Committee considered was that—

A person shall be qualified as an elector for the Commerce Constituency who—

- (a) has a place of business, or works for gain, in the Punjab and is a Member of the Punjab Chamber of Commerce or of the Northern Indian Chamber of Commerce or of the Punjab Trades Association, or
- (b) is a member of a Company having a place of business in the Punjab and having a paid-up Capital of not less than Rs. 25,000 and has been nominated by the Company for the purpose of voting in its behalf.

(At this stage Mr. President left the chair and it was occupied by the Deputy President.)

The Provincial Franchise Committee considered the question and by an overwhelming majority accepted the first part of the proposal and rejected the second part which contemplated the inclusion of companies having a place of business in the Punjab and having a paid-up capital of not less than Rs. 25,000. The Government, in their provisional decision, have not accepted the findings of the Committee but have reaffirmed their decision regarding the electorate. Before making comments on this provisional decision, I should like to offer a few observations on the questions raised by the honourable member representing industries, during the discussion, as published in the report of the Provincial Franchise Committee. His first point was that there was no check on the violation of these associations to admit or refuse to admit any person to their membership and that there should be such a provision as to enable any person to become their members. So far as the Punjab Chamber of Commerce is concerned, I may tell my honourable friend, that within the last fifteen years there has not been a single instance when a firm, company or individual engaged in bona fide mercantile pursuits whose application for membership has been rejected and I have no doubt that the same remarks apply in the case of the Northern India Chamber of Commerce. It is true that the head office of the Punjab Chamber of Commerce is situated in Delhi but perhaps honourable members are aware that it was established in 1905 when Delhi was within the province of the Punjab. At the same time, it has got offices with local committees in Lahore and Amritsar and meetings of the Managing Committee of the Chamber are held in Delhi, Amritsar and Lahore and questions of great importance are dealt with jointly by the Punjab Chamber of Commerce and the Northern India Chamber of Commerce. It was also argued that as the Punjab Chamber of Commerce has its head office in Delhi a large number of its members would be excluded, under the rules, from being eligible for election. But the reverse is the case. Most of the members have either branch offices in the Punjab or works for gain in the Punjab. The last objection was that even such big banking companies as the Punjab National Bank and the Central Bank of India were not members of either Chamber. This statement again is inaccurate. The Central Bank of India are members of the Punjab Chamber of Commerce and I can assure my honourable friend that the doors are open for the Punjab National Bank or for that matter any other respectable commercial firm or company to be members for either or both Chambers. All the bigger banking institutions are members of the two Chambers and the financial, commercial and industrial interests of the province are very well represented in these two Chambers.

[R. B. Mr. P. Mukerji.]

I now come to the provisional decision of the Government with regard to the Commerce Constituency. As regards the first part, my constituency have no objection, although we should have liked that Trades were given separate representation, as the interests of Trade and Commerce are sometimes divergent, the point I have emphasised in the earlier part of my observations. As regards the second part which includes companies with a paid-up capital of Rs. 25,000 in the Commerce Constituency we have serious objections. The honourable the Leader of the opposition, at the time of discussion in the Provincial Committee, raised a very important point, namely, that it will lead the door open to people not concerned with commerce to start companies and claim the right of a voter. Another important point to which I desire to draw the attention of the House and particularly of the Government Members is that on page 78, paragraph 10 of the White Paper it is definitely laid down—I shall quote the exact words :—

The special seats allotted to Commerce and Industry, Mining and Planting will be filled up by election through Chambers of Commerce and various Associations.

and in the Lothian Committee's Report in paragraph 323 they say :—

We have given consideration to the claims for special representation advanced by organisations speaking for trade and commerce in various provinces other than those already represented. The commercial and industrial organisations now recognised for the purpose of representation in the legislatures are, in our view, fully capable of representing the interests of industry and commerce as such. We do not, in these circumstances, recommend any increase in the number of existing constituencies.

In paragraph 196 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report it is laid down that the special seat assigned to Commerce and Industry would be filled by election by Chambers of Commerce and other similar associations. From this it will be observed that the Lothian recommendations and the White Paper proposals as well as the Joint Parliamentary Committees findings are definitely contrary to the provisional decision of the Government in this matter, and the view expressed by the Leader of the opposition raises an important issue; namely, that there is the danger and possibility of a non-commercial individual representing the commerce constituency which creates a very anomalous position—a position which destroys the basic principle of commercial representation.

Let me now examine the proposal more closely. The number of companies with a paid-up capital of Rs. 25,000 and over, registered in the Punjab, is about 120. But the proposal is wider in its application. For, companies registered elsewhere but working for gain in the Punjab are also eligible to exercise their votes; and their number may not be inconsiderable. Thus the number of such electors will be far in excess of the number of electors in the two Chambers and the Trades Association taken together; and it can be reasonably expected that a candidate independent of these bodies will secure election. The disadvantages in that case are obvious. For, as in the other provinces, if the constituency is confined to the three organisations, their representative would speak on behalf of organised interests and would be guided by them. On the other hand an independent member would, to a very great extent, be irresponsible. An instance in point is what happened the other day in my own case. The resolution regarding the election of non-official chairmen in district boards drew the first place in ballot in my name, and when I referred the matter to my constituency, I was told that the principle of the resolution was not acceptable to them and I had to drop it. In the case of an independent member it would have been quite different and the inference would be that his views were the views of the commercial community although that would not be correct. Another matter which I should like to mention is that by granting the privilege to companies there is every possibility of foreign interests being represented. For instance, a Japanese or a German Company with an Indian manager, working for gain in the Punjab, will, under the present proposal, be a voter and may even be elected to the Council.

The objections to the present proposal are numerous. It is directly antagonistic to the principle laid down in the Lothian recommendations; it runs counter to the White Paper proposals, as well as the Joint Parliamentary Committee's findings, it has no parallel in the other parts of this country and above all it is a negation of the principle of commercial representation.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I happened to serve on the Committee whose report is now under consideration, and I can pay a very warm tribute from personal knowledge to the hard work which Nawab Muzaffar Khan put in in the way of collecting necessary data, arranging and marshalling them before the Franchise Committee. But for his vast knowledge of the subject and his valuable experience the Committee would have found it very difficult to draw up the Report that is now under discussion.

So far as the Report itself is concerned there has not been much criticism. Most of the criticism that has been offered in the House proceeds really against the action that has been taken by Government on the Franchise Committee's Report, and so far as the action of Government is concerned I myself have a very serious complaint to make. So far as the delimitation of constituencies is concerned, there have been only two complaints. But so far as the measure of representation which should be allowed to classes and communities is concerned, I feel greatly aggrieved. I think there can be only two factors to be considered in this connection, either the factor of population or the factor of taxes which are paid by the various sections of the community. The Committee proceeded mostly on the basis of population. But Government has not unfortunately acted upon any one principle. Sometimes it has proceeded on the principle of population, sometimes it has proceeded upon the principle of taxation or voting strength, and sometimes merely on the principle of obliging those who are near the centre of power. Those who happened to be near the centre of power, those who were in a position to influence the judgment of Government got what they wanted and those who were at a distance from the centre of power did not get what they really deserved. In this connection I might draw the attention of the House to the distribution of seats that has been made between urban Hindus and rural Hindus. My friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, was complaining that although the population of statutory agricultural tribes is only 50 per cent. they can get a representation under these constituencies or under this Report of about 75 per cent. I will come to that part of the question later on, but I wish my friend would agree on one definite principle. Is he prepared to follow the principle of population through and through? If he is not prepared to follow that principle, is he prepared to follow the principle of taxation? If he is not prepared to follow the principle of taxation either, is he prepared to follow the principle of population and taxation combined? I have not been able to think of any other principle which should determine the measure of representation to be granted to various sections of the population. He was unable to say whether he would like to follow the principle of population because if he were to say that he would suffer. He was not prepared to say whether he would like the principle of taxation to be followed, because he stands to suffer even under that principle. However, so far as the action of Government is concerned with respect to the distribution of seats between rural Hindus and urban Hindus I wish to draw the attention of the Member in charge or of the Government and also of the House to the injustice that has been done to rural Hindus. The total number of territorial seats allotted to Hindus is 43. Out of these 43 seats eight seats will go to the depressed classes and so we are left with only 35 seats. Out of these 35 seats 26 have been allotted to rural areas and nine have been allotted to urban areas. The population of urban areas is slightly over nine lakhs while the population of rural areas is over forty-five lakhs. It is plain on this distribution of seats that while the proportion of rural and urban Hindu population is as one to five, the distribution of seats is as 9 to 26, that is, one to three. The injustice is quite obvious. But this is not all. We have further to consider the representation which the urban Hindu element will receive in special constituencies. Nobody can deny that the University seat is bound to go to an urban Hindu. Nobody can deny that commerce seat is bound to go to an urban Hindu. Nobody will deny that one of the three labour seats is likely to go to an urban Hindu. (An honourable member: What do you mean by urban?) What is to be urban and what is to be rural was defined I think fifteen years ago. That definition has been slightly altered. I have thus shown that as many as 12 seats are bound to go to urban Hindus and only 26 seats will go to rural Hindus. If we distribute the seats on the ✓ basis of population rural Hindus are entitled to 29 seats and urban Hindus are entitled to a little less than six seats, 5.86 seats. Is there any justification why a population which is entitled to only six seats should get as many as 12 seats? Is there any justification why a section of the population which is entitled on the basis of population to as many as 29 seats should be asked to be content with only 26 seats? I see absolutely no justification for this disparity in the representation that has been given to urban Hindus and the representation that has been given to rural Hindus.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

This is not all. If we apply the principle of taxation, I think urban Hindus will find themselves in a much worse position. So far as provincial revenues are concerned the share which is contributed by urban Hindus will certainly not be in excess of 10 per cent. Therefore both on the principle of population and on the principle of taxation urban Hindus are entitled to a far smaller share than has been allotted to them by Government.

Coming further down to the distribution among districts and divisions, I beg to submit that the Ambala division has been treated much more unjustly than any other portion of the province under the scheme. On the basis of population Ambala is entitled to a little less than 12 seats. On the basis of voting strength, it is entitled to 18 seats. If we take the mean of the two as the true basis of distribution we shall find that Ambala is entitled to more than 12 seats. Yet it has been allotted only 11 seats.

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan : We have proceeded on the population basis only.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram : If that is the case, there is no reason why urban Hindus should have been allotted as many as nine seats. Apply one principle throughout and I shall be content. If you apply the principle of population I shall be content with whatever falls to my share on the basis of population. If you apply the principle of taxation, even then I am content with whatever happens to be my share on that basis. If you combine the two principles together and proceed upon the combined basis, I am quite prepared to have my share on that basis. But unfortunately Government has not adhered to any one principle at all. Government has applied the principle which seemed to suit the convenience of those who are near the centre of power as I have already submitted.

مک حضورى به از برادر دواى

That has been the principle which has been followed by Government in allotting these seats. In this connection I may also draw the attention of the House to the fact, that in 1919 the Southborough Committee invited the attention of Government to the fact, that rural areas in the Punjab had not been given sufficient representation and on the recommendation of that Committee the Punjab Government had added two seats to the rural share. Later on, when the Punjab Government's recommendation reached higher quarters, the atmosphere was different and instead of the rural population getting a higher share, that is, the share that had been recommended by the Punjab Government, got a share which was worse than what the Southborough Committee had declared to be inadequate. The Joint Parliamentary Committee seems to have noticed this disproport-tionate representation of rural and urban interest even this time. I may be permitted to read here what they say at page 70 of their report. This is what they say :

[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

The proposals will in the case of most provinces redress the balance between town and country which is at the present time too heavily weighted in favour of urban areas.

Now, here is the opinion of a committee at which statutory agriculturists were not at all represented. It is the opinion of a body of persons who may be regarded as perfectly impartial and perfectly just. They say definitely that the representation previously accorded to rural areas on the electoral roll was very inadequate and that the proposals which they now make in respect of franchise would set right that inequality. They have used the expression 'too heavily weighted in favour of urban areas. That is exactly my point. Under the existing state of things urban areas have received larger share of representation than they are entitled to. Are we going to perpetuate that over-representation of urban element? The action that has been taken by the Punjab Government on the Franchise Committee Report seeks to perpetuate this state of things. So far as the observation, which I have quoted from the Joint Select Committee's Report, is concerned it makes a reference, of course, only to franchise. But franchise is meant to be used to return members who are advocates of a certain policy, who will seek to give effect to a certain programme. If rural areas are given franchise which is commensurate with their population, but are prevented by artificial means from sending a sufficiently large number of their own representatives, then the object which the Joint Select Committee had in view will not be served.

So far as unfair distribution between one district and another is concerned, attention has already been drawn to the question by my friend Chaudhri Ram Sarup. He put forward a reasonable plea for giving four seats to the Rohtak district. It will be quite easy to give four seats to the Rohtak district if the share of urban representation is reduced to proper limits and two or three seats are added to the share of rural Hindus. There was another question to which attention was drawn by Kanwar Mamraj Singh. The Ambala district has been very unjustly treated. It has no share in the increase at all. Ambala and Simla taken together have just one seat allotted to them under the present proposals as is the case even under the present constitution. Under the future constitution the strength of the Council will be more than double and yet it is strange that the Ambala district stands where it was. Even the depressed classes in the Ambala division have not been given any share. Therefore in order to redress these inequalities the only effective thing that can be done, is to reduce the share of urban people and add it to the share of rural Hindus.

Now I come to certain points which were raised by my friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri. He said very strange things. As a matter of fact the two propositions which he put forward in the same breath were self-contradictory. In the first instance he said that this Report was drawn up by persons most of whom were themselves interested in the result of the Report. That is perfectly true. Then in the same breath he stated that one of the greatest shortcomings of the Report was due to the fact that those who were most interested in the election or in the constituencies were not consulted or examined as witnesses. Now, if the examination of those who are interested in the elections was to be helpful at all there is no reason why the work on the Committee of those who were interested in the elections would not be equally helpful; but if it was likely to vitiate the result or hamper the progress of the Committee, as Mr. Mukand Lal Puri suggested, there is no reason to think that the examination of witnesses would not have influenced in a wrong direction the conclusions which were to be reached by the Committee. Mr. Puri also suggested that the distinction between rural and urban areas was entirely futile. This has been very frequently suggested by members who are interested in seeing this distinction abolished. But I think I can refer my friend to an authority which even he would not be in a position to challenge. Mahatma Gandhi himself has said that in the governing bodies of the Congress, rural population ought to have a representation of 75 per cent. Not only this. He has even added that if properly qualified representatives are not forthcoming from rural areas their seats should be kept vacant. They should not be filled by urban people in any case. In the face of this view of Mahatma Gandhi for whom we all have the greatest possible respect, Mr. Puri should not have suggested that the distinction between urban and rural areas is a futile distinction. It is certainly an inconvenient distinction from his point of view. My friend also dragged in the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. That unfortunate legislation must always turn up like King Charles' head in urban members' speeches. I am glad that no member belonging to my party has dragged in this legislation this time. It is the representative of the urban population that has dragged it in. But I do not see what occasion there was to discuss the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. There is not one word in the whole of this Committee's Report which refers to the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. There is not one word which suggests the idea of statutory agricultural tribes. The only words which I find in this Committee's Report are general seats, special seats, Hindu seats, Muslim seats, Sikh seats, Christian seats, Anglo-Indian seats, European seats, Landholders seats, University seats. There is absolutely not a word either about the statutory agricultural tribes or anybody else. Now my friend made a complaint of the fact that in this House a very large proportion of the members are drawn from statutory agricultural tribes and he expressed his fears that under the new constitution also a very large proportion of the members would be drawn from statutory agricultural tribes. It may be so or it may not be so. It will actually depend upon circumstances and upon the dominating ideas at the time of election. But suppose 75 or even 90 per cent. of the members of the future Council are drawn from the statutory agricultural tribes, where is the harm? Why should there be any harm? After all, nobody suggests that the candidates must be drawn from a particular class. Nobody suggests that the voters should only be drawn from a particular class. The voters are there; the candidates are there and it is for the voters and the electors to make their choice. Now as many as 10 per cent. of depressed classes are going to be enfranchised and the general percentage of other classes will be higher still; probably the general estimate is that 14 per cent. of the population will be enfranchised. It is for that electorate to make the choice and if the choice of that electorate falls upon the members of agricultural classes in as many as 75 per cent. cases nobody has a right to complain. But if my friend will look a little nearer home he will find that he has no reason to complain. The complaint should really come from somewhere else. Look at this group of benches. Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit comes from a rural constituency. Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram comes from a rural constituency. Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath comes from a constituency which should be regarded as rural. Mr. Labh Singh comes from a rural constituency. Lala Bhagat Ram comes from a rural constituency. (An honourable member: Therefore they are urban?) No. They are urban in extraction; they are urban in their outlook; they are urban in their sympathies. I will come to that point later on. Let me add that Rai Sahib Lala Gopal Das also comes from a rural constituency. Therefore, so far as this point is concerned, the boot is on the other leg. But no complaint should be made on that score by anybody. Rural constituencies have a perfect right to elect an urban man. Urban constituencies have a perfect right to elect a rural man. However, if my friend insists on population figures being represented in this House, I am quite prepared for it. Let 9 lakhs of urban Hindus return the number of members to which they are entitled and let 45 lakhs of rural Hindus elect the number to which they are entitled. If you go beyond that and treat the provinces as a whole I will have no objection. If you lay down such a proposition, let 90 per cent. of the rural population elect 90 per cent. of the members of this Council irrespective of the electors or the candidates being Sikh, Hindu or Muslim.

✓ [R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

However my friend raised another objection. He said, "Where is the difference between me and Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan? He is a barrister and I am a barrister. He practises in the High Court and I practise in the High Court. Why should any distinction be made between me and Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan?" I repeat that the difference is not in the profession which they practise, but in their outlook, in their mentality, in their sympathies. I will now proceed to refer to concrete instances which will bring out this difference in mentality or sympathies. We have had under discussion for a good number of days the Indebtedness Bill. What side did my friend vote? In spite of the fact that both Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan and Mr. Mukand Lal Puri practise the same profession, in spite of the fact that both are barristers and both practise in the High Court, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri's vote was on each occasion cast against the Bill and the vote of Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan was cast on each occasion when he was present, in favour of the Bill. (Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: My vote was cast on the right side.) You seem to be incapable of seeing right and wrong. When the Money-lenders Bill, the Regulation of Accounts Bill, was under consideration in this House, though they were practising the same profession, they voted in different lobbies. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri must have gone to the lobby which was against the Bill and I went into the lobby in favour of the Bill though we two practise the same profession. I will suggest just one or two other things. When the Punjab Land Revenue Act Amendment Bill was under discussion I think Mr. Mukand Lal Puri will remember that Chaudhri Zafrulla Khan gave his vote in favour of exempting the small holding from the operation of the Land Revenue Act and my friend Mr. Puri must have voted against it. (Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: No.). Then, he must have been absent. His leader Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath did vote against that proposition and so did Rai Bahadur Lala Sewak Ram and Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit. With these words I close my remarks.

Khan Bahadur Malik Muhammad Amin Khan (Attock, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I take this opportunity to point out to the House and the Government that in the distribution of seats the claims of Attock district have not been given full weight. As you are aware, the population of this district is 511,367 and only three seats have been given to this district which means that for a population of 170,000 one seat has been allotted. But in the case of other districts and particularly in the case of Dera Ghazi Khan and Amritsar districts this basic figure is very low. I need hardly say that my district is much more important from many respects than Amritsar and Dera Ghazi Khan districts. It is situated on the border of the frontier and it has connections with the people in the frontier. Then its inhabitants who are mostly zamindars and poor zamindars have rendered conspicuous services to the Crown not only in this Great War, but even before this War. This district is very well known for its war services and it is second or third so far as these services are concerned in the whole of the province. Besides that, the people of this district are peace-loving and law-abiding. Although the people of this district are war-like and hot-tempered too, they have always maintained very happy relations with their neighbours. Over and above that they have never taken part in the activities of the Congress and Red Shirt Movement or any other such body and they have always remained loyal to the Government. Therefore, in view of these considerations and also in view of its population, Attock district should have been given at least four seats particularly when Amritsar and Dera Ghazi Khan with much less population and having not as many services at their credit as our district claims to have rendered, have been given three seats. I may say that in making this demand I ask only for what is due to us. I do not want any concession for my district. It is a pity that in the presence of our Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan who is admitted to be the right hand of the Government, our claims have been ignored. It is perhaps because he does not want anything for himself that the district, which he represents, is not getting its due, I think it is yet time to rectify that mistake and I hope that my request will not go unheeded. Not giving another seat for our district means that Government is punishing for our loyal and great service. Before I resume my seat I must say that I very much appreciate the work that Nawab Muzaffar Khan has done in the preparation of this Report.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the chair.)

Sardar Bishan Singh (Sialkot-cum-Gurdaspur, Sikh, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, it would have been better if seats had been distributed on the strength of voters and not on population basis or on the strength of voters and population taken together. However in the proposals before us the claims of Lyallpur district have not been given due weight. Perhaps the House is not aware that out of 17,000 voters in the 18 districts, which formed one constituency, from which Sardar Sant Singh was elected as a member of the Assembly, 7,000 voters live in one district alone that is, Lyallpur. This shows the importance of the district. Another important consideration is that the Lyallpur district pays one-fifth of the total revenue that comes to fill the coffers of the Government from the whole of the Punjab and this again shows the special importance of this district. But it is a pity that it has been given only two seats. Similarly the Amritsar district has not been fairly treated although it is a centre of the Sikh religion as well as the centre of learning apart from its being a trading centre.

[Sardar Bishan Singh.]

Ferozepore has a population of 373,772 and Amritsar 363,854 and the difference of about ten thousand has made a difference of one seat which is unfair to Amritsar considering its importance as mentioned above. Ferozepore being backward in education Amritsar should have got one more seat or at least alternately portions of both districts should be formed into a separate constituency. These are the two grievances which I wanted to give vent to on behalf of the Sikh community and I hope that efforts will be made to redress these grievances.

Mr. C. C. Garbett (Chief Secretary): Sir, the honourable member who has just sat down referred to the distribution of votes in the district of Attock and also paid his compliments to those who had framed this Report. I should like the House to know that as very prominent members of this House were personally concerned with the constituencies in the Attock district, the Government paid me the compliment of asking me, who as you all know have considerable experience of that district, to suggest the constituencies, and the constituencies which are before the House were suggested by me without respect to persons. I think it particularly sporting of the honourable member who has just spoken to have refrained from all criticism of my proposals because acting as I had to act on principles, I know that I have affected very seriously his personal prospects. He happens to be the representative of a very big tribe which lives right down in the south of the district, while he himself lives in the north. I, of course, acted strictly according to principle and could not but leave him separated from his main supporters. I do not wish to take the time of the House any more, but I think it only right and proper that the House should know that those particular constituencies were proposed not by honourable members who are themselves concerned with the district, but by this humble servant of Government and yourselves (hear, hear).

Professor W. Roberts (Non-official, nominated): I wish to support the remarks made by Mr. Mukerji in regard to commercial seats. It seems to me that in a House of nearly 200 members with only one commercial seat it is important that election should be on orthodox lines. Big commercial centres like Bombay and Madras and Calcutta and even Cawnpore have been voting in such a way for many years. They rigidly follow system of elections through associations and I think that a very dangerous precedent is being embarked upon in this province by proposing an indefinite electorate which may consist of companies with Rs. 25,000 paid up in addition to three associations. The only other point that I want to make is with regard to the European seat and that is to plead for a postal vote. It would be very difficult indeed for an election of one member in the whole province to work on the ballot system. If you cannot accept that then I suggest that the combination of the ballot and the postal votes may be taken in this way that in the districts other than 8 important centres voting may be allowed by postal arrangement and in these centres by ballot. Thirdly if you cannot accept either of these then I suggest that voting centres should be opened in all district headquarters as well as in cantonments.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I want to reply very briefly to some of the criticisms of my friend, Chaudhri Chhotu Ram. The last remark made by the honourable member was to inquire what the occasion was to talk of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act here in this debate. The honourable Chaudhri Sahib deceives himself or tries to put a different version of the whole affair before others. This was really the chief reason. The arguments which he has put before us here were put forth by him before the Committee presided over by Lord Lothian. Arguments were put forward on the basis of population and taxation and so on and so forth, and the Honourable Lord's Committee was investigating means and methods by which 50 per cent. population of the Punjab, namely, the non-agricultural population could be brought on the electoral roll in proportion to their population strength in the province. This principle was accepted that the non-agricultural population of the province which formed 50 per cent. of the province, (The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : Question. That has not been accepted by anybody) should be equally reflected not only in the electorate but in the Punjab Legislative Assembly of the future. This was the reason why in paragraph 65 of the Report, Lord Lothian made certain comments that the Punjab Land Alienation Act gives social and economic advantages to the members of the agricultural tribes, therefore the political predominance cannot be made over to them in the Punjab. The honourable member asks, what is the harm if these people are represented in the Punjab Legislative Council of the future to the extent of 75 per cent. or 80 per cent. ? The harm was perceived by Lord Lothian Committee and it is this. The Punjab Government is run mainly by the income that is got from land and if 75 per cent. or 80 per cent. members of these tribes are here in the Council and there are only 20 per cent. on the other side, there would be a danger of financial breakdown, there would be a crash, they would try their utmost to see that land revenue and abiana or water-rates are reduced to the lowest limit. That was the harm which was likely to occur and therefore it was pointed out that this disparity which is existing on the electoral roll and which is likely to be reflected in the Assembly of the future should be done away with. If the honourable member were to read the cross-examination under which I was put by Lord Lothian before the Joint Parliamentary Committee and which is on the last pages, he will find that this very idea was prominent in the minds of the noble Lord when he put question after question on this point. My apprehension was that this party would form a party which would clamour for more privileges. You saw how they have been wanting that electricity be given to them at concession rates, that posts be given to them everywhere not on merit but because of their being agricultural tribes. Therefore the principle that should be accepted is, that non-agriculturists should be represented to the extent of 50 or 55 per cent. of the population. It does not lie in their mouth to say that there should be representation on the basis of taxation. It would be a very strange thing if on the one hand you were to say that a certain section of the people cannot purchase land and on the other you were to say that those who pay more land revenue and water rate should have more representation. I would, therefore, respectfully submit to Government not to be carried away by the arguments of the other side, but frame the constituencies in such a manner that at least the electorate should be so formed that 50 constituencies are capable of returning non-agricultural members, and in the other agricultural tribes predominate. There is one other very important matter. Here you find rural and urban divisions. But what is urban in the United Provinces is not urban in the Punjab. In the United Provinces towns are those which have a population of 50,000 or more. Here, overweighted as the Punjab Government is by the members of the agricultural tribes, they have lowered down the limit of a town to 7,500. As my friend pointed out there should be one to two seats for the so-called urban members, members living in Lahore, Amritsar, etc., and all others should be territorial constituencies and the result would be that there would not be such a great disparity as exists now. I do not know the reason why we should not follow the United Provinces system. Then the most important thing that the honourable friend from Rohtak says is "look at the outlook of Pandit Nanak Chand. I am a supporter of the rights of the rural people, Pandit Nanak Chand is an urban man." Chaudhri Chhotu Ram went himself to my constituency and he wanted to teach those rural people that they should not vote for me and now he accuses me of anti-rural bias. It is time that he should realise that in rural areas it is not only the members of agricultural tribes who live, but people who are members of non-agricultural tribes. There are members of depressed classes and others also live and they really have the same outlook as those who sit on these benches. Therefore the word rural is not confined to members of zamindar tribes only. I, therefore, would respectfully submit to the Government that they must follow the spirit of the recommendations made in the Lord Lothian Committee Report. You will see that they have tried to show the danger in placing the political predominance of the Punjab Land Alienation Act though they could not modify these because it is only the legislature in the Punjab which can modify it; but the main thing is that the population of the agricultural tribes and non-agricultural tribes should be reflected in the Punjab Assembly in the same proportion as it is in the population. I, therefore, submit that this devise of giving 9 seats is also entirely unfair. There should be 50 seats marked out amongst the whole province for non-agricultural tribes and others for agricultural tribes and this should be reflected among the Hindus, Sikhs and Muslims.

[Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit.]

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan (Reforms Commissioner) :

I must thank the honourable members for the kindness with which they have considered the scheme of mine. I am most grateful to the members of the Franchise Committee. They worked day and night and sometimes in the evening during the hot weather. In particular I want to thank Mrs. Chatterjee who was one of the few members who always remained above communalism and discussed questions on principle and from a broad point of view.

No wordly scheme can be perfect and I do not claim perfection for this scheme of delimitation of constituencies now before the Council. There may be drawbacks here, there may be drawbacks there. Objections have been raised with regard to certain districts. I should say that in every case where tahsil boundaries had to be shut the deputy commissioners were consulted and the constituencies were delimited in consultation with them.

The main question that concerns the Hindus is the division between urban and rural areas. This question was thrashed out and discussed at great length, and I was glad that after a long discussion I thought we had come to a certain arrangement. The honourable member Mr. Puri who now objects to this division on the basis of 7,500 and 10,000 did not raise the slightest objection to the decision at the Committee. We had to draw the line somewhere and we did draw the line here after my careful consideration. With regard to the delimitation of the various constituencies, the question was not decided by me personally but by Government in the first instance and then considered by the Franchise Committee. It was really in accordance with the decision of the Committee that I had to delimit the several constituencies. With regard to the objection of the honourable member, Mr. Puri, that we should delimit the constituencies in such a way as to bring in a certain number of statutory agriculturists and a certain number of non-agriculturists, I think it is impossible. I would challenge the honourable member to delimit constituencies on that basis. All that we can do is, to lower down the franchise so as to bring in a large number of non-agriculturists on the rolls; and we have done that as far as it was possible to do. The point was raised by the honourable member, Pandit Nanak Chand, both in India and at the Round Table Conference in England and the Secretary of State was anxious and so was the Punjab Government to meet that point of view. I think there is something wrong about the actual figures given by the honourable member, Pandit Nanak Chand. It is true that fifty per cent. of the population of the Punjab is non-agriculturist and fifty, agriculturist. But the honourable member must also recognise that we have done our best to bring in as many non-agriculturist voters as possible both in the urban and in the rural areas. Take for instance the total number of rural voters; out of 2,056,000 our estimate is that 591,000 are likely to be non-agriculturists. Then again among the urban areas our estimate is, that out of a total of 225,000 we expect 67,500 to be agriculturists and 157,500 to be non-agriculturists. Again take the literacy qualification which the honourable Pandit Sahib should admit is more among the urban than the rural areas and our estimate is, that among 85,000 women literates we will have about 21,250 agriculturists and 63,750 at least non-agriculturists. As regards the general education qualification, we will have about 2 lakhs of electors registered on the primary school examination qualification. We expect that out of this, there will be 66,700 agriculturists and 133,300 non-agriculturists. The honourable member has also ignored the fact about the depressed classes. We must remember that with the exception of perhaps one or two tribes, they are all non-agriculturists. They will come on the roll of Hindu voters and the number so far as we could estimate will be about 3,700 agriculturists and 137,100 non-agriculturists. Apart from these, in order to meet the wishes of the Indian Franchise Committee and to meet the objections of our own Committee, we have taken down the limits of profession tax to the very lowest rung of the ladder and anyone who pays Rs. 2 as direct tax to the district board or municipal committee will be registered as a voter. We could not possibly go beyond that. It should again be noted that it would be open to the electorate to elect whomsoever it chooses. My honourable friend himself, I refer to Pandit Nanak Chand, is representing a rural constituency in this Council and he is a non-agriculturist. As the honourable member, Chaudhri Chhotu Ram pointed out there are various other constituencies like the University, Labour, Commerce and others which do not ordinarily return agriculturists. If any of them sends an agriculturist member, so much the better. We cannot bind any constituency as to whom it should send. All that we can do is, as I have already said to extend the franchise and Government has done its best in this direction. It is impossible for anyone, for any Government to have gone farther in the matter.

[K. B. Nawab Muzaffar Khan.]

As regards the claims of the various districts and divisions instead of replying to the honourable members individually I shall confine myself to the general principles on which the constituencies were delimited. The Ambala division has been prominently mentioned. With regard to the distribution of seats I have my sympathy with the Ambala division but I should say that I have done my best to meet the wishes of the people of that area. The division is entitled to 10 seats on population basis that is if we took into consideration the population district by district. But for the population as a whole the division is entitled to 11 seats and it has been given 11 seats. Taking the province as a whole I admit that a certain weightage has been given to urban areas. I have no justification in its favour except that urban areas are a little advanced in education. On population basis they were entitled to six seats. They had already seven seats and in order to give them a share in the general increase I allowed them one extra seat. But it will be observed from the note that the question will be referred to the Government of India and all the objections that have been brought forward will be placed before the Government of India and I do hope that the required number of seats would be secured. Another very important question regarding the definition of Europeans and Anglo-Indians has been raised by the honourable lady member, Dr. Shave. She has my fullest sympathy but she must remember that we have also our difficulties. On the one hand it is said that there should be a clear descent on both the father's and the mother's side, and it is urged that all such persons irrespective of the length of domicile, should be declared to be Europeans, while on the other it is insisted that Europeans who have made India their home should be counted amongst Anglo-Indians. This is an all-India question. In the Punjab the question of definition of Europeans and Anglo-Indians for election purposes had not arisen till now. I, therefore, consulted the definition adopted by Bengal, Madras and Bombay. The definition given in the Electoral Rules relating to those provinces is not quite clear but I believe the idea underlying this definition is to treat every child or grand child of clear European descent born in India as European and beyond that degree as Anglo-Indian. It is as I have already stated an all-India question and the honourable lady's points would be forwarded to the Government of India. The question I assure her will be considered very carefully.

As regards the dispute between Muslim seats of Dera Ghazi Khan, Jhang, Amritsar and Sialkot, we have as already submitted proceeded on the basis of population. Many objections have been raised against this procedure. At the present juncture in the absence of an electoral roll we could not proceed on any other basis. The Indian Franchise Committee,

I think, was of the opinion that voting strength should be taken into consideration. I cannot commit Government to any policy—having no power to do so—but as far as I could gather from the Report of the Indian Franchise Committee voting strength will be considered. In order to find out how far voting strength would affect our decisions we did calculate on the combined basis of voting strength and population in the case of certain non-Muhammadian constituencies. We took a rough estimate of the voting strength on the basis of the future franchise and found that according to their estimates, with the wide extension of franchise the difference was not likely to be very much. It might affect a few districts. If honourable members had gone through the papers that were supplied to them some time ago they would have noticed that in the case of non-Muhammadian constituencies we had given the percentage of voters. If honourable members would now glance at statement D at page 25 of the Franchise Committee's Report they would find that with regard to each district we took into consideration the rough figures of voters. There has not been the difference of one seat in the case of a single district as far as I can glance through the figures. Take the case of Hissar. We have allotted three seats. According to population Hissar is entitled to 2.49 and according to voting strength 2.68 and the average is 2.58 that is 3 seats. Then again Rohtak is entitled to 3.49, just below four seats by .01. I must repeat that the figures were very rough figures and they may be wrong in some cases as there is bound to be overlapping. Turning to the four Muslims districts, Amritsar, Sialkot, Jhang and Dera Ghazi Khan Government proceeded on the basis of population. We did not take into account the voting strength. I believe Government will take that also into consideration at a later stage. If we allot 2 seats each, to Amritsar and Dera Ghazi Khan and 3 seats each, to Sialkot and Jhang, it will be observed that the surplus in the case of the first two districts is larger than in the other districts. The two seats were therefore given to Amritsar and Dera Ghazi Khan.

Another point that was made related to the tumandar seats. The honourable member Sayad Mubarak Ali Shah has pointed out that tumandars had been given a seat and that, therefore, Dera Ghazi Khan should not be given another seat. The tumandars, it must be remembered, represent special interests and it is because of the political importance of tumandars and because they also represent certain tribes beyond the border that they were given the tumandari seat. I do not think that that seat should in any way affect the general constituencies or the general arrangement of seats. It is open to any district to snatch away the remaining landholders seats but on that account we have no right to deprive that district of one of the general seats.

With regard to my own particular district, I think I am in the same position as the other members and I put forward my claim for another seat. I speak not as Reforms Commissioner now but as a humble petitioner from Attock district. I am most grateful to Mr. Garbett for the pains he took in delimiting the Attock constituencies. Although he has scattered my tribe in all the three constituencies allotted to the district I have no complaint to make, because after all he has proceeded on certain principles. The Honourable Revenue Member accepted it in a sportsmanlike spirit. I have nothing more to say except that I would support in this case my honourable friend Malik Muhammad Amin and press the case of my own district and request you to give us another seat. But where are all these seats to come from? So I hope you will put up with what we have done. We have done our best. I am sorry I could not give the Hindus a greater share in the general increase of seats because we had to allot eight seats to the depressed classes. That has naturally affected the distribution and it was on that account that I had to usurp a seat from the rural area.

[K. B. Nawab Muzaffar Khan.]

Mian Nurullah : What about Lyallpur?

Khan Bahadur Nawab Muzaffar Khan : I agree that certain areas have been added to it recently and I think the honourable member's objections appear to be valid. We will examine them and again consult the deputy commissioner and see what he has to say about the matter.

The Council then adjourned till 2-30 P.M., on Friday, 21st December, 1934.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

4TH SESSION OF THE 4TH PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Friday, 21st December 1934.

The Council met at the Council Chamber at 2-30 P.M. of the clock. Mr. President in the chair.

PUNJAB RELIEF OF INDEBTEDNESS BILL.

Mr. President : Gentlemen, the amendments recommended by His Excellency the Governor to the Punjab Indebtedness Relief Bill as passed by this Council have already been circulated. Now the Council will proceed to consider them one by one.

Lala Bhagat Ram : (Urdu). Sir, you were pleased to say yesterday that a few minutes will be given to me to express my views on the Franchise Committee's Report. Have I your permission to say a few words ?

Mr. President : Government had allotted only one day for discussion of the Franchise Committee's Report. The Government meant, of course, one working day and that day is over. If Government is prepared to allot further time for discussion of the Report, I shall have no objection.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, did not we decide yesterday that a short time say 15 to 20 minutes will be allotted to the Report ? To-day Raja Sahib and some other members of my party, might have kept away thinking that the first half-an-hour or so would be devoted to that Report. Nobody wishes on the last working day to sit any longer than he can possibly help and certainly it is not my wish after having come back from the High Court after finishing my work to feel that I shall have to sit during the Christmas holidays for the Indebtedness Bill. But I believe there was some kind of understanding that these two gentlemen will be given time to discuss this matter to-day.

Clause 5.

Mr. President : The first amendment recommended by His Excellency is—

That clause 5 (iv) be omitted and in its place the following be substituted—

“ 5 (iv) To sub-section (2) the following clause shall be added—

- (e) The court shall deem interest to be excessive if on secured loans it exceeds twelve per centum per annum simple interest or nine per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests and if on unsecured loans it exceeds eighteen and three-quarter per centum per annum simple interest or fourteen per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests : provided that the court shall not deem interest in excess of the above rates to be excessive if the loan has been advanced by the Imperial Bank of India or any banking company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or any law relating to companies for the time being in force in British India.”

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Sir, can we at all move amendments to the recommendations of His Excellency the Governor ? That is a point for you to decide.

Mr. President : If the honourable member does not wish to move his amendments, he may not move them.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Is it not the constitutional position that amendments suggested by His Excellency have either to be accepted in their entirety or rejected and that any amendments of those recommendations are not open to discussion by this House ? I am merely asking for a ruling on this point.

Mr. President : The point raised by the honourable member is not free from doubt ; but I am inclined to hold that amendments recommended by the Governor can be modified or amended by the Council.

Under clause (1) of section 81-A of the Government of India Act, where a Bill has been passed by a local Legislative Council, the Governor may, return it to the Council for reconsideration, either in whole or in part, together with any amendments which he may recommend. The word reconsideration means to consider again with a view to changing or amending the whole or part of the Bill, in the light of amendments recommended by the Governor. It is open, therefore, to the Council to make such changes or amendments as it may deem proper to make after examining and scrutinizing the Governor's amendments. In other words, it may accept or reject every amendment suggested by the Governor. And if I am right so far, that is to say, if the Council can accept or reject each of the recommended amendments in its entirety, it follows that it can accept or reject each of those amendments even partially, inasmuch as, power to accept or reject the whole includes the power to accept or reject a part. Again, the acceptance or rejection of an amendment in part is, to all intents and purposes, its modification or amendment. It follows, therefore, that the Council can amend the Governor's amendments.

Again, if the object of section 81-A was that the amendments recommended by the Governor should be accepted by the Council without any alteration or modification, nothing could have been easier for the framers of the Act than to say so expressly and in so many words. In that case the word reconsideration should not have been used in sections 67 (4) and 81-A of the Government of India Act.

Further, under section 81-A (2)—

- (a) The Governor may return the Bill for further consideration by the Council with a recommendation that the Council shall consider amendments thereto ; and
- (b) after any Bill so returned has been further considered by the Council together with any recommendations made by the Governor relating thereto, the Bill, if reaffirmed with or without amendment, may be again presented to the Governor.

The expression shall consider amendments in sub-clause (a) and the expression with or without amendment in sub-clause (b) go a long way to support the view that amendments recommended by the Governor are not to be accepted by the Council necessarily without any modification or amendment.

If the aforesaid reasoning and conclusions are not convincing, that is to say, if the matter is still doubtful, I would give the benefit of the doubt to the Council and not curtail its power to amend the Governor's amendments, unless the law expressly divests it of that power.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): Sir, I move the amendment which stands in my name—

That in clause 5, new sub-clause (iv), for the words "twelve" "nine," "eighteen and three quarter" and "fourteen" the words "fifteen," "twelve," "twenty-four" and "eighteen and three-quarters" respectively, be substituted.

Mr. President: At this stage, the honourable member can only move his amendment about the word "twelve," because some amendments have to be taken up later. If all these are taken up now as one amendment, certain amendments shall be excluded.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I have no desire to split up my amendment and I may give my reason.

Mr. President: It is not a question of the honourable member's desire. It is a question of procedure. If I allow the honourable member to move his amendment, as it stands, certain other amendments will have to be ruled out as too late. Take, for instance, the amendment: "That the words 'twelve per centum per annum simple interest, or,' in line 2, be omitted." If I allow the honourable member's whole amendment, as it stands, that amendment will become barred, because it relates to an earlier part of the clause.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: That would practically render my amendment useless as the various provisions stand or fall together. I do not wish to propose the amendment about the word "twelve" if I am not allowed to move the remaining portion of the amendment along with it. My amendment is specific and I submit that it cannot be split up as suggested by the Chair and I do not propose to do so, as the various parts are interdependent.

Mr. President: Does not the honourable member wish to move his amendments one by one?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: No, Sir, not under the circumstances.

Professor W. Roberts (Nominated, non-official): Sir, I beg to move—

That in clause 5, new sub-clause (iv), the words "twelve per centum per annum simple interest, or," in line 2 be omitted.

The reason why I move this amendment is that in my opinion the disparity between simple interest rates and compound interest rates proposed by Government are impractical. They appear to be based, as far as I can make out, on the fact that if the debtor pays nothing of interest until the loan is doubled, it is then only that these two rates can come together and equalise. In other words Government is proposing absolutely impractical rates which only at one particular time during the currency of the loan can equal one another. I see no reason why Government has any particular liking for simple interest in preference to compound interest or compound interest in preference to simple interest. I, therefore, suggest this as a way out of our difficulty, that is, to make the rates of interest as uncomplicated as possible and confine the difference to that of secured and unsecured loans only. I am assuming I will be able to speak later on the three other portions of my amendment.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in clause 5, new sub-clause (iv), the words " twelve per centum per annum simple interest, or," in line 2 be omitted.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : It will be remembered by the House that when this Bill emerged from the select committee, it emerged without any reference to compound interest at all. Now the honourable member opposite proposes to go to the other extreme and abolish simple interest. I admit perfectly frankly that in the dealings between the village money-lenders and village debtors normally compound interest is the rule and simple interest very seldom enters into the calculation at all. But it is possible that there may be cases where simple interest is charged and we have to cater for those cases. That is the reason why we have provided for it. I may also submit that 12 per cent., though it may seem fairly high, is not excessive.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in clause 5, new sub-clause (iv), the words " twelve per centum per annum simple interest, or, " in line 2 be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : Are not the remaining amendments¹ to the clause, of which Professor Roberts has given notice, dependent upon the motion which has just been turned down by the House ?

Professor W. Roberts : These amendments are interdependent no doubt, but I have not put up the whole case before the House. I shall do so now by moving the other amendments irrespective of whether the House accepts them or not.

Mr. President : The honourable member had an opportunity of putting his case before the House when he moved his first amendment.

Professor W. Roberts : I was asked to move only the first amendment.

Mr. President : In substance these amendments are interdependent and, therefore, the honourable member has no right to make a second speech.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It was decided to deal with these amendments piecemeal and so the discussion also must be piecemeal instead of a general discussion on all the amendments. You practically ruled me out on that ground, when I wanted to move the first amendment standing in my name and now Mr. Roberts is being prevented from discussing them separately.

Mr. President : There seems to be some misunderstanding which I would like to clear up. The point is : Had the honourable member himself moved only one amendment, i.e., for figure " 12 " another figure be substituted, he would have been in order to discuss the whole clause, and afterwards the other amendments, when their turn came, would have been put to the vote of the House without any further speech or discussion.

¹In clause 5, new sub-clause (iv)—

- (i) the words " simple or " be added before the words " compound interest " in line 3 ;
- (ii) the words " eighteen and three-quarters per centum per annum simple interest or, " in lines 4 and 5, be omitted ; and
- (iii) the words " simple or " be added before the words " compound interest " in line 5.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muham-madah, Rural): Sir, I move—

That in clause 5 (iv), new sub-clause (e), for the word "twelve," the word "ten" be substituted.

Mr. President: In view of the fact that an amendment to a later part of the clause (I mean Professor Robert's amendment) has been moved, it is not open to the honourable member now to move an amendment to an earlier part of the clause.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan: I move my next amendment—

That in clause 5 (iv), new sub-clause (e), the words "or nine per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests" and "or fourteen per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests" be omitted.

(Urdu): Sir, I beg to point out that this compound interest is just like a disease which proves very dangerous to society. It ruins the poor people who are by force of circumstances compelled to contract debts. I admit that when they borrow money, they do so with open eyes and with their senses about them. But at that time they do not feel or realise that this compound interest on the money borrowed will cause their ruin. This realisation comes only when the money is demanded with compound interest or when it is to be paid.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: Is the honourable member in order to discuss the omission of compound interest when the House has already decided that it should not be omitted?

Mr. President: His Excellency has been pleased to send down this clause, as it is, for the consideration of the House, so the honourable member is entitled to discuss it.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan: For the reason that I have already given, I want that this compound interest should be done away with. With these words I commend my amendment for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. President: The question is—

That in clause 5 (iv), new sub-clause (e), the words "or nine per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests" and "or fourteen per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests" be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): I beg to move—

That in the new sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the word "banking," in line 8, be omitted. . Shall I confine myself to this amendment only or shall I move the next amendment also now?

Mr. President: Both the amendments may be moved and discussed together. They will, however, be put to vote separately.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I also move—

That in the new sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, between the words "banking" and "company," in line 8, the words "or insurance" be added.

You will remember, Sir, that when the Bill was last before this House, I asked the House to consider the question of exclusion of insurance companies from the purview of certain parts of the Bill from which the co-operative and commercial banks had been excluded. Now that His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to refer the new clause for the consideration of the

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

House, I ask the House to consider again whether it is not desirable to extend the same privileges to insurance companies which the House has been pleased to extend to joint stock and co-operative banks. I contend, Sir, that every reason which applies to the exclusion of joint stock and co-operative banks applies a fortiori to insurance companies. Their accounts are subject to regular audit as the accounts of any joint stock banks. They render most useful service to the community by inculcating habits of thrift and saving and are much more helpful to industry than the banks. Now the joint stock commercial banks usually give short term loans, while the insurance companies can, by reason of their peculiar position, invest money on long term loans. Therefore they are in a position to help industry in a much more effective manner than the joint stock banks. It must be known to several members of this House that the local companies, that is, the Punjab companies, have invested a great deal of their capital in encouraging the industries of this province. In fact, a great deal of capital has been advanced during the last two years by the Punjab companies on the security of immovable property in Lahore which has ultimately been invested in establishing sugar factories in the United Provinces. Therefore insurance companies render far greater service to the public and the community than the joint stock banks. The joint stock banks usually get deposits from richer classes of people, while the money that the insurance companies possess usually belongs to middle classes and, in fact, to lower middle classes, to which class their policy holders belong. Therefore, as I have already said every reason which applies to the exclusion of the joint stock banks from certain provisions of this Act applies a fortiori to the insurance companies. Further, my chief reason for putting this proposition again before this House is the comparative disadvantage at which you place the Punjab companies as against the Indian Insurance Companies whose head offices are not in the Punjab. The Indian companies working in the Punjab and which do a great deal of business in the Punjab like the Oriental, the Empire, and New India, have their head offices in Bombay. Certain Bengal companies which secure extensive policy business in the Punjab have their head offices in Calcutta. All their capital is invested in Bengal, Bombay and other places in India where you have not got such irksome restrictions as are being imposed by the Punjab Indebtedness Bill. If you do not exclude the insurance companies from the operation of this Bill, you will be placing the Punjab companies, in the choice of their investments, at a considerable disadvantage as compared with other Indian and foreign companies which have got their head offices and fields of investment elsewhere. Again, it is a matter for serious consideration whether such a legislation might not compel these companies to make their investments in other provinces instead of confining themselves to the Punjab, as they ought to do in the interests of this province. This might deprive this province of a good deal of productive capital which is now available for investment in industry and trade and it is not a matter which should be treated lightly or of which the House ought not to take serious note. It is a matter for genuine congratulations that the Punjab companies are doing very well, and are holding their own against others. They have their head offices at Lahore but have their sub-offices in all other parts of India and they will naturally be tempted, if they find lucrative investment elsewhere, to invest their money in other provinces, where they have not got the irksome restrictions which are being imposed by the present Bill and from which the commercial banks and the co-operative banks have been quite rightly excluded. Therefore, I would respectfully submit that for the sake of consistency, if for nothing else, the insurance companies ought to be excluded. Further, there is no reason which I can think of justifying the exclusion of joint stock banks which would not equally apply or apply in a much greater degree to the exclusion of insurance companies. It would be ridiculous, if I may be permitted to say so, that if a long term loan is made by the banking department of an insurance company, the courts should be called upon to hold it usurious, while if it is made by the Imperial Bank or any other joint stock bank or even a mushroom bank which might be started to-morrow—because nobody is prevented from opening a joint stock bank with a capital of say Rs. 10,000 only—at a higher rate, the courts would be bound to enforce it. I, therefore, place this matter before the House for serious consideration, as the matter is not only equitable and proper, but it is necessary in the interest of protecting Punjab industries and local institutions.

Mian Nurullah : May I know what percentage of funds of the insurance companies are invested with the zamindars ?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Neither the funds of joint stock banks nor the funds of insurance companies are, as a rule, invested with the class that is referred to. But the provisions of the Usurious Loans Act and the provisions of the conciliation boards, as enacted by this Bill, are of a general application and affect every member of the community except those which are specifically excluded. The joint stock and co-operative banks are excluded from the operation of conciliation boards and the part relating to the Usurious Loans Act. I contend that the same privilege should be extended to insurance companies. As a matter of fact, every insurance company has a banking department in addition to the insurance department. No one has ever alleged that the insurance companies have ever lent on usurious rates of interest or that they have ever been guilty of any irregularities which the Punjab legislature should aim at curtailing—I beg to submit that this is really a case of accidental omission and very likely, if it had been suggested at an earlier stage, Government would have had no objection to their exemption. But, as it was suggested at a stage when Government had actually formulated its amendments, Government like every one else did not like to have its proposals tinkered with and to have other exceptions added. No conceivable harm would be done to any one by the acceptance of my proposals. Neither zamindars nor non-zamindars can possibly suffer, if my suggestion is adopted. I commend either of my two amendments for acceptance to the House.

Mr. President : The two amendments of which notice has been given being identical in effect, I propose them together.

In the new sub-clause (ic) of clause 5, the word " banking ", in line 8, be omitted.

In the new sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, between the words " banking " and " company ", in line 8, the words " or insurance " be added.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): Sir, I am sorry that I cannot accept this amendment on two grounds at any rate. The first is that, if I remember rightly, the House has already declared its opinion upon the question of exempting insurance companies from the section in question. The second is that insurance companies are not mainly concerned with the financing of agriculture or of small debtors. Banks may very possibly advance loans to small debtors. It is very doubtful if insurance companies are going to do so. I do not think it wise to re-open the whole question at this late stage and start a re-consideration of the Bill afresh. There is also a remedy. If it does appear that in practice insurance companies are being hit by this clause, then as a result of experience Government will be able to give them relief, because under sub-section (8) of section 1 of the Usurious Loans Act it is possible for Government to exempt any person or class of persons or, I think, any class of transaction, from the operations of the Act. That can be done by a simple Government notification, so that the remedy is ready at hand and if experience shows that it has to be used, I have no doubt that Government will be ready to do so. I do not give any undertaking of any kind, but the remedy is there and its use will certainly be considered if experience shows that it is necessary.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: The Honourable Finance Member has told the House that insurance companies are not likely to advance to agriculturists.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: Small men.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: My contention before you is that the commercial banks, the Imperial Bank, the Iloyds Bank, the National Bank of India, whom you have excluded, do not advance to agriculturists. I make bold to say that none of these joint stock banks, these English banks, ever advance any money to any agriculturist. In fact they are mostly confined to financing commerce.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: Do you want to exempt banks by name?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: The reason for non-exclusion of the insurance companies given by the Honourable Finance Member, namely, that they do not advance money to agriculturists and, therefore, it is unnecessary to exclude them, is not sound. I invite the House to give due thought to the merits of the proposal. Sir, what has this reason to do with the modification of the Usurious Loans Act from which the banks have been excluded? The Usurious Loans Act is not confined to agriculturists. The Usurious Loans Act applies to every member of the community whether he is an agriculturist or not. Therefore the fact that these companies do not lend to agriculturists is no reason for their non-exclusion. In fact, this should rather have been a reason for excluding them, because what the council has been attempting to do is to provide means of giving relief to agriculturists. If the insurance companies do not lend to agriculturists, they should not be hampered by any restrictions. Again, there is no reason why an insurance company should be treated differently from other credit institutions, well recognised credit institutions, like the commercial banks and the co-operative societies. I wish to bring to the notice of the House that the insurance companies are more likely to invest small sums with agriculturists than these commercial banks are ever likely to do. In fact, that is a kind of investment which is peculiar to the insurance companies, in which all classes are likely to be included. The policy-holders of insurance companies are not only derived from commercial classes, from people living in towns, but they belong to all classes and communities, members of notified agricultural tribes and people who are agriculturists in the real sense of the term and others. Most of these insurance companies lend to their policy holders on the security of their policies and, therefore, the reason given by the Honourable Finance Member that only those persons should be excluded who are likely to invest with agriculturists applies much more to the insurance companies than to the joint stock companies or commercial banks, because loans to policy-holders would include loans to agriculturists. I only wish that Government had not taken its stand upon a frame of mind which is peculiar to Governments, that is, if they have taken one attitude they should stick to it under all circumstances. I would have congratulated the Government and I would have congratulated the Honourable Finance Member, if he had exhibited more often this attitude which he is exhibiting now, with respect to my amendments. When the opposition comes from powerful people, at that moment Government changes its attitude not only from week to week but from day to day and from hour to hour. The House has seen how at the dictation of the debtor classes a sound position once taken by the Government has been abandoned from hour to hour and from minute to minute, but when even a reasonable proposal is put forward by people who have not got the one thing that carries conviction with Government, the Government says well, this matter has already been decided by the House and Government officials, howsoever highly placed—and no one is more highly placed than the Honourable Finance Member—say that they cannot do it. Who is Puri, they say, who is Narendra Nath who dare make a representation to His Excellency to make any change in a proposal which has once been drafted by or agreed to by him, howsoever reasonable the representation might be?

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : I think the honourable member cannot discuss the conduct of any other honourable member.

Mr. President : I hope the honourable member will not be personal.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The Honourable Finance Member wanted to reinforce his argument by the fact that they had once taken that attitude and that is the last word. Well, I submit that had that been his usual frame of mind with respect to many proposals which he himself at one time considered as quite unreasonable and which he subsequently had to accept—

Mr. President : The honourable member need not repeat.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Therefore I submit that the attitude of the Government is most unreasonable in this instance and is only illustrative of the general attitude of hostility, which the Government has displayed towards proposals emanating from us.

Mr. President : Question is—

That in the new sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, the word "banking" in line 8 be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : Question is—

That in the new sub-clause (iv) of clause 5, between the words "banking" and "company," in line 8, the words "or insurance" be added.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The motion is—

That clause 5 (iv) be omitted and in its place the following be substituted :—

" 5 (iv) To sub-section (2) the following clause shall be added—

- (e) The court shall deem interest to be excessive, if on secured loans it exceeds twelve per centum per annum simple interest or nine per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests and if on unsecured loans it exceeds eighteen and three-quarter per centum per annum simple interest or fourteen per centum per annum compound interest with annual rests provided that the court shall not deem interest in excess of the above rates to be excessive if the loan has been advanced by the Imperial Bank of India or any banking company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or any law relating to companies for the time being in force in British India."

The question is that this recommended amendment stand part of the Bill.

The motion was carried.

Clause 7.

Mr. President : The next amendment recommended by His Excellency is—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (2) containing the definition of "debtor" be omitted and the following sub-clauses be substituted in its place and that sub-clause (3) be renumbered as (4) :—

- (2) "Debtor" means a person who owes a debt and—

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, and is either a landowner or tenant of agricultural land or a servant of a landowner or of a tenant of agricultural land; or
(ii) who earns his livelihood as a village menial paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture:

Provided that a member of a tribe, notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from other sources is greater than his income from agriculture.

Explanations.—(i) A debtor shall not lose his status as such through involuntary unemployment or on account of incapacity, temporary or permanent, by bodily infirmity, or, if he is or has been in service of His Majesty's Military or Naval Forces, only on account of his pay and allowances or pension exceeding his income from agricultural sources.

(ii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such by reason of the fact that he makes income by using his plough cattle for purposes of transport.

(iii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such only because he does not cultivate with his own hands.

If any question arises in proceedings under this part of the Act, whether a person is a debtor or not, the decision of a Debt Conciliation Board shall be final.

- (3) "Agriculture" shall include horticulture and the use of land for any purpose of husbandry, inclusive of the keeping or breeding of livestock, poultry, or bees, and the growth of fruit, vegetables and the like.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What about amendments to sub-clause (1) of clause 7?

Mr. President : I understood them to be consequential amendments, that is to say, if the amendments to clause 5 were carried, then these consequential amendments would be made; but not otherwise.

¹ In clause 7 (1), the words "or insurance" be added after the word "banking" in line 13.

In clause 7 (1), the word "banking" in line 13 be omitted.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What I wished to know was whether it was permissible to this House to move amendments to clauses other than those to which His Excellency the Governor has recommended some amendments or whether the House can move amendments only to clauses to which His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to recommend some amendments.

Mr. President : That depends upon what His Excellency the Governor has recommended to the Council for reconsideration. If His Excellency has returned the whole Bill for reconsideration without recommending any specific amendments, the Council can reconsider the whole Bill. But if His Excellency has returned only a part of the Bill, amendments can be made only to that part of the Bill. On the other hand, if His Excellency has sent only specific recommendations in the shape of amendments, in that case only those specific recommendations can be considered and not other clauses of the Bill unless, of course, consequential amendments are necessary to be made to the other parts of the Bill.

Rai Sahib Lala Labh Chand Mehra (Non-official, nominated) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in the proviso to new sub-clause (2) of clause 7, between the words "is" and "greater" the following words be added "or was at the time the loan was advanced."

(Urdu) : My object in moving this amendment is to make it clear that the benefit of this proviso will be given only to those members of an agricultural tribe whose income from land was greater than their income from other sources at the time the loan was advanced. The word "is" in the proviso is liable to defeat the object in view. The benefit of the proviso, as it stands at present, is liable to be given to all members of agricultural tribes and those persons are not excluded from the benefit of this proviso whose income from other sources was greater than their income from agriculture at the time the loan was advanced. Such persons whose income from other sources was greater than their income from land at the time the loan was advanced could, under the present provision, say at any time when their income becomes less from other sources than their income from land that they are entitled to the benefit of this proviso. Suppose an agriculturist who along with agriculture carries on some trade or business as well and incurs a debt when his income from the latter source is greater than his income from the former. Suppose also that after sometime his business fails and he suffers loss and his income from trade becomes less than his income from agriculture. Now, according to the proviso as it stands at present, he can be assumed a debtor and given the benefit of this clause. I want to shut all such possibilities. Under the circumstances, the benefit of this proviso should be given only to those persons whose income from other sources was less than their income from agriculture at the time the loan was advanced.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in the proviso to new sub-clause (2) of clause 7, between the words "is" and "greater," the following words be added "or was at the time the loan was advanced."

The motion was lost.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I move —

That in clause 7, new sub-clause (2), the proviso be omitted.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

This sub-clause contains the definition of a debtor and this definition has a history behind it. Government at first intended that relief should be given to agriculturists irrespective of any tribal consideration, that the definition of agriculturist which should be adopted in this Bill should be an economic one and not tribal which is the one adopted in the Land Alienation Act. The original definition put forward by Government followed that line and defined the term agriculturist, which was the term used in the original Bill in place of the term debtor, in economic terms. That was a move in the right direction. In the select committee also the Government took up the same attitude and also when Government substituted the word "debtor" for the word "agriculturist," the definition of debtor was confined to those who followed the profession of agriculture, persons whose income from agriculture was more than their income from other sources. But in the House attempt was again made by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram to include within the definition of debtor all members of notified agricultural tribes. That attempt was not successful. But this proviso creates a presumption "that every member of an agricultural tribe is a debtor" not a very happy presumption to be made in the case of any self-respecting individual (laughter). The presumption which the Bill now raises is, that every member of a notified agricultural tribe shall be presumed to be a debtor unless it is proved to the contrary. Any person with the least self-respect ought to resent that such a presumption should not be raised about him, but the standard of members of the agricultural tribes is different. However, this is a matter for members representing the agriculturist classes to decide for themselves. What I object to, however, is that in this measure the Government has unfortunately ended by again bringing in what it started by definitely excluding, that is, the Government tried that persons who are not agriculturists shall not be included within the purview of the Act simply because they happen to belong to certain castes or tribes or to be born agriculturists, but that a person in order to be able to take advantage of this measure should be an agriculturist by profession. By introducing this proviso Government has receded from its original position, a position honest and straightforward, and a step in the right direction, and has ended by endorsing what it set out to correct. I repeat that on a matter of principle Government should have stuck to its original position and I ask the House again to reconsider whether by omitting this proviso they would not be doing the right thing. With these words I move my amendment.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved--

That the proviso to new sub-clause (2) of clause 7 be omitted.

Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadian, Rural) : I had absolutely no desire to speak either on this amendment or on any other amendment. But the speech of the honourable member, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, has induced me to say a few words. The idea that is uppermost in my mind at present is : Forgive them, O ! Lord, for they know not what they do. Has Mr. Puri considered the effect of his opposition to this proviso ? Suppose as a result of his opposition the recommended amendment is defeated. He will then be left with the definition of debtor which will include everybody, traders, sahuikars and so on and so forth. Against this general application of the Bill Mr. Puri and the whole of his party put up a very stout fight. Is he now going back upon the position which was taken up by himself and his party? Government in order to oblige, not the zamindar members of the House, not the members of the National Unionist Party, but the urban Hindu party, has put forward this fresh amendment in order to make the section restricted in its application. This was done definitely in deference to the wishes which were expressed by Raja Sahib and his other colleagues. The honourable member to my left, Shaikh Abdul Ghani, draws my attention to the fact that the speech of Mr. Puri is confined only to the proviso that has been added by Government now. It is true, but, if this proviso is taken out, does he think that the remaining portion of the amendment will be carried? After all, this amendment, as it stands, and the attitude of my party to it are the result of a certain understanding and it is as a consequence of that understanding that we are not putting forward any amendments of our own and are not opposing any amendments that have been put forward on behalf of Government. Therefore, the honourable member, Mr. Puri, ought to be reasonable and what has been done in the interest of his own class he should not seek to undo.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri: I only moved for the omission of the proviso to sub-clause (2) of clause 7 which would leave the definition of debtor to be that a debtor means a person who owes a debt and one who earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture and is either a land-owner or tenant of agricultural land or a servant of a land-owner or tenant of agricultural land or who earns his livelihood as village menial paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture. The omission of the proviso would not mean that traders are included within the definition. The omission of the proviso would only restore the original proposal of Government. Of course, Chaudhri Chhotu Ram has been frank enough to confess that this proviso has been insisted upon by his party and that, if this proviso had not been inserted, he would have very likely claimed the whole pound of flesh. What was that pound of flesh? It was the unique definition invented by the majority party that "a debtor means a person who owes a debt." The restoration of that definition would not have redounded very much to the credit of that party. In any case, my amendment does not in any way conflict with the interests which I have been representing. I am only complaining that the economic factors which ought to have weighed in the course of this legislation have given way in the course of the debate and the discussions private and public and the consequent pressure on the Government is to considerations which are not economic but tribal. I have again placed before the House my amendment with a view to give another opportunity to the House to legislate on proper lines and not on irrational lines dictated merely by the will of the majority.

Mr. President: Question is—

That in clause 7, new sub-clause (2), the proviso be omitted.

The motion was lost.

Mr. President: The question is—

That in clause 7, sub-clause (2), containing the definition of "debtor" be omitted and the following sub-clauses be substituted in its place and that sub-clause (3) be renumbered as (4):—

[Mr. President.]

(2) "Debtor" means a person who owes a debt and—

- (i) who both earns his livelihood mainly by agriculture, and is either a landowner, or tenant of agricultural land or a servant of a landowner or of a tenant of agricultural land, or
- (ii) who earns his livelihood as a village menial paid in cash or kind for work connected with agriculture :

Provided that a member of a tribe, notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, shall be presumed to be a debtor as defined in this section until it is proved that his income from other sources is greater than his income from agriculture.

Explanations.—(i) A debtor shall not lose his status as such through involuntary unemployment or on account of incapacity, temporary or permanent, by bodily infirmity, or, if he is or has been in service of His Majesty's Military or Naval Forces, only on account of his pay and allowances or pension exceeding his income from agricultural sources.

(ii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such by reason of the fact that he makes income by using his plough cattle for purposes of transport.

(iii) A debtor shall not lose his status as such only because he does not cultivate with his own hands.

If any question arises in proceedings under this part of the Act, whether a person is a debtor or not, the decision of a Debt Conciliation Board shall be final.

- (3) "Agriculture," shall include horticulture and the use of land for any purpose of husbandry inclusive of the keeping or breeding of livestock, poultry, or bees, and the growth of fruit, vegetables and the like.

The motion was carried.

Clause 30.

Mr. President : The question is—

That as a consequential amendment clause 30 be omitted, and clause 31 be amended by the substitution of the word and figure "section 7" for the word and figures "section 30" wherever they occur in sub-sections (i) and (ii).

As a further consequential amendment clause 31 be renumbered as clause 30 and all the clauses following it be renumbered.

The motion was carried.

Clause 31.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the proviso to clause 31 be omitted.

The motion was carried.

Clause 35.

Mr. President : The next amendment recommended by His Excellency is—

That clause 35 as passed by the Legislative Council be omitted and in its place the following be substituted—

- "35. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in any other law for the time being in force, no judgment-debtor shall be liable to arrest for default in the payment of any money due under a decree unless the court is satisfied that the judgment-debtor has, without just cause, contumaciously refused to pay the amount of the decree, in whole or in part, within his capacity to make payment :

Provided that the court shall, before issuing a warrant of arrest, give an opportunity to the judgment-debtor to show cause against its issue : and Provided further that, in considering the capacity of the judgment-debtor to pay, the court shall take into consideration the value of the property of the judgment-debtor only to the extent to which a civil court can dispose of it under the law in execution of a decree."

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muhammadan, Rural), (Urdu): Sir, I beg to move—

That in new clause 35, between the words "decree" and "unless," in line 3, the following words be inserted:—"of a civil court."

If the Government is desirous of penalizing the exacting and dishonest money-lenders, it is welcome to do so, and if it wants to make laws in order that the debtors are relieved of the huge burden of debts, it has our whole-hearted sympathies. What we take strong exception to, however, is the attempt the Government has made by instituting the present clause, to injure the interests of zamindars. The zamindar has to institute legal proceedings against his tenants many a time in the year when they refuse to pay him the stipulated rents or share of the produce. It is not uncommon for the tenants to refuse to pay in the shape of batai or chakota the stipulated rent and the zamindar has to seek the remedy in a court of law. This new clause will make the defaulting tenants immune from the clutches of law as is administered by civil courts. If the clause is adopted in its present form, it will seriously injure the interests of the zamindars who will be deprived of an opportunity of seeking legal remedy against the defaulting tenants in the courts. All the big zamindars present here will bear me out that we greatly stand in need of the protection which the present law affords us and which the clause now under discussion seeks to do away with. We are already suffering at the hands of dishonest tenants. We have to engage a munshi to collect rents from tenants and to institute legal proceedings against those who refuse to pay. He has to perform countless duties in this connection. He has to serve ejectment notices on some of the tenants; he has to sue some in the court; the case of some of them is to be referred to a number of gentlemen from the locality for compromise. Some tenants fell trees from the land of the proprietor and refuse to pay any price for it on demand. The proprietor has to institute proceedings against them. These are the difficulties of the big zamindars. But if the present clause is made to stand part of the Bill it will be impossible for them to execute their decrees. The tenants will be protected by this clause and they will snap their fingers in the face of the decree-holder. I am not asking for the moon by moving this amendment. I simply want to retain for the zamindars the right which they already enjoy under the law in force and of which the present clause deprives them. I have no objection to putting severe checks on the activities of the dishonest sahuikars. I should like, however, to see the rights of the honest zamindars preserved against the bad intentions of those tenants who are not prepared to pay their dues. I would appeal to all the big zamindars here to lend support to my amendment and I hope the Government, too, will see its way to accept it.

Mr. President: Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in new clause 35, between the words "decree" and "unless" in line 3, the following words be inserted:—"of a civil court."

Chaudhri Bansi Lal (Lahore city, non-Muhammadan, Urban) (Punjabi): Sir, I am thankful to my honourable friend, Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan, for having spoken in Hindustani, because I have also been able to understand what he said. I wonder why my countrymen, and more especially the Punjabi members of this Council, are so much enamoured of foreign tongues. Do they not understand this simple thing that it is good to speak our own tongue in our own country ? But my honourable friends here do not seem to have appreciated the propriety of speaking their own mother tongue and to-day it is through the kindness of my friend, Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan, that I who am the grandson of Kalu sweeper and son of Mangal Balmik am participating in this debate. (Hear, hear). I am illiterate and for that I have to thank my parents who did not send me to school.

[Chaudhri Bansi Lal.]

Mr. President : Order, order.

Chaudhri Bansi Lal : For Heaven's sake let me continue for a minute without interruption. (Laughter). No doubt the Government has passed a law that the sahkars should not be able to harass their clients unnecessarily and I hope that the debtors will be relieved from many hardships on account of this law. But what about the unsympathetic judges ? They go on passing orders ruthlessly for the attachment and auction of the property of poor debtors. They do not have the least amount of pity for them. Look at the civil judges like Shaikh Maqbul Ahmad and Mr. Jagdish Narain. I do not think that these people have any pity left in their hearts. We cannot, therefore, go on complaining of the cruelties of sahkars alone.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani (West Punjab Towns, Muhammadan, Urban) (Urdu): Sir, in view of the complaint of my honourable friend, Mr. Bansi Lal, I should like to speak in Urdu.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : He would like to hear you in Punjabi.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : I have no objection to speaking in Punjabi either. It is my mother tongue. The amendment moved by Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan is not so very important that the House should waste its precious time over it. This amendment, however, clearly shows the state of mind of my rural friends, and we should carefully notice it. We, who lend our support to the reasonable demands of the rural members are not here to sell our conscience. They should not expect that we will go on lending our support to all unreasonable propositions that may be brought forward by them. The present amendment has been conceived through ill-will and we cannot lend our countenance to it. We know that in most cases the zamindars do not make a proper use of their money and run into heavy debts. But we come forward nevertheless to help them out of their difficulties because we know that it is in the interest of the country at large that they should be afforded facilities to carry on their useful profession of agriculture. But our attitude seems to have turned their head and now they have taken it into their head to make all sorts of wild proposals like the one contained in the present amendment. Sometimes they press upon the Government that remissions should be granted in land revenue and sometimes they urge that sahkars should be compelled to forego their debts. This is not fair. The zamindars should know better. If they do not mend their ways, they will alienate the sympathies of a large section of the people and after that the situation will become very difficult for them to manage. I hope that my warning will have the desired effect and our leader in this House, Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, will point out to the honourable member and his party the unreasonableness of his amendment and will ask him to withdraw it with repentance.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): I fear that my honourable friend from Ambala is a little bit mistaken. He thinks that a recovery of debt will lie in a judicial court, whereas it really lies under the Land Revenue Act in a revenue court. I will, therefore, advise my friend to withdraw his amendment.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in new clause 35, between the words "decree" and "unless" in line 3, the following words be inserted:—"of a civil court."

The motion was lost.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : I move—

That for the second proviso to the new clause 35, the following two provisos be substituted—

"Provided further that when a court has power under the law to order a temporary alienation of the land of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree the court shall not for the purpose of this section take into account the value of any such temporary alienation in considering the capacity of the judgment-debtor to pay:

"Provided, further, that save in so far as is otherwise provided in this section the court in considering the capacity of the judgment-debtor to pay shall take into consideration the value of the property of the judgment-debtor only to the extent to which a civil court can dispose of it under the law in execution of a decree."

In moving this amendment I wish briefly to explain its object. It has been suggested that the amendment recommended by

4 P. M.

His Excellency the Governor would leave it open to a court to order the imprisonment of a judgment-debtor even if the judgment-debtor owned land in regard to which it was within the power of the court to order temporary alienation. The mere fact that a judgment-debtor did not take the initiative in arranging for a mortgage may in the opinion of the court provide sufficient grounds for ordering his imprisonment. Government are inclined to the view that the mere failure on the part of the judgment-debtor in the circumstances mentioned could not be considered by the court as contumacious refusal and, therefore, the amendment as recommended would in fact have given protection in the case mentioned. There is no doubt that when a court has no power to order temporary alienation resort to arrest and imprisonment should not be made in the case I have mentioned and I am sure the Council will agree with that view of Government in this respect. Since doubt has been expressed whether the amendment recommended by His Excellency the Governor sufficiently protected judgment-debtors in this respect it has been decided to place the intention of Government beyond the possibility of doubt by the amendment which I have now moved. Our intention was the intention embodied in this amendment from the beginning. But as doubts have been cast upon the meaning of the amendment as originally recommended by His Excellency I have moved the present amendment in order to make the position absolutely clear.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That for the second proviso to the new clause 35, the following two provisos be substituted—

"Provided further that when a court has power under the law to order a temporary alienation of the land of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree, the court shall not for the purpose of this section take into account the value of any such temporary alienation in considering the capacity of the judgment-debtor to pay:

"Provided, further, that save in so far as is otherwise provided in this section the court in considering the capacity of the judgment debtor to pay shall take into consideration the value of the property of the judgment-debtor only to the extent to which a civil court can dispose of it under the law in execution of a decree."

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General) : I oppose this amendment. When I read the original amendment to section 35 recommended by His Excellency the Governor I thought it was manifestly unjust. A land-owner who owns thousands of acres of land, though he does not mortgage it has still credit to the extent of the value of that property. The only restriction imposed by the Land Alienation Act is that a member of an agricultural tribe cannot transfer it by sale to a person who does not belong to an agricultural tribe, but he can sell it to a person of an agricultural tribe. Therefore that land which he owns has a saleable value. It is on the security of that value that a money-lender lends thousands and even lakhs of rupees. Now the provision with regard to arrests has a moral effect in making the well-to-do debtors pay. The amendment recommended by His Excellency the Governor took away from that property its saleable value. The value of the property was reduced to what it would be if it could be alienated for 20 years which is naturally very much less than the value it can fetch by sale. Now the amendment which is proposed by the Honourable Finance Member takes away both the saleable value as well as the mortgage value. Thus the value of the property which is protected under section 16 of the Land Alienation Act is reduced to zero. That is manifestly unjust, manifestly discriminatory and I, therefore, offer my most strenuous opposition to it. In the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report there has been a reference to discriminatory laws. In the Franchise Committee Report also there is a reference to the Land Alienation Act. In the Joint Parliamentary Report it is stated that though discriminatory laws of the nature of the Land Alienation Act can be tolerated yet the rights of minorities should be protected and if such a discriminatory law goes against the rights of a minority that minority has the privilege of seeking the protection of the Governor and of the Governor-General. This amendment carries discrimination to extremes. It means that a member of an agricultural tribe who owns thousands of acres is exempt from imprisonment, he cannot be arrested, because the value of his property cannot be taken into consideration. He may own a palace in Simla or in any other town and another provision of this Bill exempts that property from attachment if it is not let out on rent. Thus immovable property of all kinds is exempted from attachment. This is a most unjust provision that one can think of. I am quite sure that this amendment will be passed by the House but I must record my emphatic protest against it.

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : I am sorry I was not present during the earlier part of the speech of Raja Narendra Nath. But I can well imagine the purport of it from the last few words which I was able to hear. His complaint is that undue favour is being shown to members of agricultural tribes because their houses will not be liable to attachment and their lands will not be liable for sale and the income from land will not be taken into account in considering the paying capacity of a particular debtor. I think he has stated only one side of the case. A debtor's land is liable to be attached and can be given out on farm for a period of twenty years. So the income or the proceeds of the farm will be available to the court for the satisfaction of the decree. It is only for purposes of arrest that courts will not be able to take into account the value of the property or the value of the farm. Therefore Raja Sahib has really no grouse whatsoever on this score. So far as the sale of land is concerned, that is already forbidden under the Land Alienation Act and this amendment of the Government does not seek to add a title to that Act. It is only with a view to give immunity from arrest that the value of the farm is sought to be excluded under the amendment which Government has kindly agreed to move as a result of mutual understanding. Therefore I support the amendment.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries): This amendment as has already been pointed out by Raja Narendra Nath is the most important clause in this Bill. This clause is more unjust than all the rest of the Bill put together. It is also novel, because, as far as members of statutory agricultural tribes are concerned, it puts an end to all facilities for realization of debts. By this one amendment, the debts due from the statutory agricultural tribes are practically wiped out in their entirety. Chaudhri Chhotu Ram even will not, I think, deny the obvious that the effect of this amendment is that as far as the members of the statutory agricultural tribes are concerned they will be entirely immune from arrest while others will be liable to arrest only if they contumaciously withhold payment of their debt. I wish to state at the outset, that after considering the matter very carefully, after discussing it with my friends I have come to the conclusion that such a discriminatory piece of legislation should not be allowed to be passed without recording a protest. I would be quite willing, if I had the choice, to accept the first decision of the House that arrest in execution of a decree should be abolished altogether for all rather than that it should be abolished only in the case of the privileged class. I believe the abolition of arrest as a means of realisation of a decree would create insurmountable difficulties of which no Government can refuse to take cognisance. But if I have to choose between the abolition of arrest in execution of civil decree in all cases and abolition of arrest in the execution of civil decree only in the case of statutory agriculturists or any privileged classes, I say with a full sense of responsibility that I would certainly prefer the first which places all people on the same level. What is the effect of this amendment? A member of a statutory agricultural tribe who owns 500 bighas of land and a number of houses not let on hire, cannot be arrested in execution of a decree, even if he deliberately refuses to pay a judgment debt of Rs. 100, while another person who is not a statutory agriculturist who owns less than 200 bighas of land can be arrested. Has the House forgotten the speech of the honourable member from Gujranwala, Chaudhri Riasat Ali—he is quite frank on certain occasions—delivered in the course of discussions on this Bill, but at an earlier stage? This is what he said in the Council on 27th June 1934—

I have known another gentleman, an honorary magistrate with ten thousand acres of land going to jail for a debt of Rs. 2,500. I am afraid I am supporting my friend in talking like this that though men could pay they went to jail, but I am talking of the attitude of these people. (Page 191 ante.)

Now, by this provision you are going to make it impossible for any court to order arrest of a person who owns ten thousand acres of land and owes only Rs. 500 but who would not pay his debt. In order to buy a motor car, and in order to spend on the marriage of his children, or in order to spend on licentiousness, or on luxury, he can sell, mortgage or lease his entire land to a member of statutory agricultural tribes but in order to consider his ability to pay debt, the effect of this proposal is that this property should not be taken into consideration. Now is there any law in existence in the

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Punjab which lays down that such a man is not able to pay his debts? He is certainly unwilling to pay his debts and is it intended by this House that this man, not because he is economically unable to pay his debt, but because he happens to be the son of a Jat, although he may be following the profession of a lawyer, doctor or school master, he should be able to defy the legitimate decrees which are passed by His Majesty's courts, by simply refusing to pay? What I submit is that as far as members of the agricultural tribes are concerned, even if you accepted His Excellency's original amendment, not to talk of the improvement made by the Honourable Finance Member, you would have practically wiped out the entire debt which is due from the agricultural tribes of this province. There is no mistake about it. And if you want to abolish arrest, I certainly for one, and I speak in this matter on behalf of all the non-agriculturists of the province, would welcome a legislation which places every subject of His Majesty on the same level in this respect and not be a party to such an unjust and discriminatory legislation as this. (An honourable member: We would welcome it). Well, then, let us all unite and support the original recommendation and I certainly would walk into your lobby if the alternative before me is the one which is now before us. I can very well understand the abolition of arrest in execution of all civil decrees. But I for the life of me cannot see any logic or sense in this proposal. We had heard of Sikhashahi, and also of Nadarshahi. But this is Zamindarshahi of the worst type. (An honourable member: Jatshahi.) Yes and enforced not by the power of the Jat but by the sword of the British and that is the most disgraceful part of it. The Government should never have accepted this amendment. The proposal of the select committee even on this point which was again the proposal made to carry out the orders of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, in spite of Government's own opinion to the contrary did not go as far as this. That proposal except for the proviso was far more rational. Compare the present proposal with the proposal of the select committee and you will notice the difference. The appetite of the zamindar group has increased from day to day and more on account of concessions made to it. In fact, at one time, Government definitely opposed any legislation on this subject, and said so in the House but Government can look to its own reputation for any consistent policy. But I wish to draw the attention of the House to a far more serious matter. The present amendment, brought forward at this late stage and without consultation with any non-zamindar, utterly disregards its own declared policy enunciated solemnly several times in this Council. No less a person than Sir Fazl-i-Husain, as Revenue Member, speaking on 28th February 1929 on a resolution re Amendment of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, declared it as a settled policy of the Government not to extend the operation of the Alienation of Land Act. He stated—

The policy of the Government which was responsible for the legislation which resulted in the Land Alienation Act of 1900 is a policy which the Government has not abandoned; but it is not a policy which the Government is prepared to extend either. Therefore any effort made in the year 1929 to persuade the Government to extend it cannot but be met with determined opposition from Government Government will neither move backward nor move forward, but stands where it is.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: That is the exact reason of this clause.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I have very great regard for the Honourable Finance Member but Mr. Boyd's word is not the final word on a matter of interpretation. Let him appoint two arbitrators, two European judges and let them say that this is not extending the scope of the Land Alienation Act and I will bow to their decision. At one time, Mr. Boyd himself expressed a similar opinion on the select committee in support of my contention, while we were discussing a similar amendment of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram in connection with the provisions relating to insolvency.

Again on 23rd July 1930 the Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan, Revenue Member, speaking on behalf of the Government said—

I am grateful to the Chair for making the suggestion and giving me an opportunity to speak on behalf of the Government. My predecessor made a declaration of Government policy in this House sometime ago. With your permission I wish to reiterate that policy, and assure the House that Government still adheres to it. What he said at the time was that Government will neither go a step forward nor a step backward, that is to say, that it will neither permit the scope of the Act to be extended nor allow it to be restricted. So far as the resolution under discussion is concerned, I am afraid that it is not possible for Government to accept it in its present form, because it is worded in language, which goes beyond the real issue, and I am advised infringes the declared policy of Government as it aims at extending the scope of the Act.—(Punjab Debates, Vol. XVI, Page 144.)

Now the Land Alienation Act lays down rules which determine the relations between a debtor and a creditor and you will be pleased to observe that the assets of a member of an agricultural tribe have always been taken by courts and by everybody else during the last 30 years to include the market value of his land, because the Land Alienation Act does not prohibit the sale of that land. It permits a member of an agricultural tribe to sell his land to any one whom he likes provided he is a member of the agricultural tribe. It permits him to mortgage it for any amount and at any rate of interest with another member of the agricultural tribe. All that is prohibited is that the land cannot be sold in execution of a decree. There is nothing in the Act which prevents him from selling or mortgaging it himself. Therefore the courts have invariably interpreted "ability to pay", "capacity to pay", to include the value of the agricultural land. It has been so interpreted not by one judge, not by Indian judges alone, but by a succession of illustrious judges from 1906 up to 1932. The phrase "unable to pay" occurs in the Insolvency Act. The courts have interpreted that a person's ability to pay should be determined after taking into consideration the value of his agricultural land, inasmuch as he has absolute power of disposal over that land. That is how it has been interpreted by almost all the judges and that is how it has been taken to be the law of the land in the Punjab. Now, if the Government wishes to change this accepted interpretation of the Land Alienation Act, then the Government is clearly extending the scope of the Land Alienation Act. A similar point was raised by Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram in the select committee when he proposed an amendment to section 74 of the Insolvency Act and he wanted a proviso to be added that in interpreting that section, in determining "capacity to pay," the agricultural land or the land which is not liable to attachment or sale in execution of a decree, shall not be taken into consideration. That was the definite endeavour made by him to achieve his object and it was turned down by the votes of officials voting with the minority.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : We do it again.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : The Honourable Member says he will do it again. I wish he will do it here also. What is now proposed by the Government is that a civil court in determining the ability of a debtor for the purposes of a provision of Civil Procedure Code shall not take into consideration the value of the agricultural land of a member of an agricultural tribe notified under the Land Alienation Act.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The position is quite different.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I do not agree. The question is that the relations of the debtors belonging to agricultural tribes and the creditors have been regulated by a certain interpretation of law which has been uniformly accepted by courts. Is the Punjab Government now going to give a go-bye to it or is it going to accept that interpretation and follow it?

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : Of the Land Alienation Act or the Provincial Insolvency Act? Would you mind explaining?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : Of the Land Alienation Act. There are various ways in which a creditor can realise money from a debtor belonging to tribes notified under the Land Alienation Act and one of them is arrest. If you abolish arrest as a means of realising debt from members of notified agricultural tribes, you are extending the scope of Land Alienation Act by conferring a privilege on statutory agriculturists to the detriment of creditors. You are extending the scope of the Land Alienation Act. If you take away one of the methods by which he can realise the decree—you are clearly extending the principle of the Land Alienation Act. That was, I respectfully submit, the opinion of certain official members in the select committee. That is certainly the opinion of Raja Narendra Nath, retired Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Manohar Lal, an ex-Minister and myself who have definitely said so in the note of dissent to the report of the select committee. What I say is this. Here are these solemn pledges of the Punjab Government that the scope of the Land Alienation Act shall not be extended to the detriment of the creditor. Are they going to be trodden under foot like this? That is not a matter which is settled by the person breaking the pledge asserting that it does not extend the scope of the Act. We solemnly say that it does so extend. Let the Honourable Finance Member refer this matter to two judges if he cares for an independent and impartial opinion and let him give us an opportunity of placing our case before them. This is not a matter on which legislation should be undertaken in such a light-hearted manner. Apart altogether from its being highly inequitable, it is a matter which goes against, I respectfully submit, the solemn pledges given not only by the predecessors of this Government but by the members of the present Government themselves and thus bring the Government itself into disrepute. Whatever may have been said about the original proviso, is there any doubt that the present further amendment of the Punjab Government that the value of the lease of the land shall not also be taken into account in determining capacity to pay, clearly extend the scope of the Land Alienation Act? The original proviso to the clause as proposed by the select committee was also drafted by Chaudhri Chhotu Ram. It could never occur to him that the Punjab Government could possibly swallow this further amendment which is being now introduced at this late stage. If the repeated declarations of Punjab Government's policy are not the well-known "scraps of paper"; let them consult judges on this point, if they cannot or would not see the obvious. I oppose this amendment on three grounds because it is entirely inequitable, unjustifiable and unjust, because it makes invidious distinctions between two classes of His Majesty's subjects and because it extends the scope of the Land Alienation Act.

Khan Bahadur Malik Zaman Mehdi Khan (Sheikhupura, Muhammadan, Rural): Whenever there is any mention of the Land Alienation Act or of Chaudhri Chhotu Ram, Mr. Puri it seems to me loses his temper. The only thing which the Government is doing in this connection about this amendment is to clarify some vagueness and ambiguity in the original amendment. The thing is that the land of a zamindar, as you know, cannot be alienated at all permanently, cannot be sold to non-zamindars, nor can it be temporarily alienated; so, in considering the value of the property at the time of making arrest the court will only be reasonable and just in regarding that the property which has already been alienated is not now in the possession of the debtor at all. Nor does he derive any benefit from it. Why should then the value of that property be taken into consideration? I think you should realise the reasonableness of the amendment. The only thing which the court could do was that in execution of a decree it could not sell the land itself but as stated by Mr. Puri, the zamindar could be compelled to sell his land to a zamindar brother. This simply meant that most of the zamindars in this matter would be ruined. Execution of a decree has to be satisfied by a temporary alienation of land but so much must be left as would suffice for the maintenance of his family and his other requirements. I think there is absolutely nothing unjustifiable or unreasonable in this amendment. Government is definitely justified in bringing in this amendment. (Hear, hear).

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan (Ambala division, North-East, Muhammadan, Rural): I rise to support the amendment, the Honourable Member has introduced. Unnecessary heat has been introduced in the debate only on account of the ignorance of the honourable member for Industries of the Land Revenue Act (laughter). It has been said that this amendment which His Excellency has made is not an improvement of the Bill. On the contrary we feel that His Excellency has been too considerate for my friends on this side. The original section does not make any distinction between any sort of debtors. But now there have been limitations and these limitations are in accordance with the Land Alienation Act. It has neither been extended nor restricted. It is only an explanation as my friend the honourable member for Sheikhupura has just now said. The land of the zamindar which has already been alienated should not be taken into account for the purposes of some other decree. It must be excluded and surely as much land should be left with him as is sufficient for the maintenance of himself and his family. This maintenance allowance surely should not be taken into consideration when you are executing any decree. The other proviso clearly lays down that you can take only that much land which can be disposed of, and leaving perhaps land which is held under temporary cultivation some more land may be disposed of in this manner. If there is no other land at all then the whole land could be taken into consideration leaving such land as is necessary for his maintenance. My honourable friend practices only in civil courts and so, perhaps does not know that this procedure is always adopted by the deputy commissioners when alienating the land, they can never leave a single bigha of land which is more than necessary for his maintenance and if he had understood that I think, he would never have made any objection. With these words I support the amendment.

[Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan.]

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): From the tone of righteous indignation assumed by Raja Narendra Nath and Mr. Puri one might have thought that Government were about to perpetrate some monstrous piece of favouritism in the amendments which His Excellency recommended to the Council and the further amendment which I have already moved. The real truth is this that we are trying to preserve the scope of the Punjab Land Alienation Act absolutely intact. I think it is section 16 of the Punjab Land Alienation Act which lays down that land belonging to a member of an agricultural tribe cannot be sold in execution of a decree. We all know that, but the effect of this section seems to have been overlooked by some of the speakers. If the land cannot be sold by a court in execution of a decree, is it not extending the scope of the Act to permit the court to compel a man to sell his own land? Whether the land is sold by the court or whether the court compels the man to sell his own land is the same thing (hear, hear). You provide for exemption from arrest and yet you allow the court to imprison a man because of the value of the land being greater than the value of the decree. To my mind that would be a clear extension of the scope of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. Then the honourable Raja Sahib has been most indignant about the amendment which I have to-day moved to the effect that if a court can itself make a usufructuary mortgage of a judgment-debtor's land, the judgment-debtor should not be imprisoned with regard to the value of that usufruct. That I think is clear justice. Suppose the court has the unfortunate judgment-debtor standing before it and it says that his land can be alienated temporarily for the sum of Rs. 2,000 which is the sum of the decree; but as he has not made that temporary alienation he must go to prison. Would that be fair? When the court can itself effect the temporary alienation it would be a wicked piece of unfairness. That is all the amendments stand for (hear, hear).

Mr. President : Question is—

That for the second proviso to the new clause 35, the following two provisos be substituted :—

“ Provided further that when a court has power under the law to order a temporary alienation of the land of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree, the court shall not for the purpose of this section take into account the value of any such temporary alienation in considering the capacity of the judgment-debtor to pay :

“ Provided, further, that save in so far as is otherwise provided in this section the court in considering the capacity of the judgment-debtor to pay shall take into consideration the value of the property of the judgment debtor only to the extent to which a civil court can dispose of it under the law in execution of a decree.”

The motion was carried.

Kanwar Mamraj Singh Chohan (Ambala-cum-Simla, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, I beg to move—

That the following proviso be added at the end of new clause 35 :—

“ Provided further that nothing in this section shall apply to a decree for the payment of money which the judgment-debtor was bound to pay as arrears of land revenue or as arrears of money recoverable as arrears of land revenue and which the decree-holder or his representative in interest had paid as a lambardar.”

In moving this amendment I wish to draw the attention of the House and the Government to that law under which the lambardars are made to pay arrears of land revenue not only that is due from themselves, but that is due from other zamindars under their jurisdiction. If you look at the annual report on land revenue administration in the Punjab that is prepared by the Government you will find in it the amount of land revenue, paid by the lambardars on behalf of others and also the amount that had to be realised by warrants, etc. That report is before me and I find that in 1929 the lambardars in this province had to pay Rs. 17,82,768, in 1930 they had to pay Rs. 26,91,491, in 1931 they had to pay Rs. 32,55,244 and in 1932 they had to pay Rs. 39,38,862 as arrears of land revenue on behalf of others. These amounts, I need hardly say, were primarily due not from the lambardars themselves but from others; but they had to pay these amounts from their own pockets from fear of the tahsildars and their subordinate officials, from fear of the law on the subject and on account of the unkindness and lack of sympathy on the part of the Government for these poor lambardars. It is to save these poor lambardars, who are the loyal servants of the Crown, from disgrace and from incurring debts for paying for others that I appeal to the House and the Government that they should be exempted from this very severe provision of the proposed legislation. To say the least it will not be fair to create the same difficulties in the execution of decrees for such amounts as were paid, not of their own accord but under compulsion, by the lambardars as arrears of land revenue for others and for those against whom such decrees may be given by the courts. To set at rest the fears of some of the honourable members I may say that this amendment, if passed, will not apply to those big lambardars who are few in number and who own large tracts of land and who are themselves responsible for paying as well as for the collection of land revenue in regard to the estates owned by them. It will apply only to lambardars whose number is very large and who are as poor as their brethren for whom they are made to pay. As every honourable member of the House will be aware these poor lambardars have to incur debts for making these payments and it is only fair that every facility should be afforded to them to get back that money that they had paid for others and for which they had to become debtors. It will be injustice pure and simple to treat them like ordinary sahukars as it is proposed to be done. If there is any sympathy left in the minds of the members and of the Government for these poor lambardars, I am sure that my appeal will create the desired effect and this amendment which I have proposed will be readily accepted.

Mr. President: Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in new clause 35 the following proviso be added at the end :—

“ Provided further that nothing in this section shall apply to a decree for the payment of money which the judgment-debtor was bound to pay as arrears of land revenue or as arrears of money recoverable as arrears of land revenue and which the decree-holder or his representative in interest had paid as a lambardar.”

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member): I would like to say just a word on this amendment. Government is by no means unsympathetic with the lambardars especially in their difficulties in recovering land revenue. I should like to make that clear. At the same time no exceptions whatever have been proposed in this clause which relates to the abolition of imprisonment for debt except in the case of a contumacious refusal to pay. Accordingly it would be a very grave mistake to encumber the clause with exceptions and if we begin with one exception Heaven knows where we will end. Already there are more than half-a-dozen means of recovering land revenue from a defaulter. All these means can be used one after the other by the lambardar. While, therefore, I have every sympathy with him it would be a great mistake to knock about this clause by introducing exceptions.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in new clause 35, the following proviso be added at the end :—

“ Provided further that nothing in this section shall apply to a decree for the payment of money which the judgment-debtor was bound to pay as arrears of land revenue or as arrears of money recoverable as arrears of land revenue and which the decree-holder or his representative in interest had paid as a lambardar.”

The Council divided : Ayes : 7 : Noes : 48.

AYES.

Bhagat Ram, Lala.
Chetan Anand, Lala.
Gopal Das, Rai Sahib Lala.

Lekhwati Jain, Shrimati.
Mamraj Singh Chohan, Kanwar.
Pandit, Mr. Nanak Chand.

Ramji Das, Lala.

NOES.

Abdul Ghani, Shaikh.
Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana, Khan
Bahadur Mian.
Akbar Ali, Pir.
Allah Dad Khan, Chaudhri.
Anderson, Mr. J. D.
Askwith, Mr. A. V.
Bahadur Khan, Sardar.
Boyd, The Honourable Mr. D. J.
Chhotu Ram, Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Dodd, Mr. R. J. S.,
Fazl Ali, Khan Bahadur Nawab Chaudhri.
Fazl Ilahi, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ferguson, Mr. J. A.
Firoz Khan Noon, The Honourable Malik, Sir.

Garbett, Mr. C. C.
Ghani, Mr. M. A.
Gokul Chand Narang, The Honourable Dr.
Habib Ullah, Khan Bahadur Sardar.
Haibat Khan Daba, Khan.
Hearn, Mr. J. W.
Janmeja Singh, Captain Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
Jaswant Singh, Guru.
Jogendra Singh, The Honourable Sardar Sir.
Labh Chand Mehra, Rai Sahib Lala.
Latifi, Mr. A.
Marsden, Mr. P.
Mubarak Ali Shah, Sayad.
Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan, Chaudhri.

Muhammad Amin Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.
 Muhammad Eusoof, Khwaja.
 Muhammad Hayat Qureshi, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
 Muhammad Sadiq, Shaikh.
 Muhammad Sarfraz Ali Khan, Raja.
 Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani, Khan Bahadur Mian.
 Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Captain Malik.
 Muzaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur Nawab.
 Noor Ahmad Khan, Khan Sahib Mian.

Nur Khan, Khan Sahib Risaldar Bahadur.
 Nurullah, Mian.
 Pearson, Mr. H. J.
 Puckle, Mr. F. H.
 Ram Sarup, Chaudhri.
 Roberts, Mr. W.
 Sanderson, Mr. R.
 Sheo Narain Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar.
 Sikander-Hyat Khan, The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir.
 Zafrulla Khan, Chaudhri.
 Zaman Medhi Khan, Khan Bahadur Malik.

Mr. President : The question is—

That new clause 35 as recommended by His Excellency the Governor and amended by this Council be substituted for the old clause 35.

The motion was carried.

Clause 37.

Mr. President : The sixth amendment recommended by His Excellency is—

That the following general provision be adopted as new clause at the end of the Bill :—

“ 37. Where in a suit for the recovery of a loan the court is satisfied that an entry relating to the loan has been made in any document showing the amount of the sum advanced to be in excess of that actually advanced plus legitimate expenses incurred the court may, at its discretion, disallow the whole or any part of the sum claimed by the plaintiff.”

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in new clause 37—

- (i) after the word ‘incurred,’ in the penultimate line, the words ‘and interest in advance for one year at the rate agreed upon’ be added.
- (ii) after the word ‘court’ in the penultimate line, for the words which follow, the following words be substituted :—
 ‘shall disallow excess claimed by the plaintiff over interest in advance and legitimate expenses.’

The point that I wish to put before the House is this that if legitimate expenses are allowable and if excess on account of expenses is not excess which can be objected to, I do not see why interest in advance on the rates stipulated should be disallowed. The general practice is that money-lenders take a year's interest in advance. They do not take it in cash, but they make an entry so as to cover a year's interest in advance and put to the account the sum minus so much interest. This is an excess which cannot be objected to and which should not be objected to. It is in accordance with the general practice in money-lending. Then I say that where the excess is something more than the interest which has been agreed upon for a year and something more than the legitimate expenses, the whole of that excess should be disallowed. It should not be left merely to the discretion of the court to disallow the excess, but it should be obligatory on the court to disallow the excess. I do not think that it would be right to give discretion to the court. With regard to the dismissal of the whole claim a man should be punished to the extent to which he is guilty and not for anything beyond. This is a very simple amendment and reasonable and I hope that the Government benches will accept it.

5 P.M.

[D. B. Raja Narendra Nath.]

Mr. President : The question is—

That in new clause 37—

- (i) after the word 'incurred,' in the penultimate line, the words 'and interest in advance for one year at the rate agreed upon' be added.
- (ii) after the word 'court' in the penultimate line, for the words which follow, the following words be substituted :—
'shall disallow excess claimed by the plaintiff over interest in advance and legitimate expenses.'

The motion was lost.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : Sir, I beg to move—

That in new clause 37, for the words at the end, 'the whole or any part of the sum claimed by the plaintiff,' the following words be substituted :—

'an amount not exceeding fifty per cent. of the amount entered in the entry in excess of the advance.'

The amendment of the Government confers a discretion upon the sub-judge to disallow the entire amount if he finds that the entry contains some amount which has not been advanced. My amendment proposes to limit the discretion of the judge to an amount not exceeding fifty per cent. of the amount entered in the entry in excess of the advance. I wish to draw the attention of the House to the proviso which was passed by this House, and in substitution of which His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to send this amendment. The proviso which was passed by this House was—

Provided that where the court is satisfied that any fictitious sum was added to the sum actually advanced in order to circumvent the provisions of this Act the entire sum shall be disallowed.

This proviso occurred in that part of the Bill which dealt with the rule of damdupat. The rule of damdupat lays down that no creditor shall be entitled to recover a sum by suit which would be in excess of double the principal. It was stated that in order to circumvent that rule people might put down in the principal amount some amount which was not really advanced and if the court found that the provisions of the Act were circumvented by such a collusive entry the creditor should be penalised. The amendment of His Excellency the Governor which is entirely a new clause extends beyond measure the scope of the original proposal. The amendment of His Excellency the Governor which is a new clause extends to all inclusions of fictitious items whether they were done with a view to circumvent the provisions of this Act or whether they were done inadvertently or for any other reason.

Shaikh Abdul Ghani : I rise to a point of order. As the amendment stands it is meaningless. Under the ordinary law if it is found that a certain sum was not advanced and is fictitious the court has discretion to disallow the whole amount and the amendment as it stands, restricts the discretion of the court in any case to allow 50 per cent. of the fictitious amount. That is what the acceptance of it comes to.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : That is not a point of order. The object of my proposal is that a sum which is not proved is to be disallowed in any case, and the court should have further the discretion to add to it a penalty not exceeding 50 per cent. of that amount. But I am digressing from the precise point which I was trying to place before the House. This House had legislated on certain particular subjects, for instance the reduction of rate of interest and prohibition of grant of a civil decree for an amount more than double the principal, and it was apprehended that the creditor and the debtor might collude to defeat some of the provisions by including fictitious items, and it was proposed as a penalty that the whole sum might be disallowed. His Excellency the Governor has instead of a compulsory disallowance of the whole amount substituted in its place a discretion to the court to allow the whole or part of it. The House will notice that the amendment of His Excellency the Governor is not confined to cases where a wrong sum has been included with a view to evade the provisions of this Act, but it applies to other cases where a wrong sum has been included for any other purpose. Those who have anything to do with the administration of justice in this country know very well that when a suit say for Rs. 20,000 is brought, the defendant generally denies that any consideration passed. Supposing at the end of the enquiry, court finds that Rs. 19,000, only passed and Rs. 1,000 did not pass and that Rs. 1,000 was wrongly included, I submit, there has been no attempt at collusion. What happens more often than not is that an item is not capable of being proved. Here is a person who lends Rs. 2,000, Rs. 1,000 on a previous bond, Rs. 50 for the purchase of cattle, Rs. 50 for redemption of an old debt and so on. Later on he is able to prove only two or three items and is not able to prove the rest.

Mr. President : There seems to be some force in the point raised by the Honourable Shaikh Abdul Ghani. The clause as proposed to be amended by the honourable member for Industries will read as follows :—

Where in a suit for the recovery of a loan the court is satisfied that an entry relating to the loan has been made in any document showing the amount of the sum advanced to be in excess of that actually advanced plus legitimate expenses incurred the court may, at its discretion, disallow—

then follows the amendment of the honourable member—

An amount not exceeding fifty per cent. of the amount entered in the entry in excess of the advance.

Suppose Rs. 100 are actually advanced. Further suppose that Rs. 200 are entered in the document, that is, Rs. 100 are entered in excess of the actual amount advanced. According to the amendment of the honourable member fifty per cent. of the excess of Rs. 100, that is, only Rs. 50 will be disallowed and the rest allowed. Is that so?

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : That is not the entire law of the land. It is clear that if an amount is not proved to have been advanced it cannot be decreed. That is not being laid down by this legislation. This legislation lays down only that the court will have discretion to disallow an amount not exceeding 50 per cent. of such fictitious entry.

[Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.]

Mr. President : My question is whether the amendment proposed by the honourable member, means that only fifty per cent. of the amount in excess shall be disallowed.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : What is to be disallowed under the general law shall be disallowed in any case. That of course does not depend upon this legislation.

Mr. President : If that is the meaning of the honourable member, I have no objection. He may proceed with his argument.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : This is further provision that in addition to the amount which is to be disallowed—

Mr. President : I hope the honourable member will not go astray. If what I understand, is the meaning of the honourable member's amendment, he can proceed with his argument in support of it.

Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan : The amendment of the honourable member will make the whole clause meaningless and so is out of order.

Mr. President : Now that the honourable member has explained his meaning the amendment is in order.

Khan Bahadur Mian Mushtaq Ahmad Gurmani : Is it the intention of the honourable member that matters or the language of the clause ?

Mr. President : Intention as expressed.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : It is hardly fair that in cases where a certain plaintiff has failed to prove a portion of the consideration—and this is what happens in most of the cases—the court should not only have discretion to disallow that portion but should have a further discretion to dismiss the entire suit. Is it wise that our courts should be given that amount of discretion ? Would it not lead the defendant to put forward false denials of receipt of consideration on the off-chance of the plaintiff not being able to prove a portion, and then he can ask the court to disallow the whole claim ? In view of the fact that the amendment recommended by His Excellency embraces contingencies and circumstances which were not within the purview of the original proviso which occurred only in the part relating to damdapat and which only applies to cases where a definite attempt had been made to evade the provisions of the Act, it is necessary that the penalty now proposed should be modified. If a plaintiff has not been able to prove an item of consideration, what more do you want from him than this that in addition to disallowing that item he should be penalised to the extent of fifty per cent. of that amount ?

Mr. President : The question is—

That in new clause 37, for the words at the end, " the whole or any part of the sum claimed by the plaintiff," the following words be substituted :—" any amount not exceeding fifty per cent. of the amount entered in the entry in excess of the advance."

The motion was lost.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri : I move—

That in the new clause 37 the following proviso be added :—

“ Provided that this section shall not apply to loans secured by documents registered under the provisions of the Indian Registration Act.”

I can understand the impatience of some members with the amendments moved from these benches. I have tried in my own humble way to give thought to the matter and although I know the fate of any amendment that may be moved from these benches, yet I consider it my duty to place this amendment before the House. When the original proviso of Mian Nurullah was discussed in this House it was pointed out that it was unreasonable to penalise a creditor alone for what the debtor had principally done, because the bonds are executed by the debtors and if they contain something more than what actually passed, the debtor is principally responsible, unless of course the debtor is illiterate and the creditor writes the document. This legislation seems to be an attempt to penalise a party for what another party is responsible. I regard that certainty in the relations of debtors and creditors, or in the relations of most people is a thing to be devoutly wished for. People ought to know where they stand and they ought not to be left to the off-chance of going to one particular sub-judge or to another particular sub-judge. Therefore I say that when a loan transaction is embodied in a document which has been registered under the Indian Registration Act where the debtor has actually appeared before the sub-registrar and admitted receipt of the consideration, then in that case it should not be open to any court to disallow the entire sum which the creditor took precaution to get authenticated before a sub-registrar. This is the purport of my amendment and I think that in accepting it neither the Government nor the zamindar party will be giving up any matter of principle.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in the new clause 37 the following proviso be added :—

“ Provided that this section shall not apply to loans secured by documents registered under the provisions of the Indian Registration Act.”

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath : I stand up to support the amendment that has been just moved. In some of the opinions that have been received from officials on this Bill proposals were made for securing justice to the debtors. Among those proposals I read one which said that registration should be enforced even with regard to small loans. The registration will obviate the chances of fraud and make such fictitious entries as are now made impossible. I think that the amendment proposed by my friend on my right will meet that object and should, therefore, be accepted. With these few words I support the amendment.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, I think I must oppose this amendment because the question is one purely of evidence. In the case of registered deeds undoubtedly the evidence is very much stronger in favour of what is declared in that deed than it is in the case of an unregistered deed. It is a simple question of the degree of evidence. In the case of a claim based upon a registered deed, if the court is satisfied that forged entry has been made, I cannot see what difference there is between a registered and unregistered deed. The whole question is whether the court is satisfied.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in the new clause 37, the following proviso be added :—

“ Provided that this section shall not apply to loans secured by documents registered under the provisions of the Indian Registration Act.”

The motion was lost.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (Punjab Industries) : I beg to move—

That in the new clause 37, the following proviso be added :—

“ Provided that this section will only apply to a loan advanced to a debtor as defined in the Act, who is illiterate.”

This will meet the objection raised on the other side and for the reasons already advanced in support of other amendments, I place this amendment for the consideration of the House.

Mr. President : Clause under consideration, amendment moved—

That in new clause 37, the following proviso be added :—

“ Provided that this section will only apply to a loan advanced to a debtor as defined in the Act, who is illiterate.”

Lala Bhagat Ram (Jullundur-cum-Ludhiana, non-Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu) : Sir, I have stood up only to say that such a provision as is embodied in the clause, which Mr. Puri seeks to amend, is necessary only for those debtors who are illiterate. The literate debtors can look after their own interests. The Government need not worry about them. I think the House should have no hesitation in accepting the amendment moved by my honourable friend, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit (Hoshiarpur, non-Muhammadan, Rural) : The honourable member's amendment now before the House is most reasonable and should be accepted by the House. I remember speeches were delivered on this side supporting the original amendment to the Bill. There are as a matter of fact, a very large number of people who are illiterate amongst the debtors and they do not understand the nature of the transaction and therefore they are sometimes befooled, sometimes misguided, and sometimes on account of undue pressure being brought on them they are unable to satisfy the money-lenders. Now the amendment proposed is a reasonable one. People who are educated may not fall into the hands of the money-lenders. Suppose two people absolutely on the same footing, a money-lender on the one side and a debtor on the other, both educated, enter into a transaction with their eyes open. If they are guilty, both are guilty. But while the law punishes the creditor, the law has no punishment for the debtor. On the one hand the creditor lends the money and at the same time he is penalised mainly for the fault of the debtor who executes the deed. I cannot possibly understand this. Of course that is now passed. The solemn transactions made before the registrar are not to have the sanctity which should attach to them. But in the case of a literate, educated man when he goes and gets a document executed before the registrar, I do not see why there should be any kind of protection for him or the penalising of the debtor in that respect. You will understand, I am now talking of the present motion, that when money is paid by a creditor before the sub-registrar by means of a deed, the deed forms the evidence. On the other side the debtor is an educated person. The money is paid before the sub-registrar which means that the money would be returned afterwards and the creditor is liable to be penalised if it is not returned. Otherwise it is the duty of the sub-registrar to count the money and to see that the full consideration is paid, and the courts can only hold that there has been excess if it is proved that the money was returned. Now in the case of an illiterate debtor if the money is returned by him, is the creditor going to be penalised? You say that the courts are not going to be so foolish. But you know the mentality of the courts at present. Courts presided over by Judges belonging to agricultural tribes do not mete even-handed justice.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd: I must protest against it. I do not think the honourable member can cast any aspersions on the courts.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit: I am only talking of the communal bias that is to happen in the future. I am not talking of the past.

Mr. President: The honourable member will please withdraw those words.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit: Very well, I withdraw. With regard to the future one is liable to say that such a thing might happen under the communal pressure, and this has been stated in the various memoranda presented to the Joint Parliamentary Committee. Under the communal pressure and under political pressure justice might sometimes go astray, and therefore I say that in the case of an illiterate debtor there is absolutely no justification that a penalty should be provided for. The House should carefully weigh the amendment moved by my friend, and to which no satisfactory reply has been given by anybody. We are certainly entitled to know the reasons why the Government in the case of literate debtors is not going to accept a very reasonable amendment proposed by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, and especially, as I said, where the documents are registered and the money is paid before the sub-registrar. Here in the case of a document which has been registered and where the money has been paid before the sub-registrar and a literate debtor afterwards goes and returns, why should there be any penalty for the creditor alone? I would therefore very respectfully submit to the Government that so far as literate debtors are concerned, an exception should be made in their case.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan (Jullundur, Muhammadan, Rural) (Urdu): Sir, every measure is supported by some people and opposed by others, but it has been the misfortune of this Bill that it has met with uniform opposition from those benches throughout the time it has been on the anvil of this Council. I, for one, have not been able to understand why my bania friends have been so averse to the passage of this Bill. Perhaps it is their old habit that they try to hurt those who do good to them. The zamindars have been their helpers and supporters in all times of need, and now they are giving proof of their evil nature by opposing this measure which is intended to relieve zamindars from distress. I think whosoever does good to these people commits a grave blunder. The Government was the first to commit this mistake. It gave these people important offices in all important departments, and now they are striving hard to undermine the foundations of the Government itself.

Mr. President: The whole Bill is not under consideration. Only the amendment of Mr. Puri is before the House.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan: I am coming to that. It is now asked that the application of the clause should be confined to the illiterate people only. But my submission is that the crafty sabukar is even more wily than most of the highly educated people. Have you not heard the proverb so well known in rural ilaqa?

[Ch. Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan.]

آٹھ آٹھ—آٹھ تھتھیار—آٹھ کٹھیارے تے آٹھ سنیار
آٹھ چوکا بندری تے بنیا اک مازا جیہا شاہوکار کہتری

(Laughter).

Every law, I beg to point out, should be made of general application since it is conceived in the interest of all alike.

Mr. President : Gentlemen, I invite your attention to the fact that the honourable member is talking irrelevance.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : Khattris are the most crafty amongst all sections of people. We cannot trust them, hence the necessity of the provision which Mr. Puri seeks to amend.

Mr. Nanak Chand Pandit : On a point of order, Sir. The honourable member should not abuse Khattris, Jats and others in this way, but talk to the amendment. He is not talking to the amendment. He has not understood its meaning even.

Chaudhri Muhammad Abdul Rahman Khan : I want that the provision should remain as it is, and it should apply to the illiterate and literate alike.

Mr. President : The question is—

That in new clause 37 the following proviso be added:—

“ Provided that this section will only apply to a loan advanced to a debtor as defined in the Act, who is illiterate.”

The motion was lost.

Mr. President : The question is—

That the following general provision be adopted as a new clause at the end of the Bill:—

“ 37. Where in a suit for the recovery of loan the court is satisfied that an entry relating to the loan has been made in any document showing the amount of the sum advanced to be in excess of that actually advanced plus legitimate expenses incurred, the court may, at its discretion, disallow the whole or any part of the sum claimed by the plaintiff.”

The motion was carried.

GOVERNMENT'S DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, I have to announce that the demands which I move are recommended by His Excellency the Governor.

GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (RESERVED).

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to move—

That a token sum not exceeding Rs. 10 be granted to the Governor in Council to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of General Administration (Reserved).

The motion was carried.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC WORKING EXPENSES.

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (Finance Member) : Sir I beg to move—

That a token sum not exceeding Rs. 10 be granted to the Punjab Government (Ministry of Local Self-Government) to defray the charges that will come in course of payment for the year ending the 31st of March 1935 in respect of Hydro-Electric Working Expenses.

The motion was carried.

FAREWELL BY THE HONOURABLE CAPTAIN SIRDAR SIR
SIKANDER HYAT-KHAN.

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan (Revenue Member) : Sir, as I would probably be leaving the province to take over the duties of my new appointment before the Council meets for the Budget Session, this is perhaps the last meeting of this Council which I shall have the privilege of attending. I, therefore, with your permission, Sir, wish to take this opportunity of expressing my sincere thanks and gratitude to everyone of my colleagues in this House for their uniform courtesy and kindness and for the support which they have always extended to me. I am particularly indebted to the Leader of the Unionist Party and other members of that party for giving me their support even though I have been working on the Reserved side of the Government. In this, Sir, I am no less indebted to my friends on my right as also the Sikh Party for the consideration and courtesy which I have invariably received from them and for their support ungrudgingly given, whenever I have been in need of it. I am in particular deeply indebted to my revered friend the Raja Sahib for whom I have always had great respect and regard (hear, hear). His culture and frankness naturally attracts every one to him, but to me he has been more than a friend, he has been like a father. He was a great friend of my late father, and for that reason alone I have always held him in great esteem and respect. His unstinted support and invaluable assistance to me during the five years I have been in charge of my portfolio have naturally enhanced my regard for him. For the sympathy and support which he and his party have always extended to me I thank them most sincerely. I must not forget my official colleagues on these benches. The little that I have been able to do while I have been in office, is mainly due to the kindness and courtesy and the loyal support and advice I have received from them. It is due to the sympathetic guidance and co-operation of my official colleagues that I, a layman, have been able to discharge the onerous duties of my office. Nor can I forget the courtesy and kindness of my colleagues of the cabinet. We have throughout our association been like a happy family, and it is with the greatest regret that I would part with such kind friends. And last but not the least I have to thank you, Sir, and to express my gratitude for the uniform courtesy and kindness you have shown to me and for the guidance and inspiration you have given me in the discharge of my duties as the Leader of the House. Sir, throughout my connection with this Council, which has been a long one, first as a non-official and later as a member of the Government and for the last five years as the Leader of this Honourable House, I have received nothing but kindness and courtesy from all sides. It is therefore with the deepest regret and with a very heavy heart that I take leave of you. My leaving this province, which I love, will be a big wrench, and I need hardly assure you that it is with the greatest reluctance that I accepted my appointment as Deputy Governor of the Reserve Bank. I have accepted it in the hope that I may be able to come back some day to the service of my province again (hear, hear), when perhaps you may have started on the new venture. But let me assure you that wherever I happen to be, Punjab will always be uppermost in my thoughts. I shall carry with me very happy memories of my associations with you all, including my friend Sardar Abnasha Singh, the Secretary of this Council, and Hakim Ahmed Shujaa. I would be guilty of ingratitude if I did not thank them for their help and assistance, particularly in the matter of procedure, whenever we have been in need of assistance, and I and my colleagues have invariably received nothing but courtesy and useful advice. Wherever and in whatever capacity I happen to be I shall always remember our happy association, and I shall carry with me feelings of deep and abiding debt of gratitude to all my colleagues in this House and outside, and my good wishes and prayers for the success and prosperity, under the new dispensation, of this great province of ours, will always be with you and those who may later be associated with you in the great task which lies before us. (Prolonged cheers).

[The Hon'ble Captain Sardar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan.]

Diwan Bahadur Raja Narendra Nath (Punjab Landholders, General) : In accordance with the practice of the House the Honourable the Leader of the House should have asked the permission of the House to leave us (laughter). He has not done so. However, I can look upon this farewell speech as an application for leave, and he should avail of it with the reservation which I put on it. Only the other day an eminent official of the Government of India referred to the variety of experience of Sir Sikander. He has served in the Army, he has been a very able and successful administrator in the Revenue Department, and he has acted with credit to himself and to all of us twice as Governor of the province. He probably wanted to add another item to that variety of experience, and he has agreed to go to the Government of India as a Deputy Governor of the Reserve Bank. Well, I am sure that that experience, that financial experience would not only be of considerable use to him, but that he would be able to place that experience at our disposal, and that we will be able to utilize it. I, therefore, put the qualification that he may be allowed to go only for a couple of years and no more. (Hear, hear). He should come back to us with the new constitution. For certain a man of his breadth of view and his wide experience will be needed to be at the helm of affairs when the new constitution is worked. (Hear, hear). If you will permit me I will make a personal reference also. As long as he has been in office and as long as he has kept the high office of Revenue Member, I have felt as if I was myself in office. I have freely resorted to him on all matters on which I have felt any doubt, and I am glad to say that he has always received me and received my representations with the greatest courtesy and consideration. At times I have differed, but there are occasions when a man differs even from himself. According to modern psychology we have two departments of consciousness, conscious self and the sub-conscious self and there may be a divergence of views between the sub-conscious self and conscious self. So my differences with him may be viewed in that light. I have already referred to our associations, and it has been the greatest pleasure to me that the son of my late friend and whom I myself regarded as one of the younger brothers of my father has distinguished himself so well. In fact, it gives me special pleasure that all the members of his family have justified the great name which belongs to the family. I am not a man of many words but I certainly conclude my short speech by another appeal to him that he should come back to us and give us the benefit of financial experience which he will derive in his new appointment. I am sure that the destinies of the province would be safe in his hands when the province has to be worked on autonomous lines (hear, hear). I wish him success in his new career, and I hope that he will achieve it, but it must be qualified with the reservation to which I have already referred (hear, hear).

✓ Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Chhotu Ram (South-East, Rohtak, non-Muhammadan, Rural): Sir, I always find it very difficult to praise anybody to his face, and I find it still more difficult to praise a friend to his face. But there is a certain amount of latitude here in this respect, and I, therefore, in a few brief words would pay my humble tribute to the rich qualities of head and heart which our friend the Honourable Leader of the House possesses. I do not know much about the time that he spent in school and college, but I have known him for the last 12 or 13 years. I first came to know him as a private member of this House. As such he discharged his duties efficiently and conscientiously. While he was still a private member he served with distinction on the Police Enquiry Committee. Then again when the Simon Commission came out to this country, he was elected by this House to the Provincial Franchise Committee as a member. He was later elected by all of us unanimously as chairman of that committee. On that committee also he discharged his duties with great skill and great ability. After a couple of years he was called upon first temporarily and then permanently to fill his present office where he discharged his duties with the same consummate skill which he had shown in other capacities. He has been a very successful Leader of the House for five years. We all know what he has done for the province as Revenue Member. The time during which he held the reins of office in this capacity has been very difficult indeed. We have had failures of rains, we have had failures of water-supply in canals, and we have had droughts and floods, locusts and frosts. All these things have combined to do a great deal of harm to the peasantry of the province and to the revenues of the province as well. While the revenues of the province were on the downward path it fell to the Honourable Sir Sikander Hyat to look after the earning departments of the province. He gave remissions more freely than we had ever received before. But in spite of those remissions he kept the revenue resources of the province in a sound condition and worked in combination with the Finance Department and the Honourable the Finance Member with very excellent results. That is a record of which anybody might feel proud. For his manners, his gentlemanliness, his qualities of head and heart, his culture, refinement and very broad sympathies for which Raja Sahib has paid him a well deserved tribute, we all honour him and hold him in the highest possible esteem. And it is really a great regret to all of us that he should be absent from the province even for a temporary period.

6 P. M.

[R. B. Ch. Chhotu Ram.]

However, the thought that he is going out as Deputy Governor and will learn there all that is necessary for understanding the secrets of finance is a great consolation to us because when he returns after a couple of years to his own province he will return better qualified for the department of finance than there is anybody at present in view. As we have been assured by himself that he will return to the province—and will return better fitted for the duties which he may again be called upon to undertake—we may now reluctantly bid him farewell in the hope that he will soon come back to us. (Applause).

Sardar Bahadur Sardar Buta Singh (Multan Division and Sheikhpura, Sikh, Rural) : I too wholeheartedly associate myself with the remarks made by the previous speakers. The other day we were discussing the Joint Parliamentary Committee's report and much was said against certain safeguards. But I can assure honourable members here that if a person like Sir Sikander Hyat, our Leader of the House, were at the helm of affairs no safeguards would be required. I can remember many an occasion when any chance occurred to him he was always ready to give very sound advice. With a heart full of sympathy he was prepared to listen and try to remedy the grievances represented to him. I think, Sir, you have not so far adjourned the House, and I want to move an amendment to the proposal of the honourable Raja Sahib if the rules of this Council allow it. Raja Sahib has made a proposal that Sir Sikander Hyat should return to us after two years. I wish to make it one year. I think I am speaking on behalf of all honourable members when I say that during the inauguration of the new reforms such a person should be here to guide us and to take us to the destinies which are in store for our province. I do not think any long speech is required. Our heart wherever he goes will be with him and our prayers will follow him everywhere. I wish him success on behalf of the Sikh members of this Council. (Cheers).

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh (Minister for Agriculture) : I have known Sir Sikander Hyat as a private member, as a Revenue Member and a colleague and then as our chief. Whatever position he has held he has inspired confidence and brought a spirit of harmony with him. Our relations in the cabinet have been most harmonious, and we know more than the outside world knows how he has worked for the province and for the agricultural classes. His interest in the welfare of agricultural classes is shown in the measures he has taken both in the matter of water rates and remissions of land revenue. It is not only that. The credit must remain with him in starting a new land revenue policy which has been now initiated and to which the Governor of the province gave expression in a speech that he made at Lyallpur. Sir Sikander Hyat has not been mere official, but he has been the ambassador of Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs in the Government. He has been free from that communal colour which overshadows political thought in the Punjab. His one endeavour has been to unite all communities and work together, and not only to work together but to provide foundations through joint electorates from which unity may flow. In losing him we are losing more than we know, even though we lose him for a short period; we are losing the one great centre of unity. He is the one man at present in the Punjab who carries confidence of all communities, and I have no doubt that when the new constitution comes, he could have organised united party which would render safeguards inoperative.

I have reconciled myself to his going on one consideration only, and that is that the Reserve Bank is now going to deal with the whole credit system of India and that credit system is going to affect even agricultural prices and agricultural credit. In Sir Sikander Hyat we will have an advocate who will see that the agricultural credit and agricultural prices under the new dispensation receive their due consideration. I need only say that all his colleagues join me and wish him every success in his new appointment and we hope that when he returns to the Punjab he will come rich in knowledge, rich in endeavour and, what is more, ready to consecrate all his experience and knowledge in the service of his motherland. (Applause).

Mr. C. C. Garbett (Chief Secretary) : The Honourable Finance Member has delegated to me the proud duty of adding on behalf of my colleagues, the official members of this House, our tribute of appreciation and our meed of praise of Sir Sikander. Like the Raja Sahib I can claim that I and my family have very long associations with him and his. For I find that in the year 1874 my father and his were brother members in the same Masonic Lodge of Lahore. And it is now some ten years since, I rather tremble to think, I was in a position of authority over him as a district magistrate when he was one of my brilliant honorary magistrates. But I look back especially to that part of his career when I had the honour of being Chief Secretary to him, our first Indian acting Governor and that on two occasions. Few of you in this House probably realise how extremely difficult those times were. I think that having regard to the considerable period that has since elapsed, I can safely divulge the secret that within a few days of his ascending the gaddi, the then deputy commissioner of Amritsar and the then deputy commissioner of Lahore, each reported officially to Government that they felt the chances were, there would be very, very serious riots in each of those big centres. So much so that those in authority above us were seriously perturbed. The oil which Sir Sikander spread upon those troubled waters resulted immediately in the calm and peace which you experienced. The work, the knowledge, the understanding that was behind it those of us who were closest to him best appreciated. (Cheers). I need only say I used to wonder whether really some special grace was given to these Governors. You must admit that the standard, the touchstone by which Sir Sikander was proved, was that of Governor of a very, very high calibre. I have worked with Sir Geoffrey, and I have worked with Sir Herbert, and I have also worked with Sir Sikander. And yet I found in him exactly the same marvellous faculty that the other Governors had of putting a situation that appeared to be wrong right with what seemed the slightest touch. Drafts that were awry, counsels that were misdirected, he with the extreme wisdom that was at his command would set right with a few words here and a few words there, giving just that confidence to his staff that made it worth while working day and night, if necessary, and it was necessary sometimes in those very very difficult days. It was a proud experience for all of us to work with our first Indian Governor and a Governor of that calibre. (Cheers). He is going and all of you have made references to his going. There is no question, I think, to any of us who have had much experience of life that the acquiring of new experiences is always wise. And he will come back to us not necessarily in a year, not necessarily in two years, but definitely in the fulness of time. The Raja Sahib also said something about psychology. Modern psychology teaches us that words are not a mere sending forth of vibrations in the atmosphere, but that thoughts and feelings have a penetration which in the old days was seldom understood. There is something almost tangible in real sympathy and real understanding of real friends. So Sir Sikander may know that in addition to all the friendship of all his friends of this country and all his political associates on the benches in front and on my side to the right, he carries with him the sincere sympathy, good wishes and so far as there can be the willing support and thought of all of us, a support which we hope will be for him an additional strength should he so require it. (Applause).

[Mr. C. C. Garbett.]

Mr. E. Mayadas (Non-official, nominated): On behalf of the community I have the honour to represent I associate myself heartily with what has been said. Sir Sikander rose to the Revenue Membership and he rose to be Governor, but inspite of rising so high he remained a humble man, and I always felt that he was like a brother that could be trusted.

Khan Bahadur Mian Ahmad Yar Khan Daulatana (Muhammadan Landholders): With the permission of the Leader of our party I just want to express our party's and my constituency's feelings on this occasion in a verse which just comes to my mind. Addressing Sir Sikander we say—

عزم سفرے کردی و رفتی زہو ما بسنی کمر خوتر و شکر کمر مائی

"You have decided to take journey and go from our midst. You have put on your armour and broken our backs."

Mr. President: Gentlemen, all of you have praised Sir Sikander Hyat Khan's work, courtesy and treatment so highly, that nothing more remains to be said. I will, therefore, say only a few words on my own behalf. You will all agree that Sir Sikander's departure is a great loss to us. He is one of the best men of the Punjab, and we shall miss him very much. Both as an administrator and as a politician as well as a friend he has won the praise and good opinion of all those who have come in contact with him. My own relations with him have been most close and cordial, ever since we have formed each other's acquaintance. I shall miss him both as the Revenue Member and as a friend, and hope that he will not forget me and his other friends. We all agree that by his ability, tact and skill he has won the heart of everyone with whom he has had anything to do. As Revenue Member and Leader of the House and before that as an ordinary member of the Council, he won the praise and good opinion of every one who knew him. After the great man of the Punjab—I mean Sir Fazl-i-Husain, who used to sit with us in this very chamber,—we had in Sir Sikander the best substitute for the great man. Therefore, we are extremely sorry that we are going to miss him. However, I firmly hope that we will get a worthy successor of his. He will take our good wishes with him, while our prayers for his success in the new sphere of life will follow him.

The Council then adjourned sine die.

APPENDIX A.
(Vide page 610 ante).

I.

Statement showing the action taken by Government on resolutions passed by the Punjab Legislative Council since November 1933.

Serial No.	Terms of resolutions passed.	Volume No. and page of Legislative Council Debates.	Action taken.
1	This Council recommends to the Government that the present system of placing on contract the printing of the publications of the Punjab Text Book Committee be discontinued by the end of next financial year.	Volume XXIV, pages 1158—82.	A Committee was appointed to examine the existing system of prescribing and providing books for use in schools and to suggest remedies for the defects disclosed. It has almost concluded its discussions, and will meet again for its final meetings on the 19th and 20th October 1934 when it hopes to sign its report and submit it to Government.
2	This Council recommends to the Government to convey to His Majesty's Government the strong feelings of this House that the passage of the new Government of India Act should be expedited so as to enable elections under the new constitution to be held not later than the end of 1935.	Volume XXIV, page 1182.	The resolution was forwarded to the Government of India for transmission to the Secretary of State.

II.

Statement showing the action taken by Government on cuts made by the Legislative Council in original and supplementary demands presented to the Council since November, 1933.

Serial No.	(i) Major head. (ii) Minor head. (iii) Sub-head.	Reasons for reduction.	Amount of reduction.	Volume, No. and page of the Punjab Legislative Council Debates.	Action taken by Government.
1	5-Land Revenue	To urge the necessity of changing the malikana rates now in vogue in the province.	Rs. 100	Volume XXIV, pages 515-22 and 546-50.	Government intend to issue a resolution explaining the whole subject regarding the assessment of malikana in canal colonies. It is pending decision on the rate of malikana to be charged from the non-official reward grantees and landed gentry grantees in L. C. extensions and Benala life area of L. B. D. Q. for the Babi and Kharif harvests 1933.
2	Ditto	To urge the reduction of 25 per cent. of the Land Revenue.	1	Volume XXIV, pages 551-63.	Government were unable to agree to the necessity of a general reduction of 25 per cent. in the land revenue demand. They have, however, followed the policy of giving special remissions on account of low prices.
3	22-General Administration (Reserved).	To draw attention to the inadequacy of the travelling allowance of the members of Punjab Legislative Council.	1	Volume XXIV, pages 808-20.	The rate of daily allowance in the plains administration to members of the Punjab Legislative Council has been increased from Rs. 10 to Rs. 12.
4	Charges on Irrigation Establishment (Reserved)—Open Canals.	To bring to the notice of the Government that a large area of land has become waterlogged and Kalar and urge that steps be taken to remedy this.	1	Volume XXIV, pages 771-78.	A comprehensive drainage scheme covering the waterlogged area is at present being worked out in the Irrigation Department; the estimated cost of which is in the neighbourhood of Rs. 38 lakhs. The construction of the drains provided in the scheme will have to be spread over several years, for reasons mainly financial. Priority will, however, be given to those drains which serve the most affected areas. In two cases at least, viz., near Sargodha in the Shalpur district and South of Chuharkana in the Sheikhupura district it is hoped to commence work in the winter of 1934-35. Work is already in progress on an important drain in the Gujrat district and in the Gujranwala district near Akalgarh.

PUNJAB LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

APPENDIX B.

Final answers to questions for which ad-interim replies are printed in Volume XXV of Council Debates.

ANSWERS TO STARRED QUESTIONS.

NAL-CHAH IN SONEPAT AND JHAJJAR TAHSILS.

(Answer to Question No. 3278, page 31 ante.)

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : The attached statement furnishes the information required :—

Statement showing information regarding Nal-Chah in Sonapat and Jhajjar tahsils.

Name of Tahsil.	Number of irrigation wells which have ceased to be used as such or have become un-serviceable for the purpose of irrigation since 1924 or 1925.	Number of wells on which the amount of Nal-Chah has not been remitted.	Total amount of Nal-Chah realised in respect of these wells during the period of desuetude.	REMARKS.
1	2	3	4	5
Sonapat ..	187	23	Rs. 2,110
Jhajjar ..	101	19	1,624
Total ..	288	42	3,734

1. The 23 wells noted against Sonapat tahsil are in good condition and fit for use.
2. Out of the 18 wells in Jhajjar tahsil 17 are in good order and fit for use. Action for remitting the abiana on the remaining two is being taken.

WATER CHANNELS FOR IRRIGATION.

(Answer to parts (b), (c) and (d) of Question No. 3354, page 120 ante.)

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (b), (c), and (d). Government have decided not to take any action in the matter for reasons already given on the 27th June, 1934, in the answer to part (g) of Council question No. 3353¹ put by the honourable member.

SELECTION OF SUB-JUDGES.

(Answer to Question No. 3374, page 132 ante.)

Mr. C. C. Garbett (Chief Secretary) : The attached statement furnishes the details asked for :—

¹Pages 119-20 ante.

Statement.

Serial No.	Name.	Caste.	District of origin.	The position obtained on the list of successful candidates.	Division in which the L.L.B. examination was passed.	Whether related to a judicial officer and if so, the exact description of relationship.	Whether member of ministerial establishment.	REMARKS.
1	Madan Mohan Singh	Ahluwalia	..	1st	1st	Nil	No.
2	Chetan Das	Jain Aggarwal	..	2nd	1st	Nil	No.
3	Basant Lal	Vaish Aggarwal	..	3rd	2nd	Nil	No.
4	Sewa Singh	Ahluwalia	..	4th	1st	Nil	No.
5	Aziz Ahmed	Rajput Jat (Waraich).	Shahpur	6th	2nd	Nil	No.
6	Harcharan Das	Khatri, Loombe	Ludhiana (born Saharanpur).	6th	1st	Nil	No.
7	Gyan Das	Jain	..	7th	1st	Nil	No.
8	Muhammed Iqbal Cheema.*	Cheema Jat	..	26th	1st	Son of Munsif and brother of Sub-Judge.	No.
9	Sultan Khan	Gugh	..	32nd	1st	Nil	No.
10	Muhammed Siddique	Araiz	Jullundur	35th	1st	Nil	No.
11	Amar Nath Bhanot	Indian-Christian	Amritsar	74th	1st	Nil	No.	*Chaudhri Muhammad Iqbal Cheema has not been passed fit by the Medical Board and will be examined again by the Board in October, 1934. He was not selected because of his relationship to a judicial officer but because of the position obtained in the qualifying examination.

HINDI AND SANSKRIT CLASSES IN GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOL, BHAKKAR.

(Answer to Question No. 9414, page 163 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) The number is shown in the statement attached.

(d) No.

(e) No.

(f) On 4th October, 1926. Only one Hindu teacher was replaced by a Muslim through a mutual exchange of appointments.

(g) Yes. He teaches Sanskrit to VII—X classes and Hindi in the High Department. He made no statement of any kind to the Headmaster or the Inspector.

(h) No.

The number of Sanskrit and Hindi students in each class on the 1st March during the last five years is given below :—

Year.	7th.	8th.	9th.	10th.	Total
SANSKRIT.
1929-30	15	13	6	7	41
1930-31	12	11	7	3	33
1931-32	21	11	4	4	40
1932-33	21	9	4	2	36
1933-34	19	14	3	2	38
HINDI.
1929-30	9	5	14
1930-31	14	5	19
1931-32	7	3	10
1932-33	3	2	5
1933-34	2	2	4

LICENSING OF PREMISES IN SIALKOT MUNICIPALITY.

(Answer to Question No. 9418, page 166 ante.)

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) It is understood that a number of applications of the kind in question have been received by the municipal committee.

(b) Not yet.

(c) The municipal committee of Sialkot has passed a resolution that other premises should be licensed as well as the shops in the municipal market. The issue of the licences will be made by the Executive Officer of the committee.

INSOLVENTS.

(Answer to part (a) of Question No. 3897, page 151 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) A statement is laid on the table :—

Statement.

District.	1921.	1922.	1923.	1924.	1925.	1926.	1927.	1928.	1929.	1930.	1931.	1932.	1933.
Hissar	6	7	8	13	42	12	60	35	48	36	75	42	36
Gurgaon	2	12	1	1.	2	5	9	14	7	6	16	8	4
Karnal	18	6	21	3	13	16	33	64	56	17	41	34	27
Rohatak	9	6	21	11	15	17	28	35	38	28	22	29	17
Ambala	24	16	13	28	23	67	38	22	43	62	60	92	88
Simla	..	3	..	6	7	7	13	8	14	16	19	37	28
Hoshiarpur	..	4	..	11	10	32	32	74	52	60	49	143	136
Kangra	5	4	1	..	4	6	6	3	10	4	39	58	59
Jullundur	3	19	17	22	34	42	27	31	42	42	75	72	117
Ludhiana	8	5	4	3	7	9	7	31	32	26	36	92	91
Ferozepore	33	48	40	44	70	109	121	156	82	65	129	85	165
Lehore	40	43	92	82	106	185	106	196	218	222	234	187	397
Amritsar	19	26	27	28	49	41	51	48	119	114	115	156	282
Gurdaspur	13	14	9	18	40	45	49	57	70	119	189	218	204
Sialkot	10	8	5	11	27	83	124	64	67	65	72	106	64
Gujranwala	7	9	24	13	24	25	34	48	61	83	136	184	155
Gujrat	20	38	42	83	35	68	44
Shahpur	5	12	14	27	20	22	26	42	63	113	159	93	118
Jhang (Civil)	7	12	18	26	33	46	43	56	32	53	80	130	82
Jhelum	2	7	10	15	28	13	11	60	29	41	41	57	27
Rawalpindi	4	3	10	13	22	29	35	54	39	39	58	31	36
Attock	1	2	..	10	12	14	20	8	13	41	46	48	26
Mianwali	3	3	6	13	14	20	26	23	53	24	42	77	52
Montgomery	7	23	27	18	18	6	95	112	70	68	61	64	44
Lyallpur	20	67	11	47	12	13	15	204	17	66	112	180	170
Sheikhpura	17	12	8	9	22	24	14	12	92	185
Multan	25	19	33	14	18	13	15	23	27	83	78	84	74
Muzaffargarh	19	5	3	4	15	8	10	41	102	29	36	32	36
Dera Ghazi Khan	1	..	5	..	3	2	20	9	1	2	7	4	2

APPENDIX.

DEPRESSED CLASSES MEMBERS IN MUNICIPAL AND DISTRICT BOARDS.

(Answer to Question No. 3423, page 167 ante.)

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : There are members belonging to the depressed classes on the following municipal committees and district boards (one member each) :—

1. The Municipal Committee, Jhajjar.
2. The Municipal Committee, Ambala.
3. The Municipal Committee, Sadhaura.
4. The District Board, Hoshiarpur.
5. The Municipal Committee, Kartarpur.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE FOR ATTENDING THE MEETING OF THE PUNJAB RECLAMATION LEAGUE.

(Answer to Question No. 3431, page 171 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) 1st part. Six Government officials from outstations and about 150 criminal tribesmen attended the meeting.

2nd Part. None. Their attendance was voluntary.

(b) and (c). The meeting of the League was arranged during the days when the Provincial Tournament, the Industrial Exhibition and the Annual Prize Distribution of the Department were to be held and Government officials were to be present in connection with these functions. They drew their travelling allowance from Government as usual. This charge was a legitimate one.

(d) The criminal tribesmen were not ordered to attend the meeting, but a notice of the meeting was circulated to those who were members of the League. A number of them who had come to attend the Tournament and to receive prizes took the opportunity of attending the meeting of the League also. In the circumstances, the question of compensation does not arise.

HINDU WATERMAN FOR THE GUJRAT COLLEGE.

(Answer to Question No. 3437, page 231 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) No. The College had four Hindu menials, of whom one, the junior-most chaukidar was removed from service when one of the posts of chaukidars was retrenched under Director of Public Instruction's orders. This man had to his credit a service of one month and twenty-one days as compared with the other two chaukidars, one of whom was an ex-serviceman with an approved service of six years and four months and the other with two years and seven months. The latter also has the additional qualification of having read upto the Matriculation standard.

(b) No. The Hindu staff and the non-Muslim students did not face any inconvenience since satisfactory arrangements for the supply of drinking water and other needs of the Hindu staff during college hours exist in the College, water for Hindus being supplied by a Hindu.

(c) Does not arise.

PATWARIS IN TAHSIL DASUHYA.

(Answer to Question No. 8444, page 234 ante.)

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a)—

Year.	DISMISSED.			REDUCED.			SUSPENDED.			FINED.			TOTAL.
	Muslims.	Hindus.	Sikhs.	Muslims.	Hindus.	Sikhs.	Muslims.	Hindus.	Sikhs.	Muslims.	Hindus.	Sikhs.	Muslims.	Hindus.	Sikhs.
1931	1	1	5	7
1932	7	3	1	7	3	1
1933	..	2	1	..	9	2	1	11	3	1
Total	..	2	..	1	1	1	..	21	5	2	28	6	2

MONOPOLY FOR PLYING LORRIES ON HIRE.

(Answer to Question No. 3449, page 236 ante.)

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan: (a) There is no district in which a monopoly has been given to a single company or firm for plying motor vehicles on hire throughout the district. On certain hill roads it has been found desirable in the interests of safety to restrict the number of licences issued. In the case of one hill road maintained by Government, that from Hoshiarpur to Bharwain, the licences are held by a single firm. On no other road maintained by Government in the Province does such a monopoly exist. In addition, vehicles plying on certain District Board roads have been restricted to those belonging to a single firm. A list of such cases is laid on the table.

(b) I am not clear if by "licence" the honourable member means "monopoly". If he will enlighten me on this point, I will have the information collected.

(c) The matter is at present under the consideration of Government and I regret that I am not in a position to make a final statement at the present moment.

List of firms having a monopoly for plying lorries on hire.

1	2
	DISTRICT BOARD ROADS IN THE DISTRICT AS WHICH MONOPOLY HAS BEEN GIVEN TO A SINGLE COMPANY OR FIRM AND THE PERIOD FOR WHICH THE MONOPOLY HAS BEEN GIVEN.
District.	Roads other than hill roads.
	Hill roads.
	Name of the road.
	Period of monopoly.
	Name of the road.
	Period of monopoly.
Hoshiarpur	1. Una-Guzernangal .. 2. Una-Gagret vic Iapur .. 3. Deulapuri-Jowar, via Gagret. 4. Garhahankar-Nurpur .. 1. G. T. Shala-Kahuta .. 2. Rawalpindi-Charah Leh-tran.
Rawalpindi	No period fixed. Monopoly is subject to satisfactory service. 1st April, 1934 to 31st March, 1935. 15th July, 1933 to 14th July, 1938.
Mianwali	1. Rewat-Takhpuri .. 2. Missa-Narali Kuntrila .. 3. Mandra-Chakwal .. 4. Lubani-Sagri .. 5. Rewat-Baseli .. 6. Mandra-Kallian .. 7. Gujarkhan Bewal-Kallian 8. Rewat-Banda-Adhwal-Chauntra. 9. Rawalpindi-Dhalla Chauntra. 1. Mianwali-Mari road .. 2. Kalabagh-Isakhel road .. 3. Massan-Chakrula .. 4. Chakrula-Dhak Pass ..
	1st April, 1934, to 31st March, 1935. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. 1st November, 1933 to 31st October, 1936. 1st April, 1934 to 31st March, 1935. Ditto 1st July, 1932 to 30th June, 1936. 8 years from the date of filing agreement. 1st March, 1934 to 28th February, 1937. 1st June, 1934 to 31st May, 1937.

Gujrat	..	Ni	..	1. Gujar-Bhimber .. 2. Gujar-Awan Sharif .. 3. Baha-ud-Din-Qadriabad .. 4. Baha-ud-Din-Lala Musa .. 5. Dinga-Kharan ..	3 years from April, 1932. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto.
Jhelum	..	Ni	1st April, 1934 to 31st March, 1936. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. 1st May, 1934 to 30th April, 1935.	1. Dina-Padhri .. 2. Taraki-Domeli .. 3. Jhelum-Jalapur and Pind Dedan Khan road .. 4. Dhudial-Mangwal .. 5. Chakwal-Mandri .. 6. Chakwal-Nila .. 7. Chakwal-Bhagwal-Rapwal .. 8. Bham Kallar-Kahar and Nurpur .. 9. Chakwal-Choa Saidan Shah .. 10. Pind Dedan Khan-Khawra-Choa Saidan Shah-Wahali-Basharat and Choa Dalwal road.	1st April, 1934 to 31st March, 1936. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. 1st May, 1934 to 30th April, 1935.
Attock	..	Ni	1st April, 1934 to 31st March, 1936. Ditto.	1. Pindigheh-Khaur .. 2. Hassanabdal-Fatehjang ..	1st April, 1934 to 31st March, 1936. Ditto. 4th August, 1934 to 31st March, 1936. 1st July, 1934 to 31st March, 1936. 1st April, 1934 to 31st March, 1937. 28th October, 1932 to 31st October, 1935. 10th February, 1933 to 9th February, 1938. 1st April, 1934 to 31st March, 1939.

LICENCES ON PATHANKOT-DHARMSALA AND BAIJNATH ROADS AND KANGRA MOTOR UNION.

(Answer to Question No. 3480, page 250 ante.)

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) and (b) No. It is a fact, however, that licencees of their own accord become members of this Union after obtaining their licences.

(c) The question does not arise but I may add that the district authorities are of opinion that the formation of this Union has brought many advantages to passengers.

(d) Government is informed that the fares charged are not exorbitant.

(e) Does not arise.

LANDOWNERS OF VILLAGE DUDAR.

(Answer to Question No. 3491, page 258 ante.)

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) Many complaints were received but they were not substantiated on being investigated.

(b) Yes, but it is not a fact that canal water was not used.

(c) Yes, but only after they had used the water.

(d) The Tahsildar was sent by the Deputy Commissioner but made no such report.

(e) Does not arise.

(f) Government is not prepared to remit abiana on land which has been irrigated by canal water.

VACANCIES IN THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

(Answer to part (b) of Question No. 3495, page 260 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : A statement is laid on the table.

Statement showing the number of officiating and permanent posts that have fallen vacant in the clerical establishment of the Education Department, Punjab, since January, 1933.

Total, No. of vacancies.	Number of vacancies unfilled.	FILLED BY.				PROPORTION COMMUNITYWISE.
		Hindus.	Muhammadans.	Sikhs.	Christians.	Hindus.	Muhammadans.	Sikhs.	Christians.
155	8	66	109	32	1	31.73	62.4	15.39	0.48

CHAUDHRI KAHAN SINGH, P. V. S., DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT, CIVIL VETERINARY DEPARTMENT, SHEIKHUPURA.

[Answer to Question No. 3504, page 266 ante.]

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) Chaudhri Kahan Singh was taken into permanent Government service as a Veterinary Inspector attached to the Office of Camel Specialist, Sohawa, from the 1st April 1916.

(b) It is regretted that the required information is not available in the records of the Director, Veterinary Services, the old Sohawa Office or in the office of the Accountant-General.

(vi) Does not arise.

CHAUDHRI KAHAN SINGH, DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT, CIVIL VETERINARY DEPARTMENT, SHEIKHUPURA.

(Answer to part (ii) of Question No. 3507, page 269 ante.)

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (ii) Chaudhri Kahan Singh was temporarily promoted to the Provincial Veterinary Service with effect from the afternoon of 4th April, 1923,—vide the Punjab Government notification No. 718-155-5339, dated 24th April, 1923. He, therefore, drew the pay of the provincial grade with effect from the date of his promotion.

CHAUDHRI KAHAN SINGH.

(Answer to Question No. 3508, page 269 ante.),

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (i) (a) Chaudhri Kahan Singh was in the Provincial Veterinary Service, before he was appointed Deputy Superintendent, Civil Veterinary Department. He was not, therefore, appointed a probationary Deputy Superintendent. He did his probation as the officer-in-charge of the office of the Camel Specialist, Sohawa, and drew Rs. 200 per mensem during the period of probation. When he was appointed Deputy Superintendent, he drew Rs. 375 per mensem, according to rule 22 (i) of the Fundamental Rules.

(b) Yes, unless they have done, in some other capacity, their period of probation in the Provincial Veterinary Service.

(c) Yes, but none of them had done his probationary period in the Provincial Veterinary Service. As will be seen from (a), no exception was made for Chaudhri Kahan Singh.

(ii) There was no departure from the usual practice in the case of Chaudhri Kahan Singh.

GIRLS IN GIRLS NORMAL SCHOOL OF ROHTAK.

(Answer to Question No. 3515, page 272 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) 63.

(b) 22.

(c) 6.

(d) 15.

(e) for 65 girls.

(f) (i) 54 (ii) 5.

GIRLS' SCHOOLS IN THE ROHTAK DISTRICT.

(Answer to Question No. 3516, page 273 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) 66 ;

(b) 1,741 ;

(c) 28 ;

(d) Yes ;

(e) Yes. Only a few girls were not examined up to the 1st June, 1934. Admissions to higher classes were, however, open up to the last day of June and had not closed in April. The honourable member's attention is also drawn to my answer to question 3518 (starred).

GIRLS' SCHOOLS IN THE ROHTAK DISTRICT.

(Answer to Question No. 3517, page 273 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : A statement showing the required information is laid on the table.

The honourable member's attention is also drawn to my reply to his question No. *3518.¹

Statement showing the names of girls' schools in the Rohtak district teaching upto 5th or higher classes with dates on which the schools were inspected.

Serial No.	Name of school.	Dates on which inspected.
1	District Board Urdu School, Kharkhauda ..	1st March, 1934.
2	District Board Hindi School, Sisana ..	2nd March, 1934.
3	Aided Muslim School, Jhajjar ..	3rd March, 1934.
4	Aided Arya School, Jhajjar ..	5th March, 1934.
5	Municipal Board Hindi School, Jhajjar ..	Ditto.
6	Municipal Board Urdu School, Jhajjar ..	Ditto.
7	District Board Hindi School, Badli ..	6th March, 1934.
8	District Board Hindi School, Jahazgarh ..	7th March, 1934.
9	District Board Hindi School, Kheri Kumar ..	Ditto.
10	Municipal Board Hindi School, Bahadurgarh ..	22nd March, 1934.
11	Municipal Board Urdu School, Bahadurgarh ..	Ditto.
12	District Board Hindi School, Dulhera ..	23rd March, 1934.
13	District Board Hindi School, Sampla ..	24th March, 1934.
14	Government Girls' School, Rohtak ..	26th March, 1934.

Serial No.	Name of school.	Date on which inspected.
15	Jain Aided Girls' School, Rohtak	26th March, 1934, and 28th March, 1934.
16	Sh. Jot Ram Girls' School, Rohtak	26th March, 1934, and 29th March, 1934.
17	Municipal Board Urdu Girls' School, Rohtak ..	26th March, 1934, and 7th April, 1934.
18	Aided Arya Girls' School, Rohtak	26th March, 1934, and 28th March, 1934.
19	District Board Hindi Girls' School, Bohar ..	26th March, 1934.
20	District Board Hindi School, Bahu Akbarpur ..	26th March, 1934, and 3rd April, 1934.
21	District Board Hindi Girls' School, Madina ..	4th April, 1934.
22	District Board Hindi Girls' School, Maham ..	31st March, 1934.
23	District Board Hindi Girls' School, Digbal ..	6th April, 1934.
24	Municipal Board Hindi Girls' School, Sonapat ..	8th May, 1934.
25	District Board Hindi School, Munimpur. ..	17th May, 1934.
26	District Board Hindi Girls' School, Gohana ..	18th May, 1934.
27	District Board Hindi School, Matanhail ..	13th May, 1934.
28	District Board Girls' School, Chara	21st May, 1934.
29	District Board Girls' School, Mokhra	22nd May, 1934.
30	District Board Girls' School, Chiri	23rd May, 1934.
31	District Board Girls' School, Makrauli. ..	25th May, 1934.
32	District Board Girls' School, Sanghi	28th May, 1934.

GIRLS READING IN 5TH CLASS IN THE ROHTAK DISTRICT.

(Answer to Question No. 3518, page 273 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes, but inspections have been delayed this year owing to floods.

(b) The Department is taking steps to see that all the promotion examinations are finished before the close of the school year.

HINDI AS MEDIUM OF INSTRUCTION IN NORMAL SCHOOLS.

(Answer to Question No. 3549, page 379 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) No.

(b) Yes, but since the closure of the Government J. V. training class with Hindi as medium of instruction at Karnal in 1929-30, the need for such a class has not been felt by the Divisional Inspectors of Schools in the Punjab.

(c) Yes. The number of students who joined the class was only 26, which did not form even a full unit of 40.

(d) Yes.

(e) The question of opening of a J. V. training class with Hindi as medium of instruction will be considered when the need of such a class is established.

(f) Does not arise.

EXAMINERS FOR LAW EXAMINATIONS.

(Answer to Question No. 3593, page 428 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon: The information supplied by the Punjab University is attached. It is regretted that statistics regarding agriculturists and non-agriculturists are not available, nor can they be easily collected.

Number of examiners community-wise for the last five years for the F.E.L., LL.B., LL.M., and Conveyancing and Deed-writing Diploma examinations.

	1934.	1933.	1932.	1931.	1930.
F. E. L.
Hindus	6	3	3	3	3
Muhammadans	4	2	2	2	2
Sikhs	2	1	1	1	1
LL.B.
Hindus	3	3	4	4	4
Muhammadans	3	2	2	2	2
Sikhs
Christians	1	1
LL.M.
Hindus	7	9
Muhammadans	3	3
Christians	2
DIPLOMA IN CONVEYANCING AND DEED-WRITING.
Hindus	2	2	2

Statement showing the total remuneration paid to examiners, community-wise, for the last five years for the F.E.L., LL.B., LL.M., and Conveyancing and Deed-writing Diploma examinations.

	1930.	1931.	1932.	1933.	1934.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs. A. P.	Rs.
F. E. L.
Hindus	2,154	2,506	3,456	3,870 6 5	4,282
Muhammadans	1,378	1,682	2,308	2,571 4 10	2,888
Sikhs	750	836	988	1,323 0 0	1,398
Christians
LL.B.
Hindus	3,254	3,594	3,732	3,262 0 9	3,676
Muhammadans	1,596	1,686	1,646	2,010 3 2	2,110
Sikhs	164
Christians	1,088 11 2	990
LL.M.
Hindus	1,382 14 6	1,062
Muhammadans	288 12 10	206
Sikhs
Christians	239 6 5	102
DIPLOMA IN CONVEYANCING AND DEED-WRITING.
Hindus	312	254 9 8	232
Muhammadans
Sikhs
Christians

POLICE CONSTABLE KUNDAN.

(Answer to Question No. 3604, page 434 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) and (b) The constable mentioned was discharged from service on the 21st April, 1933, as being unlikely to make an efficient police officer. He was subsequently prosecuted for harbouring his cousin Mughla and for conspiracy in the murder of the late Sub-Inspector Abdullah Khan.

(c) Yes. He was re-arrested under section 110 (f), Criminal Procedure Code, and the proceedings are now pending in court.

CANDIDATES IN THE OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT JUDGE, AMBALA.

(Answer to Question No. 3645, page 457 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : I. (a) A statement is laid on the table ; names have been omitted as it is not the practice of Government to give names.

(b) Yes, provided the candidate, at the time of the post falls vacant, is considered fit to hold it.

(c) Yes, under section 35 of the Punjab Courts Act the District Judge or the Sub-Judge to whom powers have been delegated has full discretion, subject to such rules as the High Court may prescribe in regard to ministerial appointments. Government understand that the High Court have prescribed no rules in this connection.

II. (a) No.

(b) No such application can be traced.

(c), (d), (e) and (f) Do not arise.

(g) Yes. As this representation was couched in highly improper and disrespectful language and its direct submission to the High Court was a gross breach of discipline, the Honourable Judges suggested to the District Judge the removal of the names of all these candidates. I am not prepared to lay a copy of the representation on the table as it will serve no useful purpose to do so.

(h) Yes.

(i) The candidates were punished for gross breaches of discipline in the manner and language of their application to the High Court, for misrepresentation and for subsequent insolence to the District Judge.

(j) No record of service is maintained in the case of unpaid candidates.

(k) No.

(l) Under the Punjab Courts Act the Honourable Judges have full power in the matter, and as they have considered and rejected the representation which was made to them, Government do not propose to take any action in the matter.

List of candidates enrolled in the office of the District Judge, Ambala, after 1st April 1930.

Serial No.	Date of enrolment.	Serial No.	Date of enrolment.
1	23rd April 1930.	12	3rd September, 1931.
2	24th April 1930.	13	29th September, 1931.
3	24th April 1930.	14	29th September, 1931.
4	24th April 1930.	15	24th December, 1931.
5	11th August 1930.	16	9th May, 1932.
6	11th August 1930.	17	7th June, 1932.
7	11th August 1930.	18	24th October, 1932.
8	11th August 1930.	19	23rd January, 1933.
9	10th November 1930.	20	11th February, 1933.
10	11th November 1930.	21	15th January, 1934.
11	11th November 1930.

DEBT OF AGRICULTURISTS IN MUZAFFARGARH, MULTAN AND MIANWALI DISTRICTS.

(Answer to Question No. 3652, page 461 ante.)

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) Accurate information is not available, and it cannot be obtained without an elaborate and expensive enquiry. The expense involved in the enquiry will not be commensurate with the results to be attained.

(b) Government has made extensive remissions of land revenue, water-rates and tagani in recent years. Mianwali has a Land Mortgage Bank and it is one of the earliest established in the Province. Mr. J. D. Anderson, I.C.S., reported in 1927, on the measures possible for the improvement of economic conditions in the Muzaffargarh district. From reports on the action taken on this report it appears that there has been a general improvement.

SCHOOLS UNDER TAUNSA MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

(Answer to Question No. 3662, page 529 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) There has never been a municipal committee in Taunsa (Dera Ghazi Khan district). In 1924 Taunsa was declared a small town under the Punjab Small Towns Act, 1921. The town committee has now been declared suspended (under section 40 of the Act). The powers and duties of the committee are at present being exercised by the Tahsildar of Taunsa. It is probable that as soon as the Tahsildar has wound up the committee's affairs, the notification establishing the 'small town' will be finally cancelled. Taunsa will then revert to the control of the Dera Ghazi Khan district board.

(b) The Small Town Committee of Taunsa did not open any school of its own.

(c) The district board schools were closed on January 1st, 1934, as the District Board, Dera Ghazi Khan, could not afford to maintain schools within the limits of another local body.

(d) The District Board, Dera Ghazi Khan, is maintaining a boys' primary school outside the town for the boys of its own area and many boys from the town are also attending it. As soon as Taunsa reverts to the control of the district board, the responsibility for providing and maintaining schools for the town will devolve upon the district board.

MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, PANIPAT.

(Answer to Question No. 3670, page 529 ante.)

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Responsibility for the forgery could not be fixed. There were no allegations of other irregularities, but only complaints of the unruly conduct of a member, which were duly considered, no action being considered necessary.

(b) Yes.

(c) An inquiry was made and the allegations were found to be baseless.

SECTION 110, CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.

(Answer to Question No. 3691, page 551 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd :

				1932	1933
(a)	102	58
(b)	142	261
(c)	188	225

AREA UNDER khud kasht IN LYALLPUR DISTRICT.

(Answer to Question No. 3715, page 565 ante.)

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : A statement is laid on the table.Statement.

Year.	Percentage of khud kasht area.	*Percentage of area at rent other than batai and cash rent.	REMARKS.
1922-23	52	4	*(i) Area cultivated by tenants or holders free of rent for religious purposes or to kamins ; and (ii) Area cultivated by tenants paying rent at revenue rates with or without malikana . Such tenants are brothers or relatives of owners having no land of their own.
1923-24	52	3
1924-25	52	3
1925-26	52	3
1926-27	53	2
1927-28	53	2
1928-29	52	4
1929-30	53	3
1930-31.	52	3
1931-32	50	3
1932-33	53	3
1933-34	51	4

ORDERLIES OF OFFICERS.

(Answer to Question No. 3724, page 568 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : The statement is laid on the table.Statement.

Name of district.	Number of orderlies attached to various Gazetted officers.	Number of ex-soldiers amongst them.
Rohtak	38	6
Hissar	51	13
Karnal	41	7
Gurgaon	29	8

SARDAR BALWANT SINGH, DEPUTY SUB-INSPECTOR OF FISHERIES, KANGRA.

(Answer to Question No. 3742, page 580 ante.)

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes ; the Assistant Director was carrying out inspections at Palampur and the enquiry was held there at the same time.

(c) Rs. 329-10-0 and Rs. 291-10-0 respectively. In connection with the former figure allowance should also be made for ordinary departmental inspections carried out at and from Palampur in addition to the enquiry.

(d) The enquiry could not be conducted by an officer of lower status than a Deputy Director of Agriculture, nor would it have cost less had it been conducted by the Deputy Director of Agriculture incharge of that circle.

(e) Mr. Johnstone's hearing is not defective ; but he is not expected to understand the colloquial Pahari language. The statements of witnesses were translated for him. No material discrepancies arose later on.

(f) No ; it is not in the public interest to lay such record on the table.

CHAUDHRI SHER JANG, PRISONER, MULTAN CENTRAL JAIL.

(Answer to Question No. 3761, page 620 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) I regret that I now find that the information given in answer to part (b) of question No. 381¹ was not quite accurate. It has been ascertained that the barracks in which prisoner Sher Jang was confined prior to his transfer to the New Multan Central Jail were cellular barracks and not association barracks. While in the Old Central Jail, Multan, however, he worked outside his cell during the day. There are no records to show the nature of his confinement in the Ludhiana Jail.¹Page xxxiv infra.

(b) He has been confined in a cell to prevent any possibility of his contaminating other prisoners.

(c) (i) weight on admission 186 lbs.
 (ii) Present weight 124 lbs.
 His standard weight should be 118 lbs.

(d) It is the policy of Government to keep in separate cells all prisoners who are likely to preach terrorist doctrines to other prisoners.

DAR-UL-ISHAAT AND CANVASSER OF BOOKS.

(Answer to Question No. 3802, page 639 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) A brother of the Inspector of Schools, Multan division, was engaged by this firm some years ago, but resigned the appointment at the request of the Inspector. Enquiry has shown that he has not been re-engaged by the said firm.

(b) No.

(c) Does not arise. No such case has been brought to the notice of Government.

EXCISE SUB-INSPECTORS.

(Answer to Question No. 3840, page 663 ante.)

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : The information is given below :—

Name of Excise Sub-Inspectors.	Tribes.	Place of residence.	Place of birth.
AMBALA DIVISION.
Chaudhri Nizam-ud-Din ..	Jat ..	Village Naggal, Tahsil and District Ambala.	Village Naggal, Tahsil and District Ambala.
Lala Prem Sahai ..	Kayastha ..	Delhi ..	Delhi.
S. Aftab Hussain ..	Sayyed ..	Delhi ..	Rohtak.
RAWALPINDI DIVISION.
Lala Wazir Chand ..	Khatri ..	} Not known, they have since been discharged from service.
Chandhri Haji Ahmad ..	Rajput ..
M. Muhammad Aslam ..	Biloch ..
S. Murid Hussain ..	Sayyed ..	Shahpur, District Jhelum.	Shahpur, District Jhelum.

OFFICIAL RECEIVERS.

(Answer to Question No. 3848, page 694 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd :

	Total number of Official Receivers.	Number of members of notified agriocultu- ral tribes.
Hindus	10	1
Muslims	6	3
Sikh	1	..

CENTRAL TRAINING COLLEGE.

(Answer to Question No. 3866, page 704 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Two.

(b) One.

(c) One.

GOVERNMENT COLLEGE, HOSHIARPUR.

(Answer to Question No. 3906, page 729 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (b) Rs. 47,153.

(c) Twenty-one periods.

(g) The percentages of passes in the two colleges in 1934 are :—

	Government Intermediate College, Hoshiarpur.	D. A.-V. College, Hoshiarpur.
Matriculation Examination ..	74%	93%
Intermediate Examination ..	60%	59%

CHARGES FOR PROVISIONAL CERTIFICATES OF LL.B.
CLASS STUDENTS.

(Answer to question No. 3912, page 732 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Yes.

(b) Under orders of the Syndicate.

(c) The same fee is charged by the University for the provisional certificate for B.A., B.Sc., M.Sc., B.T., and Medical Examinations.

(d) and (e) Does not arise.

DILUVION OF LAND BY JUMNA RIVER IN KARNAL
DISTRICT.

(Answer to Question No. 3978, page 1217 ante.)

The Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat-Khan : (a) The gross areas lost by river action in Nagla and Dhansauli villages of the Panipat tahsil and Barana village of the Karnal tahsil is shown below. The village Karar of the Panipat tahsil is not subject to river action :—

Village.	1929-30.		1930-31.		1931-32.		1932-33.		1933-34.
	Total area.	Cultivated area.	Total area.	Cultivated area.	Total area.	Cultivated area.	Total area.	Cultivated area.	Total area.	Cultivated area.
Nagla ..	15	13	40	35	40	22	88	28	33	13
Dhansau ..	53	21	21	13	12	..	94	..
Barana ..	11	11	17	15	7	7	6	2	75	1

The area gained by alluvion in these villages during the same period is as below :—

Village.	1929-30.		1930-31.		1931-32.		1932-33.		1933-34.
	Total area.	Cultivated area.	Total area.	Cultivated area.	Total area.	Cultivated area.	Total area.	Cultivated area.	Total area.	Cultivated area.
Nagla	81
Dhansauli	108	8
Barana	88	..	47	..	21	..

(b) No.

(c) Fifty rectangles of land in the Nili Bar Colony were allotted in 1929 to 50 land owners, of whom 48 belonged to village Gunthala Rao and one each to villages Nangla Ranghran and Bucha Bas, and all of whom were ruined by river action.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ESCHEAT OF LAND.

(Answer to Question to part (a) of No. 849, page 72 ante.)

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) The information required is given in the attached statement.

Statement showing

Division.	District.	1924		1925.
		Area in acres.	Value.	Area in acres.	Value.
AMBALA.	Hissar	14.72	Rs. 825	62.32	Rs. 2,840
	Rohtak
	Gurgaon	40.47	5,825	48.43	7,401
	Karnal	160.93	9,065
	Ambala	26.76	6,463	36.11	8,407
	Simla	3	205
JULLUNDUR.	Kangra	24.28	3,256	26.17	2,998
	Hoshiarpur
	Jullundur
	Ludhiana	15.84	15,211
	Ferozepore	*1 house.	500
	Labore
LAHORE.	Amritsar
	Gurdaspur	62	75
	Sialkot	3.75	(a) 490
	Gujranwala
	Sheikhupura
	Gujrat
RAWALPINDI.	Shahpur
	Jhelum
	Rawalpindi
	Attock
	Mianwali
	Montgomery
MULTAN.	Lyallpur
	Jhang
	Multan	1.57	31
	Muzaffargarh
	Dera Ghazi Khan

(a) Exclude Rs. 200 and Rs. 1,150 paid to mortgagees, respectively.

*Includes mortgage rights in 1.87 acres, value Rs. 50.

APPENDIX.

XXV

land detached.

1926.		1927.		1928.		1929.
Area in acres.	Value.	Area in acres.	Value.	Area in acres.	Value.	Area in acres.	Value.
5.97	Ra. 400	3.28	Ra. 250
..
70.73	16,466	8.41	902	18.97	3,049	27.22	4,342
17.55	330	24.81	742	185.84	6,536
37.88	7,400	152.57	23,441	35.04	7,349	30.12	2,356
..
11.54	1,939	9.53	276	9.00	1,228	50.27	840
..
..	1.51	935
..	..	† house	750	.54	300
..	13.16	2,000
..
..
..	10	25
..	1	100
..
..
..	..	4.51*	376*
..
..
..
..	2.95	50
..
..
53.30†	16,000
..
..	11.58	2,000
8.89	630	3.16	121	.28	18
..

†The title to the land is under dispute.

Statement showing

Division.	District.	1930-31.		1931.
		Area in acres.	Value.	Area in acres.	Value.
AMBALA.	Hissar	Rs. ..	3.60	Rs. 292
	Rohtak
	Gurgaon	49.58	7,345	28.42	2,704
	Karnal	26.51	1,798	81.72	6,853
	Ambala	25.70	4,656	39.27	7,831
JULLUNDUR.	Simla
	Kangra	19.58	7,512	19.31	4,485
	Hoshiarpur	8.51	385	9.15	50
	Jullundur	1.33	1,400
	Ludhiana	12.84	1,247
LAHORE.	Ferozepore
	Lahore	15.89	7,091
	Amritsar
	Gurdaspur	1.11	350
	Sialkot
RAWALPINDI.	Gujranwala
	Sheikhupura
	Gujrat	4.73	570
	Shahpur
	Jhelum
MULTAN.	Rawalpindi
	Attock	2.67*	40
	Mianwali
	Montgomery
	Lyallpur
MULTAN.	Jhang
	Multan	30.69	5,940
	Muzaffargarh
	Dera Ghazi Khan

*Mortgage right redeemed by mortgagors for Rs. 40.

land escheated—concluded.

1932.		1933.		REMARKS.
Area in acres.	Value.	Area in acres.	Value.
	Ra.		Ra.
..
..
23.47	3,714	20.40	3,100
121.39	5,266	71.59	3,367
84.04	18,714
..
36.89	3,967	11.02	2,345
6.86	630
..
7.27	1,372	1 house	200
5,048.92	1,880
..
..
22.27	241	.15	37
..	..	3.26	(b) 1,001
..
..
..
..	..	19.47	3,894
..
..
..
..	..	1.96	283
..
..
..
..
..
..

(b) Exclude Ra. 290 and Ra. 1,150 paid to mortgagees, respectively.

(Answer to question No. 850 (a), page 72 ante.)

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : A statement is laid on the table.

Statement showing the value of properties recovered as treasure trove

DIVISION.	District.	1921.	1922.	1923.
		Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.
AMBALA	Hissar
	Rohtak
	Gurgaon
	Karnal
	Ambala	11 6 0
JULLUNDUR	Simla
	Kangra
	Hoshiarpur
	Jullundur
	Ludhiana
LAMORE	Ferozepore
	Lahore
	Amritsar
	Gurdaspur
	Sialkot
RAWALPINDI	Gujranwala
	Sheikhupura
	Gujrat
	Shahpur	58 12 0
	Jhelum
MULTAN	Rawalpindi
	Attock	105 12 0	15 12 0	..
	Mianwali
	Montgomery
	Lyallpur
	Jhang
	Multan
	Muzaffargarh
	Dera Ghazi Khan

each year from 1921 onwards in the several districts of the Punjab—concluded.

1924.	REMARKS.
Rs. A. P.
..	Some stone images were recovered as treasure trove in the Hissar district in 1923. With Government's approval they were made over to the Hindus of Hansi, who have placed them in a specially constructed temple.
..	Seven silver coins and 2,192 copper coins were recovered as treasure trove in the Gurgaon district in 1931, but their present value is not known.
..	In addition, 56 uncurrent rupees were found as treasure trove in the Karnal district in 1928, but their present value is not known.
..
..
227 0 0
..
..
..
..	In addition, gold ornaments weighing 4½ tolas, silver ornaments weighing 91½ tolas, silver pieces covered with gold weighing 14½ tolas, 5 pieces of Rupa weighing 1½ tolas, 1 broken tin of brass, 1,124 Nanak Shahi half pice 3 pieces of lead weighing 32 seers and Rs. 380 of old silver coins were found as treasure trove in the Gurdaspur district since 1922; but their present value is not known.
..	In addition, 4 gold mohars and 48 silver coins were found as treasure trove in the Sialkot district, but their present value is not known.
..	Sixty-three silver coins were found as treasure trove in the Gujranwala district in 1933. Their value has not yet been assessed.
..
..	In addition, Rs. 3,073-4-0 were found at Bhera (Shahpur district) in 1933. Their value has not yet been assessed.
..
..	In addition, 10 silver Sita Ramis coins were found as treasure trove in the Attock district in 1926, but they were not acquired; and declared as Government property.
..
..
..
..	Copper coins weighing 13 seers and 10 chhataks were found as treasure trove at the Multan Agricultural Station in 1928 by the Deputy Director of Agriculture during certain levelling operations; their present value is not known.
..
..
..

LAHORE CONSPIRACY CASE.

(Answer to Question No. 873, page 179 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) The case was started on the 2nd January, 1931 and orders were pronounced on the 13th December, 1933.

(b) 752 days.

(c) Prosecution Counsel :—

Rai Bahadur Pandit Jowala Parshad, O.B.E. (from the 21st November, 1930 to the 11th May, 1934). Received Rs. 1,02,970.

Rai Sahib Lala Gopal Lal (from the 13th November, 1930 to the 11th May, 1934). Received Rs. 41,455.

Defence Counsel :—

Lala Sham Lal.—From the 2nd January, 1931 to the 13th December, 1933 and thereafter in appeal before the High Court. He was paid Rs. 46,476.

Mr. Amolak Ram Kapur.—From the 2nd January, 1931 to the 13th December, 1933 and thereafter in appeal before the High Court. He was paid Rs. 24,418.

Mr. Amar Nath.—From the 3rd January, 1931 to the 16th January, 1933 and was paid Rs. 14,496.

Lala Faqir Chand.—From the 17th January, 1933 to the 13th December, 1933 and was also engaged in appeal before the High Court. He was paid Rs. 9,460.

Mr. Pran Nath.—From the 5th January, 1931 to the 13th December, 1933. He was paid Rs. 13,408.

(d) Rs. 6,11,089 as below :—

	Rs.
(1) Pay of President	1,06,478
(2) Pay of Commissioners	1,62,679
(3) Pay of establishment including compensatory allowance.	58,024
(4) Other allowances and honoraria (Non-voted) ..	2,520
(5) Travelling allowance voted and (non-voted) ..	927
(6) Contingencies	16,164
(7) Diet and road money to witnesses	11,629
(8) Amount paid to prosecution and defence counsel ..	2,52,683
Total ..	6,11,089

This does not take into account the expenditure by the Police and Public Works Department.

(e) No special magistrate tried this case.

(f) Rs. 81,339-8-0.

(g) First part.—The question is not understood.

2nd part.—The accused were classified by the Commissioners as "Better Class" while under trial.

(h) First part.—Class B.

2nd part.—Does not arise.

(i) Yes.

(j) It would be contrary to the public interest to supply this information.

(k) During the pendency of the proceedings before the Tribunal the defence applied 8 times and the prosecution 2 times on the revision side to the High Court. Each side succeeded once only in respect of their revision applications.

Seventeen accused who were convicted by the Special Tribunal appealed to the High Court and 2 were acquitted on acceptance of their appeals.

In the case of one accused, an appeal was accepted regarding one charge but dismissed in respect of the other charge.

In the case of one accused, the death sentence was altered to one for transportation for life.

In the case of two accused, the convictions were maintained, but the sentences were reduced.

In the case of two accused, the appeals were accepted regarding the sections under which they were convicted but the sentences were not reduced.

In the case of 9 accused the appeals were completely dismissed.

Revision applications for enhancement of the sentences were filed on behalf of the Crown in the case of 2 convicts.

(l) Yes.

(m) Yes ; Government are not prepared to disclose the advice tendered by their law officers.

(n) Prosecution for conspiracy permitted the trial of all the accused in one trial and the evidence could be produced once only instead of being repeated in separate trials against each of the accused.

(o) It has already been started and will proceed according to law.

(p) Yes ; for further particulars the honourable member is referred to the judgment of the Tribunal a copy¹ of which is laid on the table.

(q) In view of the findings of the Courts there was no occasion for Government to proceed as suggested by the honourable member.

(r) None.

(s) No.

(t) Rs. 27,410 exclusive of fees paid to Public Prosecutor, Government Advocate and Police Guards.

(u) No.

CHAUDHRI SHER JANG, PRISONER, NEW MULTAN CENTRAL JAIL.

(Answer to Question No. 881, page 284 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Yes.

¹(b) Yes.

(c) To prevent his contaminating other prisoners.

(d) No.

PUBLICATIONS OF TEXT-BOOK COMMITTEE.

(Answer to Question No. 887, page 290 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a)

Muslims	14
Hindus	34
Sikhs	18
Christian	1

(b) No. In selecting translators preference is given to persons conversant with the subjects of the original books, who are at the same time good writers of the vernaculars.

INDIAN CHRISTIANS AS CLERKS IN SUBORDINATE COURTS.

(Answer to Question No. 908, page 298 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Yes.

(b) Two.

MR. BASHESHAH NATH, CLERK OF COURT, DISTRICT AND SESSIONS COURT, LAHORE.

(Answer to Question No. 911, page 299 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) It is not in the public interest to disclose the remarks made by an Inspecting Judge about a member of the ministerial establishment of a court.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) No. It involved a change of his entire duties. Both Courts are, however, situated in the same building.

(d) Yes.

(e) Yes.

(f) It is not in the public interest to disclose the reasons for the transfer of an official.

ADDITIONAL DISTRICT JUDGE AT SHEIKHUPURA.

(Answer to Question No. 918, page 303 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) The Additional District and Sessions Judge posted at Lyallpur assists in the disposal of the civil and criminal work not only of Sheikhupura district, but of any neighbouring district where help is needed.

¹See page XIX, ante.

(b) No. Ten days on an average per mensem. During this period a certain amount of civil work is sometimes also done.

(c) Yes.

(d) The civil work of Sheikhpura was mostly done at Lyallpur.

(e) Yes. Owing to a light file at Multan, the District and Sessions Judge of that division was directed to assist in the disposal of the work of the Lyallpur division, where it was heavy, and for that purpose he paid two visits to Sheikhpura. These orders have since been cancelled.

(f) No ; the correct figures are as follows :—

	Sessions cases.	Criminal appeals.	Civil appeals.
Sheikhpura	34	313	74
Lyallpur	41	452	172
Jhang and Sargodha	137	1,081	802

(g) No.

(h) and (j) The question is under the consideration of Government and a decision will be made after the Honourable Judges of the High Court have submitted their views.

(i) There is a Sessions House at Sheikhpura, but no permanent Sessions Court.

DEPUTY SUB-INSPECTORS OF FISHERIES DEPARTMENT.

(Answer to Question No. 919, page 304 ante.)

The Honourable Sardar Sir Jogendra Singh : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, temporarily.

(c) Yes. He has been replaced by a B.Sc. (Agri.).

(d) The claims of men referred to will be considered when next there is a vacancy.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE DISTRICT AND SESSIONS JUDGE, LAHORE.

(Answer to Question No. 920, page 304 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : (a) Yes.

(b) The communal composition of the establishment of a particular office at any given time is determined by a number of causes among which is recruitment in the past, since it is a recognised principle of Government policy that communal inequalities cannot be redressed by the replacement of existing incumbents of one community by new recruits of another. One cause in the present case appears to be the method of filling vacancies by which selection is made from among candidates who have worked without pay for considerable periods before appointment. It is reported that Muslim candidates frequently do not stick to the work of unpaid candidates and are apt to accept appointments elsewhere.

(c) The Honourable Judges are fully aware of the policy of Government in the matter.

(d) 8 ; 2 Muslims and 1 Hindu. Government have issued no circular enjoining employment of members of agricultural tribes. The principles regulating the employment of agriculturists are based on a wider definition.

(e) Appointments are made by the District and Sessions Judge. The procedure is a matter for his discretion.

BUILDINGS FOR THE PRESERVING OF LAND RECORDS.

(Answer to Question No. 940, page 312 ante.)

The Honourable Sir Miles Irving : (a) Yes, the existing accommodation for preserving land records is insufficient in some districts.

(b) and (c) A statement giving the names of the districts and the action so far taken is laid on the table. Owing to financial stringency Government is unable to do more.

Statement showing the names of districts in which accommodation for the preservation of land records offices is insufficient and the action taken by District Officers in this respect.

Serial No.	District.	Record room at Sadr or tahsil in which accommodation is insufficient.	Action taken by District Officers.
1	Hissar ..	(1) That part of the revenue record room at Sadr which is intended for records of tahsil Sirsa. (2) Tahsil Hissar .. (3) Tahsil Sirsa ..	The question of the extension was not taken up on account of financial stringency. Ditto ditto. The question of the extension was not proceeded with as the proposal for construction of a new tahsil building at Sirsa is under consideration and the work will be taken in hand as soon as funds are allotted.
2	Gurgaon +..	Sadr	The proposal to extend it by the amalgamation of the room occupied by the Additional Sub-Judge is under consideration.
3	Karnal ..	Sadr	Administrative approval to the extension of this revenue record room has been conveyed.
4	Simla ..	Tahsil Kot Khai ..	Administrative sanction to the re-building of this tahsil though sanctioned by the Commissioner has been kept in abeyance for want of funds.

Serial No.	District.	Record room at Sadr or tahsil in which accommodation is insufficient.	Action taken by District Officers.
5	Kangra ..	Sadr	Financial Commissioner's approval to the extension of the record room was accorded in July, 1929, but the work has not been taken in hand for want of funds due to financial stringency.
6	Jullundur ..	(1) Sadr (2) Tahsil Nakodar ..	Proposal for the conversion of the sitting room of the Sadr Kanungo into record room is under consideration. The question of building one more room has been taken up.
7	Ferozepore ..	(1) Tahsil Ferozepore .. (2) Tahsil Muktesar ..	Proposal for the extension of record room is under consideration. Ditto ditto.
8	Lahore ..	Tahsil Kasur	Steps are being taken for the addition of another room.
9	Amritsar ..	Sadr	A sum of Rs. 42,000 was sanctioned by Government for the construction of a new revenue record room at Sadr in September, 1928, but the work could not be taken in hand on account of financial stringency. Senior Secretary to the Financial Commissioners has informed the Commissioner, Lahore division, that a sum of Rs. 35,000 will be provided in the budget estimates for the year 1935-36.
10	Gurdaspur ..	(1) Sadr (2) Tahsil Gurdaspur ..	Scheme for the construction of a new record room was proposed but was dropped on account of financial stringency. Now provision has been made for providing steel racks in an additional room and converting the existing wooden racks into steel. The work has been sanctioned by the Financial Commissioner and will probably be carried out during the current year 1934-35. Proposal for the addition of a godown to the record room at Gurdaspur is under consideration.
11	Rawalpindi ..	Tahsil Rawalpindi ..	Steps to extend the record room at Rawalpindi tahsil are being taken.

Serial No.	District.	Record room at Sadr or tahsil in which accommodation is insufficient.	Action taken by District Officers.
12	Attock ..	Tahsil Fatehjang ..	Administrative approval for the extension of the revenue record room at this place has already been obtained and the work will be executed during 1935-36.
13	Mianwali ..	(1) Sadr ..	Action is being taken to increase the accommodation in this record room.
		(2) Isa Khel Tahsil ..	Ditto ditto.
14	Montgomery ..	(1) Sadr ..	The proposal for some alterations is being considered in communication with the Public Works Department.
		(2) Tahsil Pakpattan ..	No action for the extension of the record room at Pakpattan tahsil has so far been taken.
15	Jhang ..	(1) Sadr ..	Action to replace the wooden almirahs by iron ones is being taken.
		(2) Jhang Tahsil ..	Ditto ditto.
16	Multan ..	(1) Sadr ..	The question of extending the Sadr record room is already under consideration.
		(2) Tahsil Multan ..	The need for improving the accommodation is not sufficiently pressing to justify the framing of plans and estimates until the finances of the province have improved.
		(3) Tahsil Lodhran ..	Ditto ditto.
		(4) Tahsil Mailsi ..	The Deputy Commissioner has not personally inspected the tahsil and so he is not in a position to say whether any action is immediately necessary.
17	Muzaffargarh ..	(1) Leiah tahsil ..	The record room requires some alterations and additions. The Public Works Department has been moved.
		(2) Alipur tahsil ..	Ditto ditto.
18	Dera Ghazi Khan	Sadr ..	Proposal for the extension of record room is under consideration.

INDIAN CHRISTIAN MEMBERS OF DISTRICT BOARDS.

(Answer to Question No. 941, page 313 ante.)

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : Four district boards in the Punjab have Indian Christians as members, as under :—

- (1) District Board, Lyallpur—one nominated non-official.
- (2) District Board, Amritsar—one nominated official.

(8) District Board, Gujranwala—one nominated non-official.

(4) District Board, Sialkot—one elected member and one nominated non-official.

INDIAN CHRISTIAN MEMBERS OF MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

(Answer to Question No. 942, page 313 ante.)

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The statement is as follows:—

Serial No.	Name of Municipal Committee.	Elected Indian Christian members.	Appointed Indian Christian members.
1	Jullunder	1
2	Moga	1
3	Lahore	1	..
4	Jandiala	1
5	Gujranwala	1
6	Narowal	1
7	Lyallpur	1

COMPULSORY EDUCATION IN FEROZEPUR DISTRICT.

(Answer to Question No. 944, page 313 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) Four (Sulhina, Patto Hira Singh, Budh Singhwala and Rasulpur Khara).

(b) Sulhina, 66 per cent., Patto Hira Singh 64 per cent., Budh Singhwala 59 per cent. and Rasulpur Khara 61 per cent.

(c) No case was instituted in these areas for non-attendance in the year 1933-34.

PRIMARY SCHOOLS FOR GIRLS, FEROZEPUR.

(Answer to part (b) of Question No. 948, page 314 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (b) Young boys are allowed to study in the district board girls' school up to the age of nine.

EXPENDITURE ON EDUCATION OF GIRLS.

(Answer to Question No. 951, page 315 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : A statement showing the required information is laid on the table.

Statement.

Serial No.	Name of District Board.	Proportion of education budget spent on education of girls during the year 1933-34.
		Per cent.
1	Ferozepore	8.2
2	Hoshiarpur	17.6
3	Jullundur	7.79
4	Lahore	2.3
5	Amritsar	7.12
6	Gurdaspur	3.8
7	Sialkot	9.2
8	Gujranwala	6.6
9	Sheikhupura	5.8
10	Montgomery	3.6
11	Lyallpur	6.0
12	Multan	1.9

PUNJAB HEALTH SCHOOL, LAHORE.

(Answer to Question No. 957, page 317 ante.)

The Honourable Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon : (a) The locality is not generally regarded as specially unhealthy.

(b) There are a number of depressions in the vicinity of the School in which rain-water tends to collect. The Lahore Municipal Committee has, however, made arrangements, which have proved generally satisfactory, to pump these depressions dry after rain.

(c) The municipal committee has taken action under section 131 and section 125 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911 (read in each case with sections 219 and 220) against a number of owners of the adjacent properties, with satisfactory results.

(d) No further action is in contemplation.

TAXATION OFFICER, JHANG DISTRICT BOARD.

(Answer to Question No. 981, page 475 ante.)

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : The salary of Taxation Officer, Jhang, is Rs. 230 in the grade of Rs. 200—20—250, with no allowances, except travelling allowance according to rules. His qualifications are : Education up to the X Class of the Khalsa High School, Lahore, employment as Co-operative Department Sub-Inspector for over two years, some experience of banking in the Co-operative Department, and service as a District Board Clerk during the last twelve years.

LAND PLANS.

(Answer to Question No. 1011, page 599 ante.)

The Honourable Dr. Gokul Chand Narang : (a) Municipal committees are required by section 56 (3) of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911, as now amended, to maintain registers and maps of all lands which they own or which they manage on behalf of Government. District boards and town committees are required by statutory rule to maintain registers of immovable property owned or controlled by them (Rule 83 of the District Board Account Code, 1926. Rule 29-A of the Small Towns Account Rules). They are not obliged by the rules to keep plans of their lands, but in practice many of them do so. The accuracy of the land plans maintained by local bodies varies greatly. Probably few local bodies would be found in the province whose maps are absolutely complete and accurate.

(b) Encroachments on lands owned or managed by local bodies are regrettably common. The absence of accurate land plans undoubtedly renders the eviction and punishment of encroachers more difficult. It does not, however, by itself account for the prevalence of encroachments.

(c) and (d) The Ministry cannot hope that the land plans of all the local bodies will be in perfect order at the end of the two years' period specified by the honourable member. Government will, however, continue to watch the local bodies in their observance of the rules, assisting them as required in obtaining competent mapping staffs and when necessary employing their special powers under the several Acts to ensure that the local bodies fulfil their obligations.

AGRICULTURISTS ADJUDGED INSOLVENT.

(Answer to Question No. 1023, page 604 ante.)

The Honourable Mr. D. J. Boyd : 1,114.

PRINTED BY
THE SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRINTING, PUNJAB.
269 PLC-525-13-3-35-SGPP Lahore.

INDEX.

Vol. XXV.

	PAGES.		PAGES.
A.		ACT(s)—
ABDUL GHANI, SHAIKH—		Question re—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the		Application of Punjab Local Op-
Punjab—		tion — to the town of Sad-
Applications, interval between		haura	153-60
first and second	1044	Application of Transfer of Pro-
Arrest for default in payment of		perty — to urban areas	367
decreed money	1378	Contraventions of the Alienation
Conciliation board, jurisdiction		of Land — in the Gujrat dis-
of	1008	trict	574
Conciliation board, qualification		Prosecution of Muhammadans
of members	1097	under the Sarda	459
Damdupat	1165-66	Punjab Criminal Law (Amend-
Debtor, definition of	982-84,	ment) —	244-45
	1114-15,	Punjab Tobacco Vend Fees —
	1162.	Regulation of Accounts —	654
Fair offer, definition of	1054-55	Usurious Loans, Amendment of,
Fair offer, how determined,	1057-58	relating to excessive rate of Fictitious sum, addition of, to		interest	871-901
the sum actually advanced,		Provincial Insolvency, Relaxa-
penalty for	1174-75	tion of the provisions of,	366-70
Legal Practitioner, appearance		AD-DHARAM—of, before conciliation board	1081-82	Question re representation of Motion for re-circulation	755-59	Balmiki and — community in Particulars in application, state-		services	67-8
ment of,	1016-17	ADDITIONAL DISTRICT JUDGE—
Pending suits, application of the		Question re — at Sheikhupura	303
Bill to,	919	ADJOURNMENT MOTION—
ABDUL RASHID—		Re occupiers' rate on fodder —
Question re —		Leave to move	79-90
Of Laithana College	176	Discussion on	213-29
ABDULLAH KHAN—		ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE—
Question re murder of Munshi —		Question re interference in the —	112
Sub-Inspector of police, Rohtak	134-35	ADMISSION(s)—
ABDUL RAHMAN, GHANI—		Question re—
Question re Khwaja —, of Amrit-		In deMontmorency College,
sar	246, 445	Shahpur	658
ABIANA—		Of girl students in Amritsar
Question re—	243, 250-60	Medical School	368-69
Question re—		Of plucked matriculation candi-
Acreage of agricultural land,		dates into schools	370
land revenue and —	578-79	Of Sikh boys in the Bishop
Gross and net income from agri-		Cotton School	701 culture and land revenue		To the Bishop Cotton and other and—	573-74	European Schools in Simla	701
Reduction of—and land reven-		ADVOCATES—
ue	124	Question re — and pleaders en-
ABSCONDERS—		rolled in the Lahore High Court	469
Question re—		AERATED WATERS—
In the province	569-70	Question re tax on bottles of —	507
In Rohtak district	135	AFZAL HAQ, CHAUDHRI—
ACCOUNTS—		Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
Question re—		Punjab—
Audit of — of certain colleges	308	Amicable settlement, agree-
Of district boards	318	ment of, between debtors and
Of the District Board, Jhang	474	creditors, execution of —	1041
ACREAGE—		Motion for re-circulation	783-85
Question re — of agricultural land, land revenue and abiana	578-79

	PAGES.
AFZAL HAQ, CHAUDHRI—concl'd.
Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report	1228-33, 1306-07.
Resolution re punitive police ..	506-07
Supplementary Grants—
Rural reconstruction ..	388-91
Solitary confinement of terrorist prisoners ..	403-04
AGE—
Question re — bar for middle school examination ..	410-11
AGGARWALS—
Question re — in Police service ..	161
AGRICULTURAL ASSISTANTS—
Question re vacancies in the cadre of — ..	720-21
AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT—
Question re—
Head Clerks — ..	713
Supercession by Shamsheer Bahadur, — ..	714
AGRICULTURAL HOLDING (s)—
Question re—
Average ..	437
Sale, mortgage, etc., of — in Pakpattan and Dipalpur tahsils and arrears of land revenue ..	561-62
AGRICULTURAL LAND—
Question re—
Acreage of —, land revenue and abiana ..	578-79
Alienations of — ..	71-2, 436, 598-99, 695.
Alienations of — in Chakwal ..	441-42
Alienation of — in Pind Dadan Khan tahsil ..	1021
Price and rent of — ..	121-22
Sale of — in Gujrat ..	14-19, 574
Sale of — in Kotli Akhwanan ..	407
Sale of — in village Kandhanwala, Gujrat district ..	574-75
Total acreage of — ..	437-38
AGRICULTURAL OFFICER—
Question re Sardar Kharak Singh, Divisional — ..	129-30, 425
AGRICULTURAL SETTLEMENT—
Question re criminal tribes, — Birthebari ..	172
AGRICULTURAL TRIBES—
Question re land belonging to — in Pind Dadan Khan ..	442
AGRICULTURE—
Question re gross and net incomes from — and land revenue and abiana ..	573-74
AGRICULTURIST(S)—
Question re—
Adjudged insolvent ..	604
In public services ..	209-301
Landed proprietors and money-lenders ..	574
Co-operative loans to — ..	604
Debt of — in Muzaffargarh, Multan and Mianwali districts ..	461

AGRICULTURIST (s)—concl'd.
Question re—concl'd.
Hindu — as Public Prosecutors ..	728
Money-lenders and — in the Punjab ..	439
Notification of Muhyal Brahmins of Lyallpur district as — ..	563
Statutory — in Financial Commissioner's Office ..	29
Statutory Hindu — as Sub-Judges ..	132-33
Statutory Hindu — in certain cadres of Irrigation Department ..	664
Statutory Hindu — in certain cadres of Police service ..	664
Statutory Hindu — in Provincial Educational Service ..	662
Statutory Hindu — in Subordinate Educational Service ..	662-63
Statutory Hindu — in various services ..	663
AGRICULTURISTS' LAND—
Question re alienation of — ..	133-34
ARMAD YAR KHAN, DAULATANA, KHAN BAHADUR, MIAN—
Farewell to the Honourable Captain Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan ..	1402
Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report ..	1296-97
AREBAT TAX—
Question re — on vegetables in Sialkot Municipality ..	65
ARSIAN ILAHI—
Question re — ..	659
AIR SERVICE—
Question re — between Calcutta and Bombay ..	477
ARRAR ALI, PIR—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Applications, interval between first and second ..	1045
Debts, exemption of certain class of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	952-53
Debtor, definition of ..	1112-13.
ALCOHOL—	1123-26.
Resolution re propaganda against use of, and other intoxicants ..	496-502
ALIENATION(S)—
Question re—
Of agricultural land ..	71-2
Of agricultural land in Chakwal ..	598-99.
Of agricultural land in Pind Dadan Khan Tahsil ..	441-42.
Of agriculturist's land ..	656-57, 1021.
Of agriculturist's land ..	133-34.
Of land to non-agriculturists ..	436, 438-39, 595.
Of land to non-agriculturists in Mianwali and Campbellpur districts ..	1322, 1218
	1022

	PAGES.		PAGES.
ALIENATION OF LAND ACT—		ANDERSON, MR. J. D.—
Question re contraventions of the — in the Gujrat district ..	57	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
ALIGARH UNIVERSITY—		Banking companies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of con- ciliation boards ..	972
Question re — students and admis- sion to Medical College, Lahore ..	522	Conciliation boards, setting up of ..	988-89
ALLAH DAD KHAN CHAUDHRI—		Debts, exemption of certain classes of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	948-49, 950
Adjournment motion re occupier's rate on fodder ..	219-22	Debtor, definition of ..	978, 1105
Bill, Alienation of Land (Amend- ment), the Punjab ..	611-12	Fictitious sums, addition of, to sums actually advanced, pe- nalty for ..	1173
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—		Limitation, extension of period of ..	1093
Appeal against orders of con- ciliation boards ..	1073	Point of order re re-opening of discussion on a matter al- ready decided, etc., definition of debtor ..	1106
Application of, to loans advanc- ed for trade or industry ..	923-24	Proceedings, duration of, before conciliation boards and lapses of applications ..	1088
Arrest for default in payment of decreed money ..	1378-79, 1385-86, 1167-68 911	Review, application for ..	1089
Damdapat ..	1113-14	Rules, previous publication of Oath of office ..	1098 1
Date on which to come into force ..	1025	ANGLO-VERNAICULAR SECTION—
Debtor, definition of ..	1055-56	Question re — of S. E. S. ..	73-4
Deposit of money by debtors along with application ..	1172-73	APPEALS—
Fair offer, definition of ..	1091	Question re — and revision peti- tions from the orders of magistrates, 1st class ..	708
Fictitious sum, addition of, to sums actually advanced, pe- nalty for ..	88-93	APPOINTMENT(S)—
Interest, exclusion of certain period for counting ..	869-70	Question re —
Reference to select committee ..	1325-28	In Civil Courts ..	432
Relaxation of provisions of Pro- vincial Insolvency Act ..	1238-45	In Government Colleges ..	77-8
Franchise Committee's Report ..	439-92	In Irrigation Department ..	716-18
Joint Parliamentary Commit- tee's Report ..	500-01	In Lahore High Court ..	431
Resolutions re—	512-15	Made by the Director of In- dustries ..	411-12
Concessions to auction pur- chasers of land in Shahdara tahsil ..	402	Of Mr. Sibon as Local Manager in Electricity Branch ..	626
Propaganda against use of alco- hol and other intoxicants ..	385-86 387-88	Of Revenue Member ..	276-77
Punitive Police ..	222, 226	APPROPRIATION ACCOUNTS—
Supplementary grants—		Report of the Public Accounts Committee on, for 1932-33 ..	404
Panchayat officers, leave allow- ances to discharged, ..		ARJAN SINGH, SARDAR—
Rules under Wild Birds and Wild Animals Protection Act, criticism of ..		Adjournment motion re occupiers' rate on fodder ..	222
Rural reconstruction ..		Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Withdrawal order against, for disorderly conduct and forgi- veness, ..		Application of, to loans ad- vanced for trade or industry ..	924
ALLOWANCE(S)—		Damdapat ..	1165
Question re—		Debts, recovery of, in case debtor fails to pay in accord- ance with agreement ..	1063-64
In Lahore Municipal Commit- tee ..	148-49	Interest, excessive rate of, defi- nition ..	884
To the legal advisers of the Lahore Municipality ..	149	Motion for re-circulation ..	677-81
Pay and — of zilladars, naib- tahsildars and overseers ..	115-17	Bill, Small Towns (Amendment), the Punjab —
Special pay and — ..	22, 666	Introduction ..	612
AMBULANCE CART—		Circulation for public opinion ..	616-17
Question re — ..	598
AMIR CHAND, LALA—
Question re —, District Inspec- tor ..	177

PAGES.		PAGES.
	ARJAN SINGH, SARDAR—concl'd.
	Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report
1274-77	Resolution re propaganda against use of alcohol and other intoxicants
499-500	Supplementary grants—Rural reconstruction
397	ARMS ACT—
	Question re exemption of sword from the
449	ARREARS—
	Question re — of land revenue in Pakpattan and Dipalpur tahsils
562-63	Question re—
	Issue of coercive processes for recovery of land revenue — in Lyallpur district
564-65	ARREST—
	Question re — of Mughla
726-27, 728	ARTS COLLEGES—
	Question re Government —
182	ASKEWITH, MR. A. V.—
	Oath of Office
1, 1019, 1309.	ASSESSORS—
	Question re — in Hissar district
5-6	ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION—
	Question re Khan Bahadur Sheikh Nur Elahi
179	ASSISTANT DISTRICT INSPECTOR(S)—
	Question re —
	Hindu — of Schools
173	Hindu —, Dera Ghazi Khan
856	ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT—
	Question re—
	Accepted candidates (—)
255-58	Sikh — of Jails
731	ASSISTANT SURGEONS—
	Question re —
240-41	Question re —
	and District Medical Officers of Health
551-52	Recruitment of Civil —
607	ATTACHMENTS—
	Question re Court — in Gujrat district
1151-52	AUCTION—
	Question re—
	Of land in Chak No. 76-Gugera Branch
122	Of property attached in execution of decrees
694-95	AUCTION PURCHASER(S)—
	Question re—on Lower Bari Doab Colony
711-12	Resolution re concessions to, of land in Shahdara tahsil
488-96	AUDIT OF ACCOUNTS—
	Question re — of certain colleges
308	AUDITOR—
	Question re Divisional —, Rawalpindi
78-9, 704-05	AZAN—
	Question re — in Government buildings of the Education Department
231	B.
	B. A. ENGLISH—
	Question re persons who have passed —
259	BABAR AKALIS—
	Question re description of certain prisoners as — or 'political workers'
581-82	BAHAWALPUR CIRCLE—
	Question re temporary staff of the 3rd —
476-77	BALBIE SINGH, RAO BAHADUR CAPTAIN (AO)—
	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab — Co-operative banks and societies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards
961-62	Supplementary grant—Rural reconstruction
400-01	BALMIRI—
	Question re representation of — and Ad-Dharam community in services
67-8	BANK(S)—
	Question re—
	Debtors of mortgage — in Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana
459	Mumtaz — Ltd.
1153	BANKING COMPANY (IES)—
	Question re—
1145-46	Question re Directors of —
1146	BANSI LAL, CHAUDHRI—
	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—Arrest for default in payment of decreed money
1377-78	BARI DOAB CANAL—
	Question re closure of the —
739-40	BASANT LAL, LALA—
	Question re —, candidate for Sub-Judges' examination
693	BASHESHAH NATH—
	Question re transfer of Mr. —, Clerk of Court
299	BASHIR-UD-DIN MAHMUD, MIRZA—
	Question re notice under Criminal Law Amendment Act to — of Qadian
1269	BATAI—
	Question re —
120-21	BEANT SINGH, SARDAR SAHIB SARDAR—
	Oath of Office
355	BEIT—
	Question re — Ludhiana
245	BENAMI TRANSACTIONS—
	Question re — in Gohana tahsil
128-29

	PAGES
BHAGAT RAM, LALA—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Agreement, disregard of, by debtors ..	1067-68
Appeal against order of conciliation board ..	1069-70
Co-operative banks and societies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	964-65
Court fees ..	1096
Interest, excessive rate of, definition of ..	893-94
Loans to literate debtors, exemption of, from penalty clauses of the Bill ..	1394
Motion for re-circulation of Bill ..	777-82
Resolution re propaganda against use of alcohol and other intoxicants ..	500
BICYCLES—
Question re tax on — ..	567
BILL—
Discussion as to whether Council should proceed to consider motion for consideration of a substantially altered by select committee ..	663-71
Reported by select committee, how considered ..	945-47
Select Committee, rights and limitation of, to amend; ..	362-63
Taking up for consideration original clause of a — with correlative new clauses and verbal amendments together ..	862-65
Alienation of Land (Amendment), the Punjab ..	611-12
Anti-Beggary, the Punjab—
Introduction ..	610-11
Circulation for public opinion ..	613
Land Revenue (Amendment), the Punjab. Introduced, considered and passed ..	1182
Municipal Executive Officer (Amendment), the Punjab. Motion for reference to select committee, lost ..	610
Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Reference to select committee ..	80-106, 184-213, 318-63
Report of select committee, presented ..	384
Motion for re-circulation ..	671-82, 747-827, 829-53.
Motion for consideration ..	667-71, 853
Considered ..	862-1018, 1023-37, 1155-82.
Agent, representation by, before conciliation board ..	1031-34
Agreement, disregard of, by debtors ..	1067-69
Amicable settlement between debtors and creditors ..	1031-37

Bill—contd.
Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—contd.
Amicable settlement, agreement of, between debtors and creditors, execution of ..	1039-42
Appeals against orders of conciliation board ..	1069-80
Applications, interval between first and second ..	1044-46
Applications, dismissal of ..	1067-23
Applications, lapse of, due to prolonged proceedings ..	1086-89
Applications, making of a second, to conciliation board ..	1193-94
Arrest for default of payment of decreed money ..	1176-78, 1376-89.
Banking companies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	972-73
Certificates, grant of, by conciliation boards in respect of debts ..	1047-52
Companies registered under Indian Companies Act, exemption of, ..	903-04
Conciliation boards, constitution of, ..	1014-15
Conciliation boards, jurisdiction of, ..	999-1013
Conciliation boards, qualification of members of, ..	1097-98
Conciliation boards, setting up of, ..	988-99
Co-operative Banks, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	953-72
Co-operative Societies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	953-72
Court fees ..	1094-97
Damdupat ..	1164-71
Date on which to come into force ..	907-18
Debts, exemption of certain classes of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	947-73
Debt, recovery of, in case debtor fails to pay in accordance with agreement ..	1061-67
Debtor, definition of, ..	1105-07 1111-37, 1156-64, 1372-76.
Decree for debts incurred after agreement or in respect of which certificate has been granted, execution of, ..	1058-61
Deposit of money by debtor along with application ..	1017-18, 1023-26.
Deposit of money in courts by debtors ..	1108-10
Fair offer, definition of, ..	1052-56
Fair offer, how determined ..	1057-58
False amounts entered in documents, punishment for, ..	1389-96

Bills—contd.

Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab— contd.
Fictitious sums, addition of, to sums actually advanced, penalty for, ..	1171-76
Imperial Bank of India, exemption of, ..	903-04, 972-73.
Insolvency Act, Provincial, relaxation of the provisions of, Insurance companies, exemption of, ..	866-70
Interest, excessive rate of, definition of, ..	903-05, 1367-72.
Interest, exclusion of certain period for counting ..	871-901, 1363-72.
Legal Practitioner, representation by, ..	1090-92
Limitation, extension of period of, ..	1081-84
Limitation of application to loans ..	1093
Loans advanced for purposes of trade or industry ..	1099-1101
Loans secured by documents registered under the Indian Registration Act, exemption of, from penalty clauses ..	920-41, 944
Loans to literate debtors, exemption of, from penalty clauses ..	1393-94
Notice, issue of, to creditors ..	1394-96
Particulars in the application filed by a creditor ..	1031
Part payment of decree amount out of court ..	1016-17
Period of operation of, ..	1180-81
Proceedings, duration of, before conciliation board and lapse of applications ..	1101-03
Proceedings, stay of, in civil courts ..	1086-89
Review, application for, ..	1084-86
Rules, previous publication of, ..	1080-81
Secured loans, definition of, ..	1098-99
Secured loans, realisation of, from securities ..	906-07
Suits, application of Bill to pending, ..	1042-43
Reference to drafting committee ..	918-19
Drafting committee's report, presented and considered ..	1182
Passed ..	1191-93
Recommended by Governor, reconsidered ..	1195-1216
Small Towns (Amendment), the Punjab—	1363-96
Introduction ..
Circulated for public opinion ..	612
Suppression of Immoral Traffic, the Punjab—	616-17
Introduction ..
Circulated for public opinion ..	613
Village Panchayat (Amendment), the Punjab—	614-16
Introduction ..
Circulated for public opinion ..	612
	617-18

BIRHAN SINGH, SARDAR—

Adjournment motion re occupiers' rate on fodder ..	216
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1355-56
BISHOP COTTON SCHOOL—
Question re —
Admission of Sikh boys in the — ..	701
Admission to the — and other European Schools in Simla ..	701
BOARDING HOUSES—
Question re —
In schools and colleges ..	600
Of aided private colleges ..	315
BOILER INSPECTORS—
Question re — ..	8
BOOKS—
Question re —
Of Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur Elahi ..	640
On intoxication, suitable for use in schools ..	311
Dar-ul-Ishaat and canvasser of — ..	639-40
Permission to write — ..	290
BOTANY DEPARTMENT—
Question re —, Government College, Lahore ..	1224-25
BOURNE, MR. F. C.—
Oath of office ..	365
BOYD, THE HONOURABLE MR. D. J.—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Reference to select committee ..	80-83, 359-61.
Presentation of report of select committee ..	384
Motion for consideration ..	667-68
Motion for re-circulation ..	852-53
Amicable settlement between debtors and creditors ..	1034-35, 1036, 1037.
Applications, dismissal of, ..	1028
Applications, interval between first and second ..	1044-45
Application, making of second, to conciliation board ..	1193-94
Application of, to loans advanced for trade and industry ..	940-41
Arrest for default in payment of decreed money ..	1177, 1379, 1386, 1387.
Companies registered under Indian Companies Act, exemption of, ..	903
Conciliation board, qualifications of members ..	1098
Damdapat ..	1164, 1168
Debts, grant of certificate by conciliation board in respect of, ..	1047
Debts, exemption of certain classes of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	952

	PAGES.		PAGES.
BORD, THE HONOURABLE MR. D. J.—consid.		B. T. CLASS—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—consid.—		Question re —, Lady MacLagan School ..	483
Debtor, definition of ..	1111	BUDGET, —
Deposit of money by debtors along with applications ..	1121-23, 1155, 1157-58, 1159, 1160.	Cuts action taken by Government on, made by Council in original and supplementary demands ..	610
Deposit of money in courts by debtors ..	1026	Question re—
Fictitious sum, addition of, to sums actually advanced; penalty for, ..	1110	Of local bodies ..	310
Imperial Bank of India, exemption of ..	1172	BUILDINGS—
Insolvency Act, Provincial, relaxation of provisions of ..	903	Question re — for preserving land records ..	312
Insurance companies, exemption of, ..	868, 870	BUNGALOW—
Interest, excessive rate, definition of, ..	1370	Question re unauthorised occupation of — of Principal, Gujrat College ..	182
Legal Practitioner, appearance of, before conciliation boards ..	871, 894-96, 1366.	BUS—
Loans secured by registered documents, exemption of, from penalty clauses ..	1083	Question re motor — service from Simla to Mashobra ..	241-42
Part payment of decree amount out of court ..	1393	BYTA SINGH, SARDAR BAHADUR SARDAR—
Point of order re re-opening of discussion on matter already decided by the Council, viz., definition of debtor ..	1180	Adjournment motion re occupier's rate on fodder ..	223-25
Proceedings, duration of, before conciliation boards ..	1107	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab— Co-operative banks and societies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	962-64
Proceedings, stay of, in civil courts ..	1089	Farewell to Honourable Captain Sir Sikander Hyat Khan ..	1400
Secured loans, realization of, from securities ..	1086	Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report ..	1279-84
Report of drafting committee, presented ..	1043	Reference to late Chaudhri Shah Muhammad ..	384
Passed ..	1191	Resolution re concessions to auction purchasers of land in Shahdara tahsil. ..	492-93
Suppression of Immoral Traffic, the Punjab, circulation for public opinion ..	1195-96	BYE-LAWS —
Demands for excess grants ..	615-16	Question re — framed by Municipal Committee of Jagraon ..	164-65
Demands for supplementary grants ..	384, 385, 401, 402, 403, 667.	C.
Joint-Parliamentary Committee's Report ..	1270-74	CANAL(S)—
Public Accounts Committee, Report of, on Appropriation Accounts, presented ..	404	Question re—
Resolution re punitive police ..	509-12, 520	Closure of the Bari Doab — ..	739-40
BRAMHINS—		Cotton on the Dipalpur Irrigation and Sutlej Valley Project — ..	1226-27
Question re — ..	302	Divisional and Sub-Divisional Officer, —, Lyallpur ..	433
BRIDGES—		Khaddar Branch of the Pakpattan — ..	173
Question re — on the drain near Asandah ..	698	Occupiers' rates on Sutlej Valley Project — ..	965
BROTHERS—		Sirsa Branch of the Western Jumna — ..	544-49
Question re — in Muhalla Wakefield Ganj, Ludhiana ..	621-22	Villages irrigated by Lower Jhelum — ..	1189
		CANAL ACT—
		Question re rule 25 of the — ..	114
		CANAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE—
		Question re — of Dipalpur and Sohag divisions ..	365-67
		CANAL BANKS—
		Question re public traffic on — ..	125-26

	PAGES.		PAGES.
CANAL COLONY—		CHARGES—
Question re—		Question re — for lifting water
Of the Irrigation Department		from wells with hydro-electric at Ferozepore ..	305-06	current ..	306-07
Irrigation in the neighbourhood		CHETAN ANAND, LALA—of the — at Ferozepore ..	306	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
CANCELLATION—		Punjab—
Question re — of teaching certi-		Agreement, disregard of, by ficates ..	74	debtors ..	1067
CANDIDATE(S)—		Appeal against orders of con-
Question re—		ciliation boards ..	1070-71
Accepted—(Assistant Superint-		Conciliation boards, jurisdic-
endents) ..	255-58	tion of, ..	1000
For Sub-judges' examination ..	693-94	Co-operative banks and societies
In the office of District Judge,		and commercial banks, ex-
Ambala ..	457-58	emption of, from jurisdiction
Lala Basant Lal, —, for Sub-		of conciliation boards ..	953, 972
Judges' examination ..	693	Interest, exclusion of certain
Naib-Tahsildar — in Jullundur		period for counting, ..	1091
division ..	539	CHHOTU RAM, R. B. CHAUDHRI—
Sub-Inspector Fisheries — ..	735	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness,
CAPITAL PUNISHMENT—		the Punjab—
Question re males and females		Motion for re-circulation ..	823-52
hanged ..	467	Amicable settlement, agreement
CASES—		of, between debtor and cre-
Question re Criminal — in Rohtak		ditor, execution of ..	1040-41
..	135	Appeal against orders of con-
CATTLE—		ciliation boards ..	1075-77
Question re custody of — found		Application of, to loans ad-
within the canal boundaries ..	1309	vanced for trade or industry
CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK—		Applications, interval between
Question re—		first and second ..	1045
Communal representation in the		Arrest for default in payment
directorates of —, Ludhiana ..	591	of decreed money ..	1176, 1330-
Overdraft from the —, Feroze-		81
pore ..	609	Conciliation boards, jurisdiction
Recoveries of debts by —,		of, ..	1005-08
Rohtak and Co-operative		Conciliation boards, setting up
Union, Sonapat ..	135-36	of, ..	995-98
Withdrawals from the —, Fe-		Co-operative banks and socie-rozepore ..	609	ties, exemption of, from
CENTRAL JAIL—		jurisdiction of conciliation
Question re Chaudhri Sher Jang,		boards ..	965-66
prisoner, Multan — ..	620	Court fees ..	1095-96
CENTRAL MODEL SCHOOL—		Damdupat ..	1164
Question re —		Date on which the Bill is to come
Head Master —, Lahore ..	48, 51-52,	into force ..	914-17
..	423-24,	Debts, grant of certificates by
Lahore ..	48-50	conciliation boards in res-
Muslim Head Master for —,		pect of, ..	1048-51
Lahore ..	48	Debts, recovery of, in case deb-
Muslim students in —, Lahore ..	46	tor fails to pay in accordance
Teachers of —, Lahore ..	112-13,	with agreement ..	1064-66
..	424-25,	Debtor, definition of, ..	973-77,
..	427-28.	..	1115-19,
Unauthorised private tuition		..	1129-32,
by teachers of —, Lahore ..	47	..	1155, 1161,
CENTRAL TRAINING COLLEGE—		..	1374-75.
Question re — ..	704	Deposit of money in courts by
Question re staff —, Lahore ..	579	debtors ..	1108-09
CERTIFICATES—		Fair offer, definition of, ..	1053-54
Question re charges for provisional		Fictitious sum, to sums actually
— of LL.B. class students ..	732	advanced, penalty for, ..	1173
CHANDER KISHORE—		Legal practitioners, representa-
Question re —, a civil prisoner	700	tion by, before conciliation
..		boards ..	1084
..		Part payment of decree amount
..		out of court ..	1180

	PAGES.		PAGES.
CHHOTU RAM, R. B. CHAUDHRI—conold.		CIVIL SECRETARIAT—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the		Question re—
Punjab—conold.		Direct recruitment in Punjab—	993-97
Point of order, re-opening of		Vacancies in —	28-29
discussion on a matter al-		CIVIL SURGEONS—ready decided by Council,	1105-06	Question re establishment in the viz., definition of debtor ..	1083-86	offices of Inspector-General of Proceedings, stay of, in civil	323-38	Civil Hospitals, Punjab, and courts ..	866-67,	the —, in the Punjab ..	1150
Reference to select committee	868-69,	CLASSICAL SECTION—
Relaxation of provisions of Pro-	1098	Question re — and Vernacular vincial Insolvency Act ..	906-07	Section of S. E. S. ..	74-75
Rules, previous publication of,		CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT—
Secured loans, definition of, ..	1399-1400	Question re—
Farewell to Honourable Captain	1349-53	And other establishments, Irriga-
Sirdar Sir Sikander Hyat Khan		tion Branch ..	296-97
Franchise Committee's Report ..	383-84	Sikhs in the —, of the Punjab
Reference to late Chaudhri Shah	502-06,	Education Department ..	260-61
Muhammad ..	515-20,	CLERICAL SERVICE—
Resolution re punitive police ..	66	Question re Forest Department
CHIEF ENGINEER(S)—	183-84	Subordinate and —, and Indian
Question re — Simla exodus of ..	554	Christians ..	297
Statement re retrenchment of		CLERKS—
one— ..		Question re—
CHIEF JUSTICE—		In the High Court and Indian
Question re — as a member of the		Christians ..	298
Syndicate of Punjab University		In the offices of Deputy Com-
CHIRAGH-UD-DIN, MIAN—		missioners ..	745
Question re enlistment of — as	1311	Indian Christians as — in member of Criminal Tribe ..		Subordinate Courts ..	298
CHOKHA NAND, LALA—		CLERK OF COURT—
Question re —, Fisheries Depart-	712-13	Question re transfer of Mr.
ment ..		Basheshar Nath, — ..	299
CHOWKIDARS—		CLERKS' QUARTERS—
Question re — in Rohtak district	568	Question re —, Simla ..	12
CHRISTIANS—		COGNIZABLE CASES—
Question re Indian — ..	742	Question re — in the Punjab ..	570-71
CINEMA(S)—		COINS—
Question re—		Question re counterfeit — ..	802
Houses and entertainment tax	566	COLLEGE(S)—
Students visiting — ..	601	Question re—
CIRCLE REGISTRAR—		Abdul Rashid of Ludhiana —	176
Question re—		Admissions in deMontmorency
Agha Sher Afghan Khan and —		—, Shahpur ..	858
Co-operative Societies, Ambala	583-84	Aligarh University students and
Co-operative Societies, Ambala	584-89	admission to Medical —,
CIVIL ASSISTANT SURGEONS—		Lahore ..	522
Question re — and Indian Chris-		Audit of accounts of certain —	308
tians ..	294	Boarding houses in schools
CIVIL COURTS—		and — ..	600
Question re appointments in the —	432	Botany Department, Gov-
CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE—		ernment —, Lahore ..	1224-25
Question re — ..	123	Central Training — ..	703-04
Question re —		Government —, Hoshiarpur ..	729-30
Prisoners ..	122-23	Hindu professors of Persian
Suspension of — and removal		and Urdu in Government —	464
of ban on candidates for		Professors in Government —,
Assembly ..	123	Lahore ..	732
CIVIL DISPENSARIES—		Professors of Persian and Urdu
Question re religion of patients	453	in Government — ..	480
in — ..		Staff of Central Training —,
CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—		Lahore ..	579
Question re Rule under Section		Staff of Government —, Lahore	579-80
61, — ..	134	University Law —, Lahore ..	428
		COMMISSION(S)—
		Question re Court — ..	1151

	PAGES.		PAGES.
COMMITTEE(S)—		COMPANY(IES)—conold.
Question re—		Question re— conold. —
To overhaul primary education ..	167	Insurance — ..	1146,
Erosion — ..	710-11	Sugar manufacturing — ..	1146-47, 1147-48
Frontier Crime Regulations —,
Report ..	153	COMPENSATION—
Lahore Municipal — ..	129	Question re — to Musammat
COMMUNAL INEQUALITY—		Gita Devi paid by Hydro-Elec-
Question re — in the Education		tric Department ..	249
Department ..	289-90	COMPLAINT(S)—
COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION—		Question re —
Question re—		Against Khan Sahib Dr. Nur
Anglo-Vernacular Section of		Muhammad of Ludhiana Mu-
Subordinate Educational Ser-		nicipal Committee ..	706-08
vice ..	73-74	Against police officers ..	700
Hindu agriculturist candidates		In Courts of Magistrates, 1st for the P. C. M. S. ..	465-66	Class, Hoshiarpur ..	735-36
In the directorate of Central Co-		COMPULSORY EDUCATION—operative Bank, Ludhiana ..	591	Question re — in Ferozepore dia-
In District Board, Amritsar ..	655	trict ..	313
In Education Department ..	464-65	CONCESSIONS—
In Government Normal Schools		Question re —
370		In Government dues ..	653
In Jullundur District Board ..	653-54	Fee — in Government Schools	166
In Karnal Municipal Committee		Resolution re— to auction purchas-
581		ers of land in Shahdara Tahsil	488-96
In Lahore High Court ..	462-63	CONSOLIDATION—
In Lower Jhelum Circle ..	856	Question re — of holdings in
In the Services ..	234-36	Ludhiana and Ambala ..	592
In Vernacular Schools ..	379	CONSPIRACY CASE—
Hindu Assistant District Ins-		Question re Lahore — ..	179-81
pectors of Schools ..	173	CONSPIRACY PRISONERS—
Hindu Jat as Inspector of		Question re 1914-15 — ..	247
Police ..	274	CONSTITUENCIES—
Hindus in Palwal Municipality		Question re Indian Christian — for
Hindu professors of Persian and		Legislative Council ..	1022-23
Urdu in Government Colleges		CONTRACT SYSTEM—
Muhammadan 7aildars in the		Question re supply of water on —	114-15
Amritsar District ..	284-85	CO-OPERATIVE BANK—
Muslims in the Office of Princi-		Question re
pal, Veterinary College ..	266	Central — ..	590-91
Post held by Hindus in Mian-		Communal representation in wali district ..	739	the directorate of Central—,
Sikhs in the Clerical establish-		Ludhiana ..	591
ment of the Punjab Education		Overdraft from the Central —,
Department ..	260-61	Ferozepore ..	609
Sikhs in Deputy Commissioners'		Withdrawals from the Central
Offices, Jullundur division ..	70	—, Ferozepore ..	609
Sikhs in the services ..	737-38	CO-OPERATIVE CREDIT SOCIETIES—
Sikh ladies in Punjab Education-		Question re — ..	573
al Service ..	9	Question re— in Ambala and
Sikh officials in Jagraon ..	70	Ludhiana ..	591
Sikh patwaris and Kanungos in		CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES—
Ludhiana district ..	68-69	Question re — ..	437
Vacancies amongst Stenogra-		Question re—
phers ..	77	Agha Sher Afghan Khan and
COMMUNAL TENDENCIES—		Circle Registrar, —, Ambala	583-84
Question re — of Mr. Hakim, Prin-		And Unions in the Hoshiarpur
cipal, Gujrat College ..	181	district ..	702
COMPANY(IES)—		Circle Registrar, —, Ambala ..	584-89
Question re—		Inspector, —, Jagraon ..	589
Registered with the Registrar,		Inspector, —, Ludhiana ..	589-90
Joint Stock — ..	412-13	Muslim deputatation at Ludhiana
Directors of Electric Supply —	1147	on the — ..	590
Directors of film — ..	1148	Nahar Singh, Inspector of —	592
Directors of insurance — ..	1146	Pandit Gian Chand, Inspec-
Directors of sugar manufac-		tor, Industrial —, Ambala ..	1019-21
turing — ..	1148	Sherpur Kalan ..	592-94
Electric Supply — ..	1147
Film — ..	1148-49

	PAGES.		PAGES.
DEATH(s)—		DEPUTY COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE(s)—
Question re—		Question re—
From snake bite	601	Grades of examiners of copying
Of police officers while discharg-		branch in	305
ing duty	603	Sikhs in —, Jullundur division	70
DEATH SENTENCES—		DEPUTY SUB-INSPECTORS—
Question re males and females		Question re — of Fisheries De-hanged	467	partment	304
DEBT(s)—		DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENTS—
Question re—		Question re Sikh — of Jails ..	730
Of agriculturists in Muzaffar-		DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENTS OF garh, Multan and Mianwali		POLICE—districts	461	Question re —	274-75
Decretal —	151	Question re —, Finger Print Bureau	6-7
Recoveries of — by Central Co-		DEBRAJAT CANAL CIRCLE—operative Bank, Rohtak, and		Question re remissions in — ..	110-11
Co-operative Union, Sonapat	135-36	DETENTION—
DEBTORS—		Question re — of Mr. S. H. Vat-
Question re — of mortgage banks		ayayana in custody	68
in Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana ..	459	DETENUE(s)—
DECREES—		Question re—
Question re auction of property		Confinement of Babu Satindraattached in execution of — ..	694-95	nath Sen, a Bengal —, in
DELHI-MONTGOMERY ROAD—		Campbellpur Jail	1159
Question re —	550	In the Punjab Jails	237
DEK NULLAH—		State prisoners and —	659
Question re head of —	12-17	DIET MONEY—
DEMANDS FOR GRANTS—		Question re payments of travelling
Action taken by Government on		expenses and — by Criminal cuts made by Council in original		Courts	167-68
and supplementary —	610	DILUVIATION—
DEMANDS FOR EXCESS GRANTS—		Question re — of land by Jumna
Commuted value of pensions, capi-		river in Karnal district	1217
tal expenditure	666	DIN MUHAMMAD—
Hydro-Electric Scheme, working		Question re — a martial law expenses	666	prisoner	246
Police	666	DIPALPUR INUNDATION—
Refunds (Transferred)	666	Question re cotton on the — and
DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY		Sutlej Valley Project Canals ..	1226-27
GRANTS—		DIRECTORS—
Civil Works (Capital Expendi-		Question re—
ture)	402	Of banking companies	1146
Civil Works (Transferred)	403-04	Of electric supply companies ..	1147
Expenditure in England	403	Of film companies	1148
Industries	384	Of insurance companies	1146
Irrigation, Working Expenses	403	Of sugar manufacturing com-
Miscellaneous (Reserved)	385-401	panies	1148
Miscellaneous (Transferred)	401-02	DIRECTOR OF INDUSTRIES—
DEMANDS FOR TOKEN GRANTS—		Question re appointments made
Irrigation Capital	1183	by —	411-12
Irrigation, Working Expenses	1183	Question re —	407-09,
DE MONTMORENCY COLLEGE—		421-22.
Question re—		Question re—
Admissions in —, Shahpur ..	858	Post of the —	64
Shahpur Sadar	75	Qualifications of the —	60-64
DEPRESSED CLASS—		Tours of the —	64-65
Question re — members in muni-		DISCHARGE—
cipal and district boards	167	Question re dismissal or — of Gov-
DEPRESSIONS—		ernment servants in Education
Question re — in Lahore	595-96	Department	74
DEPUTY COMMISSIONER(S)—		DISMISSAL—
Question re—		Question re—
Clerks in the offices of — ..	745	Or discharge of Govern ment
Mianwali	440-41	servants in Education
DEPUTY COMMISSIONER, CRIMINAL		Department	74
TRIBES—		Of Kishan Lal, Naib Sharaf,
Question re —, Punjab's move to		Sadar, Hissar	378
Simla	170-71	Suspensions or — of Zaildars,
		Safedposhes and Lambardars	276

	PAGES.		PAGES.
DISPENSARY—		DISTRICT MEDICAL OFFICERS OF HEALTH—
Question re Superintendent, —		Question re assistant surgeons and ..	551-52
Mayo Hospital, Lahore ..	36
DISTILLERY—		DIVISIONAL AGRICULTURAL OFFICER—
Question re — at Amritsar ..	445	Question re Indebtedness of Sardar Kharak Singh, — ..	129-30
DISTRICT AND SESSIONS JUDGE—		DIVISIONAL AUDITOR—
Question re—		Question re —, Rawalpindi ..	78-79, 704
Establishment of the —, Lahore	304-05
Officials punished by Sardar Sewaram Singh, — ..	299	DIVISIONAL OFFICER—
DISTRICT BOARD(S)—		Question re — and sub-divisional officer, canals, Lyallpur ..	433
Question re—		DOCTORS—
Accounts of — ..	318	Question re male — in girl's institutions ..	100-61
Accounts of —, Jhang ..	474	DODD, MR. R. J. S.—
Communal representation in — Amritsar ..	655	Oath of office ..	1185
Communal representation in — Jullundur ..	653-54	DOGAR(S)—
Depressed class members in municipal and — ..	167	Question re—
Engineer, Jullundur ..	651-52	Boys of the — community in Ferozepore district ..	314
Engineer, Lyallpur ..	12-13	In Ferozepore district ..	313-14
High School, Nakodar ..	652-53	Scholarships for the education of — community in Ferozepore ..	314
Lyallpur ..	463-64	DOGRAS
Rohtak ..	37-38, 699	Question re —
Election of Senior and Junior Vice-Chairman, Lahore — ..	146-48, 149-50, 375-76, 410.	As statutory agriculturists ..	245-46
English Optional classes in — middle schools ..	371	DRAIN—
Establishment of vehicle stands by — ..	309, 311	Question re—
Expenditure on girls' scholarships by — ..	316	Near Asaudah ..	698
Grant to the —, Ferozepore ..	157-58	In Rohtak and near Asaudah ..	31-32
Grant to —, Rohtak, towards flood damage ..	40-41	DRIVERS—
Head Clerk, —, Jhang ..	475-76	Question re irregularities by — of motor lorries in Sialkot district ..	1222
Indian-Christian members of — Junior Vice-Chairman, Lahore ..	313
— ..	377	E.
Non-official chairmen of — ..	1188-89	ECONOMIC CONDITIONS—
Powers of official chairmen of —	376	Question re Educational and — of Muslims of Mianwali and Muzaffargarh districts ..	521
Retrenchment in —, Jhang ..	471-73	EDUCATION—
Salaries of employees of —, Jullundur ..	655-56	Question re—
Schools under —, Dera Ghazi Khan ..	523	Compulsory — in Ferozepore district ..	313
Secretary —, Ferozepore ..	136-39	Expenditure on — of girls ..	315
Secretary, —, Jhang ..	474-75	Scholarships for the — of Dogar community in Ferozepore ..	314
Taxation Officer —, Jhang ..	475	EDUCATION DEPARTMENT—
Tenure of office of Vice-Chairman, Lahore — ..	375	Question re—
DISTRICT ENGINEER—		Communal inequality in the — ..	289-90
Question re —, Jhang ..	473-74	Communal representation in — ..	464-65
DISTRICT INSPECTOR—		Question re — ..	174-75, 478-80, 482, 733
Question re—		Muslims in — ..
Chandhri Jhandu Mal, — of Schools ..	177	Permission to employees of the — to write books ..	290
Of schools, Gurgaon and the teaching of Hindi and Urdu in the primary schools ..	572-73	Policy in the — ..	277-83
Lala Amir Chand, — ..	177	Promotions in — ..	485-86, 728-29, 482-83
DISTRICT JUDGE—		Retrenchment in — ..	251
Question re candidates in the office of —, Ambala ..	457-58	Sita Ram, Gupta, Mr. of the — Transfers of officers and sub-ordinates of the — ..	427

PAGES.	PAGES.
EDUCATION DEPARTMENT—concl'd.—	ELECTRICITY BRANCH—concl'd.—
Question re—concl'd.—	Question re—concl'd.—
Vernacular mistresses employed	Reduction of a Muslim Overseer, — 625
as invigilators at examinations	Removal from service of officials in— 628-29
conducted by the — 291	Shut down, Chuharkana — 632
Women in — 179	Shut downs in the Low Tension Lines — 632-33
EDUCATIONAL CONDITION—	Shut downs in the trunk and branch transmission lines — 631
Question re — and economic condition of Muslims of Mianwali and Muzaffargarh districts .. 521	ELECTRICAL DEPARTMENT—
EDUCATIONAL GAZETTE—	Question re Superintending Engineer — 8
Question re Sikhs and —, Jullundur .. 1224	ELECTRIC POWER—
EDUCATIONAL SERVICE—	Question re — for agricultural purposes .. 451
Question re — .. 731	ELECTRIC SUPPLY COMPANY(IES)—
Question re Muslims in Punjab — 732-33	Question re—
"HANSAN"—	Controversy between Lahore — and Lahore Municipal Committee .. 238
Question re security of the — under the Indian Press Act .. 740-41	Directors of — .. 1147
ELECTION(S)—	Question re — .. 736-37, 1147.
Question re—	Question re —, Lahore .. 305
Of Senior and Junior Vice-Chairman, Lahore District Board .. 146-48, 149-50, 375-76, 410.	Question re energy taken by —, Jullundur .. 451
To Municipal Committee, Sargodha .. 275-76	ELECTRIC WIRING—
General — and political workers .. 560	Question re — in Ludhiana town .. 450
Indian-Christian constituencies for Legislative Council .. 1022-23	ENFRANCHISEMENT—
Legislative Council — 603	Question re — of women in municipalities .. 161-62
Removal of disqualification for — to Assembly .. 444-45	ENGINEER—
ELECTORATES—	Question re—
Question re separate or joint — in municipalities .. 151	District Board —, Jhelum .. 651-52
ELECTRICAL ENERGY—	District Board —, Lyallpur .. 12-13
Question re theft of — in Lyallpur .. 622	District —, Jhang .. 473-74
ELECTRICITY—	Project — .. 452-53
Question re price of — .. 653	ENGINEERING SCHOOL—
ELECTRICITY BRANCH—	Question re —, Rasul .. 463
Question re—	ENGINEERING SUBORDINATES—
Appointment of Mr. Sibon, as Local Manager in — .. 626	Question re—
Clerical staff in the — .. 633-34	In the irrigation Branch .. 291-93
Question re — .. 640-41, 645-47.	Travelling allowances of — in the Irrigation Branch .. 293
Question re—	ENGLISH OPTIONAL CLASSES—
Filling up of posts in the — .. 633	Question re — in district board middle schools .. 371
Gazetted posts in the — .. 623	EROSION COMMITTEE—
Goraya Phillaur Project, — .. 709	Question re — .. 710-11
Harbans Lal, Clerk, — .. 710	ESCHEAT—
Head Works Engineer — .. 624-25, 626, 642, 647.	Question re — of land .. 72.
Lachman Dass, Malik, Line Superintendent, — .. 627-28	ESTABLISHMENT—
Line Superintendents, — .. 627, 628, 629-31.	Question re—
Local Manager, — .. 626-27, 643-44.	In the offices of Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, Punjab and the Civil Surgeons in the Punjab .. 1150
Local Managers, A class, in the — .. 624-25	In the office of the Inspector-General of Police, Punjab .. 285-88
Muslims in — .. 642-43	Of the District and Sessions Judge, Lahore .. 304-05.
	EXAMINATION(S)—
	Question re—
	Age bar for middle school — .. 410-11
	Facilities in University — .. 457

	PAGES.		PAGES.
EXAMINERS—		FEE CONCESSIONS—
Question re—		Question re—
For law examination ..	428-29	To sons of teachers ..	252, 369
Grades of — of Copying branches		Special — in Anglo-Vernacular in offices of Deputy Com-		Schools ..	371
missioners ..	305	FILES—
EXCHANGE—		Question re—
Question re — of proprietary land		Charges for inspecting court —	414-15 for Crown Waste Land ..	503-04	Loss of — in Sadhora Municipal
EXCISE—		Committee ..	372
Question re Jat Inspectors or Sub-		FILM COMPANIES—inspectors of —, in Ambala		Question re — ..	1148, 1149
division ..	29	Question re directors of — ..	1148
EXCISE SUB-INSPECTORS—		FINANCIAL COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE—
Question re — ..	663-64	Question re—
EXECUTIVE OFFICER(S)—		Sikh representation in — ..	368
Question re—		Statutory agriculturists in — ..	29
Municipal — ..	37, 733-34	FINGER PRINT BUREAU—
Ludhiana Municipality ..	443-44	Question re—
EXODUS—		Deputy Superintendent of
Question re Simla — of Chief En-		Police — ..	6-7
gineers ..	66	Inspector, —, Phillaur ..	289
EXPENDITURE—		FIROZ KHAN NOON, HONOURABLE
Question re — on education of		MALIK SIR—
girls ..	315	Joint Parliamentary Committee's
EXTRA ASSISTANT COMMIS-		Report ..	1284-90
SIONER(S)—		Supplementary grants,
Question re—		Education (Reserved) ..	667
From Ludhiana district ..	480	FIRST OFFENDERS—
Syed Sadiq Ali Shah, — ..	443	Question re — ..	1140-41
F.		FISHERIES—
FACULTY OF LAW—		Question re—
Question re Representation of —		Balwant Singh, Sardar, Deputy in the Punjab University ..	1152	Sub-inspector of —, Kangra ..	580-81
FAQIR HUSSAIN KHAN, CHAUDHRI—		Candidates for the Post of Sub-
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1332-33	inspector of — ..	248, 735
FAREWELL—		Revenue from — ..	1220-21
By the Honourable Captain Sir		Inspector of — ..	264-65,
Sikander Hyat Khan ..	1397-98		367,
FARM ACCOUNTS—			406-07.
Question re method of calculating		M. Karam Bakhah, deputy sub-
net income in — ..	568	inspector of — ..	537
FAZL ALI, KHAN BARADUR NAWAB—		Officiating deputy sub-inspector
Adjournment motion re occupiers'		of — ..	537-38
rate on fodder ..	216-17	Sub-inspectors of — ..	536-37
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the		FISHERIES DEPARTMENT—
Punjab,		Question re—
Co-operative Banks and socie-		Chokha Nand, Lala — ..	712-13
ties, exemption of — from		Deputy sub-inspectors of — ..	304 jurisdiction of conciliation		Question re — ..	263-64,
boards ..	955-57		538-39,
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1331-32		552-53.
Supplementary demands—		Question re—
Rural reconstruction ..	391-92	And fishing licenses ..	405
FAZAL ELAHI, QUREAN—		And the Inspector of Fisheries ..	383
Question re—		Research officer, — ..	382-83
As candidate for the Lahore		Revenue of the — ..	540
Municipal Committee ..	619	FISHERIES RESEARCH OFFICER—
Service of notice on — under		Question re— ..	432-33,
Section 3 of the Punjab Criminal			558-59.
Law (Amendment) Act ..	302	FISHERIES STAFF—
FEB(S)—		Question re — ..	381-82
Question re—		FLOOD(S)—
In Government Schools ..	166	Question re—
Inspection of patwaris' records	43	In village Kot Qutab Din ..	715
Remission of — for teachers'		Grant to District Board, Rohtak sons ..	377-78	towards — damage ..	40-41

	PAGES.		PAGES.
FLOOD RELIEF—		GITA DEVI—
Question re — ..	43-4	Question re compensation to Mus-
Question re — to villagers of Atari		sammatt — paid by Hydro-
in Garhsankar tahsil ..	522	Electric Department ..	249
FODDER—		GOKUL CHAND NARANG, THE
Adjournment motion re occupiers'		HONOURABLE DR.—
rate on — ..		Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
Discussion on — ..	213-29	Punjab,
Leave for — ..	79-80	Applications, interval between
FOREST DEPARTMENT—		first and second ..	1045
Question re — Subordinate and		Bill, Small Towns (Amendment),
clerical service and Indian-		the Punjab,
Christians ..	297	Circulation for public opinion..	617
FORMAN CHRISTIAN COLLEGE—		Bill, Village Panchayat (Amend-
Question re — Lahore ..	307	ment), the Punjab,
FRANCHISE COMMITTEE'S REPORT—		Circulation for public opinion..	618
Allotment of time for discussion..	1183, 1191	GOLDEN ORNAMENT—
Discussion ..	1311-62	Question re loss of a — on the
FREIGHT—		railway platform, Lahore ..	233
Question re railway — on cotton		GONDAL TRIBE—
and wheat ..	124	Question re — ..	1019
FRONTIER CRIMES REGULATIONS		GONORRHŒA—
COMMITTEE—		Question re syphilis and — ..	1222-23
Question re Report of — ..	153	GOONDAS—
G.		Question re molestation of school
GABBETT, MR. C. C.—		boys by — ..	246
Farewell to Honourable Captain		GORAYA-PHILLAUR PROJECT—
Sir Sikander Hyat Khan ..	1401-02	Question re —, Electricity Branch	709
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1356	GOVERNMENT COLLEGE(S)—
Oath of office ..	1105	Question re —
GARDENS—		Appointments in — ..	77-8
Question re water supply to — ..	70-71	Botany Department, —, Lahore	1224-25
GENERAL ELECTIONS—		Gujrat ..	232
Question re — and political workers	580	Hoshiarpur ..	729-30
GHANISRAM DAS—		Hindu Waterman for —, Gujrat	231-32
Question re Mr. —, B.A., B.T.,		Lahore ..	75-6
Lecturer, Training College,		Muhammad Hussain, Hakim,
Lahore ..	253-54	M., Principal, —, Gujrat ..	233
GIAN CHAND, PANDIT—		Principals of — ..	245
Question re —, Inspector, Indus-	17	Principals of — and rent free trial Co-operative Societies,		residential quarters ..	166
Ambala ..	1019-21	Professors in —, Lahore ..	732
GIRLS—		Siraj-ud-Din, M., —, Lahore ..	178
Question re—		Staff of —, Lahore ..	579-80
Expenditure on education of —	315	Teachers of Mathematics in —	252
In the Girls' High School,	274	GOVERNMENT HIGH SCHOOL(S)—
Rohtak ..		Question re —
In Girls' Normal School, Rohtak	272-73	Ambala division ..	857
Reading in the 5th Class in the		Headmaster, —, Ferozepore ..	176-77
Rohtak district ..	273	Headmasters and second mas-
GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL—		ters in — ..	160
Question re play-ground for girls		Fee concessions in — ..	166
at the —, Moga ..	316-17	GOVERNMENT SERVANTS—
GIRLS' INSTITUTIONS—		Question re—
Question re male doctors in — ..	160-61	Change of religion in entries
GIRLS' SCHOLARSHIPS—		by — ..	406
Question re expenditure on — by		Dismissal or discharge of — in district boards ..	316	Education Department ..	74
GIRLS' SCHOOLS—		Public parties to — ..	126-27
Question re—		GOVERNMENT TECHNICAL SCHOOL—
In the Rohtak district ..	273	Question re—
Under Ferozepore Municipal		Lahore ..	52-60
Committee ..	476	Ram Gopal, teacher, —, Lahore	60
Physical instruction in — and		Toy-making in —, Lahore ..	606-07
colleges ..	315-16	GRADES—
GIRL STUDENTS—		Question re— of examiners of
Question re admission of — in		copying branches in offices of Amritsar Medical School ..	368-69	deputy commissioners ..	305

	PAGES.
GRAM—
Question re—
Damage to oil seeds, — and other crops, Hissar district..	4
Produce of wheat and — ..	243-44
GRANT—
Question re—
From the Road Committee ..	307
Of land in Ludhiana and Hoshiarpur districts ..	400
To District Board, Ferozepore..	137-38
To District Board, Rohtak, towards flood damage ..	40-41
To Forman Christian College, Lahore ..	307
GRANTS-IN-AID—
Question re — to schools ..	45
GRIEVANCES—
Question re Muslim — ..	643
GRINDAL, MR. A. D.—
Oath of office ..	1
GUJRAT COLLEGE—
Question re —
Servants' fee fund — Hostel..	181
Unauthorised occupation of bungalow of Principal, — ..	182
GURBACHAN SINGH, SARDAR SARDAR—
Resolution re concessions to auction purchasers of land in Shahdara tahsil ..	488
GURDWARA SITE—
Question re — in Mandi Baha-ud-Din ..	440
H.
HABIB ULLAH, KHAN BAHADUR SARDAR—
Adjournment motion re occupiers' rate on fodder, ..
Discussion on— ..	213-15,
Leave to move — ..	226-28,
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab, ..	79-80
Insolvency Act, Provincial, relaxation of provisions of, ..	868
Joint-Parliamentary Committee's Report ..	1233-38
HAISAYAT TAX—
Question re—
Or professional tax ..	151-52
Professional tax or — in Ambala ..	455-56
HAKIM—
Question re communal tendencies of Mr. — Principal, Gujrat College ..	181
HARBANS LAL—
Question re —, Clerk, Electricity Branch ..	710
HARPHUL—
Question re murders by — and Mughla ..	433-34
HAVELLIAN PROJECT—
Question re — ..	247-48

	PAGES.
HEAD CLERK(S)—
Question re —
Agricultural Department ..	713
District Board, Jhang ..	475-76
HEAD CONSTABLES OF POLICE—
Question re Indian Christians as — ..	295
HEAD MASTER(S)—
Question re —
And second masters in Government high schools ..	160
Central Model School, Lahore ..	48, 51-52, 423-24
Government High School, Ferozepore ..	176-77
Muslim — for Central Model School, Lahore ..	48
Patto Hira Singh High School ..	175-76
HEAD WARDERS—
Question re —, warders and matrons in the Jail Department and Indian Christians ..	298
HEAD WORKS ENGINEER—
Question re —, Electricity Branch ..	624-25, 626, 642-47
HEALTH SCHOOL—
Question re Punjab —, Lahore..	317
HIGH COURT—
Question re —
Advocates and Pleaders enrolled in the — Lahore ..	469
Appointments in the Lahore — ..	481
Clerks in the — and Indian Christians ..	298
Communalism in Lahore — ..	462-63
Ministerial establishment in the — and the courts subordinate to it ..	966
Printing work of Lahore — ..	1144-45
Service appeals in the Lahore — ..	298
HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS—
Question re —
Girls in the — Rohtak ..	274
Middle end — in the province ..	315
HINDI—
Question re —
And Sanskrit classes in Government High School, Bhakkar ..	163-64
As medium of instruction in normal schools ..	379-80
District Inspector of Schools, Gurgaon District and teaching of — and Urdu in primary schools ..	572-73
HINDUS—
Question re — in Palwal Municipality ..	5
HINDU RAJPUTS—
Question re tahsildar candidates from — of Ambala division ..	1223-24
HINDU STUDENTS' RELIEF SOCIETY—
Question re aid of Ferozepore Municipality to — ..	470

	PAGES.		PAGES.
HOLDING(S) —		IMPERIAL SERVICE(S) —
Question re —		Question re —
Average agricultural — ..	437	Abolition of special pay to
Average — in Lyallpur ..	121	officers of — ..	566
Consolidation of — in Ludhiana		Indians in — ..	26
and Ambala ..	592	Pay of — ..	552
Relief of uneconomic — in		INCOME —
Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana ..	458-59	Question re method of calculating
Sale, mortgage, etc., of agricul-		— in farm accounts ..	566
tural — in Pakpattan and		INDEBTEDNESS —
Dipalpur Tahsils and arrears		Question re — of Sardar Khara-of land revenue ..	561-62	Singh, Divisional Agricultural Uneconomic — and land reve-		Officer ..	129-30
nue rates ..	461-62	INDIANS —
HOLIDAY(S) —		Question re — in imperial ser-
Question re —		vices ..	26
Public — on the birthday of		INDIAN CHRISTIAN(S) —
Lord Mahavira ..	411	Question re —
To prisoners ..	9	Appointment of — as house
HONORARY MAGISTRATES —		surgeons or physicians in
Question re — ..	462	the Mayo Hospital, Lahore ..	1189-90
HOSIERY INSTITUTE —		Civil assistant surgeons and —	294
Question re —, Ludhiana ..	734-35	Clerks in the High Court and —	298
HOSPITAL(S) —		Forest Department subordinate
Question re —		and clerical service and — ..	297
Gohana ..	44-45	Head warders, warders and
Lady Aitchison —, Lahore ..	1185	matrons in the Jail Depart-
HOUSE-BREAKING —		ment and — ..	298
Question re thefts and — in		As clerks in subordinate courts	298
Hissar district ..	550-51	As head constables of police ..	295
HOUSES OF ILLFAME —		As police constables ..	295
Question re — in Muhalla Wake-		As sub-inspectors of police ..	295 field Ganj, Ludhiana ..	621-22	In the Punjab Civil Medical
HOUSE SURGEONS —		Service ..	293-94
Question re appointment of In-		Members of district boards ..	313
dian Christians as — or physi-		Members of municipal commit-
cians in the Mayo Hospital,		tees ..	313
Lahore ..	1189-90	Tahsildars and naib-tahsildars,
HUNGER STRIKE —		etc. ..	297
Question re — in Lahore Central		Patwaris and — ..	296
Jail ..	236	Punjab Engineering Service
HYDRO-ELECTRIC CURRENT —		and — ..	295
Question re charges for lifting		Scholarships for — ..	742
water from wells with — ..	306-07	Subordinate Engineering Ser-
HYDRO-ELECTRIC DEPARTMENT —		vice and — ..	295-96
Question re compensation to Met.		Zilladars and — ..	296
Gita Devi, paid by — ..	249	INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE —
HYDRO-ELECTRIC SCHEME —		Question re —
Question re —		Indians in — ..	21
Mandi — ..	650-51	Officers ..	21
Maximum output of Mandi—	450	Nominations to — ..	22
I.		INDIAN LAW REPORTS —
ISRAHIM KHAN —		Question re editorial staff of —	430
Question re — Zaildar of Mangali	6	INDIAN POLICE —
ICE FACTORY —		Question re — ..	21
Question re Lahore Qutab — ..	233, 985	INDIAN PRESS ACT —
ILAQ(A)S) BEIT —		Question re security of the Question re —		“Ehsan” under the — ..	740-41
Of Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana ..	459-60	INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIE-
Memorial from zamindars of —	719	TIES —
Roads in —, Ludhiana ..	461	Question re Pandit Gian Chand,
IMPERIAL CHEMICAL INDUSTRIES		Inspector —, Ambala ..	1019-21
(INDIA) LIMITED—		INDUSTRIES —
Question re — ..	466-67,	Question re Director of — ..	407-09
700-01,		INSOLVENT(S) —
859		Question re —
		Agriculturists adjudged — ..	604
		Question re — ..	151, 1150

PAGES.	PAGES.
INSPECTION FEE—	IRRIGATION DEPARTMENT—
Question re — of patwaris' records 43	Question re — .. 716-18
INSPECTOR(S)—	Appointments in — .. 305-06
Question re —	Canal Colony of the — at Ferozepore .. 594
Co-operative Societies, Ludhiana .. 589-90	Re-appointment of retrenched clerks in the — .. 607-08
Finger Print Bureau, Phillaur .. 289	Recruitment in — .. 664
Jat — or sub-inspectors of excise, Ambala division .. 29	Statutory Hindu agriculturists in certain cadres of — .. 664
INSPECTOR OF FISHERIES—	IRRIGATION SECRETARIAT—
Question re — .. 264-65, 367, 383, 406-07	Question re Mr. Coyne, Superintendent, — .. 131, 425-27
INSPECTOR OF POLICE—	J.
Question re Hindu Jat as — .. 274	JAIL(S)—
INSPECTOR OF TRAINING INSTITUTIONS—	Question re —
Question re — .. 481-82	Detenues in the Punjab — .. 237
INSPECTOR-GENERAL, CIVIL HOSPITALS—	Lady non-official visitors of — .. 1143-44
Question re establishment in the office, Punjab, and the civil surgeons in the Punjab .. 1150	Literacy among prisoners in Punjab — .. 467
INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF POLICE—	Non-official visitors of — .. 1141-43
Question re establishment in the office of the — Punjab .. 285-88	Sikh assistant superintendents of — .. 731
INSURANCE COMPANIES—	Sikh deputy superintendents of — .. 730
Question re — .. 1146, 1146-47	JAIL DEPARTMENT—
Question re directors of — .. 1146	Question re head warders, warders and matrons in the — and Indian Christians .. 298
INTERMEDIATE COLLEGE—	JAINS—
Question re —	Question re — .. 742
Government —, Hoshiarpur .. 254-55	JANMEJA SINGH, SARDAR RAHADUR
Gujrat, .. 76-77	CAPTAIN SARDAR—
Principal of Government —, Paarur .. 255	Oath of office .. 1139
INTOXICANTS—	JAT—
Resolution re propaganda against use of alcohol and other — .. 496-502	Question re — inspectors or sub-inspectors of excise, Ambala division .. 29
INTOXICATION—	JHANDU MAL—
Question re Books on — suitable for use in schools .. 311	Question re Chaudhri —, District Inspector of Schools .. 177
INUNDATION CANALS—	JIRGA SYSTEM—
Question re modifications in occupiers' rate to — Dipalpur and Pakpattan Tahsils .. 377	Question re — in the Mianwali district .. 738-39
INVIGILATORS—	JOGENDRA SINGH, HONOURABLE SARDAR SIR—
Question re vernacular mistresses employed as — .. 291	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab, .. 959-61
IRRIGATION(S)—	Co-operative Banks and Societies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards .. 1400-01
Question re —	Farewell to Honourable Captain Sir Sikandar Hyat Khan .. 1277-78
In Jandiala division .. 242	Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report .. 3
In the neighbourhood of the Canal Colony at Ferozepore .. 306	Reference to late Mr. Owen Roberts .. 501-02
Unauthorized — .. 66-7	Resolution re propaganda against use of alcohol and other intoxicants .. 1183, 1190
Water channels for — .. 119-20, 566	Discussion of — .. 1228-1307
IRRIGATION BRANCH—	Question re opinion on — .. 1310-11
Question re —
Clerical and other establishments, — .. 296-97
Engineering subordinates in the — .. 291-93
Subordinates in — .. 1219
Travelling allowances of engineering subordinates in the — .. 293

	PAGES.		PAGES.
JOINT STOCK COMPANIES—		LARK CHAND MEHRA, RAI SAHIB
Question re companies registered		LALA— conold. with the Registrar of — ..	412-13	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
JOURNALS—		Punjab— conold.
Question re — and newspapers		Particulars in application, state-
published in the Punjab ..	161	ment of —	1016
JUDGES—		Passing of —	1210
Question re difficulties of — in		LARB SINGH, MR.—
India	111	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
JUDICIAL BRANCH—		Punjab—
Question re — of the Punjab Civil		Appeal against orders of con-
Service	429	ciliation boards ..	1073-75
JUMNA RIVER—		Applications, interval be-
Question re diluviation of land by		tween first and second ..	1044
— in Karnal district ..	1217	Application, making of a
JUSTICE—		second to conciliation
Question re interference in the		board	1193 administration of — ..	112	Conciliation board, constitution of —	1014
K.		Conciliation board, jurisdic-
KAHAN SINGH—		tion of —	1000-01
Question re Chaudhri —, Punjab		Conciliation board, setting
Veterinary Service ..	266, 269-70	up of —	998-99
KANUNGOS—		Damdupat	1168-70
Question re —		Date on which the Bill is to Indian Christian tahsildars		come into force ..	912-13
and naib-tahsildars, etc. ..	297	Debtor, definition of — ..	1159
Recruitment of — ..	609	Debt, recovery of — in case
Sikh patwaris and — in Ludhi-		debtor fails to pay in ac-ana district	68-69	cordance with agreement ..	1061-62,
KARAMAT, MR. U.—			1066-67
Question re — Lecturer, Islamia		Decree for debt incurred after College, Lahore	178	agreement or in respect of
KHADDAK BRANCH—		which certificate has been
Question re — of the Pakpattan		granted, execution of — ..	1060-61
Canal	172, 231	Deposit of money in court
KHARABA—		by debtor	1109
Question re— ..	39-40, 111	Deposit of money by debtor
Question re — in Jandiala divi-		along with application ..	1017-18,
sion	242-43		1026
KHARAK SINGH, SAEDAR—		Fair offer, how determined
Question re —, Divisional Agricul-		Interest, exclusion of certain tural Officer	129-30, 425	period for counting — ..	1091
KHARIF—		Legal practitioner or agent,
Question re — crops ..	38-39	appearance of, before con-
KHUD KASHI—		ciliation board ..	1082-83
Question re area under — in Lyall-		Motion for re-circulation ..	785-91
pur district	565	Notice, issue of — to credi-
KIDAR NATH, DR.—		tors	1031
Question re Loss of pistol belong-		Reference to select committee
ing to —, Simla	713	Secured loans, realisation of—
KISHAN LAL—		from security	1042-48
Question re dismissal of — Naib-		LADY AITCHISON HOSPITAL—
Sharof Sadar, Hissar ..	378	Question re —, Lahore ..	1186
		LAMBARDAR(S)—
L.		Question re —
LARB CHAND MEHRA, RAI SAHIB		Muhammad Khan Khattar, —
LALA—		of Ratwal	442
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the		Nur Muhammad — of Chak No.
Punjab,		174, village Muhammadpura
Application of — to loans ad-			156-58,
vanced for trade or industry			630-62,
Debtor, definition of — ..	979, 1373		722-24
Deposit of money in courts by		Ram Gopal, a — of Naraingarh
debtors	1108	Suspension or dismissal of zail-
Motion for re-circulation ..	764-70	dars, sufedposhes and — ..	275
		Taqavi loan to Ahmad Hussain
		—, Zuhawan, Ludhiana dist-
		trict	521

	PAGES.		PAGES.
LAND(S)—		LAND REVENUE—concl'd.—
Question re —		Question re—concl'd.—
Alienation of agricultural — ..	71-2, 598-99	Arrears in Pakpattan and Dipalpur tahsils ..	562-63
Alienation of agricultural — in Chakwal ..	441-42	In Hissar district ..	4
Alienation of agricultural — in Pind Dadan Khan Tahsil ..	656-57, 1021	Reduction of — ..	124, 1309
Alienation of agriculturist — ..	133-34, 436, 438-39, 695	Reduction of abiana and — ..	124
Alienation of — to non-agriculturists ..	148	Sale, mortgage etc. of agricultural holdings in Pakpattan and Dipalpur tahsils and arrear of — ..	561-62
Auction of — in Chak No. 76, Gugera Branch ..	122	Suspension of — in Rohtak, Hissar, Gurgaon and Karnal districts ..	41-43
Escheat of — ..	72	Uneconomic holdings and — rates ..	461-62
Exchange of proprietary — for crown waste — ..	563-64	LAND REVENUE DEMAND.—
Belonging to agricultural tribes in Pind Dadan Khan ..	442-43	Question re cut motion regarding — ..	239
Lease of a plot of — in Kasur ..	265	LAW COLLEGE—
Nazul — in village Bhabra, tahsil Lahore ..	140-46	Question re University —, Lahore ..	428
Nazul — near Town Hall, Kasur ..	454	LAW EXAMINATIONS—
Price and rent of agricultural — ..	121-22	Question re examiners for — ..	428
Sale of agricultural — in Gurjat ..	14-19, 574	LAW REPORT(S)—
Sale of agricultural — in village Kandhanwala, Gujrat district ..	574-75	Question re editorial staff of the Indian — ..	430
Sale of ancestral agricultural — in Kotli Akhawan ..	407	LAWYERS—
Sale of Government — in Lower Bari Colony ..	13-14	Question re — ..	429-30
Total acreage of agricultural — ..	437-38	LAY-OUT PLANS—
Usufructuary mortgage of — in Gujrat district ..	1151	Question re — in Lahore ..	597
Resolution re concessions to auction purchasers of — in Shahdra tahsil ..	488-96	LEAKAGE OF INFORMATION—
LANDED-PROPRIETORS—		Question re inquiry into the — re Government departments to Press ..	446
Question re agriculturists, — and money-lenders ..	574	LEASE—
LAND GRANTS—		Question re — of a plot of land in Kasur ..	265
Question re — in Ludhiana and Hoshiarpur districts ..	460	LEAVE ALLOWANCE(S)—
LAND OWNERS—		To discharged panchayat officers ..	402
Question re —		LEAVE RULES—
As criminal tribes in Rohtak district ..	35-36	Question re — ..	27, 696
Of village Dudar ..	258	LECTURER—
LAND PLANS—		Question re Mr. U. Karamat — Ialamsia College, Lahore ..	178
Question re — ..	599	LEGAL ADVISERS—
LAND RECORDS—		Question re allowances to the — of the Lahore Municipality ..	149
Question re buildings for preserving — ..	312	LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL—
LAND REVENUE—		Question re — elections ..	603
Question re —		LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY—
Acreage of agricultural land, — and abiana ..	578-79	Question re —
Concessions in — ..	653	Suspension of civil disobedience and removal of ban on candidates for — ..	123
Gross and net incomes from agriculture and — and abiana ..	573-74	Removal of disqualification for election to — ..	444-45
Issue of coercive processes for recovery of — arrears in Lyallpur district ..	564-65	LEH—
Question re — ..	654-55	Question re Pokli and — ..	318
		LEKHWATI JAIN, SHRIMATI—
		Bill Anti-Beggary, the Punjab — Introduction ..	610-11
		Circulation for public opinion ..	613

PAGES.	PAGES.
LEHWATI JAIN, SHRIMATI— concl. —	Loss—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—	Question re —
Agreement, disregard of — by debtors ..	Of files in Sadhora Municipal Committee .. 372
Application of — to loans advanced for trade or industry ..	Of golden ornament on the railway platform, Lahore .. 233
Motion for re-circulation ..	LOTHIAN COMMITTEE—
Reference to select committee ..	Question re — Report .. 1188
Passing of — ..	LOWER BARI DOAB COLONY—
Franchise Committee's Report ..	Question re —
Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report ..	Auction purchasers on — .. 711-12
	Sale of Government lands in — .. 13-14
LIBRARY—	LOWER JHELUM CANAL—
Question re Mahesh Chand Memorial — Ferozepore ..	Question re villages irrigated by — .. 1139
	LOWER MIDDLE SCHOOL—
LICENCE(S)—	Question re Vernacular —, Burya .. 10-11
Question re —	LOW PLACES—
On Pathankot-Dharmasala and Baijnath roads and Kangra Motor Union ..	Question re — in Lahore .. 595-96
Revolver — to Lala Arjan Deva ..	M.
	MACFARLANE, MR. D.—
LINE SUPERINTENDENT(S)—	Oath of office .. 365
Question re —	MAGISTRATE(S)—
Electricity Branch .. 627, 628, 629-31, 708-09	Question re —
Malik Lachhman Dass —, Electricity Branch .. 627-28	Complaints in courts of —, 1st class, Hoshiarpur .. 735-36
	1st class, in the Hoshiarpur district .. 703
LITERACY—	In Ambala city .. 162-63
Question re — among prisoners in Punjab Jails ..	MAHABIRDAL VOLUNTEERS—
	Question re carrying of lathi by —, Rawalpindi City .. 1186
LL. B. CLASS—	MALAK, MR. MUHAMMAD DIN—
Question re charges for provisional certificates of — students ..	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
	Motion for re-circulation .. 83-84
LOANS—	Reference to select committee .. 84-87
Question re co-operative — to agriculturists ..	MALIAHS—
	Question re — .. 1022
LOCAL BODIES—	MALIKANA—
Question re —	Question re — .. 43
Budgets of — ..	Question re—in the Pir Mahal Extensions .. 35,484, 487
Realisation of dues by — ..	MAMRAJ SINGH CHOHAN, KANWAR—
	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
LOCAL MANAGER(S)—	Appeal against orders of conciliation boards .. 1072-73
Question re —	Co-operative banks and societies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards .. 957-59
A class — in the Electricity Branch ..	Interest, excessive rate of — definition .. 1367
Appointment of Mr. Sibon as — in Electricity Branch ..	Interest, exclusion of certain period for counting — .. 1090-91
Electricity Branch ..	Limitation of application of — to loans .. 1100-01
	Motion for re-circulation .. 773-77
LOCAL RATES—	Passing of — .. 1205-07
Question re revenue and — suspended in Gurgaon district ..	Reference to select committee .. 193-99
LOBBIES—
Question re —
Irregularities by drivers of motor — in Sialkot district ..
For hire ..
Between Hoshiarpur and Bhawan and Una ..
Between Narowal and Zafarwal ..
Rate for — ..
Use of motor — by police officials ..

	PAGES.		PAGES.
MANRAJ SINGH CHOHAN, KANWAR—		MEDICAL SELECTION BOARD—
condid. —		Question re —	290-91
Bill, Village Panchayat (Amend-		MEDICAL SERVICE—
ment) the Punjab—		Question re Hindu agriculturists
Introduction ..	612-13	candidates for the Punjab Civil	465-66
Circulation for public opinion	617-18	— ..
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1311-14	MEMORIAL—
Supplementary demands—		Question re — from zamindars of
Rules under Wild Birds and		ilaga best ..	719
Wild Animals Protection		MIDDLE SCHOOLS FOR GIRLS—
Act ..	398-99	Question re — in the province ..	315
Rural reconstruction ..	399	MILES IRVING, HONOURABLE MR.—
MARSDEN, MR. P.—		Adjournment motion re occupiers'
Oath of office ..	855	rate on fodder ..	225-26,
MARTIAL LAW PRISONER(S)—			228
Question re —		Reference to late Mr. Owen
Din Muhammad, a — ..	246,	Roberts ..	1
	659	Statement re retrenchment of one
Muhammadan — ..	247	chief engineer ..	183-84
MATHEMATICS—		MILITARY TRIBES—
Question re teachers of — in Gov-		Question re — and non-military ernment Colleges ..	252	tribes in the Punjab ..	167
MATRICULATION CANDIDATES—		MINISTERIAL ESTABLISHMENT—
Question re admission of plucked		Question re — in the High Court — into schools ..	370	and the courts subordinate to
MATRONS—		it ..	668
Question re head warders, war-		MOLASSES—
ders and — in the Jail Depart-		Question re — on roads ..	601
ment and Indian Christians ..	298	MOLESTATION—
MAYADAS, MR. E.—		Question re — of school boys by
Adjournment motion re occupiers'		goondas ..	246
rate on fodder ..	219	MONEY-LENDERS—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the		Question re —
Punjab—		Agriculturists, landed proprie-
Motion for re-circulation ..	801-03	tors and — ..	574
Passing of — ..	1215-16	Fraudulent devices by — ..	1218-19
Farwel to Honourable Captain		And agriculturists in the Punjab	439
Sir Sikander Hyat Khan ..	1402	Pathan — ..	604
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1328-31	MONOPOLY—
Joint Parliamentary Committee's		Question re — for plying motor
Report ..	1290-95	lorries on hire ..	236
Reference to late Mr. Owen Ro-		MORTGAGE—berts ..	2	Question re usufructuary — of
Resolution re propaganda against		land in Gujrat district ..	1161
use of alcohol and other intoxi-		MORTGAGE BANKS—
cants ..	496-99	Question re debtors of — in Ho-
MAYO HOSPITAL—		shiarpur and Ludhiana ..	459
Question re —		MESQUITOES—
Appointment of Indian Chris-		Question re — in Lahore ..	595,
tians as house surgeons or			596-97
physicians in the — Lahore	1189-90	MOTION—
Superintendent, Dispensary, —		For adjournment re appointment
Lahore ..	36	of Revenue Member, leave
MEDALS—		not sought ..	183
Question re — to police officers ..	602	For adjournment re occupiers'
MEDICAL COLLEGE—		rate on fodder—
Question re Aligarh University		Leave to move ..	79-80
students and admission to —,		Discussion on — ..	213-29
Lahore ..	522	MOTOR BUS—
MEDICAL SCHOOL—		Question re — service from Simla
Question re —		to Mashobra ..	241-42
Admission of girl students in		MOTOR CARS—
—Amritsar ..	368-69	Question re tax on private — ..	308
Amritsar — ..	555-56
	620-21

	PAGES.
MOTOR LOBBIES—
Question re —
Irregularities by drivers of —	1222
Monopoly for plying — on hire	236
Between Hoshiarpur and Bhawan and Una ..	240
Between Narowal and Zafarwal ..	986
For hire ..	606
Rates for — ..	1186-87
Use of — by police officials ..	1221
MOTOR SERVICE—
Question re — in Kangra District	535
MOTOR UNION—
Question re licences on Pathankot-Dharamsala and Baijnath roads and Kangra — ..	250
MOTOR VEHICLE(S)—
Question re — stand, Kalka ..	599-600
MUBARAK ALI SHAH, SAYAD—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Motion for re-circulation ..	803-07
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1333-37
MUGHLA—
Question re —
Arrest of — ..	726-27, 728
Murders committed by Harphul and — ..	483-34
Trial of — ..	727
MUHAMMAD ABDUL RAHMAN KHAN, CHAUDHRI—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Appeal against orders of conciliation boards ..	1071-72
Date on which to come into force ..	913-14
Loans to literate debtors, exemption of— from penalty clause ..	1395-96
MUHAMMAD AMIN KHAN, KHAN BAHADUR MALIK—
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1355
MUHAMMAD HAYAT QURESHI, KHAN BAHADUR NAWAB—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Agreement, disregard of — by debtors ..	1069
Conciliation board, jurisdiction of — ..	999, 1012
Proceedings, duration of — before conciliation boards and lapse of applications ..	1087
Reference to late Mr. Owen Roberts ..	2
MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN, CHAUDHRI—
Oath of office ..	865
MUHAMMAD JAMAL KHAN LEGHARI, KHAN BAHADUR NAWAB—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Motion for re-circulation ..	770-73
MUHAMMAD KHAN KHATTAR—
Question re —, Lambardar of Ratwal ..	442

	PAGES.
MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN HAKIM—
Question re M. — Principal, Gujrat College ..	233
MUHAMMAD SADIQ, SHAIKH—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Interest, excessive rate of, definition of — ..	884-87
Motion for re-circulation ..	791-97
Reference to select committee ..	210-13
Supplementary demands—
Rural reconstruction ..	396-97
MUNYAL BRAHMANS—
Question re notification of — of Lyallpur district as agriculturists ..	563
MUKERJEE, RAI BAHADUR MR. P.—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Application of — to loans advanced for trade or industry ..	935
Debtor, definition of — ..	978
Insolvency Act, Provincial, relaxation of the provisions of — ..	866
Interest, excessive rate of — definition of — ..	883-84
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1344-49
Reference to late Mr. Owen Roberts ..	3
MUMTAZ BANK—
Question re — Limited ..	1153
MUNICIPAL BYE-LAWS—
Question re —, Simla ..	421
MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER—
Question re Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muhammad, —, Ludhiana ..	443
MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE(S)—
Question re—
Allowances in Lahore — ..	148-49
Allowances to the legal advisers of the Lahore — ..	149
Bye-laws framed by — of Jagraon ..	164-65
Communal representation in — Karnal ..	581
Complaint against Khan Sahib Dr. Nur Muhammad of Ludhiana — ..	706-08
Controversy between Lahore Electric Supply Company and Lahore — ..	238
Election to — Sargodha ..	275-76
Fazal Elahi, Qurban as candidate for the Lahore — ..	619
Girls' schools under — Ferozepore ..	470
Indian Christian members of — ..	313
Loss of file in Sadhora — ..	372
Burya ..	9-10
Hoshiarpur ..	555
Of Kasur ..	261-62
Kasur — and salaries of primary school teachers ..	263
Lahore — ..	129

	PAGES.
MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE(S) — conold —
Question re — conold —
Ludhiana —	1187-88
Lyallpur —	1236-26
Panipat —	567-58
Nomination of a lady to the	559
Sachora —	528-35
Nominations to Nafowal —	372-73
Representation of Muslims in	169-69
Campbellpore —	168
Sanitary inspector of —, Fe-
rozepore —	470-71
Schools under —, Taunsa —	523
Separate or joint elotrates in —	151
Shops leased by the —, Sialkot	165
Terminal tax rates in —, Kasur	471
MUNICIPALITY(IES) —
Question re —
Aid by Ferozepore — to Hindu
Students' Relief Society —	470
Depressed class members in — and district boards —	167
Enfranchising women in —	161-62
Executive Officer, Ludhiana —	443-44
And their obligations —	308
Karnal —	449
Licensing of premises in Sialkot
—	166
Representation of Balmiki and Ad-Dharam communities in —	67
Sonepat —	434-35
MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES —
Question re —, Simla —	420
MUNICIPAL ENGINEER —
Question re —, Lyallpur —	557
MUNICIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICERS —
Question re —	37, 733-34
MURDER(S) —
Question re —
By Harphul and Mughla —	433-34
Of a man killed while giving chase to dacoits in Rohtak
district —	275
Of Munshi Abdullah Khan, Sub-
Inspector of Police, Rohtak	134-35
Woman of village Pakasma in Rohtak district killed by dacoits —	272
MURPHY, MR. A. —
Oath of office —	1, 1185
MUSHTAQ AHMAD GUERMANI, KHAN
BAHADUR MIAN —
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab —
Interest, excessive rate of,
definition —	887-90
Franchise Committee's Report..	1923-25
MUSLIMS —
Question re —
Educational and economic conditions of — of Mianwali
and Muzaffargarh districts —	521
Injustice to —	641
In Electricity Branch —	642-43
Representation of — in Camp-
bellpore Municipal Committee	168

	PAGES.
MUSLIMS GIRLS —
Question re stipends to —	183
MUSLIM GRIEVANCES —
Question re —	643
MUSLIM HEADMASTER —
Question re — for Central Model
School, Lahore —	48
MUSLIM STUDENTS —
Question re — in Central Model
School, Lahore —	46
MUSLIM TEACHERS —
Question re — of English —	253
MUSLIMS —
Question re —, Upper Chenab
Circle —	718
MUNSHI RAM JAIN —
Questio. re passport to Japan
for —	11
MUZAFFAR KHAN, KHAN BAHADUR
NAWAB —
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1368-62
Oath of office —	1, 1185
N.
NAIB SHAHEAF SADAR —
Question re dismissal of Kishan
Lal, —, Hissar —	378
NAIB-TAHSILDARS —
Question re —
Indian Christians and —	297
Candidates in Jullundur division —	539
Pay and allowances of zilladars,
— and overseers —	115-17
Qualifications for —	609
Recruitment of —	608-09
Tahsildars and — belonging to
Simla district —	1223
NAIS —
Question re —	735
NAL-CHAH —
Question re — in Sonepat and
Jhajjar tahsils —	31, 698
NARENDRA NATH, DIWAN BAHADUR
RAJA —
Adjournment motion re occupiers'
rate on fodder —	218-19
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
Punjab —
Amicable settlement between
debtors and creditors —	1033-34
Amicable settlement, agreement of, between debtor
and creditor, execution of,	1039-40,
	1042
Applications, dismissal of, ..	1027
Arrest for default in payment of decreed money —	1380
Conciliation board, jurisdic-
tion of, —	1002-03
Debts, grant of certificates by conciliation board in respect
of, —	1047-48
Debtor, definition of, ..	1119-21
Fair offer, definition of —	1052-56
False amounts entered in documents, punishment for,	1389-90

PAGES.	PAGES.
NARENDRA NATH, DIWAN BAHADUR
R. JA— concl'd. —
Bill Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab— concl'd. — Fictitious sum, addition of, to the sum actually advanced,	1174
penalty for, ..
Interest, excessive rate of,	871-72
definition ..
Loans secured by documents registered under the Indian Registration Act, exemption of, from penalty clauses ..	1393
Motion for re-circulation ..	671-73
Pending suite, application to,
of, ..	918
Reference to select committee	318-23
Farewel to .. Honourable
Capatin Sir Sikander Hyat
Khan ..	1398-99
Reference to late Mr. Owen
Roberts ..	2
Reference to late Chaudhri
Shah Muhammad ..	384
NAUJAWAN MAZDUR—
Question re proscription of the —,
Amritsar ..	374
NAZUL LAND—
Question re—
In village Bhabra, tahsil Lahore	140-46
Near Town Hall, Kasur ..	454
Situate in Kasur, near Singh
Sabha ..	261
NEWSPAPERS—
Question re—
Daily — in the province ..	446-48
Journals and — published in
the Punjab ..	161
In the Punjab ..	236-37
Objectionable poem in daily
Siyasat ..	455
NOMINATION(S)—
Question re—
Of a lady to the Sadhaura Municipal Committee ..	372-73
To Indian Civil Service ..	22
To Narowal Municipal Commi-
tee ..	168-69
To services ..	541-44
NON-AGRICULTURIST(S)—
Question re—
Alienation of land to — ..	1022, 1218
Alienation of land to — in Mian-wali and Campbellpur districts	1022
NON-MILITARY —
Question re Military and — tribes
in the Punjab ..	167
NON-OFFICIAL VISITORS—
Question re—
Of jails ..	1141-43
Lady — of jails ..	1143-44
NON-PERENNIAL CHANNELS—
Question re — of Dipalpur and Pakpattan tahsils and relief in water rates ..	560-61
NON-TECHNICAL OFFICERS—
Question re technical departments and — ..	266-68,
	270-71
NON-VOTED EXPENDITURE—
Question re— ..	133
NUR MUHAMMAD, KHAN SANIB, DR.—
Question re —, Municipal Commissioner, Ludhiana ..	443
NORMAL SCHOOLS—
Question re—
Communal representation in Government — ..	370
Hindi as medium of instruction
in — ..	379-80
Hindu students in — ..	379
NORMAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS—
Question re girls in —, Rohtak ..	272-73, 274
NOTARIES PUBLIC—
Question re — ..	1149
NOTICE—
Question re service of — on Fazal
Ilahi, Qurban, under section 3 of the Punjab Criminal Law
(Amendment) Act ..	302
NUR ELAHI, KHAN BAHADUR, SHAIKH—
Oath of office ..	1019
Question re—
Assistant Director of Public Instruction ..	179
Books of — ..	640
Policy of — in the Education
Department ..	277-83
NUR MUHAMMAD—
Question re —, lambardar of chak
No. 174, village Muhammad-
pura ..	156-58,
	660, 661,
	662, 722-
	24
NUR MUHAMMAD, KHAN SANIB, DR.—
Question re complaint against — of Ludhiana Municipal Commi-
tee ..	706-08
NURULLAH, MIAN—
Adjournment motion re occupiers'
rate on fodder ..	217-18
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
Punjab—
Co-operative banks and societies, exemption of from jurisdiction of conciliation
boards ..	968-69
Fictitious sums, addition of,
to the sums actually advanced, penalty for, ..	1171-72
Interest, excessive rate of,
definition ..	872-73
Limitation, extension of
period of, ..	1093
Motion for recirculation ..	798-801
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1320-23
Joint Parliamentary Committee's
Report ..	1266-67
O.
OATH OF OFFICE—
Anderson, Mr. J. D. ..	1
Askwith, Mr. A. V. ..	1, 1019,
	1309
Beant Singh, Sardar Sahib Sardar	855

PAGES.	PAGES.
OATH OF OFFICE—condid.—	PARDIT, MR. NANAK CHAND—
Bourne, Mr. F. C. .. 365	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
Dodd, Mr. R. J. S. .. 1185	Punjab—
Garbett, Mr. C. C. .. 1105	Appeal against orders of con-
Grindal, Mr. A. D. .. 1	ciliation boards .. 1078-80
Janmeja Singh, Sardar Bahadur	Application of, to loans ad-
Captain Sardar .. 1139	vanced for trade and indus-
Macfarlane, Mr. D. .. 365	tries .. 924-28
Marsden, Mr. P. .. 855	Conciliation boards, jurisdic-
Muhammad Husain, Chaudhri .. 855	tion of, .. 1003-05
Murphy, Mr. A. .. 1, 1185	Co-operative banks and socie-
Musaffar Khan, Khan Bahadur	ties, exemption of, from
Nawab .. 1, 1135	jurisdiction of conciliation
Nur Elahi, Khan Bahadur Shaikh .. 1019	boards .. 966-68
Pearson, Mr. H. J. .. 1309	Debtor, definition of, .. 981-82
Puckle, Mr. F. H. .. 1063, 1217	Fictitious sum, addition of,
Roberts, Prof. W. .. 365	to sums actually advanced,
Sanderson, Mr. R. .. 1103, 1217	penalty for, .. 1173-74
Umar Hayat, Chaudhri .. 1	Loans to literate debtors,
Wace, Mr. F. B. .. 1, 405	exemption of, from penalty
Zaman Mehdi Khan, Khan Baha-	clause .. 1394-95
dur Malik .. 365	Motion for re-circulation .. 682-92,
OCCUPIERS' RATE—	747-55
Adjournment motion re — on	Passing of, .. 1196-1204
fodder—	Reference to select committee .. 351-59
Leave to move, .. 79-80	Bill, Suppression of Immoral
Discussion on, .. 213-29	Traffic, the Punjab—
Question re—	Introduction .. 613
Modifications in — to inunda-	Circulation for public opinion .. 614-15
tion Canals, Dipalpur and	Franchise Committee's Report .. 1357-58
Pakpattan tahsils .. 377	Joint Parliamentary Committee's
On Sutlej Valley Project Canals .. 955	Report .. 1253-66
OFFENCE(S)—	Supplementary Demands—
Question re — .. 726	Rural reconstruction .. 399-400
OFFICIALS—	PARTIES—
Question re — punished by S.	Question re public — to public
Sewaram Singh .. 299	servants .. 120-27
OFFICIAL CHAIRMEN—	PASSPORT—
Question re powers of — of district	Question re — to Japan for Munshi boards .. 376	Ram, Jain .. 11
OFFICIAL REMOIVERS—	PATIENTS—
Question re — .. 694	Question re religion of — in civil
Question re — in bankruptcy .. 1021	dispensaries .. 453
OIL-SHEDS—	PATWARIS—
Question re damage to —, gram	Question re—
and other crops, Hissar District .. 4	Indian Christian tahsildars,
ORDERLIES—	naib-tahsildars, — etc. .. 297
Question re — of officers .. 568	Inspection fee of — records .. 43
OVERDRAFT—	And Indian Christians .. 296
Question re — from the Central	In tahsil Dasuya .. 234, 621
Co-operative Bank, Ferozepore .. 609	Provident Fund Scheme for —
OVERSEER(S)—	Retirement of canal — .. 716
Question re—	Sikh—and kanungos in Ludh-
Pay and allowances of zilladars,	iana district .. 68-69
naib-tahsildars and — .. 115-17	PAY—
Reduction of a Muslim —, Elec-	Question re—
tricity Branch .. 625	And allowances of zilladars,
Retrenched Canal — .. 1187	naib-tahsildars and overseers .. 115-17
OWEN ROBERTS, MR.—	Of Imperial services .. 552
Reference to late — .. 1	Special — and allowances .. 22
P.	Revision of scale of — .. 27
PAKPATHAN CANAL—	Of sub-assistant surgeons .. 118
Question re Khadder Branch of	Of sub-inspectors of police .. 118-19
the — .. 173, 231	PEARSON, MR. H. J.—
PANCHAYAT OFFICERS—	Oath of office .. 1309
Leave allowances to discharged, .. 402	PERMISSION—
	Question re — to write books .. 290

PAGES.	PAGES.
PHYSICAL INSTRUCTION—	POLICE SERVICE—
Question re—	Question re Aggarwals in .. 161
In girls' schools and colleges .. 315-16	POLIOY—
Of instructresses .. 316	Question re — in the Education .. 277-83
PHYSICIANS—	POLITICAL OFFENDERS—
Question re appointment of Indian ..	Question re — .. 237
Christians as house-surgeons or .. 1189-90	POLITICAL PRISONERS—
— in the Mayo Hospital, Lahore ..	Question re — .. 1310
PIR MAHAL—	POLITICAL WORKER(S)—
Question re—	Question re—
Malikana in — extension .. 35, 484	Description of certain prisoners .. 581-82
Sites for — Mandi.. .. 35	as "Babar Akalis" or — .. 560
PISTOL—	General elections and — .. 555
Question re loss of — belonging to .. 713-14	Harassment of — by police ..
Dr. Kidar Nath, Simla ..	POPULATION—
PLANS—	Question re increase in the — of .. 305
Question re—	Moga and Abohar ..
Land — .. 599	POSTS—
Lay-out — in Lahore .. 597	Question re—
PLAY-GROUND(S)—	Filling up of — in the Electricity .. 633
Question re — for girls at the .. 316-17	Branch ..
Girls High School, Moga .. 316	Held by Hindus in Mianwali .. 739
In high schools for girls ..	POULTRY SCHOOL —
PLEADERS—	Question re Government — .. 462
Question re advocates and — en- .. 469	PRESIDENT, MR.—
rolled in the Lahore High Court ..	Attacking the Chair .. 1070
POHLL—	Bill, desirability of taking up for .. 862-65
Question re — and Leh .. 318	consideration original clauses ..
POLICE—	with correlative new clauses and .. 1182
Question re—	verbal amendments together ..
Additional — in Rohtak dis- .. 727-28	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the .. 1182
trict .. 274-75	Punjab, reference to drafting ..
Deputy Superintendent of — .. 555	committee ..
Harassment of political wor- .. 21	Farewell to Honourable Captain .. 1402
kers by — .. 118-19	Sir Sikander Hyat Khan ..
Indian — .. 237	Consultation with Council re desirability of allowing amend- .. 1159-60
Persons shadowed by the — .. 154-56	ments at short notice, discus- ..
Punitive — post in Chak 174, .. 20	sion re, ..
Muhammadpura .. 1221	Owen Roberts, reference to late .. 3
Sub-Inspector of —, Indari .. 554	Mr., ..
Use of motor lorries by — offi- .. 668-71	cial ..
cials .. 384	Parliamentary practice, adoption .. 1137
Sub-inspector of —, Hansi and .. 222, 226	of, in case of a Bill substantially ..
his staff .. 664	altered by select committee ..
POLICE CONSTABLE(S)—	Shah Muhammad, Chaudhri, re- .. 384
Question re—	ference to late, ..
Indian Christians as — .. 295	Speech, right of, of members .. 1137
Kundan .. 434	Withdrawal order against Chaudh- .. 222, 226
Recruitment of — from Rohtak .. 567-68	ri Allah Dad Khan for disorderly ..
POLICE DEPARTMENT—	conduct, and forgiveness ..
Question re—	PRESS—
Prosecuting branch — .. 665	Question re inquiry into the leak- .. 446
Recruitment in — .. 607	age of information re Govern- ..
Statutory Hindu agriculturists .. 664	ment departments to — ..
in certain cadres of — ..	PRICE—
POLICE LINES—	Question re — and rent of agricul- .. 121-22
Question re dust nuisance in —, .. 985	tural land ..
Qilla Gujar Singh ..	PRIMARY EDUCATION—
POLICE OFFICERS—	Question re Committee to over- .. 167
Question re—	haul — ..
Complaints against — .. 706	PRIMARY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS—
Deaths of — while discharging .. 603	Question re —, Ferozepore .. 314
duty .. 602	PRIMARY SCHOOL TEACHERS—
Medals to — ..	Question re Municipal Committee, .. 263
Kasur and salaries of the — ..	Kasur and salaries of the — ..

	PAGES.		PAGES.
PRINCIPAL(S)—		PROSCRIPTION—
Question re—		Question re — of Naujawan Mar-
Communal tendencies of Mr.		dur, Amritsar	374
Hakim, —, Gujrat College ..	181	PROVIDENT FUND—
Of Government colleges ..	265	Question re — scheme for pat-
Of Government colleges and		wards	312
rent free residential quarters	166	PROVINCIAL EDUCATIONAL SERVICE—
Of Government Intermediate		Question re statutory Hindu agri-
College, Paatur ..	255	culturists in — ..	662
Unauthorised occupation of		PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE—
bungalow of —, Gujrat Col-		Report of the, on the appropria-
lege	162	tion accounts	404
PRINTING—		PUBLIC PARTIES—
Question re — work of Lahore		Question re — to Government ser-
High Court	1144-45	vants	126-27
PRISONER(S)—		PUBLIC PROSECUTOR(S)—
Question re—		Question re Hindu agriculturists
B Class —	699-700	as —	728
Chander Kishore, a civil — of		Question re —	1149
1929	700	Question re —
Chaudhri Sher Jung, —, Multan		Of Gujrat	440
Central Jail	284, 620	Special —, Sialkot ..	20
Civil —	419	PUBLIC SERVANTS—
Civil disobedience — ..	122-23	Question re salary bill of — ..	20-21
1914-15 conspiracy — ..	247	PUBLIC SERVICES—
Description of certain — as		Question re—
'Bashar Akalis' or 'Political		Agriculturists in — ..	299-301
Worker'	581-82	Rajputs in —	301
Holidays to —	9	PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT—
Literacy among — in Punjab		Question re —	22-26
jails	457	PUBLICATIONS—
Martial law —	659	Question re — of Text Book Com-
Political —	1310	mittee	290
Supply of articles to civil — ..	417-19	PUCKLE, Mr. F. H.—
PRIVATE COLLEGES—		Oath of office	1063, 1217
Question re boarding-houses of		PUNISHMENT —
aided —	315	Question re—
PRIVATE TUTORING—		Officials punished by S. Sewaram
Question re—	46-47	Singh	299
Question re unauthorised — by		PUNJAB CIVIL MEDICAL SERVICE—teachers of Central Model School,		Question re—
Lahore	47	Hindu agriculturist candidates
PROFESSORS—		for the —	464-65
Questions re—		Indian Christians in the — ..	293-94
Hindu — of Persian and Urdu		PUNJAB CIVIL SECRETARIAT—
in Government colleges ..	464, 480	Question re direct recruitment
In Government College, Lahore	732	in —	606-97
PROFESSIONAL TAX—		PUNJAB CIVIL SERVICE—
Question re—		Question re Judicial Branch of
Haisiyat or —	151-52	the —	429
In Ambala	455-56	PUNJAB EDUCATION DEPARTMENT—
In the district of Ferozepore ..	139-40	Question re Sikhs in the clerical
Recovery of — in Ferozepore		establishment of the, — ..	260-61
district	137	PUNJAB EDUCATIONAL SERVICE—
PROFESSIONAL TAX OFFICER—		Question re Muslims in — ..	732-33
Question re —, Jhelum ..	313	Question re —	250-51
PROJECT ENGINEERS—		Question re Sikh ladies in — ..	9
Question re —	452-53	PUNJAB ENGINEERING SERVICE—
PROMOTION(S)—		Question re — and Indian Chris-
Question re — in Education De-		tians	295
partment	485-86,	PUNJAB HEALTH SCHOOL—
	728-29	Question re —, Lahore ..	317
PROPERTY—		PUNJAB LOCAL OPTION ACT—
Question re auction of — attached		Question re —	158-60
in execution of decrees ..	694-95

	PAGES.
PUNJAB UNIVERSITY—
Question re representation of Faculty of Law in the— ..	1152
PUNJAB VETERINARY SERVICE—
Question re Chaudhri Kahan Singh — ..	269-70, 423
Question re —, Class I ..	268-69
PUNITIVE POLICE—
Question re—
Post in Chak No. 174, Muhamadpura ..	154-56, 661
In Rohtak district ..	568-69, 572, 724-25
Resolution re — ..	502-20
PUNITIVE POLICE TAX—
Question re —, Chak 174, Muhamadpura ..	660
PURI, MR. MUKAND LAL—
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Amicable settlement between debtors and creditors ..	1031-33, 1035-36, 1037
Applications, dismissal of, ..	1027
Application of, to loans advanced for trade or industry ..	920-22, 939-40
Arrest for default in payment of decreed money ..	1381-85
Companies registered under Indian Companies Act, exemption of, ..	1367-69, 1370-71
Conciliation boards, jurisdiction of, ..	1008-12
Conciliation boards, setting up of, ..	990-95
Co-operative banks and societies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	969-71
Court-fees ..	1094-95, 1096-97
Date on which Bill is to come into force ..	907-10
Debts, exemption of, certain classes of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	947-52
Debtor, definition of, ..	1373-74, 1375
Decree for debt incurred after agreement or in respect of which certificate has been granted, execution of, ..	1058-60
Deposit of money by debtor along with applications ..	1018, 1023-25
Deposits of money in courts by debtors ..	1109-10
Fair offer, definition of, ..	1055
False amounts entered in documents, punishments for, ..	1390-92
Insolvency Act, Provincial, relaxation of provisions of, ..	867

PURI, MR. MUKAND LAL—concl'd.
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—concl'd.
Insurance companies, exemption of, ..	906, 1367-69
Interest, excessive rate of, definition ..	873-81, 1366
Limitation, extension of period of, ..	1093
Limitation of application of, to loans ..	1099
Loans secured by documents registered under Indian Registration Act, exemption of, from penalty clauses ..	1393
Loans to literate debtors, exemption of, from penalty clauses ..	1394
Motion for re-circulation ..	907-23
Particulars in application, statement of, ..	1015-17
Passing of, ..	1211-15
Pending suits, application of, to ..	918-19
Period of operation of, ..	1101-03
Proceedings, duration of, before conciliation boards and lapse of applications ..	1086-87, 1089
Proceedings, stay of, in civil courts ..	1084-85
Reference to select committee ..	93-106, 184-88
Secured loans, definition of, ..	906
Franchise Committee's Report ..	1339-44

Q.

QANUNGOS—
See kanungos.
QUARTERS—
Question re clerks' —, Simla ..	12
QUESTIONS—
Answering of — in Urdu, discussion re ..	647-50
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—
AFZAL HAQ, CHAUDHRI—
Question re—
Ahsan Ilahi ..	659
Aid by Ferozepore Municipality to Hindu Students' Relief Society ..	470
Alienation of agricultural land in Chakwal ..	441-42
Aligarh University Students and admission to Medical College, Lahore ..	522
Appointment of Mr. Sibon, as Local Manager in Electricity Branch ..	626
Bogus voters ..	1310
Cases of suicide and attempted suicide ..	409-10
Census of the unemployed ..	153
Chaudhri Sher Jung, prisoner, Multan Central Jail ..	284, 620

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED—

AFZAL HAQ, CHAUDHRI—contd.—

Question re—

Civil disobedience ..	123
Civil disobedience prisoners ..	122-23
Clerical staff in the Electricity Branch ..	633-34
Communal award ..	449
Communal representation in the services ..	234-36
Confinement of Babu Satindra Nath Sen, a Bengal detenu, in Campbellpur Jail ..	1154
Constitution of Upper Chamber in the Punjab ..	619
Controversy between Lahore Electric Supply Company and Lahore Municipal Committee ..	238
Criminal Investigation Department under the new constitution ..	559
Cultivated area in Ambala district ..	127-28
Daily newspapers in the province ..	446-48
Debt of agriculturists in Muzaffargarh, Multan and Mianwali districts ..	461
Debtors of mortgage banks in Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana ..	459
Deputy Commissioners, of Mianwali ..	440-41
Detenues in the Punjab jails ..	237
Detention of Mr. S. A. Vatsyana in custody ..	68
Din Muhammad, a martial law prisoner ..	248
Director of Industries ..	407-09
Distillery at Amritsar ..	445
Dogra, as Statutory Agriculturists ..	245-46
Economic and educational conditions of Muslims of Mianwali and Muzaffargarh districts ..	521
Elections of the Senior and Junior Vice-Presidents, Lahore District Board ..	410
Exemption of sword from the Arms Act ..	449
Extra Assistant Commissioners from Ludhiana district ..	460
Fazal Elahi, Qurban, as candidate for the Lahore Municipal Committee ..	619
Filling up of posts in the Electricity Branch ..	633
Fisheries Research Officer ..	558-59
Floods in village Kot Qutab Din ..	715
Flood relief to villagers of Atari in Garhsaunkar Tahsil ..	522
Frontier Crime Regulations Committee Report ..	153

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED—

AFZAL HAQ, CHAUDHRI—contd.—

Question re—

Gazetted posts in Electricity Branch ..	623
General elections and political workers ..	560
Ghazi Abdur Rahman of Amritsar ..	445
Girls' schools under Ferozepore Municipal Committee ..	470
Goraya-Phillaur Project, Electricity Branch ..	709
Government Poultry School Gurdawara site in Mandi Baha-ud-din ..	440
Harassment of political workers by police ..	555
Harbans Lal, clerk, Electricity Branch ..	710
Head clerks, Agricultural Department ..	713
Head Works Engineer, Electricity Branch ..	624-25, 626, 462
Honorary magistrates ..	462
Houses of ill-fame in Muhalla Wakefield Ganj, Ludhiana ..	621-22
Hunger strike in Lahore Central Jail ..	236
Ilaqa Beit, Ludhiana ..	245
Ilaqas Beit of Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana ..	459-60
Inquiry into the leakage of information re Government Departments to Press ..	446
Khwaja Abdur Rahman, Ghazi of Amritsar ..	246
Lala Chokha Nand, Fisheries Department ..	712-13
Land belonging to agricultural tribes in Pind Dadan Khan ..	442-43
Land grants in Ludhiana and Hoshiarpur districts ..	460
Line Superintendent ..	708-09
Line Superintendents, Electricity Branch ..	627, 628, 629-31
Local Manager, Electricity Branch ..	626-27
Loss of a golden ornament on the railway platform, Lahore ..	233
Loss of sealing pliers in Lyallpur ..	623
Maheesh Chand Memorial Library, Ferozepore ..	471
Malik Lachhman Dasa, Line Superintendent, Electricity Branch ..	627-28
Martial Law prisoners ..	659
Medical School, Amritsar ..	555-56, 620-21
Memorial from Zamindars of Ilaqa Beit ..	719

	PAGES.
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED—
AFZAL HAQ, CHAUDHRI—contd.—
Question re—
Molestation of school boys by goondas ..	246
Monopoly for plying motor lorries on hire ..	236
Motor lorries between Hoshiarpur and Bhawan and Una ..	240
Muhammad Khan Khattar, Lambardar of Ratwal ..	442
Muhammadan Martial Law prisoners ..	247
Muhammadan raiidars in the Amritsar district ..	284-85
Municipal Committee, Hoshiarpur ..	555
Municipal Committee, Lyallpur ..	557-58, 559.
Municipal Engineer, Lyallpur ..	557
Newspapers in the Punjab ..	236-37
Non-voted expenditure ..	183
Notice under Criminal Law Amendment Act to Mirza Bashir-ud-Din Mahmud of Qadian ..	1269
Nur Muhammad, Lambardar of Chak No. 174, village Muhammadpura ..	156-58, 660-61, 722-24.
Opinion on Joint Parliamentary Committee Report ..	1310-11
Patwaris in tahsil Dasuya ..	234, 621
Persons shadowed by the police ..	237
Political offenders ..	237-38
Political prisoners ..	1310
Powers to deal with terrorists in the next constitution ..	1309
Produce of rabi in Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana districts ..	234
Prosecution of Muhammadans under the Sarda Act ..	459
Public parties to public servants ..	126-27
Public Prosecutor, Gujrat ..	440
Public traffic on canal banks Punjab Criminal Law (Amendment) Act ..	125-26, 244-45
Punitive police post in Chak No. 174, Muhammadpura ..	154-56, 661.
Punitive Tax, Chak 174, Muhammadpura ..	660
Railway freight on cotton and wheat ..	124
Reduction of abiana and land revenue ..	124
Reduction of land revenue ..	124, 1309
Reduction of a Muslim Overseer, Electricity Branch ..	625

	PAGES.
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED—
AFZAL HAQ, CHAUDHRI—contd.—
Question re—
Relief of uneconomic holdings in Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana ..	458-59
Removal of disqualification for election to Assembly ..	444-45
Removal from service, Electricity Branch ..	628-29
Retirement of canal patwaris ..	716
Roads in itaga Bait, Ludhiana ..	461
Rural Reconstruction Department ..	719
Sale of agricultural land in Gujrat ..	14-19
Sanitary Inspector of Ferozepore Municipality ..	470-71
School in Mandi Baha-ud-din ..	440
Schools under District Board, Dera Ghazi Khan ..	523
Schools under Taunsa Municipal Committee ..	523
Second Mistress at the Phalia Zenana School ..	523-24
Security of the Easan under the Indian Press Act ..	740-41
Service of notice on Fazal Ilahi, Qurban, under section 3 of the Punjab Criminal Law (Amendment) Act ..	302
Shut downs, Chuharkana Electricity Branch ..	632
Shut downs in the Low Tension Lines, Electricity Branch ..	632-33
Shut downs in the trunk and branch transmission lines, Electricity Branch ..	631
Stipends to Muslim girls ..	183
Supersession by Shamsher Bahadur, Agricultural Department ..	714
Suspension of civil disobedience and removal of ban on candidates for Assembly ..	123
Taqavi loan to Ahmad Hussain, Lambardar, Zuhawan, Ludhiana district ..	521
Terminal tax rates in Kasur Municipality ..	471
Theft of electrical energy in Lyallpur ..	622
Uneconomic holdings and land revenue rates ..	461-62
Women teachers ..	153-54
Zaidars in Amritsar ..	182
AHMAD YAR KHAN DAULATANA, KHAN BAHADUR MIAN—
Question re Khaddar branch of the Pakpattan Canal ..	173-231
AKBAR ALI, PIR—
Question re—
Auction purchasers on Lower Bari Doab Colony ..	711-12
M. R. C. V. S. men ..	719-20

2384.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—

CONTINUED.—

ALLAH DAD KHAN, CHAUDHRI—

concluded.

Question re—

Alienation of agricultural land in Pind Dadan Khan tahsil .. 1021

Alienation of agriculturists' land .. 436, 438-39.

Alienation of land to non-agriculturists .. 1022

Alienation of land to non-agriculturists in Mianwali and Campbellpur districts .. 1022

Allowances in Lahore Municipal Committee .. 148-49

Allowances to the legal advisers of the Lahore Municipality .. 149

Average agricultural holding .. 437

Average yield per acre of wheat .. 438

Baqmi transactions in Gohana tahsil .. 128-29

Botany Department, Government College, Lahore .. 1224-25

Canal Advisory Committees of Dipalpur and Sohag divisions .. 365-67

Communalism in Lahore High Court .. 462-63

Co-operative societies .. 347

Cow sacrifice at Bhil Chhapar .. 435-36

Divisional officer and sub-divisional officer, Canals, Lyallpur .. 433

Dust nuisance in police lines, Qilla Gujjar Singh .. 985

Election(s) of Senior and Junior Vice-Chairmen, Lahore District Board .. 146-48, 149-50, 375-76

Establishment of the District and Sessions Judge, Lahore .. 304-05

Head of Dek Nulla .. 1217

Irregularities by drivers of motor lorries .. 1222

Junior Vice-Chairman, Lahore District Board .. 377

Lady Aitchison Hospital, Lahore .. 1185

Lahore Qutab Ice Factory .. 233

Lorries between Narowal and Zafarwal .. 986

Mahars .. 1022

Modifications in occupiers' rate to inundation canals, Dipalpur and Pakpattan tahsils .. 377

Money-lenders and agriculturists in the Punjab .. 439

Murders committed by Harphal and Mughla .. 433-34

Occupiers' rates on Sutlej Valley Project Canals .. 855

PAGES.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—

CONTINUED.—

ALLAH DAD KHAN, CHAUDHRI—

concluded—

Question re—

Officials punished by Sardar Sewaram Singh .. 299

Official Receivers in bankruptcy .. 1021

Police Constable, Kundan .. 434

Powers of official Chairmen of district boards .. 376

Qutab Ice Factory, Lahore .. 985

Ram Gopal, a lambardar of Naraingarh .. 271-72

Rates for lorries .. 1185-86

Remission of fees for teachers' sons .. 377-78

Sale of ancestral agricultural land in Kotli Akhwanan .. 407

Service appeals in the Lahore High Court .. 293

Sonapat Municipality .. 434-35

Sub-inspector of police, Indari .. 29

Tenure of office of Vice-chairman, Lahore District Board .. 375

Total acreage of agricultural land .. 467-38

Transfer of Mr. Basheshar Nath, Clerk of Court .. 299

Use of motor lorries by police officials .. 1221

Villages irrigated by Lower Jhelum Canal .. 1139

ARJAN SINGH, SARDAR—

Question re—

Complaints in courts of Magistrates, 1st Class, Hoshiarpur .. 735-36

Co-operative societies and unions in the Hoshiarpur district .. 702

Description of certain prisoners, as "Babar Akalis" or "Political Workers" .. 581-82

Erosion Committee .. 710-11

Government College, Hoshiarpur .. 729-30

Magistrates, 1st Class, in the Hoshiarpur district .. 703

Remissions in Hoshiarpur district .. 711

Sikh assistant superintendents of jails .. 731

Sikh deputy superintendents of jails .. 730

Staff of Central Training College, Lahore .. 579

Staff of Government College, Lahore .. 579-80

BANSI LAL, CHAUDHRI

Question re—

Representation of Balmiki and Ad Dharam community in municipalities .. 67

PAGES

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED—

BANSI LAL, CHAUDHRI—
concluded.—

Question re—

Representation of Balmiki and Ad Dharam community in services ..

67-68

BISHAN SINGH, SARDAR—

Question re—

Remissions ..

45-6

Water supply to gardens ..

70-1

BUTA SINGH, SARDAR BAHADUR
SARDAR—

Question re—

A class local managers in the Electricity Branch ..

524-25

Additional District Judge at Sheikhpura ..

303

CHETAN ANAND, LALA—

Question re—

Assessors in Hissar district ..

5-6

Chandar Kishore, a civil prisoner of 1929 ..

700

1914-15 Conspiracy prisoners ..

247

Havelian Project ..

247-48

Ibrahim Khan, Zaildar of Mangali ..

6

CHHOTU RAM, RAO BAHADUR
CHAUDHRI—

Question re—

Abolition of special pay to officers of Imperial services ..

566

Absconders in the province ..

569-70

Absconders in Rohtak district ..

135

Action against corrupt officials in Rohtak district ..

728

Additional police in Rohtak
district ..

727-28

Alienations of agriculturists'
land ..

133-34

Alienation of agriculturists'
land ..

695

Application of transfer of Property Act to urban areas ..

567

Arrest of Mughla ..

726-27,

728.

Auction of property attached
in execution of decrees ..

694-95

Candidates for Sub-Judges' examination ..

693-94

Chowkidars in the Rohtak
district ..

568

Cognizable cases in the Punjab ..

570-71

Criminal cases in Rohtak ..

135

Crops in Chak No. 681/22,
Ram Nagar ..

33-4

Damage to crops in Rohtak ..

32-3

Direct recruitment in Punjab
Civil Secretariat ..

696-97

District Board, Rohtak ..

37-8, 699

Drain in Rohtak and near Asandah ..

31-2

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED—

CHHOTU RAM, RAO BAHADUR
CHAUDHRI—continued—

Question re—

Drain near Asandah ..

698

Excise sub-inspectors ..

663-64

Flood Relief ..

43-4

Fraudulent devices by money-lenders ..

1218-19

Gohana Hospital ..

44-5

Grants-in-aid to schools ..

45

Grant to District Board,
Rohtak towards flood damage ..

40-41

Hindu agriculturists as public prosecutors ..

728

Indian Christian Sub-judges ..

665

Indian Civil Service Officers ..

21

Indians in Imperial Services ..

26

Indians in Indian Civil Service ..

21

Indian Police ..

21

Inspection fee of patwaris' records ..

43

Malikana ..

43

Malikana in Pir Mahal Extension ..

35

Ministerial establishment in the High Court and the courts subordinate to it ..

666

Municipal Executive Officers ..

37

Murder of Munshi Abdulla
Khan, Sub-inspector of Police, Rohtak ..

134-35

Jat inspectors or sub-inspectors of excise, Ambala division ..

29

Kharaba ..

39-40

Kharif crops ..

38-9

Lala Besant Lal, candidate for Sub-Judges' examination ..

693

Land owners as criminal tribes in Rohtak district ..

35-6

Leave rules ..

27, 698

Nal-chak in Sonapat and
Jhajjar tahsils ..

31, 698

Nominations to Indian Civil Service ..

22

Non-official chairmen of district board ..

1188-89

Offences ..

726

Official Receivers ..

694

Orderlies of officers ..

568

Prosecuting Branch, Police Department ..

665

Public Works Department ..

22-6

Punitive police in Rohtak
district ..

724-25

Recoveries of debts by Con-tral Co-operative Bank,
Rohtak and Co-operative
Union, Sonapat ..

135-36

Recruitment of police constables from Rohtak district ..

567-68

Regulation of Accounts Act ..

695

Revision of scale of pay ..

27

PAGES.

PAGES.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—
CONTINUED.CHHOTU RAM, RAO BAHADUR
CHAUDHRY—continued.

Question re—

Rule under Section 61, Civil Procedure Code ..	134
Salary bill of public servants ..	20-21
Selection of sub-Judges ..	132
Sites for Pir Mahal Mandi ..	35
Special pay and allowances ..	22, 696
Statutory agriculturists in Financial Commissioners' office ..	29
Statutory Hindu agriculturists as Sub-Judges ..	132-33
Statutory Hindu agriculturists in certain cadres of Irrigation Department ..	664
Statutory Hindu agriculturists in certain cadres of police services ..	664
Statutory Hindu agriculturists in Provincial Educational Service ..	662
Statutory Hindu agriculturists in Subordinate Educational Service ..	662-63
Statutory Hindu agriculturists in various services ..	663
Sub-Judges ..	27-28
Suspension of land revenue in Rohtak, Hissar, Gurgaon and Karnal districts ..	41-43
Taqavi in Sonapat ..	44
Tax on bicycles ..	567
Tax on bottles of aerated waters ..	567
Trial of Mughla ..	727
Vacancies in Civil Secretariat ..	28-29
Zilladar candidates ..	29-30
Zilladars ..	30

CROWDERY, MR. SAJAN KUMAR—

Question re—

Damage to oil seeds, gram and other crops ..	4
Land revenue in Hissar district ..	4
Taqavi in Hissar district ..	3-4
FARAL ALI, KHAN BAHADUR, NAWAR, CHAUDHRY,—
Question re policy in the Education Department ..	277-83

FATIE HUSAIN KHAN, CHAUDHRY

Question re—

Abiana ..	243
Custody of cattle found within the canal boundaries ..	1309
Irrigation in Jandiala division ..	242
Kharaba in Jandiala division ..	242-43
Mr. Sally, Sub-divisional Officer, Subraon branch ..	587-58
Produce of wheat and gram ..	243-44

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—
CONTINUED.GURBACHAN SINGH, SARDAR
SANTH, SARDAR.

Question re—

Electric power for agricultural purposes ..	451
Electric Wiring in Ludhiana Town ..	450
Energy taken by the Jullundur Electric Supply Company ..	451
Maximum output of Mandi Hydro-Electric Scheme ..	450
Project engineers ..	452-53
Sikhs and Educational Gazette, Jullundur ..	1224
Sikh representation in Financial Commissioners' Office ..	368

HABIB ULLAH, KHAN BAHADUR,
SARDAR—

Question re—

Appointment of Revenue Member ..	276-77
Lady non-official visitors of jails ..	1143-44
Malikana rates in the Pir Mahal Extensions ..	487
Remission of taqavi in the Hissar district ..	487
HAIBAT KHAN DAHA, KHAN—
Question re sale of Government lands in Lower Bari Colony ..	13-14

JAWAHAR SINGH DHILLON, SARDAR—

Question re—

Abiana ..	259-60
Accepted candidates (Assistant Superintendent) ..	255-58
Change of religion in entries by Government servants ..	406
Cotton crops in village Shahzada ..	1220
Deputy Superintendent of Police, Finger Print Bureau ..	6-7
Enlistment of Mian Chiragh-ud-Din as member of Criminal Tribe ..	1311
Fisheries Department ..	263-64
Fisheries revenue ..	1220-21
Inspector of Fisheries ..	264-65
Landowners of village Dudar ..	259
Lease of a plot of land in Kasur ..	265
Municipal Committee of Kasur ..	261-62
Municipal Committee Kasur and salaries of the primary school teachers ..	263
Nazul land situate in Kasur near Singh Sabha ..	261
Persons who have passed B. A., English ..	259
Reduction of water rates ..	258-59
Seduction in schools ..	7
Seduction of boys by teachers ..	405-06
Sikhs in the clerical establishment of the Punjab Education Department ..	260-61

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED.

JAWAHAR SINGH DHILLON, SARDAR—concluded.

Question re—

Sikhs in the services ..	737-38
Subordinates in Irrigation Branch ..	1219
Vacancies in the cadre of Agricultural Assistants ..	720-21

JYOTI PRASAD, LALA—

Question re—

Assistant Surgeons and District Medical Officers of Health ..	551-52
Communal representation in Vernacular Schools ..	379
Delhi-Montgomery Road ..	560
Dismissal of Kishan Lal, Naib-Sharaf Sadar, Hissar District Inspector of Schools, Gurgaon district, and the teaching of Hindi and Urdu in the primary schools ..	378
Fisheries Department ..	572-73
Fisheries department and Fishing licenses ..	552-53
Fisheries Department and the Inspector of Fisheries ..	405
Fisheries staff ..	383
Girls High School, Hissar ..	381-82
Hindi as medium of instruction in normal schools ..	541
Hindu Students in normal schools ..	379-80
Nomination to services ..	379
Pay of Imperial Services ..	541-44
Persons proceeded against under section 110 of Criminal Procedure Code ..	552
Primary Lower Middle and Upper Middle Vernacular Schools in the Punjab ..	551
Recognition of Sanatan Dharam School, Gujjar Khan ..	380-81
Research Officer, Fisheries Department ..	380
Sirsa Branch of Western Jumna Canal ..	382-83
Sub-Inspector of Police and his staff, City Police Station, Hansi ..	544-49
Thefts and house-breaking in Hissar district ..	554
	550-51

LEKHWATI JAIN, SHRIMATI—

Question re—

Admission of girl students in Amritsar Medical School ..	368-69
Admission of plucked Matriculation candidates into schools ..	370
Advocates and pleaders enrolled in the Lahore High Court ..	469

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED.

LEKHWATI JAIN, SHRIMATI—
continued.

Question re—

Age bar for middle school examination ..	410-11
Aggarwals in police service ..	161
Alienations of agricultural land ..	71-72
Application of Punjab Local Option Act to the town of Sadhaura ..	158-60
Appointments made by the Director of Industries ..	411-12
Candidates in the office of the District Judge, Ambala ..	457-58
Carrying of loads by Mahabir-dal Volunteers, Rawalpindi City ..	1186
Cases of suicide ..	150
Charges for inspecting court files ..	414-15
Clerks quarters, Simla ..	12
Copyists ..	635-39
Charges for issuing Urdu and English copies in the Copying Department ..	415-17
Civil prisoners ..	419-20
Committee to overhaul primary education ..	167
Communal representation in Government Normal Schools ..	370
Companies registered with the Registrar, Joint Stock Companies ..	412-13
Decretal debt ..	151
Depressed class members in municipal and district boards ..	167
Enfranchising women in municipalities ..	161-62
Engineering School, Rasool ..	468
English Optional Classes in district board middle schools ..	371
Escheat of land ..	72
Executive Officer, Ludhiana municipality ..	443-44
Estates under the management of Court of Wards ..	414
Facilities in University examinations ..	457
Fee concessions in Government schools ..	166
Fee concessions to sons of teachers ..	369
Hajiyat or professional tax ..	151-52
Head Masters and second masters in Government High Schools ..	160
Hindi and Sanskrit classes in Government High School, Bhakkar ..	163-64
Hindu agriculturist candidates for the P. C. M. S. ..	465-66

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED.

LEKHWATI JAIN, SHRIMATI—
continued.

Question re—

Imperial Chemicals and con- cessions in the Punjab ..	466-67
Income from the copying de- partment ..	417
Insolvents ..	161
Journals and newspapers pub- lished in the Punjab ..	161
Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muham- mad, Municipal Commis- sioner, Ludhiana ..	443
Lahore Conspiracy Case ..	179-81
Literacy among prisoners in Punjab Jails ..	457
Loss of files in Sadhora Muni- cipal Committee ..	372
Ludhiana Municipal Com- mittee ..	1187-88
Magistrates in Ambala City ..	162-63
Males and females hanged ..	467
Male doctors in girls institu- tions ..	160-61
Military and non-Military tribes in the Punjab ..	167
Municipal bye-laws, Simla ..	421
Municipal Committee, Burya Nazal land near Town Hall, Kasur ..	9-10 454
Nomination of a lady to the Sadhora Municipal Com- mittee ..	372-73
Objectionable poem in daily Siyasat ..	455
Passport to Japan for Munshi Ram Jain ..	11
Payments of travelling ex- penses and diet money by Criminal Courts ..	167-68
Principals of Government Col- leges and rent-free resi- dential quarters ..	166
Professional or Haisiyat Tax in Ambala ..	455-56
Proscription of the Naujawan Mazdur, Amritsar ..	374
Public holiday on the birth- day of Lord Mahavira ..	411
Religion of patients in civil dispensaries ..	453
Retrenched canal overseers ..	1187
Separate or joint electorates in the municipalities ..	161
Simla municipal employees ..	420
Special fee concessions in Anglo-Vernacular Schools ..	371
Sub-registrar, Kasur ..	454
Supply of articles to civil prisoners ..	417-19
Syed Sadiq Ali, Shah, Extra Assistant Commissioner ..	443
Treasure trove ..	72-73
Treasury Officer, Ambala ..	163

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED.

LEKHWATI JAIN, SHRIMATI—concluded.

Question re—

Vernacular Lower Middle School, Burya ..	10-11
Women in Education Depart- ment ..	179

MALAK, MR. MUHAMMAD DIN—

Question re—

Akrat tax on vegetables in Sialkot Municipality ..	65
Appointments in Irrigation Department ..	716-17
Central Model School, La- hore ..	48-50
Chaudhri Kahan Singh, Punjab Veterinary Service ..	266-67, 269-70, 423.
Coyne, Mr., Superintendent, Irrigation Secretariat ..	181, 425-27
Difficulties of Judges in India ..	111
Director of Industries ..	421-23
Establishment in the office of the Inspector-General of Police, Punjab ..	285-88
Fisheries Research Officer ..	432-33
Government Technical School, Lahore ..	52-60
Head Master, Central Model School, Lahore ..	48, 51-52, 423-24.
Indebtedness of Sardar Kharak Singh, Divisional Agricultural Officer ..	129-30
Inspector, Finger Print Bu- reau, Phillaur ..	289
Interference in the adminis- tration of justice ..	112
Lahore Municipal Committee ..	129
Munshi, Upper Chenab Cir- cle ..	718
Muslim Head Master for Central Model School, La- hore ..	48
Muslims in the office of Prin- cipal, Veterinary College ..	266
Muslim students in Central Model School, Lahore ..	48
Post of the Director of In- dustries ..	64
Private tuitions ..	46-47
Punjab Veterinary Service, Class I ..	268-69
Qualifications of the Direc- tor of Industries ..	60-64
Ram Gopal, teacher, Gov- ernment Technical School, Lahore ..	60
Sardar Kharak Singh, Divi- sional Agricultural Officer ..	425
Simla exodus of Chief Engi- neers' office ..	66

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED.

MALAK, MR. MUHAMMAD DIN—
concluded.

Question re—

Teachers of Central Model
School, Lahore .. 112-13
424-25,
427-28.

Technical departments and non-technical officers .. 266-68,
270-71

Tours of the Director of Industries .. 64-65

Transfers of officers and subordinates of the Education Department .. 427

Unauthorised private tuitions by teachers of Central Model School, Lahore .. 47

MAMRAJ SINGH, CHOHAN, KAN-WAR—

Question re—

B. Class prisoners .. 699-700

Hindus in Palwal Municipality .. 5

Karnal Municipality .. 449

Municipal Committee, Panipat .. 528-35

Summer vacation in schools in Ambala division .. 5

Syphilis and gonorrhoea .. 1222-23

Tahsildar candidates from Hindu Rajputs of Ambala division .. 1223-24

Tahsildars and naib-tahsildars belonging to Simla district .. 1223

MAYADAS, MR. E.—

Question re—

Accounts of district boards .. 318

Agriculturists adjudged insolvent .. 604

Alienation of agricultural land .. 598-99

Ambulance cart .. 598

Appointment of Indian Christians as house surgeons or physicians in the Mayo
Hospital, Lahore .. 1189-90

Articles manufactured in Criminal Tribes Settlement .. 605-06

Audit of accounts of certain colleges .. 308

Boarding houses in schools and colleges .. 600

Boarding houses of aided private colleges .. 315

Books on intoxication, suitable for use in schools .. 311

Boys of Dogar community in Ferozepore district .. 314

Budgets of local bodies .. 310

Buildings for preserving land records .. 312

Canal Colony of the irrigation Department at Ferozepore .. 305-06

Charges for lifting water from wells with hydro-electric current .. 306

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED—

MAYADAS, MR. E.—continued.

Question re—

Civil Assistant Surgeons and
Indian Christians .. 294

Clerical and other establishments, Irrigation Branch .. 296-97

Clerks in the High Court and
Indian Christians .. 298

Clerks in the offices of deputy commissioners .. 745

Compulsory education in Fe-rozepore district .. 313

Co-operative loans to agriculturalists .. 604

Copyists .. 743-44,
745-47.

Counterfeit coins .. 602

Deaths from snake bite .. 601

Deaths of police officers, while discharging duty .. 603

Dogars in Ferozepore district .. 313-14

Expenditure on education of girls .. 315

Expenditure on girls' scholarships by district boards .. 316

Forest Department subordinates and clerical service and Indian Christians .. 297

Forman Christian College,
Lahore .. 307

Grades of examiners of copying branches in offices of Deputy Commissioners .. 305

Grant from the Road Committee .. 307

Head warders, warders and matrons in the Jail Department and Indian Christians .. 296

Increase in the population of Moga and Abohar .. 305

Indian Christians .. 742

Indian Christians as head constables of police .. 295

Indian Christians as clerks in subordinate courts .. 298

Indian Christians as police constables .. 295

Indian Christians as sub-inspectors of police .. 295

Indian Christians constituencies for Legislative Council .. 1022-23

Indian Christians in the Punjab Civil Medical Service .. 293-94

Indian Christian members of district boards .. 313

Indian Christian members of municipal committees .. 313

Indian Christians tahsildars naib-tahsildars, etc. .. 297

Irrigation in the neighbourhood of the Canal Colony at Ferozepore .. 306

PAGES.

PAGES.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
CONTINUED.

MAYADAS, MR. E.—continued.

Question re—

Jains ..	742
Lahore Electric Supply Com- pany ..	305
Lahore-Ferozepore road ..	311-12
Land plans ..	599
Lay-out plans in Lahore ..	597
Legislative Council election ..	603
Lorries for hire ..	605
Low places in Lahore ..	595-98
Medals to police officers ..	602
Medical Selection Board ..	290-91
Middle and high schools for girls in the province ..	315
Molasses on roads ..	601
Mosquitoes in Lahore ..	595, 596-97
Motor vehicle stand, Kalka Municipalities and their ob- ligations ..	599-600 308
Overdraft from the Central Co-operative Bank, Feroze- pore ..	600
Pathan money lenders ..	604
Patwaris and Indian Chris- tians ..	296
Persons selling tobacco in Lahore ..	598
Physical instruction in girls' schools and colleges ..	315-16
Physical instruction of in- structresses ..	316
Play-ground for girls at the Girls' High School, Moga ..	315-17
Play-grounds in high schools for girls ..	316
Polli and La ..	318
Primary schools for girls, Ferozepore ..	314
Profession tax officer, Jhelum ..	313
Provident Fund Scheme for patwaris ..	312
Punjab Engineering Service and Indian Christians ..	295
Punjab Health School, Lahore ..	317
Qualifications for naib-tah- sildars ..	609
Qualifications for tahsildars ..	608
Qualification for zilladars ..	608
Quinine ..	595
Realisation of dues by local bodies ..	603-04
Recruitment in Irrigation De- partment ..	607-08
Recruitment in Police De- partment ..	607
Recruitment of civil assis- tant surgeons ..	607
Recruitment of naib-tahsil- dars ..	608-09
Recruitment of kanungos ..	609
Recruitment of tahsildars ..	608
Scholarships ..	741

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—
CONTINUED.

MAYADAS, MR. E.—concluded.

Question re—

Scholarships for the educa- tion of Dogar community in Ferozepore ..	314
Students visiting cinemas ..	601
Subordinate Engineering Ser- vice and Indian Christians ..	295-96
Tat ..	605
Tax on private motorcars ..	308
Tax on tobacco ..	597-98
Temperance propaganda ..	310
Toy-making in Government Technical School, Lahore ..	606-07
Vehicle stands and a charge of one anna ..	309
Vehicle stands at the villages Kana Kachha and Lulliani ..	311
Withdrawal from the Central Co-operative Bank, Feroze- pore ..	609
Women Christian Temper- ance Union, Delhi ..	600
Zilladars and Indian Christi- ans ..	296

MAZHAR ALI, AZHAR, MAULVI—

Question re—

Bye-laws framed by Muni- cipal Committee of Jagraon ..	164-65
Criminal Tribe Agricultural Settlement, Birthbari ..	172
Deputy Commissioner, Crimi- nal Tribes, Punjab's move to Simla ..	170-71
District Board Engineer, Lyallpur ..	12-13
Embracing of Islam by mem- bers of criminal tribes ..	179-70
Grant to the District Board, Ferozepore ..	137-38
Licensing of premises in Sial- kot municipality ..	166
Nawal land in village Bhabra, tahsil Lahore ..	140-46
Nominations to Narowal Mu- nicipal Committee ..	168-69
Professional tax in the dis- trict of Ferozepore ..	139-40
Recovery of professional tax in the Ferozepore district ..	137
Representation of Muslims in Campbellpore Municipal Committee ..	168
Secretary, District Board, Ferozepore ..	136-39
Shops leased by the Municipal Committee, Sialkot ..	165
Superintendent, Dispensary, Mayo Hospital, Lahore ..	36
Supervising staff in Criminal Tribes Department ..	173
Travelling allowance for at- tending meeting of the Punjab Reclamation Lea- gue ..	171

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED.

MUHAMMAD ABDUL RAHMAN
KHAN, CHAUDHRI—

Question re—

Acreage of agricultural land, land revenue and abiana ..	578-79
Agriculturists, landed pro- prietary and money-lenders ..	574
Alienation of agricultural land in Pind Dadan Khan tahsil ..	656-57
Appointments in the civil courts ..	432
Appointments in the Lahore High Court ..	431
Banking companies ..	1145-46
Boiler inspectors ..	8
Chief Justice as a member of the Syndicate of Punjab University ..	554
Communal representation in Amritsar District Board ..	655
Communal representation in Jullundur District Board ..	653-54
Concessions in Government dues ..	653
Contraventions of the Aliena- tion of Land Act in the Gujrat District ..	578
Co-operative Credit Societies ..	573
Court attachments in Gujrat district ..	1151-52
Court Commissions ..	1151
Cut motion regarding land revenue demand ..	239
Directors of Banking Com- panies ..	1146
Directors of electric supply companies ..	1147
Directors of film companies ..	1148
Directors of insurance com- panies ..	1146
Directors of sugar manufac- turing companies ..	1146
District Board Engineer, Jullundur ..	651-52
District Board High School, Nakodar ..	652-53
Editorial staff of the Indian Law Reports ..	430
Electricity Branch ..	640-41
Electricity Department ..	645-47
Electric supply companies ..	1147
Establishment in the offices of Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, Punjab, and the Civil Surgeons in the Punjab ..	1150
Examiners for law examina- tions ..	428-29
Film companies ..	1148-49
Gross and net incomes from agriculture and land reve- nue and abiana ..	573-74
Head Works Engineer, Elec- tricity Branch ..	642, 647
Injustice to Muslims ..	641
Insolvents ..	1150

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED.

MUHAMMAD ABDUL RAHMAN
KHAN, CHAUDHRI—concluded.

Question re—

Insurance companies ..	1146,
	1146-47
Judicial Branch of the Punjab Civil Service ..	429
Land Revenue ..	654-55
Lawyers ..	429-30
Local Manager, Electricity Branch ..	643-44
Mandi Hydro-Electric scheme ..	650-51
Mumtaz Bank, Limited ..	1153
Muslims in Electricity Branch ..	642-43
Muslim grievances ..	643
Notaries public ..	1149
Price of electricity ..	653
Printing work of Lahore High Court ..	1144-45
Public prosecutors ..	1149
Punjab Tobacco Vend Fees Act ..	654
Representation of Faculty of Law in the Punjab Univer- sity ..	1152
Riots in connection with the tazia procession ..	239-40
Salaries of employees of Dis- trict Board, Jullundur ..	655-56
Sale of agricultural land in Gujrat ..	574
Sale of agricultural land in village Kandhanwala, Guj- rat district ..	574-75
Sale of court-fee and other stamps ..	578
Shift Engineers ..	644-45
Sugar manufacturing com- panies ..	1147-48
Superintending Engineer, Electrical Department ..	8
Sutlej Valley Project ..	647-51
University Law College, Lahore ..	428
Usufructuary mortgage of land in Gujrat district ..	1151
Water-logging in Gujrat dis- trict ..	576-78
Wheat crop ..	239
Wheat crop in ilaga Beit ..	232
Working capital of co-opera- tive village banks ..	573
MUHAMMAD EUSOOF, KHAWAJA—
Question re—
Agha Sher Afghan Khan and the Circle Registrar of Co- operative Societies, Ambala ..	583-84
Central Co-operative Bank ..	590-91
Charges for provisional certi- ficates of LL.B. class stu- dents ..	73
Circle Registrar, Co-opera- tive Societies, Ambala ..	584-89

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED.

MUHAMMAD EUSOOF, KHAWAJA—
concluded.

Question re—

Communal inequality in the Education Department ..	239-90
Communal representation in the Directorate of Central Co-operative Bank, Ludhiana ..	591
Consolidation of holdings in Ludhiana and Ambala ..	592
Co-operative Credit Societies in Ambala and Ludhiana ..	591
Co-operative Society, Sherpur Kalan ..	592-94
Educational service ..	731
Fee concessions to sons of teachers ..	252
Government Intermediate College, Hoshiarpur ..	254-55
Habnisi shops in schools ..	251-52
Hosiery Institute, Ludhiana ..	734-35
Inspector, Co-operative Societies, Ludhiana ..	589-90
Inspector of Co-operative Societies, Jagraon ..	589
Mr. Ghanisham Das, B.A., B.T., Lecturer, Training College, Lahore ..	253-54
Mr. Sita Ram, Gupta, of the Education Department ..	251
Municipal Executive Officers ..	733-34
Muslim deputation of Ludhiana on the Registrar, Co-operative Societies ..	590
Muslims in Education Department ..	733
Muslims in Punjab Educational Service ..	732-33
Muslim teachers of English ..	253
Nahar Singh, inspector of co-operative societies ..	592
Permission to write books ..	290
Principals of Government Colleges ..	265
Principal of Government Intermediate College, Paarur ..	255
Professors in Government College, Lahore ..	732
Promotions in Education Department ..	728-29
Publications of Text-Book Committee ..	290
Punjab Educational Service ..	250-51
Teachers of Mathematics in Government Colleges ..	252

MUHAMMAD HAYAT QURESHI,
KHAN BAHADUR NAWAB—

Question re Gondal tribe .. 1019

MUHAMMAD SADIQ, SHAIKH—

Question re Imperial Chemical Industries .. 859

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS— CONTINUED.

MUHAMMAD SARFARAZ ALI KHAN,
RAJA—

Question re—

Admission in deMontmorency College, Shahpur ..	858
Vernacular Mistresses employed as invigilators ..	291
MUKERJEE, RAI BAHADUR, MR. P.—
Question re—
Air service between Calcutta and Bombay ..	477
Motor bus service from Simla to Mashobra ..	241-42
MUZAFFAR KHAN, KHAN BAHADUR CAPTAIN, MALIK—
Question re holidays to prisoners ..	9

NARENDRA NATH, DIWAN BAHADUR
RAJA—

Question re—

Agriculturists in public services ..	299-301
Brahmins ..	302
Lothian Committee Report ..	1188
Re-appointment of retrenched clerks in Irrigation Department ..	594
Recognition Rules ..	582
Rajputs in public services ..	301
Revenue and local rates suspended in Gurgaon district ..	301-02
Transfer of employees in the Sutlej Valley Project ..	594

NATHWA SINGH, CHAUDHRI—
Question re deluviation of land by Jumna river in Karnal district .. 1217

NOOR AHMAD KHAN, KHAN SAHIB
MIAN—

Question re—

Cotton on the Dipalpur Indundation and Sutlej Valley Project Canals ..	1226-27
Land revenue arrears in Pakpattan and Dipalpur tahsils ..	562-63
Non-perennial channels of Dipalpur and Pakpattan tahsils and relief in water rates ..	560-61
Sale mortgage, &c., of agricultural holdings in Pakpattan and Dipalpur tahsils and arrears of land revenue ..	561-62

NURULLAH, MIAN—

Question re—

Area under khud kashi in Lyallpur district ..	565
Auction of land in Chak No. 76, Gugera Branch ..	123
Average holding in Lyallpur ..	121
Batai ..	120-21
Cotton in Lyallpur ..	567-58
Exchange of proprietary land for crown waste land ..	563-64

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—

CONTINUED.

NURULLAH, MIAN—concluded.

Question re—

Issue of coercive processes for recovery of land revenue arrears in Lyallpur district

564-65

Kharaba ..

111

Method of calculating net income in farm accounts ..

566

Notification of Muhyal Brahmins of Lyallpur district as agriculturists ..

563

Pay and allowances of sildars, naib-tahsildars and overseers ..

115-17

Pay of sub-assistant surgeons ..

118

Pay of sub-inspectors of police ..

118-19

Price and rent of agricultural land ..

121-22

Remissions ..

107

Remission in Derajat Canal Circle ..

110-11

Rule 25 of the Canal Act ..

114

School recognition rules ..

484-85

Seduction of boys by teachers ..

373

Supply of water on contract system ..

114-15

Taqavi for sinking tube-wells in Jullundur district ..

525-27

Tarmin measurement in Lyallpur ..

658-59

Tarmins ..

108-10

Unauthorised irrigation ..

66-67

Water channels for irrigation ..

119-20

563

Waterlogging near Jaranwala town ..

110

Water-rate for crops ..

114

PANCHAM CHAND, THAKUR—

Question re—

Candidates for the post of sub-inspector of fisheries ..

248

Compensation to Mussammat Gita Devi, paid by Hydro-Electric Department ..

249

Dam across Dehri stream at Kotla ..

540

Deputy Sub-Inspectors of Fisheries Department ..

304

Fisheries Department ..

538-39

Licenses on Pathankot-Dharamsala and Baijnath roads and Kangra Motor Union ..

250

Loss of pistol belonging to Dr. Kidar Nath, Simla ..

713-14

M. Karam Bakhsh, Deputy Sub-Inspector of Fisheries ..

537

Motor service in Kangra district ..

535

Naib-tahsildar candidates in Jullundur district ..

539

Officiating Deputy Sub-Inspector of Fisheries, Kangra ..

537-38

Pandit Gian Chand, Inspector, Industrial Co-operative Societies, Ambala ..

1019-21

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—

CONTINUED.

PANCHAM CHAND, THAKUR—concluded.

Question re—

Revenue of the Fisheries Department ..

540

Revision of record-of-rights of Sangnai Estate ..

1227

S. Balwant Singh, Deputy Sub-Inspector of Fisheries, Kangra ..

580-81

Sub-Inspectors of Fisheries ..

536-37

Sub-Inspector Fisheries candidate ..

735

PANDIT, MR. NANAK CHAND—

Question re non-official visitors of jails ..

1141-43

PRINTING AND SUPPLY OF COPIES OF — TO MEMBERS BEFORE QUESTION HOUR ..

649-50

PURI, MR. MUKAND LAI—

Question re—

Communal representation in Karnal Municipal Committee ..

581

First offenders ..

1140-41

Revolver licence to Lala Arjan Deva ..

857

RAM SARUP, CHAUDHRI—

Question re—

A man killed while giving chase to dacoits in Rohtak district ..

275

Alienation of land to non-agriculturists ..

1218

Deputy Superintendent of Police ..

274-75

Girls in the Girls' High School, Rohtak ..

274

Girls in Girls' Normal School, Rohtak ..

272-73

Girls in the Normal School, Rohtak ..

274

Girls reading in the 5th class in the Rohtak district ..

273-74

Girls' schools in the Rohtak district ..

273

Hindu Jat as Inspector of Police ..

274

Suspension or dismissals of zaildars, sufedposhes and lambardars ..

275

Woman of village Pakasma in Rohtak district killed by dacoits ..

272

RAMJI DAS, LALA—

Question re Nais ..

735

RIASAT ALI, CHAUDHRI—

Question re—

Assistant Surgeons ..

240-41

Complaint against Khan Sahib Dr. Noor Muhammad, of Ludhiana Municipal Committee ..

706-06

Complaints against police officers ..

706

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—
CONTINUED.RIASAT ALL, CHAUDHRI—
concluded.

Question re—

Jirga system in the Mianwali district .. 738-39Municipal Committee, Ludh-iana .. 1225-26Post held by Hindus in Mian-wali district .. 739Zilladar, Section Argan, Gujranwala division .. 705-06

ROBERTS, MR. W.—

Question re—

Closure of the Bari Doab
Canal .. 739-40

Cotton prices .. 742-43

Wireless sets .. 743

SAMPURAN SINGH, SARDAR—

Question re—

Inspector of Fisheries .. 367,
406-07Sikh ladies in Punjab Educational Service .. 9SEWAK RAM, RAI BAHADUR, LALA—

Question re—

Abdul Rashid of Ludhiana
College .. 176Accounts of the District Board, Jhang .. 474Anglo-Vernacular Section of Subordinate Educational Service .. 73-74Anglo-Vernacular teachers in Government schools .. 481Appointments in Government colleges .. 77-8Aan in Government buildings of the Education Department .. 231B.T. Class, Lady MacLagan
School .. 483Books of Khan Bahadur
Sheikh Nur Elahi .. 640Cancellation of teaching certificates .. 74

Central Training College .. 703-04

Chaudhri Jhandu Mal, District Inspector of Schools .. 177Classical and vernacular section of Subordinate Educational Service .. 74-5Communal representation in Education Department .. 464-65Communal representation,
Lower Jhelum Circle .. 856Communal tendencies of Mr.
Hakim, Principal, Gujrat
College .. 181Dar-ul-Ishaat and canvasser of books .. 639-40DeMontmorency College,
Shahpur Sadar .. 75

Denominational Schools .. 481

District Engineer, Jhang .. 478-74

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—
CONTINUED.SEWAK RAM, RAI BAHADUR, LALA—concluded.

Question re—

Divisional Auditor, Rawalpindi .. 78-9,
704-05Education Department .. 174-75,
478-80.

Electric supply companies .. 482

Government arts colleges .. 736-37

Government College, Gujrat .. 182

Government College, Lahore .. 232

Government high schools, .. 75-6

Ambala division .. 857

Grievances of the Subordinate Educational Service .. 860-62Head Clerk, District Board, Jhang .. 475-76Headmaster, Government
High School, Ferozepore .. 176-77Headmaster, Patto Hira
Singh High School .. 175-76Hindu assistant district inspectors of schools .. 173Hindu Assistant District Inspector, Dera Ghazi Khan .. 856Hindu Professors of Persian and Urdu in Government
Colleges .. 464Hindu waterman for the Gujrat College .. 231-32Inspector of training institutions .. 481-82

Intermediate College, Gujrat .. 76-77

Khan Bahadur Shaikh Nur
Elahi, Assistant Director of Public Instruction .. 179Lala Amir Chand, District
Inspector .. 177

Lyallpur District Board .. 463-64

Malikana rates in the Pir
Mahal Extension .. 484M. Muhammad Hussain,
Hakim, Principal, Gujrat
College .. 233Mr. U. Karamat, Lecturer,
Islamia College, Lahore .. 178Mr. Siraj-ud-Din, Government College, Lahore .. 178Persons dismissed or discharged in Education Department .. 74Professors of Persian and Urdu in Government Colleges .. 480Promotions in Education Department .. 485-86Retrenchment in District
Board, Jhang .. 471-73Retrenchment in Education Department .. 482-83Remission of taqavi in the Hissar district .. 483-84,
487

PAGES.	PAGES.
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—	RAM SARUP, CHAUDHRI—
CONCLUDED.	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab,
SEWAK RAM, RAI BAHADUR, LALA—concluded.	Passing of 1210-11,
Question re—	Franchise Committee's Report 1320
Secretary, District Board, Jhang	RATE(S)—
Servants' Fee Fund, Gujrat 474-75	Question re — for lorries 1185-86
College Hostel 181	(See Occupiers' Rate).
Taxation Officer, District Board, Jhang 475	RE-APPOINTMENT—
Temporary staff of 3rd Bahawalpur Circle 476-77	Question re — of retrenched clerks in Irrigation Department 594
Unauthorised occupation of bungalow of Principal, Gujrat College 182	RECLAMATION LEAGUE—
Vacancies amongst stenographers 77	Question re travelling allowance for attending meeting of the Punjab — 171
UJJAL SINGH, SARDAR SAHIB, SARDAR—	RECOGNITION—
Question re—	Question re — of Sanatan Dharam School, Gujrat Khan 380
Admission of Sikh boys in the Bishop Cotton School 701	RECOGNITION RULES—
Admission to the Bishop Cotton and other European School in Simla 701	Question re — 484-85, 582
Election to Municipal Committee, Sargodha 275-76	RECORDS—
Engineering Subordinates in the Irrigation Branch 291-93	Question re buildings for preserving land 312
Imperial Chemical Industries (India), Limited 700-01	RECORD OF RIGHTS—
Sikhs in deputy commissioners' offices, Jullundur division 70	Question re revision of — of Sanghai Estate 1227
Sikh officials in Jagraon 70	RECRUITMENT—
Sikh patwaris and kanungos in Ludhiana district 68-9	Question re—
Travelling allowances of engineering subordinates in the Irrigation Branch 293	Direct — in Punjab Civil Sec. retariat 696-97
ZAFRULLAH KHAN, CHAUDHRI—	Of Civil Assistant Surgeons 607
Question re—	In Police Department 607
Special Public Prosecutor, Sialkot 20	Of police constables from Rohtak district 567-68
QUINNE—	Of naib-tahsildars 608-09
Question re — 595	Of kanungos 609
QUTAB ICE FACTORY—	Of tahsildars 608
Question re Lahore — 233, 985	REDUCTION—
R.	Question re—
RABI—	Of land revenue 1309
Question re produce of — in Hoshiarpur and Ludhiana districts 234	Of a Muslim Overseer, Electricity Branch 625
RAILWAY FREIGHT—	Of water rates 258-59
Question re — on cotton and wheat 124	REFORMS—
RAILWAY PLATFORM—	Question re—
Question re loss of a golden ornament on the — Lahore 233	Criminal Investigation Department under the new — 559
RAJPUTS—	Powers to deal with terrorists under the next Reforms 1309-10
Question re — in Public Services 301	REGULATION OF ACCOUNTS ACT—
RAM GOPAL—	Question re — 695
Question re—	RELIEF—
A lambardar of Naraingarh 271-72	Question re—
Teacher, Government Technical School, Lahore 60	Flood — to villagers of Atari in Garhsankar tahsil 522
	Non-perennial channels of Dipalpur and Pakpattan tahsils and relief in water rates 560-61
	RELIGION—
	Question re—
	Change of — in entries by Government Servants 406
	Of patients in civil dispensaries 453

	PAGES.		PAGES.
REMISSION(s)—		REINFORCEMENT—conold.
Question re — ..	45-6, 107-08	Question re—
Question re — ..		Statement re — of one chief engineer ..	183-84
Question re —		REVENUE—
In Derajat Canal Circle ..	110-11	Question re—
In Hoshiarpur district ..	711	And local rates suspended in Gurgaon district ..	301-02
Of fees for teachers' sons ..	377-78	Of the Fisheries Department ..	540, 1220-21
Of tagari in Hissar district ..	483-84, 487
REMOVAL—		REVENUE MEMBER—
Question re — from service, Electricity Branch ..	628-29	Adjournment motion re appointment of — motion for leave not moved ..	183
REMOVAL OF BAN—		Question re Appointment of — ..	276-77
Question re suspension of civil disobedience and—on candidates for Assembly ..	123	REVISION—
RENT—		Question re — of scale of pay ..	27
Question re price and — of agricultural land ..	121-22	REVISION PETITIONS—
REPORT(s)—		Question re appeals and — from the orders of magistrates, 1st class ..	703
Franchise Committee—		REVOLVER—
Allotment of time for discussion of — ..	1183, 1191	Question re — licence to Lala Arjan Deva ..	857
Discussion of — ..	1311-62	RIASAT ALI, CHAUDHRI—
Joint Parliamentary Committee's—		Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Allotment of time for discussion of — ..	1183, 1190	Co-operative banks and societies, exemption of, from jurisdiction of conciliation boards ..	953-55
Discussion of — ..	1228-1307	Damdapat ..	1166-67
Public Accounts Committee's — on Appropriation Accounts ..	404	Debtor, definition of, ..	979-81, 1155-57
Question re—		Decree for debts incurred after agreement or in respect of which certificate has been granted, execution of ..	1059
Frontier Crime Regulations Committee — ..	153	Fair offer, definition of, ..	1053
Lothian Committee — ..	1188	Interest, excessive rate of, definition ..	890-93
Opinion on Joint Parliamentary Committee — ..	1310-11	Motion for re-circulation ..	673-77
REPRESENTATION(s)—		Proceedings, duration of, before conciliation boards and lapse of, applications ..	1087-88
Question re —		Reference to select committee ..	188-93
Of Balmiki and Ad Dharam community in services ..	67-8	Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report ..	1297-1301
Of Muslims in Campbellpur Municipal Committee ..	168	RIOTS—
RESEARCH OFFICER—		Question re — in connection with the tazia procession ..	239-40
Question re —		ROAD(s)—
Fisheries Department ..	382-83, 433, 558-59	Question re—
RESIDENTIAL QUARTERS—		Delhi-Montgomery — ..	550
Question re Principals of Government colleges and rent free— ..	166	Lahore-Ferozepore — ..	311-12
RESOLUTIONS—		Mollases on — ..	601
Action taken by Government on, of Council, statement showing—	610	In Haza Beit, Ludhiana ..	461
Re concessions to auction purchasers of land in Shahdara tahsil ..	488-96	ROAD COMMITTEE—
Re propaganda against use of alcohol and other intoxicants ..	496-502	Question re Grant from the — ..	307
Re punitive police ..	502-20	ROBERTS, PROFESSOR, W.—
RETIREMENT—		Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
Question re —, of canal patwaris ..	716	Interest, excessive rate of, definition ..	882-83, 1365
RETRINCHMENT—		Franchise Committee's Report ..	1356-57
Question re—		Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report ..	1295-96
In District Board, Jhang ..	471-73	Oath of office ..	365
In Education Department ..	482-83

PAGES.	PAGES.
RULES—	RULING(S)—continued—
Question re recognition — .. 582	Bill—concluded.
Under the Wild Birds and Wild Animals Protection Act, criticism of, .. 385-86, 392-94	Drafting Committee's report should state in proper form the formal and consequential amendments to be made in the, .. 1191
RULING(S)—	Motion for circulation of, for eliciting opinion after opinions have been elicited once, out of order .. 83
Amendment(s)—	Motion for deletion or addition of a clause in a, is an amendment to the — itself and not to the clause .. 886, 945
If one, becomes unnecessary in consequence of a previous amendment, Chair not to put the subsequent amendment .. 986	Reply final, Government Member's right to, after closure in the case of amendments to, .. 939
May be moved at any moment after the main motion has been proposed and before it is put .. 1298	Consideration, amendments to clauses will come first and then those to the —; a motion for deletion or addition of a clause being an amendment to the — cannot be moved after the clause to which it relates is voted to stand part of the — .. 945
Member speaking on a motion should move his, without being specially called upon by the Chair to do so .. 1298	Motion for consideration of, substantially altered by select committee allowed to be proceeded with with the consent of the Council .. 668-71
To an earlier part of a clause cannot be moved after an, to the latter part is passed .. 988	Select committee can make amendments relevant to the subject matter of the —; if such amendments are not within the title of the —, the committee may amend the title .. 362-63
Bill—	Select committee, proceedings of, can be referred to in debate after presentation of its report .. 823
Amendments, desirability of allowing at short notice, consulting the Council re, .. 1159-60	Debate—
Amendment for deletion of part of a Bill not permissible when amendments are tabled to several clauses contained in that part .. 947-48	If an amendment aims at taking the place of original motion in its entirety, then both are simultaneously under consideration; otherwise only the amendment is under consideration and not the original motion .. 1113
Amendment for deletion of a clause may be formally moved, but it will be an amendment to the — .. 866, 945	Matters once decided by the Council not allowed to be re-opened in the same session .. 1106
Amendment to an earlier part of a — if made, amendment inconsistent with the earlier one cannot be made at a later stage .. 1106	Members cannot address the Council in any vernacular without the permission of the Chair .. 1072
Amendments to, recommended to Council by Governor, can be modified or amended by Council .. 1364	New points not to be raised during reply .. 227
Amendments to a clause must first be disposed of before putting the clause as a whole to vote .. 1177	To call a legislation not under consideration of Council 'iniquitous' is unparliamentary .. 97
Amendments, scope and limitations of, to — or clauses recommended by Governor .. 1373
Amendments tendered in a spirit of mockery, out of order .. 1181
Deletion of words from a clause cannot be moved after decision that the clause stand part of the, .. 944
Desirability of taking up for consideration original clauses of, with correlative new clauses and verbal amendments together .. 865

	PAGES.		PAGES.
RULING(s)—concluded—		SANSKRIT—
Motion—		Question re Hindi and — classes
Not proposed from the Chair		in Government High School, needs no withdrawal ..	1084	Bhakkar ..	163-64 ✓
Point of order—		SARDA ACT—
Not to be raised by a member		Question re Prosecution of Mu-
not sitting in his seat ..	848	hammadans under the — ..	459
Reply—		SATINDRA NATH SEN, BABU—
Government Member's right of		Question re confinement of —, a final, after closure in the case		Bengal detenu, in Campbellpur
of amendments to Bills ..	939	jail ..	1154
New points not to be raised		SCHOLARSHIPS—
during. ..	227	Question re expenditure on girls
RURAL RECONSTRUCTION—		— by district board ..	316
Question re — Department ..	719	Question re — ..	741
Department of, criticism of, ..	387-401	Question re—
S.		For education of Dogar com-
SADIQ ALI SHAH, SAYAD—		munity in Ferozepore ..	314
Question re —, Extra Assistant		For Indian Christians ..	742
Commissioner ..	443	SCHOOL(s)—
SALARY(IES)—		Question re—
Question re—		Admission of Sikh boys in the Municipal Committee, Kasur		Bishop Cotton — ..	701
and — of the Primary School		Admission to Bishop Cotton
Teachers ..	263	and other European — in
Of employees of District Board,		Simla ..	701
Jullundur ..	655-56	Anglo-vernacular teachers in
SALARY BILL—		Government — ..	481
Question re — of public ser-		Boarding houses in — and vants ..	20-21	colleges ..	600
SALE—		Books on intoxication, suitable
Question re—		for use in — ..	311
Of agricultural land in Gujrat 14—	19,574	B. T. class in Lady MacLagan —
Of agricultural land in village		Chaudhri Jhandu Mal, District
Kandhanwala, Gujrat Dis-		Inspector of — ..	177
trict ..	574-75	Denominational — ..	481
Of ancestral agricultural land		District Board High —, Nako-
in Kotli Akhwanan ..	407	dar ..	652-53
Of court fee and other stamps		District Inspector of Schools,
Of Government lands in Lower		Gurgaon district and teaching
Bari Colony ..	13-14	of Hindi and Urdu in the
SALLY, MR.—		primary — ..	572-73
Question re — Sub-divisional		Engineering — Raul ..	468
Officer, Subraon Branch ..	857-58	Feeconcession in Government—
SAMPURAN SINGH, SARDAR—		Girls' —, Ferozepore Municipal
Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the		Committee ..	470
Punjab—		Girls' high —, Hissar ..	541
Application of, to loans ad-		Government High —, Ambala
vanced for trade and industry		division ..	857
Fair offer, definition of, ..	1054	Government Poultry — ..	462
Joint Parliamentary Committee's		Government Technical —,
Report ..	1245-48	Lahore ..	52-60
Oath of office ..	1105	Grants-in-aid to — ..	45
SANATAN DHARAM SCHOOL—		Halkati shops in — ..	251-52
Question re Recognition of —,		Headmaster, Central Model —,
Gujar Khan ..	380	Lahore ..	423-24
SANDERSON, MR. R.—		Headmaster, Government High
Oath of office ..	1217	—, Ferozepore ..	176-77
SANGHAI ESTATE—		Headmaster, Patto Hira Singh
Question re revision of Record of		High — ..	175-76
Rights of — ..	1227	Headmasters and second masters
SANITARY INSPECTOR—		in Government High — ..	160
Question re — of Ferozepore		Hindi and Sanskrit classes in Municipality ..	470-71	Government High —, Bhak-
		kar ..	163-64
		Hindu assistant district inspectors of — ..	173

	PAGES.		PAGES.
SCHOOL(s)—concluded—		SEWAK RAM, RAI BAHADUR, LALA—
Question re—concl.—		Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
Medical —, Amritsar ..	555-56,	Punjab—
	620-21	Legal Practitioners, appear-
Primary, Lower Middle and		ance of, before concilia-
Upper Middle Vernacular —		tion boards ..	1033
in the Punjab ..	380-81
In Mandi Baha-ud-Din ..	440	SEWARAM SINGH—
Recognition rules ..	484-85	Question re officials punished by
Under District Board, Dera		S. — ..	299
Ghazi Khan ..	523
Under Taunsa Municipal Com-		SEAH MUHAMMAD, CHAUDHRI—
mittee ..	523	Adjournment motion re occupiers'
Second Mistress at the Phalia		rate on fodder ..	222-23
Zenana — ..	523-24	Reference to late — ..	383-84
Seduction in — ..	7
Summer vacation in the —		SHAMSHER BAHADUR—
Ambala division ..	5	Question re supercession by —,
Teachers of Central Model —,		Agricultural Department ..	714
Lahore ..	424-25,
	427-28	SHAYE, DR. (MRS.) M. C.—
Toy-making in Government		Franchise Committee's Report ..	1314-18
Technical —, Lahore ..	606-07	Joint Parliamentary Committee's
Vernacular Lower Middle —,		Report ..	1278-79
Barya ..	10-11
SCHOOL BOYS—		SHER JUNG, CHAUDHRI—
Question re — Molestation of —		Question re —, Prisoner, Multan
by goondas ..	246	Central Jail ..	284, 620
SHALING FLIERS—		SHIFT ENGINEERS—
Question re loss of — in Lyallpur	623	Question re — ..	644-45
SECOND MASTERS—		SHOPS—
Question re headmasters and —		Question re—
in Government High Schools ..	160	Halwai — in Schools ..	251-52
SECRETARY—		Leased by the Municipal Com-
Question re —, District Board,		mittee, Sialkot ..	185
Jhang ..	474-75	SHUT DOWNS—
SECURITY—		Question re—
Question re — of the Ehsan under		Chuharkana Electricity Branch	632
the Indian Press Act ..	740-41	In Low Tension Lines, Elec-
SEDUCTION—		tricity Branch ..	632-33
Question re—		In trunk and branch transmis-
In Schools ..	7	sion lines, Electricity Branch	631
Of boys by teachers ..	373, 405-06	SIBAN, MR.—
SELECTION—		Question re appointment of — as
Question re — of Sub-Judges ..	132	Local Manager in Electricity
SELECTION BOARD—		Branch ..	626
Question re Medical — ..	290-91	SIKANDER HYAT KHAN, HON'BLE
SERVANTS' FEE FUND—		CAPTAIN SERDAR SIR—
Question re —, Gujrat College		Bill, Alienation of Land (Amend-
Hostel ..	181	ment), the Punjab ..	611-12
SERVICE(s)—		Bill, Land Revenue (Amendment),
Question re—		the Punjab ..	1182
Communal representation in		Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
the — ..	234-36	Punjab—
Nomination to — ..	541-44	Debt, exemption of certain
Removal from — Electricity		class of, from jurisdiction
Branch ..	628-29	of conciliation boards ..	952
Representation of Balmiki and		Debtors, definition of, ..	1121
Ad-Dharam community in —	67-8	Farewell by, ..	1397-98
Sikhs in the — ..	737-38	Franchise Committee's Report ..	1183-84,
Statutory Hindu agriculturists			1191
in various — ..	663	Joint Parliamentary Committee's
SERVICE APPEALS—		Report ..	1183-84,
Question re — in the Lahore High			1190,
Court ..	298		1248-53.
SETTLEMENT(s)—		Resolution re concessions to auc-
Question re Criminal Tribes Ag-		tion purchasers of land in Shahricultural —, Birtchehari ..	172	dara tahsil ..	493-96
		Shah Muhammad, Chaudhri, reference to late, ..	384
		Sittings of the Council ..	1223

	PAGES.		PAGES.
SIRANDER HYAT KHAN, HON'BLE		STATUTORY AGRICULTURIST(S)—
CAPTAIN SIEDAR, SR.—concl'd.		concl'd.
Supplementary demands—		Question re—concl'd.
Rules under Wild Birds and		Hindu — as sub-judges ..	132-33
Wild. Animals Protection		Hindu — in certain cadres of
Act.	392-94	Irrigation Department ..	664
Rural reconstruction ..	394-96	Hindu — in certain cadres of
SIKH(S)—		police service ..	664
Question re—		Hindu — in Provincial Educa-
Representation of — in Finan-		tional Service ..	662
cial Commissioners' Office ..	368	Hindu — in Subordinate Edu-
And Educational Gazette, Jul-		catinal Service ..	662-63
lundur ..	1224	Hindu — in various services ..	663
In Deputy Commissioners' Offi-		In Financial Commissioner's
ces, Jullundur division ..	70	Office ..	29
Officials in Jagraon ..	70	In the ministerial establishment
SIKH LADIES—		in the High Court and the Question re — in Punjab Edu-		courts subordinate to it ..	666
cational Service ..	9	In Prosecuting Branch, Police
SIMLA EXODUS—		Department ..	665
Question re — of Chief Engi-		STENOGRAPHERS—
neers ..	66	Question re vacancies amongst —	77
SIRSA BRANCH—		STIPENDS—
Question re — of the Western		Question re — to Muslim girls ..	183
Jumna Canal ..	544-49	STUDENTS—
SITA RAM GUPTA, MR.—		Question re—
Question re — of the Education		Charges for provisional certi-
Department ..	251	ficates of LL. B. class — ..	732
SITES—		Muslim — in Central Model
Question re — for Pir Mahal		School, Lahore ..	46
Mandi ..	38	Visiting cinemas ..	601
SIYASAT—		SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS—
Question re objectionable poem		Question re pay of — ..	118
in daily — ..	455	SUB-DIVISIONAL OFFICER—
SNAKE BITE—		Question re—
Question re deaths from — ..	601	Divisional and — Canals,
SPECIAL PAY—		Lyallpur ..	433
Question re—		Mr. Sally, —, Subraon
Abolition of — to officers of		branch ..	857-58
Imperial Services ..	566	SUB-INSPECTOR(S)—
And allowances ..	696	Question re—
STAFF—		Candidates for the post of — of
Question re—		Fisheries ..	243, 725
Clerical — in the Electricity		Excise — ..	663-64
Branch ..	633-34	Indian Christians as — of
Of Central Training College,		Police ..	295
Lahore ..	579	Jat Inspectors or — of excise,
Of Government College, Lahore		Ambala division ..	29
Temporary — of 3rd Bahawal-		Murder of Munshi Abdulla
pur Circle ..	476-77	Khan, — of Police, Rohtak ..	134-35
STAMPS—		Pay of — of Police ..	118-19
Question re sale of court fee and		Of Police, Hisar and his staff ..	554
other — ..	578	Of Police, Indari ..	20
STATE PRISONERS—		SUB-JUDGES—
Question re — and detenus ..	659	Question re Indian Christian — ..	666
STATEMENTS—		Question re — ..	27-8
Showing action taken by Govern-		Question re selection of — ..	132
ment on cuts made by Council		SUB-JUDGE'S EXAMINATION—in original and supplementary		Question re—
demands ..	610	Candidates for — ..	693-94
Showing action taken by Govern-		Lala Basant Lal, candidate
ment on resolutions of Council		for — ..	693
STATUTORY AGRICULTURIST(S)—		SUBORDINATES—
Question re—		Question re — in Irrigation
Brahmins not treated as — ..	302	branch ..	12-19
Dogra as — ..	245-46	SUBORDINATE COURTS—
		Question re Indian Christians as clerks in — ..	298

	PAGES.		PAGES.
SUBORDINATE EDUCATIONAL SERVICE—		SUTLEJ VALLEY PROJECT—
Question re—		Question re—
Anglo-vernacular section of— ..	73-4	Cotton in the Dipalpur
Classical and vernacular section of— ..	74-5	Inundation and — Canals ..	1226-27
Grievances of the— ..	860-82	Occupier's rates on — canals ..	955
Statutory Hindu Agriculturists in — ..	662-63	Question re— ..	647-50
SUBORDINATE ENGINEERING SERVICE—		Question re—
Question re — and Indian Christians ..	295-96	Temporary staff of 3rd Bahawalpur Circle — ..	476
SUBORDINATE SERVICE—		Transfer of employees in the — ..	594
Question re Forest Department — and clerical — and Indian Christians ..	297	SYNDICATE—
SUB-REGISTRAR (S)—		Question re Chief Justice as a Member of the — of Punjab University ..	554
Question re —, Kasur ..	454	SYPHILIS—
SUFEDPOSHES—		Question re — and gonorrhoea ..	1222-23
Question re suspension or dismissal of zaildars, — and lambardars ..	275	T.
SUGAR MANUFACTURING COMPANIES—		TABILDAR(S)—
Question re — ..	1147-48	Question re—
SUICIDE—		Indian Christians — and Naib-tahildars, etc. ..	297
Question re cases of — and attempted — ..	150, 409-10	Qualifications for — ..	608
SUPERINTENDENT—		Recruitment of — ..	608
Question re—		Candidates from Hindu Rajputs of Ambala division ..	1222-24
Coyne, Mr. —, Irrigation Secretariat ..	131, 425-27	And naib-tahildars belonging to Simla district ..	1223
Line — ..	708-09	TAKAVI—
Dispensary, Mayo Hospital, Lahore ..	36	Question re—
SUPERINTENDING ENGINEER—		Remission of — in Hissar district ..	483-84, 487
Question re — Electrical Department ..	8	In Hissar district ..	3-4
SUPERSESSION—		For sinking tube wells in Jullundur district ..	526-27
Question re — by Shamsher Bahadur, Agricultural Department ..	714	Loan to Ahmad Hussain, Lambardar, Zuhawan, Ludhiana district ..	521
SUPERVISING STAFF—		In Sonapat ..	44
Question re — in Criminal Tribes Department ..	173	TARMIM MEASUREMENT—
SUPPLEMENTARY DEMANDS FOR GRANTS—		Question re — in Lyallpur ..	658-59
Administration of justice ..	667	TAT—
Education (Reserved) ..	667	Question re — ..	605
Miscellaneous (Transferred) ..	667	TAWAN(S)—
SUSPENSION—		Question re — ..	103-10
Question re—		TAX—
Of Civil disobedience and removal of ban on candidates for Assembly ..	123	Question re —
Of land revenue in Rohtak, Hissar, Gurgaon and Karnal districts ..	41-3	Ahrat — on vegetables in Siakot Municipality ..	65
Of Revenue and local rates in Gurgaon district ..	361-02	Cinema houses and entertainment — ..	566
Or dismissals of zaildars, sufedposhes and lambardars ..	275	Hajiyat or professional — ..	151-52
SWORD—		On bicycles ..	567
Question re exemption of — from the Arms Act ..	449	On bottles of aerated waters ..	567
		On private motor cars ..	308
		On tobacco ..	597-98
		Professional — in the district of Ferozepore ..	139-40
		Professional or Hajiyat — in Ambala ..	455-56
		Punitive police —, chak 174, Muhammadpura ..	660
		Recovery of professional — in Ferozepore district ..	137
		Terminal — rates in Kasur Municipality ..	471

	PAGES.		PAGES.
TAXATION OFFICER—		TRAFFIC—
Question re — District Board, Jhang	475	Question re public — on Canal banks	225-26
TAX OFFICERS—		TRAINING COLLEGE—
Question re profession —, Jhelum	313	Question re Mr. Ghani Sham Das, B.A., B.T., Lecturer, —, Lahore	253-54
TAXIA PROCESSION—		TRAINING INSTITUTIONS—
Question re riots in connection with the —	239-40	Question re Inspector of —	481-82
TEACHERS—		TRANSFER(S)—
Question re—		Question re—
Anglo-vernacular — in Govern- ment Schools	481	Of Mr. Basheshar Nath, Clerk of Court	299
Of Central Model School, Lahore	112-13, 424-25, 427-28, 465-66, 373	Of employees in the Sutlej Valley Project	594
Seduction of boys by —	373	Of officers and subordinates of the Education Department..	427
Women —	153-54	TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT—
Remission of fees for — sons ..	377-78	Question re application of — to urban areas	567
Unauthorised private tuitions by — of Central Model School, Lahore	47	TRANSMISSION LINES—
TEACHING CERTIFICATES—		Question re shut downs in the trunk and branch —, Electricity Branch	631
Question re Cancellation of — ..	74	TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE—
TECHNICAL DEPARTMENTS—		Question re —
Question re — and non-technical officers	206-68, 270-71	For attending meeting of the Punjab Reclamation League ..	471
TECHNICAL SCHOOL—		Of engineering subordinates in the Irrigation Branch	293
Question re Government —, Lahore	52-60	TRAVELLING EXPENSES—
TEMPERANCE PROPAGANDA—		Question re payments of — and diet money by criminal courts ..	167-68
Question re —	310	TREASURE TROVE—
TEMPERANCE UNION—		Question re —	72-3
Question re Women Christian —, Delhi	600	TREASURY OFFICER—
TENSION LINES—		Question re —, Ambala	163
Question re shut downs in the Low —, Electricity Branch ..	482	TRIAL—
TEXT BOOK COMMITTEE—		Question re — of Mughla	337
Question re Publications of — ..	290	TUBE WELLS—
TERMINAL TAX—		Question re Taqavi for sinking — in Jullundur district	535-37
Question re — rates in Kasur Municipality	471
TERRORISTS—
Question re powers to deal with — in the next constitution ..	1309-10
THEFTS—
Question re — and house-breaking in Hissar district	550-51
TOBACCO—
Question re—
Persons selling — in Lahore ..	598
Tax on —	597-98
TOBACCO VAND FEES ACT, THE PUNJAB—
Question re —	654
TOY-MAKING—
Question re — in Government Technical School, Lahore	496-97
		U.
		UJJAL SINGH, SARDAR SAHIB SARDAR—
		Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the Punjab—
		Application of — to loans advanced for trade or industry ..	936
		Reference to select committee ..	189-294
		Owen Roberts, reference to late Mr.	2
		UMAR HAYAT, CHAUDHRI—
		Oath of office	1
		UNIVERSITY—
		Question re Chief Justice as a member of the syndicate of the Punjab	554
		Question re representation of faculty of Law in the Punjab —	1133

PAGES.		PAGES.
	UNIVERSITY EXAMINATION—	VICE-CHAIRMAN—
457	Question re facilities in ..	Question re—
	UPPER CHAMBER—	Election of Senior and Junior
619	Question re constitution of — in	— Lahore District Board .. 375-76
	the Punjab ..	Junior — Lahore District
	UPPER CHENAB CIRCLE—	Board .. 377
718	Question re munshis, — ..	Tenure of office of —, Lahore
	URDU—	District Board .. 376
	Question re District Inspector of	VICE-PRESIDENTS—
572-73	Schools, Gurgaon district and	Question re—teaching of Hindi and — in	Election of the Senior and primary schools ..	Junior — of Lahore District
		Board .. 146-48,
		149-50,
		410
	V.	VOLUNTEERS—
	VACANCIES—	Question re carrying of lathi by
	Question re—	Mahabirdal —, Rawalpindi
720-21	In the cadre of agricultural as-	City .. 1186
28-9	sistants ..	VOTERS—
	In Civil Secretariat ..	Question re bogus —.. 1310
	VACATION—
	Question re summer — in	W.
5	schools in Ambala division ..	WAOR, MR. F. B.—
	VATSAYANA—	Bill, Relief of Indebtedness, the
68	Question re detention of Mr. S. H.	Punjab—
	— in custody ..	Motion for re-circulation .. 797-98
	VEGETABLES—	Reference to select committee
65	Question re Ahrat tax on — in	Oath of office .. 1,405
	Sialkot municipality ..	WAKEFIELD GANJ—
	VEHICLE STANDS—	Question re Houses of ill-fame in
309	Question re—	Muhalla —, Ludhiana .. 621-22
311	And a charge of one anna ..	WARDERS—
	At the villages, Kana Kachha	Question re Head Warders, — and and Lulliani ..	Matrons in the Jail Department
	VERNAOULAE MISTRESSES—	and Indian Christians .. 298
291	Question re — employed as in-	WATER—
	vigilators ..	Question re supply of — on con-
	VERNAOULAE SCHOOLS—	tract system .. 114-15
379	Question re—	WATER-CHANNELS—
380-81	Communal representation in —	Question re—
	Primary Lower Middle and	For irrigation .. 563,
	Upper Middle — in the	119-20
	Punjab ..	WATERLOGGING—
	VERNAOULAE SECTION—	Question re—
74-5	Question re classical and — of	Near Jaranwala town .. 110
	Subordinate Educational Ser-	In Gujrat district .. 576-77
	vice ..	WATER MAN—
	VETERINARY COLLEGE—	Question re Hindu — for the
266	Question re Muslims in the office	Gujrat College .. 231-32
	of Principal, — ..	WATER RATES—
	VETERINARY DEPARTMENT—	Question re—
266	Question re Chaudhri Kahan	Non-perennial channels of
	Singh, P.V.S., Deputy Superin-	Dipalpur and Pakpattan
	tendent, Civil — Sheikhpura	tahsils and relief in — .. 560-61
	VETERINARY SURGEONS—	Reduction of — .. 258-59
719-20	Question re Members of the Royal	For crops .. 114
	College of — ..	WATER SUPPLY—
		Question re — to gardens .. 70-71

	PAGES.		PAGES.
WEEDS—		WITHDRAWALS—
Question re -- known as Pohli and Leh	318	Question re -- from the Central Co-operative Bank, Ferozepore ..	609
WELLS—		WITHDRAWAL ORDER—
Question re charges for lifting water from -- with hydro- electric current	306-07	Against Chaudhri Allah Dad Khan for disorderly conduct ..	222
WESTERN JUMRA CANAL—		Forgiveness	226
Question re Sirsa Branch of the --	544-49	WOMAN(EN)—
WHEAT—		Question re—
Question re—		In Education Department ..	179
Average yield per acre of -- ..	438	Of village Pakasma in Rohtak district killed by dacoits ..	272
Produce of -- and gram ..	243-44	WOMEN CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION—
Railway freight on cotton and—	124	Question re -- Delhi	600
Crop	239	WOMEN'S COLLEGES—
Crop in Haga Beit	232	Question re physical instruction in girls' schools and -- ..	315-16
WILD BIRDS AND WILD ANIMALS PROTECTION ACT—		WOMEN TEACHER(S)—
Rules under, criticism of, ..	385-86, 392-94, 398.	Question re Second Mistress at the Phalia Zenana School ..	523-24
WIRELESS SETS—
Question re --	743

